THE ANNUAL WARFARE

Or the Season of Woman's Inhumanity to Man.

The melancholy days have come,
The maddest of the year

And the great annual warfare against the mighty hosts of dirt and disorder, with their allies of the insect and bacterian tribes waxeth fast and furious. The sound of the whacking of carpets is heard in the land and the walloping of rugs, couches and diverse articles goeth forth on the morning wind and echoeth through the dismantled dwelling places. The goodly fragrance of moth balls, soap suds and ammonia floateth on the gentle breezes of spring and the paper hanger stalketh pugnaciously abroad. The housewife decorateth her brow with a dusting cap and a frown and her features with sundry smut patches, and wreaketh impartial vengeance upon the friends and the foes of her household. The paterfamilias meekly huggeth stove pipes to the garret and racketh his spinal column with mighty pulls on refractory carpets, and in the brief respites of his labors he nureth his pained fingers and speaketh unseemly words because of the overturning of furniture upon his toes— if albeit he be thus constructed. More often he stealeth cautiously away from his erstwhile peaceful abiding place as soon as he hath broken his fast and returneth with stealthy footsteps at eventide to solicit of his hired girl a section of pie and such various additional viands as may be available to appease the importunate demands of his interior department. And if it so be that the combat hath at last ceased, when the tithes of the decorator and the furbisher and the charwoman and the physician are rendered to the uttermost farthing, when the wary carpet bug lurketh in fear and trembling in its ambush beneath the baseboard and longeth for midsummer, when his Sabbath garments no longer frantically gesticulate and dance in stardling attitude upon the clothes line, the householder setteth himself to the task of discovering wherewith he is at Northville he bleth him to his own especial allotment of his domicile, where he findeth that he can find nothing without diligent search and discovereth that he can in no wise discover anything in its familiar place. But the greater evil hath so overshadowed the lesser that he complaineth but surreptitiously and in brief space hath the appurtenances of his domain once again reduced to the state of disorder in which his soul delighteth and which he fondly imagineth to be tidiness at which no woman hath any license to cavil, and in which he fann would be permitted to revel from henceforth forever

Michigan School for the Blind Lansing, Mich.

The Michigan School for the Blind is a literary, musical and trades school for the education of the blind and those whose sight is too poor for them to attend the common schools. It is a State Institution and is free to all who are eligible. There is no charge for tuition, board, lodging, washing, mending, medicine, medical or nurse attendance. In case of inability to furnish clothing and traveling expenses these are also furnished by the State.

If you know of a child who is out of school because of poor eyes please write to School for the Blind, Lansing, Mich.

The greatest possible care is taken of the health of the pupils. A trained nurse is constantly employed there is a splendid new hospital, separate from the other buildings to which pupils are immediately removed in case of sickness. A competent physician is ready at all times to attend when needed, and Dr. Carlow of the University of Michigan, an eminent specialist in the treatment of the eye, makes an annual visit to examine the eyes of the pupils. All treatment and surgical operations are without expense to parents but not performed without the parents' written sanction and consent. The School is not a hospital, but the best possible treatment is given the eyes and there is probably no better place for children with seriously defective eyes.

NORTHVILLE WOMAN'S CLUB

Entertained by Plymouth Ladies Last Week Thursday.

Last week Thursday afternoon nearly thirty members of the Northville Woman's club went to Plymouth as the guests of the Ladies' Literary club there. The visitors were delightfully entertained in the Frazer Opera House with a program consisting of a very able and instructive paper on Russian art, several beautiful vocal solos and an extremely bright and amusing original comedietta, charmingly presented. After the program dainty refreshments were served and the rest of the all too short afternoon devoted to social enjoyment. Hostesses and guests were unanimous in pronouncing the occasion a most delightful one, and in expressing themselves in favor of similar visits in the future.

Northville Has an Honest Lawyer.

It was, indeed, as the Record says "A most remarkable occurrence." It was this. A citizen of Northville found a $5 bill on the steps leading to a lawyer's office, and instead of sticking it into his pocket was so short-sighted as to hand it to the lawyer, who said he would try to discover its owner. Did you ever hear of such childlike simplicity and confidence? But allowance is made for the man on the ground that the lawyer denied that the money was his, which so dazed the finder that he hardly knew what he was about. To further gain his confidence the lawyer advertised the money, and by hook, by crook, stepped Judge Webster, who claimed it was his and received the cash. This incident took place subsequent to a certain lying contest for a prize of $10 to the winner. Following several weak liars, a contestant arose and thus began: "Once there was an honest lawyer"—but was interrupted by all the others shouting in chorus "Stop right there! The money is yours."—The Detroit Tribune.

Obituary.

Rollin Handel Beal, whose death was briefly mentioned last week, was born in Lyons, Mich., July 7, 1852, and was educated in Ionia schools and afterward taught, at one time being principal of the East school. Later he took up the study of medicine at the U. of M. but was unable to complete the course. In August 1877 he was married to Miss Emma M. Watson of Greenville. To them were born four sons, Harold, Ralph, Selah and Paul. In 1888 the family came to Northville where for several years they were closely identified with the interests of the Baptist church. In May, 1895, after a long and severe illness, Mrs. Beal was called to her final rest.

In September 1898 Mr. Beal was united in marriage with Miss Nina T. Clark of Northville, thereafter making their home in Detroit. During the winter of 1900 Mr. Beal passed thro a very severe attack of bronchial pneumonia, from which he never fully recovered. The difficulty slowly developed into pulmonary tuberculosis. Last fall other complications appeared and in hopes that a different climate might prove beneficial to his health, he and his son Ralph went to Arizona in December. He seemed to be improving till the first of April, when he began to fail rapidly and feeling that he must have the care that only his loved ones could give, he returned home April 13. He gradually grew weaker till early Thursday morning, April 24, when he quietly and peacefully entered into his last long sleep.

Mr. Beal was a sincere Christian, always performing his duties, whatever they were, in an honest and conscientious manner, but it was in his home where his most noble qualities were felt, being a great lover of home ties and his wife and boys will feel most keenly his absence.

The funeral services were held at the Detroit home Friday, remarks being made by Rev. Herman Burns, the pastor of the Grand River Avenue Baptist church of which the deceased was a member, and C. W. Pickell, with whom Mr. Beal has been connected in life insurance work for the past three years. The remains were taken to Ionia for burial Saturday. Mr. Beal was for some years in charge of the school furniture department of the Globe Furniture factory here. He leaves his family well provided for by the life insurance policies which he carried.

Hey diddle, diddle!

The Train Announcer May Go.

What traveller (be his experience confined to one trip between Nicholsville, Conn., and New York, or limited only by the inability of Thomas Cook & Son to supply transportation to Mars or the moon) what traveller has not paid tribute of admiration to the train announcer? Who has not at some critical moment, hung anxiously upon the words of wisdom that rolled sonorously forth from the lips of this railroad oracle? Who has not marveled that such a tremendous volume of sound (musical without) could come from a little, round man whose only claim to distinction of appearance lay in an air of great importance, or from the equally improbable lungs of a gaunt and skeleton-like six-footer with impassive countenance?

Yet this picturesque figure so familiar to American travellers may soon be relegated to the past. The Hudson River Railroad Company is now considering the feasibility of using the graphophone to warn passengers when their trains are about to start.

This is one of those tardily accomplished facts of which the inventor has dreamed for years and for which well nigh ceased to hope, after a decade or so, that it will ever become a realization. Nearly thirty years ago, when Edison was exhibiting his old tin foil cylindered phonograph and the crowd got weary of his two solitary recitations—"Casabianca" and "Bingen on the Rhine"—he would reserve their waning interest by telling them the time would come when the phonograph would replace the train announcer and would shout in stentorian tones. "This way for Newark, Rahway, Trenton and Philadelphia." For twenty-five years this prediction has gone unfulfilled, but now, with the wonderful improvement in the art of talking machine manufacture, the graphophone, which has practically superseded Mr. Edison's machine, seems destined to accomplish all that he predicted for his own—half in earnest, but with more or less jocularity, for the Edison phonograph of 1876 was a squeaky affair, calculated to reconcile its hearers to even the sad fate that befell Casabianca, while they shed no tears for the soldier of the legion who lay dying at Algiers, as his woes were presented on the phonograph. All that has been changed and the graphophone of today speaks with a distinctness and modulation that can be equalled by but few of the men who try to tell the public which trains are about to depart for the numberless stations scattered along the railroads projecting from great railroad centers such as Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Jersey City and New York. Hence the graphophone is about to have its innings and Edison's laughing prediction to come true.

Well Worth the Trouble.

It is only half-rate people who ignore cost and shrink from calculation, says an intelligent woman who carries her intelligence into everything, the corners of her pantry and the depths of her flour barrel. In her opinion, you have no more right to cheat yourself out of the quality and quantity of good your income should yield than you should cheat your neighbor, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The comfort of knowing one is fairly dealt with is worth occasional trouble. All good dealers respect a customer who sees for herself to such matters. Too many shops will take advantage of a careless buyer, while they correctly deal with one who demands her dues.

Gutta Serena From Peat.

Advices from Germany are to the effect that a very satisfactory artificial gutta serena has been derived from peat, and great things are expected to result from the discovery in cheapening the cost of insulating ocean cables. Gutta serena is the only substance thus far discovered for protecting a wire against the corrosive action of salt water, and the product is not only limited, but is controlled by an English firm of cable manufacturers, who own the forests in the East Indies from which the gutta serena is obtained.

Hard to Tell Chinaman's Age.

How old is a Chinaman? Can you give a good guess? It is harder to tell than the age of a negro. The Chinaman has no beard and his hair is of a jet and glossy blackness, which turns gray only at an extreme age, when a Caucasian head would be either snow white or bald.

Then, again, the Chinese have the most perfect nervous system of any people in the world and do not wrinkle up with age. They can stand any amount of opium smoking without material injury that would send a white man to his grave or an insane asylum. So you have little to go by.

A Chinaman will look 35 when he is 20 and when he is 50. If you ask him his age he will place it at least 10 years ahead, for he holds old age to be honorable, and among his people he will be respected and looked up to by all his juniors.—Washington Post

Marquis Ito's Caution.

When Marquis Ito, the Japanese statesman, was in this country the manager of a certain western railway sent him a pass over his line. The pass was returned with this polite note: "I have no claim on your esteemed company. I should not feel right in traveling over your most excellent road without paying for the great pleasure."

Extravagant Assertions.

Notwithstanding the exaggerations, rumors and extravagant assertions incident to a political campaign, there is not the slightest question in the mind of any well-posted and thoughtful student of state politics that the present incumbent of the gubernatorial position has even greater popularity among all classes now than at the beginning of his administration. Obviously, this could not be true if Mr. Bliss had not fulfilled the most sanguine expectations of his constituency beyond call in the wise, conservative and effective conduct of the affairs of the great commonwealth which has received as well as bestowed honor by placing him in its executive chair. His attitude on the vital questions that have confronted the administrative body has been almost invariably in accord with popular sentiment, and in those instances when there has been any noticeable doubt concerning the wisdom or expediency of the executive decision results have shown that Gov. Bliss' life-long reputation as a man of high business ability and excellent judgment will yet be fully sustained. As a successful and prominent business man in the conduct of his private affairs and with a personal integrity unquestionable, he brought to the highest office of his state just the qualities necessary to win and hold the confidence and respect of friend and foe, inside or outside his party affiliations. According to long established and justifiable precedent Mr. Bliss is entitled to a re-nomination at the hands of his party, which has had no more faithful and efficient supporter and worker in times past or present. His services to his party and his value to its reputation and success demand this recognition, and it would be a mistake as well as an injustice to permit factional differences or individual ambitions to deprive him of his unquestionable due and the state of the executive ability that now counts the experience of two years among its qualifications of recommendation.

Keep Our Industries.

The Ypsilantian last week copied entire a recent item in the Record regarding the needs, prospects and handicaps of the business of the Ely dower works and supplemented the article with a suggestion that Ypsilanti might secure the industry by using the necessary financial inducements. It would appear that it is not only a question of getting what we can in the line of manufactures, but of keeping what we have. A word to the wise is not always sufficient, but there are several worth noting in this connection. Encourage our industries in every way possible.

Too Good a Memory.

TALKS LIKE PARROT.

Philadelphia Canary Is Indeed a Most Wonderful Bird.

Cannot Only Pronounce His Own Name, Which Is Dewey, but Is Learning Old Words—Chats of His Own Accord.

From an ornithological as well as a patriotic standpoint, Dewey is a name to conjure with.

The parrot who watched the admiral's courtship and who, having learned to greet the distinguished sailor, achieved amazing conversational fluency, has already been written of. But this parrot has now a rival in the shape of a Philadelphia canary who is a namesake of the admiral and a credit to the name.

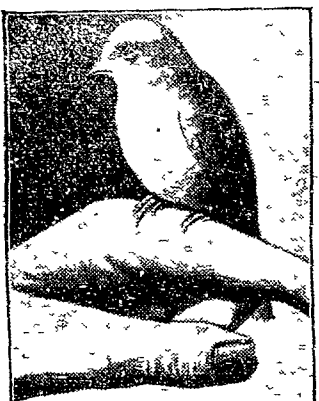

This accomplished bird, says the New York World, belongs to Mrs. William Lacey, of No. 2124 Master street, Philadelphia. He is a native of the Harz mountains, and is now nearly 11 years old. Not until about three years ago did he manifest his unusual power, although he has always been considered remarkable on account of the extraordinary volume and sweetness of his voice.

He had been called George but when Admiral Dewey's name became a household word the famous surname was added, at first half in jest. But Dewey is a name much loved in the Lacey household, and so eventually the name George was dropped and the bird became known as Dewey.

So it happened one morning, as his young mistress stood in front of his cage petting and talking to him she laughingly called him several times by name saying: "Dewey, Dewey, Dewey."

To her great surprise Dewey put his little head on one side and repeated the words after her quite as plainly as she herself had uttered them.

Since then Dewey has acquired several other words and with them a remarkable degree of intelligence. His mistress will come into the room with the question: "Where is Dewey, dear?" And, with the playfulness of a child, the bird will answer "Here's Dewey, dear," following with such a burst of canary melody as will cause a stranger to stand spellbound with enjoyment.

THE TALKING CANARY. (His Mastery of Language Is Causing Considerable Wonder)

There is nothing remarkable in the appearance of this little songster except that when he is talking or singing he shows a very unusual throat development.

The muscles of his throat will enlarge until they stand out on each side, forming globes almost as large as a small hickory nut, and then they will contract until his throat seems very much smaller than that of an ordinary bird.

When Dewey is at rest, however, there is still an unusual amount of fullness around his throat.

In everything else Dewey is just an ordinary canary bird with all the fullness in taking his bath and scattering his seed that other birds show.

Inasmuch as the newest Dewey is a canary his mastery of language must be considered more remarkable than that of the justly renowned Loretto, who, while Mrs. George Dewey was still Mrs. Mildred McLean made matters so interesting in the McLean household.

Loretto is a very handsome Mexican bird, with brilliant green and yellow plumage, red bill and shining black eyes. It may be easily imagined that at one period Loretto heard a great deal about Admiral Dewey, and she was not slow about applying it. No sooner would the admiral enter the house than a mocking voice would call out: "Rah for Dewey! Ha! Ha! Ha!"

This greeting never varied. Loretto learned to recognize the admiral by his step as well as his voice, and each time would shriek out "he welcome that was no doubt intended to be cordial."

Loretto has also a fine sense of humor and greatly enjoys a wai, which cannot be said of many parrots. For instance, she would inquire, solemnly: "Dewey (do we) swear?"

"Well, what's the answer?" the visitor would ask her.

"Yes, by George! Ha! ha! ha!" and Loretto would shriek with delight.

At this period Loretto became quite injured to newspaper prominence, and when the door bell would ring she would look wise and remark: "Bet that's another reporter!"

"Don't you like reporters, Dewey?"

"Rah for Dewey! Ha! Ha! Ha!"

Loretto is now a member of the Dewey household.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Sultan of Turkey Sanctions Cruel Decree Against Muhammad Pasha, His Exiled Brother.

Damat Mahmud Pasha, the sultan's brother-in-law, who is now a fugitive in Paris, has recently been sentenced to death by default. Mahmud Pasha, who was a representative of the Young Turks, or reform party, fled from Turkey about two years ago. The sultan has been anxious ever since to get him back. Mahmud has long been prominent in the Young Turk movement, and was recently expelled from Greece at the behest of the sultan. Mahmud went to Rome and the sultan requested his expulsion from

DAMAT MAHMUD PASHA. (Brother-in-Law of Sultan, Now Under Sentence of Death)

Italy. It was refused, but Mahmud proceeded to Paris, where he remains in safety. All the sultan's blandishments failed to induce him to return to Constantinople, so the criminal court was justified in issuing a warrant for Mahmud's arrest and to try the fugitive by default, with the result that he was condemned to death.

A dispatch from Constantinople dated December 18, 1899, announced that the flight of the sultan's brother-in-law, Damat Mahmud Pasha, during the previous week, with his wife's jewels and all the money he could collect, had caused a great sensation there. He was accompanied by his two sons, Princes Sabaggeit and Luthalla.

It was ascertained that Mahmud sailed for Marseilles on a steamer, and the Turkish government telegraphed to the French minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, asking for the arrest of the fugitive on his arrival at Marseilles and his return to Constantinople on the charge that he was implicated in a plot to assassinate the sultan. This accusation, however, was generally discredited, and it was believed the refugee was the victim of an intrigue.

A later dispatch from Constantinople said that Mahmud, who intended to stay in Paris for a time, declared that the charge he had appropriated money and accepted bribes was a calumny, and that he was being persecuted by political intrigues. Mahmud announced that he intended to go to London, and that when he reached that city he would publish an open letter, exposing the methods and policies of Sultan Abdul Hamid, and also a brochure entitled "Turkey's Coming Downfall."

Mahmud is about 50 years of age. The sultan after Mahmud's flight, decreed the divorce of his sister Seniha Sultana, in consequence of her husband's desertion.

Mahmud secured $400,000 just before his departure, but his principal estates were confiscated and he and his sons were officially proclaimed renegades and outlaws.

engagement to a man who, she says, saved her life. In a letter just received at national headquarters of the union, in Evanston, Miss Ackerman says she has been "captured heart and hand by a Russian nobleman," and that they are to be married as soon as she finishes the tour she is making. The name of the prospective husband is not given. Miss Ackerman says that some years ago, while she was making temperance lectures in Russia, she was attacked by a mob, and would have been killed had it not been for the appearance of the nobleman. An attachment which soon ripened into love sprang up between the two at that time.

Mistake of the Young.

The most foolish of all terrors is that clever young heads think that they lose their originality when they recognize the truth that has already been recognized by others.

A seat on the New York stock exchange is worth $75000 which makes it rather an expensive place for the owner to go back and sit down.

Bernhardt's Stimulant.

Sara Bernhardt says that "the secret of her endurance is that she never rests. Fatigue," she adds, "is my stimulant. Instead of pulling me down, it spurs me on." She goes to bed at 3 o'clock in the morning invariably, and always rises at 8. As for the usual prescriptions for the preservation of health, they receive scant attention from her, she says.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

A local application is the only way to reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is no other way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is actually closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are cured by a catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will send you One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

A VERY RICH WIDOW

Mrs. Coffee, Near Allegan, Advertised as Such.

BUT THE LAW GOT HER

Woman Received Letters by the Bushel—She Was Married and Had Children—Officers Found Her in Minnesota With Another Man.

Allegan, Mich., May 1.—Sheriff Bensley arrived here last night with Mrs. Lizzie Coffee and Frank Kipen. He captured them at Fairmount, Minn., living together. They skipped from Burnip's Corners two weeks ago.

Mrs. Coffee for some time advertised in Chicago that she was worth $60,000, was a young widow and handsome. She received several hundred letters daily, enclosing money and stamps. Over 400 letters have arrived in this office since she left, and the pile is steadily increasing.

The prisoners will be prosecuted for adultery. The woman has a husband and children. Her companion is a young man aged 30. Notice was drawn to Mrs. Coffee's career some time ago through the petition of the postmaster at Burnip's Corners for help he stating that Mrs. Coffee's mail was so immense that it necessitated an allowance for an additional clerk in the office. The officials investigated and Mrs. Coffee went of the fact. She evidently preferred to disappear rather than stand an investigation of her methods.

At this time Mrs. Coffee was living with her husband on their farm near Burnip's Corners. He was apparently in sympathy with her scheme and usually got the mail himself, driving to the office and getting the letters in a bushel basket.

Detroit Woman's Awful Suicide.
Detroit, Mich., May 1.—Mrs. Adelaide Sage, wife of Anthony Sage, a blacksmith for the Olds motor works, and living at 383 Locust street, committed suicide Wednesday morning at her home by saturating herself with kerosene oil and setting fire to her body in the summer dining-room of her home. She was burned almost beyond recognition. Mrs. Sage was 32 years of age and had been married to her husband five years. The couple had three children, two of them, James, aged 4, and Mary, aged 5 months, living, a boy, Russell, 3 years old, having died one month ago of scarlet fever. The family had always been a happy one, but after the death of the little one, and the sickness of James with scarlet fever, a short time ago, Mrs. Sage did not appear herself any longer. She grew melancholy, and this no doubt caused her to commit the dreadful act.

"Gone With Handsome Man."
Durand, Mich., May 1.—When Wm. Skedule, the inspector of water tanks on the Grand Trunk road, returned to his home in this village Tuesday he found this note on the table: "Will, I shall never return to you. It will do you no good to look for me. Are you surprised? I wish you success." During the intervals during which her husband was absent from home on other parts of the division she frequently entertained a man whom she told the neighbors was her brother. He is said to be a married man living in Battle Creek. She left with $200 belonging to her husband, who vows vengeance if he ever comes across the man who wrecked his home.

Jumped to His Death.
Jackson, Mich., May 1.—Israel V. Cockingham, aged about 80 years, jumped from the tower of No. 1 fire engine house shortly after 7 o'clock Wednesday morning, and was instantly killed. The deed was the result of worry over the necessity of moving to another house, and the fear that the family could not hold their boarders in another location.

SHE'LL MEET "DOC" ROSE.

Carrie Nation Lectures to an Adrian Audience.

Adrian, Mich., May 1.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, ex-saloon smasher, lectured at Whitney's opera house last night to a smashing big house. The cozy hall was crowded with people at 10 cents a head. Carrie's audience seemed sympathetic, and responded to her scoring of republicans, democrats, populists and church members with hearty applause.

Mrs. Nation spoke an hour and 15 minutes, and claimed to be using the proceeds of her lecture toward establishing a home for drunkard's wives. She practically admitted that she started her peculiar campaign for the sake of notoriety, but says she has ceased the smashing warfare and now talks the straight politics of the prohibition party.

Carrie happened over in Monroe county to see a relative, and her admirers here hastily arranged for the lecture on one day's advertising.

"At the close of her lecture Mrs. Nation offered for sale emblems in shape of miniature hatchets, studded with rhinestones, at 25 cents and 50 cents each. She says she is soon to meet "Doc" Rose of Ann Arbor, whom she called the educated saloonist, in joint debate.

"Nabbed the Fake Mourner."

Adrian, Mich., May 1.—A woman arrived here over the Monroe branch of the Lake Shore Tuesday night, registering as "Alice Wilson." Fast on her trail last night came Detective Stanton from Detroit, who soon located the woman, and immediately nabbed her. He says she had stolen $500 in bills in Detroit, having masqueraded as a mourner and picked the pockets of other mourners who had the money. The victim mourned for some sort of a fit at the time, and Alice took advantage of the fact. A local young man was arrested with her, but was subsequently released. The woman's name is Alice Cornell, alias Clark. She had spent most of the money.

Took Carbolic Acid.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 1.—C. P. Anderson of Cincinnati was found dead in his room at the New Williams house last night, his death being plainly the result of carbolic acid, self-administered. It is believed that Anderson was partially demented. He has been acting strangely since he came here several days ago, and was arrested on Sunday night for scuffling with a acquaintance in the corridor of the hotel. The other man at the time prevented Anderson's taking a dose of acid, but it was not believed that he was in earnest.

Peace Delegates Are at Work.

Pretoria, May 1.—In pursuance of an understanding reached by the Boer delegates at the conference recently held here, the delegates are busy visiting the burghers in the field. Gen. Luca Meyer, commander-in-chief of the Orange Free State forces; Secretary of State Retz of the Transvaal, Mr. Steyn, ex-president Orange Free State, and Gen. Dewet have each taken a separate district for the purpose of conferring with the commandos as rapidly as possible. After these conferences a meeting has been arranged for at Vereeniging, Transvaal, May 25, when a final decision is expected. It is believed among Boers who have surrendered and other well-informed persons that the peace outlook is favorable if the delegates place the situation fairly before the burghers.

He's Heir to a Million.

Denver, May 1.—Judge Lindsey of the county court today announced that he will officially investigate a rumor that Wm. Wood, supposed to have died a year ago in a Topeka, Kan., insane asylum, is alive and recovering his reason through expert treatment in Europe. Wood was one of the heirs of a large estate, which included the famous Emma mine at Aspen, Colo., once valued at $10,000,000. His estate at present is valued at about $1,000,000. His heirship was established after many years of litigation, which reached the supreme court of the United States. In the meantime he had been pronounced helplessly insane and later was reported to have died.

Secretary Morton Sailed.

Nebraska City, May 1.—It was a sorrowful procession that followed the remains of J. Sterling Morton to the final resting place at Wyke cemetery yesterday afternoon. The streets were lined with people, who stood in respectful silence while the procession, headed by a guard of honor, passed through the downtown streets. During the latter part of the day shops were closed and people took advantage of an opportunity to view the remains as they lay in state at the public library.

ACT OF INSANE MAN

Kills His Wife and Slashes His Own Throat.

A FARMER NEAR ST. JOHNS.

Ann Arbor Insane Patient at Pontiac Commits Suicide by Throwing Himself into a Blazing Pile of Railroad Ties.

St. Johns, Mich., April 30.—J. A. Kimball, a Riley township farmer, shot his wife and cut his own throat Tuesday afternoon. The woman is dead and Kimball is so badly slashed that his recovery is impossible.

From the scant details obtainable, it develops that Kimball went suddenly insane and shot his wife with a revolver. The wound was through her head and she was dying when found. By her side lay her husband, with his throat cut from ear to ear with a butcher knife. Both knife and revolver lay on the floor beside him.

Kimball is a man of considerable wealth, and had always lived happily with his wife. He has always been regarded as eccentric, but no one supposed him insane.

The couple have no children at home, and there was no one in the house at the time of the tragedy.

Pontiac, Mich., April 30.—B. S. Trombley of Ann Arbor, an insane patient at the Eastern Michigan asylum of this city, committed suicide in a horrible manner. When the time for closing the halls came, Trombley was nowhere to be found. A search was started and at 1 o'clock George Rose found the charged remains of Trombley on a blazing pile of old ties near the tracks of the D & M railroad.

The fire which was very intense, had entirely consumed the body with the exception of a portion of a trunk and one of the hands; and from the position in which these lay it was evident that the man had thrown himself face downward into the seething flames, with the idea of having all traces of himself removed.

Trombley had left a short note in his room which read:

"April 28, 1902 p. m.

It is said that he had told several patients that he wished to take his life, and even in a joking manner offered small sums to his fellow patients to kill him.

He was 53 years of age and had been a book agent. He came to the institution here last August, and his wife lives at 603 Jefferson avenue, Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 30.—Benjamin Trombley formerly lived in Ann Arbor. He came from Bay City to secure the advantages of the university hospital for an injury which he hoped to have cured by an operation. Before he came to the table, however, he went raving mad, believing that the surgeons were going to harm him, and it was necessary to remove him to Pontiac.

Owosso, Mich., April 30.—The village of Elsie, north of Owosso, is stirred up by the disappearance of Milton Finch, who has not been seen since Sunday night. Finch is a middle-aged man, unmarried and lived with his parents, two miles southwest of Elsie. He has been acting queerly for some time, and it is thought he has been partially insane.

$5,000 Fire at Manistee.

Manistee, Mich., April 30.—At an early hour Tuesday morning fire destroyed the C. O. Landry, owned by E. M. McElligott, together with a stable, in which two horses were kept. Loss estimated at $4,000. Max Bauman's cigar factory adjoining was also damaged $1,000 by water and smoke.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such a hold of me that I could scarcely go," writes Geo. S. Marsh, well-known attorney of Nocona, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any good food and cures any form of stomach trouble. Murdock Bros.

Traveling Is Dangerous.

Constant motion jars the kidneys, which are kept in place in the body by delicate attachments. This is the reason that travelers, trainmen, street car men, teamsters and all who drive very much suffer from kidney disease in some form. Foley's Kidney Cure strengthens the kidneys and cures all forms of kidney and bladder disease. Geo. H. Hausan, locomotive engineer, Lima, Ohio, writes: "Constant vibration of the engine caused me a great deal of trouble with my kidneys, and I got no relief until I used Foley's Kidney Cure." DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy---I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy."--

DAN A. GROSVENOR.

In a recent letter he says:

"I consider Peruna really more meritorious than I did when I wrote you last. I receive numerous letters from acquaintances all over the country asking me if my certificate is genuine. I invariably answer, 'Yes.'--Dan A. Grosvenor.

A County Commissioner's Letter.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 517 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna:

"As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."--John Williams.

Miss Mathe L. Guild, President Illinois Young People's Christian Temperance Union, in a recent letter from Chicago, Ill., says:

"I doubt if Peruna has a rival in all the remedies recommended to-day for March of the system. A remedy that will cure catarrh of the stomach will cure the same condition of the mucous membrane anywhere. I have found it the best remedy I have ever tried for catarrh, and believing it worthy my endorsement I gladly accord it."--Mathe L. Guild.

A Congressman's Letter.

Hon. W. F. Brownlow, Congressman from Tennessee, writes from Washington, D. C., the following:

"I have suffered from catarrh of the stomach for several years, and for the past twelve months was in an exceedingly critical condition. My attention was called to your Peruna, and I began to use it, and my improvement was noticeable after the first three days. I have taken three bottles of the medicine and I feel satisfied that I am now almost, if not permanently, cured. In connection with the Peruna, I have used your Manalyn for biliousness and torpid liver. I regard it as the best medicine for this purpose that I have ever used. Having been benefited so much myself, I give you this statement, that others may be likewise benefited."--W. F. Brownlow, M. C., Jonesboro, Tenn.

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council No. 168, Northwestern Legion of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 255 Polk street, N. E.:

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months, and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."--Mrs. Elmer Fleming.

Treat Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systematic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

"Smith tried to make his wife adopt sensible skirts by telling her that all the doctors agree that perpetually holding up the skirt makes the hands large and bony and the knuckles red."

"By George! wait till I get home, and I'll tell-- But say, how did it work?"

[By the Pastor.]

The pastor's Sunday morning theme is "The Source of Peace." In the evening he will speak on "Conversion."

Next Sunday morning is the time for observing the Lord's Supper. Let us keep this in mind and be present.

An excellent way to cultivate a disinterested spirit in the Sunday-school and eventually to drive pupils from their classes, is for teachers to absent themselves from their classes, as often as possible and provide no substitute.

The B. Y. P. U. held their annual rally last Sunday evening. They rendered an excellent program which evidently was enjoyed by all. The printed program nature is well received as it gives all an opportunity to take an active part in the service.

At a called meeting of the church last Sunday it was unanimously decided to retain the services of their pastor for another year. A greater interest than usual was manifested in clearing up their present indebtedness, and aggressive steps were taken in that direction by reducing the amount by gifts and pledges.

His Phonetic Understanding.

"The gravity which is supposed to attend all court proceedings was seriously disturbed in a New York courtroom one day last week," said a young lawyer who had just returned from a business trip to that city. "I was present at the trial of a case before one of the municipal judges—a case in which I was interested because it had to do with automobiles. One of the witnesses was a German, and gave his testimony through an interpreter. In the course of the examination he said he had driven an automobile to Cedarhurst."

"What's that?" asked the judge. "To Cedarhurst," replied the interpreter. "His honor looked puzzled. 'What did he want to see the hearse for?' he asked."

Divorce in Europe

Divorce was established in Germany in 1875. From 1881 to 1885 the yearly number of divorces was about 8,000, while of late years it exceeds 10,000. In England divorce was established in 1857. During the years 1858-1862 the annual number was about 200; in 1894 about 550; in 1895 about 650. In Austria, where only non-Catholics can apply for a divorce, the number of demands for divorce increased 25 per cent in four years, and in Belgium about 20 per cent in four years.

"Lifting the King"

One of the picturesque English coronation ceremonies which have been discontinued is that of lifting the king. In the old days the monarch always slept at the palace of Westminster on the night before the coronation. The regalia, which is still, technically speaking, in the possession of the dean and chapter of Westminster, were brought to Westminster Hall in preparation for the ceremony. These were arranged on a long table, the crown, the scepter, the spurs, and so on. The king, when he descended from the palace to Westminster Hall, was lifted by his nobles on a marble chair, which, by the way, perished in the ruins of the houses of parliament when they were burned sixty or seventy years ago.

The lifting of the king into this chair was a survival of the old Saxon custom of carrying the king on his shield. The custom survived up to the time of the coronation of George IV. When the monarch was seated in the chair he at once directed by pointing his finger which one of his nobles should carry the various parts of the regalia to the abbey, and the procession began.

It is perhaps not generally known that there are a number of mineral springs in and around our village, some of which have been subjected to analysis and found to be rich in medicinal value. It is not impossible that this fact may mean much to the future of the place.

Many pairs of spectacles and eye glasses have been lost at Northville during the past year, and the Record man says none of them are found and where they go to is a puzzle that he cannot see through. If he will manipulate a few glasses properly he can easily make a spectacle of himself. —Adrian Press.

The Ann Arbor Courier shows a marked improved appearance since the editorial management has been placed in the hands of James H. Junkin of Detroit. Mr. Junkin, it will be remembered, was a former publisher of the Record and is well known in and about Northville. Both Mr. Junkin and the Courier are to be congratulated.

In spite of the popular tradition connected with man vs. stovepipe, Northville really has at least two benedictines who don't say bad words while manipulating the above necessary hardware. On investigation the Record reporter found that one of them had performed the act once anyway without verbal pyrotechnics so of course he can keep right on that way, while the other "allowed" that he never by the remotest chance had anything to do with handling the dirty things.

Salem is having a "whooping" old time among its kids. The mumps, which has been very plentiful this winter, is dying out for lack of material, but whooping cough and plenty of victims around here and some children are having it very hard.

Last week some 35 of Chelsea's Masons went to Dexter, took supper at the Masonic hall, then proceeded to come from refreshments to labor, and gave Editor J. O. Thompson of the Dexter Leader the third degree in a manner that the quill driver will never "disrecollect." It is said that the goat acted awful and it was some time before Thompson got down to business. One of the visitors said it reminded him of an Irishman who worked for Geo. S. Wheeler of Salem a number of years ago, and who was quite an athlete. Wheeler had warned Mike that he must keep out of the field where his big bull was kept, as the animal was ugly and would fight anything movable. Mike, however, allowed that "no domd bull is goin to droive me, at all, at all," and one day crossed the field. The bull was soon after him, but Mike, with a club, showed fight. He slipped, however, and with a rush the bull caught him on his horns and threw him over the fence. Mike was not much hurt, but did not go back after his club. The next day Wheeler, who had watched the proceedings, said carelessly: "Mike, I hear you had a little set-to with the bull yesterday. How did it turn out?" "Be gorra, sor, it wor a toss-up," said Mike, and he proceeded to feed the pigs and failed to notice the twinkle in Wheeler's eye.—Adrian Press.

CHAPTER I

A DESPERATE MAN NEEDED.

THE gloomiest spot in Paris, fit for the gloomiest man. The words were spoken by a young man who stood leaning in an attitude expressive of weariness and dejection against one of the guard walls of a bridge over the Seine.

The spot, as might be inferred from the remarks, was far from the brilliant lights and gay life of the chief bridges, the boulevards, the principal quays. It was dark with the darkness loved by criminals. Few people passed that way at night, and had there been many the young man would scarcely have been noticed.

"I believe I have 5 francs left," he muttered to himself. "The prospects are delightful."

A shiver ran through his frame. He looked down at the dark, forbidding water. It swirled below his feet either in invitation or derision. It depended on the man.

Buckford Wallace was an American. He was young. He had sought Paris with a well filled purse, a heart full of hope and ambition and a belief that he was a born artist. Within less than a year he had emptied his purse, lost hope and changed his belief to this—that he was a born fool.

At any rate he could not draw, neither could he paint. The full shock of the realization did not come to him till he had spent his money and learned that the uncle who had been supporting him in luxury had died and left his fortune to his niece, none of whom was on marrying or even friendly terms with Buckford.

Buckford Wallace saw nothing ahead but the bitterness and gloom of poverty.

A month before he had believed himself to hold a fortune securely in his hands and to possess talent enough to make a name for himself. Today he knew that 5 francs was all he had and did not know where another franc was to come from.

Despair was in the young man's heart, and it was a pity, for he was a handsome youth, free from the follies and vices so common to those who live idly and at ease in Paris. He was brave enough too. But at 22 one does not face poverty and misfortune as one faces a human antagonist.

Buckford Wallace had not contemplated suicide. He had, in his hereditary misery, wandered to that lonely spot to think over his next necessary step.

Even had he thought of ending his life and his troubles he would be for given by all except those who have had little life and no troubles.

But whatever was passing through Buckford's mind, his attitude was certainly that of a man who was about to plunge into the Seine.

Perhaps at that moment he did not even know the Seine was there.

It was the appearance of his sister moving that set the pieces of this history in motion.

A man was lurking in the still deep shadows on that bridge. This man wore a large cloak which almost enveloped him and served as a rude disguise. A slouch hat was drawn over his eyes. These eyes were like those of a cat. They could see in the dark. They could stand anything but honest light.

"Heavens!" this man was muttering to himself. "There is a young fellow who is sick of life. Weary of the struggle, he is about to end himself ignobly, when, if he chose, he could devote his life to the service of humanity and win immortality and fame."

This was a strange sentiment to come from the lips of a man who skulked in the dark, wearing a disguise.

"And," he added, as Buckford leaned farther out over the water, "just when we need a man who courts death."

Buckford, oblivious of the presence of the other, gazed down into the swirling water.

"I believe," he said to himself, "if I had not been born a Wallace or had not had my own dear mother to teach me in my youth I would feel tempted to jump into that water and find rest."

A light touch on his shoulder startled him.

"Monsieur, do not attempt it. You might succeed, but there is a doubt. If you must do it, there is a way."

"What the deuce do you mean?" asked Wallace, drawing back in startled amazement from the stranger.

"Hush! Not so loud! The police can hear even in the dark and on this bridge. We are two brothers in misfortune. I, who am older, have learned the way out. I pity you. I will lead you as I myself was led when younger."

"I—I thank you," stammered Wallace. "But I really don't need to be led."

"Come! We are fencing. Do you deny that in one moment, had I not accosted you, you would now be in the Seine?"

For a moment Wallace hesitated in doubt as to the other's meaning. Then, the dark cloak and slouch hat acting as a source of inspiration he laughed.

"Oh, my friend," he said, "I had not got so far down as that."

can. When an American despairs, he curses God and dies. Perhaps you have lost your last sou at the games."

"I spent it for food and lodging," said Wallace, wondering why he stood there talking with this mysterious and disreputable stranger.

"Bah! You are childish! Yet I ask no confidences. I am willing to be your friend. One thing is certain—you need money and do not know how to procure it."

"Well?"

"I stand ready to show you. Take my arm and let us saunter across. We will smoke. It will cheer you."

Another brief moment Wallace hesitated.

"This fellow," he said to himself, "is undoubtedly a bad one. What he thinks of me I cannot fathom. What he intends, I have no idea. Yet the night holds nothing better for me than the worst he can offer, as long as it is not a crime—I will see the thing to the end. It is not the first adventure I have had in Paris."

"You are silent," said he of the cloak. "You fear me, yet a short time ago you were courting death."

"Is that so?" asked Wallace, hiding a grin. "I see you are a mind reader as well as a philanthropist."

The aim on which his fingers rested lightly seemed to tremble.

Yes, I am a philanthropist. I work for the good of humanity."

"So it seems."

At 22 an adventure is charming. Wallace had had more than one. He knew Paris thoroughly. He resolved again to see to what the fellow's seeming friendship would lead.

They left the bridge and joined the throng on a well lighted street. It was not a fashionable quarter, yet there was much of the lighter side of life to be seen under the arc lights.

They passed an inviting cafe, and then the stranger veered round and made for the door.

"You spoke of food. There is plenty of it here."

"I do not remember saying I was hungry," replied Wallace.

"No, you did not. But it is near midnight. And at midnight all men who have not just eaten are either hungry or asleep."

Wallace smiled and followed.

"The fellow is a character worth knowing," he said to himself. "A true child of Bohemia."

Wallace had learned many things, but he had not yet learned to read all men.

A trifling but pleasing supper was set before them. They ate it with many a quiet jest, neither of the strangely met pair telling the other his name or the details of his life. It was as if they had tacitly resolved to forget the unpleasant episode so fortunately ended.

They drank their wine and smoked again.

"Come," said the man of the cloak, "it is 2 o'clock. You must long for sleep."

He spoke and acted as though Wallace had been in the streets a month. On the contrary, he had not yet quitted the comfortable lodging he had occupied since he had become a temporary resident of Paris.

"I could sleep," he answered, "but I will not trouble you so far as to trust to you for a bed. I think I know where I can find one."

"Ah, ha! But now I have got you, I will not let you go. Men who long for death are too few just now. You are a prize, my brother, a prize."

Wallace had determined to give his quondam friend the slip, return to his lodging and make preparation for leaving on the morrow. The fellow's remark altered his resolution.

"Hello!" he remarked mentally.

"There is something in the wind greater than I thought. This fellow is a conspirator of some kind, and a big kind at that. The rascals of Paris never lack tools to do their work. This must be something extraordinary. I'll just let him go on, and perhaps I'll have a chance to defeat a crime."

"What do you say?" asked the cloak-

"This is the Rue de Mont-Rouge," said the guide.

Wallace suppressed an exclamation. He had heard of the Rue de Mont-Rouge. It was well known as a street of mysteries.

"Here we are," said the guide in an other moment. "You will find your friend Jacques very hospitable, I assure you."

"So Jacques, then, is the host? But the name of my friend I do not know."

"Oh, my name! Call me brother."

Wallace did not hurry to avail himself of this privilege.

They entered the door before which the stranger had stopped. It led to a small anteroom where a middle aged man sat dozing in a chair before a desk.

"Wake up, my friend," said the guide in a tone of reproach. "We are too weary to allow this."

"Oh, you," exclaimed the sleeper, rousing himself. "And that other?"

"Is my friend. Will you be good enough to give him a comfortable room and bed?"

"Well," grunted the drowsy host, "I could not do it even to oblige you."

"And why then? May I venture to ask that?"

"For the simple reason that the house is full. Even in your own room there is another."

"What? Come, this will never do! Have I not warned you against that?"

"Warned? Yes, you warned. But he ordered me to admit all who gave the word."

"Oh, as to that, it is all right. But really this poor fellow has not slept in a bed in a month. He must be accommodated."

"But who is he? Is he one of our?"

"He is a candidate who may surprise you all within a week."

"Oh, yes! Indeed! We must see what can be done."

Wallace and his guide sank into chairs, while the sleepy lodging house keeper plodded around in his slippers.

"He will find you a place," said the stranger.

"I shall welcome it," said Wallace, with a yawn. "Any place now. It is 3 o'clock."

Jacques, if that was the name of the sleepy head, left the office. While he was out there entered from some other portion of the inn a tall, overdressed man whose features were those of a wolf. His keen, shifty eyes lighted up when he saw the cloaked stranger, but darkened with distrust when he saw Wallace.

"Who is this?" he asked, pointing to ward Buckford.

"The niceties of polite society haven't made much impression here," said Wallace to himself.

"This is a companion I picked up on the Pont du."

"Oh, very well, since you know him," interrupted the other. "Let him go somewhere. I want to speak to you on a matter of great importance."

"As to that, I have hustled old Jacques off to find a place for him to sleep. He is in despair. I found him on the bridge contemplating the water. I recalled our need of men who have good appearance and no fear of death. I brought him to you. Do with him what you can."

"Good! He looks like a brave fellow," said the wolf, glancing with sharp scrutiny at Wallace. Buckford could catch but a portion of the conversation.

"Oh, he will do. And he looks the gentleman."

"Oh, quite. And he arrives opportunely. I have news of the."

"What! Do they arrive in Paris sooner than arranged?"

"They are on the way, and unless they delay on the road they will reach Paris tomorrow. It was given out that they would arrive on Saturday, four days from now."

"Yes, Ah these aristocrats! What will they not do to circumvent justice?"

"Had they arrived Saturday it would have given us time to have our preparations complete. But if they come tomorrow it shows they suspect, and our case will be difficult. Yet with such a man I could almost swear on success."

"Oh, my oath, if you want it, this man will succeed. Did I not tell you he was about to commit suicide?"

"So much the better. And another thing. The prince has his sister with him, that detestable piece of haughtiness, Marie Alexia."

"Marie, princess of?"

"Hush, you fool! You speak as if you wished to tell your secrets to the people on the next street. Have discretion. Yes, she is with the party."

"Looking for a husband?"

"With that we have nothing to do. Our business is with."

"Yes, yes, I know. And the Princess Margaret?"

"As with her husband, of course, and their physician; also, I believe, 12 attendants in all."

"Not many, though enough. Well, as Jacques returned, 'old sleepyhead, what have you discovered—an entire floor empty?'"

"Not a room. Not a bed. Well?"

"Come, Jacques, take the man to my own room," said the last comer. "I shall be here an hour or two with my brother."

"Come on, then," said Jacques, with a growl.

"Follow him," said the wolf. "Make yourself at home. My room and bed are at your service. I have slept enough."

Wallace knew that he had been led into the headquarters of a band of murderous conspirators. He knew from the scraps of conversation that had come to him that a great crime was being planned. He knew also that these cowardly plotters hoped to fix upon him the most dangerous part of the plot because he was supposed to be weary enough of life to commit self destruction.

His first impulse was to dash through the door and make good his escape while he might. A second and more chivalrous one was to remain and defeat the plot if it proved to be as dastardly as he suspected.

He did not know who was meant by the Princess Margaret or Marie Alexia. It was certain however that a family of great personages was expected in Paris, and a plot to destroy them was on foot.

Wallace was an American. He had no sympathy with the lawless and violent elements of society in Europe or at home. He was brave. He loved, as I said before, adventure.

"I thank you," he said coolly as he rose from his chair and followed Jacques.

He climbed a flight of stairs lighted by a foul odored lamp. He was ushered into a large room containing a

"Here you are," said Jacques brusquely, bed and other furniture. The bed was ruffled, as if some one had recently left it.

"Here you are, said Jacques brusquely. 'I regret that I could not accommodate you better.'

"I am well pleased—very well pleased," replied Wallace.

He entered the room and shut the door. Jacques had shown him a lamp. He lighted this. He looked around the room.

"A wolf's den," he said. "Who knows the devilish plot, that have been hatched in this room? Well, one is being hatched now at all events. And if I am going to risk my life to learn it and defeat it if possible, I'd better look at my surroundings a bit before I sleep. That chap said he wanted my friend of the bridge for an hour. Well, one can see a good many things in an hour if he looks quick. Come—these drawers."

He opened the drawers of a dresser that stood at one side of the room, but each proved disappointingly dull for the plot hunter. No sign of weapons, names of brotherhoods or any of the dozen or more things Wallace half expected to see came to light.

Having finished, he chanced to see the end of a small valve sticking out from under a large coat.

"I'll take a look at that," he said. He had some difficulty in opening it, but succeeded after several attempts. A shirt, some collars and cuffs, a false mustache, a pistol and some photographs.

One of these, as he held it to the light, proved to be the picture of a handsome man about 30 years of age—a man of fearless and upright mien, a man to be looked on as honest, yet shrewd, a man born to lead and perhaps to rule.

On the back of the picture were written in French these words:

"To arrive at Paris Saturday."

"Ah!" said Wallace. "We are getting warm."

The next photograph he looked at was that of a handsome and matronly young woman. The name of a London photographer was stamped on the picture, but it bore no other inscription.

"I don't know her. It's none of the English royal family," he said.

There was still another picture, and as he turned it to the light he gave a sudden, half stifled exclamation. It was the picture of a young girl and a girl of wonderful grace and beauty. The features were perfect. The eyes even in the picture warmed Buckford's blood.

"Well, by Jove!" he ejaculated as he read the letters "M. A." under the lovely face. "This is Marie Alexia, princess of something or other. Well, my beautiful princess, there are wicked men in Paris this night who are plotting against you and your handsome brother—men who will shed your innocent blood with a fiendish glee. There is one among them suspected of being ready to co-operate with them and do the cowardly deed. His name is Buckford Wallace, at your service. And now, my three friends, especially M. A., repose quietly in that cause while this same Buckford Wallace gets a little sleep. Then we'll see what we shall see."

Suburban News.

Wayne is now able to rejoice over the fact that her supposed smallpox seance has been officially declared off.

The gale last week Tuesday was so strong over at South Lyon that it blew out the electric lights. It blew down the smokestack at the factory which furnished the illumination, thus putting the lights out of business.

Like a good many other villages that might be mentioned Delray's "payments" are "in the air."

Specifically, it is the money which has prevailed some of the time this spring, but after all the dust is just as bad in Detroit. The payments are "blowed" about there, too.

St. John's pedro players have recently decided to discontinue the practice of giving prizes as it is "conducive to laxity" in the strict observance of the rules of the game. Of course the contestants wouldn't cheat to gain the honors, so this is no argument against social cud playing.

A Birmingham man who has a fruit farm in Florida has brought home a lemon which measures nearly fifteen inches in circumference and weighs a pound and a quarter. Several circus comedians and owners of menageries, refreshment stands, are about to open negotiations toward securing it and thus getting their seasons' supply at one fell swoop.

By his own authority we learn, regretfully that the Adrian Press man is laboring under a slight financial embarrassment this spring. He states that the potatoes he bought during the past winter cost him "about" three million dollars, to say nothing of what he paid for a peck of apples. Of course he can make up a little deficiency like that in no time but that a man like Stearns should thus permit his appetite to get away with his cents is rather regretted.

R. F. Kellogg of Ypsilanti a pioneer Washenaw county resident has been unable to do his farm work this spring because of the necessity of constantly caring for his sick wife, and so one day last week his neighbors surprised him by coming with seven or eight other apprentices sufficient to put in ten acres of oat for him besides preparing his ground for six acres of corn. The soil evidently not the only thing cultivated over that way.

Political desert seems to have an alarming and almost unprecedented effect on Fenton politicians. Instead of carrying round the usual post-electric chip, one or the unsuccessful ones was thereby inspired to drop into poetry and even went so far as to insist on having his plant printed in the Independent, which characterized the stanzas as "blankety-blank verse." As no blanks appear in the verses and as they have rhymes even though guiltless of meter, the "blankety-blank" part must have been delivered viva voce to the editorial tympanum.

One of the latest and most lamentable instances of apparent didn't know-it-was-loaded folly is that of Dr. Rose of Ann Arbor whose erstwhile speech in defense of saloons has caused him to be challenged by Carrie Nation to a debate. The good lady of Washington fame is to be in the university city next week and is anxious to meet the doctor in words under any conditions he chooses. As the challenged party he would have the choice of weapons, but it's safe to say he won't select his antagonist's most famous one, although if Mrs. Nation's tongue is as efficacious as her hatchet his ignominious defeat

Reveals a Great Secret.

It is often asked now such startling cures, that puzzle the best physicians are affected by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Here's the secret. It cuts out the phlegm and germ-infected mucus, and lets the life giving oxygen enter and vitalize the blood. It heals the inflamed cough-worm throat and lungs. Hard colds and stubborn coughs soon yield to Dr. King's New Discovery, the most infallible remedy for all throat and lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Geo. C. Hueston's.

would be as surely a foregone conclusion in the case as in the other.

The seniors of the Bellefonte school gave a play last week called "Out in the Streets." Obviously it would be very popular among the young people at this season of the year to judge from observation in other places.

A Howell professor thinks he is doing wonders in the way of wireless telegraphy by sending messages across the school room. "Nothing great about that," we used to do the same thing when a kid in school, and wireless telegraphy had not even been thought of at that remote date—Trenton Independent.

But it can't be denied that the latent "spark" was in some of those old time messages albeit the pedagogical attitude toward them was somewhat dissimilar to that in the modern instance. The teacher's assistance and oversight was not formerly considered necessary by the children of that era.

Wayne county men smell oil from afar off. Fred Martindale, a member of the lower house, announced his candidacy for State Senator from that district, and Wm. Scullen of Detroit thinks he wants the same office. It's $3 per day, but the oil fields do not care for the cash—they want honor, and the gentlemen, and they are skirting the underbrush early in the season, to tell the truth, of their willingness to sacrifice everything for honor, to serve the dear people, and help make fish laws, game laws, and laws to license boot blacks, lawyers, blacksmiths, butchers and other butchers—Adrian Press.

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

A revival of "East Lynne" is announced for a week's engagement at the Whitney Opera House beginning the afternoon of May 4th. In making the present revival the management has spared no expense to make it one of the best ever given this play.

Lycium Theatre—Detroit.

The Lyke Theater company at the Lycium will present next week for the first time at popular prices Clyde Fitch's modern play of social life, "The Moth and the Flame," with a cast of unusual size and the handsomest goings and stagings.

The Weber & Fields stock company, which is composed of 110 people will play a single performance at the Lycium Theatre on Thursday evening, May 1st. Prominent among the members of the company are Lillian Russell, Fay Templeton, Basie Clayton, DeWolf Hopper, John J. Kelly, Sam Bernard and Weber and Fields. "Hokey Toxy," a musical extravaganza, will be given. Sale of seats open Monday at 9 a m.

Wanted to Lynch Them.

Iron Mountain, Mich., April 30.—Matthew Baumgartner, secretary of the Great Eastern Mining Co. of Idaho, and his assistant, Dr. Bartles, who were arrested in Ishpeming, arrived here in the custody of the chief of police. A mob of 500 people met them at the depot and followed them to the jail. There was talk of lynching, but the officers were cool and the mob lacked a leader. The men are held under $1,000 bail. They sold $2,400 worth of stock here at 20 cents, the market price of which was 2 cents.

Three Detroit Boys Sentenced.

Detroit, Mich., April 30.—Charles Connor, six years at Ionia; William Finlayson, six years at Jackson; Albert Lipsniski, five years at Jackson. These sentences were dealt out Tuesday morning by Judge Phelan to three of the young men, who at the point of revolvers, held up the occupants of Kavanaugh's drug store on Fort street west on the night of Jan. 29. Ed Morgan, the fourth member of the gang, the first to plead guilty, will be sentenced later by Judge Murphy.

Fought With Mad Man.

Ludington, Mich., April 30.—While City Assessor Hansen was alone in his office yesterday he was attacked by George Logan, who had suddenly become violently insane. A terrific battle ensued. Logan was the more powerful man of the two, and before he was choked into insensibility he had cut and bruised Hansen's head and face and nearly bitten the second finger off his right hand. Logan will be sent to the Traverse City asylum.

Babe Found in Coal Bin.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., April 30.—When the yardman went to work at Benjamin Lemma's coal yard yesterday his attention was attracted to a coal bin by the wailing of an infant. A search revealed a baby boy lying in a corner of the bin, wrapped in an old machine and evidently having been there for several hours. The infant is about three weeks old, and in sound health.

Train Threw Him 200 Feet.

Waldron, Mich., April 30.—The southbound Cincinnati Northern passenger train, due here at 5.43 p. m., ran into a team and wagon belonging to R. W. Reynolds, a half mile south of town. George Baughman, who was driving the team, was thrown with the horses and wagon about 200 feet.

His Sarcastic Comment.

"What did you think I was trying to dictate to you?" asked the gruff man, as he looked over the sheet she handed him.

"Why, a business letter, of course," replied the new typewrist.

"What do you think I thought?" "Judging by the punctuation and the spelling," said the gruff man, "I felt justified in inferring you thought I was trying to dictate a dialect story."

—Chicago Post.

Ice Will Stay Up.

Housekeeper—Ice will be very cheap next summer, won't it?

Ice Man—Well, I don't know, mam.

You see, we've got a good deal of ice left over from the year before, and we'll have to sell that first, because it might spoil, you know, and I'm afraid by the time the old stock is gone the cheap ice will all be melted.—N. Y. Weekly.

KILLED IT.

"Do you think my new song will live?"

"I am afraid not."

"Why so?"

"I heard Mrs. Schrecker murder it last night."—Detroit Free Press.

And He Was Stone Broke.

"I am building" the pensive mason said.

"I am in the air."

"And what is the correct amount he asked."

She answered, "A solitaire."

—Smart Set.

Cheap Sort of Hafl.

Mrs. Subbuss—I see your husband goes out behind the stable to smoke.

Don't you allow him to smoke in the house any more?

Miss Baklots—Oh, he can smoke anywhere he likes, but just now he is putting up a bluff that he has sworn off.—Town Topics.

It Depends.

Customer—Yes I like this piece of goods. How much?

Tailor—Pair of pants? Five.

Customer—I never use "pants." I want a pair of trousers.

Tailor—To be sure. We will make you a pair of trousers for ten dollars.—Philadelphia Press.

It Reminded Her.

"Your conversation, Mr. Herriman."

Said Mrs. Peppery, suppressing a yawn "reminds me of some champagne."

"Ah!" exclaimed Herriman, much pleased, "so sparkling as that?"

"No, but it's extra dry."—Tribune.

Avoiding Trouble.

"Do you ever have any trouble over your typewriter's spelling?"

"No."

"How do you manage it?"

"I've quit lookin' in the dictionary when she hasn't my letters over for me to read."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Cold.

"What would life be without its illusions?" said the gentle lady.

"For my part I am not going to quit being young."

"Yes," said Miss Cayenne, "I have observed that that is one of life's commonest illusions."—Washington Star.

Too Precious.

The Subject (after the sitting)—I hadn't sat for a picture before in ten years, don't you know, and I'm deuced glad the worst is over.

The Photographer (innocently enough)—But you haven't seen the negative yet!—Puck.

Plenty of Water.

Old Lady—if the train should happen to run off the track, wouldn't these stoves set the cars on fire?

Brakeman—No danger, ma'am. The only bad places on this road are on the bridges.—N. Y. Weekly.

What They Get.

Buckeye—What does a member of the legislature get in your state?

Keystone—That depends. Sometimes one is sentenced for a year or two, but more frequently he gets off scot-free.—Catholic Standard.

Hard Up.

"Are you going to have anything to do with the charity ball this year?"

"Well, yes; I'm thinking of being one of the beneficiaries."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Accounted For.

Ida—She is every day of 30, and yet she says she has only seen 16 summers.

May—Well, you know she was in love 14 years, and love is blind.—Chicago Daily News.

The Real Difficulty.

Heiress—Because I cannot marry you, do not be disheartened. You must face the world bravely.

He—It isn't a question of the world. I've got to face my creditors.—Detroit Free Press.

Sudden Inspiration.

"We have with us 'his evening,'" the master of ceremonies said, "a gentleman from the Sandwich Islands, who kindly consented to sing a song—'It's name,'" demanded several rude boys in the rear seats. The chairman was non-plussed, but only for a moment. "The gentleman from Hawaii who has so kindly consented to assist us this evening," he went on, "with a contemptuous glance at the rear seats, 'will sing a selection, entitled 'How I Love My Honolulu!'" The gentleman from Hawaii then proceeded to sing something in Kanaka, and nobody was the wiser.—Chicago Tribune.

Wants Others to Know.

"I have used DeWitt's Little Early Risers for constipation and torpid liver and they are all right. I am glad to endorse them for I think when we find a good thing we ought to let others know it," writes Alfred Heinze, Quincy, Ill. They never gripe or distress. Sure, safe pills. Murdock Bros.

Different Kinds of Sects.

Why She Was Dissatisfied.

After the bishop of Liverpool preached a sermon recently an old woman was heard to say: "Never was I so disappointed. I never heard a bishop. I thought I'd hear something great. But I can't understand every word he said."

Another Irish Mail.

Whatever may be the general state of agricultural Ireland, one thing seems certain. There is no decrease in the annual crop of bulls. One of the latest appeared in "Answers to Correspondents" in a Connaght newspaper it read "Your abusive letter to us is so scurrilous that we will not even acknowledge the receipt of it."

Dangerous if Neglected.

Cuts, sores and other wounds often fail to heal properly if neglected and become troublesome sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve prevents such consequences. Even where delay has aggravated the injury DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve effects a cure. "I had a running sore on my leg thirty years," says H. C. Hatler, Yanketown, Ind. After using many remedies, I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes healed the sore. Cures all skin diseases. Piles yield to it at once. Beware of counterfeits.—Murdock Bros.
