AN ENTHUSIASTIC G. O. P. MEETING

CHARLIE TOWNSEND ACCORDED HEARTY WELCOME.

Gave a Spirited Address Here on Monday Night.

Congressional nominee Charles E. Townsend of Jackson was given a hearty welcome here Monday and the mass meeting in the opera house Monday evening was further enlivened by the presence of Northville's popular band and male quartette. A large crowd was present to listen to Mr. Townsend and he had the people with him from start to finish, not only creating a good impression among the Republicans who were present, but among the Democrats as well and especially those whose sympathies are with protective tariff and the gold standard of money.

In speaking of the trusts Mr. Townsend says he favors a law whereby they shall be controlled when necessary by the general government. He does not believe that any tariff legislation would have the desired effect and cited the fact that in free trade countries the trusts are especially numerous. He also called attention to the Anthracite coal trust which is presenting the most serious problem today and upon which product there is no duty at all. In case of emergency where people or industries are liable to suffer for want of coal it ought to be lawful, he thought, for the general government to seize the coal fields, the same as the railroads, ships and ammunition factories may now be seized in case of danger to this country, and operate them providing the mine owners refused to arbitrate the grievance with the miners.

Mr. Townsend says he believes the present tariff laws may need a little revision but that the revision should be made by a Republican congress. The tariff should be a protection to American industries and American labor and should be chiefly based on the difference in the cost to produce the goods in foreign countries and the United States as represented by the difference paid for labor or the cost of producing the raw material.

In speaking of state issues Mr. Townsend says he is greatly in favor of a primary election law. He is one of a committee of three appointed in this state to draft such a bill to be presented to the next state legislature. Mr. Townsend is favorably impressed with the Michigan primary law which has been operating very satisfactorily in that state for a number of years.

In speaking of the so-called Michigan Central railroad drainage suit which is threatened against the state Mr. Townsend called attention to the fact that—Alfred Lucking to the contrary notwithstanding—the governor of Michigan would have no more to do with the case than any other citizen of the state. It is a matter wholly for the Attorney General to look after and it will be tried, if it ever comes up at all, in a court of record and before a jury of twelve men. He called to the attention of his hearers that the Republican candidate for attorney general is Chas. A. Blair, son of the ex-governor, Austin Blair, of Jackson and spoke in glowing terms of his ability, integrity, and loyalty to the state and that, if elected, the Michigan Central drainage suit would be defended by him and the people could depend upon the interests of the state being carefully guarded by that gentleman.

Mr. Townsend is very outspoken in favor of a constitutional amendment whereby U. S. senators shall be elected by direct vote of the people. He thinks that in too many cases the question of who a legislator will vote for for U. S. Senator is considered of more importance than integrity and ability.

Mr. Townsend was given close attention in his remarks and he was frequently interrupted with vigorous applause. He is an orator of rare ability and presents his arguments with great force and in a way that impresses his hearers with his earnestness and honesty. He speaks very highly of his opponent and says he is a princely good fellow in every way and his good friend. They only differ politically. One (Mr. Townsend) stands for sound money of the gold standard, and a protective tariff, the other (Mr. Wood) stands for the free coinage of silver at the 16 to 11 ratio and free trade or a tariff for revenue only.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the township committee and Dr. Burgess as chairman presided and delivered a neat little introductory address.

STANDS BY HIS RECORD.

Arthur L. Holmes Deserves Well of the Working People.

Arthur L. Holmes of Detroit, the leading candidate in the four-cornered fight now being waged for the Republican nomination for county treasurer, was in Wixomette on Wednesday. Mr. Holmes has a number of warm friends in this city, and will have more before the campaign is over.

His candidacy for the treasurership should certainly appeal strongly to workmen everywhere. As a member of the state legislature in 1895, Mr. Holmes was successful in compelling insurance companies to contribute $25,000 to the public funds, whereas before they had paid but $2,500. He put through a mechanics' lien law that has proven a great benefit, not only to workmen but to those furnishing supplies as well. He was also prominently identified with a number of factory laws tending to better the condition of employees. A law forbidding employers to pay in store orders received his hearty support. Mr. Holmes supported many of the reforms of the late Gov. Piquette, and others, which he believed to be just. He is a vigorous, independent, reliable, and frank. Mr. Holmes would make an ideal custodian of the county funds.—Wixomette Herald.

Northville Becoming Famous.

A new town and a member of the League have to some extent introduced Northville to at least two newspapers of the earth. "Where Erie's sunny fountains roll down their golden strand where Cheops reigns and locks in its story embrace the mummied forms of the Shepherd kings, there peal out the bells of Northville, not only from the summit of the Christian sanctuary and the minaretted mosque, but they do say also from the templed stable of the sacred bull. Another order for a Northville bell from Egypt was recently placed and from further down the coast of the dark continent come inquiries for a nger of the same manufacture.—Detroit Tribune.

High Type of Manhood.

Whitehead Times. The Republican of the second district, the right hand of the law, the exceptionally strong man they have nominated for congressional honors. Mr. Townsend is a person who represents the highest type of manhood, is an indefatigable worker and a man of the people. We wish to emphasize the last quality, for so often is a man selected who neither cares for or represents the common people. Charlie Townsend came out from the masses and knows their every want. He sympathizes with the workingman he is interested in the farmer and knows what an honest day's work represents. He will go to the national capital, if elected, with a full realization of what is expected of him, and we are sure that no one will have misplaced any confidence in the lawyer from Jackson when the test comes.

The Boer leaders are exhorting their people to preserve the race spirit, writes a reporter for the New York Sun. At the same time they acknowledge frankly that South Africa is now under one flag. Anyhow, as matters now stand, no other colony has such a glorious past to point to as the former South African republics.

VICTIM OF A BRUTE

BODY OF MISSING MENOMINEE CHILD FOUND

IN THE REAR OF JOSEPH BECK'S BLACKSMITH SHOP.

EVIDENCES OF STRANGULATION AND OF ASSAULT.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 2.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Julia, the ten-year-old adopted daughter of Inas Kachney, who had not been seen since Sunday morning, has at last been cleared up and the most dastardly crime in the history of Menominee brought to light.

The dead body of the child was found buried under the steps directly back of the blacksmith shop of Joseph Beck Wednesday afternoon. The body showed unmistakable evidence of strangulation and of assault in the subsequent examination by physicians. When found the body was doubled up, head downward, about ten inches beneath the surface of the ground.

The girl was last seen at the blacksmith shop Sunday morning, on her way to church. She stopped in the shop to see if a cabbage cutter, which her father had left there, had been repaired. Beck said he saw her start down the railroad track with a boy for church. Search was made by the police and men were sent through the woods.

Tuesday night the police forcibly entered Beck's shop for investigation and were surprised at finding Beck there, who asked in a hoarse whisper if they were burglars. His being there at that hour looked strange, and yesterday morning, after investigation, Beck was taken to jail on suspicion, going quietly.

During the forenoon Chief of Police English made an investigation about the shop, finally discovering fresh white sand near the steps at the rear of the building. Taking this as a clue, he had the steps removed in the afternoon and the ground dug up, the body being discovered.

The remains were taken to an undertaker's establishment, where an examination showed red spots on the neck and blood clots on the skull, indicating strangulation. A coroner's jury was impaneled and adjourned until this afternoon.

Beck has a bad record. He has been arrested before for wife-beating, and is not now living with his wife. Feeling runs high against him, and if he were not safe under lock and key he would probably be lynched.

Hargraves Trial Continues.

Traverse City, Mich., Oct. 2.—Dr. Chase occupied the stand in the trial of John A. Hargraves for the murder of his wife all Wednesday morning, his testimony being of a technical character. The weight of the evidence was that it was impossible for the woman to have inflicted the injuries upon herself. In the afternoon very important and damaging evidence was introduced. Deputy Sheriff Leonard Grayson testified to finding a club under the back woodshed and that it was stained with blood which was fresh at that time.

THE BROTHER'S MANTLE FALLS ON STRONG SHOULDERS.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1.—The meeting of the Democratic state central committee in this city Tuesday to place a name at the head of the ticket to succeed Judge Durand brought many prominent Democrats from various parts of the state. They were divided as to the wisdom of having the name supplied by the committee instead of by recalling the convention, and several hot arguments preceded the meeting, which went into secret session at 2:30 o'clock and did not agree upon a candidate till nearly 6

The committee disposed of the convention idea first by voting it down and then began the task of selecting a candidate. It was known that Hon. L. T. HARGRAVES MURDER TRIAL.

Jury Secured—Dr. Chase Gives Damaging Testimony

Traverse City, Mich., Oct. 1.—A jury was secured in the Hargraves murder trial Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, and the hearing of testimony was at once begun in the prosecution.

Mrs. T. A. Elstner testified that Hargraves always treated his wife with consideration, but that she was of a sour and spiteful disposition. She had told her that Hargraves mistreated her and that he would kill himself. She threatened to take her own life believing that "he was rotting in it" and would rather die than go to an asylum. Damning evidence was given by Dr. O. E. Chase, the coroner who described the body of Mrs. Hargraves as found on the morning of April 21, badly mutilated. The room presented a fearful scene. A great sink of blood on the carpet was near three feet square. Blood was spilled on the walls, dresser, commode and bed clothing.

The purpose of the prosecution is to prove that a desperate struggle took place and that Hargraves was admitted the only other person in the house, that he was responsible.

Dr. Chase said it would be impossible for Mrs. Hargraves to inflict the fatal wounds herself, her left arm being paralyzed and she an invalid. Dr. Chase was on the stand when court adjourned for the day.

The work of re-shingling the church building has begun.

The ordinance of the Lord's supper will be observed next Sunday morning.

The sermon next Sunday evening will be on John Knox, the hero of Scotland.

A number of our ladies went to

Sunday, Miss Betta Wheeler having consented to take charge. The meetings will be at four o'clock p. m., and all the young people are cordially invited to attend.

The first division of the Ladies' Aid society have decided to have a banquet at the rink on Oct. 21st.
Some good speakers will be present from out of town. As this is the only effort of the kind during the six months of the division's work it is hoped that all the ladies will contribute generously and help heartily.

Baptist Church Notes.

(By the Pastor.)

Our choir is showing a decided improvement as a result of faithful training by the leader, Mrs. Long.

"A Searching Question" is the topic for the B. Y. P. U., which is to be led by Miss Grace Sloan. Notice.
The young people's meeting will begin at 6:00 o'clock instead of 6:30.

member the change in the hour.

Holy Mountains" was concluded last Sunday and many words of appreciation have been uttered con-

Valleys," will be given next Sunday.
All are cordially invited to be pres-

in school last week.

arated gunpowder into its constituent parts.

and joy.

The books in the high school rooms have been improved and because each pupil will have his own number.

Dr. A. L. Blumhail, president of the Detroit Education, made a pleasant call on several departments
last week Friday.

The editor of the Detroit Courier has our thanks for supplying our reading table with a complimentary copy of his excellent paper.

Seventy-four ready-made marks were made by the whole school during the first month this year than were made during the corresponding time last year.

Prof. J. Henry Smith, teacher of music in our schools, has compiled and printed some excellent music to be used in connection with his work.
The pupils are delighted with it, and great praise is due Mr. Smith.

Programs are being prepared and preparations are being made to observe Pioneer Day next Friday afternoon Oct. 10th. The exercises will be commenced at 2:30. Besides the literary and musical programs another interesting feature will be the display of collections of "ye olden time" articles or furniture, tools, etc., etc., or whatever can be collected that was used in pioneer days. We wish to have all articles brought in for display left until five o'clock to enable the children and visitors to pass from room to room and view the different exhibits. A committee of pupils will be in charge of each display for the purpose of explaining or giving the history of different articles. We extend a cordial invitation to the patrons and especially the pioneers to be present.

COLLEGE SOCIETIES.

INFLUENCE OF GREEK LETTER FRAT-ERNITIES ON STUDENT LIFE.

Recognized as Beneficial by the College Authorities—Growth of the Chapter House—Meeting the Members.

The opening days of the fall term are a season of peculiar interest to the college boy, now just returning to his studies after the summer vacation.
This is the season when the fraternity
"rushings" or "cattivating" is on, and to the student it is fraught with importance, for it largely determines the completion of the fraternities and often determines the future of many freshmen.

To the fraternities the "rushings" is important, because this year's freshmen when they become upper classmen will dictate fraternity policy, and it is important to the freshmen because the associations of the first two years in college do more than all other years to shape their characters.

The chapter house, or lodge of the Greek letter fraternity has become a national feature of the college life of the United States. They are now found in all colleges and universities excepting Harvard and Princeton, where the Greek letter fraternities have never gained a foothold.

A few years ago the chapter house
was peculiar to eastern institutions.
Now more than half the nearly 900
chapters of Greek letter societies located at the various institutions of learning in all sections of the country are occupying chapter houses, and many of them are owned by the occupants.

To college men and students in general the fraternity is a familiar subject, but as only 1 per cent of the people in America enter college the idea is just as obscure to the great majority as the Greek letters by which the various organizations are known.

The first Greek letter society was founded at the College of William and

DELTA PSI HOUSE, YALE.

Yale in 1775. Its aims were to encourage scholarship, and these aims it has maintained until the present day. Phi Kappa Psi is the only a national organization election to which col-leged on school ship. From it, however, and patterned after it, grew the present fraternities. They, too, were literary societies pure and simple in their early days.

There are scores of these fraternities, all designated by Greek letters which form the initials of their mottos and representing the academic, medical and scientific courses in various colleges.

Kappa Alpha, which dates back to 1825, was long regarded as the leading fraternity. During recent years others have forged to the front. Phi Kappa Psi is said now to be one of the strongest organizations. It claims a membership of 10,000, having at this time forty chapters located in as many leading colleges and universities and twenty-five alumni associations.

Psi Upsilon is also one of the big ones, as are also Delta Kappa Epsilon and Alpha Delta Phi. Most of these have thirty or more chapters, and among their alumni are many of the brightest college men in public life.

The older Greek letter societies have alumni all over the United States who keep close watch of the high school boys about to enter college. Before the high school commencement time the prospective freshman has met some member of a fraternity in the college, to which he is going and has been invited to spend the college commencement week with that fraternity.

All of the important ones have club-houses, which are often the finest buildings on the college campus, but are always the center of a life that is almost homelike. Into these more or less elaborate college homes the freshman is ushered the spring prior to his entering college, and here he is royally entertained.

But all the time he is under closest scrutiny. If he is a satisfactory candidate, he is invited to visit at the chapter house in the fall when he comes on to enter college. Again he is under the same careful scrutiny, and if he satisfies the members of the fraternity he is asked to join.

The chapter house receives strong encouragement from college authorities, who recognize that the fraternities members are not alone in receiving benefit from it.

TRAVER'S TWELVE & FIFTEEN DOLLAR SUITS FOR MEN.

To the men who are seeking to make every dollar count, yet who want to sacrifice nothing in style, these $12 and $15 Suits of Traver's will prove a revelation.

Of course every clothing store sells suits at the same prices because they are popular. But lots of men have been going to a tailor and paying a third more to get clothes that are not a bit better than these are.

These suits are simply unbeatable and are splendid examples of how much worth money will buy at this store.

At each price great varieties are offered for your choosing—plain and fancy mixed fabrics fashioned in the latest styles and built in a manner which insures lasting good shapes and long wear.

Single and double breasted sack styles—cutaways too but they are built of fine black diagonals—all sizes—every man is assured a perfect fit—$12 and $15.

NORTHVILLE.

The City in Brief.

Sergeant Frank Lewis received his Spanish war medal from the state department last week.

Born Sept. 28th to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson of Farmington, formerly of this place, a girl.

Special communication of Northville lodge F. & A. M. Monday evening, Oct. 6, to work the 3rd degree.

The Presbyterian ladies of the first church are preparing for an elegant banquet to be held in the next month.

The LOTM guards will meet for practice Monday evening at 7:30 in the IOOF hall. All are urged to be present.

Henry Fortune, a P. M. railway employe at Detroit, has leased Miss Grace Lowden's house and will move here.

"What is so rare as a day in September, 1902, when it doesn't rain? And we've had one or two this week."

New Northville phones have recently been put in the residences of Stuart Montgomery 652, Fred Lyke 610, John Murdock 603 and D. E. Cole.

Frederick Mitchell voluntarily appeared before Judge Webster Monday and pleaded guilty to unintentionally disturbing the peace last week and paid a fine of $15 and $250 costs.

Dr. Henry, assisted by Dr. Turner, performed an operation Sunday on Arthur Kilian for abscess. The patient, who is a boarder at the home of Mrs. John Hinman, is doing well.

T. J. Perkins & Co. have leased the second floor of the building occupied by Fry Bros. and next spring will put in a stock of wall paper. They will also use part of the newly acquired space as carpet salesrooms.

The Record has been favored with some samples of ripe eggs from a tree at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. McRobert on Dunlap street. It is safe to say that the rest of the crop of that kind of fruit in this latitude would be hard to find.

Sam Lawrence, president of Glenwood, near Detroit, has sold his property holdings there, and bought a poultry farm at Northville. He does not wish to give any democrat a show to be head mogul of Glenwood so he won't move until spring, when the republicans can name another ticket, and he can help pull through. That's the kind of a rooster he is.—Adrian Press

Everybody made welcome at Mrs. Nichols' millinery opening next week Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The regular monthly meeting of the library board occurs tomorrow afternoon at the usual place and hour.

All the LOTM are requested to be present at the Regular Review Tuesday evening as there will be initiation. By order of L. C.

The water restrictions imposed by the council have not had the slightest effect—on the weather department. The laws have been kept thoroughly soaked right along.

William Nolan was before Judge Webster Wednesday on charge of participating in the disturbances of last week and paid a fine of $5.00 and $35 costs in lieu of 30 days. Mrs. Mitchell's fine was remitted and she paid the costs of $35—and was discharged.

A box of large ripe strawberries just picked from the vines of Mrs. Will Lewis of Northside was left at the Record office this week. We are glad to note—and sample—such evidences of enterprise. It isn't every locality that can produce two crops of strawberries in one season.

Mrs. Della Harmon, the bright paragraphist of the Northville Record was over to Plymouth last week as a judge on a silver medal contest. Neal was mad and said the silver issue was dead, and she must keep away from these democratic gatherings. She told him to go and see Roosevelt, and brace up.—Adrian Press

Mrs. Turner took several premiums at the state fair and Mrs. James Sessions was awarded prizes there and also at the Ann Arbor and Redford fairs. Mrs. Sessions has recently sold some of her beautiful lace work for a high price. Other Northville people captured premiums and the record is not learned who they are.

From a piece of ground eleven feet square Daniel S. Luer has sold—going to the amount of over two hundred dollars this year, with only a few hours' outlay of labor. A little figuring would show that a big farm would produce quite a comfortable income at a like ratio. Several other Northville people have started raising the plant.

The services of the Episcopal church which were suspended during the summer have been resumed and are held every Sunday evening at 7:30 in the WCTU hall on Main street. Mr. C. L. Ramsay, who officiates at the services, is anxious to meet all who are or ever have been connected with the Episcopal church and desires that they attend and make themselves known to him. Every body is most cordially invited to attend the meetings on Sunday evenings.

Miss Emma Nelson, formerly of this village, has been receiving much praise through Adrian papers as the heroine of an attempted robbery of the money drawer of W. J. LaFraugh's bakery in that city. A stranger who had been hanging around the place came in and, finding Miss Emma alone, demanded the cash, and when the young lady refused to comply, he pulled a revolver and insisted. The plucky girl replied by reaching for another gun, when the fellow decided that it was time to go. He succeeded in getting away, although the officers were immediately notified.

Wall Trunk.

We have the best trunk made—raise the cover without moving it from the wall. Cattermole & Scherer

She's a radiant witching, wondrous gem, that beautiful, blushing wife of mine. She is an angel on earth, so you can be, only take Rocky Mountain Tea.—Murdock Bros.

It is expected that the newly appointed pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. J. W. Shank, will commence his occupation of that pulpit Sunday.

The King's Daughters will hold their annual fair and bake sale in the rink November 13 and 14. Please bear this in mind so that other dates may not conflict.

At the regular conclave of Northville Commandery No. 39, Knights Templar there will be conferred the "Temple degree." Every member is requested to be present.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Michigan Press club will be held at Trenton next Friday. The Detroit United Railway carries the party and Trenton people give a banquet.

At the King's Daughter's meeting at Mrs. Hinkley's Tuesday evening, Mrs. Bristol and Mrs. Geo. Stanley were elected as delegates to the convention to be held in St. Johns Oct. 9-10-11.

F. B. Macomber has purchased a new power ironer for his laundry. It is one of the latest improved pieces of machinery such as are used in all the large cities and will greatly aid in the rapidity of his work.

A. C. Gardner, whose body was brought here from Detroit for interment Monday, was well known among Northville people, having formerly been a resident of this village. He was a brother of William Gardner. The funeral was held in Detroit and the services at the grave were conducted by Rev. W. S. Jerome.

USED KEROSENE

Plymouth Man Did to Start a Fire in a Stove.

Fred Schilke, who runs a meat market in Plymouth, came near being burned to death Wednesday morning while attempting to start a fire in the kitchen stove, using a three-gallon can of oil. The oil exploded filling the room with flame and burning Schilke in a horrible manner about the head and shoulders. The skin is completely burned off his face.

We Don't Understand It.

The president's favorite by-word is "By George" and he isn't afraid to use it whenever an occasion happens to come along where it will fit in nicely and when the president uses it it always seems to fit in very nicely, too. While at the reception at Gen. Alger's beautiful home Sunday noon, Mr. Neal heard Teddy "By George" several times as he enthusiastically recalled some incident in connection with those he met.—Northville Record

Two points are to be considered in connection with the above: 1.—The shocking profanity of the president. 2.—His supreme approval by a member of high standing in that religious body known as the first legislative assembly of the next year. 3.—In and Neal get in any way? 3.—"By George" we don't understand it. Congressman Smith at Plymouth.

Congressman Henry C. Smith will speak at a republican rally at Plymouth next week Saturday night. A number of him here will go over on the 7:15 and 8:15 cars to hear his address.

Who Pays the Printer?

When you go around from printer to printer getting bids on a job and then giving it to the lowest bidder, you get an indifferently good job—one with no particularly good points—one that sells no goods for you, then who pays the printer?

YOU DO.

When you pick out a good printer, giving him all your work, educating him to an idea of your needs, and paying a fair price for the work you get, your printer necessarily creates a favorable impression for you and for what you offer, and becomes a factor in selling your goods. Then who pays the printer? Your customer.

HE DOES.

NOT LIKE OTHER MEN

By Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey, Author of "The Brotherhood of Silence," "The Quality of a Sin," Etc.

Copyright, 1901, by Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey.

When evening fell and darkness settled upon the earth, he did not go inside, as was his custom. He brought an easy chair out upon the porch and settled himself in its depths to wait, straining his ears to catch the slightest sound that would announce the approach of a stranger, and at last, when the hour was considerably past 9, he bounded to his feet with sudden interest, for his practiced ear had detected the unmistakable footfall of a galloping horse. In a moment more the rider came into view and presently drew rein immediately in front of the waiting man.

"Is this Thompson's ranch?" he inquired.
"You bet it is," was the quick response.

"I want Craig Thompson."
"That's me, stranger."

"All right. I've got a message for you. I was instructed to deliver it before sundown, but my horse went lame, and I had to fool around half a day before I could get another."

He handed over a sealed envelope, while speaking, and then he leaped to the ground.

"Turn your mount into the corral," said Craig, taking the letter in his hand. "You'll find it over there." And He handed over a sealed envelope while speaking.

he vaguely indicated the direction in which it was located. "When you get back, I'll look up some grub for you."

The messenger led his horse away, and Craig stepped through the door into a lighted room. He studied the direction on the envelope a moment or two and then gingerly broke the seal. Then, while he read the contents of the short message, his eyes opened wider and wider, and at last he uttered a long, low whistle.

The missive was written in Lisle's hand upon stationery of the Palace hotel, San Francisco, and was as follows:

Dear Craig—You will be surprised to learn that I left Crescent and Cross the day following your departure and came directly here. Since then I have been very much occupied, as you may suppose. I shall leave here tomorrow for the city of New York, and will establish myself at the Hotel Langham, where I will await your coming, for I know that you will come. You may travel as your leisure, as you see fit. I have no need for haste. Then after we have met and discussed things a little we will call together upon my father's lawyer. You will find me arrayed in feminine attire, but I will offer no further explanations. I am,
LISLE MAXWELL.

The look of perplexity upon Craig's face deepened, but it was softened by a tender smile, which somehow wonderfully transformed it.

"Grit! Clear grit!" he muttered. "She's a rascal! Lisle, I'm proud of you! And all the time I was just enough to suppose that you were a-moping all alone within 20 miles of where I was a-sitting and a-waiting for you to yell 'Tally-ho-o-o'!" He turned abruptly and strode to the door just as the messenger who had cared for his horse was on the point of entering it.

"How far did you come with that letter?" he demanded.

"From San Francisco," was the quick reply.

"What! Did you bring it clear from there?"

"Yes. Those were my instructions. I came by train as far as Reno, and from there I've made the trip on horseback, by way of Belmont—a roundabout way, but the best travel I've known. I used to know you when you were a boy."

"Shake! You're all right! Now I'll find you something to eat."

One week later Craig Thompson arrived in New York, and it is doubtful if his familiars in Nevada would have known him had any of them chanced to encounter him on the street. All the roughness had disappeared. His unkempt beard was gone. His mustache had been trimmed and trained, his hair was shorn, and his costume was all that the most fastidious city-bred man could desire. But the strangeness of it all was in the fact that the alterations seemed entirely familiar to him, and he was as thoroughly at ease as if he had lived all his life in the sphere to which he had been born.

"Home!" he said aloud as he stepped from the train to the platform. "Home again after all these years, after having sworn that I would never again put my feet upon the pavements of New York! Twenty-five years since I left home and lost myself on the Nevada plains and among the mines in the Sierras! Eighteen years, or nearly that, since I came back for that one flying visit—arrived in the evening and left in the early morning, bitterly sorry that I came, more than ever determined never to return—and here I am!"

He signaled to a cab, entered it and was taken to the Holland House, where he knew that he would find the object of his journey, and an hour later he rose from the couch where he had awaited the return of the boy who had taken his card to Miss Maxwell—rose to meet a tall, faultlessly clad figure that entered the room, a figure which rapidly approached him, which had Lisle's face, which looked upon him out of Lisle's eyes, which spoke to him in Lisle's voice of rich contralto, but which in his other way resembled the young friend from whom he had parted on the plains of Nevada.

"Craig!" she said and hesitated. Her surprise was as great as his, for the transformation in him was not less marked than it was in her. But the hesitation was almost imperceptible, for with both hands she drew his head down and kissed him upon his brow.

"Have you been undergoing a course of instruction also?" she asked, seating herself beside him. "The change in you is as great as it is in me. It is an improvement in both cases; don't you think so?"

"Yes. With me, Lisle, it is simply the resumption of my own. I was born here, lived here until I was 18, then I went away. Once I came back. That was 18 years ago. I intended never to come again, but you needed me, and here I am."

"Have you forgotten how to swear, Craig?"

"No. I have only laid the habit aside with my other clothes. They fit each other and are to be worn at the same time. Lisle, has any one told you that you are a beautiful woman?"

"Yes—laughing gaily—"I have not lacked for information on that point."

"You were a handsome boy, but now you are superb. Before you go into anything else I want you to tell me all that has happened during these two months and more since I parted with you."

"Oh, that is quickly told. My father always kept a supply of cash in the house. There were several thousand dollars there at the time he died. I took it and went to San Francisco, traveling in my cowboy costume, for it was the only dress with which I was familiar. I had formed a plan of procedure, and when I arrived at my destination I carried it out to the letter. It consisted in finding a woman who would be at once a friend and an instructor, and I found one. I knew of a gentleman who had visited us once when I was quite young. He was a banker, and my father had business dealings with him, so that letters frequently passed between them. Among those letters I discovered his address, and as soon as I arrived in San Francisco I applied to him. I told him, of course, that I was Richard Maxwell's son, that my father was dead and that I desired his advice regarding several matters, the first one being a suitable place to live. He settled that in the way I wished him to do, for he invited me to his own home and in his wife I found the friend I needed. My course of instruction began that same day, for I at once told her what I was and I can assure you that my pattern has been strewn with roses from that day to this. Mr. and Mrs. Parsons came east with me and are now in the hotel. They are in their parlor now waiting for me to take you to them. For you may be sure that I have told them all about Craig Thompson. Will you come now and let me present you to them? They will be surprised for you are not the Craig Thompson whom I have described to them. It is very funny. I have been apologizing all this time for your rough ways, which I have insisted are as natural to you as it is for water to run down hill. Will you go with me now?"

"Yes, and afterward I'll get a carriage, and we'll take a job together. I want to talk to you, and to surprise you. But before we go to town, Lisle, there is one question that I want to ask you."

"What is it, Craig?"

"Are you sorry now that you are a woman?"

"No, Craig, I am glad that I am a woman. My heart is very light and very glad. I am proud to know that I am a woman."

"Thank God! So am I; but prouder still because you are always Lisle. Fate can alter your dress and your outward appearance, but it can't change Lisle Maxwell. That's what I'm proud of, little woman! Now take me to your friends."

CHAPTER XVI.

TO MAKE TWO WOMEN HAPPY.

EIGHTEEN years had not greatly altered the appearance of Daniel Maxwell. He was still the same square jawed, iron visaged man with whom Philip Barrington had discussed his affairs that time long ago when he had stolen his baby girl away from his mother and disappeared as utterly as if the earth had opened and engulfed him, and the disappearance had been utter and entire, even to him, for he had been no better informed regarding the real location of his child than had the mourning wife so cruelly deserted. Such correspondence as they had had was carried on through the medium of a banker in San Francisco, and the New York lawyer had never made the slightest effort to learn more concerning his former friend than that friend chose to tell him. Knowing nothing, he could impart no information. Being himself uninformed, he could truthfully say "I don't know" to all inquiries. He had never given the acts of Philip Barrington his personal approval, but he had nevertheless obeyed instructions without deviation. Personal liberty of action was the maxim of his daily life, and he adhered to it as closely in regard to others as he did in the regulation of his own affairs. Nothing had ever moved him from the straight course of duty as he recognized it. He was a philosopher and a stoic, and it was his practice to impart all kinds of information which he had to give in the same even tone in which he would have said, "It is raining." He rarely smiled, and he never frowned. Surprise never altered a line in his face nor changed the inflection of his voice. With him no meant no and yes meant yes, and nothing could qualify either expression after he had once uttered it; so that when a card which bore the name of Lisle Maxwell engraved upon it and with Craig's name penciled beneath it was given to him early in the evening following the interview between Lisle and Craig he put it aside and said calmly:

"Admit them."

They entered the same room into which Lisle's father had borne her the night before he went away, a self-condemned outcast, and the quick mind of the lawyer already grasped the fact that it was the child who had returned, doubtless to acquaint him with the information of Richard Maxwell's (Philip Barrington's) death, but he made no sign when the young lady, accompanied by the tall stranger, entered the room, only saying with his aggravating calm:

"Be seated. What can I do for you?"

Lisle did not reply. She stepped forward and without a word of explanation gave the letter which her father had addressed to Craig into the lawyer's hands. He read it through to the end, he read his eyes and asked:

"Have you other proofs of your father's death?"

It was Craig's turn to act, and he stepped forward and laid the death certificate upon the table.

"He," said the lawyer, examining it. "He has been dead something over two months. Now, young lady, if you will wait a few moments until I read a letter which your father left with me to be read by me after his death, I will know how I am to talk to you."

He was exasperatingly slow in opening the great safe that was in one corner of the room, in the deliberation with which he took therefrom a bundle of papers, and at last separated one from the others. It was an envelope, sealed with wax, but he broke it open and, still crouching before the safe, read it to the end.

"Very good," he said at last, rising and resuming his chair. "Your father's letter places me entirely at my ease. I am told that unless you otherwise determine, I am to act as your counsel in all things and that I am to exercise my own judgment in replying to any question upon which you may desire to be informed. Your father's will appoints me your guardian until you are of age in addition to that, I am your attorney."

"Barrington," murmured Lisle, not heeding the interruption, which, however, did not escape the keen eyes and shrewd surmise of the lawyer. "Then my true name is Lisle Barrington, or is the name Lisle also false?"

"No; that name was given to you in this room when you were a year old. You had not been named. It was necessary that you should be supplied with one in order that it might be inserted in the will. Your father's mother was a Lisle, and for that reason and also because the name is not indicative of sex you were called Lisle."

"Thank you—Now, sir—tremulously—can you tell me about my mother?"

"Yes," replied the lawyer. He might have been a stone image for all the feeling he manifested, and yet he must have realized the heart-eagerness with which Lisle asked the question.

(To be continued next week.)

Earthquakes and Electricity.

"It is now over 100 years," said the eminent engineer, John Gordon Gray, in a recent paper on wireless telegraphy, "since Salve a Spanish physicist, inventor of the electro-chemical telegraph, in a paper before the Academy of Science of Barcelona, said: 'If earthquakes be caused by electricity from one point charged positively to another point charged negatively, one does not even want a cable to send across the sea a signal arranged beforehand.'"

Relic to Be Preserved.

The North Shore Improvement Company of Long Island has paid $200,000 for a sand heap which abuts a field that is part of the Sagamore hill property owned by President Roosevelt. The sand hill was known as Cooper's bluff, and for some time it has been feared that it would be dug away and shipped to New York. The present purchase does away with this prospect. Howard Gould recently offered $50,000 for the property.

Odd Cure for Deafness.

One of the most singular cures for deafness ever recorded is quoted by the Independence Belge from the Dutch papers. An old man of seventy living at Krommeste, who had been deaf for twenty years, got involved in a dispute with some neighbors and became literally transported with rage. In this semi-demented state he suddenly recovered his hearing, which he has retained ever since.

Bey Revives Old Custom.

The new Bey of Tunis, reviving an old custom, will repeat twice a week to the Palais at Tunis, which is the seat of government. Concomplying with the custom, which debar him from occupying his predecessor's residence, he will remain at Carthage, while the late Bey's palace will be assigned to his cousin and heir, Prince Naceur. As the new Bey understands French the office of interpreter will be abolished.

Abyss: An Grave Rebuke.

While R. Makonnen, the Abyssinian general, was in Paris a reporter undertook to interview him, and among others put this decidedly leading question: "Do you, countrymen like the French or the English the better?" The dark-skinned warrior gravely asked in return: "Is your respected mother still alive?" and on receiving an affirmative answer said: "May she teach you better discretion."

Good Life-Saving Apparatus.

An Austrian army officer has exhibited in New York a novel life-saving apparatus which is said to have been adopted for army and navy use in several foreign countries to prevent danger of drowning. It is about the size and shape of an ordinary pocket cigar case, but when wet it develops into a balloon that quickly floats the wearer to the surface of the water.

Postmaster Seventy-four Years.

Roswell Beardsley has been postmaster of North Lansing, Tompkins county, N. Y., for seventy-four years, having been appointed by John Quincy Adams, July 14, 1828. Its height is said to be half again that of the tallest trees in California, and its thickness double that of the largest giant redwoods. The particulars are, however, suspiciously vague.

Suburban News.

As a rule a man will feel well satisfied if he can hobble around on crutches two or three weeks after spraining his ankle, and it is usually two or three months before he has fully recovered. This is an unnecessary loss of time, for in many cases in which Chamberlain's Pain Balm has been promptly and freely applied a complete cure has been effected in less than one week's time, and in some cases within three days. ABOUT — AUCTION BILLS!

A Good Auctioneer likes to see his name on a neat, attractive auction bill. "Any old thing" won't do. A neat, attractive bill with new type and cuts brings a crowd and a good auctioneer can do the rest. Poor and unattractive bills bring a poor, no-money crowd and the auctioneer is blamed when in reality it is the printer's fault. We're up-to-date. We put up the attractive kind of bills and they cost no more than the other kind. We also give the auction and the auctioneer a good "send off" in The Record—that's free.
