STORM'S WORK SATURDAY NIGHT

HEAVY DAMAGE TO PROPERTY IN THIS VILLAGE.

Ambler Dam Demolished, Bridges Swept Away

The severe storm of lightning, thunder, rain and hail which swept over the country Saturday got in its work in Northville and vicinity with telling effect. Our usually well behaved little tributary river which comes in from the west became swollen to formidable proportions by the deluge of rain—which by many is believed to have assumed the form of a cloudburst—and finally broke its bounds by tearing its way through the dam at the Ambler pond in the small hours of Sunday morning. A scene of devastation marked the path of the flood which swept off nearly everything within its reach as long as its first fury lasted.

The now then bridge on South Center street was wrecked to an extent that will take some hundreds of dollars to make good, and nearly all the smaller bridges along the course of the stream were carried entirely away. Fortunately, neither of the other dams went out, as the storm seems to have spent its worst violence southwest of here, thus most greatly affecting the stream coming from that direction.

Several of the big willows which shaded Northville's famous "Lovers' Lane" were torn out and carried down stream and that romantic promenade and its surroundings look at present like anything but a pleasant place for a stroll, with a lake of mud where the pretty pond once glistened and the pathway with an eighty-foot chasm cutting it in two.

In other parts of the village the tempest left its traces on every hand. Temporary rivers poured through the streets, gouging deep holes in the roadways and washing such quantities of dirt upon lawns that it had to be removed in some cases by the use of shovels and teams. In other places sidewalks were floated off, cellars flooded and walls undermined. Sunday night red lanterns were flashing their signals in all directions indicating the dangerous places for pedestrians and teams.

The D. P. & N. railway suffered severely from the storm, and its car service had to be maintained by means of transfers until permanent repairs could be made. Bad wash-outs also occurred on the Pere Marquette, in one instance resulting in the wrecking of a coal train near Plymouth.

Altogether, the storm was one of the worst in its effects that has visited this vicinity for many years, and the people here are hoping that Northville has now had its share of disaster from the elements for this season at any rate.

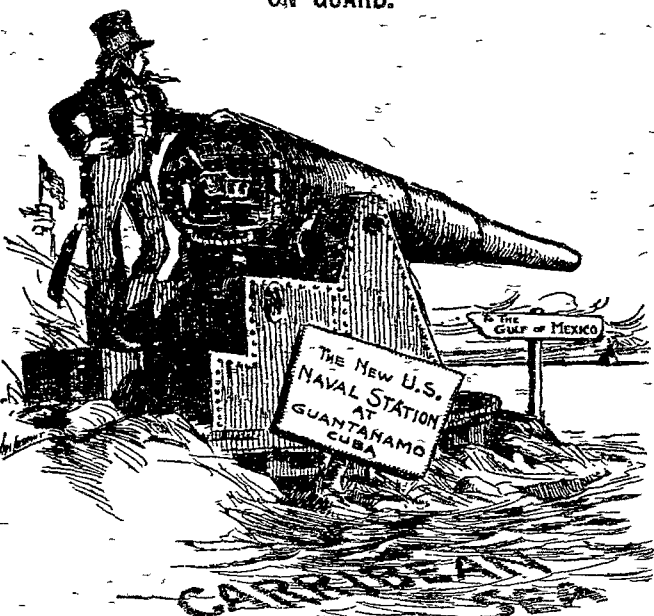

A Second "Bridge Edition."

In consequence of the hold up occasioned by the controversy between Detroit's council and the railroads on the bridge question, the Detroit Tribune issued its second "bridge edition" last Friday, April 9th, and it was unmistakably a "hummer" and a credit to Detroit. The Tribune certainly deserves an immense amount of praise for the enterprise and public spirit it has shown in the matter, and its efforts have met with commendatory response from the state press almost as a unit. It would be a thousand pities should Detroit be so short-sighted as to allow anything to interfere with an enterprise that has been so indisputably proven to be not only desirable but absolutely indispensable to the future of the city as a commercial center. Bravo, Tribune! Don't give up the ship—nor the bridge.

ON GUARD.

Kilian—Lowden.

Last week Tuesday Miss Grace Lowden arrived at Ann Arbor on her return from her winter's sojourn in California and on Saturday afternoon April 11, at 2:30 a quiet wedding took place at the home of Henry Lowden, brother of the bride, and Miss Lowden became the wife of Mr. Arthur Kilian. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Young of the First Baptist church, Ann Arbor. Mr. and Mrs. Kilian will be at home in their residence at the corner of Main and Rogers streets about May first.

Once When He Couldn't Talk.

'Twas a predicament, Representative Neal was in, when, as president of the Eastern Michigan Press club, he was leading the party through the administration building at St. Louis last week, and brought them before the genial director of works, Isaac S. Taylor, who has general charge of the scenic effects and disposition of everything on the grounds. Neal is chairman of the house ways and means committee and in that capacity must pass upon the appropriation for Michigan's exposition exhibit and building. Taylor, unaware of the fact, told of the magnificent buildings other states were to have and appealed to Neal to use his influence for a generous sum for Michigan, asking him if he did not think the occasion one for the exercise of liberality. "In my position, you know," said Neal, "it would not do to express an opinion." When Taylor was apprised of Neal's official relation to the appropriation, he laughed, and quietly remarked that he believed the fair people had no reason to fear strong opposition. —Detroit Tribune

More Common Sense.

A little less politics, and more common sense at Lansing would be a blessing to the state. —Wyandotte Republican. True, neighbor, but you will have to send Democrats instead of the men you have helped send to the Legislature, before you will get more common sense in Lansing. —Adrian Press.

It may be some satisfaction for the Press to learn that the Wyandotte district is represented in the Legislature by a Democrat. And while the Record is on the subject it would like to inquire why more of those "common sense" people like the Republican and Press editors do not get elected to the Legislature and help improve it.

Come In, Mr. Huff.

The Northville Record desires to call the attention of the council "to the valuable services rendered to the village by Mr. Huff as night watch during the past two years." Its good opinion of the officer is backed by the statement that "during that time there has not been a single case of thieving nor has there been a fire." In these days of official untrustworthiness it is gratifying to hear of this Northville night watch who in two years has neither stolen nor committed arson. Come in some day Mr. Huff and allow The Tribune to grasp your honest hand. Mighty few of us left. —Detroit Tribune.

EASTERN MICH. PRESS CLUB

BOYS HAD GREAT TIME LAST WEEK.

Royally Entertained at St. Louis Exposition.

Something like 100 editors including their wives took a run over to St. Louis last week Thursday and spent two days in the exposition city. The Wabash company furnished the quail pushers two special cars and attached them to the company's fast train leaving Detroit at 7:40 a. m. The run was made in about twelve hours and for miles and miles a speed of over a mile a minute was made with ease. R. S. Greenwood, the Wabash's Michigan representative, and City Passenger Agent Wolfslager of Detroit accompanied the party and made everything decidedly comfortable and entertaining for the party. The Wabash route is unquestionably the best equipped and operates over the best track in the west, and it will prove a great favorite for those who visit the exposition in 1904.

The exposition grounds are rapidly assuming a shape that bespeaks the greatest fair the world has ever known or even conceived of. Many of the buildings are already nearly completed and dozens of others are in the course of construction so that already one can form some idea of the vastness of the great enterprise that will dazzle the eyes of the millions of sightseers in 1904.

School Notes.

[By the Superintendent.]

Grade three is preparing to study seed germination.

Miss Florence Curtiss entered the high school this week.

Ida Curtiss began work in the second grade this week.

The kindergarten and grades one and two issued neat Easter cards. Mrs. A. K. Carpenter has been teaching in room 8 during the enforced absence of Miss Covert.

Last Monday afternoon Mr. R. H. Porter, Northville's up to date telephone man, gave the physics class and members of the high school an illustrated lecture on the practical workings of the telephone. The school is under renewed obligations to Mr. Porter for his kindness in leaving his business for such a large portion of the afternoon and for bringing apparatus with which to explain certain parts.

This week members of the school have been saying "good-bye" to Miss Ruth and Willie Finman who expect to move with the family to Bozeman, Montana. Last year Ruth was one of the ten members of the eighth grade to pass successfully the county examination for rural schools. This year she has been doing excellent work in the ninth grade. Her pleasant ways and kindly manner have endeared her to both teachers and companions. Willie has become no less a favorite in his department.

The young people will not lack for friends in their new home, and the best wishes of this school go with them.

While studying ventilation last week the physiology class made a trip to the basement where Mr. Webster very kindly explained to them the system in use in this school.

Hon. H. R. Pattengill, Ex-state Superintendent of Public Instruction, has been secured to deliver the commencement address on the evening of June 17th. This lecture will undoubtedly be one of the best if not the best ever delivered in Northville and will surely prove a treat to those who hear it. Mr. Pattengill is a very popular man on the platform and has continual calls from all states in the Union to deliver lectures. Immediately after delivering our commencement address he goes to Portland, Oregon to work for three days in their state institute at a salary that some men would work a year to earn.

Suburban News.

Trenton has an organization called "The Royal Order of Carps." The name might indicate either fishermen or fault-finders, but not bullheads or suckers.

A Maple Rapids lady invited a lot of her friends to an "All Fools" party and strange to say not one of them felt insulted at receiving the invitation.

Twenty young people were confirmed in the German Evangelical church at Farmington last week Sunday. It is to be hoped that it was "confirmation strong as Holy writ."

An Ypsilanti fire department horse got in such a hurry to go to a fire the other night that he got away while being hitched up and ran so far trying to find the fire that he was not found until next day. Regular fire escape, that horse.

Elther Wayne has but one parsonage or else the News Letter is delicately afraid of hurting the feelings of the other preachers who were not so lucky, judging from that paper's statement last week that "there was a surprise at the parsonage" and that "the pastor was presented with a purse of $19."

A proposition was successfully submitted to Plymouth voters on election day that the town refund $150 of the taxes paid by the D. P. & N. railway because the assessment by the state board was considered excessive. Those Plymouth voters evidently don't intend to get off their trolley if they can help it. They are on the right track, sure.

One reason why Orion is such a desirable place for a summer resort is because it's so cool there, even to the names of the inhabitants. A family named Winter and one named Frost are among the residents, and there is also a young lady bearing the chilly cognomen of "Icy" as a christian name. Seems 's if such an appellation would refrigerate 'er.

Farmington has a town piano. The ladies there had paid $100 on an instrument for the town hall and they donated that sum and all the hard work they had put in getting it if the town board would pay the rest. The ladies had even pedaled to raise the money and they did it of their own accord, too, but though harmonious work it was pretty difficult.

The way of the transgressors of truthfulness is hard over at Fenton. The Independent last week published a table compiled from the utterances of a citizen there which showed the man to have lived 346 years if he had filled all the different positions he claimed to have occupied for various periods of time. Must be a dangerous place to live if all statements are taken down for publication that way.

Ordinarily the Delray Times is a very reliable source of information but its story last week of the hen and the hailstones requires a little explanation in one section. A Delray hen, according to the Times, started to run for shelter when the storm came, but was knocked down by a bluff on the "fore-head" from a big hailstone. Then while she was lying down to rest from the shock another hunk of ice "struck in the same place" and killed her "dead as Windsor." Now what we wanted to know was how anybody except the hen happened, during such a storm, to know just where those two hailstones hit, and which of 'em was the fatal one.

During Attacks Of Heart Failure.

Would Appear To Be Dead.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Relieved and Cured.

"I have no hesitation in saying that Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is all that one can wish it to be. I was troubled with heart disease for fifteen years. I have tried many different remedies but until I tried Dr. Miles' Heart Cure I could find no relief. I was subject to headaches and had tried your Pain Pills and they were so effective I thought your Heart Cure might help me. I would have attacks at times so severe that I would be stone blind for the time being. During these spells I would be to all appearances dead. I took the medicine strictly as directed and I can truly say that I am completely cured. I advise all that are troubled with heart disease to take Dr. Miles' Heart Cure at once. I write this and give my name to my fellow sufferers."—S. E. Furdy, Atkinson, Nebraska.

"I first felt the effects of a weak heart in the fall of 1896. I saw an advertisement in the Sioux City paper in which a man stated his symptoms which seemed to me to indicate a trouble similar to mine. I had a soreness in the chest at times, and in my shoulder, an oppressive choking sensation in my throat and suffered from weak and hungry spells. I was truly frightened at my condition and procured five bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. Since taking my first bottle I have never been bothered by any of the old disagreeable symptoms and now am well and consider my cure permanent."—Lew S. Anderson, Kuhn, S. D.

Queer Abyssinian Current

A peculiar "coin" is employed for small change in Abyssinia. This is no other than bars of hard crystallized salt, about 10 inches long and two and a half inches square, tightly tapering toward the end. People are very particular about the standard of fineness of the currency. If it does not ring like metal when struck with the finger nail, or if it is cracked or chipped, they will not take it. It is a token of affection when friends meet to give each other a lick of their respective "coins," and in this way the value of the bar is decreased. Smaller change than a bar of salt is sometimes needed, and then the natives have recourse to cartridges. Three cartridges pass for one bar of salt.

ROBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident is narrated by John Oliver, of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians have given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters, to my great joy the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents guaranteed at Geo. C. Houston's drug store.

A LESSON IN HEALTH.

Healthy kidneys filter the impurities from the blood, and unless they do this good health is impossible. Foley's Kidney Cure makes sound kidneys and will positively cure all forms of kidney and bladder disease. It strengthens the whole system. Sold by Murdock Bros.

Marriage a Good Thing.

It is said that statistics prove that in every thousand bachelors there are thirty-eight criminals, while in every thousand married men the criminals number only eighteen. If this is so, it surely proves that the present-day members of the sex labeled coy and hard to please have at least an immense capability for keeping men out of mischief, sufficient to outbalance perhaps even the unkind reputation handed down the ages by Mother Eve.—London Tatler.

Half-Sick

"I first used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in the fall of 1848. Since then I have taken it every spring as a blood-purifying and nerve-strengthening medicine."

S. T. Jones, Wichita, Kans.

If you feel run down, are easily tired, if your nerves are weak and your blood is thin, then begin to take the good old standard family medicine, Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It's a regular nerve lifter, a perfect blood builder.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and we will be satisfied.

THE PEOPLE TO ELECT

UNITED STATES SENATORS BY A DIRECT VOTE.

WILL BE VOTED AND CANVASSED SAME AS GOVERNOR.

DOINGS IN BOTH BRANCHES OF MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

Lansing, Mich., April 16.—The house elections committee has agreed to report out Representative Colby's bill, providing for the nomination of candidates for United States senators by direct vote. Mr. Colby, chairman of the committee, says he will send copies of the bill to Senators Alger and Burrows and ask them to express an opinion on it.

The bill provides for the election of candidates at each November election preceding a session of the legislature at which senators are to be elected. The nominating ballot will be attached to the regular election ballot, and for vote for the selection of a candidate for senator will be counted unless the voter marks his ballot for at least three-fourths of the names on the Republican ticket. The names of candidates for United States senator are to be printed below the names on the county ticket. Each candidate, to get his name on the ticket, must file a petition with the secretary of state at least forty days before election. Returns are to be canvassed precisely as in the election of governor. The concluding sentence of the bill says:

"The secretary of state shall transmit to each house of the next legislature, within five days of the opening thereof, a correct statement of all lawful votes cast within the state for United States senator of each political party, as herein provided, as shown by the canvass made thereof by the state board of canvassers which shall be spread at length upon the journal of each house."

"This bill does not provide the machinery for the election of United States senators by popular vote," says Colby. "That would be beyond our power. But that legislature which will go behind the returns from the people in order to set up a candidate for the United States senate will be a legislature such as has never been elected yet."

Not Ready to Adjourn.

The house of representatives is not ready to adjourn. When the Combs concurrent resolution, fixing the final date of the session of 1903 for May 14, Representative Morrice moved that the resolution be referred to the elections committee. Representative Anderson moved an amendment that it be sent to the labor committee, of which he is a member, and of which Representative Duncan of Detroit is chairman. Combs voted alone in favor of the resolution. Representative Colby and the other primary election men will do all they can to prevent the fixing of the date of adjournment until the senate at least shows signs of doing business on primary election legislation. The only signs so far manifested from the upper house indicate that nothing is to be done this week at least, the Colby Powell Stone bill having been sent by the senate back to the house for reprinting.

In the senate, Senators Burns and Baird again attempted to rush through the Burns Westover bill. Senator Locherby pointed out two serious defects in the bill, one of which gave the state game warden authority upon the payment of $10, to let individuals owning lands, or members of clubs who maintain game preserves in the state, to ship certain parts of their game to their friends outside of the state. It provided for the payment of the $10, but made no provision for the game warden to turn the money over to the state. It was voted to refer the bill to the committee on judiciary.

The senate committee on public health have reported out favorably a bill prohibiting druggists from using physicians' prescriptions unless authorized by the doctor writing the prescription.

The Combs bill, to abolish the office of game warden, will be reported out of the house committee without recommendation.

It begins to look as if a stiff fight will be put up for the passage of the bill pending in the senate for the Sunday closing of theaters. A committee, representing a large association of actors, with headquarters in New York and Chicago, wish to be heard. They say the purpose of their organization is to relieve the overworked members of the profession by reducing the number of days on which they claim to work from seven to six. They claim the only way they can do this is to compel Sunday closing. They are making a fight in several states this year and hope to include Michigan.

PERE-MARQUETTE CHANGES.

Agnew, Doyle and Ashley Have Resigned For Various Reasons.

Detroit, Mich., April 16.—Several important changes in the Pere Marquette were made known in Grand Rapids Wednesday. John Doyle, superintendent of tracks; Supt. J. K. V. Agnew of the Grand Rapids division, and Trainmaster A. E. Ashley have all resigned. Superintendent Doyle will become a partner of John C. Garland, a railroad and street paving contractor of Toledo. Superintendent Agnew gives ill-health as his reason for leaving the company while Trainmaster Ashley intends to go to Oregon.

The announcement is also made in the Detroit offices of the road that George W. Heath, chief clerk under General Superintendent Smith, will soon leave for Saginaw to become chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent P. N. Place. Mr. Heath was in the office at Saginaw for a number of years and has been with the Pere Marquette since 1891.

GRATIOT COUNTY SCANDAL.

Serious Outlook For County House Keeper Davis.

Ithaca, Mich., April 16.—At the investigation of the charges against Keeper Davis of the county house by the superintendents of the poor, at the court house, Lucy Hinkle of Lansing, a former inmate, testified that during his former administration Davis had criminal relations with her, under the promise to get her a home out of the county house. Other witnesses testified to abuse of inmates by Davis.

There is talk of a grand jury should the superintendents exonerate Davis.

Approved by the Governor.

Lansing, Mich., April 16.—The following bills have been approved by the governor:

H. B. 54 (Robinson). To regulate the method of procedure and the practice of the law in the circuit court for the county of Wayne, providing for a new jury panel each month.

Probably Still Smoking.

Michigan City, Ind., April 16.—At 12.07 this morning Matthew Alexander, a negro, was hanged in the Indiana penitentiary for the murder of George Burke at Terre Haute last September. Alexander slept the early part of the evening and when awakened to prepare for the scaffold he smoked a pipe of tobacco and walked unassisted to the death room.

Town Panic-Stricken.

Howard City, Mich., April 16.—This town was thrown into a panic on account of dog though to be afflicted with rabies. Several people were chased and had to seek shelter, but luckily no one was bitten. After a two hours chase the dog was finally shot by Sheriff Underhill. A wholesale killing of dogs is expected now, as it is thought several were bitten.

Railroad Bridge Collapsed.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 16.—Because the piers were weakened by the flood, the west span of the Grand Trunk bridge over the Grand went down under a train of freight cars, being switched across. Trains will be sent over the Pere Marquette to Lowell.

BIG GOULD DEAL.

Three Trunk Lines to Be Built Across Nebraska.

Beatrice, Neb., April 16.—The Gould interests as represented in the Missouri Pacific railroad system, have decided upon the construction of three trunk lines in as many different directions across the state of Nebraska.

The starting point will be Virginia, a town of 150 inhabitants on the prairie in the southeastern part of the state, and one of the present termini of the Missouri Pacific in Nebraska. The construction of a line from Virginia to Beatrice is now under way. The title of the road, as incorporated under the laws of Nebraska, is the Kansas City, Beatrice & Northwest. Beatrice is the first junction point of the new trunk lines. One of the lines will be built due west to Denver.

LATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Canal Treaty Doomed?—A private cable dispatch received from a British source at Bogota, Colombia, says the ratification of the Colombia-United States Panama canal treaty is extremely doubtful.

Collision at Sea.—The White Star line steamer Celtic and the British steamer Heathmore collided in the Mersey Wednesday. The Celtic was damaged amidsips, but it is expected she will be able to sail for New York Friday as scheduled.

Sentenced to Death.—The Albanian soldier who shot M. Stebernia, the Russian consul at Mitrovitz, inflicting a wound from which the latter subsequently died, has been sentenced to death, the Russian embassy at Constantinople having demanded a revision of the sentence of fifteen years imprisonment.

Discharged For Eating.—Because they took time for lunch at the noon hour fifteen drivers were discharged at Primrose colliery of the Lehigh Valley coal company at Mahoning City, Pa. A general strike of drivers, patchers, doormen and loaders followed forcing the plant to suspend operations. Several hundred men are affected.

Bad Storm on Coast.—At Atlantic City and Asbury Park the severest northeaster that has visited that part of the Jersey coast since 1895 has been raging for twenty-four hours. The tide was the highest known for eighteen years. Huge breakers crashed against the piling beneath the piers and pavilions and in some places the board walk with tremendous force. Heavy timber from the board walk have been ripped up by the incessant bombardment of the waves and carried out to sea.

NEWS OF THE STATE

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE TO ADJOURN MAY 14.

DETROIT BUSINESS BODIES COMBINE FOR STRENGTH.

BIG INCREASE IN APPROPRIATIONS FOR ASYLUMS.

Lansing, Mich., April 15.—The concurrent resolution introduced by Representative Combs of Lenawee, fixing the business adjournment of the session for May 3 and final adjournment for May 14, is most acceptable to the leaders of both houses, and provided it passes the lower house will probably have no trouble in going through the senate. This will leave three full weeks after the coming Friday's recess for active business.

Some of the primary election men fear this is part of a senate plot to choke off any final action on the reform movement. The situation now certainly foreshadows a conference committee, and the possibility that adjournment day might come without any agreement having been reached between the two houses is so strong that several primary men say they will not vote to fix any date for adjournment until the great issue of the session is in a fair way for settlement.

In committee of the whole the bill appropriating $5,000 a year for two years to the Michigan Agricultural Society was agreed to after an intellectual effort on the part of Representative Anderson to make the West Michigan society an equal beneficiary. Representative Deal's bill by which summer resort associations are empowered to hold 780 acres and property of the value of $2,000,000, was agreed to. The object is to permit the associations at Point aux Barques and Harbor Springs to own property directly, instead of by trustees. The acreage is increased from 320 and the value from $1,000,000.

The Siggins bill, changing the age limit for the Coldwater school from 12 to 14 years, has, according to the author, already passed the house.

The house passed the Detroit water board bill. It provides for the handling of all moneys of the water commission through the city controller and city treasurer, the same as in all other city departments, and for the making of appropriations for said board through the common council and board of estimates. It completes and makes uniform the whole financial system of the city. It also provides for the issue of all bonds for water purposes by the city instead of by the board. It does not change or abridge the power of the board to fix or collect rates.

A BIG INCREASE.

Asylum and Prison Appropriations Larger Than Two Years Ago.

Lansing, Mich., April 15.—The ways and means committee of the house has decided to report out the following appropriations for the state asylums and prisons for the years 1903 and 1904 to cover the regular expenditures of these institutions for 1901 and 1902.

	1901	1902
Ponchar	$160,855.12	$162,786.80
Kalamazoo	188,821.17	197,487.15
Traverse City	165,938.87	171,195.66
Irona	42,604.75	46,499.71
Newberry	5,897.12	5,122.56
Wayne Asylum	48,747.07	52,221.41
St. Joe Reformatory	1,158.82	588.39

$666,720.49 $696,402.12
The prison appropriations for 1899 and 1900 were $70,000 and $68,000 and asylum appropriations for the same years $40,724 and $60,314.

Detroit Is Active.

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—Thirty-eight prominent Detroit business men and firms have already signified that they consider it worth $100 each to become identified as charter members with the proposed big commercial body which shall include the Merchants & Manufacturers' Exchange, the Chamber of Commerce and all public spirited firms and citizens who desire to unite. Literature setting forth the plans and the objects of the new organization was sent out only last Saturday, and this quick response embracing as it does well on to half of the 100 responses which are required to make the $10,000 fund with which it is desired to commence operations, is very gratifying to those having the matter in charge.

Michigan's March Death Record.

Lansing, Mich., April 15.—The death record of the state for the month of March, according to the returns in the department of state, was 3,034, the rate being 114 per thousand. Important causes of death were as follows: Tuberculosis of the lungs, 197; other forms of tuberculosis, 10; Typhoid fever, 48; diphtheria and croup 21; scarlet fever 22; measles 29; whooping cough 31; pneumonia 403; diarrheal diseases, under 2 years, 51; influenza 143; cancer, 147; accidents and violence, 156.

Farmers Oppose Twine Plant.

Lansing, Mich., April 15.—At the weekly meeting of the Legislative Farmers' club last night the proposition of installing a binder twine plant in the state prison at Jackson was discussed. About 75 per cent of the members seemed opposed to the idea. Several object to the idea of the state entering into competition with an industry operated by free workmen.

Kalamazoo Citizen Stricken.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 15.—Albert Conklin, a well known resident of this city, dropped dead in the saloon of Peter Van Peenen. He was playing peder, when he exclaimed, "Oh, God, I'm sick!" and fell over in his companion's arms. Death finished out the hand. Cause, apoplexy.

Now He Stays Home.

It is told of a Waco man that his wife desired to break him of the habit of staying out late at night. He came home about midnight one night and knocked on the door. His wife whispered through the keyhole: "Is that you, Willie?" His name happened to be John, though, and 'tis said that since then he sleeps with one eye open and a six shooter under his pillow, waiting for Willie.

The New Scent.

You have discovered if you have a good nose that stephanotis is the swaggiest perfume. A woman in the holy ring of fashiondom tells how the scent is applied. "Never on the handkerchief, mind you, but on the palm skin, under the ears and on the palms and wrists. The skin absorbs the drug quality of all perfumes, and when applied in this way only the sweetness is left."

"Itching hemorrhoids were the plague of my life. Was almost wild. Doan's Ointment cured me quickly and permanently, after doctors had failed."—G. F. Cornwell, Valley Street, Sangerites, N. Y.

Running as an Art and Exercise.

Running, like many other things, is an art. It is seldom an inspiration, and to be performed properly should be learned and practiced. A bad, un-tutored style is not only ungraceful, but it prevents a player doing the best work of which she is capable and immutes against good plays as powerfully as anything can. A good, free style, on the other hand, which entails the full use of all proper muscles, gives a girl additional peace and security, with infinitely less exertion, when once it has been acquired.
Moreover, it improves the carriage and lends grace to all the movements.

A FALSE REPORT.

No Truth in Story That Andrews Will Be Paroled.

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—A story is out that the friends of Frank C. Andrews, who have stood by him through all his troubles, and who have worked quietly and industriously to secure the bank wrecker's early conditional release from Jackson prison, hope to see him out on parole within ninety days.

The petition which has been circulated asking for executive clemency, it is claimed, has been signed by many people including a lot of depositors of the old City Savings bank. A Polish priest was interested in securing the signatures, and the depositors were told that if Andrews were released they would all get their money back, or they at least would run a better chance of being repaid if Andrews were in a position where he could give assistance to the Union Trust company, the receiver.

Every pressure possible has been brought to bear upon Governor Bliss to parole Andrews. It was openly asserted at the time of Tom Navin's appointment upon the prison board that he secured the position mainly to be in a position to aid his old political friend. This belief was given additional force when one of Andrews' attorneys stated that he knew nothing about what was being done to secure Andrews' release, as that part was being attended to by Tom Navin and A.
J. Groesbeck.

Governor Bliss was asked if he had received a petition signed by several hundred people asking for parole of Frank C. Andrews, and he made this unqualified reply:

"I have received no petition of that kind."

He was then asked if he stood by his announcement, made some time ago, that he would not parole Andrews, and he said that he did and that he had not changed his mind. The governor was very positive in his answers and several times repeated his denial.

The Color Line.

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—The case of W. C. Swan, the colored lawyer who had the proprietors of the Delmont restaurant, Brennan & Lockwood, arrested, as he alleged for refusing to serve him with a meal and threatening to throw him out of their place, went to the jury Tuesday, after some impassioned oratory by four lawyers.
D. Augustus Straker quoted Senator
Hoar in defense of the colored man, and George P. Robinson referred to Tillman. The jury disagreed after being out three hours and was discharged.

Bright Canal Prospects.

Colon, Colombia, April 15.—Congressman H. L. Maynard from Virginia has sailed on the steamer Seguranga for New York. He expresses himself as highly pleased with the isthmus of Panama, which he considers more up-to-date and far less unhealthy than is generally imagined. He shares the views of the best informed persons here that, notwithstanding an influential opposition in the next Colombian congress the United States government finally will overcome all sentimental objections and secure the ratification of the Panama canal convention. Felix Elman, United States vice consul general at Panama, is a passenger on the Seguranga.

Important Meeting.

Chicago, April 15.—On the result of a meeting to be held Wednesday depend the success of a strike which may involve 100,000 workmen on the great lakes an ultimatum on the wage scale to be presented by the package freight handlers at Chicago to the managers of the lake lines and labor contractors who supply men for dock work along Chicago river. The demand is backed by the International Longshoremen Marine and Transport Workers association. For a month the Chicago package freight handlers have been in dispute with W. J. Conners a labor contractor and the agents of the Canada Atlantic and the Rutland Transit lines.

The Church Loses.

New York, April 15.—Justice Blanche in the supreme court handed down a decision that the $20,000 legacy left by the late Charlotte A. Mount to Bishop Daniel S. Tuttle of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Utah for the purpose of erecting a church within the boundary of his episcopal jurisdiction, is void and cannot be sustained. By the decision, the $20,000 must be divided in accordance with the distribution of the residuary estate, as provided in the will.

LATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Getting Together.—At the joint convention of miners and operators of West Virginia at Huntington, 145 representatives of miners and 24 operators were present. All the operators were from the Kanawha field.

Another Bad Boiler.—The boiler of the Charles Evans steamship at Ruby,
O., exploded, killing Charles Evans, Richard Honck, Rufus Honck and two other boys named Honck and Gottridge. Several others were badly injured.

Indian Council.—A conference of Comanche Indians has been called for this week near Lawton, Okla., to consider application made by citizens of Chihuahua, Mexico, to move the Indians to that country. They are offered two million acres of land free to make the change.

Partner With Grant.—A S. Mount is dead at Indianapolis, aged 81 years.
He was for many years a wholesale leather merchant. He was born in Clermont county, Ohio, in a neighboring house and the same year U. S.
Grant was born. The elder Mount and elder Grant were tanners and the two boys were reared together.

The Howard Trial.—The common wealth placed five witnesses on the stand in the trial of James Howard at Frankfort, Ky., for the murder of William Guebel at the Tuesday session of court. All had testified before. W. C.
Cullon, one of the alleged conspirators, was the last witness. He was submitted to a rigid cross-examination.

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

"Alaska," a new play by W. L.
Lockwood, a well known newspaper man of Saratoga, N. Y., and a prominent explorer of the frozen region of the north, produced by and under the personal direction of Lincoln J.
Carter, will be the attraction at the Whitney Theater all next week. It is a play of startling and sensational surprises, founded upon the author's many startling experiences during his two years' stay in the Northern Gold fields and in exploring the island of Akutan. There will be matinees daily except Wednesday.

Lyceum Theater—Detroit.

The second production of the Pike Theatre company's season at the Lyceum will be Henry Arthur Jones' most successful social comedy drama
"Mrs. Dane's Defense," which will be put on view before a Detroit audience for the first time on the evening of April 19th. This great play has a record of an entire season in New York where it was declared the strongest and best play of its time.
There is a chance for fine acting in every role of the play and the Pike players make the most of this. The ladies of the company promise a notable display of handsome gowns and the play will be effectively mounted.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR BOYS' PARENTS

Just two: but there are so many we could mention that would benefit them that it was difficult to decide on these.

Suggesting the things that are to be found in our Boys' department is as hard as it is when one has a great deal to tell about—you don't know just where to begin.

The two are Single, and Double Breasted Suits for knee trouser boys of 7 to 17 years—we've named them "The Traver Special Suits" simply because they are extraordinary values—in fact they are specials in every sense of the word; in fabric, in cut, in appearance and in making. More worth for the money never was offered.

But you'll be better able to judge their values after an inspection.

Your choice is not limited to four or five—lines, out to over twenty and each one is as good as the other.

These are suits of fine blue Serges, blue and black Cheviots, light Homespuans and the neatest mixed Cheviots we've ever shown. All are the one price—

Five Dollars.

Rat Poison.
Prof. Koch of Germany has discovered a successful method for the destruction of rats which frequent the holds of ships. An experiment has been conducted on board the Bulgaria at Hamburg. The rats were placed in cages in the hold. An apparatus was then used to fill the hold of the ship with a gaseous substance. When this was concluded the cages were brought on deck, and all the rats were found to be dead. The new system will in future be used in the German navy and on the big German steamship lines.

Following in the wake of backache are urinary disorders, diabetes, Bright's disease. Let a Northville citizen tell of his cure.

Mr. T. W. Wood, painter and paper hanger of 27 Center st., says: "My wife and I are thoroughly convinced of the curative powers of this popular remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills for we used them some years ago for backache and other kidney troubles. They acted very effectively and promptly relieving the backache and the other annoyances. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine we ever used and we are pleased to testify to their merits." Tea la Smith in the Dark.

A Vassar girl said she liked her tea best with orange peel and pineapple in it—while a young woman, a Smith product always adds a teaspoon of Jamaica rum and a slice of lemon. Have heated a bowl, and put into it one-half pint of brandy one-half pint of rum, juice of one lemon, and one-quarter of a pound of loaf sugar. Serve in glasses when the flames have subsided.

A WORD TO FARM TOILERS.

PAIN'S CELERY COMPOUND

The Home Friend of the Farmer and His Family.

After the labors and toils of the summer time, and harvesting or crops in the early autumn, many of our farmers, their wives, daughters, and sons, find themselves in a condition of health demanding careful attention if suffering is to be avoided later on. Many experience kidney trouble in some form; with some, the liver is torpid; there is biliousness, nausea, and vomiting, with loss of appetite and depression of spirits. Thousands who have been exposed to cold, damp winds and rains while toiling in the harvest fields, now feel the twinges of terrible rheumatism; others run down by worry, overwork, and irregular dieting, are tormented with the pangs of dyspepsia.

To the thousands of run-down, sickly, and half-dead men and women in farm homes we recommend with all honesty and confidence the worker's friend, Paine's Celery Compound, the only medicine that can quickly and fully restore strength to the weak body and vigor to the muscles. Paine's Celery Compound tones the stomach; it removes poisonous acids from the blood which cause rheumatism; it feeds the weak and diseased nerves and banishes neuralgic tortures; it purifies the blood and restores vitality and life. The use of Paine's Celery Compound in autumn means the establishing of a perfect physical vigor to withstand the rigors of a severe winter.

CHAPTER XXI

MARY ANNAN LEARNS THE TRUTH.

MARY ANNAN had changed greatly in this period. Without surrendering a single conviction, where she had despised, she admired; where she had hated, she respected; where she had thought she had forgotten, she remembered; where she had despised, she loved; yes, she was still devoted to the south, and would cheerfully have died for it. She had many a time longed that she were a man to draw a sword or carry a musket in defense of her country. She would not have hesitated a moment between love and duty, she thought, but she had come to realize that, while duty may restrain, it is, after all, love that makes the supreme appeal. And the outward and visible shape which that supreme appeal took before her heart was not that of Darrow, to whom she was betrothed, but of Peyton, whom she had rejected. She loved him! In spite of her pride, in spite of her cause, in spite of her will, in spite of everything, she loved him!

No one in Mobile had heard from Boyd Peyton since that day he dropped out of their existence years before. But she had loved him with growing intensity ever since. To be sure, she had engaged herself to Darrow. She had persuaded herself in his presence that she could do it with safety, she had tried to blind herself to the truth, and she had clung to that engagement with desperate tenacity during the intervening years. But her eyes were opened, and she realized all too soon that the tie binding her to Darrow was merely one of honor and respect.

It was a pity that this was so. For Darrow had shown himself most admirable in the situations in which he had been placed. He had developed grandly. From major of his regiment he had risen to the command of an Alabama brigade, and in all the desperate fighting of the Army of Northern Virginia he had borne a splendid and heroic part. The state rang with praise of the young paladin. Alabama was proud of him; Mobile rejoiced to claim him.

There was something quaint yet admirable about the young man's position on the subject of home coming. Mary Annan had promised herself to him when the war was over and he could come home a victor, and until that time arrived he had promised to let her alone. He would do it. He would keep that promise if it broke his heart. Like Uriah of old, he believed his place to be in the battle line.

Frequent letters had come to her from him as the exigencies of his service permitted. Quant, charming letters they were, too, mainly, modest, humorous in a way, through them running the clash of arms, the echo of moving squadrons, the roar of battle, and all of them carrying to her the deep and mighty current of love and consecration of his great, devoted heart. She was the master theme in all the voices the crowded years played in his soul. Without her he was nothing, one of thousands as brave and strong as he. With her he was a hero. The realization of that fact had kept her to her engagement. He had scarcely gone before she wished it broken.

Darrow was no less admirable than Peyton. True, he had not been compelled to make any such sacrifice as the other had, but he had done what he conceived to be his duty with a direct simplicity that was admirable. But what of all this? It was nothing. If Darrow had been dowered with every faculty, possessed of every virtue, and if Peyton had none of these, she would have loved him just the same. Her passion had passed far beyond the calmly reasoning or reasonable stage. It took note only of facts, or, rather, of the one sublime fact that she loved him. Darrow's appeal had been most powerful to the physical side of her nature, and that side was growing more and more in abeyance in her developing life. If she could have seen him, it might have been different. She might have realized the change in him.

Yet she was not ignorant of what he had done for and through her, how he had won in love and war. And she was so fearful what the consequences might be to him and, if he were of value, to the south if she should take away from him the stimulus of hope. Yet she had at last reached the point where she felt compelled to do so. As she moved her more he expected more from her. As she loved Peyton more, she gave Darrow less and less.

Her heart had turned absolutely to Peyton. Singing her duty to the south, she was his. His absence, the impossibility of their meeting, all conspired to produce the utter abandonment with which she gave way to her passion. She could not sit a single moment in the solitude of her chamber without thinking of him. She realized that if he ever stood again before her with his arms stretched out to her no power on earth should keep them apart—unless her duty to the south intervened. And even that duty would have to be overwhelming in its appeal to stay her movement toward him.

Her being went out to him more strongly when she learned inadvertently, that he was an officer on one of the ships blockading the mouth of the bay opposite Fort Morgan. Fate had given him little opportunity for distinction; he was only a Lieutenant, the watch officer of a frigate.

The overpowering of a great passion such as poets have dreamed of, such as historians have written of, such as given wider fields, have moved the world, was upon her. The thought of Peyton obsessed her, and her heart cried out to him with every beating. She trembled even at the most secret thought of his name. She was never so happy as when Mrs. Peyton, long since having disregarded her husband's injunctions, talked of him.

The elder woman marked the revelation and wondered, with a painful pity for poor Darrow and a mighty yearning for her eldest son, how it would all end. The grim old father, too, down on the ramparts of Fort Morgan, watched the fleet tossing to and fro on the long swells of the gulf of Mexico and longed for a sight of the boy he had so loved.

In Mary Annan's waking hours she was afraid, afraid to think how much she loved Boyd Peyton. In the long nights she dreamed of him. She was his, that was all. Whether he claimed her or no, whether he knew it or not, she was his. Ab, loving God, how she prayed for him in every hour of her life! The south and he mingled in her petitions, and only that God who can read the holy mystery of a loving woman's heart knew which came first.

Her feelings grew so strong at last that she came to the conclusion that she must tell Darrow. If it killed him, he must know. Every letter she received in its trusting devotion pressed upon her that honor demanded that he should be told the truth. She did not love him. She never could love him. Marriage with him would be no sacrament, but a sacrifice. She honored him, she esteemed him. She would have given worlds to have felt different. She had honestly tried to love him, but her heart had at last outleaped constraint. That was the naked truth.

She could not permit herself to deceive him longer, so at last she poured out her heart to him in one long broken appeal, telling him the whole truth, shaming herself, scorning herself, but asking her freedom.

In agony she penned the letter. There was no doubt in her mind as to the sincerity of Darrow's passion for her. She looked into her own heart and saw what he would suffer, and she suffered for and with him. The penalty and the reward of a great passion are in sympathy it begets with the suffering that always follows knowledge of the heart. She was dreadfully unhappy. But for Boyd Peyton she would have died.

The fateful letter had been sent to Darrow about the middle of September by the hand of Hamilton Pleasants, lieutenant colonel now, if you please, commanding the old Alabama regiment. He had come back to recover from an attack of typhoid fever after Gettysburg, and he had become betrothed to Pink Peyton at the time.

The news had come that Longstreet's corps was hurrying from Virginia to re-enforce Bragg's army, then facing Rosecrans and the Army of the Cumberland on the mountains around Chattanooga. Though he was scarcely able to endure the fatigues and demands of active campaigning, Pleasants had hurried away to intercept his regiment and to take part in the effort which was to be made to hurl the Federal troops out of Tennessee.

CHAPTER XXII

WITH DARROW'S BRIGADE

EARLY in the afternoon of Sept. 19, 1863, the first of the long troop trains clanked wearily into the station at Ringgold, Ga. A young man in gray uniform, wearing the shoulder straps of a lieutenant colonel, stood upon the platform, an expression of eagerness and anxiety on his thin, worn face as he gazed at the long line of ramshackle cars filled with gray clad men. As the first soldier stepped from the train he rushed impetuously up to him with outstretched arms, shouting:

"Oh, Bob, Bob! I am so glad!"

The handsome face of Brigadier General Robert Darrow, commanding the Alabama brigade of Hood's division of Longstreet's famous corps of the Army of Northern Virginia, broke into a broad smile as Lieutenant Colonel Hamilton Pleasants recovered himself with an embarrassed laugh, came to attention, saluted in the most formal manner and remarked with military precision:

"General, I report for duty, sir."

"Glad to see you, Ham," returned Darrow genially, shaking the other warmly by the hand. "You ought not to be here, though. You are not well yet."

"Couldn't help it," said Pleasants. "I just had to come. I heard there was going to be fighting, and I wanted to head the old regiment once more."

"Well, you got here in the nick of time. Your regiment is on this section. Go and take command and get the men out of the cars. They are in heavy marching order and are to move forward at once."

Buy your coal of M. S. Ambler, Northville

"Mr. Ledyard," said the young general, turning to a staff officer, "you are to remain at the station and as fast as the other regiments of the brigade come in direct their colonels to get the men in line as quick as possible. I will rest the right of the brigade over there in that field. Ah, here comes some one looking for us," he added, as another staff officer came riding down the road at a furious gallop, halted abruptly before him, dismounted and saluted.

"General Darrow?"

"Yes, sir."

"The Colonel Thompson of General Bragg's staff."

"Glad to meet you, colonel."

"Thank you, the pleasure's mine," said Thompson. "As soon as your brigade is assembled, sir, you are to march up this road to the left toward Reed's bridge, over Chickamauga creek, with all speed. General Hood's compliments and orders, sir."

"Very good, sir. How far is it to the army?"

"It's about ten miles, I reckon, and the general hopes you can get there this evening. There has been heavy fighting all morning. You are needed."

"We'll be there."

"It's a long march," said the colonel dubiously.

"That's all right; I've got a brigade of foot-cavalry here," laughed Darrow. "Don't wait for anything, general."

"Oh, Bob, Bob! I am so glad!"

replied Thompson, laughing in turn. "Your men still have something left in their haversacks, I suppose?"

"They have enough for another meal, I reckon."

"That's well. Push them forward as fast as you can. Our losses have been severe, but we have forced the enemy back, and the battle is to be resumed in the morning."

"Has General Longstreet come?"

"Yes. He is with General Bragg now."

"Here comes the second section of my brigade," said Darrow as another long train loaded with gray coated soldiers pulled up on a siding.

"Good!"

"And the third will be along presently, I think."

"Fine! Jove, we're glad you're here. We've had a terrible time all day, but with your fresh veterans we ought to sweep everything before us tomorrow."

"Well, sir, we will do what we can," said Darrow. "My men have seen a deal of fighting, and we'll try to hold our end up."

"I know you will. The Army of Northern Virginia is all right, but we think down here that we don't have to take a back seat to anybody when it comes to fighting."

"You are right, colonel, you don't," said Darrow generously. "Oh, but it's good to be down here! I am nearer home than I have been for three years."

"You don't mean to tell me that you have never been back since you went to the front?"

"Never. I have stayed right in Virginia until I feel fairly sick for a sight of old Alabama."

"If we beat the Yanks tomorrow, you will soon be on your native soil. Home!" continued Thompson thoughtfully, surveying the passing regiments. "I am afraid that a great many of these fellows will never see it again."

"Yes, but that's a part of a soldier's risk," said Darrow softly.

Before the troops moved off Darrow drew aside from his staff and beckoned Pleasants to come to him.

"We haven't had a moment alone, Ham," said the young brigadier to the younger colonel, "till now, but before we march off—you have just come from home. Did you see her?"

"I should say I did!" responded the junior officer, forgetting himself and lapsing into the old familiar style. "Bob, she is the sweetest and prettiest thing on earth, and I don't mind telling you that I am engaged to her."

"Good heavens!" gasped Darrow, turning pale. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, I mean Miss Pink Peyton, not—" returned the colonel, in much confusion. "I see," greatly relieved. "I thought you meant Miss Mary."

"No, of course not," said the other. "Of course not. Naturally you would not think any one equal to Miss Peyton."

"Well, I—but I have a letter for you," said Pleasants, blushing furiously and fumbling in his jacket and bringing it forth. "I forgot all about it," he added shamefacedly, letters from home being the things craved by the soldiers.

Darrow seized it eagerly in his gauntleted hands. For a second he made a motion as if to press it to his lips, and then, recollecting that the eyes of half his brigade were on him, he thrust it reluctantly into his pocket.

"How did she look? Was she well?" he asked.

"Beautiful!" said Pleasants rapturously. "Oh, you mean Miss Mary? She looked very well indeed. Of course she is awfully cut up about the death of her father and the war and all that, and you, too, I suppose, but otherwise she is quite well. I reckon she must be very fond of you, old fellow."

"I hope so," said the general, brightening in this vague assurance. "By the way, Pleasants, did you hear anything of Boyd Peyton while you were in Mobile?"

"Yes; he is in the blockading fleet down off Fort Morgan."

"Come to my headquarters tonight," said the general, "as soon as we have made camp, if we make camp. I want to talk to you about home and Miss Mary."

"And Miss Pink?" interrupted Pleasants.

"Yes, of course, before we go into battle tomorrow. It may be our last chance, you know."

By this time the platform and open space about the station were filled with soldiers from the two sections which had already arrived. Their uniforms were dusty and worn, sometimes tattered and patched, but their gun barrels were bright, their rifles were looked to. They bore themselves with the careless insouciance of veterans as they fell into ranks with the promptness of trained soldiers. Their lean, brown, leather tanned faces, their vigorous, easy movements, as well as their torn and tattered battleflags, spoke an eloquent language of hard marches, long campaigns and fierce battles.

With rattle of drums and shrilling of fifes, in obedience to the sharp staccato command of the officers rising above the confusion, they marched down the dusty road and aligned themselves in regiments at the designated position. Mounting his horse with the other horses, had been unloading from the stock cars in the front of the train, Darrow rode to the head of his brigade. The last section had arrived while the conversation had been going on, and all the dispositions having been promptly made, a word of command put the troops in motion.

The Alabama regiment in which he had gone out as a major had mustered on its departure from Mobile some eleven hundred officers and men. Now the entire force of the brigade, comprising four regiments and a battery of artillery, was scarcely more than fifteen hundred men. They were the very best soldiers on the face of the globe.

There at the head of the column rode the boyish Pleasants, commanding Darrow's own old regiment, now numbering about three hundred men. Where were the rest of them? Their bones lay bleaching upon battlefields all over Virginia—Manassas, Malvern Hill, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville—yes, and far to the north some of them slept on the soil of Pennsylvania, around the slopes of Gettysburg. Now they were to show what Lee's veterans could do in the mountains and valleys of Georgia.

CHAPTER XXIII

SMASHING THROUGH THE UNION LINE.

AT 9 o'clock on the morning of the 20th of September, 1863, the tree clad hills in front of General Thomas' position between Chickamauga creek and Missionary ridge, covering the road through Rossville gap to Chattanooga, were suddenly covered with men who seemed to have sprung up by magic as they rose from the hollows in which they had lain concealed. The instant cracking of the rifles and muskets of the heavy skirmish line thrown in advance of the battle line soon gave place to crashing volleys, punctured by the deeper roar of cannon as the southern batteries swung front into action, pouring their grape, shrapnel and canister into their enemies. It seemed to the Union soldiers that scarcely a moment elapsed between the appearance and the advance of the Confederates. With consummate courage the gray masses were moved forward in the smoke and hurled upon the Federal line, and with equal courage the assault was met. The battle raged up and down the Union left with terrific fierceness and with no present advantage as yet to either side.

Presently out of the smoke and dust far to the Union left Breckinridge's division, overlapping Thomas' shorter line by a long distance, swung around across the Rossville road and attacked the Union line in reverse. But no better soldier, no harder fighter, than the great Virginian ever handled an army. Quick to take in the significance of the dangerous movement, Thomas threw his reserve brigades in fierce countercharge right into the face of Breckinridge, and aided by a timely re-enforcement of one of Negley's brigades—although the whole division should have been there and was not—he forced him back from the road and retained control of it.

Again and again Polk forged a mighty battle hammer of human bodies and drove it against the Union left, which shivered and vibrated under the terrific blows rained upon it. The two wings charged and recharged across the disputed ground. Positions were taken and retaken again and again. The armies were locked in a mighty, deathlike grip of battle—a writhing, twisting embrace of furious, swaying conflict.

Meanwhile the front of Thomas' command was so heavily engaged that he did not dare to weaken it to help his hard pressed left flank by a withdrawal of a single regiment. The absence of Negley's division, or the missing two-thirds of it, which had been promised, so seriously jeopardized his position as to render it almost impossible for him to hold it in the face of such continuous and desperate attacks. Messenger after messenger came to Rosecrans asking re-enforcement.

The right of the Union army had so far only been engaged in a desultory way that morning. The fighting as yet had all been on the left. The necessity for moving his right wing by the left flank was imperative, and the movement was at once begun by the Union general. This is always a difficult evolution in front of an enemy, and when the battle is in actual course the difficulties are increased a thousandfold. As the morning wore on the Confederate attack was extended from left to right with gradually increasing force. Bragg divined Rosecrans' purpose, and he endeavored to make him maintain his line and so prevent detachment to the left, which he hoped to overwhelm. At any rate, he determined to strike the Union troops moving to re-enforce Thomas on their unprotected flanks as they passed.

Still, the fighting on the Federal right was as yet by no means severe, although the demonstrations of the Confederates were growing stronger with every moment, and their troops were being moved forward on the right for a general action all along the line. By half after 11 o'clock a misunderstood order, which was at the same time badly expressed, withdrew a whole Federal division from its place in the line near the center, moved it to the left and placed it in the rear of Thomas' heavily assailed position. There was a great hole left in the Union line. John B. Hood, one of the most magnificently reckless fighters in the southern army, detected it through his skirmishes. The news was at once carried to Longstreet, and he massed his corps for an instant attack, appreciating the brilliancy of the opportunity before him.

With masterly tactics Longstreet drew his veterans into a column of brigades at half distance, Hood leading the column in person. With fixed bayonets and a double quick they moved down past a little farmhouse which from the frame of its owner gave the title to the Etherton road. The men in the open flanks of the Union army on either side of this vast chasm were completely exposed to the Confederate avalanche, pouring into the gap in solid column, the fierce rebel yell, just heard from the lips of John Sevier 100 years before in Tennessee, ringing over the field. At the same instant every battery of southern artillery opened fire. Buckner's corps hurled itself upon the attenuated Union lines on the right of the opening. Stewart's division on the left of it, at the same time Longstreet pierced the center.

General Davis threw his two brigades recklessly upon this mighty gray battle column. A few swift volleys from the advancing Confederates shattered their ranks, and when the division fell upon them with the bayonet they drove them like leaves in a winter storm. The Union batteries in the rear of the line sent canister and grape tearing and ripping through the advancing battalions, but their blood was up, nothing could stop their irresistible advance. Davis' men, taken in front and rear and flying for their lives, burst in to the ranks of Phil Sheridan's division throwing them into hopeless confusion, in which condition the gray battle storm surged down upon them. In spite of the heroic efforts of that commander they were thrown into complete rout and swept away in mad disorder. Brigadier General Lytle the poet soldier, was killed in front of his brigade, vainly striving to rally, his shattered, disorganized troops and hold his lines.

While this terrible catastrophe was happening Buckner's soldiers, advancing with equal valor, fell upon the remainder of the right center wing of the Union army and drove it before them in hopeless and inextricable disorder. Men, guns, horses and wagons, in a chaos of confusion, streamed back from the battle line and were scattered through the woods and down the Dry Valley road toward McFarland's gap. Some of them were halted on the other side of the ridge, at Rossville, but many did not stop until they reached Chattanooga.

Into this flying mass the Confederate guns poured shot and shell. The Union batteries were captured and turned against their own men. Rosecrans, the commander in chief, McCook, Davis, Sheridan and Crittenden, protesting, cursing, imploring, raging, beseeching, were swept along with the rest in a mad, tumultuous rout. The Union right wing had been hammered to pieces. The Union line had been riven in two, and one side of it crushed like a house of cards beaten down by a hammer. And it had all happened in a few moments.

Far to the left Thomas and his battalions, ignorant of the disaster, still stood fighting with desperate valor. Longstreet now turned his men toward that flank and what was left of the Union center and repeated with great success his attack on the right. The Union troops were slammed backward like a door. Hood was desperately wounded, and Longstreet led his lines in person. Bushrod Johnson's brigade in advance. The Union troops in the center made a better resistance, and somewhat delayed the advance. They changed front under fire and clung tenaciously to their new line, facing the gap and the victory flushed foe. But they, too, had to give way before the furious dash and overwhelming onslaught of the victorious Confederates, now to greatly superior force, until finally there was nothing left of the Union line but the still heavily assaulted left wing.

mand was so heavily engaged that he did not dare to weaken it to help his hard pressed left flank by a withdrawal of a single regiment. The absence of Negley's division, or the missing two-thirds of it, which had been promised, so seriously jeopardized his position as to render it almost impossible for him to hold it in the face of such continuous and desperate attacks. Brigadier General Lytle the poet soldier, was killed in front of his brigade, vainly striving to rally, his shattered, disorganized troops and hold his lines.

While this terrible catastrophe was happening Buckner's soldiers, advancing with equal valor, fell upon the remainder of the right center wing of the Union army and drove it before them in hopeless and inextricable disorder. Men, guns, horses and wagons, in a chaos of confusion, streamed back from the battle line and were scattered through the woods and down the Dry Valley road toward McFarland's gap. Some of them were halted on the other side of the ridge, at Rossville, but many did not stop until they reached Chattanooga.

Into this flying mass the Confederate guns poured shot and shell. The Union batteries were captured and turned against their own men. Rosecrans, the commander in chief, McCook, Davis, Sheridan and Crittenden, protesting, cursing, imploring, raging, beseeching, were swept along with the rest in a mad, tumultuous rout. The Union right wing had been hammered to pieces. The Union line had been riven in two, and one side of it crushed like a house of cards beaten down by a hammer. And it had all happened in a few moments.

Far to the left Thomas and his battalions, ignorant of the disaster, still stood fighting with desperate valor. Longstreet now turned his men toward that flank and what was left of the Union center and repeated with great success his attack on the right. The Union troops were slammed backward like a door. Hood was desperately wounded, and Longstreet led his lines in person. Bushrod Johnson's brigade in advance. The Union troops in the center made a better resistance, and somewhat delayed the advance. They changed front under fire and clung tenaciously to their new line, facing the gap and the victory flushed foe. But they, too, had to give way before the furious dash and overwhelming onslaught of the victorious Confederates, now to greatly superior force, until finally there was nothing left of the Union line but the still heavily assaulted left wing.

A Pretty Screen.

A beautiful and not especially expensive screen is one of the attractions in a woman's studio. The frame is plain, dark wood, with a dull finish. The filling is made of India print curtains, stretched plainly, with almost no fulness. The curtains are cut out to fit the spaces, no attention being paid to the pattern, which adds to the quaintness of the effect.

FOUGHT UNDER FARRAGUT.

Admiral Rodgers, the New Commandant of Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Rear Admiral Frederick Rodgers, who has just succeeded Rear Admiral Barker as commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, is already familiar with the duties of the position, as he served from 1893 to 1896 as captain of the yard.

Rear Admiral Rodgers known in the navy as "Turk" Rodgers, comes from a family that has long been famous as sea fighters. Admiral John Rodgers, one of the heroes of the war of 1812, was his uncle, and Admiral C. R. P. Rodgers, known in other days as the Chesterfield of the navy, was his cousin.

Frederick Rodgers donned the navy blue when but a boy, entering Annapolis.

REAR ADMIRAL FREDERICK RODGERS.

His when but fifteen. He was graduated in 1861, just in time to take part in the stirring events of the civil war. He was ordered to the Santee. He got into the fighting squadron of the navy—the west gulf—under Farragut where he saw much service.

Again in 1864 after a short tour of duty in the north Atlantic squadron he was sent back to the west gulf fleet.

It was at Mobile bay that "Turk" Rodgers saw his hottest fight. That was the place where Joubert's ship was attached to the flagship of Farragut. After the close of the war Rodgers got his promotion as lieutenant commander. It is said that in the naval board then sitting in Washington there were men who did not want to promote Rodgers. They said he was too young. "Too young," growled Farragut. "He wasn't too young to go into that hell of fire and gunpowder in Mobile bay, a hotter place than you will ever see" (this so to voice to an old captain who had not smelled powder during the four years of the war), "unless you go where you ought to when you die, confound you!" Farragut could not stand a shirker.

During the war with Spain Rodgers, then a captain, commanded the monitor Puritan of Rear Admiral Sampson's fleet. He became a rear admiral in March, 1899. Rear Admiral Rodgers recently returned from service in the Philippines, where he had command of the Asiatic squadron. He is a native of Maryland and is in his sixty-first year.

Proposed Electrical Laboratory.

An appropriation of $275,000 for a New York state electrical laboratory at Union College Schenectady, is recommended by a commission appointed to determine the necessity for such an institution. The laboratory is to supply information on questions of electrical science, and an official standard for electrical measuring instruments and apparatus, together with standards for electric wiring of buildings for the protection of municipalities and the general public. Germany has such an institution.

A Colorado Paul Revere. Leo L. Loebe, who styles himself "the Paul Revere of Colorado" is in Washington looking for a government position. He bases his claim to consideration of the fact that on Aug. 5 last, when a dam burst at Green Mountain Falls, Col., he rode at breakneck speed to Manitou on a mustang to warn the people of that place of the impending danger. He says he covered the distance—five miles—in seventeen and a half minutes.

Some Famous Mayors

Head of Municipalities Who Have Acquired National Prominence

WHILE public interest in the recent spring municipal elections was mainly of a local character, now that the votes have been counted several of the successful mayoralty candidates come in for a large share of attention, as much perhaps because of their personalities as of the peculiar conditions of the several contests and the best with which they were waged.

It is a peculiar coincidence that in the four cities in which the outcome was of more than local interest each of the successful candidates is the present head of the municipality. Carter H. Harrison of Chicago, Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, Julius Fleischmann of Cincinnati and Samuel M. Jones of Toledo were each elected mayor of their respective cities.

JULIUS FLEISCHMANN.

Cincinnati and Samuel M. Jones of Toledo were each elected mayor of their respective cities.

The victory of Julius Fleischmann over Melville E. Ingalls for the mayoralty of Cincinnati, it is said, was a presidential boomlet in the bud and perhaps starts another Mr. Ingalls, who is president of the Big Four railway, had the support of the Democrats and the Citizens' party. Mr. Fleischmann is the present mayor of Cincinnati, and his success may pave the way for greater things.

Both the Chicago and Cleveland campaigns were fought on similar lines—that is the question of the street road management and franchises was the main issue of the campaigns. The fight in Cleveland was the hottest in its history, for on it depended much for which Johnson and his supporters have been fighting for several years. The defeat of Johnson would have meant the end of the campaign for three cent fares for Cleveland, and on that issue the municipal battle was clearly and stubbornly fought. Mr. Johnson's election will have the effect of making him the strongest Democrat in Ohio and a senatorial and even a presidential possibility.

Mayor Johnson is a native of Kentucky, and up to the age of sixteen he went to school. Then family reverses compelled him to become a breadwinner, and he went to work in a Louisville rolling mill office as an errand boy. In 1876, when but twenty-two years old, he bought the Indianapolis street railway system with capital furnished by a wealthy relative. Profits paid for the road in a few years, and he sold it at an advance of $1,000,000. Since then his success has been phenomenal.

In 1879 Mr. Johnson went to Cleveland. He bought a dilapidated road, and soon it was the best equipped in the city. Subsequently he built a steel plant at Johnstown, Pa., for the manufacture of steel rails, and also established a steel plant at Lorain, O. Everything he undertook succeeded, and attended. The men in Jones' factory, which is run on the modern basis by which the men share in the benefits and profits of the concern, two or three years ago organized a brass band. This band is fully uniformed and equipped, numbers twenty-five pieces and is thoroughly well trained. In fact, it is one of the best bands in the city. It is called the Golden Rule band, the name being associated with Mayor Jones and his beliefs. This band was a feature at all the meetings.

Mayor Jones preaches Walt Whitman and the Bible, the Golden Rule, nonpartisanship and physical culture. A year or two ago he began a system of starving himself as part of his method of physical culture. Despite his fifty-seven years he is very active and prides himself on his agility. He lives about a mile from his office, and it is nothing unusual to see him start on a dead run from home, down through the crowded streets, and make the full mile at a keen gallop.

The day after the election Mayor Jones celebrated his victory by parading the streets at the head of his factory employees. The Golden Rule band accompanied the procession. All the men were on foot, and each carried a new broom. Stops were made at the city hall, the newspaper offices and other points of interest. At each stop the mayor mounted an elevation and started some rallying song. When speeches were called for, he talked of the equality of man and referred to his election as a victory for the people. Mayor Jones is a Welshman by birth, so that puts him out of the running as a presidential possibility. Thus while the hopes of some have been blighted the recent municipal elections have brightened the prospects of at least three of the victors for further political preferment.

Carter H. Harrison, who has just been elected mayor of Chicago for the fourth term, also had the opposition of the street railways to contend against. While the regular Democratic candidate, he had the support of those who believe in municipal ownership of traction companies or in compelling traction companies to pay a just percentage of receipts for use of the city streets.

Mayor Harrison is one of the most striking figures in public life in the west. Though still a young man—he is in his forty-third year—he has a large following of enthusiastic friends in Chicago and in the state of Illinois. He is the eldest son of the late Carter H. Harrison, who was also mayor of Chicago and served five terms in that office.

Mr. Harrison was first elected mayor of Chicago in 1897. He was again elected in 1899, his second term being won after a famous contest with the street railway interests. Two years ago he was again re-elected and now for the fourth time is triumphant. Mr. Harrison is also credited with having ambitions and, as they say of Mayor Johnson, has his eye on the White House.

Most picturesque and unique of all the mayors is Samuel M. Jones, who has for the fourth time been chosen chief magistrate of Toledo. "Golden Rule" Jones, as he is called, conducted one of the most pyrotechnic and sensational campaigns on record. Six years ago he was first elected as a Republican. Two years later he was defeated for re-nomination in the convention and thereupon ran as an independent. In the campaign that followed he received more votes than the Democratic and Republican candidates put together. Two years ago the Democrats made no nomination and Jones was again elected.

Since then the strongest political machine Toledo has ever known has been organized and put forth every effort to retire him from office. But once again Jones was triumphant.

When Jones announced his candidacy for the fourth time, not a newspaper in the city would print his proclamation as a matter of news and only one, a Democratic daily would accept it as advertising matter. The others refused to print it, even though paid at double rates, unless it should be scheduled as advertising.

Jones then entered upon the hottest kind of campaign. He spoke at several meetings every night preceding the election and all of them were largely Dogma.

In a public school in Sandusky one of the teachers in the primary grade gave the word "dogma" to her class as a basis for a sentence building exercise. As the class looked puzzled, the teacher repeated the word, putting the accent rather prominently on the second syllable. But the term seemed beyond the mental grasp of the children. None of them could produce anything. Time was called, and a wide-awake little girl snatched her fingers and read "Our dog ma has three little puppies."—Selected.

Secretary Cortelyou's Pompadour.

Secretary Cortelyou is one of the few remaining men in public life who affect the pompadour style of brushing the hair. Fifteen or eighteen years ago it seemed as if all mankind had the pompadour craze. When "Pompadour Jim" came on the stage every sport that was a sport wore his bristles rampant. The style is very becoming to Cortelyou. It enables him in serious reflection to run his fingers harrowlike over his head without disturbing his contour.
