'T WAS REGULAR WATER SPOUT

MONDAY'S RAIN WAS A RECORD BREAKER.

It Washed a Cow into the Lake—Almost.

The heavy rain storm that visited these parts Monday afternoon developed the characteristics of a cloudburst in some places in the vicinity. Curiously enough, the storm was unaccompanied by lightning and thunder as have been all the other severe storms of the season but the volume of water that fell was enormous and very destructive in many localities. The rainfall by actual measurement was four inches in one hour, and the highways on level places were axle deep in water. Bridges were swept away, culverts washed out and some of the crops that had been able to survive previous adverse conditions were destroyed beyond help. The Argo mill race was again overflowed, causing considerable alarm at the factories, but no particular damage resulted. On the Horton farm east of town a cow was nearly washed into Yerkes lake, a good strong fence being all that saved the animal from a watery grave, the obstruction holding her until she could be rescued from her perilous position, where she was buried to her neck in mud and water. A quantity of hay was also washed from a field nearly into the lake.

A Northville Meteor.

Mr. Allen is a Northville repairer of stoves, and in his business conveys a gasoline burner around the country in his wagon. The burner was transacting business the other day in a legitimate manner while the proprietor was attending to some repairs in a rural neighborhood. Flies were also transacting business with the horse, and so pestered him that he started up with a jerk, and the burner not expecting anything of the kind, was upset. Then there sprang up a lively business. A dog with a bunch of the Fourth of July tied to his tail, makes some show, but it is principally noise. In this there was a big show and little noise. It was also a "fleeing show" for as soon as the horse discovered what was going on behind him he let out his joints all round, and left the neighborhood with the blazing wagon a close second. The horse did not pause to reason, and put in his level best till his bellows becoming exhausted his speed slackened and he was eventually caught by a courageous young lady, Miss Millie Wilkinson. There were no flies on the animal when brought to a stop. The damage to the wagon was about $35 and the horse's tail also suffered some.—Detroit Tribune.

ANNUAL MEETING

Northville Loan and Building Association Friday.

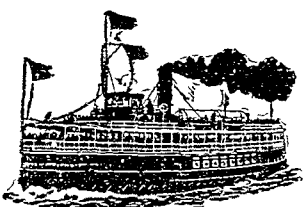

The annual meeting of the Northville Loan and Building association was held in the Library rooms last Friday evening, and the report of the secretary showed the affairs of the association to be in a very satisfactory condition as previously noted. Stock a year old July 1st of last year showed an interest of 5 1/2 per cent, while that a year old July 1st this year is rated at 8 per cent. This gratifying increase indicates that although the rate on stock nine years old last year was eleven per cent, and the same age this year ten per cent, the small decrease will be a good deal more than made up another year.

The officers re-elected were J. A. Dubuar, president, I F VanAtta, secretary and F. A. Miller treasurer. C C Yerkes was re-elected attorney. The following directors were elected for three years: C A Sessions, E K Simonds, Roy G. Clark and F S Neal.

WOODMEN'S EXCURSION

Everybody Goes to Bois Blanc Next Friday.

A good many people of Northville and vicinity are much interested in the Woodmen's excursion on Aug. 5th, as the one last year proved so highly successful and so enjoyable that the participants are not yet through talking of the good time they had. This year the managers of the affair have arranged to go down instead of up the river, and have secured the elegant brand new steamer Columbia to take them and their guests to Bois Blanc park, which as an ideal place for such an occasion needs no advertising other than its established reputation. The extreme cheapness of the trip places it within the reach of everybody, the fare for the round trip from Northville having been placed at only 60 cents for grown folks and 50 cents for children. In the large number of people here who have already expressed their intention of going is a criterion by which to judge of the attendance all along the line, the members of the local camps, of whom the tickets must be purchased, will have no difficulty in disposing of the number allotted them. The train which leaves Northville at 6.45 a. m. will take the excursionists and a special will leave Detroit on the return trip about 8 o'clock.

ED. S. HASTINGS' SUDDEN DEATH

FORMER NORTHVILLE RESIDENT DIED IN CALIFORNIA.

He Passed Away Without Warning Tuesday Night.

A telegram received here Wednesday morning brought the sad news that Edward S. Hastings had died suddenly at his home in Prospect Park, California, Tuesday night. It was probably a case of heart failure as he had been in usual health for some time past.

He was better known here as "Doc" Hastings and for many years was foreman of the foundry at the Globe factory. With his family he moved to California about three years ago. He leaves a widow and five children.

Mr. Hastings was in Co. D, 5th Mich., and was a worthy member of Allan M. Harmon G. A. R. post of this place.

JUDGE DURAND WAS NOMINATED.

The democratic state convention at Detroit last night nominated Judge Durand of Flint for governor, on the fourth ballot.

Better Car Service for State Fair.

Supt. Roe of the Orchard lake division of the United Railway says his company will be prepared to properly handle the State Fair crowds. Northville people will have three or four through cars placed at their service to leave here in a bunch in the morning and Farmington people two cars, and they will leave the grounds for the return trip in the same manner. Mr. Roe thinks that with this addition the regular half-hour cars will handle the crowd in shape.

tives to gather round the family altar. According to the description some of the families would have to alter a good deal before being in very good shape to go near an altar.

The Wayne Review last week advertised can covers and rubbers at a "bargain" sale at "25 cents each." There probably wasn't a disastrous run on the advertisers' stock that time nor much rubbering to see who should be first at the counter.

A man at Ann Arbor has fifteen brothers and sisters living, at least on earth. He was an uncle years before he was anybody at all and a small great uncle when he five years old. The two dozen children had two mothers to divide amongst them, but only one father.

Miss Dora Helle fell down stairs in an Ann Arbor store and hurt herself so badly that she had to be taken to a hospital. Now after this when any Ann Arbor man falls down stairs, if he makes remarks that sound as if he was referring to Miss Dora's recent similar accident, surely no one can blame him for his sympathetic remembrance of her misfortune.

The Adrian Press is sympathizing with a young lady because her name is Worst. Never mind neighbor, she can stand in for a while, especially as her first name is not Winnie. To be sure the man who lets her to say "yes" will win a Worst, but then she won't bologna hit after that and the Worst will be over.—Blissfield Advance.

Well if that isn't positively the worst. We never saw a pun before.—Adrian Press.

"Such stuff" And neither one of 'em said anything about the matrimonial link either.

Woodmere bicyclers are badly tired nowadays with a habit some miscreant around there has of arranging tacks head down on the paths most frequented by wheelists. The guardians of the law are on the still hunt for the offenders and there will be a different kind of tax if the hunt is successful. Another little pleasantry indulged in by some of the boys of the same village is throwing mud into passing street cars. The latter young wretches have probably been reading political literature.

Oxford people must be very credulous as well as very sympathetic. A female windler—and a stranger at that—last week secured a good big supply of clothing shoes, hats, etc., from the merchants on the pier that her grandmother was dead and herself and children had not decent clothes to attend the funeral. Many of the articles were secured on credit, some by partly paying for them and others were donated. The woman was traced to a farm near Otisville, arrested and compelled to return the property, but even then succeeded in getting permission to retain part of the things. Worse yet she had "worked" Oxford a year ago in much the same manner. Awfully kind folks over there, anyway.

requires physical and mental ability of a high degree to withstand its hard labors. The high tension to which the nervous system is constantly subjected, has a depressing effect, and soon headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, etc., develop in severe form. Such was the case of Mail Carrier S. F. Swinhart, of Huntsville, Ala., he says:

"An attack of pneumonia left me with muscular rheumatism, headache, and pains that seemed to be all over me. I was scarcely able to move for about a month when I decided to give Dr. Miles' Pain Pills a trial. In three days I was again on my route and in two weeks I was free from pain and gaining in flesh and strength."

Members of Congress and Mourning.
Fifty years ago members of congress and of the senate would have been compelled by public opinion to wear crape on their arms for thirty days after the death of a president," remarked an ex-member who had served before the civil war.

"Up to about 1850 whenever a member of congress died the resolution of sympathy with his family invariably carried with it a provision that members should wear mourning. Deaths of members were of course less frequent, for the congressional body was numerically smaller. Indeed, the increase of the membership, which led naturally to a higher death rate, was the direct cause of abolishing the custom."

"A number of members of congress now die every year, and it was not thought advisable to keep members of the house and senate in practically perpetual mourning."

GLAD HE KILLED HER

BRUTAL MURDER TOOK PLACE IN GRAND RAPIDS.

MAN SHOT HIS AGED SISTER IN-LAW.

SENT DOUBLE CHARGE FROM GUN INTO HER STOMACH.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 30.—While sitting on the steps in the rear of her home, No. 58 Caroline place, Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Dena Hubelhorst, a widow fifty-three years of age, was shot in the stomach by a muzzle-loading gun in the hands of her brother-in-law, Martin Hubelhorst. The man was soon after arrested.

Hubelhorst had boarded with his sister-in-law, but had been turned out because of drunkenness. Yesterday he returned and asked to be taken back. The woman ordered him from the premises whereat he went to the woodshed, where he had previously secreted the gun, and got it.

He held the muzzle so close to the woman's body that all the shot entered her stomach in one spot.

When arrested Hubelhorst was told that his victim was dead. He said he was glad of it, that she ought to have been dead long ago.

BLEW OUT THE LIGHT.

Bold Trick of School Director Candi dates Gets Him the Job.

Owosso, Mich., July 30.—By virtue of a neatly executed coup, John F. Pasco is now school director of Owosso district No. 4 and Alexander C. Crane, his predecessor, has been forced out of office after holding the place several years.

At a meeting held early in July, Pasco was elected by two votes Crane was secretary of the meeting and declaring the election illegal, refused to give up the books. He called a meeting for Monday night at the schoolhouse and rallied his friends, expecting to win out. There were two hours of wrangling before a vote was taken. Just as the ballot box was opened by the tellers, Pasco blew out the light.

Deputy Sheriff Charles Owen at once snatched the disputed books and fled. A free for all fight ensued, several windows were broken and parties of both men were badly marked up in the fray. Pasco had secured a writ of replevin and the books have been delivered to him by Owen, according to agreement. Crane and his followers threaten more trouble.

Depraved Juvenile Tramps.

Nashville, Mich., July 30.—As the result of a bit of shrewd investigation on the part of local officers, one of the most shocking cases of juvenile depravity ever brought to the notice of the authorities of this region has come to light in the arrest of two Ohio girls—Rosa Loar and Emma Munsell—who, with two boys—C. E. and J. H. Clapper, had been tramping the country, begging and sleeping in schoolhouses and churches along the line. They were sleeping in the McKelvey schoolhouse when captured. The boys were given thirty days in jail and the parents of the girls have been notified.

Died a Raving Maniac.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 30.—Mrs. Margaret Challenor, after raving wildly about the streets of Benton Harbor and suffering confinement at the St. Joseph asylum at Kalamazoo, only to die within a few hours of her arrival. Considerable delay ensued before granting her admission to the asylum owing to the establishment of the fact that she was a nonresident of Michigan, having recently come from Dansville, N. Y. The body was taken to Dowagiac for burial.

Russell Gets Wardenship.

Marquette, Mich., July 20.—James Russell, editor of the Marquette Mining Journal, will succeed George Freeman as warden of the penitentiary here. A number of the prison board of control announced last night that it had been unanimously decided to appoint Russell.

Durand's Bad Man.—Henry Powell returned to Durand last week after finishing a term in the Detroit house of correction and within four days tried to steal in two different places. He has been sent back to the Detroit prison for sixty-five days longer.

Licked by St. Joe's Pride.—It took Carl Anderson, the pride of St. Joe, but 56 seconds to put Harry Covert, champion middleweight of Texas, out of business before an enthusiastic audience at the St. Joseph Athletic club Monday night. The punch on the solar plexus paralyzed Covert so that he didn't come fully to for fifteen minutes.

It Marks the Battleground.—A bronze tablet that is to mark the spot once occupied by the historic Pontiac tree at Detroit, and commemorate the battle of Parents' Creek (Bloody Run), which occurred near it on July 31, 1763, is to be placed in position and unveiled with appropriate ceremonies Thursday afternoon on Jefferson avenue.

Train Jumped From Rails.

Altoona, Pa., July 31.—Engineer John W. Kemmerling was instantly killed and his fireman, H. M. Nicely, fatally injured in a wreck at Pack Saddle, sixty miles west of Altoona, at noon Wednesday. Both men resided in Altoona. Their train, the fast mail car known as fast mail No. 11. At Pack Saddle there are two reverse curves, and the rules of the company call for a slowdown at this point. Kemmerling, no doubt, exceeded the prescribed speed, for the locomotive left the track as soon as it reached the curve, and after plunging across the roadbed, plunged over a fifty-foot embankment to the Conemaugh river. The engine was crushed under the huge mass and the fireman was so badly injured that death resulted in a few hours.

Kept Faith to the Last.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 31.—There is mourning at No. 1 fire station to day on account of the death of Prince, a beautiful black fire horse which has been running on the combination wagon. The faithful animal has been sick for the past three days and was kept in a box stall opposite the department and under the care of a veterinary. Yesterday morning at 6:15 an alarm of fire was received and as the tower bell sounded, Prince jumped up in his stall and forced his way through the door to the yard. Just as the bell struck for the last time the sick horse fell to the ground dead.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington July 31.—Michigan pensions were granted Wednesday as follows: Original—George Devery Detroit $8; Increase—Levy Youngs Fargo $8; Harvey S. The capital stock is $5,500,000 and the company pays a Michigan franchise tax on a valuation of $1,571,000.

ATTACKED BY MASKED MEN.

Operator at Dublin Passed Through Tough Experience.

Dublin, Mich., July 30.—Edward McEvoy and Ray Merrifield, operators at the Pere Marquette telegraph office were held up by six masked men late Monday night. McEvoy was struck across the chest with a piece of gas pipe with such force that he was thrown against the wall on the opposite side of the room, but he was not seriously hurt. Merrifield received a blow which rendered him unconscious and he is yet in a precarious condition. The bandits then gagged and bound the two and ran away.

McEvoy got loose and liberated Merrifield and aroused two gangs of section men, who chased the masked strangers into the woods. Merrifield had considerable money with him, but it was untouched.

When McEvoy returned to the depot he found a note on his table as follows:

"To you fellows: We are gone to night, but will come again."

"BLACK JACK."

McEvoy kept at his key guarded by two men the remainder of the night. The supposition of the railway people is that one of the bandits was a discharged telegraph operator, who planned to wire the late passenger train "phony" orders and carry out a wholesale train robbery on Norway hill.

SAMPLE OF GOOD ROADS.

Experts Are Building One at Greenville—Much Enthusiasm.

Greenville, Mich., July 30.—Tuesday was the first day of the Good Roads convention, in progress under state and national auspices.

A large number of delegates are on the grounds from all parts of the state and they are as enthusiastic as delegates to a political convention. The streets were enlivened by three outdoor exhibitions in the forenoon and speeches were made last evening on the subject of good roads by Hon. H. S. Earle of Detroit, Hon. W. L. Dickenson of Springfield, Mass., and E. L. Powers of New York city.

A large amount of road material was on the grounds and the road building began Monday, so that quite a strip of road has been built. The crowd was largest at that point all day, and the liona band furnished music.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Mr. Dickinson.

Grist of M. N. G. Commissions.

Lansing, Mich., July 30.—Commissions were issued by Adjutant General Brown Tuesday, as follows: Allan D. McLean, Detroit, major and surgeon First infantry; Julius F. Schoolcraft, first lieutenant and Charles W. Vandergift, second lieutenant, Company A, First independent battalion Adrian; Albert H. Prosser, captain and adjutant Third infantry, Sault Ste. Marie; Guy M. Wilson, first lieutenant Company A Third infantry, Flint.

Former U. of M. Professor Dead.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 30.—Information has been received here of the death Monday afternoon at Redlands, Cal., of Charles Kendall Adams, who was at one time president of Cornell university and the University of Wisconsin, and before that time a conspicuous member of the faculty of the University of Michigan. Dr. Adams stood in the first rank of American educators of two generations. He was born in Vermont and was graduated at the Michigan university with the degrees of A. M. and LL. D.

Forming a Farmers' Trust.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 30.—Agents are understood to be working in south central Michigan to promote a great farmers' trust. The movement has its inception in Indiana. The plan is said to have originated with Professor Clarence Miller, superintendent of schools at Frankfort. It is proposed to hold wheat and corn so as to get the benefit of tariff discrimination against imports. The raise in price will, it is claimed, go for farmers hundreds of millions yearly. One feature will be farmers' trust banks from which farmers can borrow as needed, giving crops as security.

Dead Broke in New York.

Muskegon, Mich., July 30.—If a report received here is correct, H. H. Terwilliger, Montague's runaway banker, is now moneyless and friendless in New York city. Miss Florence Allen, a former Montague young lady, who is now employed in the office of her uncle in the metropolis, has written to her mother that she met Terwilliger in May. His clothes were so shabby that she hardly recognized him.

Past Commander Vander Voort Dead.

Philadelphia, July 30.—Paul Vander Voort, past commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, died at Puerto Principe, Cuba, Tuesday of paralysis of the heart. He was born in Ohio in 1846. On the formation of the department he was elected department commander. He was elected senior vice-commander-in-chief in 1878 and commander-in-chief in 1882.

Trolley Collides With Carriage.

St. Louis, Mo., July 30.—Grant West was instantly killed, Fred Michael sustained concussion of the brain and internal injuries, and John A. McDonald, Fred Brooks and William Steffan were badly cut and bruised in a collision late last night between a trolley car and a carry. The party was returning home in the vehicle after a serenading tour.

Wheat Almost a Total Loss.

St. Paul, July 30.—A special from Larimore, N. D., says: Latest reports from the district visited by the hailstorm estimate that 40,000 acres of wheat are almost a total loss, while much more will show from one-quarter to one-half destroyed.

About the first thing a good American finds it necessary to do after reaching the Philippines is come home to undergo a surgical operation.

A Necessary Precaution.

Don't neglect a cold. It is worse than unpleasant. It is dangerous. By using One Minute Cough Cure you can cure it at once. Allays inflammation, clears the head, soothes and strengthens the mucous membranes. Cures coughs, croup, throat and lung troubles. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Children like it. Murdock Bros.

Natives of China.

A person born in China, no matter what nationality of parents, is by birth a Chinese, but if born of parents who themselves are not Chinese the child on attaining majority may elect to adopt the citizenship of the father.—San Francisco Call.

Foster's Kidney Cure is a medicine free from poisons and will ease any case of kidney disease that is not beyond the reach of medicine. Sold by Murdock Bros.

Hobo Cleanliness.

They wash the hoboes, says one of the fraternity, who talks very frankly about his friends in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for May, they bathe frequently and boil their "rags." Often one will stand stark naked in a cold wind while his clothes are boiling. The purpose of "boiling up" is not cleanliness alone, however, nor chiefly that.

KIDNEY TROUBLE CURED.

General Health Greatly Improved by Pe-ru-na.

MRS. FRANCES MATTOON.

Mrs. Frances Mattoon, Treasurer of the Minneapolis Independent Order of Good Templars writes from 12 Sixth Street, Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"Last winter I had considerable trouble with my kidneys brought on after a hard cold which I had neglected. One of my lodge friends who called when I was ill told me of a wonderful medicine called Peruna. I had no faith in it, but my husband purchased me a bottle, and asked me to try it. It brought me most satisfactory results. I used three bottles before I was completely cured, but I have had good cause to be grateful, for not only did my kidney trouble disappear, but my general health improved and I have been in good health ever since. I would not be without it for ten times its cost."—FRANCES MATTOON.

This experience has been repeated many times. We hear of such cases nearly every day.

Mrs. Mattoon had catarrh of the kidneys. As soon as she took the right remedy she made a quick recovery.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. It is a specific for the catarrhal derangements of women. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio, for free book on catarrh written by Dr. S. B. Hartman.

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

Lincoln J. Carter's melodrama, "The Heart of Chicago," and its famous approaching engine scene will be the opening attraction at the Whitney Opera House beginning a week's engagement, Aug. 3d. In addition to the approaching engine scene some half dozen meritorious mountings are necessary to the play. These are the Masonic Temple Roof Garden, the monstrous panoramic view of the south side at night, the Columbus fountain, etc.

Wonderland Temple Theater—Detroit.

Leon Morris' great herd of educated and comedy pieces will be one of the features of the splendid vaudeville show that Manager Moore of Wonderland Temple theater, Detroit has booked for next week. Since its opening in its present magnificent quarters last fall Wonderland has done one of the greatest business ever recorded by any American playhouse outside the metropolis. It has done no more than it deserves, however, for it is one of the finest playhouses in the country.

CHAPTER I.

A MAN and a woman faced each other in the center of a brilliantly lighted room. The woman's eyes were filled with horror that was only half manifest through the contempt and proud disdain with which her entire being seemed animated. * * * His features were distorted with passion. His eyes gleamed and glinted with jealous rage. * * * Between them, prone upon the floor, senseless, inanimate, was the body of a man, apparently lifeless. It was a mute but effectual barrier across which neither dared to tread. * * * "You have killed him," she said.

Now's The Time to Buy

Summer Suits and Negligee Shirts for Men

PRICES HAVE ALL BEEN REDUCED

Those homespun, wool crash, French Flannel and light weight Cheviot Coat and Trouser Suits the ideal Summer garments from our best makers and which equal in style, fabric and fit any the best tailors can produce—all have been reduced. You can't imagine how much goodness a little money will buy now.

Negligee Shirts—Underpriced

Every fancy patterned one is selling for less than usual—not because they're wrong in any way—that's ridiculous, but just because the weather hasn't been what we or any one expected.

85c for Men's	$1.00	Negligee Shirts
$1.15 for Men's	$1.50	Negligee Shirts
$1.50 for Men's $2 &	$2.50	Negligee Shirts
$2.00 for Men's $4 &	$3.50	Negligee Shirts

Just bear in mind that it's one thing to cut the price of a carried over, soiled or out of date garment—it's quite another thing to offer the newest of the new—the best of the best at prices like these.

The Presbyterian church steeple was struck by lightning Sunday during the Sunday-school service, doing but slight damage to the building, however, and injuring no one, although several were conscious of slight shocks from the electric fluid.

Frank Lewis's leg is healing nicely now and he is able to get about the streets very nicely with the aid of crutches. It is to be hoped that Uncle Sam will find time and money before long to purchase an artificial limb for the young man who gave his good one in Uncle Sam's service.

There is a Northville girl who is pretty muddling smart and she's bound to reach the vertex of the ladder of success, said one of the Wayne county examiners to me recently. Her examination papers were A1 and her answer to "What is your position upon whipping children?" eclipsed all others. Her reply was, "My position is on a chair, with the child held firmly across my knees, face downward." As that was our sentiments too, we gave her a good high mark.—Delray Times.

You Bet He Wouldn't.

Dr. Holcomb of Farmington having sued Mrs. Grace Skinner for $5,000 damages for representing him as merely an equine physician and a teacher of dogs and thereby injured his practice with the human race, Editor Neal of Northville remarks that it is not often that a woman's utterances are esteemed at so high a value, but he wouldn't have said it if the women of his legislative district could vote this fall.—Detroit Tribune.

Badly Injured by a Horse.

Fred Harb, who lives between Farmington and Northville, was very badly kicked by a horse last week. He was harnessing the animal when it kicked him in the face breaking his upper jaw and smashing the roof of his mouth. It was feared at first that the injuries were fatal, but it is now thought that he will recover if blood poisoning can be averted.

Weather Service Established.

The farmers and gardeners, as well as other residents of Romulus and vicinity, are highly delighted over the recent establishment of the U. S. weather signal service here by Representative Neal of Northville.—Detroit Tribune.

Phone Exchange at Milford.

The Bell company is establishing a telephone exchange at Milford with about 75 subscribers as a starter. The country lines which were to have been built will not materialize at present.

Farmers, Attention.

Darling's Fertilizers give the best analysis and are sold at the same price as any other. See Agricultural college report. Let me show you samples and report.

J. W. PITT JOHNSON.

The Salmon Trust.

All of the salmon canneries of British Columbia have been "morganned." In other words, there is a salmon trust. The capital, however, is small, only $3,000,000. The idea is to save the by-products which hitherto have been wasted. The canned product will be, as usual a portion of fish caulked into a tin of grease. From the scales and bones will be manufactured guano and glue. The "by product" is the salvation of many a business these days.

May Not See Their Brides.

Among certain African tribes husband is not permitted to look upon their wives. They live in huts apart, and only during the night are they allowed to visit their brides. This custom, which prevails in the neighborhood of Timbuctoo, is equalled in singularity by that in vogue at Futa, where wives never permit their husbands to see them unveiled until three years have elapsed since their marriage.

Miles of Corn Land.

If all the land planted in corn in the United States this year were massed, the area would exceed the British Isles, Holland and Belgium combined or four-fifths of the area of France or Germany.

Avenue Theatre, Detroit.

Next week the Avenue theatre Detroit, will offer as a special attraction, Sam Bernard, the famous German comedian of the Weber and Fields New York organization. Mr. Bernard comes direct from Weber and Fields' music hall, and the inducement for so great an artist to play a brief engagement in vaudeville is one of the highest salaries ever paid an individual artist. He will play only four weeks in vaudeville prior to starting on a starring tour in "The Crystal Slipper" under the management of John C. Fisher the famous New York impresario. Visitors to Detroit during next week should not fail to attend the Avenue theatre.

Novi News.

Ralph Mosher was home over Sunday.

Mrs. Bert Richardson is visiting friends in Novi.

C. G. Freeman, a leading produce dealer of Oakland county, said in regard to the effect of the heavy rains on the crops: "Wheat and hay are in poor condition, but can be marketed and are far from a total loss. Potatoes are a good crop, above the average, and apples, also, are raising by the heavy rainfall. The stories about heavy losses for farmers are for the most part greatly exaggerated."

Cottagers at Cae lake are becoming alarmed at the numbers and size of turtles, which are appearing in that vicinity. Several large specimens have been recently captured and converted into soup. One of the largest was captured by a party of Pontiac gentlemen on Sunday and it measured three feet from head to tail and two feet across the shell. It weighed 42 pounds and 12 pounds of meat was realized.

A correspondent recently stated that blue herons were a rare bird in Oakland county. E. B. Schrage of Pontiac says they are very common. He states that he has had as high as fifty specimens brought to him in one year for sale or for mounting. They breed in colonies usually in ash swamps, as high as twelve nests being found in one tree. There is a large heronry near Northville, also one near Davisburg, and a number of smaller ones in other places near here.

OF LOCAL INTEREST.

Some People We Know and We Will Profit by Hearing About Them.

This is a purely local event. It took place in Northville, Mich. Not in Buffalo, N. Y. You are asked to investigate. Asked to believe a citizen's statement. To confirm a citizen's statement. Any article that is endorsed, that obtains resident advocates, is more worthy of confidence than a far off foreign article, tested to by foreign people. Mr. Stephen Safford of Main street, clerk in Fry Bros grocery store, says: "Mrs. Safford and I had symptoms of kidney trouble and believing in the old adage that a stitch in time often saves the garment and that a few doses of medicine often ward off severe cases of sickness we thought it wise to do something at once and seeing Doan's Kidney Pills recommended so highly by prominent people all over the state we determined to test them in time and procured a box at Murdoch Bros' drug store. Two or three days' treatment was sufficient for the symptoms to disappear. We know of others who have used Doan's Kidney Pills with the same good results. We do not hesitate to endorse so valuable a remedy."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box. Foster-McMillan Co. Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

Not the Music of Bullfrogs.

Recently a traveling man visited Clarksville for the first time, and while there remarked to the editor of the Record that while he had been in most of the towns of the United States and Canada he had never before heard such a loud and discordant croaking of bullfrogs. "Bullfrogs" gasped the editor. "Great Scott, man! That is not bullfrogs. That's the Clarksville band!"

The Best Diarrhoea Medicine on Earth.

That is what Mr. W. L. E. Under a prominent farmer near Indianapolis said of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Read his testimonial. It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has done for me. I have used it for nine years and I think it is the best medicine on earth. It has saved my life several times. I would not think of being without a bottle of it in the house. For sale by Geo. C. Huxton.

The Craze for Young Men.

The craze for young men is got to such a stage that advertisements for help read as follows: "Wanted--young man not over 25, of great experience; permanent employment to right party." Such a youth must have gotten his "great experience" through metempsychosis. He must be the reincarnation of some departed captain of industry. New York Press.

Nothing Impossible With Morgan.

An "eminent German authority" on transportation questions declares that the Morgan syndicate cannot meet its engagements. It is too heavily overcapitalized. It must double the earnings of the two great German lines in order to fulfill the terms of its contract--which the expert considers "impossible." Doubtful things are uncertain, but here in America we grow reticent in talking about "impossibilities" in connection with Mr. Morgan's financial projects.

CHAPTER I.

"SHE SHALL THINK AS A MAN AND BE AS A MAN."

A MAN and a woman faced each other in the center of a brilliantly lighted room. The woman's eyes were filled with horror that was only half manifest through the contempt and proud disdain with which her entire being seemed animate. Her form was erect, her head was thrown back, and her right hand clutched tightly the knotted lace which covered her bosom, while the left one hung loosely at her side. Her eyes, dark, luminous and filled with loathing, dread, anger and defiance.

She was unflinchingly fixed upon the man who confronted her. His features were distorted with passion. His eyes gleamed and glinted with jealous rage. His forehead and cheeks were waxen in hue, and his lips, slightly parted and bloodless, transformed what otherwise might have been a smile into an expression of ferocious triumph. He returned her contemptuous stare with one of suppressed but indelible hatred. Between them, prone upon the floor, senseless, unanimate, was the body of a man, apparently lifeless. It was a mute but effectual barrier across which neither dared to tread. There had been no word spoken between the woman and the man since the latter, unannounced, entered the room and dealt the blow which completed the tableau. Neither she nor the senseless man between them was aware of his approach. Both had been oblivious to all things save themselves. She was the first to break the silence that followed upon the assault.

"You have killed him," she said. Her voice sounded strangely calm and unfeeling, but it belied her. She wondered vaguely why she did not scream aloud and tear her hair and throw herself upon that prostrate body in a passion of tears, entreaties and accusations.

"He is not dead, he will revive," was the low toned reply deadly calm. "It is you who deserve death, not he. For him I feel nothing but contempt, for you—" he paused, shrugged his shoulders with an expression which words could not have conveyed.

"For me—what?" she inquired calmly.

"Words, mere words," he responded coldly. "Recriminations are useless. I will not indulge in them. This is the first time since I was a boy that I have lost my temper. I will not repeat the experience. I have a few words to say before this person revives. They will be the last that you will ever hear me utter."

"Say them, I listen."

"I will arrange that an ample annuity be paid to you. You may make your own excuses for my absence. I will make none. If the reasons for my departure are ever known, the knowledge will come from you or from him; not from me. That is all."

He did not bestow a glance upon the silent form at his feet. His face had regained its wonted calmness, the fury had gone from his eyes; there was only pain there now.

The woman started toward him. Her body moved but not her feet. She could not step across that mute barrier that was stretched between them, but her devouring eyes watched him while he crossed the room to the door and reached out one hand to open it.

"Philip!" she said.

He turned and faced her. He did not reply, but waited for her to continue.

"I—I was about to ask—nothing," she finished haughtily. Pride conquered all other impulses.

He inclined his head, opened the door, crossed the threshold, reclosed the door and stood alone in the silent hallway. For a moment he hesitated. Then he sighed, mounted the stairs and entered a room on the second floor, where for many minutes he stood with folded arms, gazing down upon the occupant of a canopied crib, upon a rosy, smiling, sleeping baby girl, a living picture of personified innocence, the only living, human thing in which God had permitted man to behold absolute purity and goodness.

"One year ago today you came to me. I cannot, I will not, leave you here," murmured the man.

Methodically he turned away. With deliberate calmness he hesitated himself with the preparations upon which he had determined, and a half-hour later he descended the stairs and went out through the front door. Upon his left arm rested the infant, still sleeping. In his right hand he carried a satchel. Behind him was his luxurious home, to which he gave no thought. Within it, in the room where he had parted with his wife, a man had just staggered to his feet to behold upon the floor near where he had fallen the senseless form of the woman who only a short time before had stood so proudly erect above his own inanimate body.

Later the man who bore the sleeping baby in his arms was ushered into a pretentious house that fronted upon Central park—for the unhappy scene occurred in the city of New York—and a few moments afterward was seated in the library behind closed doors. The infant, still asleep, was securely ensconced in the depths of a huge armchair, and vis-a-vis with the unhappy father was a strong, bushy browed, square jawed man who looked ten years older than he really was.

"I must have one condition, Maxwell," the self-exiled man said calmly, "and you are the only man in all the world whom I care to trust."

He began then at the beginning. He told a story which covered the lapse of nearly two years. He referred to his wife not bitterly, not angrily, but with sadness and pain. He omitted nothing concerning detail and he concluded his recital with these words:

"I could not leave my baby there, so I brought her with me. I shall take her away, and we will disappear forever from the sight and gradually from the memory of everybody who has known me—from everybody except yourself. I shall change my name, and only you shall know who I am. My property fortunately is nearly all in negotiable securities and can easily be transferred. My real estate I wish you to accept in trust for my wife, paying her the income from it as long as she lives. It will amply provide for her every want and leave her a comfortable surplus besides. You can draw all the papers and forward the new deeds to me."

"And the reversion—what about that in case of the death of your wife?" asked the lawyer.

"Let the reversion be to you as trustee for the benefit of my heirs. If I ever want the property, I will come to you for it."

"Are you aware that you are placing more than a million in my possession?" "Perfectly. I have twice as much more, as you know, in negotiable securities. That will suffice for me."

"You will not apply for a divorce?"

"Certainly not."

"What name will you assume?"

"Yours, I think—that is, your last one. If you will permit it I will call myself Richard Maxwell."

"Why not Philip Maxwell?"

"No, I will retain nothing of the past. I am only 30 years old, but as long as I am permitted to live my life shall be devoted to that child. Philip Barrington ceased to exist an hour ago. I will sleep here in your house tonight, if I may. In the morning I will ask you to take some checks to the banks for me and secure in their places cashier's checks that I may deposit where I please, also to withdraw my securities from the safe deposit vaults and bring them to me. Such other affairs as need attention I will remember before morning, and before night tomorrow I will be gone."

"Where will you go?"

"I have not decided. I probably will not decide for some time to come. I will let you know in good time."

"You are very unwise, Philip. Your suspicions may be unfounded, your conclusions wrong."

"Perhaps so," wearily. "My decision is irrevocable, however, so we will not discuss it."

"You cannot be father and mother to that child—to that little girl. If she were a boy, it would be different."

"I will be father, mother—everything—to her. Do not argue with me, Max. Will you show me where I am to sleep? My duties begin at once. I shall not avoid them."

Not until the man who had decided that he was henceforth to be known only as Richard Maxwell was alone in the room that had been assigned to him—no not alone, because the little girl, still quietly sleeping unconscious of the tragedy that had already occurred in her young life, reposed upon the bed—not until then did he show any sign of the ravages of the mental whirlwind that had passed over him, and even then his face did not lose its calm, although tears trickled down his cheeks and splashed unheeded upon the pillow where rested the companion of his future.

He remained thus silent for several moments, and then he began restlessly to pace the floor with bowed head and hands clasped behind his back, up and down, up and down, endlessly, ceaselessly, untiringly, his footsteps falling with absolute precision, keeping time like the ticking of a clock—one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, turn; one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, turn—hour after hour. Once the baby awakened, and its little voice murmured, "Mamma!" and then the father went to the bedside, raised the small head tenderly, administered a swallow of water, touched the rosy cheeks with his lips and saw the gentle, sleepy eyes close again in slumber. Then once more he began that restless, tireless pacing and kept it up until the curtains that shrouded the windows became transparent with the advent of dawn, a gray light stole into the room, sparrows began to twitter on the window ledges, and the world slowly awakened to a new day.

After breakfast, while the child stood clinging to a chair between them or sat upon the floor in the midst of an agglomeration of parlor bric-a-brac that had been hastily provided for its amusement, Richard Maxwell and his attorney concluded the conversation of the preceding night.

"I've thought it all out," he said, "and I have fought it all out as well. My course is laid as certainly as is that of a sea captain who sails for a distant port, and I shall follow it as blindly, depending only upon my chart and my compass."

"You have not slept, Phil?"

"Call me Richard. No, I have not slept."

"Nor rested."

"No."

"I know you too well to argue with you," said the lawyer gravely, "so I will not attempt to do so. Give me your instructions, and I will follow them to the letter. There is only one suggestion that I will make."

"What is that?"

"Your affairs in the future, which you cannot fully prearrange, may require a reference—a personal reference, I mean. Since you have chosen to take the same name as mine, let it be understood, wherever you are, that we are brothers. Teach the child that she has an uncle Dan here in New York and make your will before you leave this house, appointing me as her guardian in case anything happens to you."

"I have thought of that, Max—vaguely. It is kind of you to suggest it. Will you draw the will?"

"Yes."

"Everything to the child at the age of 21, yourself as guardian and sole executor. You know better than I do how to arrange it."

"Yes."

"I have thought better of the cashier's checks. I prefer to leave no trace behind me that may be followed. I will draw what I need for immediate expenses. I will give checks to you for the balance and will draw on you when I have selected a place of deposit. The securities you will convert into cash and repurchase others in the name of Richard Maxwell. They can be forwarded to me at any time when I need them."

"What is the baby's name?"

"She has none. We have postponed giving her a name because we could never find one that was entirely pleasing. But I have thought of that also. I shall give her a name now."

"Tell me what it is to be?"

"My mother was a Lisle, let that be the name of my child."

"It is a man's name."

"Not necessarily. It may belong to either, a man or a woman. At all events it suits my purposes. Let her be named in the will Lisle Maxwell, child—not daughter—CHILD of Richard Maxwell."

"Why that way?"

"Because I desire it. Lisle shall be my son and my daughter in one, and I shall educate her to be both. She is the only child I will ever have. I wanted a son; she shall be my son; I will rear her as a son. I will train her to face the world as a man would face it. I will teach her the ways of the world as a man would learn them, I will instruct her in all things as a man should be instructed, and until she is old enough to know for herself she shall not discover that she is not masculine. She shall not know that there are women in the world."

"You had better cut her throat at once," said the lawyer gruffly.

"Max," replied the father slowly, "let there be no argument or comment upon anything or concerning anything that I have decided to do. Nothing short of my own death can alter a plan that I have made."

"Very well. What more have you to say now?"

"Only this. My wife will apply to you for information concerning me. You will tell her all that is necessary concerning the arrangements for her income. You will say that I came here with the child—omitting its name—that I left instructions with you and that I went away again without telling you where I should go. You will instruct her no further on any point whatever, and to every other human being you will be entirely silent."

At 7 o'clock that evening, when the St. Louis express rolled out of the station of the Pennsylvania railroad, the stateroom of one of the Pullman sleepers was occupied by a man who was traveling alone with a little child which nestled upon his shoulder in happy content, and a woman who noticed the child and was attracted by its beauty paused, patted its little hand, and remarked gently:

"What a beautiful baby girl!"

"My baby is a boy, madam," was the calm reply, and thus was begun the strange career of Lisle Maxwell.

CHAPTER II.

CLARK THOMPSON, FRONTIERSMAN.

IT WAS the week of the annual "round up" at the Smoky valley, which nestles in the embrace of towering mountains along the western boundary of the state of Nevada. Upon the crest of a rise or mound which overlooks the entire valley a horseman, who had just risen over the height, reined in his mount and with bated breath and eager enthusiasm surveyed the spectacle before him.

"It is grand—beautiful!" he exclaimed aloud. "It is strange that my father has never permitted me to see it before, strange that he hesitated now. But I am here in spite of him, and he will not send me back. He must not. I will not go."

The youth turned his head and looked back in the direction from which he had come, and there was a pleased, if somewhat anxious, smile upon his face when he noted toward the southeast a heavy cloud of dust which extended backward along the trail as far as the eyes could reach, but which was steadily though slowly coming nearer. To his practiced eyes that cloud explained that beneath it was moving an army of cattle numbering several thousands, that their track lay over the ridge where he was standing and that their destination was the valley beyond, where the different brands were to be singled out and separated, sorted and assigned to their respective owners.

For an entire week—perhaps for two, for the number of cattle was known to be greater this year than ever before—the Smoky valley was destined to become a scene of life and activity. There would be collected there cattle and horses by the tens of thousands, rancheros and vaqueros by the dozens and scores, there would be trials of skill of every kind which induce potent forerunners and ardent amateurs in the wild free life of ranchmen and their cowboy assistants, there would be fighting and frolic and danger and pleasure—all things desirable and everything supposedly attainable for Lisle Maxwell, the margin of whose life hitherto had been the limits of his father's ranch.

As he looked again toward the valley he could see that thousands of cattle had already arrived. They browsed along the mountain slopes as far as his vision could extend, and his keen glance could detect here and there the figures of horsemen on guard near the entrance of passes where they were stationed to prevent the animals, gathered with such difficulty, from straying again. Hoarse bellows and muttering murmurs drifted along the mountain sides, telling of disputes between rival steers which had met now for the first time, and away up the valley glistened a lake beside which he could distinguish the outlines of a corral, near which he knew was situated the camp.

Lisle was undeterred what to do. His impulse was to ride on into the valley and make himself known to the men, who one and all were acquainted with his father and who would therefore make him welcome. Some of them were acquaintances of his own, for he had met and learned to know several ranchmen and cowboys who during years past had made occasional visits to his father's ranch. On the other hand he feared the anger of his father, whom thus far in life he had never dared to disobey in other than very little things.

"If I await him here, he will send me back again," mused Lisle, "if I go on, he cannot or, at least, if he does so, I will have seen something of what I came to see."

While he still hesitated the entire scene changed. The moving panorama in the distance faded from view as his interest centered upon an incident that was taking place almost in the immediate foreground.

Up the side of the mountain toward him, and not a quarter of a mile away, plunged a madly galloping steer, and behind it, too distant to cast his rope, but nevertheless with the ready loop of his riata swinging in his hand, rode a horseman. He was sombered, fringed, gilt-braided and bedecked in his best, for cowboys attire themselves for the annual "round up" with as much care as a debutante lavishes up on her "coming out" ball.

The cowboy spurred his horse unmercifully but the steer was lithe limbed and wild. It ran as free as an arrow and as easily led the pace to a pair of horns and bellows.

Young Maxwell quickly took the coil of lasso from the pocket of his saddle, disengaged the loop, balanced it in his right hand, seized the reins in his left, settled himself firmly in the saddle and waited. Then, when the steer came nearer, he started his horse forward by touching his heels to it, against the animal's neck, guiding him toward the left by an almost imperceptible pressure with his right knee.

The horse had also perceived the approach of the steer and its pursuer and knew thoroughly well what was expected of him. In advancing the speed was gradually increased, so that when the steer dashed over the brow of the hill Lisle Maxwell, with the loop of his riata coiled like a huge serpent above his head, was within easy casting distance of the object of his attack.

The steer, startled by the unexpected apparition directly in front of him, swerved to the right, while the horse that young Maxwell rode described a graceful curve to the left. At the same instant the horse's front feet from the rider's hand, the horse stopped, planted his feet firmly in the sod and braced himself for the shock that was to come, and the next instant the steer, firmly held by the rope, which had caught one of his hind feet, plunged headlong upon the ground, tearing up the earth and sod and bellowing furiously.

In an instant he had struggled to his feet, but instead of seeking to escape he turned and faced the enemy with lowered head, muttering distant thunder as he picked up clouds of dust and threw them vigorously into the air. Then he charged, but the horse obeying a slight pressure of the knee, easily avoided him, flashing past the infuriated beast so closely that Lisle could have touched him, and in another moment the steer was again dragged to the earth by the suddenly tightened lasso.

It was at that instant when the original pursuer appeared upon the scene. Another writhing, twisting coil of rope darted through the air just as the steer was struggling to his feet. It settled over the animal's horns and head and seized his throat, and the beast was captured. It was not the first time that he had been compelled to succumb to the power of mind over matter, and as soon as he found that he was indeed a prisoner his wild rage gave place to sullen docility and he allowed himself to be led away over the road he had come knowing that those relentless loops were still fast upon him and that at the first sign of resistance he would again be dragged remorselessly to the earth.

"Well done, son!" shouted the stranger, "that well done for a youngster like you. What outfit are you with?"

"Maxwell's. The bunch is two or three miles behind me to the east."

"Dick Maxwell's old Crescent and cross," murmured the brand worn by Richard Maxwell's cattle. "What may your name be?"

"Lisle Maxwell."

"He be continued next week."
