Holly merchants will not take the back seat for any town in the state compared to the size of this municipality, either for trade or for large and varied stocks and fine window displays.—Holly Advertiser.

Probably not. Holly merchants wouldn't take a back seat if every other seat was filled. They would stand up first and hang on the straps. But when it comes right down to a real comparison alongside of Northville, Holly would look about like Fenton, and that's a town that Holly people claim isn't even on a 50 cent map.

Child Worth Millions.
"My child is worth millions to me," says Mrs. Mary Bird of Harnsburg, Pa. "I would have lost her by the way and I purchased a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." One Minute Cough Cure is sure cure for coughs, colds, and throat and lung troubles. An absolutely safe cough cure which acts immediately. The youngest child can take it with entire safety. The little ones like the taste and remember it, often it helps them. Every family should have a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure handy. At this season especially it may be needed suddenly. M. H. B.

Crickets Still the Favorite Game.
Cricket still holds its own in the British Isles in spite of the increased attention paid to foot-ball, golf and other sports. This was strongly shown by the records of attendance and receipts at the annual match between Yorkshire and Lancashire. This match lasted three days, and the average daily attendance of spectators was 10,000. The profits amounted to a very large sum, which, in accordance with custom, was handed over to the champion professional player.

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

The author of "The Night Before Christmas" in writing this beautiful play has followed in the footsteps of the immortal Dickens believing that life depicted from life is the surest way of the writer's art and therefore in plotting, writing and staging this play, he has followed absolutely those things which he saw around and about him every day. This accounts, perhaps, for the flattering notices given to "The Night Before Christmas" by the newspapers and the magnificent commendation given by the public which is thoroughly attested by the fact that theatres where this attraction is playing are crowded nightly. "The Night Before Christmas" comes to the Whitney Opera House for a week's engagement beginning Jan. 4, afternoon.

Lyceum Theatre—Detroit.

Charles Frohman's original and only authorized version of "The Little Minister," the comedy success of the century, will be the attraction at the Lyceum all next week. The play has made a marvelous impression on the theatregoing public, not only attracting people in crowds to the houses in which it has been presented, but making them feel that there is more heart and sentiment in its scenes and lines than anything that there have ever been seen before. The love story of Lady Babbie and the quaintly humorous characters of the village of Thrums—the twin charms of the book—are delightfully represented in the play. The comedy ran for 300 nights in New York, turning people away from every performance. The New York triumph has been duplicated everywhere, and it would seem that "The Little Minister" is destined to crowd theatres as long as it lives.

W. L. Yancy, Paducah, Ky., writes: "I had a severe case of kidney disease and three of the best physicians in southern Kentucky treated me without success. I was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure. The first bottle gave immediate relief and three bottles cured me permanently. I gladly recommend this wonderful remedy." Take no substitute. Murdoch Bros.

Lithographic Stone Is Plentiful.
A deposit of lithographic stone has been found near Mt. Sterling, Ky., which Eugene Leary, of the United States Geological Survey, believes to be more valuable than any gold mine. "There is no reason," says Mr. Leary, "why the quarry should not control the market in this country. There is no lithographic stone anywhere else, so far as is known, and there will be no difficulty in competing with the German product."

Germany's Tobacco Business.
In 1900 Germany exported and imported exactly the same quantity of cigars—namely, 313 tons. A great difference, however, existed in the quality. The imports for last year amounted in value to $2,000,000, while the exports were valued at only $800,000. Tobacco produced in Germany is used for mixing with better grades imported from other countries.

Don't Live Together.
Constipation and health never go together. Dr. Williams' Little Early Risers promote easy action of the bowels without distress. "I have been troubled with constipation nine years," says J. O. Greene, Depaw, Ind. "I have tried many remedies, but Little Early Risers give best results." Murdoch Bros.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The story of the Lost Continent is the translation of an ancient manuscript found in a cave in the Canary Islands and opens with the installation of Dason as viceroy of Yucatan, a province of Atlantis, the latter a continent situated in the Atlantic ocean. Dason succeeds Phorenice, who is recalled by the queen, Phenice, of whom he has heard little. Phenice, of whom he has heard little, is a woman, having been born the daughter of a swimmer, although she claims to be a daughter of the gods. She is adopted and raised by Zecmor, governor of a province and one of the high priests. She is possessed of a great ambition to rule and while still young deposes him. All attempts to still young Dason's ambition are unsuccessful and she finally captures her old king and takes the throne.

CHAPTER II.—Dason is much surprised when next day he is asked the use of a ship to take him home, believing he had grown rich during his reign, as he (Dason) would have done, but Dason is a poor man, having no money. The good of the man, having no money, is different in Atlantis, where greed and selfishness being the universal rule.

Our Lord the Sun shone brilliantly, giving full speed to the machines, as though he was fully willing for the affair to proceed, and the two navies approached one another with quickness, the three galleys holding back to stay in line with their consorts. But when some bare hundred ship-lengths separated us, the other navy halted, and one of the galleys, drawing ahead, flew green branches from her masts, seeking for a parley.

The course was unusual, but we in our sea-battered state were no navy to invite a fight unnecessarily. So in hoarse sea-hawls word was passed, and we too halted, and Tob heaved a withered stick (which had to do duty for greenery), to show that we were ready for talk, and would respect the person of an ambassador.

The galley drew by, swung round and backed, till its stern rapped on our shield rail, and one of her people clambered up and jumped down upon our decks. He was a dandy, rigged-out fellow, young and lusty, and all healthy from the land and land victual, and he looked round him with a sneer at our sea-tatteredness, and with a fine self-confidence. Then seeing Tob, he nodded as one who meets an acquaintance. "Old pot-mate," he said, "your woman waits for you up by the quay-side in Atlantis yonder, with four youngsters at her heels. I saw her not half a month ago."

"You didn't come out here to tell me home news," said Tob; "that I'll be sworn. I've drunk enough pots with you, Dason, to know your pleasantries thoroughly."

"I wanted to point out to you that your home is still there, with your wife and children ready to welcome you."

"I am not a man that ever forgets it," said Tob, grimly; "and because I've got them always at the back of my mind, I've sailed this ship over the top of more than one pirate, when, if I'd been a single man, I might have been e'en content to take the hap of slavery."

"Oh, I know you're a desperate enough fellow," said Dason, "and I'm free to confess that if it does come to blows we are likely to lose a few men before we get you and your shipmates here and your crazy ships comfortably sunk. Our navy has its orders to carry out, and the cause of my embassy is this: We wish to see if you will let the sea-rovers and give us what we want, and so be permitted to go on your way home, with a skin that is unsat and dry."

"You have come to the wrong bid here for a plucking," said Tob, with a heavy laugh. "We took no treasure or merchandise on board in Yucatan. We stayed in harbor long enough to cure our sea-vietal and fill with wood and water, and no longer. We sail back as we sailed out, barren ships. You will not believe me of course; I would not have believed you that our places been changed, but you may go into the holds and search if you choose. You will find there nothing but a few poor sailormen half in pieces with the scurvy. No, you can steal nothing here but blows, Dason, and I will give you those with but little delay."

"I am glad to see that you state your case so at such slender value," said the other; "for it is the cargo I must take with me on the galley, if you are not to earn your safe conduct to home."

Tob knit his brows. "You said," he said, "speak more plain," he said; "I am a common sailor and do not understand fancy talk."

"It is a fair to see," said Dason, "that you have been set to bring Deucalion back to Atlantis as a prop for Phenice. Well, we others find Phenice hard enough to fight against without further reinforcements, and so we want Deucalion in our own custody to deal with after our own fashion."

"And if I do the nigger and deny you this piece of my freight?"

The spruce envoy looked round at the splintered ship and the battered navy beside her. "Why, then, Tob, we shall send you all to the fishes in very short time, and instead of Deucalion standing before the gods alone, he will go down with a fine ragged company, limping at his heels."

"I doubt it," said Tob, "but we shall see. As for letting you have my Lord Deucalion, that is out of the question. For see here, Pot-Mate Dason, in the first place, if I went to Atlantis without Deucalion, my other lord, Tatho, would come back one of these days, and in his hands I should die by the slower of my arches; in the second, I have seen many a man that day riding such a prop."

"Tob," for my battle-cry. It was a change for me not to be leader, but it was a luxury for once to fight in the wake of this Tob; despite his uncouthness of mien and plan. There was no stopping this new rush, though progress still was slow. Tob with his bloody ax cut the road in front, and we, others, with the lust of battle filling us to the chin, raged like furies in his wake. Gods! but it was a fight.

Ten of us won to the galley, with the flames and the smoke from the poor Bear spurring at our heels. We turned and stabbed madly at all who tried to follow, and hacked through the grapples that held the vessels to their embrace. The sea-swells spurned the Bear away.

The slaves chained to the rowing-galleys' benches had interest neither one way nor the other, and looked on the contest with dull concern, save when some stray missile found a billet among them. But a handful of the fighting men had scrambled desperately on board of the galley after us, preferring any fate to a fiery death on the Bear, and these had to be dealt with promptly. Three, with their fighting fury still red-hot in them, had most wastefully to be killed out of mischief's way; five, who had pitched their weapons into the sea, were chained to our looms, in place of slaves who were dead; and there remained only Dason to have a fate apportioned.

The fight had cooled out of him, and he had thrown his arms to the sea, and stood sullenly ready for what might befall; and to him Tob went up with an exulting face.

"Ho, pot-mate Dason," cried he, "you made a lot of talk an hour ago about that woman of mine, who lives with her brats on the quay-side in Atlantis yonder. Now, I'll give you a pleasant choice; either I'll take you along home, and tell her what you said before the whole ship's company (that are for the most part dead now poor souls), and I'll leave her to perform on your carcass as she sees fit by way of payment; or, on the other choice, I'll deal with you here now myself."

"I thank you for the chance," said Dason, and knelt and offered his neck to the ax. So Tob cut off his head, sticking it on the galley's beak as an advertisement of what had been done. The body he threw over the side, and one of the great man-eating birds that hovered near picked it up and flew away with it to its nest among the crags. And so we were free to get a meal of the fruits and the fresh meats which the galley offered, while the oar-slaves sent the galley rushing onward towards the capital.

There was a wine-skin in the after-castle, and I filled a horn and poured some out at Tob's feet in salutation. "My man," I said, "you have shown me a fight."

"Thanks," said he, "and I know you are a judge. 'Twas pretty while it lasted; and seeing that my lads were, for the most, scurvy-rotten, I will say they fought with credit. I have lost my Lord-Tatho's navy, but I think Phenice will see me righted there. If those that are against her took so much trouble to kill my Lord Deucalion before he could come to her aid, I can fancy she will not be niggard in her joy when I put Deucalion safe, if somewhat dented and blood-bespattered, on the quay."

"The gods know," I said, for it is never my custom to discuss policies with my inferiors, even though etiquette be for the moment loosened, quite be for the moment loosened, quite as was then by the thrill of battle.

Best for you, Tob, even as they have decided that it is best that I should go on to Atlantis."

The sailor held a horn filled from the wine-skin in his hand, and I think was minded to pour a libation at my feet, even as I had done at his. But he changed his mind, and emptied it down his throat instead. "It is thirsty work, this fighting," he said, "and that drink comes very welcome."

I put my hand on his broad shoulder. "Tob," I said, "whether I step into your again, or whether I go to the block to-morrow, is another matter which the gods alone know, but hear me tell you now, that if a chance is given me of showing my gratitude, I shall not forget the way you have served me in this voyage, and the way you have fought this day."

Tob filled another brimming horn from the wine-skin and splashed it at my feet. "That's good enough surety for me," he said, "that my woman and brats never want from this day onward. The Lord Deucalion for the block, indeed!"

CHAPTER IV.
THE WELCOME OF PHORENICE
The splendid city grew out of the sea as we approached, and the throb of the oars the shores leaped nearer. I saw the temple where I had been admitted first to manhood; I saw the pyramid in whose heart I had been initiated to the small mysteries; and then (as the lesser objects became discernible) I made out the house where a father and a mother had reared me, and my eyes became dim as the memories rose.

It has been said that the great should be dignified by keeping those of lesser degree waiting their pleasure, though for myself I must say I have always thought the stratagem patrician and beneath me. Phenice, as I said of this same opinion, for (as she herself told me once, at the moment that Tob's galley was reported as having its flank against the marble of the royal quay, at that precise moment did she start out from the palace. The gorgeous procession was a ready marshalled, bedecked and waiting only for its chiefest ornament; and as soon as she had mounted to her steed, trumpets gave the order, and the advance began.

Sitting in the doorway of a pavilion by the water's edge, I saw the soldiery who formed the head of this vast concourse emerge from the great broad street where it left the houses. They marched straight across to give me the salute, and then ranged themselves on the further side of the square. There came to the Mariners' Guild, then more soldiers, all making obeisance in their turn, and passing on to make room for others. Following were the merchants, the tanners, the spear-makers and all the other acknowledged guilds, deliberately attired (so it seemed to me) that they might make a pageant; and while most walked on foot there were some who proudly rode on beasts which they had tamed into rendering them this menial service.

But presently came the two wonders of all that dazzling spectacle. From out of the eclipse of the houses there swung into the open no less a beast than a huge bull mammoth. The sight had sufficient surprise in it almost to make me start. Many a time during my life had I led hunts to kill the mammoth, when a herd of them had raided some village or corn land under my charge. I had seen the huge brutes in the wild ground, shaggy, horrid, monstrous, and here even than the catamounts of the cave-bear, most dangerous tiger of all that fight with man for dominion of the earth, save only for a few of the greater lizards. And here was this creature, a giant even among mammoths, yet tame as any well-whipped slave, and bearing upon its back a great half-castle of gold, stamped with the outstretched hand, and bedecked with silver snakes. Its murekous tusks were gilded, its hairy neck was garlanded with flowers; and it trod on in the procession as though assisting at such pageantry was the beginning and end of its existence. Its tameness seemed a fitting symbol of the masterful strength of this new ruler of Atlantis.

Simultaneously with the mammoth there came into sight that other and greater wonder, the mammoth's mistress, the Empress Phenice. The beast took my eye at the first; from its very uncouth hugeness, from its show of savage power restrained; but the lady who sat in the golden half-castle on its lofty back quickly drew away my gaze, and held it immovable from then onward with an infinite attraction.

I stood to my feet when the people first sighted at Phenice's approach, and remained in the porchway of my scarlet pavilion till her vast steed had halted in the center of the square, and then I advanced across the pavement towards her.

"On your knees, my lord," said one of the chamberlains behind me, in a scared whisper.

"At least with bent head," urged another.

But I had my own notions of what is due to one's own self-respect in these matters, and I marched across the bare open space with head erect, giving the Empress gaze for gaze. She was clearly summing me up—I was frankly doing the like by her. Gods! but those few short seconds made me see a woman such as I never imagined could have lived.

I know I have placed it on record earlier in this writing that, during all the days of a long official life, women have had no influence over me. But I have been quick to see that they often had a strong swaying power over the policies of others, and as a consequence I have made it my business to study them even as I have studied men. But this woman who sat under the sacred mammoth's back fairly dazzled me. Her thoughts I could read no single syllable. I could see a body, slight, supple and beautifully molded; in figure rather than in face. Her face was a most perfect hook of cleverness, yet she was fair, too, beyond belief, with hair of a lovely ruddiness, cut short in the new fashion, and bunching on her shoulders. And eyes! Gods! who could plumb the depths of Phenice's eyes, or find in mere that a trace of their heaven-made

It was plain, also, that she in her turn was searching me down to my very soul, and it seemed that her scrutiny was not without its satisfaction. She moved her head in little nods as I drew near, and when I did the requisite obeisance permitted to my rank, she bade me, in a voice loud and clear enough for all at hand to hear, never to put forehead on the ground again on her behalf so long as she ruled in Atlantis.

"For others," she said, "it is fitting that they should do so, once, twice, or several times, according to their rank and station, for I am Empress, and they are all so far beneath me; but you are Deucalion, my lord; and you though till to-day I knew you only from pictures drawn with tongues, I have seen you now, and have judged for myself. And I make this decree: Deucalion is above all other men in Atlantis, and if there is one who does not render him obedience, that man is enemy also of Phenice, and shall feel her anger."

It's R. H. Traver & Co. now—but the same management, sane policy that has brought you so much satisfaction will be continued as when it was just R. H. Traver.

This store will always be the Reliable Store, the home of the Traver label and of the Traver quality—the former guaranteeing the latter to you to be the highest possible and for just common prices—those within the reach of all.

There'll be no sales, no blaring of trumpets to herald the change—instead business will be continued as it has in the past and every minute we will be endeavoring to make your money buy more worth than you'd expect.

If you men have time and money we've something it suits at $10, $12 that will no doubt interest you—regular prices did you ask?—yes they are;
but regular prices Traver's mean more worth than do special ones elsewhere.

To all we wish a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

School Notes.
(To date for last week.)

"It is the fidelity in the daily drill which turns the raw recruit into the accomplished soldier."—W. M. Pundshop.

Mrs. Pauline Maier, teacher of the fifth and sixth grades, attended her sister's wedding at Ann Arbor last week.

Wm. Galtz, one of the bright members of the Physics class, recently made a handy piece of apparatus for illustrating the different classes of levers.

In the spelling contest in the eighth grade last Friday, the honors were evenly divided between sections I and II so the old horseshoe was placed in the middle of the room.
Last Tuesday section I gained the trophy so it now hangs upon a side wall.

The many parents who were present at the Christmas exercises in the lower grades were treated to all the trappings of a real Santa Claus coming into the room, real Christmas trees loaded with presents, and groups of little children more than pleased.

One of the things that furnish great pleasure to the little children was the fact that each one had contributed in some way toward making someone else happy. Little woolen holders made of pretty colored yarn were made for the nannies of the first and second grade children while a pretty little booklet was given to each papa.

In the third grade the children had made pen-wipers for each other and the teacher had made each pupil a dainty little calendar. In the fourth grade the tree was given in honor of little Perma Kohler who was obliged to drop out of her class on account of illness. Perma was able to be present for a short time, though confined to her invalid chair.

The little people of the fourth grade had purchased Louisa Alcott's "Little Women" for Perma and in return each one received a pretty handkerchief from her.

Weight of a Honey Bee.
Careful weighing, it is said, shows that an ordinary bee, not loaded, weighs the five-thousandth part of a pound, so that it takes 5,000 bees to make a pound. But the loaded bee, when it comes in fresh from the field
and flowers, freighted with honey, often weighs nearly three times more.

MANY THOUSANDS CURED OF CATARRH.

Remarkable Cures Made by Pe-ru-na North and South.

MISS
BLANCHE MYERS

Miss Blanche Myers, 120 Penn street, Kansas City, Mo., a society belle of that city writes:

"During each of the past four seasons I have caught a severe cold when suddenly chilled after an evening party, and a most unpleasant catarrh lasting for several weeks would be the result.

"Last winter my brother advised me to try Peruna, as one of my friends had been cured of a bad case of catarrh by using it.

"I cured me a bottle and I was much pleased to find that one bottle cured me. I shall not dread colds any more so long as I can procure Peruna."—MISS BLANCHE MYERS.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located, with the same surety and promptness.
There are no substitutes for Peruna.

Miss Hattie Becker, secretary of the Goethe Club, of Racine, Wis., writes:

"A short time ago I got my feet wet, and a cold settled on my lungs which nothing seemed to remove. Our family physician tried extracts, powders and pills, but I kept getting worse until my brother advised me to try Peruna and purchased a bottle for me.

"It acted like a charm and in a week I was like my old self once more; in fact I felt stronger and had a better appetite than ever had before. Peruna has taken its place in our medicine chest and our family believes in it."

scientific remedy for catarrh. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures last.
Peruna gives strength by stopping waste.

By saving the mucus it enriches the blood.

By cleansing the mucous membranes it preserves the vital forces.

A constant drain of mucus from the system is known as systemic catarrh.

This may occur from any organ of the body.

Mrs. Mary Cook, Pittsford, N. Y., also says:

"I was not very well for six years,
paid many doctor bills, but never improved very much. Two years ago I was attacked with la grippe, which left me with a severe liver trouble. I gave up hope of ever recovering. Peruna cured me. I feel young again, and
am gaining in flesh,
as I was very emaciated. My own children are surprised in the great change in me
when they come to visit me. We have made your Peruna our household remedy."—Mrs. Mary Cook.

Mrs. Mary Cook.

Congressman H. Henry Powers of Vermont, writes from Montpelier, Vt.,

"Peruna I have used in my family with success. I can recommend it as an excellent family remedy, and very good for coughs, colds and catarrhal affections."—G. Henry Powers.

Hon. John H. Gear, United States
Senator from Iowa, writes:

"Peruna I can recommend to all as a very good tonic, and particularly good as a remedy for catarrh. Senator Gear's home address is Barlington, Iowa.

Mr. O. Fisher, 1861 Lexington avenue,
New York City, writes:

"I had catarrh and was troubled with a constant dripping from the back part of the nose into the throat, and a horrible breath. Also severe hoarseness and yellow discharge from the nose; but I haven't the slightest trouble now of those complaints, and I honestly and conscientiously state that I am cured of catarrh of the nose and throat.

"If there is anyway I can state it more positively I am only too glad to do so,
and I am willing, very willing, to lend any aid in my power in helping you to induce sufferers to give Peruna a trial.

"My wife is also taking Peruna, and it is helping her wonderfully. She has improved considerably since taking Peruna. She feels fifty per cent better than she has in years, for all of which I am very thankful, as she was extremely nervous, had systemic catarrh, and thin blood."—O. Fisher.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The City in Brief.

School begins again Monday. Mrs. Harmon is slowly improving. Regular council meeting Monday night.

The Record wishes all its readers a happy and prosperous New Year.

Remember the parents meeting at the school house Jan. 10 at 4 p. m. Bring your programs.

The W. R. C. will install their newly elected officers Wednesday evening Jan. 8th. A goodly attendance is desired.

The superior service now given by the Northville Telephone company is receiving favorable comment in all directions.

The Scientific American says that the inhaling of the fumes of equal parts of tar and turpentine is a sure cure for diphtheria.

Ticket No. 3022 drew the music box at Becker's jewelry store and Willard Dolph proved to be the lucky holder of the New Year's present.

R. H. Traver, the Detroit clothier, has taken three of his clerks into his partnership and the new firm will hereafter be known as R. H. Traver & Co.

The K. O. T. M. s are preparing to give one of their popular hops in the rink this month. A seven-piece orchestra will be on hand to furnish the music.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Whittaker Tuesday, January 7, at 2:30 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended not only to members of the society but all interested in temperance.

The coasting party followed by a neat little buffet lunch given by Viola McNally Monday afternoon in honor of her cousin Beah Dean Hepinstall of Midland city was a very pleasant affair for the young people.

G. B. Sinclair received a telephone message on New Year's night of the very sudden death of his brother, James Sinclair, at his home in New Hudson. The brothers visited together on Christmas day and at that time James was as well and hearty as could be.

The Northville Woman's Club, will meet at the home of Mrs. Mary Ambler Jan. 10, 1902, at two o'clock, instead of three. The ladies are requested to remember the debate, on that date. Resolved "That woman's character and influence are weakened by a multiplicity of pursuits."

The Northville Royal Arch Masons elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Louis VanValkenburg, H. P.; Spencer Clark, King; C. G. Harrington, Scribe; B. A. Wheeler, treasurer; Wm. T. Gurr, secretary; H. A. Bovee, C. H., T. J. Davis, P. S.; George Wilcox, R. A. C.; F. F. Drake, M. 3rd V.; W. J. Lanning, M. 2nd V.; R. M. Johnson, M. 1st V.; J. R. Nash, sentinel.

Earl Cobb is quite ill.

Rev. Mr. Lloyd's little boy is getting better.

The mumps have about finished their swell time in Northville.

Ice harvesters are busy these days. The quality of the frozen article is certainly magnificent.

Miss Edith Allen, daughter of the late Capt. Chase Allen, was married at her home in Holly last night.

Mr and Mrs Frank Coon were the happy recipients of a sweet little nine pound girl for a New Year's present.

Dentist Will Hart of Lapeer and Editor James Slocum of Flint had a lively set-to at Flint New Year's night, over an article in the Lapeer paper. Both parties are well know here.

Special communication of Northville lodge, No. 186 F & A M., will be held Monday evening, Dec. 6th, preparatory for a visit to Detroit. Important that there should be a goodly attendance.

H. E. Cady, one of Northville's old landmarks, has just passed his 88th birthday and he is the liveliest old boy in town yet. Nothing gives him greater pleasure than to watch, or participate in, a good horse race.

The Northville Telephone company is now giving service to Farmington, and Porter Brothers contemplate putting in an exchange in that village and have the promise of about twenty-five subscribers to begin with.

Owners of horses, and drivers as well, should remember that there is a law against cruelty to animals, and one of the cruel acts that law takes notice of is that of leaving horses standing in the streets, on cold days, unblanketed.

The family reunion and Xmas gathering and dinner at J. M. Simmons' was one of the most enjoyable events of the season. About thirty relatives assembled. One of the parlor decorations was a beautiful arch of incandescent electric lights.

About thirty young people perpetrated a neat surprise upon Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Power New Year's afternoon by breaking into their house during their absence and loading the table with good things and upon their return a feast of merriment and turkey was indulged in.

Two D. P. & N. electric cars came together on the Phoenix bridge Monday morning and a serious accident was avoided by good luck. The cars jumped up in the air but fortunately landed on the track again and beyond a few scared passengers no damage was done. The freight car with Supt. Burton at the helm going north and a passenger car from Northville were in the mix up. The former no doubt calculated to get on the spur just north of the tunnel in time to make a meet, but failed to get farther than the bridge.

WANTED—Work of any description. Price reasonable and am in great need. VANSICKLE, Northside, Northville
