1902 COMMENCEMENT COME AND GONE

SIX GRADUATES RECEIVED THEIR SHEEPSKINS

One of the Brightest Classes in History of Northville School.

In spite of the rain that set in Friday evening just before the time for the commencement program to begin the Methodist church was filled with friends of the six young people of the class of 1902, who had finished the course of study which entitled them to receive their diplomas from the official representatives of Northville High-school. The church was appropriately decorated with flowers, palms, the class colors and the class motto, "Grit, Grace, Glory," and as the floral offerings brought in for members of the class accumulated the front of the rostrum became a magnificent bank of fragrant blossoms. The platform was occupied by the class, Superintendent Martin, the preceptress and assistant, Misses Sanford and Bryant, and members of the school board. The following program was carried out in a manner that won the most enthusiastic praise for the young graduates, their instructors and all who assisted them in the exercises.

A feature which impressed itself upon every one present was the uniform excellence of both matter and manner in the handling of their subjects by the young speakers, the comment being heard on all sides that it was impossible to discriminate between them, all did their parts with such marked ability in point of delivery as well as composition. The choice of subjects was particularly commendable as being much better adapted to the capacity of youthful minds than the more complicated ones too often chosen.

permitting a noticeable originality of treatment impossible under some circumstances

The musical numbers were all exceptionally fine, every selection winning enthusiastic praise. The exquisite organ solo by Prof. Burgess is pronounced one of the finest things of the kind ever heard in this place. Altogether the occasion is considered to have been one of the most charming graduations that has ever occurred in Northville. A great many pretty and useful gifts were bestowed on all members of the class, both at the church and at their homes.

PLEASANT REUNION

Birthday Celebration of Two Long-Time Residents.

Last Saturday afternoon two of Northville's oldest citizens, Mrs. Sarah A. Clarkson and George E. Bradley, with twenty-two of their friends, nearly all children and grandchildren—were gathered at the home of Mr. Bradley to celebrate the birthdays of the two persons named. Mrs. Clarkson having reached her four score years on Friday, June 20, and Mr. Bradley was seventy-six on Sunday, June 22. They came to this place from New York state with their parents, H. S. Bradley and wife, seventy-two years ago and Mrs. Clarkson has lived in or near Northville continuously during this period. Mr. Bradley has lived some years near South Lyon and the rest of the time in this village or vicinity. The afternoon was very pleasantly spent in social intercourse, music and games. Letters of good wishes were read and regrets received from absent friends and relatives who could not be present. After partaking of a bountiful feast the guests of this long to be remembered birthday party separated, wishing that the lives of these two silver haired, sweet spirited, youthful hearted people may be prolonged to enjoy many more birthdays and be a blessing to their friends.

Duke as a Bear Tamer

The Duke of Gallant, Prince of Melfetta, recently entered a cage containing four Polar bears belonging to the Bernard menagerie, which is at present staying at Milan. "He provoked the animals, which roared furiously, but they were soon mastered, and he then put them through several exercises. On coming out of the cage the Prince was heartily cheered.

The Towers of Silence

The Towers of Silence are two tall towers used by the Parsees as cemeteries. They never bury their dead, but leave the body exposed on the top of one of these towers until the sun and the rain and the fowls of the air have cleaned the bones of all flesh. Then the bones are collected and placed in the other tower.

Friends Quietly Boomed Him for Governor in 1904.

As was long ago predicted he would be, by the Record, Governor Bliss was re-nominated yesterday, receiving 311 ballots to Stearns' less than 300.

Fred M. Warner was nominated by acclamation and was given a great ovation. His name for governor in 1904 was on the lips of nearly every visitor and delegate at the state convention.

STARKWEATHER PARK.

Last Week's Matinee a Very Successful One.

An ideal day and excellent attendance made the opening of Starkweather park for the season a marked success last week Thursday. The races were a source of much interest and went off finely. The half-mile trot was won by Lee West's "Lady Nelson," the half-mile pace by George Willis' black pacer and the free-for-all by Fenn Brothers' "Ohio." The ball game was particularly interesting from start to finish, being warmly contested as the score—15 to 14—indicated. In the athletics the 100-yard dash prize went to Milo Corwin, by an eyelash, Harry German beat everybody in the standing jump, Ray Richardson proved to be the winner at the run and jump and young Dole carried off the honors for high jumping. The fat men's race provoked great enthusiasm, the list of entries including such well known men of weight as Harry Robinson, Fred Burch, John Scherer, Frank Perrin, Charley Green and Milt Brown, each one with a reputation for swiftness that promised records galore. The promise was fulfilled, every man on the job adding fresh laurels to his crown as he sprinted along too fast for the perspiration to drop off him, but Milt was a little too speedy for the rest and crossed the line a few hair-breadths ahead of anybody else. The Northville band furnished the music, and the boys received lots of compliments on the first-class manner in which they carried out their part of the program. Fully 500 people were on the grounds.

Annual L. L. A. Meeting.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Ladies' Library Association was held last Friday, and the secretary's report showed that the receipts from all sources, including last year's balance of over $50 were $105.41, the expenditures, $161.70, 138 cards were issued at the new rate of fifty cents yearly and while this is quite an increase over the former annual average of eighty, it will be seen that the patronage has not been sufficient to fully warrant continuance of the low price, although the board of managers has decided to test the experiment one more year. Fifty-five new books were purchased and about one hundred were rebound, at a total cost of nearly $100. Fuel, extra lighting and janitor work footed up $33, while the insurance costs about $31 each year.

The officers elected are Mrs. A. C. Harmon, pres., Mrs. Frank N. Clark, vice pres., Mrs. W. H. Ambler, sec. and Mrs. C. M. Joslin, treasurer. Mrs. W. G. Lapham, Mrs. Augusta Roote and Mrs. W. S. Jerome were elected trustees to fill expired terms and vacancy. The other members of the board are Mrs. J. A. Dubuar, Mrs. W. H. Yarnall and Mrs. S. W. Knapp. About 3,000 volumes are now owned by the association. The circulation during the year just closed was approximately 7,000.

It will be seen that if Northville shall continue to have its fine library at which to "point with pride," interested support is necessary, as the supply of new books and other necessary outlay cannot be kept up without liberal patronage from our people. The members of the board of managers work hard and disinterestedly, and every citizen of the town should try to further the interests of so valuable an institution in every possible way.

Had a Better Story.
"Did you see the account of that flash of lightning that burned the hair from a boy's head without otherwise hurting him?"
"I did," answered the cheerful bar, "and I was pained to note the incompleteness of the story. Now, I happen to know of a case that is really remarkable. The lightning entered a barber's shop and not only undertook the task of singeing a man's hair, but it rung up the proper amount on the cash register."—Chicago Post.

A Sure Indication.
"Oh, I visited such a woefully poverty-stricken family this morning," said the sympathetic member of the charity committee.
"Indeed?" asked the chairman of the committee. "Were they very, very poor?"
"Poor! Man, it is pitiable. Why, they are so poor that they keep 15 dogs."—Baltimore American.

Proposed Compromise.
Tramp—Lady, could you loan a poor pilgrim your husband's razor?
Lady—And what will you do in return? Cut some wood?

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

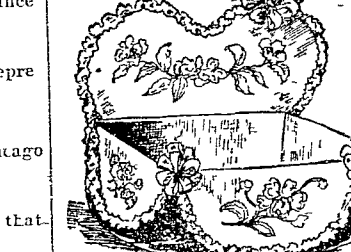

Kerchief Bags.
Besides the number of rich and artistic chateleine bags of tinted kid mounted in gold or silver, of earlier very fine leathers richly dyed and variously decorated, of fish scale paillettes or of Lyons velvet, with jeweled clasps that are sold by importers of fancy wares are carried many delicate and elegant little amulettes and mouchoir bags formed of soft fawn colored suede kid dotted with gold or cut steel beads and either round or oblong in shape. Copying these little trifles, the designers and makers of elegant dresses are adding to their creations dainty little scented mouchoir bags, which they add to gowns fashioned with a round waist. These are made variously of velvet, brocade, spangled net, peau de soie, embroidered kid, applique ornaments and velvet ribbon trimmings, and they are either suspended by a slender gold chain or they hang from the belt by lengths of the intertwined ribbon. To slip into these pretty pouches are set forth among dainties of the toilet the most exquisitely wrought, handkerchiefs of every beautiful device that has ever yet been manufactured. These range in price from 60 cents to $35 each and grade from lace edged linen, embroidered batiste, silk and shagreen lawn to duchess, alencon, venise and renaissance lace mouchoirs for full dress uses.

Table Decorations.
Table decorations are arranged in the form of a circle now and with a delightful result. For instance, at one dinner there was a centerpiece of ferns on the center floor, and arranged around this in a circle were tall vases filled with jessamine, with the candles in a branching candelabra set in at intervals. The table itself was large and round, and the effect was everything that could be desired, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Different Service of China with Each Course Adds Novelty. To the dinner—no unpleasant fish or anything of that kind, to be sure, as a rule, there is nothing symbolic except good taste in the fine china used.

Many simple conventional designs are to be seen, some of the fine line printed china—white with its blue, with the porcelain from famous factories—in beautiful colors, but with only a simple border around the edge. Dresden and save will feature in different cut courses, and some fine old service for a dessert course.

A Useful Box.
This is a very useful box to hang on the wall to put flowers or any small article in. Any size cardboard box of fairly strong make is used for the foundation.

THE WALL BOX.

This is covered with velvet or satin lightly draped round and has a rounded drapery of satin over each side. The drapery is embroidered with a spray of flowers or a single flower. It is placed over stiff muslin, is lined with satin and edged with a ruche of silk or ribbon. The inside is lined with satin, that should be laid over a thin sheet of wadding to make it look soft. It may be fixed in with secotine. The lid is curved to the shape shown and is covered with embroidered satin to match the drapery and is lined at the back with satin. The edge is finished with a ruche, and a rosette is placed at one end to match those on the corners. Two loops must be sewed at the back of lid by which to suspend the box.

Stained Floors.

Unless the floors are new and well laid a stain improves them greatly, and even in a new house, where the hardwood floors are fresh and clean, some rooms look better stained. For the drawing room perhaps the finish used on parquet floors is the best—i. e., white shellac and afterward wax, the first coat of shellac acting as a filler, the second as a varnish. After this the wax is evenly applied with a rag, left to dry several hours (the longer the better), then polished with the heavy floor brush that comes for the purpose. Then a fannel cloth is laid on the floor, the brush put upon it to give it weight, and the floor is again polished to give it luster. After this floors are easily kept bright by being polished once a week with the fannel under the heavy floor brush, which slides along easily, and dusted daily after sweeping with an ordinary broom over which is pinned a woolen cloth.

"Shams" Out of Date.

Pillows have gone entirely out of fashion, and the beds are covered in the daytime with a bedspread of dainty dimity or with a flowered cretonne covering. If the summer home is a small one and there is a demand for greater room, couch beds are put into the various rooms. In the daytime these couches are covered with a gay cover of cedar cloth or chintz, and with a profusion of sofa pillows one would never guess that they were designed to see double service. At night the cover is easily removed and the couch transformed into the most comfortable of beds.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Contest Puller.
When the spellbinding begins in Pennsylvania this fall, says a Washington correspondent, Major Alexander McDowell will resume the office conferred upon him two years ago by Senator Quay. It is that of contest puller. The duties of that office in no way interfere with those of his other position, which is that of clerk of the house of representatives. The other office came into existence at Norris-town in the fall of 1900, while Quay was making his memorable canvass for re-election to the senate. The colleague realized that the men in his party were talking too long, so he designated McDowell as the person to notify the man on his feet that he had upon his arm to a suitable length. It was agreed that the major should pull the coat of the speaker when he had consumed twenty minutes.

Quay was the first man to feel the tug that notified him that he must shut up, but the notice startled the "old man." He turned such a look of surprise at the major that he became the central figure in the hall. Then it dawned upon the senator that the major was only carrying out his duly appointed task.

How Secretary Root Rests.

Secretary Root is generally recognized as one of the hardworking members of the cabinet. Indeed, some of his friends have felt called upon to warn him that his exertions in the interests of the war department often carry him past the line of prudence, but the secretary has been known, says the Washington Star, to rest his brain when the fact is entirely unsuspected. A short time ago a delegation from one of the southern states called upon him to urge the establishment of a large camp in a certain part of their state. Almost immediately after they had left the department a newspaper man saw the secretary and asked: "Mr. Secretary, in what part of the state did they want the camp located?" Mr. Root looked just the tiniest bit embarrassed. Then he came out with it: "Honestly I do not know," he said.

They had talked it to him for nearly half an hour, and he had not heard it.

She Made a Sensation.

Miss Alice Morton, who has just created a mild sensation by introducing into Chicago the new feminine fashion of carrying a cane, is the niece of Levi P. Morton, who was formerly vice president of the United States. This cane, or stick, to use the proper term, has a crooked head, around which a silver snake with emerald eyes gently twines itself. Miss Morton belongs to the smartest set in New York and is one of the most popular girls in Gotham society.

Frankish Beresford.

It is said that Lord Charles Beresford on first entering the house of commons, a very young man, in 1865 was inexpressibly addicted to playing pranks of all kinds. One old member, who suffered from gout, used to retire to one of the back benches under the reporters' gallery behind the speaker's chair and, taking off his boots, sleep soundly until awakened by the ringing of the bells which precedes a division. One night the old gentleman on being aroused from his slumbers by a division hastily put on one boot, but no trace of the other could be found. It had disappeared in some mysterious fashion. The whips found him under the bench, distractedly searching for the boot, and by force bundled him into the lobby with one boot off and the other boot on, amid rounds of good natured laughter. Later on the missing boot was "accidentally" discovered by Lord Charles Beresford under his own special seat.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Plaster Match Holders.
Dainty housewives who are not fortunate enough to have their homes lighted by electricity are delighted over the new designs in plaster casts. Whether one buys of the street vendors or in the artshops, the little match holders in the shape of cherubs, jolly monks, diabolical faces or angelic children are quite welcome as novelties. When tacked against the woodwork with brass headed tacks, with a small piece of sandpaper underneath, their usefulness is as apparent as the decorative feature. A very pretty panel may be made by covering a thin board two inches larger than the match holder with some art ticking or denim of a humorous shade of the wall covering and then fastening the plaster cast and sandpaper to the covered board securely. Screw eyes at the top of the panel make it easy to adjust to the wall.

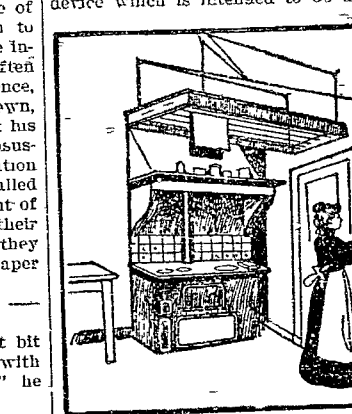

Country House Windows.

For a country house drawing room of any pretensions to elegance as elaborate a scheme of window drapery is employed as in a city house, but unless the house is one of unusual splendor silk and real lace and brocade are not the proper things to use.

Pane curtains in a country house parlor should be made of cream mercerized madras or mercerized lawn of a strong tea color. These sashes should hang flat against the glass and be treated with applications of imitation Russian or Irish crochet lace. It is the shade of cream, antique yellow or tea brown linen that must be filled. Of a fashionable make, this has insets of not expensive lace let in near its bottom edge, or it is still less expensive woven with a drawnwork border. To a pointed or scalloped edge the soft, thin linen flounce, lace edged, is set on, and such a shade among the smart house decorators is called a Monte Carlo blind.

For Drying Clothes Indoors.

When clothes are hung up to dry in a kitchen or laundry, they not only occupy a good deal of room, but they are an impediment to the free circulation of air, and for this reason a novel device which is intended to do away with these undesirable features is meeting favor among housewives of Europe.

It consists of a small wooden box, to which are attached several cords. When clothes are to be dried, this box can be raised to any desired height, and the cords can be stretched and fastened in the most appropriate places. In this way wet clothes can be removed in an instant to the warmest part of the room, where they will be dried in a few minutes.

Caraway Cookies.

One-half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of baking powder, flour to roll out. Rub the butter in a warm bowl until light and creamy add the sugar and when well bleached add the eggs, beaten lightly. Mix the baking powder with two cupfuls of flour, add one-half cupful of it to the latter mixture, then add the milk and the remainder of the flour and one tablespoonful of caraway seeds. Then stir enough more flour to enable you to roll it out very thin. Cut with a small round cutter and bake on a wafer tin about ten minutes. Roll only a small portion at a time, then mix the trimmings with another portion. Cut them in various shapes, if you prefer.

Old Furniture Made New.

If you have any old kitchen dresser or table considered utterly worthless and only fit for firewood, a skillful hand at spatter work can make it an attractive piece of furniture which will fill its place for fifty years longer and be admired by all who behold it. An old round walnut table, scratched, dented and apparently ruined, was thoroughly cleaned with sandpaper and then spotted with a wreath of maple leaves. It had a branch in the center, and the leaves were spotted to match. It is now the most ornamental object in a handsome drawing room. —Pittsburg Dispatch.

Cheap Floor Stain.

A cheap floor stain is made by dissolving two ounces of permanganate of potash in a gallon of water. Use hot water and stir with a stick, and your stain will soon be ready for use. Apply it with a painter's brush, using two coats of the stain. (N. B.—Do not leave your brush standing in the stain or it will destroy it.) Next day the floor may be varnished or, better still, polished with boiled linseed oil and the third day with beeswax and turpentine. After two or three polishings the floor will be in excellent condition.

LAST ROUND UP.

Eve of Republican Convention Indicates No Change.

Detroit, June 26.—There was nothing in yesterday's happenings to change the Bliss coloring that pervaded everything around the hotels. The Stearns train from Grand Rapids brought about 200 followers, who paraded Woodward avenue bravely in the rain. Stearns insists Bliss will not be nominated but his views are not shared by many of his friends. His idea is that John Patton will be the compromise candidate, but with the solid delegation elected Tuesday from Wayne there is little show for a compromise. Bliss managers claim over 800 votes sure, which is more than enough to nominate.

William Alden Smith will be temporary chairman, but he has repudiated the rumor that his name might be placed before the convention as a candidate for governor in case of an opening.

MUNICIPAL LEAGUE CONVENTION

Speakers Took a Whack at Ripper Legislation.

Owosso, Mich., June 26.—The fourth annual convention of the Michigan League of Municipalities held its initial session in this city Wednesday. Representatives were present from Battle Creek, Grand Rapids, Ionia, Flint, Adrian, Vernon, Hillsdale, Ann Arbor and Owosso. The Republican state convention hurt the attendance, and only about twenty-five delegates were present.

President George R. Perry of Grand Rapids was not present, and Mayor John F. Bible of Ionia was elected temporary chairman.

The first paper was by Professor John A. Fairlie, a U of M expert, who was down on the program for a discussion of general municipal corporation acts. He deplored the mass of legislation which is in effect, and which cuts up the city charters and is often valueless for worse.

Prof Fairlie believes the legislative slate should be wiped clean and a general act be passed to govern all cities. He took a passing shot at ripper legislation.

B. J. Wilson of Flint took an opposite view, saying:

"I believe in the legislature defining the limits of a city, then letting 'em go alone and make their own charter. Mayor Bible of Ionia gave a fine address upon 'Nonpartisan Government of Municipalities.' The speaker announced himself as a free lance in municipal affairs.

A banquet, to which fifty sat down, was served at the New National hotel last evening. Two sessions of the league will be held today.

The league voted last evening to adopt a list of cities and also officials and ex-officials of villages. They have been barred heretofore by the constitution.

These amounts are to be deducted from appropriation specified in omnibus bill for each town.

Struck When Traffic Is Heavy.

Owosso, Mich., June 26.—On the eve of the biggest day's traffic of the year the O & C street car employees tied up the system last night by striking for an increase of pay from 12 1/2 cents to 15 cents per hour. Manager Richardson, who came here a few months ago from Saginaw, declares he will run the cars with boys at 10 cents per hour, but the strikers are confident that he will grant the increase asked.

Niles Preacher Weds.

Niles, Mich., June 26.—One of the most interesting weddings of the season took place here Wednesday when Miss Mary Alice Correll, a prominent society woman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Correll, became the bride of Rev. James McGee, the young pastor of the Baptist church of this place. The ceremony was performed at high noon at the church, Rev. J. OLEO LAW ALL RIGHT

SUPREME COURT AFFIRMS CONVICTION OF GEORGE ROOTER.

TWO DIAMOND CONTRACT CASES ALSO DECIDED.

OTHER CASES ON DOCKET WERE DISPOSED OF.

Lansing, Mich., June 25.—The constitutionality of the anti-colored oleomargarine law was sustained by the supreme court Tuesday afternoon in a decision affirming the conviction of George W. Roter, who was tried in Emmet county for selling a package of colored oleomargarine at retail.

The defense attacked the constitutionality of the act, claiming that its object was not expressed in its title, that it violates the fourteenth amendment and section 32 of the federal constitution, and that it is not within the police power of the state.

The evidence conclusively showed that no decision was made in selling the colored articles, and there is nothing to indicate that there was any harmful ingredient therein, but that, on the contrary, there was no such ingredient.

The court held against all three contentions, the justices saying that the legislature had power to pass this law "and its wisdom and policy is not for our consideration."

Two diamond contract cases were also decided by the supreme court, the judgment of the lower court being reversed and a new trial ordered in the case of Daniel D. Barney vs. the Tontine Surety Company of New Jersey, and affirmed in the case of Ernest Rehberg vs. Same.

In the Barney case the supreme court says the only question that needs consideration is whether this was an illegal contract.

The contract was originally made by the Tontine Surety company of Detroit and assigned to the New Jersey concern.

In the Rehberg case the court said the New Jersey company, liable under contracts made with the Detroit company and assigned to it.

Some months ago Dr. E. L. Shurley of Detroit was charged with violating the criminal statute for refusing to report consumption as a disease dangerous to the public health. The jury found him guilty, but the circuit judge on this finding, set aside the verdict and entered judgment for defendant.

The somewhat famous case of Stephen S. Hurlbut the prominent citizen and attorney of Battle Creek, who was convicted of polluting the sources of water supply of Goguan lake by swimming therein, was reversed by the supreme court, which ordered a new trial. The case was exhaustively considered by Justice Moore who wrote an opinion covering eighteen typewritten pages.

Dennis, Reed City. The oration by J. E. Van Alsbury, class orator, was an eloquent and thoughtful study of the sources and possibilities of Anglo-Saxon supremacy.

Many Houses Wanted.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., June 25.—The industrial prosperity of the Soo, coupled with the impending completion of the power canal, which will result in the employment of a large number of additional laborers, has crowded the American Soo so that it is almost impossible to find room for the rapidly increasing number of its inhabitants. People are living in tents in the vacant lots in the center of the residence portion and many temporary shacks of rough lumber and tar paper house entire families. A well known real estate man claims that 500 homes are needed to supply the demand.

That $100,000 Fortune a Myth.—The probate court of Kalamazoo knows of no such person as Mary Park, nor of such an estate. No person named Mary Park can be found. Wonderland-Temple Theatre—Detroit.

Manager Moore of Wonderland and Temple Theatre, Detroit, has just returned from a four weeks' business engagement in New York City, where he has been booking high class attractions suitable for the summer months. Experience has taught him that persons who go to playhouses in the warm weather season want to laugh, consequently he has engaged acts which contain plenty of comedy with a seasoning of first class music. Miss Rose Coghlan, supported by a company of vaudeville stars, will head the list of artists. Others on the bill are Rae and Broack, Bicknell, Baby Klef, Burton and Brooks, Keiffer and Diamond and a stellar corps of entertainers.

A SIMPLE Question.

Northville People Are Requested to Honestly Answer This.

Is not the word of a representative citizen of Northville more convincing than the doubtful utterances of people living elsewhere in the Union? Read this:

Mr. J. M. Ambler, school janitor, living on Main street, says: "Mrs. Ambler and I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procuring them at Murdoch Bros.' drug store, and the treatment proved very satisfactory. We both had a lame back of a rheumatic nature and although we used several remedies we derived more benefit from a box of Doan's Kidney Pills than any other medicine we ever tried. We do not hesitate to endorse so valuable a remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

NORTHVILLE.

The City in Brief.

Frank Fry, senior, who was very ill last week, is now much better.

F. E. Beal has purchased L. A. Beal's place on west street and will shortly move therein.

The Northville Woman's club holds its annual picnic this afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Clark.

F. R. Beal has presented the library with a very valuable and complete set of bound and unbound volumes of the Forum.

C. H. Seaton submitted to a non-suit at Plymouth Friday in his case against the town on account of non-jurisdiction of justice court.

The P. M. railway company changed their Sunday service this week and hereafter all trains except the 2:15 p. m. will run on Sunday.

Mrs. Elmer Kator was taken to Detroit Wednesday for hospital treatment. It is feared that an operation for appendicitis will be necessary.

A number of the people of Northville and vicinity will undoubtedly attend the Blue Ribbon races at Ypsilanti next week, July 2, 3, and 4. The meet promises to be very fine again this year.

Mrs. William Criger has recovered through Northville Tent No. 300, E. O. T. M., $1,000 the amount of the insurance policy held in that order by her late husband. Mr. Criger's death occurred only a little over three weeks ago, and such promptness in looking after the interests of the widow and the fatherless speaks well for the order, and for the members in charge of the matter here.

Barrel salt for sale at the Northville Feed Store.

Wise is the girl whose sense of self interest prompts her to take Rocky Mountain Tea. It fills her full of vigor and there is always money in her heart for you. Murdock Bros.

One day last week it was discovered that a $50 cow belonging to L. E. Brooks had been killed by lightning either during Sunday night's storm or one of the previous ones.

The Record has just issued some very neat calendars for the Northville Woman's Club for 1902-3. The program for the year is extremely interesting and well arranged.

Mrs. E. Y. Helcomb has presented to the library sixty-eight numbers of Character Sketches, a valuable reference work containing a large number of exceptionally beautiful engravings.

The King's Daughters will hold a special business meeting at the home of Mrs. B. R. Long Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All the members are requested to be present if possible as plans for the annual fair are to be discussed.

The Modern Woodmen will give their annual excursion this year on August 5th to Bois Blanc Island. The fare will be only sixty cents round trip from Northville with 10 cents less for children. Large bills and more particulars later.

A comparatively mild variety of charcoal edified the residents of Mill street and vicinity for an hour or two one night last week, when "some of the boys" took that rather obsolete method of expressing their congratulations to a newly wedded couple down that way. No lives were lost.

J. B. Johnson of Lime Creek, Lenawee county, a brother of our Dr. Johnson, has in his cellar an oak pork barrel made in 1843, which has only been emptied twice by its contents being used up. The more than half a century old meat receptacle has only been rehopped once since it was built. Who can beat it?

Joseph Boell of this place and Miss Anna Wyman of Port Huron were married at the home of the bride's parents in that city last week Wednesday evening. They came immediately to Northville and commenced housekeeping in the Nash house on Mill street which had been previously prepared for their occupancy.

He criticised her pudding and he criticised her cake, he wished she'd make the biscuits his mother used to make; she didn't wash the dishes and she didn't make the stew, and she didn't mend the stockings as his mother used to do. Oh, well, she wasn't perfect, but she tried to do her best, until at length she thought it time for her to have a rest. So when one day this man had growled and whined the whole day through she turned him up and fanned his pants—as his mother used to do.

Will Allen of Plymouth and a Detroit man furnished the excitement for quite a crowd of Northvillians Tuesday by testing the respective merits of their 'mobiles on Buchner's hill. A wager was on as to whose mechanical horse 'n' carriage could or couldn't climb High street to the top of the hill. Allen's "beast" did the stunt without turning a hair, but its competitor had to do some desperate clawing to get up, although it finally succeeded after getting way back down town some where for a start.

Mrs. George Clark of Northside is sinking hourly and death may come at any minute.

The Baptist Missionary Society and the WCTU will meet jointly at the home of Mrs. Thrasher, Tuesday 1st at three o'clock. Mrs. J. M. Burgess will have charge of WCTU program. Mrs. VanZile of missionary program. A very cordial invitation is extended to the ladies to be present.

Don't put salt on your cement walks next winter if you don't want to poll them. Repeated warnings against the practice have been given through the newspapers, but recent investigation by Contractor Kimmel in cases where walks have chipped off shows that people in Northville have not all heeded the warnings. In every instance so far investigated it was found that salt had been used when the walks were icy.

Through the efforts of Supt. Carpenter of the water works and City Clerk Murdock, it has transpired that nearly a hundred persons have been using the privileges of the water system who have not been paying for it like the other 300 who have so religiously settled up every three months. The collection of this delinquent tax will make a difference of about $200 in the municipal receipts, thanks to the efficiency of the officials in question.

STRANGE FATALITY.

None Live of the First Born of Evert Family.

The death of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Evert of Farmington township which occurred last week is another illustration of the curious fatality which seems to be connected with the Evert family, and emphasizes anew the saying that "truth is stranger than fiction." For at least three generations the firstborn child has died in infancy, children of both sons and daughters coming under the ban which seems to hover over the family. It is not reported that any "curse" has ever been pronounced, as is always the case when such occurrences are related by the pen of the novelist, nor is there any mention of "hoodoo" influence in the strange and unfortunate coincidence, but the fact is certainly peculiar as well as sad. The death of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Evert's little babe is the latest in the list, and that of the child of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Freydl last winter made another instance in the sorrowful record. There are surely "more things in heaven and earth than we have dreamed of in our philosophy."

Wants a Village Sprinkler.

Editor Record: It would seem as if a village with a property valuation of nearly a million of dollars could afford to have a sprinkling cart. There is a fallacious impression in the minds of some citizens that the city waterworks make this unnecessary. If this were a fact then the water would be of very doubtful benefit. It is well known that about one third in ten waters the street with his hose. Some of the most travelled side streets from which the dust blows up in clouds are not even inhabited to any extent. Those who own a hose, in far too many instances, are quite willing that their neighbor should do all of their sprinkling as well as his own. It is safe to say that there is not a house in the thickly populated part of the town that is not filled with clouds of dust every day. It seems to the writer as if the comfort and health of the village demands a sprinkling cart in those parts most travelled. We have not paved streets like more pretentious cities and so long as we have dirt roads let us at least keep the dust down. Nor need this acquisition cost a great deal for two or three months of the year. The poet says, "Hitch your wagon to a star," but far more comfortable for Northvillians let us suggest that we hitch our "ice wagon" (for instance) to a sprinkling cart and make our pretty little village more attractive. If this cannot be done at the city fathers make hose owning and street sprinkling with the private hose compulsory.

The fourth quarterly conference for this year will be held next Tuesday evening at 7:30.

The pastor and Mrs. Lloyd attended the reception to Dr. Shier at the Martha Holmes Memorial church Tuesday evening. The ministers of the district and their wives were largely present and joined in congratulations to our venerable presiding elder upon reaching in health and vigor the seventieth anniversary of his birth. To emphasize their good will, the brethren handed the doctor a bag containing $86 in gold, which had been contributed by the pastors and interested laymen of the district.

Chronic Diarrhoea.

This disease is generally regarded as a curable one, but the reason that the remedies usually employed are in fact, that it can be cured, however, has been truly proven in many cases. The following tells of one of them.

Mr. T. W. Greathouse, of Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "I had been suffering from chronic diarrhoea for seven years. Last year I began taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and it has entirely cured me. I had spent lots of money for doctors' medicine in the run of seven years. If it had not been for this remedy I would have been dead now and I feel that I can never say too much in its favor or recommend it too highly." Sold by Geo. C. Hueston.

She had forty-two grandchildren, nearly 100 great-grandchildren, and six great-great-grandchildren. She lived all her days in the Stearny, and retained her faculties to the end.

A Real Friend.

I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines to no avail one of my friends persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave me immediate relief. I can eat almost anything I want now and my digestion is good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure stomach trouble by dieting. That only further weakens the system. You need wholesome strengthening food. An Omnivorous Reader.

An American minister, whilst lecturing to an assembly of young men on "The Pleasures of Literature," stated that during his boyhood he had often perused in a single day a dozen sermons, half a dozen religious magazines, together with a philosophical work running into several hundred pages, and that, moreover, he had contrived to bear in mind the salient points of his vast reading.

Leads Them All.

"One minute Cough Cure beats all coughs, colds, croup and throat and lung troubles," says D. Scott Curran of Loganton, Pa. One Minute Cough Cure is the only absolutely safe cough remedy which acts immediately. Mothers everywhere testify to the good it has done their little ones. Croup is so sudden in its attacks that the doctor often arrives too late. It yields at once to One Minute Cough Cure. Pleasant to take. Children like it. Sure for grip, bronchitis, coughs. "Well, that's partly true. I've taken the six bottles."—Chicago Tribune.

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS

BY SEWARD W. HOPKINS

Copyright, 1902, by Seward W. Hopkins.

Mme. du Barry, choking with laughter, since the affair had become so good a joke, exclusively her own, fastened some false hair to his head, first tying knots in his own to make a safe hold for the fastenings. A bonnet-completed the disguise, though gloves, a fan and other accessories were all at hand.

In point of fact Buckford, after Mme. du Barry had added a hundred feminine touches that he would never have thought of, made a younger and handsomer woman than Mme. du Barry herself and with his fairer skin looked scarcely so masculine as she did.

"And now, madame," he said, "since your friend Mme. Delatouche, who has been visiting you, is about to depart for her home in another city, you will accept her invitation to accompany her for a short stay."

"Eh? What is that, monsieur?" she faltered.

"Pardon me, there is no monsieur here. I said come home with me, madame."

"Oh, but, monsieur—I mean madame. I cannot!"

"But you must!"

"There was no mistaking the meaning in that voice. Without further remonstrance Mme. du Barry slowly began preparing for a journey that might lead her—she knew not where."

"You see, madame, I am not certain when our friends will return to this house. I do not intend to remain here, but the opportunity to betray me to Vandal."

"Curses! He had seen that smile. But still Mme. du Barry, even as she ruefully prepared to accompany him, smiled again."

They left the house, Buckford accompanying a girl that was miming enough to satisfy anybody who loved a miming girl. He was a fascinating person to Mme. du Barry, who could scarcely keep from bursting into laughter at the sight of him.

But then Mme. du Barry knew the secret. To one who did not know Buckford, or Mme. Delatouche, as he called himself, was nothing more than one of the stout, over-dressed females so common in the French or any other capital.

Buckford's first act, so he planned, would be to go direct to the hotel of the Prince of Denesla, and if that potentate had not already left Paris, tell him the entire story and ask his assistance. If the prince had departed, nothing then remained but to go to Trolle, the capital of Denesla, as quickly as possible and before the plotters reached there, if such speed could be compassed.

Buckford was about to call a cab when he made a movement that appeared ridiculous in a woman. He slapped the place over the right hand pocket in his trousers.

He had suddenly remembered that he had no money! Even that given him by Vandal was in the purse of M. de Bullion at the Palais de Justice.

"What is it, mon-madame?" asked Mme. du Barry, suppressing a strong desire to shriek.

"Madame," said Buckford, with some little show of annoyance in his tones, "I have just discovered that I came away this morning with no money. Now, it is well known that you have a bank account. Be kind enough, therefore, to come with me to the bank and draw a certain amount I shall name."

"Oh, the police have added robbery to their other virtues, it seems."

"No; this is a loan. I borrow the money, madame, and repay with interest. To refuse me, madame, will mean to walk into the Palais de Justice instead of the bank."

Madame shuddered at the mention of that place, which she fancied she had so cheaply escaped.

She groaned at the thought of losing money, but the alternative was worse. And the idea of police extortion was by no means new to her.

On the way to the bank Buckford was busy with his conscience, which had for the first time got into the affair.

"How far am I justified in going with this creature?" he was asking himself. "It is surely a dishonest act to take her money, yet if I live I can repay her, with good interest. My own life and the lives of three innocent persons and the apprehension of four rascals all depend on my having money. I must have it, and I will. If I am doing wrong, the circumstances must plead for me. And this woman is planning to betray me and is my enemy."

He smiled and continued:

"I will fight my enemies with their own weapons. I suppose both Casparin and Vandal have added to madame's wealth."

They reached the bank.

"How much, monsieur? Will a hundred francs be sufficient?"

"No, I must have a thousand."

"A thousand francs, monsieur?"

"Hush! There is a gendarme at the corner. If you do not obey me, I will have him arrest you as the accomplice of the murderers and robbers and spies against the government."

Mme. du Barry shivered and drew the money.

With the shivers of war in his possession Buckford felt stronger. He now called a cab and, remembering what Monroc had told him about the Prince of Denesla, was driven to the hotel the prince had occupied in Paris. He found the concierge in charge of an empty place.

"Madame," said the concierge in reply to Buckford's question, "M. le Comte Rockmillie left here yesterday. I believe he is now on his way to Austria or Germany. Can I aid madame in any way?"

In an hour Buckford, with the still smiling but now bewildered Mme. du Barry, was at the terminal station of the Strassburg railway, where Buckford, but half knowing whether he was right or wrong, purchased two tickets for Strassburg.

"Now, madame," he said as the train started, "we are off upon our adventures."

Mme. du Barry glanced at the gay gown her companion wore, which had been presented to her by Vandal and which could be easily recognized by him, and smiled again.

In fact, Mme. du Barry was beginning to enjoy the whole affair and considered her thousand francs very well spent indeed.

CHAPTER IX.

THE PRINCE OF DENESLA.

THE scene of the plot we have pictured lies in Denesla. Instead of Paris it is doubtful if the brother of the ruling prince would have openly associated with creatures so low in the human scale as Vandal, Reber and Robello.

But Casparin was in Paris. His relationship to the noble prince was unknown except to the few rascals he had employed to do his work, and his own tastes were so near like those of Vandal and his associates that he found it not only convenient, but a source of pleasure, to be with them in their orgies as well as in their serious plottings.

It was therefore a quartet well pleased with its own component parts that rolled toward the house of Mme. du Barry that evening after they had enjoyed the treat promised by Casparin.

Of the four Casparin was the nearest sober. Reber and Robello, never having had the money to indulge in such rolistering as Vandal lived in and Casparin loved, were the drunkest. Between them Vandal maintained a drunken, owl-like solemnity of countenance which would have been comical if the countenance had been intellectual. As it was, it was merely beastly.

"For one I am tired out," grumbled Reber, staggering up against Vandal and cursing him for not walking straight. "I am going to bed."

"Not quite yet," replied Vandal. "Do you forget the job we have on hand tonight? The body of the American must be got rid of."

"Yes," said Casparin. "That is why I came home with you. I must see that disposed of. We must have no bad breaks now. My brother is gone, and we must start within a few days."

"The sooner the better," said Vandal. "I shall not be sorry to earn that reward."

"Nor I!" "Nor I!" added Reber and Robello.

"I have been thinking about that fellow up stairs there," said Casparin. "The police now have convinced themselves—brilliant police—that the American who escaped from the Palais de Justice murdered the American who helped him out. A little study would show them how absurd that theory is, but we are fortunate in having police to deal with who do not study. But now, if they find the body of this American in the same place as the other—or if they find it at all—what will be the result? They will know at once that both Americans have fallen among those who wished them out of the way. We do not wish to court an investigation now. We must hide that fellow where he will not be found."

"As to that, we might have done it before," said Vandal. "We can bury him in the cellar. But you had other plans."

"Yes, I know I did. I thought it would puzzle the police in a different way. I did not think they would prove so stupid as they seem now. It is better to leave them in their stupid error than to stir the mess all up again."

"I agree," said Vandal.

"I agree!" "I agree!" said Reber and Robello.

This delightful quartet reached the house of Mme. du Barry and stood outside looking stupidly—at least all but Casparin, who knew little of the place—at the windows, which were darkened, but which were usually ablaze with light till nearly morning.

"What is wrong here?" muttered Vandal. "Mme. du Barry must be ill. The house looks like a funeral!"

"It will be a place of a funeral soon," chuckled Reber. "That chap I found on the bridge! Ho, ho! He didn't know what was good for him. But, after all, what is the difference between the cellar of madame's house and the Seine?"

"Yes, what?" added Robello.

"Shut up," said Vandal roughly. "I tell you I don't like this. It means something."

Vandal, being a favorite of madame's and having use for her convenient house sometimes when she was out, carried a key. He opened the door. The hall was dimly lighted. A servant sat nodding in the hall.

"Hello, Francois! What is this? Where is madame?" asked Vandal.

Francois looked up sleepily.

"I don't know, monsieur," he said. "I have not seen madame since she went this morning to lie down with her headache. She is out, so much I know, for the cook, who was coming from the markets, saw her leave the house."

"And did she leave no word with any one?"

"Not a word, monsieur."

"That is strange. Well, sit up for madame. We are going up stairs. In a short time you may hear us moving about. We may even bring our own wine from the cellar. There will be no need of attending us. Do you understand?"

"I understand, monsieur."

Francois did more than understand. He rejoiced, for he was sleepy.

The four passed on up stairs. They entered the room in which they had held the conference overheard by Buckford.

"Get a light, Reber, while I unlock this door," said Vandal.

"Poof!" muttered Reber, moving about slowly to obey. "It is time we got that thing out of there. Poof! And it is not so very hot either."

"Yes, it is high time," said Robello. Reber having found a lamp and lighted it, Vandal took his key from his pocket and opened the door. He stepped in with the lamp. The others followed him.

Vandal stood with the lamp raised above his head. The other three stood grouped around him gazing stupidly at him and at each other. Casparin was the first to recover his speech.

"There is something wrong here!" he said. "Some one has removed the body."

"Impossible!" blurted out Vandal. "None but Reber and myself have the key."

"You are surely mistaken. The door was locked. Look! Has it been unlocked with?"

Vandal banded the lamp to Reber and examined the door and lock.

"It is in order," he said. "I do not understand this—I swear I do not."

"Some one certainly has access to this room," said Casparin. "You told me you two held the keys."

"And so—this is the truth. I myself had a partition placed here I put on that lock with my own hands. There were two keys with the lock, and I gave one to Reber. As I live these are the only keys that will unlock this door."

"Then account for this mystery. We left a dead man locked in here. He is gone, and yet you alone could open the door."

"And we thought he was getting—ho, the window is open!" said Reber. "It was not so this morning."

"That is a still greater mystery!" said Vandal. "The window was locked on the inside. Some one has managed to come up and get it open and take out the American."

Casparin laughed—a long, low, hissing laugh of anger and derision.

"I am beside myself with delight," he said. "I came from Denesla to find men who were quick and shrewd in planning. I thought the French could excel in that. Why, we have plow men in Denesla who are better."

"What do you think, then?" asked Vandal.

"What do I think? My God! Are you still in the dark? What do I think? I know. The man you left in here was not dead. He recovered consciousness, climbed out of that window and made his escape. We now have him against us and at liberty. We might better have left him in the Palais de Justice. There was no certainty he would be believed."

"He must have escaped," said Vandal, having a thought only for the disaster.

"He must have escaped. Yes, he must surely have gone out of the window," said Reber and Robello.

"And of course since you are so wise, you gentlemen," said Casparin, "you can associate his escape and the disappearance of your Mme. du Barry with each other."

"No, no! Surely not!" said Vandal.

"Surely yes! Was her room not under this?"

"Her room is there."

"Her room no longer, my friend. I fear you will find the lady dead in her room. It was not Mme. du Barry the cook saw leaving, but the American dressed in madame's clothes."

At this a horrified cry came from Vandal, and he rushed for the door. He led the way and the others followed him to the floor below. The door of madame's room was not locked. Vandal entered, expecting to see a most ghastly sight.

He saw nothing but a bed, slightly rumpled, and articles of female clothing lying about.

"I own my mistake," said Casparin with a laugh. "The American has not killed madame. He has eloped with her."

Vandal cursed roundly and well. Reber and Robello shivered.

Mme. du Barry knew their secrets. Not a crime had been committed by either of them in years that Mme. du Barry did not know. And now she had gone with their foe—the American.

"We will follow them! I will kill them both!" cried Vandal.

"Take my advice and go to bed," said Casparin. "We can do nothing before daylight. There is nothing to fear at once, for the American will not give himself up to the police before he ascertains what fate they have in store for him. A reward of 5,000 francs is offered for his apprehension."

Reber slapped his leg.

"Good! It was worth 5,000 francs to us for him to escape. We will run him down and earn the reward."

"My friend, you are quick to think, but you invariably think the wrong thing. We shall do nothing of the kind. We will run him down, but the police shall never see him."

"Oh, as to that, you are able to pay the 5,000 francs."

"And will. Now get some rest. We must be early astr."

They obeyed him, and early in the morning they were ready and eager for the chase.

It proved to be far from difficult to trace Mme. du Barry. She was well known in that quarter.

It was soon learned by persistent questioning on the part of Vandal that Mme. du Barry, in company with another woman, "beautifully dressed," had been seen on the street. No one knew the other woman.

Bit by bit they traced madame, and finally the clew led to the bank.

"It is surely an elopement," said Vandal. "She has drawn her money."

"Then they are on the way to America," said Reber.

The trail ended at the bank. It was in a quarter where no one knew Mme. du Barry. They returned to the house much discouraged. It was imperative that the American be found before he had time to warn the Prince of Denesla of the plot against him.

At the house they found a telegram from Mme. du Barry at Strassburg. It was addressed to Vandal:

"I am in Strassburg without money. Have been the victim of a police agent."

"What mystery is this?" demanded Casparin. "Have the police regained possession of the American? He may be dead, after all. Come, things may not be so bad. We must go to Strassburg."

"To Strassburg? Why not send money to madame to return?"

"Such would be the thing if we were certain the man was dead. But we are in doubt. If he is alive, as indeed seems probable, he is either in the hands of the police or in Strassburg with madame. In the first instance we must take ourselves out of Paris at once, and, in the second, we must get to Strassburg as soon as possible. You see we kill two birds with one stone. We must go to Strassburg."

The four were soon in a train bound for Strassburg. Vandal had the telegram from madame. It bore the name of no hotel. It had been sent from the railway station.

Having reached Strassburg they went no farther than the station to begin their search.

They found madame asleep on one of the benches with two fatigued employees angrily ordering her to sit up or they would call the police.

She opened her eyes, saw Vandal and leaped to her feet with a very like that of a tigress.

"Oh! Ah! You have come, then?" she said. "Have you brought knives and pistols to kill a beast? Well, that is what you must do. I have sat here since last evening. I am nearly dead with loss of sleep and my awful hunger. For the love of the good God, get me something to eat."

Vandal obediently took her to the cafe, and she attacked her meal with the eagerness of the famishing.

"And now," said Casparin, "while you are eating, madame, please tell us what happened to you, and why an agent of police brought you here."

"Bah! Those police! I was asleep in my room. I woke to find a young man there. He ordered me to be quiet. He said he was an agent of police in search of a prisoner. He declared he had searched my house and was assured the prisoner was gone. I knew he had not found that little room upstairs where the prisoner was. Well, he then had other fish to fry. He was after some spies against the government. You were one, Vandal, you, my highness, were another. He commanded me to obey, and threatened to take me to the Palais de Justice. You all know whether that would be agreeable. I obeyed. He made me dress him as a woman. Oh, I laughed when I disguised him! I gave him that fine silk gown you gave me, Vandal—that one with the flowers on it. Well, you will know that madame when you meet her. She has on that gown. Then we went to the bank. I drew a thousand francs, and he took it all. We came to Strassburg, and here I am. Where the agent of police is I do not know. When we arrived here, he told me to remain here while he went to engage a carriage. That was the last I saw of him or my thousand francs."

Reber and Robello gazed wondering at Vandal looked at Casparin for the solution of this great mystery.

"My friend, you have been badly sold," said the prince. "The supposed agent of police was no other than our prisoner. He climbed from his room upstairs. He assumed the role of police to frighten you into obedience. He had no money, of course, just coming from the Palais de Justice. You kindly accommodated him with a thousand francs."

WABASH

Follow The Flag.

The quickest way to get from Northville to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, New York and Boston, is via the Wabash, the Banner Route, the pathway of the Continental Limited, which has a record for speed and equipment which is unexcelled. When traveling east, see that your ticket reads Pere Marquette and Wabash.

Suburban News.

J. Hamilton of Plymouth invested in an automobile last week, the first horseless carriage except the two-wheeled ones—to be owned in that village.

The Orion Review remarks that some "feller" out there tracted his wrist while doing a "polp" vault. Seems "if that kind of a vault would have been more likely to break his head.

Even a Birmingham cat has apparently only one life when lightning hits her. A house out there was struck during one of the recent storms and the family cat killed too dead even for fiddle strings.

A Wayne woman was quite badly poisoned by pulling weeds, which ought to be a warning to some of the other women of this day and generation who are so fond of usurping the natural prerogatives of the "male sex."

The state board of health held its fifty-first convention at Pontiac last week and every last microbe out that way is nearly scared to death or else completely discouraged. In fact you can't even find one without a microscope.

They haven't struck the yet down at Carleton but that's not what they won't. Prospecting for the illuminating fluid is being tried on down there and a "pusher" should open to be tapped it would prove that the search was a bright idea, although it causes light smoke now.

Cadillac evidently is so crowded with who deserve to be compelled with the paid according to the Appliance Association's plan to be paid for the use of the Cadillac. The Cadillac is a very good car and it is not likely to be a failure in the long run.

The Farmington notice announced that the regular advertising rates of the Farmington will be put in effect after making their initial appearance in the paper in the new of news. And there'll be lots of folks who won't even think the editor for that much advertising but will kick because he doesn't follow the first good turn with the proverbial second.

Mrs. Hanna, a stenographer of Pontiac went out to Oxford to take some court notes the other day and as a little side line in connection with legal affairs she grabbed a fleeing burglar who was running through the back yard at her boarding place and held on to him until the pursuing deputy sheriff, from whom he had broken away, came up. Mrs. Hanna evidently didn't use her short hand that time, though the effort may have been short-handed when he let the fellow escape. The lady will be made a deputy sheriff.

The Wayne Review actually has the nerve to stand sponsor for the truth of the following snake story. An improvement on the usually unbelievable snake story. "Harry Hill man and a Wayne ditto—to give a brief synopsis of the tale went to a drive in the country. They got thirty and stopped at a wayside well for a drink. For some unexplained reason the Cherry Hill man's teeth were lying on the grass, when suddenly a huge copper colored snake glided out of the bushes, swallowed the berries and as silently stole away. The horse ran away too, and so did the men. Now the toothless Cherry Hill man offers $5 reward to any one who shall find that snake and make it cough up. Before any ambitious snake catcher begins scouring the woods and interviewing tea-toot copper colored serpents that look as though they had an undue allowance of teeth he had better ponder the fact that the man had not been to Wayne. This might possibly account for the thirst the teeth bring on the grass and the snake. The enter must account for himself as well as the probability that at least 99 per cent will remain that the yarn is tooth in anyway.

Coroners in Baltimore.

Coroners in Baltimore are appointed by the governor for a term of two years. There are seven coroners in Baltimore, all of them physicians and all having separate districts of their own.

Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels mean a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such symptoms. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. Never gripe. "I have taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver ever since spring for years," writes R. M. Dwyer, Moundsville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried." NEARING THE END.

The Bliss-Stearns Contest Proving Easy For the Governor.

(Detroit, Mich., June 25.—The Bliss managers in Detroit fully made good their claim that they would carry the city in yesterday's primaries, electing 53 out of 121 delegates to the county convention, and these, with those elected in the townships, leaves no doubt as to who will get Wayne county.

The hotels were well filled with the advance guard to the Republican state convention last night. Governor and Mrs. Bliss and Secretary Major Johnson being among the arrivals. The various delegations will come in during the day, and it is thought the actual work of the convention will be brief, as there is no chance for more than one ballot for governor, and the only contests will be for attorney-general and lieutenant-governor. The estimate given out at Bliss headquarters show that he will receive over 800 votes on the first ballot.

At the Cadillac last night the Stearns men still maintain that many of the delegates credited to Bliss would not vote for him, but they mostly admitted that the Ludington man stood little danger of having lightning strike him. Their strongest hope is that they may, with what delegates they can control, start a stampede for a dark horse. It was noticeable that the hesitating ones, however, were moving over to the Russell house, where the enthusiastic Bliss crowd were, and the prospects of a hot convention like that of two and four years ago seems to have vanished.

LEAGUE OF MUNICIPALITIES.

Annual Meeting at Owosso Two Days This Week.

An important duty of the league will be to decide on admitting villages and ex-city officials. To do this would necessitate changing the constitution, but there is understood to be a considerable sentiment in favor of it.

Hit the Barber Law.

Lansing Mich., June 25.—In granting a mandamus in the case of Arthur G. Templar vs. the State Board of Examiners of Barbers the supreme court knocked a chunk out of the barbers' examining law. Templar's application for examination was denied on the ground that he is an alien, and the question presented to the court was whether the provision of the act which requires an applicant to be a citizen of the United States is valid. The court says relative to business is in no way injurious to the morals, the health or even the convenience of the community, provided only he has the requisite knowledge upon the subject prescribed by the legislature.

Teamsters Make a Demand.

Chicago, June 25.—A labor demand of far-reaching importance was agreed on Tuesday, when the National Teamsters' union and the Local Freight Handlers' union came to an understanding between themselves and prepared to submit an ultimatum to all the railroads entering Chicago. They will demand that after Thursday no union teamster deliver freight to a non-union freight handler, also that no union freight handler deliver freight to a non-union driver or accept the same from him. The demand will involve every railroad with a freight house in Chicago.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Bill Will Aid West.

James J. Hill, the railway magnate, speaking for the Northern Pacific-Burlington combination, said to a prominent citizen of Omaha the other day that it was his intention to cut rates on lumber from the northwest to such low figures that lumber rates in the Missouri river cities would take a fall. He indicated that such rates would be made as could drive the northern and southern lumber out of western markets. He said:

"A short time ago when I visited the lumber fields of Washington and Oregon I called the lumbermen together and offered to haul their lumber to Missouri river companies for 40 and 50 cents. Since I came back and have given the matter closer attention I find I can assure the lumbermen of the northwest even a lower rate than the one quoted, and this will be done."

—JAMES J. HILL.

Yes, we will have something to say about the lumber business in the near future, and the consumers will not be the ones to suffer if anything that will be brought about. Of course, I want to be able to haul lumber from the northwest to the east, and I don't think lumber can be hauled on earth as we haul it. It is true we have other freight west but we cannot afford to run our trains back empty."

Ollie Doesn't Speculate.

In the column of 21 Broadway writes Victor Smith in the New York Press, some one pointed out a handsome young man as the confidential secretary of Mr. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation. I recognized Ollie Wren. He cannot be over twenty-eight. Ten years ago he was a typewriter and private secretary to his uncle, Harry Miner, theatrical manager, etc. His wages were $15 a week, without prospects. An opening appeared in the New York office of the Carnegie company and after much hesitation Ollie left Miner. When the Carnegie company was absorbed by the steel corporation and Mr. Schwab became the active head of the trust he re-engaged Ollie as his clerical auxiliary. Not long after things got settled down the man who did not break the bank at Monte Carlo said:

"Ollie, do you speculate?" "I do not," replied Wren. "That's right, I'm glad you do not," Schwab went on. "You will find many opportunities in this business to speculate, but let that game alone, and I'll take care of you. Attend faithfully to your duties, and I will make you a rich man." Ollie Wren's first year with Mr. Schwab brought him $10,000.

result of several years of study and experimenting, will keep living rooms at a temperature of 70 to 72 degrees in the hottest weather. The cost of the machine will be so small that it will be within the reach of nearly all, so that the horrors of sweltering in stuffy rooms of the city during midsummer will be materially lessened. The apparatus is so simple that any one can manipulate it, and it can be quickly removed from room to room.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only cure for catarrh on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Interesting to Asthma Sufferers.

Daniel Bante, of Ottumwa, Iowa, writes: "I have had asthma for three or four years and have tried about all the cough and asthma cures in the market and have received treatment from physicians in New York and other cities, but got very little benefit until I tried Foley's Honey and Tar which gave me immediate relief and I will never be without it in my house. The Old Way.

Those who have found the task of filling a fountain pen a potent aid to profanity will enjoy the answer which a Massachusetts woman returned to the question, "What is the best way to fill a fountain pen?" "There is only one trustworthy way," said she. "You must fill your bathtub with ink and then get into it with the pen which you desire to fill."

Virulent Cancer Cured.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters which completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel biliousness and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. "One Is Quick to Suspect Where One Has Suffered Harm Before."

Perhaps there are some business men in this town who have tried advertising and found the results unsatisfactory.

If so, something was the trouble. Contracting for space in a newspaper is not enough. When secured the space must be used to advantage. A convincing story should be told. A plant will not grow unless it is tended. An impression cannot be made upon the purchaser's public except by careful, persistent work.

Many merchants are grievously in believing that time spent upon their ads is time wasted. No time can be made more profitable.

We believe the advertising columns of this paper can be used profitably by any one who seeks to reach the buyers of this community. We will gladly aid any one who desires to try it or who is trying it and is not satisfied.
