Vol. XXXIII, No. 42.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, MAY 30, 1902.

$1.00 Per Year in Advance

ELECTRIC RYS.

AT 12,000 PER MILE

TAX COMMISSIONER SAYS THAT'S THE PRICE.

Probably It's a Little High for Northwestern and D. P. & N.

The state tax commissioner has fixed the rate of assessment for Michigan electric railways at $12,000 per mile. This includes tracks and franchise values. The rolling stock is assessed at the place where it is housed. To the assessing officers is left the problem of determining the value of physical property. Mr. Oakman, for the United Railway, states that the assessment against the Detroit & Pontiac branch of the United property is reasonable and he offers no objection, but asks that the assessment of the Northwestern be reduced inasmuch as it is a less valuable property from a money earning point of view.

The D. P. & N. will also ask that they be not assessed as much as the roads that pay big dividends because of their greater earning power by virtue of their going through more paying territory. However, in the village of Northville both roads own valuable franchises and will be willing no doubt to have their property assessed at the rate of $12,000 per mile and think themselves lucky at that. In the townships, however, they are seemingly entitled to a reduction in comparison with either the Detroit & Pontiac or the Yps-Ann roads.

GRIM REAPER BUSY

Three Deaths Occurred During the Last Week.

Death has again been very busy in Northville and vicinity, and it is the sad duty of the Record to once more chronicle the departure from earth of several persons in a few days' time.

WILLIAM CREIGER.

Another sudden death occurred Tuesday afternoon at six o'clock when William Creiger, who had been ill only since last week Thursday night, passed away at his home here. Mr. Creiger was a highly respected, industrious man, who had been a resident of Northville and a faithful employe of the Dubuar Manufacturing company for many years and whose removal from his family and friends in the prime of a useful life calls forth generally expressed regret and sympathy. He was 46 years of age and leaves a widow and four children, two of whom are married and residing here.

The funeral was from the home yesterday forenoon, Rev. O. M. Thrasher of the Baptist church conducting the services, and was attended by the K. O. T. M. and the Dubuar factory employes in a body. The interment was at Redford.

MRS. SARAH A. ELLIS.

Mrs. Sarah A. Ellis, mother of Mrs. Charles Waterman of this village, died at the home of her daughter on Saturday, the "last enemy" having brought the first separation between the mother and daughter, whose home had always been together since Mrs. Waterman's birth. Mrs. Ellis was born in England seventy-five years ago, but had been a resident of this country for many years. She was much respected and leaves besides the daughter, Mrs. Waterman, one son, Harry, of Chicago. The funeral services were held at the home Tuesday, Rev. W. T. Jacques of Albion officiating.

EZRA PALMER.

Ezra Palmer, who lived on Franz Power's farm, a few miles north and west of town, died Saturday, May 24th, and was brought here for burial Monday. He was 26 years old. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Lloyd at the home.

COMMENCEMENT OVER AT NOVI GRADUATED A CLASS OF FIVE LAST NIGHT.

The Interesting Exercises Were Held in the Baptist Church.

The Novi public school, under the efficient management of Prof. W. D. Stark and his assistant, Miss Grace Knapp, was again at the front this year and held its second annual commencement and junior exercises at the Novi Baptist church last evening with a fine program and a full house. Few country schools of two departments have so far undertaken to hold graduating exercises, but those held by the Novi school last year proved so successful and the idea so popular that the function will doubtless be a feature of the school hereafter. The graduates were Mattie Erwin, Buddington Jones, Hazel Coates, Morell Simmons and Charles Matthews and all acquitted themselves in a manner highly pleasing to parents and instructors.

The patrons of the school cannot fail to be pleased with its management and progressiveness and that they appreciate the efforts of the teachers was shown by their large attendance and unmistakable approval of the very interesting program to which they were treated.

The members of the class of 1903, who all gave excellent assistance in the rendering of the program, are Cora Higgins, James Leavenworth, Mae Dear and Hiram Hammond.

MIDST MASS OF FLOWERS.

Luther Greene Was Laid to Rest Saturday.

Luther M. Greene, whose death was briefly noted last week, was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Greene of Mead's Mills and was born at that place September 22, 1852. He was a student of the Northville High school, class of 1902, but left school while still a junior and was for a time employed on the D. P. & N. electric road and also on the P. M. railway. Lately he had been working for the American Bell and Foundry company here. He was ill only eight days, but the disease—appendicitis—had made such progress before developing any definite symptoms that although it was thought best to perform an operation the physicians had very slight hope that it would save him. The immediate cause of death was heart failure, a weakness of that organ having caused him much previous trouble. He met the great destroyer like a hero, bidding his dear ones at home a loving good-bye and sending farewells to his young comrades, who were all his warm friends. He was a very fine young man and is highly spoken of by all who knew him. The funeral service, which was held at the home Saturday afternoon, was very largely attended and exquisite floral designs were sent by pupils of the High-school, his fellow employes at the foundry, the W. C. T. U., D. P. & N. and P. M. employes and many other friends. The sorrowing family consists of the father, mother, two sisters and two brothers, for whom widespread sympathy is expressed in their sudden and heavy affliction.

THEIR SILVER WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Wheeler Celebrated May 23.

More than one hundred of their many friends and relatives gathered last week Friday night at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Barton A. Wheeler on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

Several violin selections by Mrs. Merritt and solos by Mrs. Belle R. Long were enjoyable features of the occasion. The dainty luncheon was served by Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler's two daughters, assisted by Misses Buchner, Burgess, Joslin and Clarkson.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler were married by Mrs. Wheeler's father, Rev. Jas. Dubuar, who performed the marriage ceremony for all of his children. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler were the recipients of a very large number of exceptionally beautiful presents as tokens of the esteem of their friends and neighbors.

Have Much Faith in Milk.

The Chinese have the idea that milk revives the youthful powers and that it has special virtue as winter food for old people. Pictures and characters illustrating this idea, as well as the value of it for baby food, would without doubt increase the sale of American milk in China, as one of the consultants suggests.

No Monument for Salmon Chase.

There is no fitting monument on the grave of Salmon P. Chase in Cincinnati, O. only a simple stone bearing an inscription of four lines and reciting that he was "Senator, Governor, Secretary of the Treasury, Chief Justice of the United States." His daughter, who idolized him, rests beside him.

WHEN THE BOYS MARCH
HATS OFF! - Along the way they come.
Their colonel marching on before,
Their steps attuned to fife and drum
As in the valiant days of yore.

Who reckes how lagging are the feet?
Bright deeds illumine each wrinkled face -
The "boys" are marching down the street!
Hats off! That tattered flag you see
With rents in every treasured fold
Wakes off to memory's reveille

Hats off, hats off! The grave and lame
Are now no longer lame and gray,
But feel once more youth's sturdy frame
And breathe the fires of yesterday
In brows rec'd, to pride reborn.

A THEME FOR A POET.

Charge of the First Brigade Underdone by Minnesotans

The story of the disaster to Sickles' corps at Gettysburg is well known to all who are familiar with that battle. General Hancock spared what troops he could from Cemetery Ridge to support Sickles. While he was out strengthening the line on the flank and rear of Sickles he saw a brigade of Wilcox's Confederates dashing forward upon a Federal battery.

A thousand muskets on the Confederate reserve swept the field to clear the way for Wilcox's advance. The Minnesotans held their fire as they marched forward, losing men at every step. Finally the ranks of Wilcox's line closed round the charging band, barely a handful compared to the division confronting them.

But what of the First Minnesota? There were 262 officers and men in line when the charge opened. Forty-seven rallied on the return. Not a man was missing, for none surrendered or left the ranks under fire.

COMRADES IN THE WHITE HOUSE

By M. K. Rutledge

FIVE veterans of the civil war were honored with the highest gift in the hands of the people, election to the White House. McKinley, the last of the five, was nearer to the mass of his former comrades in arms because he came from the ranks.

While serving as a private in the ranks McKinley formed the army friendships which bound him to the old soldiers throughout all his distinguished career. When he lay wounded to the death in Buffalo, his old regiment, the Twenty-third Ohio, held its annual reunion at Cleveland, and the chairs which had been prepared for him on the platform and at the banquet board were left vacant except for the drapings of the stars and stripes.

Grant was the first president enrolled in the ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic. The year of his first inauguration 1863 the Grand Army was in the second year of its existence and numbered but a few thousand veterans. In that year the custom of decorating the graves of the fallen soldiers was first officially observed by the order.

General Hayes, General Garfield, General Harrison and Major McKinley were veterans of the Grand Army when they were called to the presidential chair. Hayes, Garfield and McKinley came from the state noted for veteran enthusiasm in all things. Indiana, the home of Harrison, had a proud record in the war, and the activity of her veterans since the founding of the Grand Army has kept her in line as a soldier state.

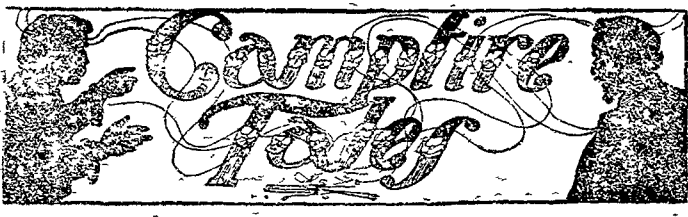

Grant alone among the veteran presidents was a professional soldier. Yet even he, West Pointer though he was, entered the war as an Illinois volunteer.

COMRADE MCKINLEY IN 1861. He was the colonel of a regiment. Hayes also began his military career as a regimental officer. While holding the rank of major he commanded his regiment, the Twenty-third Ohio at the battle of South Mountain in 1862.

Garfield's earliest rank was that of a lieutenant colonel, but he was quickly promoted to colonel of the Forty-second Ohio volunteers. In his first battle he commanded a brigade and won a victory at Middle Creek, Ky., on the 10th of January, 1862.

Harrison's first commission was that of a second lieutenant, the lowest grade, but when the company he helped recruit was incorporated into a regiment he became colonel. This regiment, the Seventieth Indiana, he led in battle and came out of the war a brigadier general.

By W. L. Vail

SOME Confederates insist that pictures of hard times in the south in the sixties are overdrawn, and this story may be taken for what it is worth as coming from the lips of one of Lee's military family. At the siege of Petersburg, in midwinter, even the headquarters cow had been consumed for beef, and the hens carried along to supply eggs were starved into barrenness.

When Captain Semmes found himself loose on the wave with his grand new English built cruiser Alabama, he laid his course for Galveston. One day just at nightfall he fell in with the United States arched gunboat Hatteras, and they exchanged the usual greetings.

The Hatteras set on fire by the Alabama's shells. Blake took his men off in boats after flooding the magazine to prevent explosion and in two minutes the ship went down. The hyperbole in which war correspondents and other literary "foolers" indulge when they write up battles sounds very ludicrous to the reader who has been there.

Colonel S. S. Fry of the Fourth Kentucky Federals, riding across the field at Mill Springs, was accosted by a stranger whose uniform, whatever the color, was veiled under a gun coat. It was misty and rainy, and the coat was quite the thing for the occasion.

Four bells sounded on the United States gunboat Underwriter, lying at anchor with fires banked, in the blockading fleet off Newban. The night was dark, and it was raining in torrents. The lookout heard the noise of approaching vessels and called out rapidly the challenge "Boat ahoy! Boat ahoy! Boat ahoy!"

Four Federal ironclads and three gunboats of Commodore Foote's Federal fleet rained shells into Fort Henry for two hours. The Confederates began the fight with fifty-four men and nine guns, and in the fiercest bombardment five guns had been disabled, with sixteen men cut down beside them.

Commodore Rowan's fleet at the attack on Elizabeth City consisted of old ferryboats, tugs and river steamers rigged for war. The Confederate squadron lined up before a fort which mounted four 32 pounders. Rowan hoisted the signal, "Dash into the enemy!" and splinters as well as lead and iron began to fly.

HOW "THE KID" FOUND A HOME

By Callie Bonney Marble

SHORTY, the newsboy, had disposed of his papers and with the air of a successful business man was going home.

"Shorty! Oh, Shorty!" called a shrill voice as the newsboy passed the asylum gate, where he caught sight of the flutter of a blue gingham apron and some stubby shoes showing between the rounds, both belonging to a diminutive boy of four, with big, wide-awake gray eyes and a shock of yellow hair.

"What you want, Kid?" asked the newsboy, with a patronizing air.

"Oh, Shorty," cried the wee orphan gleefully, "tomorrow's Decoration day, and see what I've got!" And he drew out from a hole under the gate a wonderful combination bouquet of his own fashioning, which consisted of two faded pinks, an artificial rosebud dropped from somebody's bonnet, some celery leaves, a pine twig and a full assortment of the weeds which grew about the asylum yard.

The happy orphan ran back to the asylum after having deposited his precious parcel in the hole under the gate, where he reposed his Memorial day bouquet, and that night he was favored with a boy's happiest dream, for soldiers and grass and popcorn were in delightful abundance.

The next morning the Kid was awake long before the gong sounded to arouse the orphans, and after he had disposed of his bowl of mush and milk, and secured his treasures he started down the dusty road as fast as his diminutive legs could carry him.

"What is your name, sonny?" he asked kindly, bending over the boy in the blue gingham apron, who scrambled nastily to his feet, still determined not to be left behind, his eyes glistening with joy and admiration as he surveyed the captain.

"It used to be Robert, but now I live at the 'asylum it's Bob and the Kid," promptly replied the youngster. Then, fearing that the captain would ride away and leave his mission unaccomplished, he plunged right into the subject at heart, and, holding up his withered bouquet, he said proudly:

"I've got some flowers, too, and I'm gon' to take 'em to the dead men. Do they live a good way from here?" "That is a fine bouquet you have," the captain replied, turning his head to hide a smile. "But the cemetery is too far away for a small boy like you to walk."

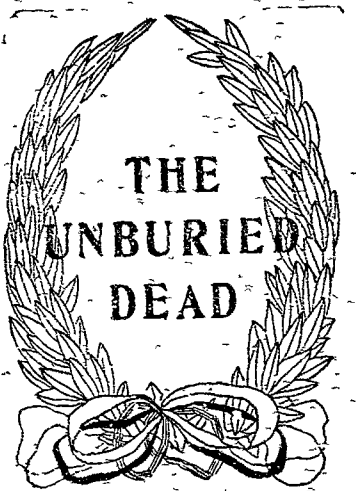

"Oh, I do want to go so bad," the Kid said plumply, "and I saved these flowers ever since yesterday."

"What's your name, sonny?" still gazing admiringly at his very unique bouquet, which had tumbled when he did and looked worse than ever.

The kind hearted captain, thinking perhaps of another little boy whom he sadly missed, wheeled about and spoke a few words to his wife, who was driving in a carriage a little to one side of the soldiers, after which he returned to the child, who stood with quivering lips and brimming eyes where he had left him.

"No, my boy, you can't walk there, but here is a lady who says you may ride with her. Would you like to?" "Would he like to! It was as though heaven had opened to the disappointed boy.

"So this is the little man who is to ride with me?" said the captain's pretty wife. "Sit here, dear, on this little seat, where there is room, too, for your flowers. And to whom do you belong, little boy?" she asked.

By W. L. Vail

TODAY your choicest flowers you bring
In honor of the brave;
Your choicest hymns of praise you sing
Around each hero's grave.

But what of those who darkly sleep
Whose mourners never come?
Shall none their hapless fortunes weep,
And shall their praise be dumb?

Until the sea shall render back
The muster of her dead
Your loving scrolls of fame must lack
Full many a heart that bled,

And still in many a hidden spot,
By vines and grass o'ergrown,
Unnoted heroes lie forgot,
Their place of rest unknown.

Yet grieve not that you may not dress
Such graves with fitting art
While nature has the will to bless

And play the mourner's part.
She gave them life and courage high,
And since they bravely bled
She lets no wandering wind go by
But mourns the hero dead.

The solemn dirges of the deep
Have lulled her sons to rest.
She soothed them to untroubled sleep
Upon her loving breast.

And even the humblest weed that blows
Where sleep the true and brave
Can peer the lily or the rose
On any honored grave.

ARTHUR CARRUTHERS.

"To nobody but God," he answered gravely. "I live at the 'asylum, you know."

"And wouldn't you like to belong to some one else?" she asked kindly. "If 'twas you I would!" and the gray eyes met hers trustfully. "You are a hero no less than Jack the Giant Killer. 'Are the dead men glad when we give 'em the flowers?' he asked, patting his bouquet admiringly.

The captain's wife was puzzled for a moment. Then she said: "Oh, the dead men are not in the graves, you know. They have gone to live in another world. But we cannot take the flowers to them there, so we put them on the graves here, and if they see us I am sure it pleases them to know that we remember and love and honor them. But here we are, and now you can take your flowers and put them where you want to, dear."

Eagerly the boy scrambled out of the carriage, and the captain's wife placed his treasure bouquet in the chubby brown hands raised to receive it. For a moment he stood silently regarding the graves close by. Then he said, with a touch of pity in the baby voice: "I'm gon' to give my flowers to the man over 'here," pointing to a half hidden, neglected grave off a little to one side, "cause all the other men have got flowers, and this poor man hasn't got any, and I know he'll feel bad if nobody 'members him."

Manistique, Mich., May 29.—The most serious conflagration of Manistique's history occurred Wednesday afternoon in the destruction of the single mill of the White Marble Lime Co. and the greater portion of the Burrell Chemical Co.'s plant. Newman, Detroit; second vice-president, T. W. Grafton, Ann Arbor, recording secretary, T. P. Ulom, Traverse City, treasurer, H. R. Pickard, Wayland, Sunday school superintendent, J. W. Barby, Decatur; Christian Endeavor superintendent, N. L. Sims, Muir, managers for districts first, G. B. Booth, Jasper; second, C. E. Pickett, Benton Harbor; third, C. M. Keene, Cascade, fourth, F. T. Porter, Fremont fifth, A. R. Farrar, St. Louis; sixth, P. G. Spangler, Saginaw; seventh, J. C. Meese, Kalkaska. One of the features of the convention was a series of addresses on bible study work by Dr. Newman of Detroit.

New Church for Battle Creek.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 29.—Rev. Dr. Boynton of Detroit and Rev. McLaughlin of Kalamazoo are here for the purpose of organizing a Congregational church. The Congregationalists and Presbyterians formerly occupied one church, but the Presbyterians left building a fine new church, of which Rev. Wm. S. Petter is pastor. The other sect were really Unitarians, but to hold the church property have called themselves Independent Congregationalists. Reed Stuart, now of Detroit, was the first pastor. A meeting of Congregationalists has been called for Sunday night. The movement is entirely unexpected and is causing much comment.

Sickness in Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., May 29.—Reports to the state board of health from representative physicians in active general practice in different parts of the state indicate that rheumatism, tonsillitis, neuralgia, bronchitis and influenza, in the order named, caused the most sickness in Michigan during the past week. Meningitis was reported present at nine places, whooping cough at 17, diphtheria at 22, typhoid fever at 38, measles at 61, scarlet fever at 74, smallpox at 57 and consumption at 223.

500 Ballots—No Result.

Adrian, Mich., May 29.—The republican congressional convention of the second Michigan district promises to be a record-breaker. When the convention adjourned last night, after its most continuous session since 11 a. m. just 500 ballots had been taken, and every one of them was exactly like every other one. Each county stood all day and evening by its own county and the outcome is still as problematical as it was before the first roll call.

Killed in a Runaway.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., May 29.—Brad J. Chiley, a wealthy glue manufacturer of Buffalo, N. Y., who has been stopping at the Park house for the past four months, was almost instantly killed near Smith's club house Tuesday evening. He and a Chicago friend started out for a drive and upon turning into Smith's, Chiley lost control of the horses and a lurch of the buggy threw him out. Chiley struck on his head and died a few minutes later.

Child Killed His Cousin.

Menominee Mich., May 29.—August Lacanne, aged 6, was accidentally shot by his cousin Joe Lacanne, about the same age, while fooling with a shotgun, and died in his mother's arms in one minute. The father had been cleaning the gun and the child picked it up and in some manner it went off.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 29.—The planters here, including the United Fruit company, an American concern, are warmly supporting the proposal to bring hundreds of the sufferers from the volcanic outbreak on the island of St. Vincent to work on estates here and also to settle them on the crown lands. The government of Jamaica is being asked to make an offer to transport people from St. Vincent to Jamaica.

CAPTURED THEIR MAN

ALBION OFFICERS WORK SHREWD GAME ON A NEGRO.

HE ANSWERED A FUNERAL SUMMONS AND WAS ARRESTED.

WAS WANTED ON BURGLARY CHARGE IN JACKSON.

Albion, Mich., May 25.—For some time past Bert King, a local negro, has been wanted for a burglary committed in Jackson. The local officials have been on a lookout for him, but have been unable to locate him in this region.

Sunday afternoon King's sister died. The other members of the family sent out a blind telegram immediately to a party in Detroit, who was supposed to know of King's whereabouts, summoning him to the funeral. A reply arrived in due time and the local officers, who had been watching the telegraph offices with eagle eye, waited for the train to come in and nabbed the man.

Cried Like a Baby.

When King saw the game he was up against he broke down and cried like a baby, begging to be allowed to attend the funeral, or at least to look on his dead sister's face, but the officers were obdurate.

"You couldn't do her any good anyway," said Officer D'Veille of Jackson, who had come to get the prisoner and, pursuant to this decision, King was taken to Jackson just two hours before the funeral.

King is the doubtful hero of a shooting escapade here last August. He was prowling about a house in this city and was seized by an officer, who ordered him to throw up his hands. The duty ran and the officer fired, wounding the fugitive in the arm. There was no case against King and he was discharged, but later brought action against the officer for malicious injury, claiming that he was only hunting for his father's house. Nothing ever came of the suit, however.

Thresher Works Nearly Burned Up.

Battle Creek Mich., May 28.—The Nichols & Shepard Threshing Machine works, at 10 o'clock last evening, was nearly destroyed by fire, due to an improperly banked coke in the blacksmith and "on department." The loss is estimated at $100,000. Heroic work by the city and company's fire departments was all that saved the entire plant. A house occupied by Fred Gray and family was partially destroyed. Falling shafts of machinery nearly hit several firemen. The loss is covered by insurance.

New Rural Routes.

Washington, May 28.—Two rural mail routes have been ordered established at Grand Blanc, Genesee county, and three routes at Hemlock, Saginaw county Aug. 1. George W. Day Horace E. Whitney and Andrew J. Doyle have been appointed carriers at the latter place.

Horticultural Meeting Postponed.—The mid-summer meeting of the Michigan State Horticultural society, which was to have been held at Pontiac on June 3 and 4, has been changed to June 4 and 5.

Captured Four Cub Bears.—Dan Smith, a woodsman and hunter at Turner, captured four cub bears without a gun and succeeded in getting them away from the mother by adroit maneuvering. He will train the cubs for a circus.

Danced Himself to Death.—Walter Stone of Big Rapids, with a male companion, attended a country dance Saturday night returned home Sunday, quietly entered his parents' home in this city and slept on a couch in the parlor. Later he was found dead. A coroner's jury said he died of over-exertion at the party.

Like a Drowning Man.

"Five years ago a disease the doctors called dyspepsia took such a hold of me that I could scarcely go," writes Geo. S. Marsh, well-known attorney of Nacora, Tex. "I took quantities of pepsin and other medicines but nothing helped me. As a drowning man grabs at a straw I grabbed at Kodol. I felt an improvement at once and after a few bottles am sound and well." Kodol is the only preparation which exactly reproduces the natural digestive juices and consequently is the only one which digests any food and cures any form of stomach trouble, Murdock Bros.

Dangerous Not to Laugh.

Sometimes when the Turkish Sultan attends a play in his private theater he hands in to the comedian an original joke or two of his own make. The actor gives these humorous efforts the fullest possible effect, of course, and perhaps that is why they are invariably received with great laughter.

Foley's Honey and Tar contains no opiates and can safely be given to children. Murdock Bros.

New Year's Mass in Paris.

Paris gave up this New Year's, after many centuries, the Red Mass in the Sainte Chapelle for the judges of the higher courts. This was done by order of the Minister of Justice on account of the intermeddling with political affairs of the religious orders. The ardent Catholic judges and lawyers attended instead a mass celebrated by Cardinal Richard in the Church of St. Germain L'Auxerrois, opposite the Louvre, whose bells gave the signal for the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

A Farmer Straightened Out.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and told him to use it freely and if not satisfied after using it he need not pay a cent for it," says C. P. Rayder, of Pattens Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar, saying, give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in the house all the time, for it cured me." For sale by George C. Hueston.

Irish-Speaking Negroes.

The Irish language is spoken in the Bahamas among the mixed descendants of the Hibernian patriots banished long ago by Cromwell to the West Indies. One can occasionally hear negro talkers in the east end of London who cannot speak a word of English talking Irish to the old Irish apple-women who gather around the docks.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS

Reveals That "Pe-ru-na is Calculated to Tone up the System, Restore the Functions and Procure Health."

SO SAYS PROF. L. J. MILLER, CHEMIST:

PROF. L. J. MILLER.

Prof. L. J. Miller, late Professor of Chemistry and Botany of the High School of Ypsilanti, Mich., writes from 3327 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"As several of my friends have spoken to me of the favorable results obtained through the use of Peruna, especially in cases of catarrh, I examined it most thoroughly to learn its contents..."

"Builds up the System."
Hon. Joseph H. Ridgeway, Secretary of the American Anti-Treat Society, writes the following letter from the Grand Central Hotel, St. Paul, Minn.:
"It is with great pleasure that I endorse Peruna as an honest medicine, competent to do all it claims. I have used it several times and know of nothing that cures so completely, and at the same time builds up the system."
"I have recommended it to a number of my friends and always feel that I do them a service for I know how satisfactory the results invariably are. I only wish every family had a bottle—it would save much sickness and doctor bills."—Joseph H. Ridgeway.

Joseph Ridgeway.

"Feel Better Than for Five Years."
Mr. James B. Taylor, Roberts, Ind., writes:
"I am at the present time entirely well. I can eat anything I ever could. I took five bottles of Peruna, and feel better now than I have for five years. I have doctored with other doctors off and on for fifteen years, so I can recommend your medicine very highly for stomach troubles. I take great pleasure in thanking you for your free advice and Peruna."—James B. Taylor.

"I Enjoy my Meals as I Used to."
Mr. J. W. Pritchard, Wolf Lake, Ind., writes:
"I am pleased to say that I have been cured of catarrh of the stomach by Peruna. I could hardly eat anything that agreed with me. Before I would get half through my meal my stomach would fill with gas causing me much distress and unpleasant feeling for an hour or two after each meal. But, thanks to your Peruna, I am now completely cured, and can eat anything I want to without any of the distressing symptoms. I can now enjoy my meals as I used to do, and it is all due to Dr. Hartman and his wonderful medicine, Peruna."

"It has been one year since I was cured, and I am all O. K. yet, so I know I am cured."—J. W. Pritchard.
Dyspepsia is a very common phase of summer catarrh. A remedy that will cure catarrh of one location will cure it anywhere. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. That it is a prompt and permanent cure for catarrh of the stomach the above letters testify.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.
Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Several visitors have been with us lately

The different grades had their pictures taken last week.

Next Monday evening Prof T S. Osborn will give an illustrated lecture on "Wireless Telegraphy" in the Rhin. He will have apparatus on the stage by means of which he will show and explain the working of this new advance in science. By means of his apparatus he will actually send and receive signals and messages through space, brick walls, wood partitions, human body, etc. and account for the present development and use of the system and its probable field in the future. An opportunity will be given the audience to ask questions and examine the apparatus after the lecture. Admission has been placed at 10 cents. We hope many may find it convenient to attend and get a better understanding of this wonderful invention. Prof Osborn comes with the best of recommendations. The lecture is given under the auspices of our physics class. They do not want to make money, but want to know more about wireless telegraphy.

The pastor will lead the Juniors Sunday evening. The memory verse is John 3:16. Juniors, bring your bibles for a bible drill. The text for the evening is found in Luke 22:57.

The B. Y. P. U. topic for Sunday evening is "The Purpose of His Coming." Miss Mabel Burgess is the leader. It is desired that there be a large attendance and that you be on time. Let this be your thought: What can I do to make the meeting a successful and helpful one?

The annual offering for state missions will be received next Sunday morning. This is a work in which all should be interested and we look for a large offering. It was the State Mission board that sent Bro. Van Dorn here to assist in meetings last winter and keeps him at such work in the southern part of the state the year round. We expect him to address us on state missions next Sunday morning. Be sure to hear him. He will also preach for us in the evening.

Disraeli and Harcourt.
Disraeli once said of Sir William Harcourt, in his affected, cynical way: "He has the three essential qualifications of success in politics, a fine person, a loud voice and no principles." To this, when it was repeated to him, Harcourt rejoined: "Leaving out the first two qualifications, it might almost be applied to 'Dizzy' himself."

It is announced that a matinee will be given at Starkweather park in the near future. The harness horses are rounding to in very satisfactory manner this spring and some lively contests are promised for the opening day. Fenn Bros' "Ohio" has wintered fine and will prove a prominent factor in her class.

The physics class in the Northville schools last week took up the study of sound. The first thing they heard was that Neal captured the Canton delegation for the legislature, and that Bacon gobbled the congressional delegates. Then they heard the workmen swear at the meat trust, and at the same time vow to stand by the republican party in which all trusts live, move and have their being. So we heard, anyway.—Adrian Press.

Nate Caverly has leased the Pinckney hotel and will leave at once with his family for that city to assume charge of his property. Nate has been in the harness business in this village for a number of years and is not only a skilled workman but he was liked by every one and all are sorry to have him leave. For some years past he has been with Cattermole & Scherer and they also feel the loss of such a valuable employe. Nate has previously had some experience in the hotel business and will no doubt make a success at Pinckney. The Record hopes he will.

The friends of Jos. Welch will regret to learn of his serious illness, the result of an attack of appendicitis. On Wednesday Dr. H. O. Walker of Detroit, assisted by Drs. J. M. and C. G. Burgess, operated on Mr. Welch and though very weak he is at present doing fairly well.

The L. O. T. M. will close their contest between the children June 4th at the rink. The prizes are on exhibition in E. J. Cox & Company's window. Supper will be served from five to eight o'clock. A very pleasing program will be given by the best talent obtainable from Plymouth, Farmington and Northville. The price for the supper, including the program, is only 15 cents. The prizes will be awarded during the program.

Northville now has the distinction as well as convenience of having an embalmer who possesses full authority in the preparation and transportation of bodies of persons dying from any disease, contagious or otherwise. Undertaker M. A. Porter has recently passed the required examination with unusually high honors and holds a diploma from the state board of health which makes him the "whole thing" in that regard in this section of the state. He is one of the comparatively few embalmers who are subject only to state authority, even the local boards of health having no supervisory or jurisdiction over his work.

Duke as a Bear Trainer.

The duke of Gallafani, prince of Molfetta, recently entered a cage containing four polar bears belonging to the Bernard menagerie, which is at present staying in Milan. He provoked the animals, which roared furiously, but they were soon mastered and he put them through several exercises. On coming out of the cage the prince was heartily cheered.

Initials of No Account.

Dr. McGee of the bureau of American ethnology was named Washington Jefferson McGee, but when he grew up he thought the first two names were somewhat magniloquent. Then he began to sign himself W. J. McGee. "What do the initials stand for?" asked a friend. "For nothing, they are what they seem," said the scientist. "Then why do you put initials after them?" Dr. McGee saw the inconsistency and now signs W. J. McGee.

BAND BENEFIT

A Celebrated Monologist at the Opera House.

Last week Tuesday evening an entertainment which promises to be exceptionally fine is to be given at the Opera House as a band benefit by Miss Marfan Wilson, the celebrated monologist artist, assisted by Northville talent. Miss Wilson's program consists of readings, impersonations, monologues, etc., presenting fifty different characters. Local artists will offer specialties and the band orchestra will furnish music. All who are interested in having a band here ought to make a special point of attending as a compliment to the band boys and thus help a good cause as well as secure a most enjoyable evening for themselves. The tickets are 15, 20 and 25 cents, the latter price securing reserved seats, which may be selected at Murdock's store as long as they last.

How Cheap Baking Powder Is Made.

The Health Department of New York has seized a quantity of so-called cheap baking powder, which it found in that city. Attention was attracted to it by the low price at which it was being sold in the department stores. Samples were taken and the chemist of the Health Department reported the stuff to be "an alum powder," which analysis showed to be composed chiefly of alum and pulverized rock.

The powder was declared to be dangerous to health, and several thousand pounds were carted to the offal dock and destroyed.

It is unsafe to experiment with these so-called "cheap" articles of food. They are sure to be made from alum, rock, or other injurious matter. In baking powders, the high class, cream of tartar brands are the most economical, because they go farther in use and are healthful beyond question.

She Sat on Him.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, and cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is no hard bug an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

Who Pays the Printer?

When you go around from printer to printer getting bids on a job and then giving it to the lowest bidder, you get an indifferently good job—one with no particularly good points—one that sells no goods for you, then who pays the printer?

YOU DO.

When you pick out a good printer, giving him all your work, educating him to an idea of your needs, and paying a fair price for the work you get, your printer (when secured at the Record Printery) necessarily creates a favorable impression for you and for what you offer, and becomes a factor in selling your goods. Then who pays the printer? Your customer.

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS

BY SEWARD W. HOPKINS

Copyright, 1900, by Seward W. Hopkins.

"True, that has been said, and it is so. The prefect of police could tell you much about that."
"I have seen him. What I want now is an order from you to permit me to see the prisoner."
"Ah, that is difficult! Yet for the prince—I mean Count Rockmillere—I suppose it could be done."
"I trust you will endeavor to please the prince. To drop the incognito, which is farcical between men who understand the case, if it should prove that this young man, who seems to be almost without friends in Paris, has really been engaged in an effort to protect the Prince of Denezelle, the Princess Margaret and the Princess Marie, it is the wish of the prince to reward in some substantial way so disinterested and courageous an act. Of course we offer no explanation of the De Bulhon affair. We hope, however, that our unknown friend will prove his innocence."
"I hope so too. May I ask what relation you yourself hold to the Prince of Denezelle?"
"I am the captain of his guard."
"You are young to hold so responsible a place. However, you look like a brave and honorable young man. I think I can safely trust you."
M. Senecal called for writing materials and wrote an order to admit Boss Duvally, the bearer, to the cell of the prisoner Buckford Wallace.
"I stipulate but one thing," said the magistrate. "It may not be necessary, but should I deem it so, I trust you will not object to appearing at the investigation."
"I was about to ask to be allowed to come," said Duvally, smiling.
The young man stepped to his waiting carriage and gave the command to drive at once to the Palais de Justice.
The carriage stopped before the door of the depot. The young man did not step out of it. In his place came a man of middle age wearing a full black beard that covered his face to the very eyes. He wore a long coat. In short, his appearance was very different from when he entered M. Senecal's presence.
The obsequious footman bowed him up the steps, as before. He entered the letter from M. Senecal gained him instant admittance and attention. He was led to the cell of the American prisoner.
Little things happen without being noticed. The footman had been seen by youngsters, but in some quiet moment he disappeared.
The coachman was still in his seat. A half hour passed. A warder of the jail, while passing through a corridor, saw outside of a cell door, which was shut, the prostrate figure of the black bearded man and, bending over him, the footman in livery.
"For God's sake!" cried the footman. "My master has been taken with a fit. Help me get him to the carriage at once."
The jail attendant, excited by the condition of so important a personage hurried to assist. He and the footman carried the unconscious man to the carriage. He was placed inside and the footman got in with him.
"Why not call a physician?" asked the attendant.
"No; I must get him home at once," was the reply.
The horses dashed off and were soon out of sight.
An hour later the prisoners in the depot were fed. An attendant went to the cell of Buckford Wallace. He opened the door, surprised to find it closed, but not locked. He looked into the cell and then, with a wild yell of dismay, ran screaming down the corridor.
The cell was empty. The murderer of M. de Bulhon had escaped.

CHAPTER V
M. MONROE, THE AMERICAN.
ABOUT twice a year Paris goes insane. The duration of this semiannual mental disturbance depends upon circumstances. It has happened that one period has lasted till the next one was due. It sometimes happens that they last only a week.
Paris went insane when it heard how the murderer of M. de Bulhon had calmly walked out of the depot of the police.
Its malady increased when it learned that M. Senecal, the investigating magistrate, had been a party to the escape. M. Senecal himself remained calm and collected.
"The matter is easy of settlement," he said. "In two days we shall have the prisoner again."
And then, as the person immediately responsible after the jail attendants M. Senecal began an investigation, not of the murder, but of the murderer's escape.
With him, working hand in hand, was the chief of the detective police.
Before these two cool, unimpassioned men came the attendant of the jail.
"Tell your story," said M. Senecal. "Leave out nothing."
"Leave out nothing! I must cudgel my brains to get anything in. Who ever saw an escape like that? It took an American to ehove us that the Palais de Justice needed an increased force of police."
"More caparion ones, rather," said M. Senecal.
"Oh, as to that, we did not write the order," replied the attendant.
M. Senecal winced. The chief of the detectives scarcely concealed a smile.
"But suppose we hear the story."
"Well, this is it, so far as I know: A fine carriage came to the door of the depot. From it came a gentleman about 50 years of age or less, wearing a heavy black beard."
"Oh, pardon me! Is that description correct?"
"Quite so. This man, who gave the peculiar name of Boss Duvally, held an order from you to be allowed to see the murderer of M. de Bulhon privately. I knew it was irregular, but concluded you knew your business, and it was simply my duty to obey. I admitted the man. That is my story. In full I know nothing more except that a short time afterward Canne, the attendant of that corridor, came to me and told me the prisoner had escaped."
"Have Canne brought here?"
Into the presence of the two investigators came Canne.
"Tell us fully your story of the escape of the prisoner known as Wallace."
"Alas that I know it at all! I saw M. Boss Duvally, as he declared himself, enter the jail. I led him to the cell of the prisoner and admitted him. I then stepped to the farther end of the corridor. I heard some of the attendants talking of the evident wealth of the visitor. They spoke of a liveried footman, coachman and five horses. Well, I thought nothing of that. I returned after a short time and saw M. Duvally lying unconscious on the floor and his footman bending over him. The footman begged of me to assist him to get his master to the carriage. I did so. They drove off, refusing to call a physician. That is all I know about it."
The chief of the detectives and M. Senecal looked at each other.
"Tell me this," said M. Senecal to the attendant. "Is there a way for a prisoner to leave that corridor without passing the spot where you were while M. Duvally was in the cell?"
"No possible way. There is but one door to the corridor, and I stood in that."
"Then it is certain that one of the other of the two men you saw was the prisoner?"
"It must be so."
"Was there a footman at the carriage when you got outside?"
"No, only the coachman."
"Could a footman have entered the corridor without your seeing him?"
"He could not."
"Did it not strike you as being strange that a man was there who had no business there?"
"I did not think of it. There was a man perhaps crying on the floor. I thought only of assisting him. My brain was befogged."
"Was the footman, now you think of it, the prisoner?" asked the chief of detectives.
"No, I am sure he was not."
"Then the other must have been?"
"But the prisoner was in his cell when M. Duvally entered."
"Still, one man came in and two went out. The mathematics of that is clear enough, I think."
"Yes, but it is so mysterious I can offer no explanation."
"The well planned and well executed escape proves that the fellow was guilty and afraid to face the investigation," said the chief of detectives.
"That remains to be seen," replied M. Senecal. "If this M. Duvally is what he claimed to be, there is something more behind it all, something that may involve international disputes and difficulties. We must now see M. Duvally. Come."
The two investigators left the office of M. Senecal and stepped into the magistrate's carriage, which was waiting at the door.
They were driven to a splendid hotel on a fashionable street and were met at the door by a servant in livery.
"We are a magistrate and police official," said M. Senecal. "We wish, if possible, to have an interview with his highness—Count Rockmillere."
The wooden faced servant ushered them into an anteroom and withdrew. "The count spends plenty of money on his temporary abiding places," said the chief, looking around.
"Messieurs, accompany me," said the servant, returning.
They were led into a fine large library, where a gentleman about 30 years of age stood waiting for them.
"I am pleased to see you, messieurs," he said. "To what fortunate circumstance do I owe the pleasure of a visit from the representatives of the departments of police and justice?"
"To plunge at once into the matter," said M. Senecal, "we did not come to see your highness at all. You have, I believe, a young man in your service named Boss Duvally."
"I certainly have," replied the prince in surprise. "He is the captain of my guard. Surely, gentlemen, poor Boss has done nothing to cause trouble?"
"It would appear that he has done something that may cause a great deal of trouble."
"Really! You surprise me! May I ask you what it was?"

"You certainly have the right to know. But first let me ask your highness if you sent this Boss Duvally to me yesterday afternoon."
"Send him to you? Boss Duvally? Certainly not."
"Then you, as well as I, have been wronged. I will explain Your highness has perhaps heard of the American police arrested three days ago on suspicion of having murdered and robbed M. de Bulhon, a wealthy builder."
"I have read of it in the papers. Nothing more."
"Is it possible? And you have heard none of the stories concerning him?"
"Nothing I was not much interested in."
"Heavens! This American, it seems, is a strange character. In some manner he became acquainted, so he tells, with some strange and disreputable persons of a certain, evil quarter. He learned of a plot that was being hatched to—well, in short, to murder you."
"What? You jest! A plot in Paris to murder me?" exclaimed the prince. "So, and nothing less. I am now quoting his story. I do not claim to be stating facts. This plot seemed to include among its victims the Princess Marie Alexia."
"My sister! Horrible!"
"And the Princess Margaret."
"My wife! My unborn child! My God! This is terrible, gentlemen! Why was I kept in ignorance of the existence of such a plot?"
"For the simple reason that the prefect of police was the only official who knew it, and he doubted the truth of the story, and does yet. Such plots were common enough at one time in Paris, but are rare now. But this is the story of the American. He was cautioned by the prefect to return to the haunts of the plotters, learn more and come to the prefecture with the facts."
"And did he return?"
"Oh, he returned. He returned with the purse of the murdered man in his possession, and blood on his hands and cheeks."
The visiting prince sat back in his chair and gazed in mute astonishment at M. Senecal.
"And now we come to Duvally's part in this," said M. Senecal. "Yesterday he came to me and introduced himself as the captain of your highness' guard. His general appearance and the elegance of the equipage in which he arrived dispelled all doubt. He informed me that your highness was familiar with the story and that you wished to reward the young man for his disinterested efforts in your behalf. He also requested an order admitting him to the jail to see the prisoner. I gave him the order. He visited the jail. He used a disguise to enter, appearing as a black bearded man of 50. When he left the jail, he took the prisoner with him."
"The prince looked now in still greater amazement.
"Do you mean that he assisted the prisoner to escape?"
"That is just what I mean, your highness."
"Incredible! Then the man is guilty!"
"He certainly feared the investigation."
"This must be looked into at once. I will have Duvally here."
An attendant obeyed the call of the prince.
"Send Captain Duvally to me at once."
In three minutes the captain of the prince's guard entered. He was about 24, tall, handsome and brave looking.
"Captain Duvally, these gentlemen, representatives of the departments of the police and justice, come to me with a strange story of your exploits yesterday. I wish you would explain your action."
"I shall be happy to explain anything I have done that does not meet with the approbation of your highness," said the captain.
"But—but—pardon me, your highness," stammered M. Senecal. "This is not the man!"
"Well, really," said the prince, passing his white hand wearily over his forehead. "This matter becomes more inexplicable each moment. You asked for Captain Duvally. He is here."
"Then it is not Captain Duvally I want. This is not the man to whom I gave the order admitting him to the jail."
"Jail! Jail! I have wished to visit no jail," said Duvally. "It is easy enough to get into jail without soliciting the privilege."
"It seems to be just as easy to get out," said M. Senecal in a voice expressive of exhaustion. "I ask but one more favor of your highness. Will you allow me to inspect the horses and carriages in your stables?"
"Assuredly, Captain, since you are not the culprit, assist these gentlemen all in your power."
"I certainly will," said Duvally. "I'd like to know who is doing tricks in my name."
Duvally looked savage and capable of doing a trick or two himself.
He led the two investigators to the stables. After a close inspection M. Senecal discovered a pair of fine chestnut horses and a splendid carriage.
"That is the equipage that came to my door," he said positively.
Duvally, who had expected nothing of this kind, was much surprised.
"Well, now we can get at it. Where is Wilhelm, the German coachman?" he asked of a groom.
"Wilhelm has not been here today."
"Not been here? Does he not reside in the establishment?"
"Oh, yes, but he had business away last night, and the superintendent excused him."
"Ask the superintendent to step this way."
A man with horseman's written all over him soon made his appearance.
"There is a mystery connected with this carriage," said Duvally. "It was driven to the door of Magistrate Senecal yesterday with a person who claimed to be myself."
"That is strange," said the superintendent of the stables. "I cannot understand that. No one left here in the carriage."
"Then why was it sent out?"
"The horses had not been used in several days, and when the prince ordered a carriage for his regular afternoon drive I had that pair harnessed to this carriage. Then the prince—I mean the count—countermanded the order. Wilhelm, the coachman, came to me and said the horses needed exercise. As they were already harnessed, I ordered him to drive them about for two hours. He did so, returned with them, and obtained permission to be away for the night to visit some friends. He has not returned."
"What kind of looking man was this coachman?" asked M. Senecal.
"A heavy faced German. You might know him anywhere by his thick neck and powerful shoulders. He could manage any horse."
"The very man! He it was who drove the horses to my door!"
"I agree with your highness that the matter becomes more inexplicable every minute," said Duvally. Bewildered, staggered by the mystery that confronted them, the two investigators returned to the office of the magistrate, this time accompanied by the real Boss Duvally, who had received a

R. S. GREENWOOD, M. P. A., Chicago.

"You have believed, a young man in your service named Boss Duvally, has stolen your order from his prince to follow the matter up and learn what it all meant."
It was now the hour set by M. Senecal for the regular examination everybody connected with the case was on hand—with the exception of the prisoner.
"Well, let us see what has been learned," said the magistrate. "Since the prisoner is not present, what has the detective in charge of the case got to say?"
At a nod from his chief a shrewd looking detective stepped forward.
"Well?" interrogated M. Senecal.
"I have looked up the record of the prisoner," said he. "I give this condensed as much as possible. Eight months ago he came to Paris from New York. He took art lessons from M. Plaster, the celebrated painter. He seemed supplied with unlimited wealth. He had luxurious lodgings. Recently he gave up his work on the recommendation of M. Elaster, who found the young man would never succeed in art. He is an able, practical, energetic fellow but no artist. At the same time, his money came to an end. He gave up his lodgings. Letters taken from his pocket when he was arrested give this explanation. He was supported by an uncle in America who was wealthy. This uncle had kept him in funds. The uncle, however, had recently died, and instead of bequeathing the young man anything left his entire fortune, amounting to something like 50,000,000 francs, to a family of monks."
"Fifty million francs! There is no millionaire of France so wealthy," exclaimed M. Senecal.
"The habits of the young man were unexceptional," continued the detective, not noticing the interruption. "He had few friends in Paris. There was one friend, one M. Monroe, an American like himself, who has lived in Paris several years, having married a Parisian lady."
"Ah! Did you see this M. Monroe?"
"No, for, unfortunately, M. Monroe has disappeared, leaving his wife in a condition bordering on collapse. She has no idea where he went."
"Ah! When did he go?"
"The lady has not seen him since yesterday morning."
M. Senecal, the chief of detectives, and Boss Duvally all looked at one another significantly.
"So much for the prisoner," said M. Senecal. "Now, what about the murderer?"
"To be continued next week."

 In "A Hidden Crime," which opens a week's engagement at the Whitney Opera House the afternoon of June 1st, the author has made his chief character an aged millionaire, who is a slave to absinth. The wit and comedy in "His Excellency" are perhaps unequalled by that in any modern play. The ladies of the company promise some of their hand-somest dresses.

A quick witted salesman had seized the only resource at hand to avert a panic which might have resulted in terrible loss of life. The inspiring notes of the march, rolling in splendid volume from the brazen throat of the graphophone's big horn, brought every foot into step and, as the last person reached the sidewalk, smoke began to fill the place and the firemen and police reserves from the Mercer Street station dashed up. The graphophone was saved, uninjured.

BY IGNITION OF GASOLINE

Man Near Turner and Woman at Cold-water Terribly Burned.
 Turner, Mich., May 28.—Fred Sindo, aged 70, of Twining, attempted to light a fire with a quart can full of gasoline, thinking it was kerosene. An explosion followed and Sindo was badly burned. He will recover but his face will be terribly disfigured. His escape from death was little short of a miracle, as he was alone at the time.

Cold-water, Mich., May 28.—Mrs. C. W. Potter filled a cup with gasoline to put in the water for washing. As she approached the gasoline stove the flame in the cup took fire, firing the room with a sheet of fire. The unfortunate woman was terribly burned and her condition is critical.

Bound to Have Industries.
 Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 28.—At a mass meeting of the business men of the Soo last night the reorganization of the chamber of commerce, the employment of a high salaried secretary and the inauguration of an energetic campaign for new industries was decided upon. H. Von Schon, chief engineer of the Michigan Lake Superior Co., who was present as a representative of F. H. Clergue, said that the company would furnish free sites to new industries and electric power at a third less price than any other place in the country. The occasion for the move is the early completion of the power canal. The company expects to furnish power within three months and the rapid industrial development of the Soo is looked upon as certain.

 Ypsilanti, Mich., May 28.—Squire William Bishop of Augusta township, one of the most prominent farmers of the vicinity committed suicide by shooting himself after breakfast Monday and went to bed, and in the afternoon when his wife returned from a short visit with a friend, she found him lying from a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head. The "squire" was a very eccentric character, whose hobby was law suits.

The Veneered Door company carried $18,000 insurance, and its loss will probably not exceed $8,000.

 Shamokin, Pa., May 28.—The joint vote of 100 colliery firemen, taken at a meeting Tuesday afternoon evening, was unananimously in favor of a strike in case the eight-hour day was not granted by next Monday. Local No. 47 of the international engineers also balloted and decided to engage in a tie-up June 2, providing the same concessions demanded by the firemen are not granted. IN NORTHVILLE
 Every Claim is Backed by Local Testimony.

If the reader wants stronger proof than the following statement and experience of a citizen here at home what can it be? Mrs. I. E. Vanatta, husband bookkeeper in the Dubur Factory, and living at 66 Randolph St., says: "I most assuredly think Doan's Kidney Pills a remedy of great merit. I was bothered for some time with a dull aching miserable feeling in my back which to say the least was very annoying. In some way Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and thinking if they did not do me any good they would not do me any harm I procured a box at Murdock Bros.' drug store and began the treatment. I will cheerfully say this, I derived more benefit from them than any other remedy I ever used."

Record Rainfalls.
 The world's record for a 24-hour rainfall, hitherto held by Queensland, was equaled at Papeaia, on the windward coast of the island of Hawaii, on Christmas day, when the rain gauge showed a fall of forty inches. Papeaia is a little headland. Its formation is such that it always gets the brunt of the rains brought to that coast by the northeast trade winds. At Hana, on the eastern and exposed end of Maui, where twenty-one inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours, fourteen inches fell in four hours, making, it is believed, a world's record for a four-hour period.
