

BIG CROWD
AT THE RACESDUNLAP BOULEVARD FULL OF
PEOPLE AND HORSES.Starkweather, VanVleet, and Rattenbury Were the Winners.

Saturday's races on the Dunlap street Boulevard attracted the largest crowd of owners and admirers of fast steppers seen in Northville for many a moon. The streets were lined with teams from the country and the hitching facilities about town were inadequate for the demand. During the races Dunlap street was filled with an enthusiastic population which yelled to the queen's taste as each horse crossed the center street walk.

The free-for-all pace was won by George VanVleet's "Jeopardy."

In the 230 trot Ed. Starkweather's "Josie D." was the victor.

The matched race between George Rattenbury's "Little Ned" and Harley Johnson's "Dr. Johnson" was won by "Little Ned." This latter race was the one of special interest and it is said that a number of dollars changed hands on the result.

These little races draw in many people from neighboring towns and must be quite advantageous to the merchants of the village and especially as there is no expense tacked on to any one for prizes or to witness the sport.

NEW RATES ON P. M.

Ar Round Trip Tickets Now
Withdrawn.

The Pere Marquette company has inaugurated several changes in its passenger rates and regulations. The sale of round trip tickets has been discontinued and the rates of fare materially reduced where electric railways come in competition. The fare to and from Milford to Detroit is now but 90 cents and it will no longer be any object for people from that town to stop off here to take a suburban car.

The fare from either Northville or Plymouth to Detroit or vice versa is now 50 cents, though the special tickets are still on sale at the up town office to meet the street railway price.

TO TALK BEET SUGAR

Meeting Called for January 18 in Princess Rink Here.

Messrs. Glock and Miller of Detroit met with a number of the farmers here Monday night to talk over the feasibility of establishing a sugar beet factory here in the near future. They offer to contract to take all the beets that can be raised around here this year at the Mt. Clemens factory at good round prices, and that will make a test as to whether the right kind of beets can be profitably raised here. The gentlemen state that the soil hereabouts seems to be well adapted for the purpose.

The meeting was adjourned until Saturday, January 18, to be held in the rink. All the farmers of this section are urged to be present.

WONDERLAND-TEMPLE THEATRE

Biggest and Best Attraction to Be Found in Detroit City.

The seating capacity of Wonderland-Temple Theatre, Detroit, is again being taxed to its fullest extent and Manager Moore is already wondering how long it will be before he will have to enlarge it again. The new palace of beauty can comfortably seat 2,300 people and at each of the four daily performances there is scarcely any vacant seats at all. The attractions are far better than those appearing at any other vaudeville theatre in the west, and the low prices prevail, and courteous treatment extended the public by the management and employees is bringing an unprecedented, but deserved, patronage to the house.

SAL
WANT SALOONMASS MEETING HELD SUNDAY
EVENING TO PROTEST.Town Board and Citizens Will Fight to Bitter End.

SALEM, Mich., Jan. 8, 1902.—Special Cor.—Had a bombshell been exploded in the midst of the quiet little hamlet of Salem, it could not have created any greater consternation among the inhabitants than did Saloon-keeper Knowland of South Lyon when he made known his intention of moving to Salem and opening up a saloon in our village. Excitement ran high and all sorts of stories were freely discussed and the outcome was a mass meeting which was called Sunday night. It was attended by a big majority of the best citizens of the township. Supervisor John Muir was chosen chairman and addresses were made by Wilford B. Thompson, Hon. Geo. S. Wheeler, Rev. E. P. Clark of South Lyon and impromptu remarks were made by Revs. Hayne, Shermerhorn and Whitney, also by J. B. Waterman, H. Packard, Dwight Pebbles, Herbert Smith, E. T. Walker, John Smith and others, all of whom were representatives of the four churches and both the saloon and Knowland were scored to a turn.

During the meeting it was repeatedly remarked that Salem township never had and never would have a saloon within its limits and when a resolution to that effect was offered the audience rose to their feet as one person.

It is proposed by the citizens to bring to bear every point of law possible to keep out this wet goods store and a committee was formed to work in connection with the town board. It is safe to say Mr. Knowland will find he has struck a large sized snag if he does not already realize the fact.

RAID THE PAPER MILLS.

Eastern Michigan Press Club Does
It Monday.

Secretary Hopkins and President P. S. Neal of the Eastern Michigan Press club have arranged a slide trip for the quarterly meet of the club which occurs in Detroit Monday. The members will make a visit to the Ypsilanti paper mills in a D. Y. A. A. & J. special car, leaving Detroit at noon and will lunch enroute by courtesy of the Jupp Paper Company of Detroit. While in Ypsilanti the club will be guests of the Ypsilanti Paper Company. In the evening the club will visit one of the Detroit theatres.—Detroit Free Press.

The Time of a Wink

A German scientist has given another proof of the painstaking nature of his race in obtaining perfect accuracy and the most minute detail of all things. This savant has measured the time that is occupied by a wink. He used a special photographic apparatus and fixed a piece of white paper on the edge of the eyelid for a mark. He found that the lid descends quickly and rests a little at the bottom movement. Then it rises more slowly than it fell. The mean duration of the downward movement was from .075 to .091 of a second. The time from the instant the eye rested till it closed varied from .15 to .17 of a second. In rising the lid took .17 of a second. The wink was completed in .4 of a second.

Irving's 60 Pairs of Spectacles.

Mr. Henri Irving has always about him both at the theater and at home a great number of pairs of spectacles. He is always losing or mislaying a pair and so believes that he should have another pair at hand. Consequently he has at his theater some sixty of them.

A Chemical Factory in 1811.

The first chemical factory opened in this country was in Salem, Mass., in 1811. At first great objection was made to the establishment of the factory, the persons living near claiming that the fumes of the chemicals poisoned the air and made life intolerable.

Ceylon's Sacred Tree.
The oldest tree in the world is said to be the bo-gah or the sacred bo of Ceylon. It is located at Anuradhapura, the former capital of the Kings of Ceylon, and was planted in the year 288 B. C. In all these twenty-two centuries the tree has been honored under every dynasty and spared by all invaders. Millions of pilgrims have gone from all parts of India to kneel at its foot, and even at the present time its leaves are pliously gathered by the faithful, and cherished as holy relics. As far back as the fifth century Fa Hien, a noted Chinese traveler, went to visit it. Today the sacred bo is as much a ruin as any of the innumerable ancient monuments that surround it. Its branches are sustained by means of large pillars, and its trunk is propped up by massive work in the shape of a pyramid, the height of which increases from century to century. Around it stand altars, and on them pilgrims place their offerings. A sacred inclosure guards the tree from the irreverent, and in it is a temple, the priests of which spend their entire time in looking after the welfare of the bo.

Stories of Ivory in Africa.
Only a small proportion of the ivory annually exported from the Congo is taken directly from newly-killed animals. Thus, during 1899, of the 29,885 tusks sold on the Antwerp market, 8,529 alone came from freshly-killed animals, the remaining 21,446 tusks being what the natives term "dead ivory." For centuries the aborigines have been collecting elephant tusks, which they considered as having little intrinsic value, but useful as articles of exchange. The Khartoum merchants were the first to discover these hidden reserves of ivory. Later on the Zanzibar traders rushed on to Katanga, and thence to the very heart of the Congo, with the result that the ivory trade soon became the principal industry of the country.—New York Tribune.

Mark of Eve's Teeth.
A fruit supposed to bear the mark of Eve's teeth is one of the many botanical curiosities of Ceylon. The tree on which it grows is known by the significant name of "the forbidden fruit," or "Eve's apple tree." The blossom has a very pleasant scent, but the really remarkable feature of the tree, the one to which it owes its name, is the fruit. It is beautiful, and hangs from the tree in a peculiar manner. Orange on the outside and deep crimson within, each fruit has the appearance of having had a piece bitten out of it. This fact, together with its poisonous quality, led the Mohammedans to represent it as the forbidden fruit of the Garden of Eden and to warn men against its noxious properties.

An Exhausted Excuse.
A Cleveland woman went up to the market house a few days ago to supply the family larder and was astonished at the high prices asked for vegetables, from potatoes down. "But why is everything so dear?" she asked. "Because of the dry spell, ma'am," was the answer. She asked the same question several times and every man who answered her blamed the dry spell. Finally she stepped over to a fish stall and asked the price of whitedfish. To her surprise fish had gone up, too. "Oh, come," she said in a half-appealing tone to the dealer, "don't tell me that the dry spell is to blame for this advance, 16c!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

English Obituary Notice.
The following obituary notice from a newspaper published in an English town shows enterprise. "Died, on the 11th inst., at his shop, Greenwich street, Mr. Edward Jones, much respected by all who knew and dealt with him. As a man he was amiable, as a master upright and moderate. His virtues were beyond all praise and his beaver hats only fifteen shillings each. He has left a widow to deplore his loss and a large stock to be sold cheap for the benefit of his family."

Riding "Bike" and Driving Horse.
A man riding a bicycle and driving a horse at the same time started North Broad street yesterday morning. He held the reins in one hand and guided his machine with the other. His feet rested upon the coaster, and the horse did the rest. In and out among the other vehicles he guided the animal, and all along the streets people stopped and gazed in wonder.—Philadelphia Record.

Their Comparative Situations.
Nearly all of Norway and Sweden are in the same latitude as Alaska. St. Petersburg, Stockholm and Christiania are all in a higher latitude than either Sitka or Juneau. Iceland sustains its hardy population in a region similar to that around Cape Nome and in about the same latitude.

Helen Gladstone's Chosen Calling.
Miss Helen Gladstone, who gave up the principality of Newham College, Cambridge, to be with her father and mother in their last years, has become warden of the Women's University Settlement in Southwark, and will live in their building in South London.

Torpedo Boats and Steam.

Contrary to the general belief the engines of torpedo boats are not at all extravagant in the use of steam, but approach high economy, considering that they are driven regardless of cost, the sole view being to get the highest possible piston speed in the shortest time with forced draft of greatest intensity. The coal burned per initial horse power in the case of one boat recently constructed was only 1.88 pounds per hour, with a consumption of sixty-eight pounds per square foot of gas.—Chicago News.

Trolley Up Pike's Peak.

An electric line is to be built up Pike's Peak. The plan is to handle the cars to Clyde, which will give the electrical cars a run of 26 miles to the peak. The grade from Clyde on will be slight, and the cars will have no difficulty whatever in making the climb; of course, there will be many curves, but the tourist is looking for curves and scenery. There has been nothing definite done in the matter yet, but the promoters say that cars will be running next summer.

BISHOP HANDY

SAYS

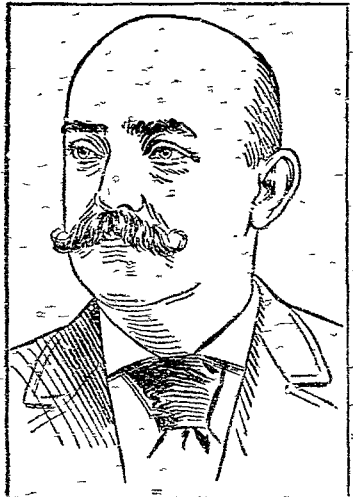

"I take great pleasure in acknowledging the curative effects of Peruna. At the solicitation of a friend I used your remedy and cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a good tonic and a safe cure for catarrh."—JAMES A. HANDY.

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the above one from Bishop James A. Handy, D. D., of Baltimore.

OTHER NOTABLE CURES.

A Husband Escaped the Pangs of Catarrh of the Lungs.

Most Cases of Incipient Consumption are Catarrh.

Edward Stevens

Mrs. Edward Stevens of Carthage, N. Y., writes as follows:

"I now take pleasure in notifying you that my husband has entirely recovered from catarrh. He is a well man today, thanks to you and Peruna. He took six bottles of your medicine as directed, and it proved to be just the thing for him. His appetite is good and every thing he eats seems to agree with him. His cough has left him and he is gaining in flesh, and seems to be well every way."—MRS. EDWARD STEVENS.

Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other location. This is why Peruna has become so justly famous in the cure of catarrhal diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Peruna does not palliate; it cures.

Mrs. Frederick Williams, President of the South Side Ladies' Aid Society of Chicago, Ill., writes the following words of praise for Peruna from 973 Cuyler avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"My home is never without Peruna, for I have found during the past six years that there is no remedy that will at once alleviate suffering and actually cure, as Peruna does. Four bottles completely cured me of catarrh of the head of several years' standing, and if my husband feels badly, or either of us catch cold, we at once take Peruna, and in a day or two it has thrown the sickness out of the system."—Mrs. Frederick Williams.

Mrs. W. A. Allison, of 750 Sheffield avenue, Chicago, Ill., is the Assistant Matron of the People's Hospital. She has the following to say about Peruna:

"I have had frequent opportunities to observe the wonderful curative effects of Peruna especially on persons suffering with a congested condition of the head, lungs, and stomach, generally called catarrh. It alleviates pain and soreness, increases the appetite and so tones up the entire system that the patient quickly regains strength and health."—Mrs. W. A. Allison.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. W. A. Allison

Lyceum Theatre—Detroit:

"The Heart of Maryland" is announced to repeat its welcome performances, week beginning the evening of January 12th at the Lyceum Theatre, Detroit. As a play its merits have been widely discussed and are now admitted to be sufficient to ensure it a place among the enduring standard dramatic works of our times.

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit:

"One of the Bravest" will make its appearance at the Whitney Opera House the afternoon of January 12. This play has the proud distinction of creating as much enthusiasm in Great Britain as it has done in America. The principal cities there were covered by Mr. Charles McCarthy in the play. Most of the engagements were by special request, as the various chiefs of fire departments were desirous of witnessing the many devices of the fire fighters of New York City. All the apparatus, etc., now in use here and abroad will be seen in the great fire scene of "One of the Bravest."

Children Especially Liable.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, cools the wound, keeps it from getting worse. Sure cure for rashes. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures a baby's eczema after two physicians gave her up. "The sores were so bad she could not wear five dresses a day."—Murdock Bros.

An Unassuming Nephew.

The duke of Norfolk is one of the most charitable members of the British peerage, and gives enormous sums away yearly. He has a great contempt for appearances, and a story is told of his having one day been met walking down Pall Mall with a big brown paper parcel under his arm. Upon a friend's inquiring what he had there, he informed him that it was "his uniform." He was on his way to a drawing-room at Buckingham palace, at which he would have to appear gorgeous in red and gold.

Thousands Sent Into Exile.

Every year a large number of poor sufferers whose lungs are sore and racked with coughs are urged to go to another climate. But this is costly and not always sure. Don't be an exile when Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption will cure you at home. It's the most infallible medicine for coughs, colds, and all throat and lung diseases on earth. The first dose brings relief. Astonishing cures result from persistent use. Trial bottles free at Geo. T. Hueston's. Price 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

Slot Machine Provides Meals.

Slot machines providing meals have been introduced in London. The refreshments are arranged on a long buffet behind a glass screen. On putting four pennies one after another into the slot the screen rises and a tray holding a teapot, milk jug, sugar bowl and cup and saucer comes within reach. The teapot contains tea leaves and hot water can be drawn from a public tank. To pennies produce a roll with butter, or sandwiches, or both. Buns and other slots yield temperance drinks and confectionery.

A Prize Original Answer.

In answer to the question, "Who is the greatest woman in all history?" put to 200 Macon county (Ga.) teachers, Miss Nannie Vickroy of Macon made a unique answer, which was awarded the prize for its originality. Miss Vickroy passed over Queen Victoria, Frances Willard, Helen Gould and other women whose names were the most popular and declared, "The wife of the Missouri farmer of moderate means who does her own cooking, washing and ironing, brings up a large family of girls and boys to be useful members of society, and finds time for her own intellectual and moral improvement, is the greatest woman in all history."

Too One-Sided.

Sam Jones, in one of his sermons, took pains to task for spending more time in praying than in praying "if there's a woman here," he finally screamed, "who prays more than she prinks, let her stand up." One poor old faded specimen of humanity, in the sorriest, shabbiest of clothes, arose, "You spend more time praying than prinking?" asked the preacher, taking her all in. The poor old creature said she did—prayed all the time, prinked not at all. "You go straight home," admonished Jones, "and put a little time on your prinking."

Harold Turner's parents gave him a birthday party last evening and a dozen or two of his young friends were on hand to help him enjoy his ninth anniversary.

As a result of a donation made by Orange Butler the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid society is out of debt. Mr. Butler generously made up the deficiency this week.

Some one didn't pull the gate and let off the water in the Babillon pond last week as they did about Christmas time and so M. S. Ambler is harvesting a crop of frozen cakes now for next summer's use.

Scherer & Cattermole white blacksmiths at Northville, shod 234 horses the last week before Christmas, putting four shoes on each horse. They shod the fore feet of each horse and that made two, then they shod the hind feet and that is how they shod the four feet—Adrian Press.

Kollin Prindle of Detroit died very suddenly in that city last week of pneumonia. He formerly lived in Redford and was father of Miss Mary Prindle, who is well known to many Northville people, she having clerked in Teicher's store some years ago. Miss Prindle is now Mrs. J. E. Hensen and lives in Denver, Colo.

Night Watch Huff reports having several times of late encountered suspicious acting characters about the village at night. It will be well for the business men of the town to take what precaution is possible against a prospective visit of the light fingered gentry. It is not probable that while all other towns are being visited Northville will be continually alighted.

Red is a danger signal on the railroad, on a fellow's nose and on a woman's face. Men and women use Rocky Mountain Tea and get genuine rosy cheeks. 35c. Murdock Bros.

Timham's orchestra of seven pieces will furnish the music and the Lady Bees will supply the supper. Invitations will be issued next week.

Night Watch Huff has found, or rather it has been found for him, an additional occupation—that of starting up the fire in the early morning in several stores and other business places. It not only brings in to the night watch a little more money, but the business men find it profitable in that their stores and offices are all warm and ready for business when the whistle blows.

The matter of furnishing lights to the P. M. railroad company here came up again Monday night. The company offers to pay only six cents per thousand watts but the opinion seemed to prevail that the railroad company was entitled to no more concessions than other people of the village who pay eight cents. Supt. Wilkinson recommended that the rate be eight cents to the company or no electricity.

Orange Butler is the spriest old gentleman in town. On Thursday he passed his 84th birthday. He uses neither cane nor glasses and challenges any man over 65 for a foot race.

LATER—Wm. Blair, aged 69, accepts the challenge of Mr. Butler for a foot race and it now only remains for the seconds to get together and arrange the date and place. There'll be don't in Northville now. Horse races won't be in it.

When Bro. Charles Dolph returned home from the League business meeting Tuesday evening, he was astonished to find his good wife endeavoring to entertain about forty unexpected callers from among the young people of the church. It proved to be a genuine surprise party this time.

Now that the League room is filled Sunday evening, let us see what we can do about increasing the attendance at class meeting.

The annual promotions occurred in the Sunday-school last Sunday. We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50 cent bottle of Greene's Warranted Syrup of Tar if it fails to cure your cough or cold. We also guarantee a 25 cent bottle to prove satisfactory or money refunded.

The Shamrock a Sea Freak.

Imagine the Shamrock II, a boat 90 feet long carrying a mast 160 feet high, with sail area developing power enough to propel a six-master, and you have the reason why it becomes necessary to hang 100 tons of lead on her keel. Without it she would be standing on her head at the first breath of a ten-knot breeze. The science of building these racing machines has centered in determining at just what point the added drag of lead-weighted keels balanced the extra power gained by increased sail area—and stopping just short of that point. These sea racers are built for a single use and are valueless for any other. —National Magazine.

Through Sunday Vandal.

Antiquaries will read with mingled satisfaction and regret that the Roman Wall station of Borocovius, or Housteads, has been closed to the public, the reason being that Sunday vandals had taken to hurling stones from it down the neighboring ravine. The great wall has already suffered more than enough spoliation. The farmhouse of Place Trees, hard by, was built with stones taken from this very station; and all along from Carlisle to Newcastle it is more or less a ruin—the more pitifully because what remains of it, assailed by no worse enemies than winter and rough weather is surprisingly fresh.—Yorkshire Post.

They Couldn't Read the Postcard.

The wife of a distinguished general officer, now holding an important home command, was a week ago staying in a remote country village. Expecting a letter from her husband, she ran out to meet the elderly postman, whom she had seen from a window as he came up the drive. "Yes, my lady, there's a card for you, but if you can read it you'll be clever. Postmistress an me can't make head nor tail of it. Gentry ain't so good with their pens as when I was young." The general had taken the precaution of writing his communication in Greek characters. —East Anglian Times.

Earliest River Ancestral Bird.

The green finch is the earliest riser among the bird family. It begins to pipe about 1 o'clock in the morning. The blackcap begins at 3.30. It is nearly 4 o'clock before the blackbird appears. It is heard half an hour before the thrush, and the chirp of the robin begins about the same length of time before that of the wren. The house sparrow and the lark take the last stage of the list.

Holland's Queen a Sportswoman.

While Queen Wilhelmina has been staying at Scheveninghe she has taken several motor trips with her brother-in-law, the grand duke of Mecklenburg. The queen, who is already an intangible skater, a fine horsewoman and can drive a coach and four, is said to be enchanted with the new sport, and has ordered an automobile to be made for her.

 If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The story of the Lost Continent is the translation of an ancient manuscript found in a cave in the Canary Islands and opens with the installation of Zaemon, a conqueror of Yucatan, a province of Atlantis, the latter a continent situated in the Atlantic ocean. Zaemon succeeds Deucalion, who is recalled by the queen, Phoenice, to help prop the tottering throne of Atlantis, of whom he has heard little. He learns is a crafty and very beautiful woman, having been born the daughter of a swineherd, although she claims to be a daughter of the gods. She is snatched and raised by Zaemon, governor of a province and one of the high priests. She is possessed of a great ambition to rule and while still young deposes him. All attempts to capture her are unsuccessful and she finally defeats the old king and takes the throne.

CHAPTER II.—Zaemon is much surprised when next day Deucalion asks the use of a ship to take him home, believing he had grown rich during his reign, as he (Zaemon) would have done, but Deucalion is a poor man, having ruled only for the good of the country. Things are different in Atlantis, greed and selfishness being the universal rule.

She made a sign, and a stair was brought, and then she called to me. I mounted and sat beside her in the golden half-castle under the canopy of royal snakes. The girl who stood behind in attendance fanned us both with perfumed feathers, and at a word from Phoenice the mammoth was turned, bearing us back towards the royal pyramid by the way through which it had come. At the same time also all the other machinery of splendor was put in motion. The soldiers and the gaudily bedecked civil traders fell into procession before and behind, and I gazed at a body of troops heavily armed, marched on each of the mammoth's flanks.

Phoenice turned to me with a smile. "You piqued me," she said, "at first."

"Your majesty overwhelms me with so much notice."

"You looked at my steed before you looked at me. A woman finds it hard to forgive a slight like that."

"I envied you the greatest of your conquests, and do still. I have fought mammoths myself, and at times have killed, but I never dared even to think of taking one alive and bringing it into tameness."

"You speak bravely," she said, still smiling, "and yet you can turn a pretty compliment. Faugh! Deucalion, the way these people fawn on me gives me a nausea. I am not of the same clay as they are. I know; but just because I am the daughter of gods they must needs feed me on the pap of insincerity."

So Zaemon was right, and the swineherd was forgotten. Well, if she chose to keep up the fiction she had made, it was not my part to contradict her. Rightly or wrongly, she was empress and without competitor, and anyway I was her servant.

"I have been pining this long enough for a stronger meat than they can give," she went on, "and at last I have sent for you. I have been at some pains to procure my tongue-pictures of you, Deucalion, and though you do not know me yet, I may say I knew you with all thoroughness even before we met. I can admire a man with a mind great enough to forego the silly gauds of clothes, or the excesses of feasts, or the pampering of women." She looked down at her own silks and her glittering jewels. "We women like to carry colors upon our persons, but that is a different matter. And so I sent for you here to be my minister, and bear with me the burden of ruling."

"There should be better men in broad Atlantis."

"There are not, my lord, and I who know them all by heart tell you so. They are all enamored of my poor person they weary me with their empty phrases and their importunities, and though they are always brimming with their cries of service, their own advancement and the filling of their own treasuries ever come first with them. So I have sent for you, Deucalion, the one strong man in all the world. You at least will not sigh to be my lover?"

I saw her watching for my answer from the corners of her eyes. "The empress," I said, "is my mistress, and I will be an honest minister to her."

"And when the attendant had unlinked the jeweled clasp (as it seemed to me with a very ill grace), she herself stripped down the fabric, baring the pure skin beneath, and showing me just below the curve of her left breast a bandage of blood-stained linen."

"There is a guarantee of my seriousness yesterday, at any rate," she said, looking at me sidelong.

"The arrow struck on a rib, and that saved me. If it had struck below, Deucalion would have been standing beside my funeral-pyre to-day, instead of riding on this pretty steed of mine which he admires so much. Your eyes seem to feast itself most on the mammoth, Deucalion. Ah, poor me. I am not one of your shaggy creatures, and so it seems I shall never be able to catch your regard. Ylga," she said to the girl behind, "you may link my dress up again with its clasp. My Lord Deucalion has seen wisdom before, and there is nothing else here to interest him."

the chief street in the fairest, the most wonderful city this world has ever seen. I had left it a score of years before, and was curious to note its increase.

In public buildings the city had certainly made growth; there were new temples, new pyramids, new palaces, and statuary everywhere. Its greatness and magnificence impressed me more strongly even than usual, returning to it as I did from such a distance of time and space, for, though the many cities of Yucatan might each of them be princely, this great capital was a place not to be compared with any of them. It was imperial and gorgeous beyond descriptive words.

Yet most of all was I struck by the poverty and squalor which stood in such close touch with all this magnificence. In the throngs that lined the streets there were gaunt bodies and hungry faces everywhere. Here and there stood one, a man or a woman, as naked as a savage in Europe, and yet dull to shame. Even the trader, with trumpets, gauds on his coat, aping the prevailing fashion for display, had a scared, uneasy look on his face, as though he had forgotten the mere name of safety, and hid his frantic heart with his tawdry outward vanities of prosperity.

Phoenice read the direction of my looks.

"The season," she said, "has been unhealthy of recent months. These lower people will not build fine houses to adorn my city, and because they choose to live on in their squalid, unsightly kennels, there have been calenures and other sicknesses among them, which make them disinclined for work. And then, too, for the moment, earning is not easy. Indeed, you may say trade is nearly stopped this last half-year since the rebels have been hammering so lustily at my city gates."

I fairly started out of my decorum.

"Rebels!" I cried, "who are hammering at the gates of Atlantis? Is the city in a state of siege?"

"Of their condescension," said Phoenice, lightly, "they are giving us holiday to-day, and so, happily, we welcome to you comes undisturbed. If they were fighting your ears would have told you of it. To give them their due, they are noisy enough in all their efforts. My spies say they are making ready new engines for use against the walls, which you may sally out to-morrow and break if it gives you amusement. But for to-day, Deucalion, I have you, and you have me, and there is peace round us, and some prettiness of display. If you ask for more I will give it you."

"I did not know of this rebellion," I said, "but as your majesty has made me your minister, it is well that I should know all about its scope at once. This is a matter we should be serious upon."

"And do you think I cannot take it seriously also?" she retorted. "Ylga," she said to the girl that stood behind, "set loose my dress at the shoulder."

And when the attendant had unlinked the jeweled clasp (as it seemed to me with a very ill grace), she herself stripped down the fabric, baring the pure skin beneath, and showing me just below the curve of her left breast a bandage of blood-stained linen.

hot sunshine into the cool gloom beyond, with the fan-girl following decorously at her heels. I too went inside the pyramid, and the stone doors, with a sullen thud, closed behind us.

We did not go far just then. Phoenice halted in the hall of waiting. How well I remembered the place, with the pictures of kings on its red walls, and the burning fountain of earth-breath which blazed from a jet of bronze in the middle of the floor, and gave it light. The old king that was gone had come this far of his complaisance when he bade me face well as I set out twenty years before for my viceroyalty of Yucatan.

But the air of the hall was different to what it had been in those old days. Then it was pure and sweet. Now it was heavy with some scent, and I found it languid and oppressive.

"I am told you are a pretty fighter," said she. "Well, I hold some small skill in arms myself, and have a conceit that I am something of a judge. To-morrow we will take a taste of battle together. But to-day I must carry through the honorable reception I have planned for you, Deucalion. The feast will be ready soon, and you will wish to make ready for the feast. There are chambers here selected for your use, and stored with what is needed. Ylga will show you their places."

We waited, the fan-girl and I, till Phoenice had passed out of the glow of the light-jet, and had left the hall of waiting through a doorway among the shadows of its further angle, and then (the girl taking a lamp and leading) we also threaded our way through the narrow mazes of the pyramid.

Everywhere the air was full of perfumes, and everywhere the passages turned and twisted and doubled through the solid stone of the pyramid, so that strangers might have spent hours—yes, or days—in search before they came to the chamber they desired. There was a fine cunningness about those forgotten builders who sat up this royal pyramid. They had no mind that kings should fall by the hand of vulgar assassins who might come in suddenly from outside. And it is said also that the king of the time, to make doubly sure, killed all that had built the pyramid, or seen even the lay of its inner stones.

But the fan-girl led the way with the lamp—swinging in her hand, as one accustomed to the mazes. Here she doubled, there she turned, and here she stopped in the middle of a blank wall to push a stone, which swung to let us pass. And once she pressed at the corner of a flagstone on the floor, which reared up at the thrust of her foot, and showed us a stair steep and narrow. That we descended, coming to the foot of an inclined way which led us upward, again, and so by degrees we came unto the chamber which had been given for my use.

"There is raiment in all these chests which stand by the walls," said the girl, "and jewels and gauds in that bronze coffer. They are Phoenice's first presents, she bid me say, and but a small earnest of what is to come. My Lord Deucalion can drop his simplicity now, and fit himself out in finery to suit the fashion."

"Gul," I said, sharply, "be more decorous with your tongue, and spare me such small advice."

"If my Lord Deucalion thinks this a rudeness, he can give a word to Phoenice, and I shall be whipped if he asks it I can be stripped and scourged before him. The empress will do much for Deucalion just now."

"Gul," I said, "you are nearer to that whipping than you think for."

"I have got a name," she retorted, looking at me sullenly from under her black brows. "They call me Ylga. You might have heard that as we rode here on the mammoth had you not been so wrapped up in Phoenice."

I gazed at her curiously. "You have never seen me before," I said, "and the first words you utter are those that might well bring trouble to yourself. There is some object in all this."

She went and pushed to the massive stone that swung in the doorway of the chamber. Then she put her little jeweled fingers on my garment and drew me carefully away from the air shaft into the farther corner. "I am the daughter of Zaemon," she said, "whom you knew."

"You bring me some message from him?"

"How could I? He lives in the priests' dwellings on the mountain and obeys me to I have not put eyes on him these two years. But when I saw you first step out from that red pavilion there had pitched at the harbor side, I—I felt a pity for you, Deucalion. I remembered you were my father's, Zaemon's, friend, and I knew what Phoenice had in store. She has been plotting it all these two months."

"I cannot hear words against the empress."

"And yet—"

"What?"

She stamped her sandal upon the stone of the floor. "You must be a very blind man, Deucalion, or a very daring one. But I shall not interfere further; at least, not now. I shall watch, and if at any time you seem to want a friend, I will try and serve you."

"I thank you for your friendship."

"You seem to take it lightly enough. Why, sir, even now I do not believe you know my power, any more than you guess my motive. You may be first man in this kingdom, but let me tell you, I rank as second lady. And remember, woman stand high in Atlantis now. Believe me, my friendship is a commodity that has been sought with frequency and industry."

"And, as I say, I am grateful for it. You seem to think little enough of my gratitude, Ylga, but, credit me, I never have bestowed it on a woman before, and so you should treasure it for its rarity."

"Well," she said, "my lord, there is an education before you." She left me then, showing me how to call slaves when I wished for their help, and for a full minute I stood wondering at the words I had spoken to her. Who was this daughter of Zaemon, that she should induce me to change the habit of a lifetime?

D. P. Yerkes of Milford has asked the village council in that city to grant him a franchise for the purpose of putting in a telephone plant there similar to the Northville plant. Eventually the Milford exchange if completed will be connected with the Northville plant.

A C. Ryegner, whatever that spells, of Orion didn't know his cow's hind leg was loaded and as a result he is sporting a beautiful black eye, that is a beautiful black—the eye isn't handsome at all—and he also has a cheek that looks as if an elephant had stepped on it. Moral: Let your wife do the milking.

The Milan Leader editor went to church the other Sunday and then went home and wrote this item for his paper. "We were glad to see so many out to church Sunday." Probably the editor's first attendance. Same number always out to church on Sunday at Milan. Only one more there that Sunday than usual and that was Houseman.

Billy Size, late foreman of the Orion Review, has taken all his savings and invested in the grocery business in that village and has left the smell of printers' ink for that of kerosene oil and codfish. In about a year Billy will have a lot of experience picked up in his mental chase, but we dare say the looking will be done with fewer quinos than he used at the year's beginning.

A Sheriff now has hold of the Trenton Times. It's T. M. Sheriff, a fine elderly gentleman, father of Mrs. Eda Bassett, a former publisher. Mr. Sheriff succeeds Walter Stokes in the management of the Times. He has had previous experience in the newspaper business and will no doubt again make a decided success of the work. Mr. Sheriff in addition to managing the Times has an envelope factory at Trenton which employs a number of hands.

Now look out for cards containing a girl's name, when you open a package of health food. A Battle Creek girl something over a year ago while packing some of the many food products made there, enclosed her card. The package found its way to some place in Connecticut, and a young man secured it. He thought it would be a good idea to get up a correspondence and wrote. She replied and after a while photos were exchanged. Later he came to Battle Creek took a personal inventory, and Tuesday he and Miss Ada White were married, the ceremony being at Bristol, Tenn., at the home of the bride's aunt. Every unmarried girl in Battle Creek will now steal a card in each package of grape nut, oat meal, malt-a-vita, plasco, tubac or other boxed edibles handled by them.—Adrian Press.

A Profitable Investment

"I was troubled for about seven years with my stomach, and in bed half my time," says E. Demick, Somerville, Ind. "I spent about $1,000 and never could get anything to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." You don't live by what you eat, but by what you digest and assimilate. If your stomach doesn't digest your food you are really starving. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does the stomach's work by digesting the food. You don't have to diet. Eat all you want. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles.—Kodol Bros.

THE RUBBER LARYNX

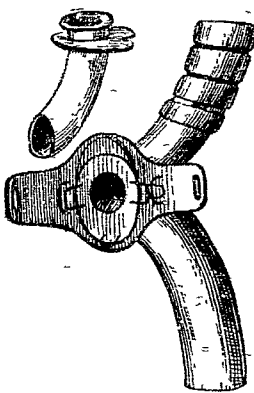

Frenchman Carries a Strange Device in His Throat.

It is Made of Vulcanized Rubber and is Virtually Indestructible—Incident Recalls Strange Historical Parallels.

Paris has been much interested recently in a medical subject who was exhibited before the Academy of Medicine as the possessor of an artificial larynx, capable of speaking in monotone and of eating solid food. The apparatus, inserted above the trachea, is of vulcanized rubber, having a rubber diaphragm answering for the glottis, and vibrating in monotone as the patient speaks. A metallic grating prevents the ingress of food into the windpipe and such liquor as is swallowed falls into a funnel and drains to the esophagus.

According to cable dispatches, Great Britain, more than France, should be interested in this special case, with reference to the reported condition of King Edward's throat. Chicago physicians are recalling, in connection with this French case, the death of Emperor Frederick of Germany when an artificial larynx was ready for insertion in his throat, but when the judgment of the German doctor Von Bergmann was overruled by that of English Sir Morrill Mackenzie as to the necessity of the operation.

"Emperor Frederick might have been alive and well to-day had it not been for the influence of Mackenzie," said a well-known physician to a Chicago Tribune reporter. "Doubtless the influence of the English throne was behind the interference, for if it had been known that Frederick had cancer of the throat the daughter of Queen Victoria would never have been queen of Prussia. The influence of Mackenzie, however, saved off the operation just when the time was ripe, and the emperor died because of it. Now it looks as if that situation might come home to roost on the English throne.

According to Dr. E. Holinger, a Chicago authority on throat troubles, however, the whole French sensation is considerably belated and out of date. "The artificial larynx is nothing new," he said, "and in the hands of a surgeon who knows his business little danger or difficulty attends its use. It has been used since 1870 or earlier by Prof. von Bruns and has been much improved. It is an appliance that can be bought in any well-regulated instrument store, but its use is confined to extreme cases only. Tuberculosis or cancer is the disease which makes it seemingly necessary, but even then the use of the artificial larynx is avoided through the great improvement in methods of diagnosis and treatment of cases by way of the mouth.

"Cases where the artificial larynx has been worn for years are not rare. One of the most remarkable on record is the case of a German officer, who wore one for 25 years, in this time giving instruction in horsemanship and yet making his commands understood above the noise of horses' hoofs in the ring.

"In the French case, an improvement seems to have been made in that the patient is able to swallow. But the great disadvantage of all these appliances are the consequences of the pressure they exert on the living tissues, which often lead to sores and scars that make prolonged use a bore and even a danger to the patient."

In brief, Dr. Holinger's idea is that in almost any case a patient would better lose his voice than risk an artificial larynx.

Anton A. Frank, a Chicago surgical instrument dealer has an artificial larynx in stock, though he has never sold one. It is of solid silver, with a glottis of the same material inserted. The mechanism is nearly four inches long, weighs two ounces, and costs $20.

To wear this the throat is opened just above the Adam's apple, and the corrugated end of the larynx is grasped by the vocal chords. The glottis drops into the lower tube, which extends into the windpipe, downward. Breathing with such an appliance would be through an auxiliary tube and the patient to talk, would have to close this tube with his fingers. The worst feature of the appliance, to the eye, is that a loop from it projects through the neck above the pomum Adams, through which a lace must be passed for tying around the neck.

SANDS & PORTER BROS.,

Northville, Michigan.

Important Deed Long Unrecorded.

It is a curious fact that the deed to the present police headquarters of New York City, 300 Mulberry street, which passed in 1863 from the metropolitan police district of that day to the board of supervisors of the county of New York, was not recorded until a few days ago. No explanation is given.

Arrest Some with Safety.

"Why do you object to being shifted about?" "Because," answered the New York policeman, "it impairs the efficiency of the force. No sooner do we learn whom it is safe to arrest than we are sent to some other part of the town, where we have to get acquainted all over again."—Washington Star.

Definition of a Gentleman.

In his recent baccalaureate sermon President Buckham of the University of Vermont thus defined a gentleman: "A gentleman is one who is more thoughtful of others' feelings than of his own rights, and more thoughtful of others' rights than of his own feelings."
