KILLED WHILE LOADING LOGS

DEATH MONDAY.

Log Rolled Off Truck and Crushed
His Skull.

Again this week the Record has to chronicle a sudden and tragic death. On Monday morning not long after the men working for D. E. Cole drawing timber from the Thompson woods had commenced work, Page Miller of this village, who was putting on his load of logs, was instantly killed. He had nearly completed loading his trucks when he was thrown to the ground by the slipping of one of the lower logs and the top one rolled upon him, crushing his head. An inquest was held and a verdict rendered in accordance with the above facts.

The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of Porter Brothers and prepared for burial. The funeral was held Wednesday, Rev. J. M. Shank of the Methodist church of Beloit, the services were in charge of the Foresters and were conducted in accordance with the prescribed forms of that order.

DESERTED HIS WIFE.

Sunday Noon.

Peter Smith, proprietor of the barber shop next to postoffice, is missing since Sunday noon, and he has left his wife and children in reduced circumstances. When last seen he was boarding the 12.30 electric car.

Mrs. Smith with her five children will move back to the city next week. She appears to be very much of a lady and the children are all bright as dollars.

Wm. C. Davenport has bought half interest in the shop of Mr. Falge of Detroit and will carry on the business. Davenport is a good workman and has moved his family here and expects to make Northville his home.

W. C. T. U. Reception.

The W. C. T. U. held a delightful reception Monday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Johnson in honor of new members. After scripture reading by Rev. W. S. Jerome and prayer by Rev. O. M. Thrasher a song was beautifully rendered by Misses Jesse and Edith Clark, Ray VanValkenburg and Roy Clark. Bright, pathetic and witty recitations by Misses Julia and Eva Allen, and a fine solo by Mrs. D. G. Barbour were other enjoyable features. Readings were given from the National convention and Declaration of Principles were given by members, and at the close of the program an invitation was extended to new members for initiatory service. A nice luncheon was served after the exercises. A pleasing feature to the society was the interest taken in the work by the new members and the guests in the departments that would be most helpful.

Warner Boomed for Governor.

This is considerable of a boom in Oakland county looking to the nomination of Secretary of State Fred M. Warner for governor two years hence. There is a popular cry among prominent republicans of this section for the party to nominate some clean cut candidate who is exempt from boodle influence and who has no independent fortune with which to purchase the nomination. The movement inaugurated by the Northville Record finds the heartiest support in Oakland county—Detroit Free Press.

Joe Darlington Died Sunday.

Joseph Darlington died at his home in this village on Sunday afternoon, aged 68 years. He leaves a widow, one daughter and three sons. He was a member of the Northville G. A. R. post and the funeral was conducted under the auspices of that order from the home Tuesday afternoon. Rev. O. M. Thrasher officiating. The burial was in Rural Hill.

A FITTING FINALE

To the King's Daughters' Annual Sale and Fair.

The entertainment given by the King's Daughters Wednesday night was a very enjoyable affair and a fitting finale to the society's annual fair. Those who took part did themselves proud. Crocker's orchestra received much deserved praise. Miss Richardson sang a very pretty solo and both the ladies' and male quartet were well received. Miss MacDonnell of Detroit gave several fine readings that were highly enjoyable and R. H. Porter and Charles Gardner each did a turn that alone was well worth the admission price. Mrs. Merritt rendered a very pretty violin solo and Ike Crocker treated the audience to a fine cornet solo. The total receipts for the two days were $121.81 and the society will net something like $115.00. The society feels very grateful to all those who have rendered such valuable assistance during the fair and especially to those who contributed articles for the sales departments and to those who took part in the entertainment.

Made a Big Run.

Detroit Journal: Representative Neal of Northville again made a remarkable run for the legislature in the Third district, receiving 764 majority, the largest ever conceded any candidate in an off year, the majority being but 92 less than the big majority he received two years ago, when there were about twice as many votes cast. Mr. Neal ran ahead of the ticket in nearly every town in the district and carried Mongaugon, the home town of his opponent, by 28 majority. Neal will be the only republican representative from Wayne county outside of the city of Detroit.

Disadvantages of Cool Summer.

A cool summer is pleasant in many ways, but it makes bad business for the opticians, as well as for the dispensers of soda water and cooling drinks. In sultry weather eye-glasses slip and fall continually from perspiring noses.

Electric Railway a Success.

The experimental electric railroad ground railroad in Paris has been so successful that two important branches will be added to it during the current year.

IS THERE COAL IN LIVONIA?

CLAIM THERE'S FORTY OR MORE FEET OF IT.

The Old Find of Twelve Years Ago
Is Now Revived.

According to recent reports the fuel situation in this part of the country is destined to take on an entirely different aspect in the near future. It is asserted that an extremely rich vein of bituminous coal has just been discovered on the farm of Daniel Blue in Livonia township, and this proves to be true it means a great deal more than an item of merely local interest to the people of that vicinity.

It is said that Mr. Blue had men at work putting down a drive well and when a depth of 89 feet had been reached the operators were astonished to find that the drill was passing through a vein of soft coal. It is claimed that they continued boring for fifty feet before the vein was passed through, but this is thought to be a mistake, as the average Saginaw valley veins only have a thickness of six feet. Naturally much excitement prevails in that vicinity and if the find proves to be genuine it must open up anew the question of the possibilities and probabilities of the hidden mineral wealth believed by many to be awaiting discovery among the hills and dales environing our village.

This discovery so near us, if it proves to be a bona fide one, is a new confirmation of the scientific opinion given long ago that this part of the country is geologically eligible to the supposition of being in the coal belt of Michigan, and perhaps we may yet see that opinion verified.

A Record representative visited Mr. Blue's place Tuesday night and found that the discovery, if it be a discovery, was made by a well digger named Richard Smith of Stark, some twelve years ago and during the recent coal famine he recalled the circumstances and claims there is forty or more feet of coal lying on the Blue farm only 80 feet below the surface. Mr. Blue says in the spring he will put down a test hole and see whether Mr. Smith's predictions are good or not.

One Good Accomplished.

"I met your wife yesterday. How well she is looking!" "Yes. We have been expecting her rich aunt to visit us this summer." "Ah." Of course, I don't mean that expecting her aunt has made my wife look so well, but it has kept her from going away anywhere for a rest."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Calls for Explanations.

Philosophers like Mr. Perkins, Mr. Morgan's partner, who declared that in modern conditions the young man who works hard must win success, should add a few footnotes to their disquisitions explaining matters satisfactorily to the men who have worked hard and not won.

A WELCOME AT LANSING.

City Gals Attired For Members of National Grange.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 12.—The capital city is in gala array in honor of the convocation of the National Grange, the greatest organized body of agriculturists in the world, which opens today. Not less than 3,000 prominent farmers, with their wives, will be here when the grange opens with its accustomed brilliancy.

Several hundreds of delegates and visitors have already arrived. The national body is small in itself. Twenty-six states are affiliated with the central body. Each sends two delegates, the master of the state grange and his wife. With them comes a crowd of visitors, even from far-off California. The last meeting of the national body was held at Lewiston, Me., but the present is expected to eclipse all previous sessions.

Lansing is doing herself proud. The streets are bedecked with flags. The state capitol is arranged in colors. In the great rotunda are handsome exhibits from the Michigan Agricultural college, the staff of which has entered with enthusiasm into the occasion. Cereals from the fields, fruit and flowers are scattered about, and the rotunda has become besides an experimental laboratory with chests of trees and vines showing the inroads of insects and diseases. On Capitol avenue are two monster tents, in which the factory products of Lansing are tastefully exhibited. No one appreciates the import of the meeting better than these exhibitors.

Headquarters were opened at the Downey house and the rooms of National Secretary C. J. Trimble of Washington, D. C. are alive with delegates and visitors.

At 2.30 p. m. today Worthy Master Aaron Jones of South Berd, Ind., will deliver his annual address reviewing the grange work of the past year.

Sutton Jurors May Be Arrested.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 12.—The fact was officially divulged Tuesday, that even since the circuit court jury returned a verdict of acquittal in the case of Colonel Eli R. Sutton, charged with conspiracy to defraud the state more than two years ago, an investigation with a view to determining how such a verdict came to be returned has been quietly pursued. The verdict of the jury was so utterly at variance with public opinion on the evidence that some of the authorities could not be reconciled to it. As a consequence, a committee was chosen and investigation begun. Finally, a fortnight or so ago enough had been learned to warrant Judge West in sitting as a magistrate for the purpose of securing information on which to base complaints. A number of persons from Lansing, Detroit and elsewhere were examined, and it is possible that others will be examined later. This much was divulged by the authorities today, and while they would not say whether any complaints will be made and warrants issued it is known on excellent authority that more than one person will be arrested within a few days.

Leaves Her $300,000.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 12.—The death of Miss Beebe, a former Kalamazoo man, at Paw Paw Saturday night, is the denouement of a romance which began about a year ago. Mr. Beebe was a wealthy farmer, living two miles east of Paw Paw. He was seventy years of age, a widower, and anxious to spend his last years in domestic happiness. He married a young lady from Ind. and, whose acquaintance he made through a matrimonial bureau. But they had their troubles and at one time she departed to Chicago with $300,000 of the old man's money. Subsequently she returned and last Saturday the old gentleman died, leaving her some $300,000. Three beautiful daughters, all married, survive the old man, but it is said the young wife will receive all his property despite the threats of the daughters to begin legal proceedings.

McGurran Becomes a General.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 12.—Colonel McGurran received notice Tuesday morning of the issuance of his commission as the new commander of brigade state troops to succeed General Boynton of Port Huron. He announces that Adjutant Hardy and Quartermaster Kinney go up with him but the other appointments will not be ready for some time. Under the new law, no brigade surgeon is provided for, and 10th Surgeon Knowles and Chaplain Fr. Kelly will retire with their colonel. It is not expected a special election by the regiment will be called, as it costs about $500 and the regular election comes next spring. It is assured, however, that Lieutenant Colonel Abbey of Kalamazoo will be colonel, Major Whitney of Muskegon lieutenant colonel, and Captain Palard of Big Rapids major.

Woman Killed a Deer.

Ishpeming, Mich., Nov. 12.—Mrs. George Bennett, wife of a conductor on the South Shore line, is the first upper peninsula huntress to bring in a deer. She shot two bucks each weighing about 200 pounds, near Republic.

Pallbearers Dressed in White.

Mrs. Gertrude Drennon, wife of a Kansas City liveryman, died a few days ago, and in accordance with her expressed desire six girl friends acted as pallbearers at her funeral. They were dressed in white and the novel spectacle attracted a large crowd to the cemetery. Mrs. Drennon was 22 years of age and had been married less than a year.

To Die of Paralysis
Like Father.

Helpless Invalid For Three Years.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Made
My Nerves Strong.

"For many years I suffered from terrible headaches and pain at the base of the brain, and finally got so bad that I was overpowered with nervous prostration. I had frequent dizzy spells and was so weak and exhausted that I could take but little food. The best physicians told me I could not live; that I would die of paralysis, as my father and grandfather had. I resented a helpless invalid for three years, when I heard of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and began using it. That winter I felt better than I had before in many years, and I have not been troubled with those dreadful headaches since I first used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. My appetite is good and my nerves are strong."—Mrs. M. M. Bucknell, 2005 Oakland Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration, and could not direct my household affairs, nor have any care. My stomach was very weak, headaches very severe, and I was so nervous that there was not a night in years that I slept over one hour at a time. We spent hundreds of dollars for doctors and medicine. I was taken to Chicago and treated by specialists, but received no benefit at all. Finally I heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine and began its use. I was surprised that it helped me so quickly, and great was my joy to find, after using seven bottles, that I had fully recovered my health."—Mrs. W. A. Thompson, Duluth, Minn.

Remarkable Marriage Anniversary.

The rare event of the seventeenth anniversary of the marriage was celebrated by Herr Arnault, formerly a merchant captain, and his wife at Ressemersiel. The husband is ninety-six and the wife ninety years old. The German Emperor had a special medal struck for the couple, showing the portraits of the Emperor and Empress, and the number 70.

America's Buddhist Shrine.

It is stated that San Diego, southern California, is rapidly becoming the Buddhist center for America. In one house in Los Angeles a shrine has been erected to Buddha, and the owner, a woman of wealth, retains there a Buddhist priest who was at the Chicago World's Fair, and many people gather weekly there for worship.

NATIONAL GRANGES

OPENED SESSION WEDNESDAY AT STATE CAPITAL.

MASTER HON. AARON JONES DELIVERS ANNUAL ADDRESS.

REPORTS WONDERFUL DEGREE OF PROSPERITY PAST YEAR.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 13.—The great leading feature of the opening session Wednesday of the National Grange was the annual address of the master, Hon. Aaron Jones of Indiana. He said in part:

"The order has enjoyed a wonderful degree of prosperity during the past year. This is true from whatever view you take of it. More new granges organized, more members initiated in existing granges, better ritual and literary work done, meetings held oftener and better attended, and greater interest taken, and more inquiry by those outside our gates. The financial condition solvent and satisfactory, more grange halls have been built and tastefully furnished and equipped for the uses and purposes of the order. In securing legislation, state and national, the order has been measurably successful. The work of the order more generally commended by all the people of our country."

"I, therefore, congratulate the order on the efficient work of the membership throughout the country with its gratifying and splendid results."

"A constantly increasing demand for information of the objects, purposes and benefits of the order of Patrons of Husbandry indicate that the National Grange should provide literature fully explaining the organization, that all farmers may be fully advised of its benefits and advantages, and how they can secure membership, either in existing granges or new organizations."

"I recommend that the extension and lecture fund be continued and that the National Grange Quarterly Bulletin, the official organ of the order, be also continued, and the issue increased and a copy sent to each officer of subordinate pomona, state and national, granges; and that the subscription price to all others be fixed at cost."

"To increase the interest and benefit of the order I fraternally suggest that each subordinate grange should meet once each week and that all members who possibly can be prompt in their attendance, and assist in all the work of the grange, and should strive to give as well as receive information that will increase the profits of agriculture, lessen the labor on the farm or in the home, or add to its attractiveness."

"The farmers of the United States turn out food and clothing to feed 80,000,000 inhabitants, and annually send abroad from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 agricultural products. The wealth produced each year by the farmers of the United States is greater than any nation of the world, and the amount of our productions is annually increasing to a degree not realized by our people."

"The brief recital of the annual productions of the farms of the United States ought to impress us with the vast responsibility resting on our order, as it is the only national organization representing this most important industry. It is a part and an important part of the work of our order to make this industry more important and profitable."

"The work of the national lecturer has been of great value to the order. Wherever he has spoken a higher appreciation of the order exists. The literature prepared and the Quarterly Bulletin thought by him have furnished food for thought to all classes of American citizens, and has been of such character as to inspire our order and impress all others that the Order of Patrons of Husbandry is doing a grand work, a bettering, bettering, bettering conditions and improving the citizenship of our country."

"The department of agriculture in the several states and at Washington and all the agricultural colleges with out exception are all in full sympathy with and are aiding the order to better agricultural conditions."

John Trimble of Washington where the home office of the National Grange is located, has been national secretary for twenty years and is versed in all that appertains to the history and aspirations of the order. Dr. Trimble is a gray-bearded, soldierly looking gentleman with something of the southern air about him. Sneaking of the growth of the grange, he said:

"Michigan led all the states in the number of new lodges organized in recent years. The outlook the action over was never brighter. We have two measures in which as a national body we are interested and which will, doubtless be thoroughly discussed—the ship subsidy and the irrigation of western lands."

E. R. Norris of Sodas, N. Y. chairman of the national executive committee, stated that the rural mail system would come up for discussion. The grange was the prime mover in the matter.

One of the most notable features in the convention is Mrs. Sarah G. Baird of Minnesota, who claims the distinction of being the only woman ever elected to the office of master of a state grange. She is here now representing her state in that capacity.

Senator Burrows presided at the evening meeting and made a short address of congratulation. Former State Senator Helme of Adrian who is an active grange worker, was among those present.

Governor Bliss delivered the address of welcome and worthy Master Jones responded with an eloquent review of the part taken in the creation of the grange of today by Michigan.

George B. Horton, worthy master of the state grange, followed in an address.

ANDREWS IN PRISON.

Detroit's Bankwrecker Unable to Furnish the Enormous Bail.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 13.—Frank C. Andrews, convicted bankwrecker, was taken to Jackson on the 12:40 Michigan Central train this morning and is now occupying a cell in the state's prison.

Sheriff Dickson decided yesterday that he would not delay removing the famous prisoner longer, now that Andrews and his attorneys had thrown up their hands and admitted that they were unable to furnish the $200,000 bail demanded.

The prisoner left the county jail at about 12:30 o'clock standard time in a closed carriage, accompanied by Sheriff Dickson and a pair of deputies.

A number of Andrews' friends called at the jail yesterday to bid him farewell. Attorney James McManisara was one of them, and Attorneys Beaumont, Kirchner and Baker were all closeted with him late in the evening. Arthur Miller, Andrews' secretary, was also on hand.

One of the most interesting scenes was that when the bankwrecker's wife came at about 8 o'clock to bid farewell to her husband for the last time before he should wear the stripes of a felon. Andrews did not seem to feel downcast at the parting or at his wife's tears. He gave her his valuable jewelry and at a jesting remark of Attorney McManisara laughed in seeming good spirits.

Car Collided With a Tree.

Muskegon, Mich., Nov. 13.—A special interurban car, coming from Grand Rapids at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, was wrecking by striking a tree which had fallen across the track. The car was occupied by local Elks, who had been to Grand Rapids to play indoor baseball with Grand Rapids Elks. Chief Beardsley, bookkeeper for the Muskegon Traction and Light company was seriously injured in the abdomen. F. St. John, assistant superintendent of the interurban road who was acting as motor man on the special, was cut about the head. Several others were slightly injured.

Mangled Under Car Wheels.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 13.—A seven-year old boy named Guoin was crushed to death by a gravel car on the street car tracks at Grosse Pointe yesterday afternoon. The little fellow was returning home from school when he attempted to pass in front of a work car and was knocked down. The wheels passed over his body, mangleing it in a horrible manner. The accident took place on St. Clair avenue.

Metamora, Mich., Nov. 13.—Jonathan Rossman of Metamora committed suicide Wednesday by cutting his throat with a razor. He was in his usual good health during the morning. When one of the family went to a room to dinner he was dead. His daughter is the wife of Postmaster Eiston.

Michigan vs. Columbia.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 13.—A debate is being talked of between Michigan and Columbia universities. Arrangements have already been partially made for establishing such a contest to take place annually alternately at New York and Ann Arbor.

She Concealed Stolen Goods.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 13.—Theresa Barber was found guilty in the circuit court Tuesday of concealing goods stolen by her son Joe who is serving two and a half years at Ionia for the crime.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Bribery Gossip at Kalamazoo.—Some hot bribery gossip is in the air in connection with the granting of a franchise to the Elkhart Kalamazoo trolley line at Kalamazoo. A grand jury is talked of.

Big Time For Pontiac Elks.—Nearly sixty of the prominent citizens of Pontiac will be initiated in the newly formed lodge of Elks on the afternoon of Nov. 25. In the evening the officers will be installed and the work will be followed by a big banquet.

Vets Get Medals at Last.—The long delayed public presentation of Spanish war medals at Grand Rapids will be held Friday evening. The medals will be presented by Adj. Gen. Brown. Governor Bliss being unable to be present.

Big Real Estate Deal.—The largest real estate deal in twenty years in Jackson was consummated Wednesday when Thomas and Edward Dutton laid down $35,320 in cold cash for the Union block and some vacant property in another portion of the city belonging to the D. B. Hibbard estate.

RETAINED LOURIM

PRISON KEEPER WAS NOT FIRED
—ONLY SUSPENDED.

BOARD VINDICATES HIM FOR HIS ACTIONS.

CHARLOTTE MAN GIVEN THE CHAPLAINCY.

Jackson, Mich., Nov. 12.—Keeper William Lourim, who in the prison disturbance Saturday succeeded in saving the life of Foreman Hugh Brennan, who was attacked by convicts in the shirt factory, went back to work Tuesday. Lourim understood he was discharged by Warden Vincent, but the warden explained to him that he suspended him pending the meeting of the prison board, which occurred yesterday. The board told Lourim to go back to work. After Lourim had saved Brennan he returned to the scene of the disorder and the convicts who were trying to quell the disturbance urged him to leave until they restored order. It was for leaving at this time that Lourim was criticized. The board took the view that Lourim did right in leaving. Several convicts in the shirt factory were locked up yesterday and then Brennan was allowed to go back to work.

The prison board appointed Rev. Frank Van Alpe of Charlotte, Universalist, to the chaplaincy of the state prison, vice Rev. J. F. Orwick, resigned. Van Alpe is a Michigan man and about sixty years of age. Dr. George Pray, a young man from the U. of M. hospital, was appointed prison physician, vice Dr. W. A. Gibson resigned. Pray will devote his whole time to the prison which Dr. Gibson did not feel he could do. Pray formerly resided at Lima. Gibson has been prison physician for about ten years.

The prison board recommended two paroles to Governor Bliss. They were Percy Duncan, from St. Joseph county, five years for assault, Judge Hinton of Coldwater first friend James Good, from Grand Rapids, twenty years for robbery, sentenced in February 1892. William H. Smith of Detroit first friend.

Stevenson & Sons' safe was blown open, and $500, Lesh & Young's safe Co.'s safe a complete wreck and $30 taken. The burglars first went to the Withington Fence company's office, where some postage stamps, tools were stolen. It is thought the tools found in various places in the work of professionals. No clue.

Lansing Man Murdered.

Ontonagon, Mich., Nov. 12.—Edward Mahoney, formerly of Lansing, but the last few years under sheriff at Duluth was found dead on the beach there with evidence of having been murdered. Mahoney's parents and several brothers reside at Lansing. One brother, Thomas Mahoney, is shipping clerk here for the Owosso Carriage company. Some of his relatives have gone to Duluth, and have signified their intention to hunt down the murderers, no matter what the cost.

Hung Himself With Overalls.

Tate, Rivers, Mich., Nov. 12.—Brooding over the death of his wife which occurred four years ago, Justin M. Haewood of Newburg, Cass county came to this city Saturday evening from Kalamazoo, where he had been taking treatment at the Borgess hospital. He dove to the Pierce woods, near Clear Lake where he hanged himself to a spring with a pair of new overalls. His body was not found until Monday afternoon.

Buried in Sewer Trench.

Owosso, Mich., Nov. 12.—A sewer trench at the Owosso Manufacturing company's plant caved in yesterday afternoon and buried James Griffith and his wife beneath tons of dirt. Griffith's right leg was broken in two places and he is expected to die. Griffith also sustained internal injuries. Both are married men.

Cattle Poisoner at Work.

Coldwater, Mich., Nov. 12.—Eneas Quinly, a Bethel township farmer, has lost one horse, three cows, three hogs and a dog by poison. All of his stock was poisoned and he will probably lose more. Investigation so far has not given any clue to the guilty parties.

Five Years in Prison.

Ithaca, Mich., Nov. 12.—George Hawkins pleaded guilty yesterday to attempted assault on Anna Carroll, aged nineteen, and was sentenced to five years at Ionia.

Forgers Not Shrewd Enough.

When the Warsaw police recently raided a forged bank note factory they found a cabinet organ stuffed with counterfeit notes. One of the forgers was playing the instrument, and its defective music attracted suspicion.

Production of "Champagne."

American apples, are cored, sliced and dried sent to France, and there converted into cider. With the addition of carbonic acid gas and yeast, and a little flavoring powder, the cider becomes champagne, and much of it goes to England and is drunk under the delusion that it is of the best brand.

Energy all gone? Headache? Stomach out of order? Simply a case of torpid liver. Buldock Blood Bitters will make a new man or woman of you.

Angel-Face Invisible After Dark.

Last week an east side boy went calling after 9 o'clock at night, and the old man met him at the door in his nightgown and wanted to know what was wanted at that time of night. After this the boy will call before sun down.—Empire Gazette.

School Notes.

[By the Superintendent.]

Several new pupils have entered the grades this week.

Some neat program holders have been put on the school room doors.

Some nice kindergarten work is being done by our little folks. You ought to see them at their school.

The old horseshoe that created so much strife between the divisions of the eighth grade last year in their spelling contests is working wonders again this year.

The first ten weeks of school closed last Friday. While we can see great need of improvement in the school as a whole, yet, when we compare the ten weeks just closed with that of last year we have some consolation in the fact that tardy marks have been decreased by 54 and three fifths per cent and the attendance has been more regular. Most of the young people are doing excellent work.

Wonderland Temple Theatre—Detroit.

The feature of the fine bill that Manager Moore of Wonderland and Temple theatre, Detroit, has booked for next week is Mary Norman, one of the most talented actresses of the English-speaking stage. Others who will appear on the program with her are the following well known artists: Alfred Godfrey & Co., who will present the sketch entitled "A Very Bad Boy." Felix and Barry, Leo Dervaito, the Four Klans, Louise Berehany, Les Frassetis and the Holloway trio, the most marvelous slack wire performers that Europe has ever sent to this country.

Laurier Going to Rome.

What to do Until the Doctor Arrives.

One of my children was taken with cramp colic and suffered severely. Says S. B. Elzee of Monett, Mo.: "I telephoned for a doctor, then gave a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and a few minutes later a second dose. Before the doctor came the child was relieved." For sale by G. C. Hueston.

German Settlers in Canada.

There are about 35,000 Germans in Canada, mainly in the Eastern frontier districts. There are 3,000 Germans in British Columbia. In several Canadian towns the German element amounts to from 60 to 82 per cent of the whole population.

A STARTLING SURPRISE.

Very few could believe in looking at A. T. Hoadley, a healthy, robust blacksmith of Tilden, Ind., that for 10 years he suffered such tortures from Rheumatism as few could endure and live. But a wonderful change followed his taking Electric Bitters. "Two bottles wholly cured me," he writes, "and I have not felt a twinge in over a year." They regulate the kidneys, purify the blood and cure Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervousness, improve digestion and give perfect health. Try them. Only 50 cts. at Geo. C. Hueston's drug store.

NOW ABOUT YOUR BOY'S OVERCOAT?

Chances are you haven't given the subject serious consideration—weather's been too pleasant for that, but it's wise not to let Jack Frost catch you napping.

We can Overcoat your Boy nicely from our ample stock. As to kinds and prices, well we will leave the latter for you to decide, but pay as much as you can afford—it means a saving in the end and the kind your money will buy here would cost a dollar more at other stores where quality is not a consideration as it is at Traver's.

From $5.50 and up to $12 you can get mighty stylish coats of Oxford Friezes and Fancy Cheviots that will fix the lads of 7 to 16 years up in excellent shape.

Then at $10 there are coats for the larger boys those of 16 to 19 years; they are the sort the most particular boys can't find fault with.

The City in Brief.

William Purdy Yerkes still lies in a very critical condition.

Carmel Benton had the misfortune to lose one of his horses by death last week.

Supt. Wilkinson reports that the electric light receipts for October will amount to $350.

Between the foot ball and hunting season the doctors and undertakers will be kept busy.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Colby now occupy the Dr. B. Northrop farm on Plymouth avenue.

John Murdock, who was some what better last week, has again been taken seriously ill.

A number of pet cats in town have been poisoned recently. The perpetrator of the deed evidently has no regard for people's feelings.

Rev. Mr. Shank of the M. E. church is quite an artist and the little flyers announcing some of his topics are adorned with pat illustrations.

A "pointed" social will be held at W. H. Hutton's Tuesday Nov. 18th. A souvenir will be given each one. Ice cream and cake will be served. Admission 10 cents at the door.

The L. O. T. M. M. are fast perfecting arrangements for their grand ball on Thanksgiving eve and the affair is expected to be one of the "swellest" ever given by any order in Northville.

The recent rainy weather has caused many inquiries from some parts of town as to the necessity of having crosswalks if they are to be kept covered with several inches of mud for the pedestrian to wade through.

Clifford Cranson injured one of his fingers so badly in some of the machinery at the Dubuair air rifle factory Monday that a slight amputation was necessary. Dr. Burgess took off the end of the finger near the first joint.

L. L. Brooks, the veteran produce buyer, purchased this season over 6,000 barrels of apples. The prices ranged from 75 cents to $1.10 for the fruit. Mr. Brooks also shipped a lot of pears and fall apples in addition to the above.

Dr. Burgess has purchased the fine Yarnall residence on Dunlap street. Mrs. Yarnall will spend the winter in the south and will probably go to Detroit to reside in the spring. Northville people will be sorry to lose Mrs. Yarnall as a resident here.

Representative Neal of Northville has cause to congratulate himself for in a light vote his majority was largely increased over that of two years ago, being elected by nearly 800 votes. Plymouth township gave Mr. Neal a majority of 157—Plymouth Mail.

The King's Daughter, fair this week has been a success as usual, although the weather was very unfavorable Tuesday. The booths were "prettier than ever," as is remarked every successive season. The one devoted to dolls and their accessories was particularly charming the large display of cunning little garments and hats being very attractive to the older people as well as the little folks.

C. Lawrence Abbott, the young male soprano of the Ideal Entertainers who were here this week is a cousin of Dr. J. M. Burgess.

The amount of semi-annual state school money allotment to the township of Northville this fall is $1,232.70, largest ever made, for its 557 children. Plymouth has 577 school-aged children and gets $1,211.70.

New Northville phones have lately been put in as follows: Jesse Clark, 822; D. E. Cole, 853; John Dennis (Powers), 873; Mrs. E. Y. Holcomb, 876; Orrin Peck, 875; Mrs. Mary Power, 874, M. E. parsonage, 282.

About forty Northville Lady Macabees went over to Plymouth Thursday evening as guests of their sisters of the order there, and did the work for the initiation of five candidates. They also initiated their elegant new robes at the same time.

Mrs. Woolley of this place was one of the passengers in the car which received a stray 32 caliber bullet Sunday, presumably from the gun of one of the careless city sportsmen who have been making the Sabbaths of Farmington people miserable ever since the opening of the hunting season.

The following new books have recently been put in circulation by the library board: "The Virginian," Owen Wister; "The Enchanted Typewriter," John Kendrick Bangs; "The Way of the West," Gen. Charles King, and three volumes of the "Little Colonel" series by Alice Johnston.

The voter at Adrian who spent a long time on election day hunting for the right side in the voting machine to cast a vote for Maybury, was equalled by one here who, after spending some time in the booth called in the inspector and wanted some help to fix things up so he could vote for Scripps. They have 'em most every where.

The Ideal Entertainers at the Opera House Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Library association gave general satisfaction and the ladies are much pleased over the fact that so large an audience was present in spite of conflicting circumstances. The very fine pictures given by the Entertainers are especially praised by all who were present.

The members of the Library board feel very grateful to Northville people for the loyal patronage given their entertainment, and especially to those gentlemen whose accommodating kindness contributed to make the affair much more successful than it could have been without their help. A nice little sum was realized for the benefit of the library.

The first election returns were received by phone from Northville about 6:30 and they inspired the Republicans with confidence in the result as a whole. The Northville town board provided the voters these with a voting machine and the result was known within a few minutes after the polls were closed. The Plymouth board labored until long after midnight before finishing the count, and of course drew two days' pay. When will Plymouth have a voting machine? Let township and village join in its purchase. —Plymouth Mail.

Who Pays the Printer?

When you go around from printer to printer getting bids on a job and then giving it to the lowest bidder, you get an indifferently good job—one with no particularly good points—one that sells no goods for you, then who pays the printer?

YOU DO.

When you pick out a good printer, giving him all your work, educating him to an idea of your needs, and paying a fair price for the work you get, your printer (when secured at the Record Printery) necessarily creates a favorable impression for you and for what you offer, and becomes a factor in selling your goods. Then who pays the printer? Your customer.

HE DOES.

MASTER and SLAVE

By... T. H. THORPE

Copyright, 1901, by T. H. Thorpe.

The bridge path through the swamps behind the bayou fields shortened considerably the distance between L'Esperance and the Latiolais plantation. The shadows of afternoon were but beginning to lengthen when Oakfell started Estelle, with broad hat tied under her chin and shears in her hand, clipping a shrub of sweet olive. Flushed cheeks and embarrassed manner testified her maidenly timidity, but quickly the convent taught politeness came to her aid, and she gracefully welcomed her visitor to a seat upon the veranda, where at the summons of her mistress Odette served cool water flavored with the sirup of mandarins.

"You will, I hope, be not displeased, mademoiselle, when I tell you that three years have made such change in your appearance that I scarcely would have recognized you elsewhere than here at your home," said Oakfell.

"I sufficiently realize that," she replied, "when I look at my mirror and then at the little daguerrotype I sent to grandpere from New Orleans when I first went to the convent. Sometimes I fear I shall be an old woman while my companions are still young girls. Laure Luneau is two years older than I, but she looks two years younger."

"Is she one of your companions?" asked Oakfell.

"We have known each other all our lives," answered Estelle, "and the mention of her name reminds me Mr. Oakfell."

"I beg you will not," Oakfell interrupted.

"But," she persisted, "I feel bound—"

"So do I," said Oakfell smiling, "for there are other matters we can discuss with more likelihood of agreement—for instance, the message you sent to me by Quilbert's jockey, Leon."

"Oh, Mr. Oakfell," she exclaimed, "was ever such a cruel, wicked wrong? But you will protect poor Leon and deliver him from that ferocious man, will you not?"

"Your command moved my mind to that resolution," he said.

"And you will succeed," she declared, with warmth. "Father Grise's account of your speech in the legislature against that disgraceful law forbidding emancipation of slaves told me you were brave and wise, and your championship of me in the election of god-mother for the bell told me you were generous, and therefore I sent Leon to you. Was I too bold, and did I do wrong? I had no time to advise with my grandfather."

"No, mademoiselle. My misgiving is as to my own ability. But what strength I have shall be exerted to the fullest, and should success meet my efforts the gratitude of Leon and Odette will be due to you."

"And mine to you, Mr. Oakfell—So you will receive it all, as you well deserve."

"Your grandfather is well, I trust. Is he at home?" Oakfell inquired.

"He is quite well, but I regret is not at home. He rode away an hour ago I fear, to Quilbert's." Estelle replied, an expression of pain coming to her face. "I do wish dear grandfather was not so much with that bad man whose evil influence over his kind yielding nature I so much dread."

"Mr. Latiolais' virtues are too confirmed to be weakened by contact with so coarse a character. Nevertheless," Oakfell added, "this intimacy between them compels me to suggest, mademoiselle, that nothing be said to your grandfather of Leon's visit to me or of my intentions in his behalf. I play you will not feel offense at the suggestion."

"Not in the least," she answered him. "It is well founded and just and shall be respected. When will you begin?"

"I cannot say," he replied. "The work of preparation may occupy me until fall."

"I will earnestly pray God and the Virgin to aid and to bless you and to enable me, though but an ignorant and feeble girl, to be of some use in so just a cause," said Estelle.

"Your good will shall be my sufficent stay," said Oakfell, offering his hand in adieu, and the touch produced a delicious shock that sent the blood bounding through his veins in a manner new to his experience.

As he rode away with a knightly bow Estelle danced to her maid, who had listened unceasing within hearing distance of the conversation, and said:

"I am so glad that I sent Leon to him. I was so happy that he came to see me. New Leon said I did not do wrong and that he will never yield to injustice. What a handsome, good face he has, Oakfell."

"Oh, mademoiselle, he is among men what you are among women, the first of the good!" answered Odette. "He is the only one fit for you, and you are the only one fit for him."

"What are you thinking of, silly thing? Mr. Oakfell is not a Catholic, and I am," said Estelle, faintly pointing.

"I know he is not a Catholic," the maid replied, "but, for all that, he is the best man in the parish. I have heard Father Grise say that."

"Father Grise has honest and correct opinions, and whatever he says I believe. But Mrs. Oakfell will very likely be one of those bold American beauties on Bayou Beau, not the shy and stupid little creole of Bayou Rouge," Estelle said plaintively.

"Ah, my sweet mistress, if you had seen M. Oakfell's face as I saw it when you gave him your hand for goodby you would not talk so. And if he looks for beauty, which one of the American ladies can compare with Mamselle Latiolais? Beauty is not everything to such as M. Oakfell, nor boldness, nor money. Something better than all these he will want—the good, true heart, and so American lady has a heart of pearl like my mistress." The slave girl spoke warmly and loyally, and Estelle ran into the house to conceal the blushes of happiness these words brought to her cheeks.

At sunset the grandfather returned. His step was slow and his countenance grave and troubled. Sinking wearily into a chair on the veranda, he closed his eyes as if to shut out an unwelcome visitor to his memory and thus sat silent and brooding when Estelle approached and lightly kissed his brow.

"Are you sick, my dear grandfather?" she asked.

"In spirit, yes, otherwise no my dear little girl," he replied.

"Then what is it that has given despondency to my good old child?"

"Ah, little Estelle, you are the child too tender and sensitive to hear the shocking thing that has saddened my soul this evening."

"No," she protested, "you misjudge me. I am strong enough to share with you all your griefs and must do so or fail in my duty. Then tell me what distresses you. Did you not go to M. Quilbert's and was it not there this thing has happened? Tell me, Estelle."

"Yes, my angel, I will tell you for I must speak to some one. I rode over to Constant's to spend an hour with him. As I passed his stables I heard the strokes of the whip falling heavily upon flesh and a low moan following each blow. I hastened on to the house and had alighted at the gate when Constant came out of the stables, ox whip in hand, breathless and almost speechless. The savage fury of his face frightened me. He sent a negro boy on one of his fastest horses to bring Dr. De Roux. When he had rested somewhat and restored himself with brandy, he told me his jockey, Leon, went away

whose names were oftenest on his lips. The excess of his punishment was discussed throughout the parish in terms condemnatory of Quilbert, to prosecute whom should the jockey die determination was expressed. The medication of Dr. De Roux seemed impotent, a profound and ominous gloom settled upon the slaves on all the plantations, the patrol of constables was nightly reinforced by volunteers, Quilbert's bottle and card familiarly obscured themselves, and he felt deeply disturbed by the entire situation. He drank brandy at home and ran at Dede's calaret at Mansara. In this latter he was blasphemously inveighing against the doctor's unskillfulness when Dede remarked:

"It is you who lack sense. Why don't you stop throwing away money on Dr. Roux and drop a gold eagle in the lap of old Mother Deshauteles, Laure Luneau's grandmother?"

"What can she do, you pitted idiot?" Quilbert snapped.

"She can cure your jockey and save you from being maimed and feathered, you Gascon hog," retorted Dede. "She is a doctress served by the saints themselves. Alexe Boudreau's fine trotter could not touch his right hind foot to the ground for four days. Alexe called on Mother Deshauteles. She gave him a dry piece of mangel to put in the horse's hoof. He did so and dealt him a sharp blow. Down went the hoof, and the horse was not limped since. During 48 hours Patin's boy could not swallow. He was carried to Mother Deshauteles who laid her hand on his throat just for the second. As soon as he got home he ate a quart of gumbo and can now swallow an egg without breaking it. Dede and Duflo called to his wife and light for a candle. She asked him, 'Where is the candle?' For three days he kept repeating, 'Where is the candle? Where is the candle?' She did not get of sleep and continued saying, 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' Dr. Leneau was called to her, but he could do nothing. Her strength gave out, and they had to put her to bed. Still she went on asking, 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' A priest was sent for, and he put candles and incense and sprang water and talked Latin, but she went on asking, 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' Finally Dede and Duflo laid Mother Deshauteles. She sat in the bed and heard the feeble voice of Leon. 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' and touching her lips with a candle she had carried there, said to her, 'There, the candle!' Mme. Leneau opened her eyes and, looking at the candle and then at Mother Deshauteles, closed them again and went to sleep. From that day to this she has never asked, 'Where is the candle?'

"Dede was so fond of Leon, Dede, or are you so crazy enough yourself to believe in such crazy stuff?"

"Crazy stuff!" exclaimed Dede. "I tell you, Quilbert, those are facts, and there are hundreds more known. She is the most powerful doctress since the old nun Bazza died, who cured the bishop of Natchez of a snake bite. But it isn't every one she will serve, for she is a pious woman. She may refuse you, who are such a fool as not to believe what you cannot understand, who do not believe in God or the saints or the devil. When your jockey dies and the planters begin to hold meetings, perhaps you will no longer believe in rum, cards, ox whip and yourself, which thus far have made up your creed."

Quilbert's philosophical skepticism was demolished by this last stroke of Dede's, and, visibly frightened, he said:

"And do you think this old witch will not sell her charm for my gold?"

"Though she takes it, gold cannot buy her," Dede replied. "You risk failure if you depend upon yourself and gold alone, for the priests have put on you the brand of heretic and on your gold the mintage mark of hell."

"Except what I give them," snarled Quilbert.

"That's plain," laughed Dede. "They purify by exorcism whatever goes to their holy uses. But there is just one chance for you, Constant, and it should be a good one."

"And what is that?" Quilbert anxiously inquired.

"Laure Luneau," Dede answered. "You made a great fight for her at the election of the bell's god-mother, and she is your friend for that. Moreover, she hates that overbearing American Oakfell and the simpering doll Estelle Latiolais, and she is a true Gasconne. Her grandmother will do for her what she might deny to the rest of the world. Seek Laure and at once."

"You are right, Dede, and your Gascon wit has not been entirely burned out by your rum, which is so fiery that I believe it is distilled where the priests say my gold is coined. Give me another glass of it, and I will see my little partisan this very day. Gascon shrewdness is a match at any time for hectoring Americanism, and we'll head off this infernal abolitionist Oakfell yet."

"What is that you say? Abolitionist!" exclaimed Dede, placing before his patron the brimming glass of liquor. "Not so loud, idiot!" Quilbert said, and, with the look of cruel ferocity which came into his visage whenever his malevolence was at work, he added in a low, grumbling tone: "Did not his speech at Baton Rouge prove him an abolitionist? I believe he has been tampering with that rascal Leon. I believe he is at the bottom of all this scare about an uprising among the negroes if Leon should give the pretext by dying. I believe he has been paid double the price of his own slaves for his services in setting all the others free. But say nothing about this now. Dede, but watch and listen."

Emptying the glass at one draft though the hot heat forced the brine to his hardened eyes, he mounted his horse and rode off.

LEON'S life hung for weeks on the merest thread. Never consumed his body and mind, creating hallucinations peopled by Odette, Oakfell and Estelle, whose names were oftenest on his lips. "Calm yourself, my little one," the grandfather said soothingly, "and remember that Constant is a white man and Leon only his negro slave."

"Grandfather," the girl replied spiritedly, "it is more probable that Leon is not Quilbert's negro slave than that Quilbert is deserving to be called a white man."

"What do you mean, Estelle?"

"I cannot tell you now, but time will explain this saying of mine in both its parts. Only promise me this—that never shall one of our slaves be put to the lash or tortured."

"I promise that sincerely."

"Then, dear grandfather, let us talk no more of this unhappy subject. You need your supper and pipe."

"Yes, dear, and tell old Julie to drip the coffee extra strong to quiet my nerves."

Passing into the hall, Estelle found Odette sobbing bitterly and, taking her hand, said in a low tone:

"You heard what my grandfather told me?"

"Yes, mamselle. Forgive me for listening."

"Remember, then, Odette, what Leon suffered for your sake and be you as brave and silent for his. The God of mercy will right all this wrong. Trust in God and Mr. Oakfell."

"Yes, and you, dear mistress."

"Go now, bathe your eyes in cool water and wait on us at table with a face showing no trace of weeping."

Estelle proceeded to her own room and, closing the door, knelt at the pretty little prie-dieu near her bed. Bowing her beautiful head and closing her eyes, she addressed her petition for the succor of the oppressed to heaven, but in her involuntary vision she saw only the face of Oakfell. From the happiness of this dual devotion she was summoned to preside at the meal.

The medication of Dr. De Roux seemed impotent, a profound and ominous gloom settled upon the slaves on all the plantations, the patrol of constables was nightly reinforced by volunteers, Quilbert's bottle and card familiarly obscured themselves, and he felt deeply disturbed by the entire situation. He drank brandy at home and ran at Dede's calaret at Mansara. In this latter he was blasphemously inveighing against the doctor's unskillfulness when Dede remarked:

"It is you who lack sense. Why don't you stop throwing away money on Dr. Roux and drop a gold eagle in the lap of old Mother Deshauteles, Laure Luneau's grandmother?"

"What can she do, you pitted idiot?" Quilbert snapped.

"She can cure your jockey and save you from being maimed and feathered, you Gascon hog," retorted Dede. "She is a doctress served by the saints themselves. Alexe Boudreau's fine trotter could not touch his right hind foot to the ground for four days. Alexe called on Mother Deshauteles. She gave him a dry piece of mangel to put in the horse's hoof. He did so and dealt him a sharp blow. Down went the hoof, and the horse was not limped since. During 48 hours Patin's boy could not swallow. He was carried to Mother Deshauteles who laid her hand on his throat just for the second. As soon as he got home he ate a quart of gumbo and can now swallow an egg without breaking it. Dede and Duflo called to his wife and light for a candle. She asked him, 'Where is the candle?' For three days he kept repeating, 'Where is the candle? Where is the candle?' She did not get of sleep and continued saying, 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' Dr. Leneau was called to her, but he could do nothing. Her strength gave out, and they had to put her to bed. Still she went on asking, 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' A priest was sent for, and he put candles and incense and sprang water and talked Latin, but she went on asking, 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' Finally Dede and Duflo laid Mother Deshauteles. She sat in the bed and heard the feeble voice of Leon. 'Where is the candle, where is the candle?' and touching her lips with a candle she had carried there, said to her, 'There, the candle!' Mme. Leneau opened her eyes and, looking at the candle and then at Mother Deshauteles, closed them again and went to sleep. From that day to this she has never asked, 'Where is the candle?'

"Dede was so fond of Leon, Dede, or are you so crazy enough yourself to believe in such crazy stuff?"

"Crazy stuff!" exclaimed Dede. "I tell you, Quilbert, those are facts, and there are hundreds more known. She is the most powerful doctress since the old nun Bazza died, who cured the bishop of Natchez of a snake bite. But it isn't every one she will serve, for she is a pious woman. She may refuse you, who are such a fool as not to believe what you cannot understand, who do not believe in God or the saints or the devil. When your jockey dies and the planters begin to hold meetings, perhaps you will no longer believe in rum, cards, ox whip and yourself, which thus far have made up your creed."

Quilbert's philosophical skepticism was demolished by this last stroke of Dede's, and, visibly frightened, he said:

"And do you think this old witch will not sell her charm for my gold?"

"Though she takes it, gold cannot buy her," Dede replied. "You risk failure if you depend upon yourself and gold alone, for the priests have put on you the brand of heretic and on your gold the mintage mark of hell."

"Except what I give them," snarled Quilbert.

"That's plain," laughed Dede. "They purify by exorcism whatever goes to their holy uses. But there is just one chance for you, Constant, and it should be a good one."

"And what is that?" Quilbert anxiously inquired.

"Laure Luneau," Dede answered. "You made a great fight for her at the election of the bell's god-mother, and she is your friend for that. Moreover, she hates that overbearing American Oakfell and the simpering doll Estelle Latiolais, and she is a true Gasconne. Her grandmother will do for her what she might deny to the rest of the world. Seek Laure and at once."

"You are right, Dede, and your Gascon wit has not been entirely burned out by your rum, which is so fiery that I believe it is distilled where the priests say my gold is coined. Give me another glass of it, and I will see my little partisan this very day. Gascon shrewdness is a match at any time for hectoring Americanism, and we'll head off this infernal abolitionist Oakfell yet."

"What is that you say? Abolitionist!" exclaimed Dede, placing before his patron the brimming glass of liquor. "Not so loud, idiot!" Quilbert said, and, with the look of cruel ferocity which came into his visage whenever his malevolence was at work, he added in a low, grumbling tone: "Did not his speech at Baton Rouge prove him an abolitionist? I believe he has been tampering with that rascal Leon. I believe he is at the bottom of all this scare about an uprising among the negroes if Leon should give the pretext by dying. I believe he has been paid double the price of his own slaves for his services in setting all the others free. But say nothing about this now. Dede, but watch and listen."

Emptying the glass at one draft though the hot heat forced the brine to his hardened eyes, he mounted his horse and rode off.

CHAPTER VII.
THE DOCTRESS.

LEON'S life hung for weeks on the merest thread. Never consumed his body and mind, creating hallucinations peopled by Odette, Oakfell and Estelle, whose names were oftenest on his lips. The excess of his punishment was discussed throughout the parish in terms condemnatory of Quilbert, to prosecute whom should the jockey die determination was expressed. The medication of Dr. De Roux seemed impotent, a profound and ominous gloom settled upon the slaves on all the plantations, the patrol of constables was nightly reinforced by volunteers, Quilbert's bottle and card familiarly obscured themselves, and he felt deeply disturbed by the entire situation. He drank brandy at home and ran at Dede's calaret at Mansara. In this latter he was blasphemously inveighing against the doctor's unskillfulness when Dede remarked:

"Calm yourself, my little one," the grandfather said soothingly, "and remember that Constant is a white man and Leon only his negro slave."

"Grandfather," the girl replied spiritedly, "it is more probable that Leon is not Quilbert's negro slave than that Quilbert is deserving to be called a white man."

"What do you mean, Estelle?"

"I cannot tell you now, but time will explain this saying of mine in both its parts. Only promise me this—that never shall one of our slaves be put to the lash or tortured."

"I promise that sincerely."

"Then, dear grandfather, let us talk no more of this unhappy subject. You need your supper and pipe."

"Yes, dear, and tell old Julie to drip the coffee extra strong to quiet my nerves."

Passing into the hall, Estelle found Odette sobbing bitterly and, taking her hand, said in a low tone:

"You heard what my grandfather told me?"

"Yes, mamselle. Forgive me for listening."

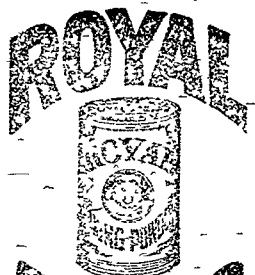

"Remember, then, Odette, what Leon suffered for your sake and be you as brave and silent for his. The God of mercy will right all this wrong. Trust in God and Mr. Oakfell."

"Yes, and you, dear mistress."

"Go now, bathe your eyes in cool water and wait on us at table with a face showing no trace of weeping."

A party of Oxford ladies celebrated Halloween by assuming ghostly disguises and calling on their friends. As they belonged to the "upper ten" the piousness was obviously an instance of high spirits.

The Ann Arbor high school colors have been changed from blue and maroon to white and purple and some of the students who were opposed to the change are having some purple moments in consequence.

An Ann Arbor Literary club had a "relax day" last week and exhibited all sorts of curiosities and antiquities but among the list it is not recorded that anybody brought one of those nickel-in-the-slot cars used to convey passengers from the electric line to the depot.

South Lyon people are threatening to boycott the Pere Marquette R. R. in retaliation for the action of that road in giving the town scarcely any passenger facilities. The P. M. is perfectly willing to "bother" in South Lyon's "rain barrel" as far as freight is concerned.

These modern days are getting too materialistic even for the Halloween "spirits." Wayne is about the only town in this vicinity that reports any jangling mischief. In most places the "shades" were obliged to keep shady on account of the way the vigilance of the "minions of the law" materialized.

One of Ypsilanti's Smiths makes a protest against the indefiniteness of his patronymic by spelling it with a final "e." Two Flat women have taken out deer licenses and are going north hunting. The deer creatures are not to be hunted.

As there is probably long been accustomed to the use of powder they won't be nervous and being used to man hunting will be better qualified to distinguish between a well logged deer and the other kind so they may be trusted not to kill more than half as many men as the male hunters usually do in the hunting season.

An Ann Arbor girl who a few weeks ago settled a bit she had brought against a man for breach of promise, by marrying him in the court house, again lost the object of her bright and restored affections last week. He ran away from her, but she had him captured and kicked up. He evidently doesn't learn for he is more intensely than he did before the first breach of promise was made by the marriage ceremony. The determinedly affectionate lady is said to be exceedingly handsome, too.

The name of Brighton's school superintendent is Burkhead, and some of his pupils have had a little playful way in referring to him as "Blockhead." Consequently just before election when a number of boys appeared wearing wooden buttons with "For Congress on them the "Prof" though it was a sarcastic "run" on himself. He ordered the buttons off, was refused and a general row ensued which was finally settled when it was explained that "Wood for Congress" was the significance of the objectionable badges, and that the boys didn't ironically want the teacher to go to Washington as a "blockhead."

Can't Defy Coal Trust.
A despondent community is deeply grateful to the New York Herald for the brilliant suggestion that "dredged peach stones give satisfaction as fuel." Thus we throw down the gauntlet of defiance of the coal trust unless it has cunningly anticipated us by buying up the peach crop. The winter is loaded with its terrors and stubbornness and avarice are rebuked. Don't buy coal, buy peaches.

BOWSER THE SLEUTH

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

AFTER dinner the other evening Mr. Bowser strolled out into the back yard to have a look at his onion bed. He had started the bed with fifty onions, but forty-nine of them positively refused to have anything to do with it and died as soon as they could. The fortieth hung on in a half hearted way, willing to oblige, but finding it hard work. After sadly regarding the lone specimen for a while Mr. Bowser looked around for the spade. It was not to be seen. The cook hadn't left it or the cat hadn't eaten it, but Mrs. Bowser held the key to the mystery. She had caught sight of a strange man in the back yard that afternoon. She had taken him to be a workman from the house next door, but he must be held accountable for the loss of that spade.

"By thunder, but you are a nice woman!" shouted Mr. Bowser as the awful truth became plain. "You sit right here and let a thief enter our yard and prowled around for an hour or two and go away loaded with plunder! Did he promise to divvy with you on what he stole?"

"I simply got sight of him as he was climbing over the alley fence," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"And you didn't yell at him?"

"No."

"Nor notify the police?"

"No."

"Well, that's your way of doing things. If he had stolen the back door off the house, you wouldn't have said a word. A bold faced thief enters my back yard in broad daylight and steals my spade. My wife sees him and never says a word. She even encourages him to return and steal my pickaxe and crowbar. By the chin of my grandmother!"

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Bowser as his face lighted up with a smile.

"Hush! Keep quiet! Ha, ha!"

"But what is it?"

"In encouraging that bloody minded thief to return here tonight and steal the fence you have played into my hands. By John, but I won't find another word of fault with you! Woman, you have given me a golden opportunity!"

It was a quarter of an hour before Mr. Bowser would explain. His plan was to disguise himself and play Old Sleuth and make a capture and strike terror to the hearts of other thieves. He would leave the crowbar, the pickaxe, the rake and the lawn mower in plain sight, and when the thief came to bear off the plunder—biff!

"But why not hire some one to watch?" suggested Mrs. Bowser.

"Because it is for me to fasten my claws on the thief and make his heels break his neck. I wouldn't forego the chance for $10,000."

"You'll surely get yourself into trouble."

"And I'll get some one else into trouble too. Before midnight tonight the mystery of the missing spade will have been solved and justice will have overtaken the guilty party."

Spurred on by his enthusiasm Mr. Bowser hunted up an old pluz hat, a worn-out Prince Albert coat and a pair of bicycle shoes. From an old catskin the man to make stealing a safe business. I have been robbed in broad daylight, and justice demands a victim. I go to secure him."

At 10 o'clock the moon went down, the stars paled and the night wind died away. It was an ideal night for a man who wanted to steal a pickaxe—also for an old sleuth. Looking from a back window, Mrs. Bowser observed Nemesis stepping softly over the grass and crouching alongside the fence. Seven thieves, each one intent on gobbling a crowbar, might have been watching and listening, and yet they would neither have seen nor heard. When he had made the round of the yard and found all safe, he softly opened the gate and passed out into the alley.

Not a leaf stirred.

Not a cat yowled.

Not a thief sprang up and dashed away.

Twice had Mr. Bowser passed up and down the alley the length of his block, peering under wagons and behind boxes, his nerves stretched at their fullest tension, when an event suddenly evented. An old horse that had been lying down in the shadow of the fence and seemed a part of a pile of ashes suddenly sighed and groaned and rose up to look for oats. Mr. Bowser was looking for danger, and he was equal to the emergency. In two jumps and a spring he was inside his own yard and had the gate shut and was prepared to sell his life at the highest cash price. For three minutes there was dark, deep silence, with regular seven cent railro reduced to four for one day only. Then the discouraged old horse fell against the fence with another groan and gave away his identity.

The night grew deeper.

Mr. Bowser had gone out and kicked and thumped that old horse out of the alley and made him wish he was a toad and had returned to his point of vantage when the sound of a footfall reached his ear. It came from the north. It was not the bold and honest tread of an elephant, but the sly and fugitive footfall of a man, of a sneak. Pitpat! Pitpat! It came nearer and nearer, and it grew softer and softer. Mr. Bowser stood at the open alley gate and shut his teeth hard. The moment for which he had longed was at hand. Presently he could make out a darker shadow among the shadows. At ten feet away that shadow paused. It was wondering if it could steal the back end of Mr. Bowser's house and sell the bricks for two beers and a night's lodging. After a moment it advanced again. The thought of two beers had forced it onward. Pitpat! Pitpat! Pit!

"Villain, I have thee!"

He had walked straight into Mr. Bowser's arms. He was clutched and dragged into the yard and flung down and rolled over.

"Ah, you spade thief, but I knew you would return! After the crowbar, are you? Won't the pickaxe do you?"

"You old ass, what are you doing?" shouted the unknown.

"Don't call me names or I'll crack your skull!"

"Let go of me! Let me up! Who do you take me for?"

"THE MYSTERY OF THE MISSING SPADE IS SOLVED AT LAST."

muft left by a cook he made himself a chin whisker, and when Old Sleuth was ready for business even the cat didn't know him.

"You don't mean to tell me you are going to parade up and down the alleys in that rig?" gasped Mrs. Bowser as he stood before her in his disguise.

"S-s-s-h! Not so loud!" he whispered.

"I am now about to take up the trail!"

"But the man who took the spade may not return."

"S'death! A thief always returns to see if there is anything more he can steal. I shall have him within a couple of hours, and after I have mopped the earth with him for half an hour I will land him in the police station."

"I'll buy you two new spades out of my own money if you'll let the matter drop."

"Never, woman—never! I am not

"I'll choke the life out of you! Fit!"

Five minutes later Mrs. Bowser, who had kept vigil at the window, was out in the yard. Mr. Bowser lay on his back on the grass and seemed to be asleep, and a man stood near looking down at him.

"It's me, Mrs. Bowser—Stevens, your neighbor," said the man. "I was coming through the alley when some one pitched into me, and I guess it is Bowser. I had to put him to sleep to make him let go. He's coming to. Shall I help you?"

"No, thanks," she replied, and then, giving a hand to Mr. Bowser as he sat up, she added:

"Come on, Sleuth. The mystery of the missing spade is solved at last."

"What—how?" he asked.

"Why, you got it on the jaw!"
