Nobility Recommends Nervine.

The above portrait is that of Countess Mogelstod, of Chicago, Ill., whose gratitude for the benefit received from the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine, prompted her to make this statement:

"It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony to the very excellent merits of Dr. Miles' Nervine. Although I am past 50 years of age I find it soothes the tired brain, quiets the irritated nerves and restores restful sleep. I never feel contented without a bottle of it in the house." Gratefully yours,
CHRISTIANA MARIA

Members of Congress and Senators.

"Fifty years ago members of congress and of the senate would have been compelled by public opinion to wear craps on their arms for thirty days after the death of a president," remarked an ex member who had served before the civil war.

"Up to about 1850 whenever a member of congress died the resolution of sympathy with his family invariably carried with it a provision that members should wear mourning. Deaths of members were of course less frequent, for the congressional body was numerically smaller. Indeed, the increase of the membership, which led naturally to a higher death rate, was the direct cause of abolishing the custom."

"A number of members of congress now die every year, and it was not thought advisable to keep members of the house and senate in practically perpetual mourning."

A Northville Michigan Governor.

Mr. Allen is a Northville man of stores, and in his business is a gasoline burner around the country. In his wagon the burner was transacting business the other day in a legitimate manner while the proprietor was attending to some repairs in a rural neighborhood. Flies were also transacting business with the horse, and so pestered him that he started up with a jerk, and the burner not expecting anything of the kind, was upset. Then there sprang up a lively business. A dog with a bunch of the Fourth of July tied to his tail, makes some show, but it is principally noise. In this there was a big snow and little noise. It was also "a fleeting show" for as soon as the horse discovered what was going on behind him he let out his joints all round, and left the neighborhood with the blazing wagon a close second. The horse did not pause to reason, and put in his level best till his bellows becoming exhausted his speed slackened and he was eventually caught by a courageous young lad, Miss Millie Wilkinson. There were no flies on the animal when brought to a stop. The damage to the wagon was about $35 and the horse's tail also suffered some.—Detroit Tribune

THOUSAND DELEGATES

EXPECTED TO ATTEND THE C. E.
CONVENTION AT LUDINGTON.

HOMES ARE THROWN OPEN TO THE VISITORS.

REV. B. H. BURTT MALE WELL-
COME ADDRESS.

Ludington, Mich., July 23.—The Christian Endeavorers of Michigan took possession of Ludington Tuesday, 500 strong, and before the big four days' convention closes it is expected that there will be nearly 1,000 delegates in attendance. The advance guard of this army of Christian workers arrived Monday night, consisting of twenty-five delegates from Traverse City, Cadillac and other northern towns.

In securing this state convention of the Michigan Christian Endeavor, Ludington pledged itself to furnish free entertainment for 1,000 delegates, and now the city is redeeming its obligation nobly. Homes are thrown open almost without reserve for visiting delegates and every effort is being made by the local committee to entertain the visitors royally.

All the exercises of the convention, which will last four days, will be held at the Auditorium at Epworth Heights. This immense building was filled to the door last night when Rev. B. H. Burtt of this city delivered a hearty address of welcome. It was responded to by the state president of the Michigan Christian Endeavor, Rev. F. J. Arthur, of Grand Rapids. A splendid inspirational address was also made by Rev. E. B. Allen of Toledo, O., his subject being, "This one thing I do."

Today's program starts off with a morning watch on the summit of Mt. Epworth at 8 o'clock, led by Rev. C. B. Newman of Detroit. During the day nine meetings will be held. All conditions are favorable to a big and successful convention, and it now looks as though Ludington 1902 would surpass any event in the history of the society.

Justice S. Stearns is prepared to do his share of the entertaining and he sides opening several cottages at Epworth for lodgings, will board their thirty or more occupants at the Hotel Epworth free of expense.

Accidents at Petoskey, Brighton and Cadillac Cause Deaths.

Petoskey, Mich., July 23.—John Blanch was run over and killed and his companion, George Newman, was fatally hurt by a G. R. & I. suburban train Monday night. The accident occurred near headman's crossing, at Bat View not far from where the deadly locomotive has claimed a victim or two every summer for years in this case, however, no blame is attached to the railroad. The men were walking on one track and stopping aside to avoid the regular train walking in front of the suburban. Blanch was instantly killed.

Brighton, Mich., July 23.—Private Joseph Desnoine of Company E, Fourteenth United States Infantry was killed near the camp at Island Lake Tuesday by an eastbound freight. He was twenty-one years old and enlisted at Leavenworth, Kan.

Cadillac, Mich., July 23.—H. A. Rogers was struck by an Ann Arbor passenger train Tuesday at Cornish and killed. He was walking on the track and did not hear the train.

How Cleanliness.

They wash, the hoters, says one of the fraternity who talks very frankly about his friends in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for May, they bathe frequently and boil their "rags." CONGRESSMAN CROWLEY

Uses Pe-ru-na in His Family For Catarrhal and Nervous Affections.

CONGRESSMAN
J. B. CROWLEY.

Hon. Joseph B. Crowley, Congressman from Illinois, writes from Robinson, Ill., the following praise for the great catarrhal tonic, Peruna. Congressman Crowley says:

"After giving Peruna a fair trial I can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone suffering with coughs, colds and la grippe, and all catarrhal complaints.

"Mrs. Crowley has taken a number of bottles of Peruna on account of nervous troubles. It has proven a strong tonic and lasting cure. I can cheerfully recommend it."—J. B. CROWLEY.

No other remedy invented by man has ever received as much praise from men of high station as Peruna. Over forty members of Congress have tried it and recommended it to suffering humanity. They use it themselves to guard against the effects of the influenza of public life; to ward off the ill effects of the changeable climate of Washington. They keep it in their homes for family use. They recommend it to their neighbors, and they do not hesitate in public print to declare their appreciation and endorsement of this greatest of modern remedies.

It is exactly as Congressman Crowley says: "Peruna is a swift and sure remedy for coughs, colds and la grippe and all catarrhal complaints. It is an excellent remedy in all nervous troubles. It never fails to prove itself a powerful tonic and a lasting cure." This is what Congressman Crowley says, and this is what thousands of other people are saying all over the United States.

Congressman Romulus Z. Lunney from Taylorsville, N. C., writes "My secretary had as bad a case of catarrh as I ever saw, and since he has taken one bottle of Peruna he seems like a different man."—Romulus Z. Lunney.

Congressman A. T. Goodwyn, Robinson Springs, Ala., writes: "I have now used one bottle of Peruna and am a well man today."—A. T. Goodwyn.

U. S. Senator W. N. Roach from Laramie, N. D., writes: "I have used Peruna as a tonic. It has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite."

Congressman H. W. Ogden from Benton, La., writes: "I can conscientiously recommend your Peruna."—H. W. Ogden.

Congressman H. W. Smith from Murphysboro, Ill., writes: "I have taken one bottle of Peruna for my catarrh and I feel very much benefited."—Geo. W. Smith.

Congressman David Meekison from Napoleon, O., writes: "I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head."—David Meekison.

Senator Mallory, of Pensacola, Fla., writes: "I have used your excellent remedy, Peruna, and have recommended it both as a tonic and a safe catarrh remedy."—Stephen R. Mallory.

Senator M. C. Butler, ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes: "I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble."—M. C. Butler.

Senator W. V. Sullivan from Oxford, Miss., writes: "I take pleasure in recommending your great national catarrh cure, Peruna, as the best I have ever used."—W. V. Sullivan.

Senator J. M. Thurston from Omaha, Neb., writes: "Peruna entirely relieved me of a very irritating cough."—J. M. Thurston.

Congressman H. G. Worthington from Nevada, writes: "I have taken one bottle of Peruna and it has benefited me immensely."—H. G. Worthington.

Congressman Howard from Ft. Payne, Ala., writes: "I have taken Peruna for la grippe, and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy."—M. W. Howard.

Congressman Willis Brewer from Haynesville, Ala., writes: "I have used one bottle of Peruna for lassitude, and I take pleasure in recommending it."—Willis Brewer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

THE TABLE

A Northville DIVISION

Mr. Allen is a Northville man of 50 years, and in his business, a gasoline burner around the corner in his wagon. The burner was transacting business the other day in a legitimate manner while the proprietor was attending to some repairs in a rural neighborhood. Flies were also transacting business with the horse and so pestered him that he started up with a jerk, and the burner expecting anything of the kind, was upset. Then there sprang up a lively business. A dog with a bunch of the Fourth of July tied to his tail, makes some show, but it is principally noise. In this there was a big show and little noise. It was also a "fleeing show" for as soon as the horse discovered what was going on behind him he let out his joints all round, and left the neighborhood with the blazing wagon a close second. The horse did not pause to reason, and put in his level best till his bellows becoming exhausted his speed slackened and he was eventually caught by a courageous young lady, Miss Millie Wilkinson. There were no flies on the animal when brought to a stop. The damage to the wagon was about $35 and the horse's tail also suffered some.—Detroit Tribune

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS

BY SEWARD W. HOPKINS

Copyright, 1902, by Seward W. Hopkins.

"Well, I'm done!" he growled, half inclined to curse and yet feeling amused at the manner in which the clever girl had outwitted him. "Well, the girl is out for a lark. Who will be worse for it? Not Casparin, for she owes him nothing. I will keep my own counsel on this matter and not be a laughing stock to my companions. But I must get my horse."

His horse had slackened pace, and in 15 minutes he had recovered the animal. But in that 15 minutes where was Adria? The black mare had thundered down the road to a bridge over the ravine. Thus she crossed, struck into the road to Ontonagon and went like the wind to meet and save her prince and one who was more than her prince—her lover.

No one staid her, but still the mare sped on. It was, so Adria thought, a race against time. At any moment the train bearing the prince and his family might enter Ontonagon, and who knew what miscreants were lying in wait for them there?

She reached Ontonagon without mishap. The ruins of Robard's inn caused her but a moment's thought, but she smiled once as she thought of how that brave American made his escape from the murderous premises.

At the railroad station she learned that the train was even then due. In the now deserted stable of Robard's inn she hid her horse and waited.

The train came thundering into the station. Even as it came the trumpets of Casparin's cavalcade could be heard in the distance.

The first person to step from the train was Bosso Duvally. The first person Duvally saw was Adria Volner. "Adria!" he cried. "Are you the first to greet the prince?"

"Listen! We have no time for compliments. The life of the prince is in danger!"

"Adria!" he cried. "Are you the first to greet the prince?"

"Adria!" he cried. "Are you the first to greet the prince?"

"Adria!" he cried. "Are you the first to greet the prince?"

"Adria!" he cried. "Are you the first to greet the prince?"

prince, with a laugh, "get with a voice of firmness. 'I do not wish to turn the parade into a funeral march. When you carry me to the tomb, walk my horse at the head. But I'll have none of it here.'"

There was a slight hesitation in Casparin's manner, then, with a smile, he mounted the gayly harnessed horse.

The procession set off from Ontonagon, with Casparin leading.

"It cannot be true, Duvally," said the prince in a whisper.

"It is true," said Duvally. "I will bring your intended assassins before you today."

After a mile or two had been traveled, the populace gathered from afar to witness the return of their beloved prince, Casparin was seen by the watchful Duvally to scribble something stealthily on a paper and turn to one of his faithful retainers at his side.

"Ride on ahead," was what Casparin whispered. "You will find at the edge of the Green forest, a short distance before you reach the castle, three men who are waiting to give the prince a welcome. Ask for Vandal and give him this."

The courier rode off.

"I have sent ahead to give orders to have the lights at the castle ready," said Casparin to his brother.

Duvally had fallen to the rear, where his own faithful fellows were riding. He selected four of them.

"Leave the road for a short distance," he said, "and get to the front. Follow that courier of Casparin's. He will speak to some one between here and Casparin's castle and will deliver a note. Listen, my dear fellows, be alert, costs, and save the note. Obey this with your best skill, for the lives of all in that carriage are in danger."

Duvally was at the side of the carriage again as if nothing had happened, or was expected to happen. And that evening the procession reached Casparin's castle without incident.

Adria had ridden home on the black mare in the rear of the royal procession.

"It is done," she said to her anxious parents. "I told the prince, and Bosso is in command."

That night Casparin gave a feast. The great dining hall of the castle was ablaze with light and rung with the voices of good cheer. The prince sat at the end of a table, with Casparin near him.

Duvally, whose eye was everywhere at once, stood near his royal master. A messenger came to him. He heard what was to be said and then whispered to the prince. A nod was his reply.

Duvally gave two commands. In response to these a door opened, and a squad entered. At the same moment two soldiers with drawn swords stepped to the side of Casparin.

"Traitor!" was the word breathed by Duvally as he looked down on the white-faced Casparin.

Four men were brought in. One was Casparin's messenger. The other three, in rags, were Vandal, Reber and Robello.

Duvally handed a note to the prince. It read as follows:

"Be careful! It is not the prince, but myself, who is riding the gay horse. The prince rides in the carriage with the princesses."

A stern look passed from the prince to his brother.

"Casparin," he said, "you have chosen. Then, turning to his faithful officer, he said:

"Duvally, the prisoners are yours."

CHAPTER XIII

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS.

CASPARIN was taken to a dungeon in the castle and the next day stripped of all he possessed and sent, a wanderer, out of his own country. The brand was on him, and no man lent him assistance. He ended his days in a gambling hell in Paris.

and brave, but having nothing. At least so he told my father."

"This brave fellow shall be properly cared for and rewarded," said Princess Margaret. "We ought to visit him. The prince tells me you have nursed him to life after a serious accident."

Adria looked out through a large window and studied the trees of the "pleidid park." A smile, mingled with a look of anxiety, showed on her face.

"I have nursed him, your highness," she said. "But he is very weak and needs care. I do not know what to do—what to tell Bosso. He is so impatient."

"Well, I declare!" exclaimed Princess Marie, with a laugh. "You get from the subject of this American to Bosso very readily. Has that imperative captain commanded you to cease your attentions to the American?"

"No; oh, no! Bosso is not jealous. But he—he—your highnesses, I promised him before he went to Paris in your train that as soon as he returned I would become his wife. It seems now that the prince has given him an estate some distance from here, and he is eager to have our wedding and go there for our honeymoon."

"Well, that is romantic and just as it should be," said Princess Margaret. "Nothing could be prettier. If you promised Duvally, you must keep your promise."

Adria blushed and stammered.

"That—that is what I want to do," she said. "But who will take care of the American?"

"I will see to it," said Princess Margaret, "that your place is filled. We cannot, of course, hope to give this American so sweet a nurse as you, but we will do the best we can."

"Yes," murmured Princess Marie. "Two days have already elapsed. We are ungrateful."

Adria went home to prepare for her wedding with Duvally. And that same evening there was another conversation in the apartment of Princess Margaret.

"I am so anxious about this matter," Margaret herself was saying. "Charles has been to visit our brave American and says he is very handsome. He needs considerable care. I do not like this mad project. If I do, I admit, show no more than the gratitude we should feel. But there are possible complications which might injure—"

A pral of laughter interrupted her.

"And do you think, then," asked Princess Marie, "that I am such a mad cap as to bring reproach upon our name?"

"Can I not be trusted in the house of our most faithful friends, Volner and his wife? What terrible fate are you predicting?"

"No fate more terrible than an unhappy attachment. These things—"

"These fiddlesticks!" laughed Marie. "Who is there to send, then? No one we can trust. I shall go."

"Well, you always have your way, and Charles will uphold you if you declare your intention of visiting the moon. Go if you will, but let me make the first visit with you."

"No!" cried Marie. "You, with your straightforward American, will spoil the whole thing. Let me go alone. You must come, if you come at all, as our princess. Upon me no such obligation rests. I am Adria's cousin, a very experienced nurse."

Princess Margaret shook her head, having had premonitions of evil. But Marie laughed and danced away.

Adria found time to care for Buck, her own white horse, who was being made. Wallace did not improve as rapidly as had been expected. He fretted a good deal at being a burden upon his host. But Volner silenced that. Prince Charles came often and one day brought his wife, who graciously thanked Wallace and begged that as soon as he was able he would become their guest at the castle.

But, alas, it would be some time before he could do that.

Then one day Adria, blushing and stammering, seeming to have almost lost control of her tongue, entered his room, leading a girl about her own age, clad in plain but most becoming garments and wearing a small Parisian cap which might easily be a nurse's cap.

"My Wallace," said Adria, "I am sorry to tell you that I must leave you for a time. Tomorrow is my wedding day. The prince and princesses have graciously requested that the ceremony be performed at the castle."

Wallace smiled and held out his hand. "I am glad," he said. "I, of course, shall lose a tender and faithful nurse, but I must not be selfish. Duvally deserves his bride."

"And you will not feel the loss," said Adria, with an effort to be serene. "This is my cousin Elsa, an experienced nurse from Trolle. In my absence she will do what I have done or more."

Wallace looked up into the demure face of the nurse from Trolle and thought it a sweet and sympathetic face.

"I have heard your story, Wallace," she said in a low, sweet voice. "The people at the castle have reason to be very grateful to you. They have visited you, of course."

"I did nothing that any one else might not have done," said Wallace. "Yes, they have been here to see me and are very kind—that is, the prince and his American princess have been. The one I wished most to see has not been."

"Some one you knew?" asked the new nurse sympathetically.

"No, not that. I don't like to hear words of gratitude. I just wanted to see her and talk with her as with any ordinary person."

Elsa smiled. "You may not have that pleasure," she said. "Princesses are at liberty to shall write to Charles tonight."

The letter which Marie wrote to the castle did not surprise her brother in the least. He had feared some such result of the madcap scheme of his sister by which she wished to show her gratitude toward the brave American. He had taken time by the forelock and had called long inquiries to his representative in America. In reply he received a short cable message and a letter following. So it happened that Prince Charles, two days after he got the note from Marie, walked into Volner's house, carrying a large official-looking epistle.

"I have come to offer my congratulations," he said. "Not to one, but both. This affair promised something like this, and I took the liberty to inquire as to the standing of M. Wallace. In reply I get word that he is in every sense a gentleman. Not only that, but he has been searched for all over the earth—except in Denesha. It seems his uncle has died, leaving him heir to a vast American fortune. Marie, your prank has been providential in its fortunate ending. God bless both of you, wherever you may have your home. If in Denesha, a palace and park shall be yours. And I make it my only condition to your wedding that at least five months in the year you live at Trolle."

He shook Buckford's hand, kissed Marie and strode out.

"Marie—princess—my love, my love," began Wallace. "How can I?"

"Tut! You are no longer poor. If I who must beg for you are now the great M. Wallace. Shall I take back my words?"

No answer was needed. He held out both his hands, and she took them.

"Did you ever?" said Volner's wife to Volner a few hours later. "That American is getting well very fast now."

"So would I," grunted Volner, "if I and a sweet wife and fortune waiting for me. Let them alone. They can take care of themselves. It makes me young again."

A few months later the castle at Trolle was ablaze with lights. A grand wedding took place. Officers of the army members of the diplomatic corps, visiting military commands, all were present. And the bride was the beautiful Princess Marie and the groom the handsome American. He wore no uniform and seemed soberly dressed beside the brilliant officers. But on his breast he wore a brilliant cross, the highest decoration in Denesha, and every man within the palace gates envied him his fortune and his bride.

Advance of the Sparrow.
The much-hated and sometimes maligned English sparrow is gradually making its way all through the western part of the country. It has been seen for some time past in the north-eastern part of New Mexico, and has recently been noticed at Albuquerque. Thus it seems to be spreading south and southwest, and may be expected all over the more temperate part of the western region.

CASE AFTER CASE.

Plenty More Like This in Northville.

Scores of Northville people can tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills. Many a happy citizen makes a public statement of his experience. Here is a case of it. What better proof of merit can be had than such endorsement?

Mrs. Henry Priest, husband a moulder, living at 24 Mill St. says "I most certainly think well of Doan's Kidney Pills. I am adverse to publicity and I only permit publication of this statement because I feel grateful to Doan's Kidney Pills for the good they did me. Before going to Murdock Bros. drug store and getting them I had a dull aching pain in my back and I was also troubled with rheumatism which had annoyed me for quite a while. Before I had taken half the box I found my condition greatly improved. Finally the pain in my back left and my rheumatism vanished."

For sale by all dealers price 50c. Foster-McBreen Co. Buffalo, N. Y. sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

Nothing Impossible With Morgan.
An "eminent German authority" on transportation questions declares that the Morgan syndicate cannot meet its engagements. It is too heavily overcapitalized. It must double the earnings of the two great German lines in order to fulfill the terms of its contract—which the expert considers "impossible." Doubtful things are uncertain, but here in America we grow reticent in talking about "impossibilities" in connection with Mr. Morgan's financial projects.

Poisoning the System.
It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system causing headache, dizziness and melancholia. At first, then, unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. Dr. Williams' Little Early Biscuits prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. Murdock Bros.

Characteristics of Gold.

Many people suppose that all gold is alike when refined, but this is not so. An experienced man can tell at a glance from what part of the world a gold piece comes, and in some cases from what particular gold district the metal has been obtained. Australian gold, for instance, is distinctly redder than that from California. The Ural gold is the reddest found anywhere.
