

THE ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING.

C. L. DUBUAR AND F. S. HARMON NEW TRUSTEES.

A Little More to Be Paid This Year for Teachers.

At the annual school meeting held Monday night C. L. Dubuar was re-elected trustee to succeed himself and F. S. Harmon was elected in place of Mr. Ambler. The annual report showed a cash balance on hand of $999.38 and that during the year $4,225 had been paid for teachers' wages, $1,090.90 for incidentals. The foreign tuition receipts were $307.54, primary school fund $1,104.12 taxes $4,265.20.

Teachers for the ensuing year are as follows:

|                              |          |
|------------------------------|----------|
| E. J. Martin, Supt.          | $950.00 |
| Bernice Sanford, preceptress | 500.00   |
| Miss Bryant, assistant       | 450.00   |
| Belle Covert, 5th grade      | 350.00   |
| Dolly Bergen, 7th grade      | 350.00   |
| Miss Knight, 5th-6th grades  | 400.00   |
| Miss Wallace, 4th grade      | 350.00   |
| Mrs. Woolley, 3d grade       | 300.00   |
| Edna Eldred, 2d primary      | 300.00   |
| Mrs. Kern, primary           | 500.00   |
| J. Henry Smith, music        | 200.00   |

Total..... $1,650.00
The total amount is $425 more than last year, due to the fact that it has always been the custom to raise teacher's wages at the second term. The estimated expense of the school not including salaries for the ensuing year is $1,100.

EIGHTY-FIRST BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. Hiram Cady Celebrated it Last Week.

On August 28 a party of friends and relatives to the number of twenty gathered at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Cady on Rogers street to celebrate Mrs. Cady's 81st birthday. It was a delightful day, and a happy and well spent occasion. Though deprived of her sight Mrs. Cady entered into the enjoyment of the affair with rare vigor for one so aged. A sumptuous dinner was served at noon and a dainty lunch followed toward evening. Those present from abroad were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rogers of Ypsilanti, the former being Mrs. Cady's brother, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Loomis of Grass Lake, Mrs. A. J. Kingsley and daughter Clara of Ann Arbor, Chas. Fish and wife, and L. K. Lawrence, wife and son Robert of Sharon, Rolland Waltrous and wife of Chelsea, and Misses Allyn of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Chas. Kingsley and wife of Salem. Four generations were represented. Uncle Hiram who is in his 96th year was of course present and enjoyed the occasion with the best of them.

Will Test Game Laws.

That part of the Michigan game law which prohibits the shipping of game out of the state is to be passed upon by the U. S. Supreme court. Chief Justice Hooper, of the Michigan supreme court, has granted a writ of error to the federal supreme court in the case of William Van Pelt, who early in the year was convicted in the Wayne circuit court of having in his possession wild ducks with a view of shipping them out of the state. The law prohibits such shipment and the Michigan court held the law constitutional. The appeal to the federal courts is taken by Van Pelt, who claims that shipping ducks out of Michigan is interstate commerce and that a state cannot prohibit such commerce without violating the federal constitution. The case will be watched with interest by deer hunters as well as duck hunters and trout fishermen.

Cox-Williams.

Mr. E. J. Cox, Northville's well known hardware merchant, and Miss Anna D. Williams were united in marriage at the bride's home, 630 Clark avenue, Detroit, Wednesday night. Rev. Dr. W. H. Clark of Detroit performed the ceremony assisted by Rev. W. S. Jerome of this place. Mr. and Mrs. Cox will return to Northville next week and will occupy the J. Henry Smith house on High street. Some fifty or sixty guests were present mostly from Lapeer and Detroit.

To make the show complete it should be arranged like this. —Minneapolis Journal.

PLYMOUTH'S 18TH ANNUAL FAIR.

A GOOD TIME PROMISED OVER THERE THIS YEAR.

Big Tent in Place of Burned Floral Hall.

Preparations for the 18th annual Plymouth Fair are in full swing and the enthusiasm with which the directors and other citizens of the village are pushing the work is an indication that the people will be given more for their money than ever before. Since the fair last year, the association lost its Floral hall by fire. It is proposed this year to erect a huge tent with seating capacity for hundreds, where the people may congregate, visit, eat their lunch, view the fruits, vegetables, flowers, etc. and have a good time generally.

A base ball tournament is being arranged which promises to excel all other efforts in this direction. The names of the contesting clubs will be announced as soon as arrangements are completed.

Thirteen hundred dollars will be given for speed premiums this year, which will insure a large list of entries and some fast horses.

A new feature this year will be family tickets, the price of which is $1.00, and will admit an entire family every day of the fair. The tickets are now ready and can be purchased of the treasurer, P. W. Voorhes, at the Plymouth Savings Bank, or at any of the stores in Plymouth.

School children's day occurs on Sept. 17th when the youngsters will be admitted free as usual.

On the 18th, Hon. Chas. E. Townsend of Jackson, Michigan's popular orator will deliver an address from the grand stand.

There will be the usual side attractions, balloon ascensions, etc.

Elliott-Safford.

Married at the home of the bride's son, Wm. H. Safford, on Wednesday evening, by Rev. Mr. Thrasher, Mrs. Etta Safford to Mr. Jasper Elliott. All of this place. About 20 relatives were present and a nice luncheon followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will reside on Yerkes street in Mr. Elliott's pleasant home.

Lava From Mont Pelee Analyzed.
The sample of lava which caused the destruction of St. Pierre has been analyzed by J. M. Camp, chief chemist at the Duquesne Steel Works. The result shows the composition of the lava as follows: Silica, 57.60; sesquioxide iron, 7.21; alumina, 18.79; lime, 6.23; magnesia, 1.08; manganese, a small trace; sulphur trioxide, 1.60; carbonic acid, 6.12, and moisture, 1.83.

Requisites for a Minister.
Prof. Stetson of the University of Chicago told the students in the course of a lecture on "Psychology and the Preachers" the other day that a minister should "compose his own hymns, words and music; should be a skilled art critic, have a smattering of architecture and be an expert psychologist."

From Detroit Free Press.

[August 31, 1902.]
NEW-BOSTON, Mich., Aug. 30.—The Democratic representative convention, held at Romulus this afternoon, nominated James Vreeland of Montaugon to go against Representative Neal of Northville. But twenty-four delegates were present. Supervisor Atreo, of Sumpter, was nominated on the first ballot, but he declined and finally the honor was given to the man from Trenton. The democrats of the district have a warm spot in their hearts toward Mr. Neal for the stand he took in the legislature on the bill to jar county Auditor Scullen (Dem) out of office by making a lot of new supervisors out of village presidents. Neal killed the bill and the Democrats say they will not hurt him any in his re-election.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS

Michigan's Citizen Soldiers.—The total strength of the Michigan National Guard is 3,008 enlisted men and 187 officers, and of the Michigan Naval militia 208 enlisted men and 19 officers.

Greenville's New Bank.—The Commercial State Savings bank of Greenville, capital $25,000, has been authorized by the banking commissioner to commence business.

Shier For Prison Chaplain.—Those who credit the removal of Chaplain Orwick from the state prison to Bill Judson are handing the appointment of him also, and say it will be given to Rev. D. R. Shier of Manchester.

May Be Crippled For Life.—Commodore Foster, a prominent citizen of Dundee, was out fishing with his wife when he slipped on a rock, injuring his knee so severely that he may be crippled for life.

Mistake May Prove Fatal.—Mrs. M. Fitzgerald of Brighton sought to relieve a pain and grabbed a bottle which stood on a shelf and drank part of the contents. It proved to be a bottle of liniment for external applications, and she is in a critical condition.

Rocky Soil of New Hampshire.
A Maine man writing from the West to his home paper describing his trip across the continent, has this to say: "When traversing the granite hills of New Hampshire I got the idea that nature had stuck them in there about as thickly as it was possible to do, and that the job had been rather poorly finished by strewing a little sand in between, to make the valleys. To a man used to the soil we have in the Aristook, it is a puzzle how people get a living in such places."

Wool Lace.

Wool lace is still retained, and there is no abatement of the vogue of Irish crochet and filet lace; new designs are constantly blossoming out. For gowns of summer silk, veiling or crepe, the trimming most favored is a combination of heavy blind-embroidery on cream or ecru batiste, with fine French gupure. Renaissance lace motifs in which the needle-work is done with silk the color of the gown, while the ribbon or braid, unusually heavy, is cream or white, make a most effective decoration.

Queer Personal Ornaments.

The latest craze in Paris is the wearing of a lighted lantern as a personal ornament. The fashion originated with a speculative manufacturer, whose "petites lanternes" were bought by tens of thousands at the fair of Neully. The lantern is very small and neat, and made in a Gothic form after an ancient model.

DURAND IS IMPROVING

CHANGE FOR BETTER CAME WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

STOOD UP ON THE LIMB THAT WAS PARALYZED.

HIS NAME NOT LIKELY TO BE WITHDRAWN.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 4.—The condition of Judge Durand took a marked turn for the better late Wednesday afternoon, and his friends now entertain hope for his recovery.

When it became necessary to move him from the chair in which the sufferer has sat for three days, he surprised the attendants by standing up strongly on the leg that has been paralyzed and partially walked to the sofa, where he reclined for a few moments until his chair could be made more comfortable.

Last night at 8:30 the physicians again induced him to forsake the chair in his library, where he has been seated since the attack, and for over an hour he reclined on the soft in comparative comfort. Later he was moved to his bed for the first time in seven or eight days. The physicians' examination at 9:40 showed the temperature 100.4-5 an increase of only four-fifths degree since the afternoon bulletin. His pulse has decreased four, to 96, and respiration from 36 to 30. The physicians reported a marked improvement in the paralysis, he being able to use his right arm and leg and walk a little. His lungs are also clearing.

The conference held Wednesday morning, which State Chairman Whiting came to Flint to attend, agreed that nothing should be done just at present towards declaring the first place on the state ticket vacant. While it wasn't stated in so many words, the tacit understanding of all concerning was that with Judge Durand close to death it would be an unseemly spectacle to declare him to be no longer the Democratic candidate for governor. Chairman Whiting was quite sure that he could not legally be taken off the ticket arbitrarily, even though he was not in condition to say whether he wanted to resign or to even sign a resignation. Nothing, it was decided, would be gained or lost by deferring action for a week or such a matter, and by that time it is assumed that he will have either passed away or else be improved to a degree that action can be taken which will terminate his candidacy without causing pain to the sensibilities of his family and friends. His physicians and family have now no other thought than that if he recovers he must retire.

The Democratic rally called for Grand Rapids Sept. 9 will take place as slated, though all the features of justification which were to mark the acceptance of the gubernatorial nomination by Judge Durand will be eliminated. Chairman Whiting came to this decision after an attempted interview with the stricken candidate, followed by a consultation at Detroit with State Secretary Hampton. Whiting's idea is that as there is practically no chance for Durand's name being left at the head of the ticket, the Grand Rapids gathering should be converted into a deliberative conference.

Her Lover Is Dead.

Norway, Mich., Sept. 4.—The inquest into the death of Anton Loeb, killed last week at the Vulcan mine, has developed the fact that a short time ago he sent funds to his native land to pay the expenses of his fiancée to this country. They were to be married immediately on her arrival, and the girl is already on the ocean, in ignorance that her prospective husband is dead. Loeb met his death by striking with his pick a blast which had failed to explode.

Spider's Bite Caused Death.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 4.—Mrs. Clay M. Belknap, wife of ex-Congressman Charles E. Belknap, died from an ulcerous growth on the shoulder, thought to have been caused by the bite of a spider. The affliction has been of several years' standing, during which time everything has been done for her that could be, but in vain.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The following Michigan pensioners were granted Wednesday increase—David P. Corey, Sherman City, $14; William M. Peterson, Laird, $12. Widows—Victoria Mosher, Ludington, $8; Roxie A. Froud, Big Rapids, $12; Frances A. Hunting, Ann Arbor, $3.

Same Old Whisky Bill.

Wine producers have never hesitated to utilize all that physics, chemistry and biology can do for them; champagne is frozen and wines are pasteurized and, if need be, sugared or plastered. The manufacturer of whisky stands still, and distillers, exercising any improved method with the epithet "doctor," view with mistrust any technique other than the one adopted by their forefathers.—Lancet.

NORTHVILLE, MICH. SEPT 5, 02

Why Meat Is Bar.

A few days ago the butchers, so convention assembled, declared in favor of abolishing the tariff on cattle and meat, to the end that the supposed shelter for the allied meat trust might be removed; but I am disposed to think the good farmers of my state would vote quite unanimously against such an experiment. "By the trend of the speeches made at the butchers' convention, I discover a sentiment well generally expressed there, that meat is being monopolized by the great packers. But I happen to have a tenant out in Iowa who has a fine bunch of cattle on which no packer holds a lien of any kind, and he writes me that he is willing to sell them to butchers if they will pay as much as the packers offer. I am quite sure the people would as soon buy their meat of the butchers as of the packers.

"Thus there is offered a splendid opportunity for any one to make all kinds of money, if he will but give the farmer as much money for his beefs and give the people as much beef for their money. Suppose we take the tariff off beef and then suppose the herds of cattle from Mexico and South America are brought in by the hundred thousand. They will find their way to the stock yards and the butchers will be compelled to bid against the packers then as now.

"No. The removal of the tariff on live stock and meat would not restore the butchers' business. It might ruin the farmers, but the packers could stand it, for nothing less than organized capital could enter the import meat business with packing houses in foreign countries, refrigerating ships and other expensive equipment.

"I have taken occasion to look this matter up since reading of these resolutions, and I think I can find reason for the present price of meat other than the tariff. I find that there were received at the stock yards in Chicago, in the one month of July, 1902, 65,000 less beefs and 170,000 less hogs than in the same month one year ago. That means 7,700 less animals per day."—Secy of Treasury Shaw Aug 19, 1902.

Judge Durand.

The sudden illness of Judge Durand of Flint, democratic nominee for governor, comes like a dark cloud upon a clear sky. His illness is deeply regretted by every citizen of the state and a universal prayer goes up that his life may be spared. Michigan has too few such real good men as Judge Durand and his death would be indeed a calamity.

CHIP OF OLD BLOCK

CLARENCE H MACKAY, NEW HEAD OF GREAT ESTATE.

Successor of the Bonanza King in Familiar With Large Business Operations—Fond of Society and Athletic Sports.

Clarrence Hungerford Mackay, only surviving son and principal heir to the great fortune left by the "bonanza king," for a number of years has been prominent in social, financial and sporting circles. Although he is only twenty-eight years of age, he has already developed great business acumen and is regarded as a fitting successor in the world of business to his acute and farseeing father, whose rise from humble miner to a recognized power in the affairs of the world reads like a romantic tale.

The new head of the Mackays was born in San Francisco. While still a child he was taken abroad, and his education was gained in England and France. His sojourn in Europe, however, has in no way affected his loyalty to his native land, and since coming of age he has made his home in this country.

Mr Mackay has been for years—since his college days, in fact—identified with the vast business interests of his father. He is a director in the Commercial Cable and Telegraph company and the Postal Telegraph company, of both of which the elder Mackay was president. Mr Mackay is also vice president of the former and fourth vice president of the latter company, and it is believed that he will succeed his father at the head of these concerns. Of late years the elder Mackay shifted much of the burden of management to the shoulders of his son. The latter has also been connected with other commercial interests and has shown great aptitude for business life.

The social position of the Mackays is of the highest both in America and in England. Much of their prestige is due to Mrs John W Mackay and to the high standing of Mrs Clarence H Mackay, who was before her marriage Miss Katherine, of Kitty, Durand, the descendant of a family prominent in New York society since the days when the British held sway on Manhattan Island. Kitty Durand and Clarence Mackay were married on May 17, 1898, and they have one daughter, to whom, in spite of her pressing social duties, Mrs Mackay is entirely devoted.

The home of the Mackays is at Harbor Hill near Roslyn, on Long Island. It is one of the most magnificent country seats in America, more than $1,600,000 having been expended on the house and grounds. The mansion, which is more than 300 feet long and 100 feet wide, stands on an eminence commanding a wide view of the most beautiful portion of Long Island. It is situated in the midst of an estate of 700 acres of park land.

The late millionaire was devoted to his daughter in law, and the value of his gifts to her if totaled up would amount to very many thousands of dollars. She is a tall brunette and before her marriage was considered one of the most beautiful and wisest girls in Gotham society. She has retained all of her charm and is very popular. The Mackays entertain lavishly in their homes in America and England.

Despite his pressing business interests and the demands on him made by society Mr. Mackay has found time to interest himself in sporting matters. He is an amateur athlete and sportsman and has been a champion player at rackets. In recent years he has been greatly attracted to racing and has a fine string of running horses. The Mackay colors—turquoise blue, with black sash and cap—are familiar to all frequenters of American race tracks. Mrs. Mackay is also greatly interested in the "royal sport."

The Mexican Peon.

The Mexican peon can eat more or get along on less than almost any other laborer on earth. In the southern part of the country, where the mountain Indians are at times drafted for work in the lower country, these men bring with them a ball of heavy cornmeal paste, about the size of their heads, slung about their necks with a string. When hungry, they break off a piece of this and mix it up in a cup of water, and upon this single ration they will subsist for an entire week.—Modern Mexico.

A TALE OF JERICHO.

THE DIRE AFTER EFFECTS OF DEACON BRADLY'S HAIR CUT.

Pap Perkins, Postmaster, Tells the Commotion It Caused in the Community In Which the Deacon Was Honored and Respected.

(Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis)

DEACON BRADLY was one of the pioneers of Jericho, and he attended more religious prayer meetings, weddings and camp meetings than any other three men in the town combined. He had hair that fell down on his shoulders, and he had a meek and humble countenance. It was said that about once a year his wife used the shears to clip the ends of his locks, but that was only rumor. There was no doubt about the deacon's goodness of heart. It had been tested on a hundred occasions and found sinon pure. He had been known to put a feather bed in the henhouse on a cold night for use of the fowls and to make a special brand of ice water for his pigs in cold weather. Nobody could remember of his being out of temper or having a word to say against anybody, and the good man was jogging along toward his reward when a calamity happened. A wedding and a funeral were the same thing to Deacon Bradley. He expected a glass of cider and a fried cake on either occasion, and he always arose at the proper time and observed that man dieth and fadeth away and that our loss is his gain. Hearing that Farmer Dan Skinner was going to be married to Lucy Randall on a certain day, the deacon drove seven miles to be present. He was made welcome and kindly entertained. In honor of the auspicious occasion peach brandy had been liberally mixed with the hard cider, and Deacon Bradley hung on to a good thing. He was more loquacious than usual, and he tried to tell a funny story, but his legs were fairly steady when he started for home. Half the journey had been completed when the good man met a wandering barber. The barber pleaded misfortune and poverty and offered to cut the deacon's hair for 10 cents and the offer was accepted. Deacon Bradley sat down under a roadside tree, and the barber went to work. While the deacon hummed the barber clip ped, and it was a winning combination. At the end of half an hour there was no longer any Deacon Bradley of Jericho. In his stead there was a fellow with his chin cocked up, a squint to his left eye and a hair cut of such pugilistic excellence that John L. Sullivan would have bowed before it. The long locks had hidden a head as round as a cannon ball, and when the hair had been clipped close the head seemed ready to duck a right hand swing.

THE BARBER WENT TO WORK.

"You've got a head on you, you have, old man!" said the barber as he stood back and admired his handiwork, and the deacon almost winked at him, as he climbed into his buggy to drive on. He hadn't gone a mile before he met a load of hay. The farmer stuck for the whole of the road and yelled out that he'd have it or die, but when he took notice of that fighting cut he apologized at once and drew clear into the fence. Ten minutes later a hog driver was encountered. He began to nip and cuss about folks frightening his hogs, but as the deacon held up a warning finger his words died away in his throat. He knew a scrapper when he saw one, and he didn't ache for a broken jaw. When the deacon reached home, his wife looked at him for a full minute before she recognized him. Then she clasped her hands over her heart and wailed out.

"Oh, Deacon Bradley, what have you went and done to change you so? You look just like the picture of the Omaha Kid I saw in the paper the other day!"

The deacon explained that it was nothing but a hair cut, but that was a house of mourning and lamentations. Mrs Bradley sent for Deacon Taylor to come over and see if anything could be done, and the neighbor came, took a look at that bullet head and gently murmured:

"I don't think I will say anything to Brother Bradley about it. He appears to be ready to hit out with both hands if provoked."

The news of the hair cut flew over the town of Jericho in an hour, and the excitement was greater than if a barn had been burned. The effects of the brandy cider had worn off by 7 o'clock in the evening, and the deacon looked at himself in the glass and shed tears, but everybody insisted on misunderstanding him. Deacon Jones, who had known him for forty-five years and never heard of his harming a grasshopper, looked at that head and noted the pose of it and said:

"Deacon Bradley, you are a wolf in sheep's clothing. I never saw but one picture of a prizefighter, but you can't deceive me. You are a slugger and have been lying low on us all these years."

A tin peddler was stopping at the hotel over night, and hearing the post-office crowd talking of the event, he slipped in with:

"I'd done a little scrapping myself in my day, and you can't fool me on a pug. You can't judge by the hair cut alone. If you boys will go up and get the deacon outdoors, I'll soon find out whether he can put up his dukes or not."

Three or four of the crowd called at the deacon's and got him out to the gate, and the peddler came along and gave him the yank.

Every man contended that the good man instinctively squared off for a row, and the peddler backed water and solemnly said:

"Don't any of you boys try any monkey work on that old codger. He's ace high and all there, and if he breaks loose you'll need an addition to your cemetery."

There was some talk of calling a public meeting at the town hall, but the idea was abandoned for fear of exciting the deacon. He didn't want to get up Thursday night prayer meetings, but he had to, and another brother took his place in passing the contribution box on Sundays. That fighting hair cut worked him out of his job, and no matter how much he complained his head was there as an offset. The minister was about the only man who stuck by the deacon. He had never seen a scrapper either in picture or in the flesh, and all heads were alike to him. Even when it was pointed out to him that the deacon had one shoulder hunched up and his chin stuck out he contended that it might be only the natural pose of a good man—one who had helped to send 10,000 Bibles to the heathen in Africa.

Deacon Bradley's hair would have grown out again in time, but the people wouldn't give him time. They continued to misjudge him and keep his heart on the ace, and this brought about the end. One day, six weeks after the malign work of the barber, the deacon was sitting on his veranda and singing a hymn in a sad voice when the town bully of Dobbs Ferry came along and offered to fight him four rounds for the championship. The good man refused, but he was running down his checks, but the bully began dancing around and shooting out his right and left, and after a minute the deacon sat down and gasped, once or twice and was no more. That hair cut and public criticism had broken his heart.

The last census gave Alaska a population of 40,000. The people were scattered so badly that it was impossible to count them, and it is likely that the number was much greater.

Lingering Summering Colds.

Don't let a cold run at this season. Summer colds are the hardest kind to cure and if neglected may linger along for months. A long siege like this will pull down the strongest constitution. One Minute Cough Cure will break up the attack at once. Safe, sure, acts at once. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, all throat and lung troubles. The children like it. Murdock Bros.

Runs Over Five Hundred Plows.

W B Peebles, of Vienna, Ala. is one of the largest planters and most prominent men in the South. He runs over 500 plows on his plantations. "About five years ago," he says, "my infant daughter began cutting teeth and as is often the case her bowels became deranged and it ran into chronic dysentery. I had her treated by three of the best physicians in Pickens county, but her case baffled the skill of all of them, and my baby became so weak and emaciated that she had to be nursed on a pillow. The nurse would sometimes have to change her napkin as often as twenty-three times a day. At last we got hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and by using one bottle of it she was entirely cured of her trouble. I consider it the most valuable remedy on the market for all bowel troubles. For sale by George C. Hueston."

A Choir of Babies.

Grace church, New York, boasts of the youngest choir singers in the world. Every Sunday afternoon a chorus of baby girls takes part in the service. The youngest two of this band are only four years old—hardly able to walk, and yet they chant in perfect unison, clearly and distinctly. Each small girl wears a white apron and a closely fitting baby cap, and they are a picturesque sight.

Feet Swollen to Immense Size.

"I had kidney trouble so bad," says J J Cox of Valle View, Ky., "that I could not work, my feet were swollen to immense size and I was confined to my bed and physicians were unable to give me any relief. My doctor finally prescribed Foley's Kidney Cure, which made a well man of me."

Avoid serious results of kidney or bladder disorder by taking Foley's Kidney Cure.

King Edward Sets Fashion.

Since it became known that King Edward VII has been in the habit of taking a pint of champagne at breakfast some of the younger swells of New York city have tried it, too. Before that, though, many of these young men were accustomed to sip a pint of sauterne at breakfast. They considered that a mild "hair." Champagne is noise of a "horsehair."

Not Dogged for Life.

Sham Champagne.

American apples are cored, sliced and dried, sent to France and then converted into cider. With the addition of carbonic acid gas and yeast and a little flavoring powder, the cider becomes champagne and much of it comes to England and is drunk under the delusion that it is of the best brand.—London Family Doctor.

The Salmon Trust.

All of the salmon canneries of British Columbia have been "morganned." In other words, there is a salmon trust. The capital, however, is small, only $3,000,000. The idea is to save the by-products, which hitherto have been wasted. The canned product will be, as usual, a portion of fish chucked into a tin of grease. From the scales and bones will be manufactured guano and glue. The "by-product" is the salvation of many a business these days.

-Reindeer Flesh for Food.
It is stated that a strenuous attempt is being made by some enterprising Norwegians to popularize reindeer flesh as an article of diet in Europe. The experiment of raising the animals in large numbers for slaughtering purposes will be first tried. They expect to find profitable markets in France and Belgium, and will even endeavor to induce beef-eating Britons to purchase the article.

DURAND'S CONDITION

WAS THE SAME AT LATE HOUR TUESDAY EVENING.

MAY NOT BE ABLE TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

CHAIRMAN WHITING VISITS HIM FOR CONSULTATION.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 3.—Foremost in the minds and the all-absorbing topic of conversation in this city is the illness of Judge Durand, who was so suddenly stricken down on Monday evening.

The great popularity of the judge, so plainly evidenced by enthusiasm over his nomination for governor by the Democrats, receives fresh emphasis with each hour of his illness. Universal sorrow prevails everywhere. Letters of congratulation upon the honor done him at the convention have been received in shoals, but expressions of sympathy and regret for his sickness will far exceed them.

Chairman Justin R. Whiting of the State Democratic committee arrived last evening and was in consultation with Mr. E. O. Wood as to possibilities affecting the political outlook and plans for action. He said that it would be cruel to expect the judge to stand for election even should he seem to recover his usual health, as a man occupying political position becomes a public servant and must meet the demands made on time and strength.

He thinks Mr. Durand and his family should have their wishes respected in regard to the withdrawal of his name from the ticket.

It was decided to defer until today the consultation as to whether, in view of his serious condition, the judge should remain at the head of the Democratic ticket. At the request of the family the physicians in the case, the judge's brother, L. I. Durand, and Chairman Whiting will meet and determine the question.

In response to the question as to what action would be taken in the case of death of Judge Durand or withdrawal from the ticket, Mr. Whiting said that the last resolution of the state convention provided that in such case the committee should have the power to place some other name before the public for election to office, and that when the state nominees and committeemen met Sept. 9 at Grand Rapids, it would seem a proper time to regulate the matter.

Mr. Whiting would not commit himself as to any choice he had personally or what he knew to be the preference of others on the committee.

Charles A. Durand, son of the judge says in any event his father's name must be withdrawn. He would be unable to stand a campaign or assume the duties of office if elected.

At 3 o'clock last evening there was no decided change in the patient's condition, though the pulse and temperature show a rise, which is natural at night. Flint physicians gave out the following bulletin: Pulse, 104, temperature, 101.5, respiration 34 and regular. Beef tea and some liquid refreshment have been given in great moderation. Dr. J. H. Charters is quoted as saying that the patient was perceptibly weaker, in his judgment.

His right arm for a time seemed paralyzed, but he is now able to fold it. He cannot speak, although his mind is clear. He is propped up in a large chair; were he to lie down he could not breathe; in fact, he has been obliged to sleep in a chair for a week.

One of the four Flint physicians in the case is with him continuously. They cannot, however, do anything except give him hypodermic injections to stimulate the action of the heart.

The doctors report that there is no organic trouble. Their opinion is that the difficulty is simply the result of nervous strain under which Judge Durand has been since he was nominated for governor.

Want Andrews' Verdict Set Aside.
Detroit, Mich., Sept. 3.—Frank C. Andrews, by his attorney, Alex J. Groesbeck, and his counsel, Fred A. Baker, filed with the recorder's court yesterday afternoon a petition to have the verdict of guilty set aside. Forty-nine reasons are given, the most important of which relates to the alleged conduct of Juror George W. Bock. The examination of Bock in the recorder's court previous to his acceptance as a juror in the trial of Andrews is given in full. He swore that although he had expressed an opinion as to Andrews' guilt, it was on the street, and on the second day after the exposure. He believed there was no reason why he could not give the accused an impartial hearing. It is charged in Andrews' petition that Bock swore thus for the purpose of getting on the jury, and that he was really bent on convicting the respondent. It is claimed that he was violently prejudiced against Andrews.

DENOUNCED MINE OPERATORS;

Detroit Citizens Take Action in Public Mass Meeting.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 4.—In stinging rebuke to the coal barons of Pennsylvania and Virginia, the first sympathetic note has been sounded by the citizens of Detroit last night, massed in earnest deliberation in the Light Guard armory.

With speeches of bitter denunciation, and more sober indignation, of appeal and demand, by letters of protest and by resolutions bearing the local ultimatum, war was declared against the operators. A unanimous protest was made against the greedy trust in defense of the striking miners and the rights of the coal consuming public.

Over 200 sturdy citizens from all walks of life came together in the appeal of the Trades Council and on the invitation of the miners to lend aid and comfort to the miners and to declaim against the refusal of the owners to submit the question to arbitration.

On the platform were nearly a hundred prominent citizens, who acted as vice-presidents. Organized labor was largely represented. Many unions marched into the hall 50 or 100 strong with their Labor day garb on and seated themselves in bodies about the hall. A vigorous speech was made by Mayor Maybury, who expressed the hope that this mass meeting would be taken as the initiative of similar meetings throughout the country, which would raise no ineffective protest. Following him Rev. J. C. Evans of Pennsylvania, a man who mined coal for eighteen years with his own hands. His address was most energetic.

Baer, the president of the Reading railroad, who recently published his divine credentials was roasted to a turn in the resolutions adopted, and they were adopted with three cheers and a whoop. Mayor Maybury was made permanent chairman and Joseph W. Loaghead was named secretary.

Found a Man's Body.

Mnemonie, Mich. Sept. 4.—In a bad state of disintegration the fresh body lay upon the bones, without shoes or coat, the body of an unknown man was found under an old-fashioned wooden building yesterday. The body was found with the hands and feet bound together by clothes, and had evidently been there some time. The police think it a case of death caused by drink or possibly frozen to death during the cold spring. Nothing was found about the person or his identification.

Was a Saginaw Man.

Helena, Ark. Sept. 4.—Colonel Robert Fitzgibbon of Saginaw, Mich. died at his plantation eight miles below Helena, aged seventy-eight. He came to Helena before the war marrying a Miss Hubbard in this county, but being a union man joined that army and saw active service throughout the civil war. He owned a very fine place here, and his oldest son, Rocky Fitzgibbon had the management of it. The younger son, Foster, went to Saginaw, only a couple of months ago to make his home.

Likely Fell From Train.

Lapeer, Mich., Sept. 4.—The body of a man said to bear the description of Lew Hamlin of Dryden township was picked up Wednesday morning on the Michigan Central tracks near Carpenter's station five miles north of Lapeer. The remains were taken to Colambville. He had been dead some hours. It is thought he fell from a passenger train, as a slight bruise was found on his head. A shipping bill and about $18 in money were found in his pockets. Hamlin was thirty-eight years of age.

Mrs. Touse Took Strychnine

Lansburg, Mich., Sept. 4.—Mrs. Fred Touse, a young farmer's wife, living in the township of Olive Clinton county, committed suicide Wednesday morning by taking strychnine. Domestic trouble is the cause as signed.

Five Italians Killed.

New York, Sept. 4.—The bottom of a huge receiving tank, in the course of construction for the Brooklyn Union Gas company in North Twelfth street, Williamsburg, collapsed Wednesday afternoon and five men were killed. They were Italians and together with two other Italians, who miraculously escaped, were engaged underneath the tank in riveting the sheet iron sides in position. A great number of workmen were employed on the top of the tank, and when the crash came the loss of life was thought to be very much greater than proved to be the case. Police reserves and firemen were called out, with the result that when practically all the wreckage had been cleared only five dead bodies were found.

Shot the Editor.—Thomas H. Williams, Jr., the well-known horseman, president of the California Jockey club, shot and seriously wounded Frederick Merritt, publisher of the San Francisco News-Letter Wednesday night at Merritt's residence in San Francisco. The shooting is supposed to have grown out of articles printed by Merritt reflecting on Williams.

President's Detroit Itinerary.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 3.—Mayor Maybury has received a telegram from George B. Cortelyou, secretary to President Roosevelt, asking for information as to what would be required of President Roosevelt in this city when he attends the Spanish War Veterans' convention. In response the mayor sent the following message: President's itinerary substantially as follows: Arrive Sunday morning, Sept. 21. Breakfast local committee at Hotel Cadillac. Attend Fort Street Presbyterian church with General and Mrs. Alger and mayor. Informal lunch. Lower at home of General Alger, with a few friends. Return to Hotel 2 p. m. Later a ride around the city. Evening spent as president may desire. Monday morning president attends opening session of Spanish War Veterans convention. On the adjournment of the convention will take boat ride on the river. Afternoon review of war veterans' parade. Evening banquet Spanish war veterans.

Death Penalty For Stealing a Ride.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 3.—While a mixed passenger and freight train on the Twin Lake branch of the Mackinac division of the Michigan-Central was running from Lewiston to Grayling about 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, a wheel on one of the freight cars broke just east of Big Creek and six freight cars were thrown from the track. When the work of clearing up the wreck was in progress a man named Henry Hulme of Saginaw was found under one of the freight cars so badly injured that he died shortly after. He was evidently stealing a ride. He went north two weeks ago to go to work. He was forty-six years old and leaves a mother, two brothers and a sister, who reside in Saginaw. One of his brothers, Will Hulme, is a noted athlete.

Likely Plead Insanity.

Muskegon, Mich., Sept. 3.—David P. James the aged Boston farmer who killed his son last Sunday, was arraigned in Justice Carr's court Tuesday afternoon. He asked for an examination which will be given him Friday. His defense will very likely be insanity. In an interview he said he had been on an asylum on three different occasions, and that his mind was in such a state of excitement after he had fired twice at his son who was about to attack him with a saw that he had no recollection of what he did. James admits that he killed a negro in Cass county that served five years in Jackson for the crime. He says he killed the negro to protect himself and family.

Her Clothes Caught Fire.

Bath Creek, Mich. Sept. 3.—Mrs. Ed Stafford was seriously burned yesterday afternoon. While getting rid of a bunch in the back yard she fell into the fire and her apron caught. She ran screaming to E. B. Van Gorp who was working near, and extinguished the flames but not all the woman's clothes were nearly burned off and her right shoe badly burned. She will live however. Mr. Stafford recently secured work at Bath, and his wife was preparing to join him.

An Auto Frightened His Horses

Detroit, Mich. Sept. 3.—George W. Nissel, a prominent Detroitier, died at Harper hospital at 11 1/2 yesterday as the result of a fracture of the skull and internal injuries suffered by being pitched headlong from his carriage while out driving about 9 o'clock in the morning. His spirited team became frightened at the rapid approach of an automobile and at that moment the front wheel of his carriage came off. Mr. Nissel was thrown violently to the pavement.

Enormous Market of Peaches.

Grand Rapids, Mich. Sept. 3.—Over 50,000 bushels of peaches were marketed in the city yesterday, breaking the record of previous seasons for a single day. It is predicted that 1,000,000 bushels will be marketed in Grand Rapids during the season and that $75,000,000 will be paid the farmers of Kent county and immediate vicinity for their fruit. At one time today 1,512 wagons of fruit were on the market.

Chaplain Orwick Resigns.

Jackson, Mich. Sept. 3.—Rev. J. F. Orwick, who has held the position of chaplain at the prison since his retirement of Chaplain Hickox, is chaplain no more. Warden Vincent informed Orwick that his (Orwick's) resignation would be pleasantly received, and Mr. Orwick promptly resigned, the resignation taking effect Monday.

Alleged Dynamiter Jailed.—George Colbath is in jail at Gaylord charged with being guilty of the recent attempt to blow up the house of Marshal Morse, at Vanderbilt, with dynamite. He was arrested at a lumber camp near Onaway.

Wants Pay for Son's Death.—William La Barge, father of the young man who was killed at Monroe last week, while trying to evade arrest, is about to bring suit against Lyott Bloodgood, the man who fired the fatal shot, for damages, Walter Lemrand, who was the instigator of the pursuit, has left the city, and his whereabouts are unknown.

Masons Owned the Town.—Mayor Schlegel of Lapeer, turned the keys of the city over to the Masonic fraternity Tuesday. Members of the order were there from adjacent lodges in the county and were entertained by the local lodge. Work began at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. A reception committee of 100, headed by the Lapeer city band, met Ashlar lodge, of Detroit, at the train, which was an hour late.

Paderewski's Wealth.
 Paderewski, the celebrated pianist, is an excellent man of business. All the money he earns by his profession, and it is said to exceed $100,000 a year, is invested to the best advantage. He is said to be a shareholder in a well-known piano firm as well as part proprietor in one of the chief hotels in Warsaw. Paderewski has been heard to say that he has never had a single serious financial loss during the time he has conducted his own investments.

An Irishman's Advice.
 In a speech in London the other day Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman told an admirable story of the advice given by an Englishman, a Scotchman and an Irishman respectively to a gentleman whose servant was constantly breaking articles in the household. The Englishman said to the employer: "Oh, get rid of him—dismiss him." The Scotchman's advice was: "Stop the money out of his wages." "But," said the master, he breaks more than his wages amount to." "Then," said the Irishman, "raise his wages."

Ten Dollar Suits For Young Men

'Tis a choice variety of fabrics we offer—blues, blacks and the most attractive of fancy mixtures—garments are of the latest fashion and so perfectly tailored that well—you'd think they were made to measure productions. Styles are particularly pleasing especially to young men who wish to keep up with the procession. Sizes 16 to 19.

You'll find plenty of $10 Suits at other stores, but if you want comparison, take any of the other fellows' $12 Suits and see how we can equal them for $10. The best at Traver's always and fairly priced. You can't buy any trash here.

The City in Brief.
Plymouth fair September 16 19
Need a little of that June and July rain now
Born, August 29, to Mr and Mrs F J Collins, a boy
Seems kinder natural to hear the school bell ring again
The Fourth Mich Cavalry will reunite at Farmington on Sept 15
James Orton has bought the Clark farm west of town and will move there in the spring
B G Filkins has purchased of his brother Charles the millinery store property on Center street
Farmers and others are warned to look out for a patent pitchfork fellow with a blank note for you to sign.
Wm Taft has delighted his children by presenting them with a very pretty Shetland pony and a cart. It's the latest rig in town.
Pete Macomber has gone to Marine City to take charge of the Rapid railway company's freight depot there.
Aaron Taft and Harry Mooney have been awarded the contract for the excavation for the new ponds at the U S post station here.
The Baptist ladies will sell homemade bread, cake and baked beans in the vacant store east of Neilson's Saturday, Sept. 6. A liberal patronage is solicited.
Edna and Vera Thrasher gave a lawn party Saturday afternoon to some of their little friends; in honor of their cousin Vivian Elsie of Grand Ledge, who was visiting them last week.
She that was Miss Bessie Cooper, and who is quite well known to some of Northville's younger people, died at her home in Gaylord Saturday afternoon of tuberculosis. She was a cousin of Mrs Charles Gardner of this place.
It has been suggested that the council raise the electric light meter rate to 9 cents and give all-night service during the winter. The idea seems a good one and the small advance in price would more than pay the extra expense.
Jas. Davis narrowly missed a watery grave while sailing on Park lake here Tuesday. The big waves capsized his boat but the plucky park manager bravely breached the billows and finally reached the shore in safety.
When once liberated within your system, it produces a most wonderful effect. It's worth one's last dollar to feel the pleasure of life that comes by taking Rocky Mountain Tea.—Murdock Bros.

Adjourned meeting of the council tonight
Many of our correspondents are again late this week.

Annual W R C picnic at Nelson Bogart's this afternoon.
Mrs. A. S. Nichols is quite ill at her home in River Rouge.

Augusta Stewart is the new clerk at Gardner's Kandy Kitchen.
Dr. Murdoch is seriously afflicted with rheumatism of the eyes.

Robert Yerkes, Sr., is suffering from an attack of rheumatism
Daniel Rogers is quite ill as the result of an operation performed on Sunday

Miss J A Dubuar, entertained eight ladies at a six o'clock dinner Tuesday afternoon.
John Joslin is clerking for R H. Puddy in place of Mark Wilks, who leaves to attend school

The council has ordered a new electric light put up at the corner of Center and Cady streets

Mrs Wm Kay, who underwent an operation Saturday is getting along very nicely so far though she is very ill

Mrs. Della Harmon of the Record office is again on the sick list, this time with an attack of erysipelas of the face

Mrs Dan Wick, who recently secured a divorce from her husband, is now married to a Mr Ausan and lives near Walled Lake

Mrs Fred Burch will be able to be brought home from the hospital tomorrow all of which her many friends here will be glad to know

Berleigh Randall has sold out his barber shop here to Detroit parties and goes to Caro to take charge of the one in the new hotel there
Fred Hinman goes with him

Harry German of Carleton, a former Northville boy, is getting more than a state reputation as a base ball pitcher and he may yet be seen in the American or National league
He has of late pitched several successful games for the Toledo team.

The board of directors of the Globe Furniture Co. had a meeting Monday and talked over the sale of the Globe property to Calbe Bros. The directors think the plant went too cheap and the court may be asked to have it re-advised. The property invoices about $60,000 and ought seemingly to bring half that figure at least.

George Johnson was before Judge Webster Monday on a charge of being somewhat under the influence of dark colored liquids Saturday night but upon promising to "never again" he was released on suspended sentence. During his preambles Saturday night George fell on the pavement and cut an ugly wound in the back of his head.

Mrs. E. A. Shafer of Plymouth, mother of E. A. Shafer of this place, received a severe scalp wound Monday by falling from the stoop of her house. The scalp was laid open for six inches necessitating some sixteen stitches. Mrs. Shafer is 79 years old but it is not thought serious results will follow though the shock is a severe one for so aged a person.

Baptist Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]
Remember the home made baking sale in the vacant store one door east of Neilson's, Saturday.
Subject for next Sunday morning "The Mountain of Transfiguration." The morning service will be followed by the observance of the Lord's supper.
Miss Bertha VanZile is the leader for the BYPE Sunday evening, and it is hoped that the young people will see the importance of sustaining their own service.

Methodist Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]
Less than two weeks left until conference.
Preaching services as usual Sunday. In the morning the pastor will speak on "Temptation."
At the official meeting Monday evening, Treasurer John Dolph reported that the amount needed to close all accounts of the year was $256.31. Of this amount $17 is due the presiding elder, $23 to the janitor and the balance, $216, is due the pastor. The stewards' report reported $16.50 on hand to apply on these accounts, leaving a total of $240 still to be provided for. Toward this amount, pledges were reported which, together with the regular collections will probably reduce at $100 more. We have thirteen stewards on the board and they are after the other $140 needed to clear up everything against the church. We are not all the members of the church and congregation "lend a hand" and provide fully for this before conference meets on the 17th. Give the board a lift and do it cheerfully, that we may for once begin the new conference year with a clean slate. The Ladies Aid and League both have all their bills paid and are free from debt

Presbyterian Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]
Miss Violet Crocker sang a very pretty solo on Sunday morning
The bible lesson study for next Sunday mornng is found in Deut 18 9-19
Mr. Jerome has resigned his position as editor of the Michigan Presbyterian
All in the Sunday school last Sunday were very glad to hear the remarks of Mrs Allen of Holly
Every officer and teacher of the Sunday school was present on Sunday morning last, with one exception
Rev. H S Jenkinson, formerly pastor of this church, and Mrs Jenkinson were the guests of friends in town last week.
Nearly enough money has been raised to pay for resubbling the church. Mr McKahan will be glad to see any who desire to contribute.
Will the ladies who have the basket packages kindly see that they are kept in circulation and returned to the Literary society before the 15th.
Mrs. Jerome went to Toledo on Thursday where she addressed a ladies' missionary meeting in the Collingwood Avenue Presbyterian church.
The sermon next Sunday evening will be the second in the series of "Famous Johns of Christian History." The subject will be "The Beloved Disciple"

We Wonder.

- When a man flaunts his prosperity in the face of his less fortunate fellow he is a lucky individual if he retains their good will. On this account we wonder that Neal of Northville, a candidate for the legislature, should in advertising a new steam cooking apparatus, have said in his paper: "One may be seen in use in the house of the publisher of this paper any time we are going to have pie for dinner or cake for supper."—Detroit Tribune
But that "any time" is rather indefinite

Superstition About Trees.
Traditions are common in western Kansas of trees suddenly dying without apparent cause after having been used as gallows for lynchings. Many are said never to have leaved again after this experience

During the Railroad Suit.
"Your honor," said the lawyer, "my client demands $10,000 damages."
"For what?"
"For loss of speech."
"But I thought he merely had two fingers cut off."
"Exactly, your honor! He is a deaf mute!"

Wanted—A Plural.

What is the plural of metropolis? Euphony rebels against metropolises. An Australian paper solves the difficulty thus: "The mutual jealousy of Melbourne and Sydney prevents either of these fine cities becoming the commonwealth capital. Why not, then, select one of the smaller metropolises of the states?" The innovation is not justified by any rules of grammar, and illustrates the inconvenience of pressing Greek words into English molds.—London Chronicle

Make Paint of Mummies.

Manufacturers of artists' colors now often use mummies in making their colors, and it is almost certain that a small percentage of some ancient Egyptian rulers went to compose some of the colors used in various E. A.'s in painting their portraits for this year's academy. Mummies were usually preserved in bitumen or the best pitch, says the London Tattler. This blended with the 'bone of the mummy gives a peculiarly beautiful tint, especially in brown or dark blue.

Lawyer as Indian Chief.

George C. Hume, a lawyer of Chilton, Wis., is about to receive a unique honor. He will be made chief of the Brothertown Indian nation. Mr. Hume aided the Indians gratuitously in filing proofs of the validity of their claims against the government, and in return they have elected the lawyer to the chieftainship of the nation. He will accept, as the office is merely a nominal one and will not interfere with his other duties.

Wickedest Capital in Europe.

Bjornsen's well known saying that "Christiania was the wickedest capital in Europe" is borne out by a monster trial against some twenty keepers of baby farms, where wholesale murder of infants has been going on for the last ten or fifteen years. Several of these baby farms had private cemeteries in gardens and fields, where the remains of a small army of tiny corpses were dug up.

Refused University-Degree.

It is declared by a man who claims to have direct information that Harvard university twice offered an honorary degree to Archbishop Williams, who on both occasions courteously asked to be excused from accepting the honor. Some years ago Governor Cleveland took a similar course on being offered an "honorary" degree by Harvard

"The Wife's Burden."

A teacher in a New York kindergarten tells the following story: "I asked one of the larger boys the other day what he was going to do when he left school. 'Well, I won't get married,' he answered quickly. 'And why won't you?' 'Wife no good! White man's burden!' was the startling answer"

CAPITAL TO BE GAY

WASHINGTON PREPARING FOR A BRILLIANT SOCIAL SEASON.

Renovated White House Will Be the Scene of Splendid Entertainments, Mrs. Roosevelt and Her Social Rulings—New Faces in Highest Circles.

When the repairs and alterations to the White House, now being made, are completed, that historic mansion will be, even more than before, the focus of Washington social gaiety. During the coming winter Mrs. Roosevelt will have at her disposal more room for domestic life and social activities than any other White House mistress ever possessed. Judging from present indications, she will make the greatest possible use of the renovated, stately old mansion, and the social life of the White House during the coming season will be brilliant in the extreme.

For some time it has been believed that the Washington social season would open this year at an unusually early date. The latest report, however, is to the effect that, although Mrs. Roosevelt and her family will return to the executive mansion during the early part of October, there will be no great formal entertainments before the opening of the official season on the 1st of January. It is authoritatively announced that Mrs. Roosevelt has notified the ladies of the cabinet that their assistance will not be required before the date of the great New Year's reception.

Although Washington society has lost by death, retirement and other causes some of its most popular leaders, new faces have appeared, and the life of the capital promises to be gayer than ever. For one thing, the gloom cast over last year's season by the death of President McKinley has been removed. Another new cause for social activity is the fact that the social life of the White House has been re-energized by Mrs. Roosevelt who is an energetic and exceedingly able social leader. The latest statement on the subject is that the social life will be held in the social salons, the popularly known "blue room" of the White House, exclusive of the White House entertainments. Some

Mrs. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW. Mrs. Roosevelt's rulings, especially those relating to a snuff box between what she considers society and of ficialdom, have caused envy and heartburning.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be compelled to conduct her social campaign with little assistance from the ladies of the cabinet. Mrs. Hay, whose rank in Washington society is second only to that of the president's wife, is still in mourning. Mrs. Root will probably pass the winter in Europe for the health of her son. Mrs. Payne is an invalid, and the new secretary of the navy is unmarried and without a female head to his household. The only vigorous coadjutors of Mrs. Roosevelt, in all probability, will be Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Knox.

A number of changes affecting the social season have taken place in Washington, especially in the diplomatic corps. Lady Pauncelote returned to England after the death of her husband, but her place will be ably filled by Mrs. Herbert, the wife of the new ambassador, who is an American by birth. Although Mme. Cambon, the consort of the retiring French ambassador, has been here but a short time, she has made an agreeable impression, and her departure will be regretted. Mme. Jusserand, who succeeds her, is an American.

In the senatorial set probably the most important change is the retirement of Mrs. McMillan, widow of the senator from Michigan. It is reported that Senator Frye will soon marry, and Senator Clark of Montana is also said to be contemplating matrimony. Their official standing, the influence of the former and the enormous wealth of the latter insure for their wives influence in the social life of the capital should they desire it.

Prominent among the arrivals in Washington society is the new Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, the young and charming wife of the junior senator from New York. Mrs. Depew has moved in the highest social circles of America, England and France, and she has won her way to the hearts of her husband's American friends. She is very charitably inclined and takes the greatest interest in sociological matters. The new mistress of the Corcoran mansion is very fastidious in her choice of friends and prefers intellect to wealth. She is a blond of more than medium height and speaks English with a slight, a very slight, French accent, acquired during her long stay abroad. Mrs. Depew's tastes are decidedly musical.

INTERESTED IN CONVICTS.

National Prison Congress Soon to Meet in Annual Session.

At the meeting of the National Prison Congress in Philadelphia Sept. 13 to 17 will be discussed a number of questions of the utmost importance to those interested in sociological or penological matters. The programme of the congress covers five day and five evening sessions. Such subjects as "The Whipping Post," "The Relation and Duty of the Community to the Discharged Prisoner," "The Indeterminate Sentence" and "The Juvenile Delinquent" will be read and discussed, and much good is expected to result from the meeting.

The association is not one of mere theorists, imbued with fanciful or impracticable ideas as to the treatment of lawbreakers, but is composed of persons of experience in dealing with the criminal classes. In addition to the papers the congress will consider reports of the standing committees on preventive and reformatory work, criminal law reform, probation work, prison discipline, police work and discharged prisoners and their treatment.

The National Prison Congress has been in existence about thirty years and numbers among its members, past and present, some of the best men and all of the eminent penologists of the country. Rufus B. Hayes, ex-president of the United States, was at one time president of the association. Although among its members are included men who have been familiar for many years with the darker sides of human nature, the majority of them are strong believers in the ultimate reform of humanity and the final abolition of crime. They hold that the true object of punishment for crime is the reformation of the wrongdoer.

Among the men who will read papers before the coming meeting will be Colonel Richard Sylvester, chief of the police force of Washington; Warden Albert Gavim of the Connecticut state prison; the Rev. Dr. R. H. Cornwall of Philadelphia; Judge J. Franklin Port of Newark, N. J. and Dr. J. T. Gilman, warden of the prison at Toronto, Canada.

GREATEST OF FLATIRONS.

The Latest and Queerest of New York's Big Skyscrapers.

Probably the pier of New York that is attracting most attention nowadays from both visitors to the city and natives is the corner of Broadway, Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street, where the "flatiron" building has just been erected. This gigantic structure is one of the architectural curiosities of the world, being a tall, massive building of triangular shape. It stands upon a bit of land shaped like a flatiron, whence it derives its name. The "flatiron" building is twenty one stories in height and towers 285 feet above the pavement. Each floor contains 8,690 square feet. Its broader end is toward the south, and the point of the flatiron looks up Fifth avenue. The structure is composed of stone and steel, is of the latest approved fireproof construction and cost $1,500,000. Viewed from the north, the "flatiron" building resembles nothing so much as the bow of a gigantic ship.

GREAT ART PRIZES.

PHILADELPHIA ACADEMY'S RICH OFFER TO STUDENTS.

Thousands of Dollars For Successful Contestants to Be Spent in Study Abroad—One of America's Oldest Art Schools and Its Graduates.

In Philadelphia, the very home and center of the painter's brush and the sculptor's chisel are mightily interested in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts' competition for the Cresson prizes. The conditions of the contest provide for five prizes, which rank easily with the best rewards ever offered to art students. Each winner in the contest will be paid $2,000, to cover the expenses of two years' study abroad, and if the work of the successful student be considered meritorious enough to warrant such advance $1,000 for a third year's study will be added. Students of painting or sculpture are eligible to compete for the awards.

The Cresson prizes are to be paid from the income of a fund bequeathed for that purpose conjointly by Emile and Priscilla Cresson of Philadelphia. The fund yields an annual income of from $15,000 to $20,000. The competition is not restricted to Philadelphians, but is open to art students from any part of the country. Mr. John D. Pierce, curator of the schools of the academy, has received several hundred applications from other cities and towns since the announcement of the competition was made. It is understood that the prizes will be awarded according to the merit of the work done each month during the coming year, not alone according to that shown at the annual exhibition, although the latter will also receive much consideration.

No discrimination of sex is made in the competition, and any or all of the prizes may be awarded to women. Predictions are freely made that a majority of the honors will be carried off by women students, since the latter have distinguished themselves of late years especially in Philadelphia. This year two out of the three regular prizes awarded by the academy went to women: the two hundred dollar Toppan award going to Miss Helen D. Hunt and Miss Martha Walter winning the two hundred dollar prize. In the field of illustration especially, has the gentle sex been conspicuous.

The founders of the Cresson fund exercised wise judgment in decreeing that the prizes should be distributed under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, since that institution is one of the greatest art schools of America and of the world. The schools of the academy have a long and honorable history, dating back to 1805. Many men and women prominent in American art have been graduated or have taught at the academy, among them Edwin A. Abbey, the painter of the coronation of Edward VII, who is a member of the Royal academy of Great Britain and the National Academy of America. Among the many other students who have won distinction are Cecilia Beaux, Percy Ives, Charles Grafly and William T. Small. A recent writer calls the schools of the academy "those busy, comradely-making, emulous schools so endeared to every student who has ever felt their fascination, so full of noble traditions that reach back to the Augustan stages of American art."

Of the former students of the academy who have come lately before the public as illustrators none has done better work than Miss Elizabeth Shrepper Green of Philadelphia. Miss Green's work is seen in the pages of the best American magazines, her pictures of juvenile life being noted for their charm. Miss Green, who is still a very young woman to have won distinction in the world of art, is a native of Philadelphia. She spent three years at the academy and then became a disciple of Howard Pyle, attending his lectures at the Drexel institute. According to some critics, traces of his influence are still to be seen in her drawings.

Fitted.

"I should say! He's a natural born congressman. Why, he can take any old anecdote, twist it around a little and tell it as if it had been an actual experience of his own!"—Philadelphia Press.

NOT LIKE OTHER MEN

By Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey,
Author of "The Brotherhood of Silence," "The Quality of a Sin," Etc.
Copyright, 1901, by Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey.

"She knew it least of all, papa."
"Do you mean to tell me?"
"Hush, papa."
"There isn't a woman in this infernal neighborhood I can't imagine."
"Yes, there is I am a woman, and I am in the neighborhood—very much in"

Father and daughter started each simultaneously.

her duty to administer to the orphan paled into insignificance in the presence of the revelation for which fate had destined her to be the medium. The young girl whose form was stretched upon her bed believed that she was a man; had been taught to despise all women; had been educated to regard them as inferior creatures. She must be told, and at once, that she belonged to that despised class, and the knowledge promised to impart a sorrow as poignant as had that other event which had left her fatherless.
It was possible that the disappointment and dismay occasioned by the revelation might neutralize the agony occasioned by the death of her father; it was possible that it might augment her grief, no one could foresee the consequences to her of this unprecedented chain of events; but whatever those consequences might be they must be met, and the only human being in all the world who by reason of the sudden knowledge thrust upon her was competent to meet them was a young girl, just past 18, whose understanding of the questions with which she had to cope was limited to the experiences of a maiden whose entire life had been surrounded by every safeguard that a dotting father could marshal to his aid when circumstances had compelled him to rear and to bring to maturity a motherless daughter. Erna's innocence and ignorance however, rendered her strong for the task. She took up the burden all the more readily because she did not realize what it involved. Her innocence was as complete as Lisle's, her ignorance as profound. Solitary speculation had carried the latter into regions which Erna had never regarded as worthy of exploration. She had lived all her life in such near proximity to the mysteries of creation that she had been unconscious of their existence. Lisle had been isolated so far away from them that when the knowledge came to her that they did exist she had striven with all her soul, gropingly, in the dark, but certainly in search of light, and the two girls stood upon equal ground, half way to the goal to be attained, but widely separated by their journeyings, like two who, having started at the same point, but in opposite directions, to meet again at the other side of the world, pause when only half the journey is made, neither one wiser than the other. One had searched through the darkness toward the light eagerly, the other had wandered with the light without being aware that the night dwelt anywhere upon the earth, until across that infinite space which separated her from the other that still voice called to her for aid.
Therefore when Erna, having put her father from the room, turned and beheld Lisle's eyes fixed upon her, she hastened to the bedside, dropped upon her knees and did the very thing that she was resorted to do—burst into tears; and while she cried she put out her arms and wound them around Lisle's neck, laid one of her cheeks against the cool, white face of the orphan and so compelled the one who should have received consolation to administer it.
It was in a crisis like this where Lisle Maxwell's masculine training served her best. She scorned all unnecessary exhibition of emotion. Her woman's heart had faltered and faltered beneath the sudden blow of her father's death. Nature had proved herself stronger than the education of years. But it was different now. The shock had come, the blow had fallen. She had yielded to the overwhelming effects, but she would not falter again.
"Why do you cry?" she asked, rising to a sitting posture and gently but firmly disengaging the clinging arms around her neck. "It is my father, not yours, who is dead. I do not cry. Why do you weep? For me?"
"For you, Lisle! It was so sudden, so awful!"
Erna's tears ceased to flow. She bethought herself suddenly of the situation; Lisle, habited as a man, believing herself to be one, sitting upon the edge of the dismantled bed, Erna upon her knees—before her, scantily clad, with her disheveled hair like spun gold distributed in its mazes over her bare shoulders and upon the trousered knees of her companion; the morning sun streaming in through the window, gilding the scene with glory, bestowing its warm approval upon a scene before which an unformed beholder would have recoiled in dismay. The girl who believed herself to be a man, profound, ignorant that such things as conventional proprieties existed, realized nothing unusual in the situation. The girl who had been taught to observe them with religious care realized its absurdity.
Her face blushed scarlet. Her eyes danced with unbidden mirth, and a smile crept stealthily to her lips and softened and parted them while it glistened upon the moisture in her eyes like a sunburst kissing the sea. She started to her feet and took a step or two backward, and Lisle, being free, also rose. Thus they stood facing each other, and Lisle, for the first time, discovered that her flannel shirt was open. She did not blush. The circumstance affected her only as it would have affected a child.

"How came I here in this room?" she asked wonderingly. "Did I swoon? Did I lose consciousness? Did you bring me here?"
"Yes, to all of your questions," replied Erna. "You were unconscious so long a time that I thought it best to sit down again. I wish to talk with you."
"You do not look strong enough to carry me," murmured Lisle slowly, conscious that she was amazed that Erna should have carried her, yet wondering why she was so. "No, I cannot remain here now. There is much for me to do. Is it true—is it true that my father?"
"Yes, Lisle; it is true. I am so sorry for you."
"Thank you. My father is there—in his room. I must go to him."
"No, Lisle; no—not now. My father is there. He will do all that can be done.—There is nothing for you to do at least not now. I have sent for a physician and for a minister. I thought you would wish it. I also sent a man after Craig Thompson—that is, I told my father to send the men."
"It was kind of you to think of it all."
Lisle walked to the window and looked out upon the new day, staring hard to keep down the tears that rose upon her eyelids. It was a struggle, but she conquered. Presently she turned and retraced her steps to Erna.
"You wish to talk with me?" she said, "very well.—After I have seen him again I will talk with you, but let us go out into the sunlight. There is a grove of pine trees a little way from the house. When I was a child, I helped my father to set them there. We will go there. Will you come?"
"Yes, wait for me on the porch—or, no! Remain here until I speak to papa."
She darted away before Lisle could reply, was gone a moment and returned.
"You may go to the room where your father is," she said, "papa is there. After that wait for me at the front door. Then we will go to the grove together."
Lisle left her to her toilet and went slowly toward the chamber where reposed the still form of Richard Maxwell. Mr. Thomas was there and two of the servants also. They stood respectfully aside when Lisle entered the room, passed to the bedside and with folded arms stood for several moments quietly regarding the silent sleeper. Bending low, Lisle touched her lips against the cold, dead face, then went out from the room, moving like one who walks in a dream.
Fifteen minutes later, beneath the spreading boughs of the pines Lisle and Erna stood facing each other.
"What will you do now, Lisle?" asked Erna. "You cannot remain here without your father."
"Why, yes, I will remain. There is nothing else for me to do. I am familiar with every detail connected with the operation of the ranch. It is the only thing that I do know. There is no place else for me to go. I know nothing of the world—your world. Mine is here; its boundaries are there—waving her right hand—"to the extent of my vision; no farther. I think it was my father's desire that I should remain here always after he was gone."
"It could not have been so, Lisle. You did not know what your father knew concerning you. You do not know what I know. There is a secret which your father kept from you all your life. Why, I do not know, nobody knew—nobody but himself—and now he cannot tell it to you I am sure, Lisle, that he did not mean to die without telling it."
"A secret? My father never had a secret from me—never."
"He had one secret, Lisle."
"How can you know that he had a secret from me? He scarcely spoke to you."
"I discovered it myself, Lisle."
"—How? When? Where? What is the secret?"
"I discovered it last night when you kissed me—at least I believed I did. After you fainted away, while I worked over you, I became convinced of its truth. It will startle you when I tell it, Lisle; it will shock you almost as much as the sudden death of your father. I am afraid that it will pain you. It concerns you. It is about you. Have you ever thought, Lisle, that you are not like other men?"
"Yes, often," Lisle spoke dreamily. "I have talked it over with my father. Only last evening, just before you came, we were discussing it. I know that I am different from other men, but I do not know how or why. Is that the secret?"
"Yes, Lisle, that is the secret. You are not like other men; you are not like men at all. Lisle, dear Lisle, you are not a man, you never were a man; you never can be a man; you are a woman, Lisle—a woman like me."
CHAPTER XI
SOME REVELATIONS.

"How came I here in this room?" she asked wonderingly.

not alike; we are very different."
"Oh, dear! Throw off your coat and waistcoat again, as you were this morning when you called me to go to your father. There! Do you not see that your hips are like mine. Press your sides so, here at your waist. Now do the same to me. I have left off my instruments of torture, and so I am not bullet proof this morning. Don't you see that, though larger than I am, you are shaped the same? Men are not formed that way."
Lisle obeyed slowly and wonderingly. Her calm eyes studied the flushing face before her with an expression that was filled with awe.
"Are they not?" she asked presently.
"Are you created after one mold and women after another?"
"Certainly."
"Always?"
"Always."
"Is that all the difference?"
"Of course not, you goose!"
"What are the other differences?"
"Why, everything is different. I suppose."
"Do you only suppose? Don't you know?"
"Oh dear! Come into the house. Let us go into my room. We can talk better there. You look so much like a man in that dress that out here I feel as though the eyes of the whole world were upon us."
"And of the eyes of the world were upon us, what then? Is there anything to be ashamed of?"
"No—that is, not really. But it looks so. Come, will you go back?"
"Yes."
They returned together to the house, and Erna, having closed and locked the door of her room, began again her difficult task.
"Now, Lisle," she said, "please hear me through to the end of what I am going to say without asking any questions. Every one that you ask is sure to be the very one that I least expect, and it is pretty sure to be the one that I do not in the least know how to answer—that is, not in words. I never knew before today how ignorant I am myself of things that I ought to know. That is, I thought all the while I knew about them, while the fact is I do not know much more than you do yourself. I suppose it is for the same reason that the Egyptians never thought of studying their own pyramids until a lot of foreigners blew into the country and discovered that the hieroglyphic writings meant something. I have lived next door to the pyramids all my life and never thought them worth the trouble of study, and now you have materialized on the scene, and you want to know all at once every secret that is connected with them. Now I can show you the way to the pyramids, but I don't in the least know what the writings mean. Did you ever read the Bible?"
"My father used to read it to me."
"Did he ever read about the garden of Eden?"
"No; I do not remember it."
"Of course not. It is about a woman and he wouldn't read that. Well,"—desperately—"there was such a place when God made the world, and there was a man there. He was all alone. There wasn't another human being in the whole world, and Adam—that was his name—was lonely. I'm not surprised at that. It must have been horrid. He raised some kind of a row about it, and so one night while he was asleep God took a rib out of his side and made a woman out of it. After that Adam became the father of all men, and Eve—the woman's name—became the mother of all women. Men are all made after the same pattern as Adam and women are all made after the same pattern as Eve, and they are no more alike than a horse and a cow—at least not to my mind. Now, look here! I have an idea. My clothes are much too small for you, but I am going to dress you up in them. My goodness!"

CHAPTER X "YOU ARE A WOMAN"—A WOMAN LIKE ME.

THESE are times when tears are appropriate; there are moments when a gust of them will perform miracles which nothing else can do. Being in themselves the extreme of weakness, it is nevertheless certain that they often impart unexpected strength.
Erna Thomas had no intention of crying when she hastened to the bedside of Lisle Maxwell. There existed no logical reason why she should cry unless to shed a few sympathetic tears after the manner of women generally. There was every reason why she should not do so. She was not constituted "after the manner of women generally" in any sense of the word, for she was a typical western girl, who, bereft of her mother in her infancy, had ruled her father and his household with a rod of iron ever since her birth. But she was superlatively feminine in all things, deliciously feminine in most of them, strikingly so in the fact that nobody could tell, herself least of all, what she would do next. Frank, generous, open hearted, impulsive and headstrong, her rod of iron was incased in velvet, and her most imperious commands purr themselves into favors bestowed.
She was fond of excitement and mastery. What woman is not? She was conscious that for the first time in her life she was part and parcel with a romance and that she stood upon the very verge of a precipice that overlooked a mystery of the most remarkable kind. Her heart bled for the girl upon the bed whose father, yesterday a strong and vigorous man, was now a corpse, and she was dismayed by the magnitude of the task that confronted her. Think what she had to do! The measure of consolation which it was

SOME REVELATIONS.

LISLE MAXWELL remained perfectly still, staring hard at Erna. She heard the words, but she did not, could not, comprehend them. Erna had expected an outburst of passionate anger or vehement rebuke. There was not. Somehow her earnestness had impressed the truth of her statement upon her companion. It may be that without realizing it Lisle was prepared for the announcement. It certainly meant less to her than Erna could have supposed that it would.
"Tell me more," she said presently.
"How do you know—how did you discover that I am a woman? How may I know that I am one?"
"I believe," replied Erna, "that your own heart has told you already that you are not a man. Don't you see that you are like me?"
"Like you? No, I do not think that I am in the least like you. I am taller, broader, bigger in every way. We are

BOWSER ON CROQUET

SAYS HE DOESN'T KNOW OF A MORE INTERESTING GAME.

He Begins Play With Mrs. Bowser, Who, He Thinks, Is Trying to Give Him an Unfair Deal—He Ends the Game With a Trump.

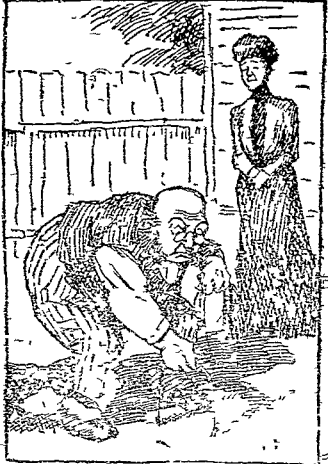

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

At 3 o'clock the other afternoon a delivery wagon left a box at the Bowser mansion, and Mrs. Bowser opened it to find balls, mallets and arches.

"There is no mistake. I bought the outfit and ordered it sent home."

"But you don't mean that you are going to play croquet?" she asked in surprise.

"But I do. We might as well have some amusements around home. I don't know of a more interesting game than croquet. To play a good game one has got to have a mathematical it will slip up the arches, and we will be... eye and a smile behind it.

"Isn't it a great game to quarrel over?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"I sh. Folks who want to quarrel will quarrel over any game. Yes I've read in the papers that croquet has separated husbands and wives, broken engagements and cursed ministers to resign from churches."

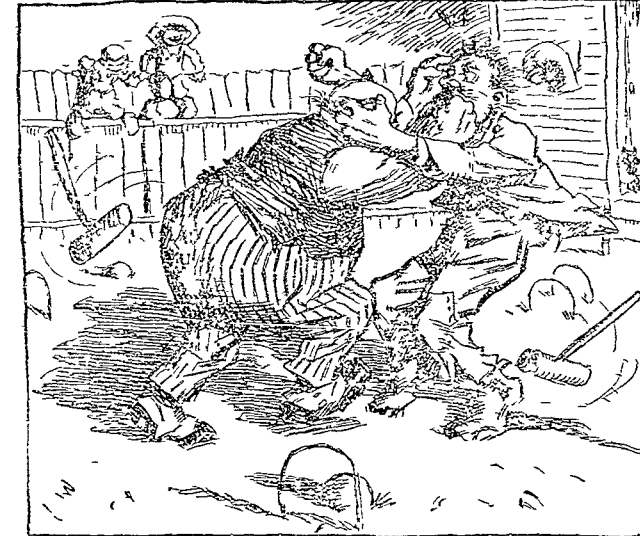

"I thought there were many things, but perhaps I've forgotten or am thinking about something else."

"That isn't one single thing and I'll prove it to you. After dinner I'll set up the arches, and we'll have a game. You used to play, didn't you?"

"Yes," she reluctantly replied.

"And I've heard you brag what a game you played. I will whitewash you four times out of five."

"Mrs. Bowser groaned inwardly. If Mr. Bowser had brought home a horse, a cow or a dozen chickens, she might have dodged a row, but with croquet—never. She thought of suddenly twisting her ankle or being overcome by the heat, but Mr. Bowser's eye was upon her and she could not escape.

"Why, come to think of it," he said at the dinner table, "we used to play croquet when I was courting you, and I don't remember that we quarreled because of course we didn't."

It was true that they didn't, but it was because Mrs. Bowser shut her eyes to his braven tricks to come out ahead. She didn't say so, however. She simply hoped that by some miracle a game or two might be played without an outbreak.

"Now then," he said when dinner was pushed, "I will set up the arches and we will begin business. If there is a misunderstanding of any sort, you will be to blame for it. Wrangle? Why, I could play for a month of Sundays and not have a word. There may be some excuse for wrangling over golf, but croquet is soft and gentle and placid."

Mrs. Bowser was pale faced and anxious looking as she selected a mallet and ball. She had determined to play her poorest and dispute no assertion. She did not mean to win the first shot, but it came to her. She meant to miss one of the arches as she made her play, but the ball insisted on going through both.

was on her way back before Mr. Bowser got a shot. She had heard him breathing hard, but he didn't say anything until she made a miss. Then he remarked:

"I see I have got to play against bullhead luck and chicanery, but I think I can hold my own."

"Do you mean that I cheated?" she asked.

"Never mind what your own conscience. I'm coming for your ball."

Mr. Bowser passed through the first arch, missed the second and got in position to hit Mrs. Bowser's ball and send it away. There was a glare in his eyes as he sent it fifty feet away and went back to the second arch.

But luck was not with him. Before he could get through she came down and hit the stake and finished the game.

"Do you know what you are doing?" he asked as he leaned on his mallet and looked at her.

"Why, I've just whitewashed you. Haven't I?" she replied.

"And how did you accomplish it? Do you know the meaning of the word honesty? Have I got to keep my eyes on you all the time to get a fair deal in this game?"

Mrs. Bowser made no reply. She saw the end in view, and she hoped that if struck with a mallet death would be instantaneous. Mr. Bowser took the first shot, and by good luck he made the two arches. He was left in bad position, though, and before he could get through the third arch Mrs. Bowser overtook him and arranged to carry his ball with hers.

"What are you going to do?" he asked.

"Carry your ball along to play on."

"But you can't do it. There are rules in this game."

"Where is the rule that says I can't carry your ball along to play on again?"

"Go ahead then. I know you'd cheer the eyes out of me if I could, but I told you that I shouldn't wrangle."

Mrs. Bowser used his ball and she was in position to throw such and then sent it away and passed through the fourth and fifth and hit the stake. She was getting ready for the return when he advanced and took her ball.

"I will excuse you from further play this evening and you may return to the lounge."

"What's the matter? You surely can't say that I've cheated."

"I say nothing, madam—nothing except that you may retie. I shall probably have a little talk with you later on a little talk. There are some things I want to say to you."

Mrs. Bowser had escaped death, and she was only too glad to drop her mallet and escape into the house. Mr. Bowser was knocking the balls about and gritting his teeth when a tramp came along and leaned on the fence to say:

"I used to play that game myself when I was an aristocrat, and I was pretty good at it too."

"Do you understand the rules?" asked Mr. Bowser.

"I think I do."

"Then come in and take a mallet. I want a straight game and no monkey work."

The tramp had "been there." He played clear to the upper stake without a miss, and he was getting ready

FIRST LADY OF FRANCE.

President Loubet's Wife a Simple, Home-Loving Person.

Like her distinguished husband, Mme. Emilie Loubet, wife of the president of the French republic, is a plain person whom success in the world has not turned from the even tenor of her ways or mode of thinking.

MME. EMILIE LOUBET.

tion to the very summit of French society she has remained the same simple housewife she has always been. Mme. Loubet represents the great mass of middle class French households not the faubourg St. Germain, the homes of the ancient aristocracy or the palaces of the "new rich."

Mme. Loubet is the daughter of an iron dealer of the town of Montelmar, in the south of France. Her maiden name was Marie Denis, and Mr. Loubet were married twenty-five years ago and have three children, two sons and a daughter.

The wife of the president was brought up in a simple manner and amidst a cooking among a household which was accomplished. It is said that even now at the Elysee she frequently visits the kitchen and prepares for her husband and his old friends dishes of which they are especially fond.

In appearance Mme. Loubet is like her husband, short and stout. She is gray haired, but carries her age, about fifty-five, very well. Mme. Loubet dresses simply, invariably in a good taste, but she is little inclined to adopt the latest Parisian modes. She is courteous to a degree and is very charitable, taking a personal interest in the many public institutions of Paris.

Although it was freely predicted that the motherly lady from the provinces would be overwhelmed by the grandeur of her position, she has yet given no indication of embarrassment. Only at the state dinners she insists on seeing that her guests have sufficient to eat and displays concern—too much from the standpoint of "high society"—lest they should rise unsatisfied. Mme. Loubet does not concern herself with politics and has resolutely refused to exert her influence with the president for or against any faction.

KITCHENER'S SUCCESSOR.

Among the few English generals who have come out of the South African war with unimpaired reputations must be numbered Lieutenant General Lyttelton who has been appointed to succeed General Lord Kitchener as chief commander of the troops in the GENERAL NEVILLE GERARD LYTTELTON, former republics. He will have many important duties during the reconstruction period.

The new South African commander was educated at Eton. The athletic records of England are filled with mentions of the Lyttelton family, and the Hon. Neville was a worthy bearer of the name. Since his enlistment in the Rifle brigade in 1865 he has served in Canada, India, Egypt, South Africa and other parts of the world. He has gained all sorts of honors, has been mentioned in dispatches several times and has advanced steadily in rank. General Lyttelton is now fifty-seven years of age.
