MAKE ANOTHER SERIOUS BLUNDER

DETROIT JOURNAL ON STEARNS-HAVIN-HOLMES COMBINE.

Says He Shocked His Friends Two Years Ago

In speaking of the alleged deal to be made between J. S. Stearns for governor and T. J. Navin and Arthur Holmes to deliver him the Wayne county delegation in 1904 the Detroit Journal has the following to say editorially:

"But Stearns' campaign a year ago was conducted—against his wish, we hope—in a way shocking to his friends. It took largely the form of vilification of other candidates for the nomination. It was made up of threats to prove the unprovability of this or that Mr. Stearns thus alienated from his support a very respectable and influential Republican element. There would have been sympathy with him, of course, had he undertaken to clear any rascals from the party with charges that could be made good. But when he simply railed without producing the proof, he came down to the level of the ordinary street villian. We have recalled these facts only because they indicate that Mr. Stearns is capable of making another and no less serious political blunder, one we do not wish to see him make."

SUPERVISORS' PICNIC

Was a Great Success at Farmington Wednesday.

The village of Farmington was certainly a populous one Wednesday the occasion being the annual Oakland county Supervisors' picnic. Upwards of 3,000 people were present and there was no lack of attractions. Everything was there from oratory of statesmen, and would-be-to-the-35th and one more game—D. L. Davis of Pontiac, president of the society, presided and introduced the speakers. Ex-speaker Dean Warner was introduced as the father of Michigan's next governor, meaning the jolly secretary of state Mr. Warner, 82, is just 30 years of age and he was given a great ovation. Senator Burrows was the orator of the day and delivered a regular farmers' talk and told the strangers how they were the greatest aggregation of capital on the earth. Congressman S. W. Smith of Pontiac also tore off a half hour of oratory, and about a dozen supervisors told, for thirty minutes apiece, how they were prepared to make any speech.

Senator Alger was not present, but his secretary, John Perkins, was on hand to see that the farmers and politicians were properly jilted. David Meghally, collector of internal revenue, was also present, as were also nearly all the county officials from Pontiac.

Secretary of State Fred Warner entertained Senator Burrows, Congressman Smith, Messrs. Perkins, Meghally and some others during the afternoon and later took them for a drive about the pretty little village.

There may not have been any politics in the big gathering at all, but it certainly was a thoroughly Warner day.

The day's events closed with a hot ball game between Walk J. Lake and Pontiac, in which Pontiac won in the ninth inning by a score of 5 to 7.

GREAT BALL GAME

Geo. Yerkes' Aggregation Downed the Northvillians.

George Yerkes' aggregation of Detroit business men, eleven in number, came out here Friday afternoon and did up the Northville business men to the tune of 5 to 12. Dr. Noble of Detroit and Dr. Blanchard of this place did the umpire act. The local team gave the Detroiters a supper at the Park hotel at the close of the game.

There was a large attendance and there was a lot of fun. Hinkley and Ambler were the Northville batteries and Noble and Russell did the act for Detroit.

REUNION AT ED. FULLER'S

Some of Relatives Met for the First Time Sunday.

The home of Mr and Mrs Ed. Fuller, at the U. S. hatching, was the scene Sunday last of a most enjoyable surprise which resolved itself into a family reunion of more than ordinary note. The surprise was occasioned by the unexpected appearance in the morning of Ed. E. Large, city editor of the Daily Beacon-Record of Ashtabula, Ohio, who is a step son of Mrs. Josephine Carr and a half-brother of Mrs. Fuller and also of the latter's sister, Mrs. Grant Putman, of Williamston, who, with her husband and two children arrived at 1:00 p. m. to join the party, Mrs. Putman alone having been previously informed of her brother's intention to visit Northville. Although separated by but a few hundred miles, this was the first meeting of Mrs. Carr with her son in twenty years and the daughters had not seen their brother in nine years, during which time both had married and had families whom Mr. Large had never seen. Another interesting fact in connection with the family reunion was that the three brothers-in-law were strangers, neither having ever before seen either of the others. All the parties named enjoyed a big dinner at the Fuller home, after which they went to the home of Mrs. Carr's daughter, Mrs. Lon Farmer, where they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elliott, Mrs. Carr's parents, who, with Mr. and Mrs. Farmer helped to swell the family party and enjoyed a good visit until about 6:00 p. m. when Mr. Large left for Detroit and Mr. Putman for Williamston. Mrs. Putman and children remained with her relatives here until Wednesday.

DOG WOULDN'T STAY KILLED

THEN BOB THOMAS FINALLY CUT ITS HEAD OFF.

Matter Now Gets into Judge Webster's Court Tomorrow.

Myron Robbins has made complaint before Judge Webster against Robert Thomas for disturbing the peace and the case has been adjourned until tomorrow.

Robbins and Thomas are neighbors and Rob it appears killed Myron's dog which Rob claims was a menace to his peace and comfort and happiness. It was not so much that the dog met his death at his neighbor's hands that caused the wrath of Mr. Robbins to vent his way to the police court as the way his animal met its fate.

It is said that Rob stoned the dog to keep him from eating his chickens and that falling he seized a gun and shot a hole through him, but the dog had still another life, and then it is claimed he tapped the animal on the head with a club and still the dog refused to die. Then Bob's next move was to get an axe and then he hauled the dog out on the sidewalk and chopped its head off, 'tis said.

Then war was declared and the neighborhood was considerably aroused over the matter. It is claimed that blood still clings to the sidewalk and that the headless dog was a shocking sight to the women and children of the First avenue.

A jury will hear the case tomorrow in Judge Webster's court.

LUCKY PICKUP

Johnson & Stevens' "Marblegrit" Valued at $5,000.

Frank Fenn is working his string of trotters and pacers at the Pontiac state fair grounds where he will start some of them during next week.

The four-year-old stallion "Marblegrit" by Patron is showing a wonderful speed for the short period he has been in training. He is surely a remarkable horse and has had no trouble in showing a 2:30 clip already. His owners, Harley Johnson and Cal Stevens of this place, value him at $5,000.

Mrs. D. B. Wilcox Dead.

The sad news reaches us of the sudden death of Mrs. D. B. Wilcox of Plymouth, who passed away Friday morning of last week. The funeral occurred Sunday. Deceased was a sister of Mrs. E. K. Simonds of this place and had many friends here.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., AUG. 28, 1903.

A POPULAR PRELATE.

Mr. Thomas J. Conaty, Bishop of Los Angeles. Mr. James J. Conaty, Bishop of Los Angeles, was elevated to the episcopal throne a few years ago. He has become a popular figure in his diocese and one of the best known prelates of the Roman Catholic hierarchy of the United States. Bishop Conaty succeeded Rev. Dr. Keane as rector of the Catholic university at Washington in 1899, retaining that position until named for the see of Los Angeles. He was one of the organizing fathers of the Catholic Summer school at Mount St. Mary's, N. Y., and was president of the same in 1901. He was made a domestic prelate to the pope by the late Leo XIII. and has been often twice honored by the church. Two years ago he was consecrated titular Bishop of Samos by Cardinal Gibbons at Baltimore. This honor was in recognition of his labors in behalf of Catholic education. The title of Bishop of Samos, from which the title is derived, having been extinct for many generations. Bishop Conaty is a native of Ireland and is fifty-six years old. His parents were of good families and noted for their intellectual attainments. Shortly after his birth the family came to this country and established a home in Massachusetts. The future bishop was educated in Holy Cross college, Worcester, Mass., and St. Joseph's seminary, Troy, N. Y. After finishing his theological studies he returned to Worcester, finally becoming rector of the Church of the Sacred Heart, which was erected under his auspices. A lover of all things American Bishop Conaty has always endeavored to cultivate among his people a liking for good broad American citizenship. It is said that he has been a sympathizer with the cause of the church in not an unimportant way. On the occasion of the late pope's death and funeral he was one of the many who took a deep interest in the funeral and has shown a warm feeling for the hand of his birth. A strong temperance advocate, he was for two terms president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America. Mr. Conaty's success in the episcopal chair of Los Angeles is no more than was expected by his friends and associates.

Bath Temperatures. Remember that a cold bath is one from 50 to 70 degrees F.; tepid from 85 to 92 degrees, warm, from 92 to 98 degrees; hot, 98 to 109 degrees. In the case of vapor baths the warmest degree under ordinary circumstances is about 130 degrees.

Most Men Marry to be Respectable. Why do men marry? may be asked. Setting aside those cases where marriage is merely the price of possession, most men marry because they have decided to "settle down and be respectable." It adds dignity to have a household. There is a standing that can be obtained in no other manner. BACHELORHOOD IS A SORT OF VAGABONDAGE, AND THERE COMES A TIME WHEN IT IS DESIRABLE TO TERMINATE IT. AND SO A MAN SAYS TO HIMSELF, "IT IS TIME FOR ME TO MARRY." He is much like that character in Sterne's "Tristram Shandy" to whom his father said, "Take a wife." The son replied, "Yes, father, but whose wife shall I take?"

"UNION LABOR IS BADLY ADVISED AND IGNORANTLY LED"

By General HARRISON GRAY OTIS, U. S. V., Retired.

By far the worst phase of the labor problem lies in the fact that so called "ORGANIZED" LABOR IS SO OFTEN BADLY ADVISED AND IGNORANTLY LED. Too many of its leaders have shown in conspicuous instances an utter disregard of the lawful rights of that far larger body of workmen who are not up in the ranks of the labor leagues. They have shown themselves to be NOT TRUE FRIENDS OF LABOR, broadly speaking, but its narrow and deluded enemies. They have proved themselves to be blind, UNSAFE leaders. They have exhibited small knowledge of the true principles of industrial economics. By this course in promoting strikes and consequent idleness they seem to say to workmen: "Idleness is better for you than employment. Stop work and live off the others." SUCH ADVICE IS FOLLY AND MADNESS CONCENTRATED. THE MAN WHO ADVISES ANOTHER TO REFUSE EMPLOYMENT AND WAGES WHEN HE NEEDS THEM IS A BAD COUNSELOR. We oppose the impudent pretensions on the part of those who would establish a labor oligarchy and create an INSUFFERABLE MONOPOLY in a universal commodity. It is an unjust, indefensible, a destructive doctrine. Carried to its ultimate conclusion, it would undermine our republican system, sap the foundations of the government and substitute the uncontrolled will of the few for the lawful rule of the many, for true it is that the great body of labor in this country is unorganized, that it does not seek to organize and in the very nature of the case must remain unorganized. Even in the ranks of lauded labor are countless scores of men who are unwilling subjects and abide under an insufferable thralldom.

The right to labor is fundamental and inalienable. It antedates labor leagues and human laws. It is a PRE-EMINENT RIGHT of all American citizens and can never be taken away without first revolutionizing the government.

But there will be no revolution. This sacred right, vital to republican liberty, will be protected, defended and preserved by brave freemen who prize it, and ALL WHO DARE ASSAIL IT WILL BE FOILED IN THEIR WICKED ATTEMPT.

Labor strikes, boycotting and picketing, proscription and abuse of other workmen—all these, with their concomitant evils, are indefensible and dangerous, and when accompanied by violence they become conspiracy.

The government, though it may travel with leaden heel, CANNOT TOLERATE CONSPIRACY OR INSURRECTION. It moves, and must move, when the overt act has been committed.

In the last resort, when civic and industrial rights are denied and invaded, when the law is defied, when violence breaks forth, when all other measures have failed, then comes the ultimate resort, MILITARY FORCE, for the law must be enforced by whatever effort; the public peace must be preserved at whatever sacrifice; insurrection must be put down at whatever cost.

The government of the state and of the United States cannot and will not sit supine and see the edicts of their courts defied, their law trampled upon, private and public property destroyed or citizens hounded, murdered and maltreated. If such acts be permitted anarchy ensues.

BUT THERE WILL BE NO ANARCHY OURS IS A GOVERNMENT OF LAW AND IN ITS SYSTEM RESIDES THE POWER TO ENFORCE ITS DECREES.

PRISONS AS INCUBATORS OF CRIME

By CHARLTON T. LEWIS, President New York State Prison Association. THE purpose of preventing future crime dictates, first of all, the abolition of every traditional institution and practice which tends to produce criminals. There is no doubt that the criminal class consists mainly of THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN MADE CRIMINALS BY PRISON LIFE. There has been much improvement in the discipline of prisons, but prisons in general are still schools of crime. Apart from the associations which they furnish the unnatural life in confinement is weakening to manhood, and it is always a degradation to its subject. Moreover, the improvement has not extended in general to local jails. These are the class rooms from which the criminal class is chiefly recruited.

ANY THOROUGH REFORM OF PENAL LAW, THEREFORE, MUST CONTEMPLATE AN IMMENSE REDUCTION IN THE USE MADE OF PRISONS AND JAILS.

If a rational rule were formulated on the subject it would be: Put no man in prison unless his confinement is necessary to the safety of the community. Keep him there ONLY SO LONG AS THIS NECESSITY CONTINUES.

MOST MEN MARRY TO BE RESPECTABLE

By Mrs. EDWIN KNOWLES, Former President of Women's Professional League. WHY do men marry? may be asked. Setting aside those cases where marriage is merely the price of possession, most men marry because they have decided to "settle down and be respectable." It adds dignity to have a household. There is a standing that can be obtained in no other manner. BACHELORHOOD IS A SORT OF VAGABONDAGE, AND THERE COMES A TIME WHEN IT IS DESIRABLE TO TERMINATE IT. AND SO A MAN SAYS TO HIMSELF, "IT IS TIME FOR ME TO MARRY." He is much like that character in Sterne's "Tristram Shandy" to whom his father said, "Take a wife." MOTOR CAR SPEEDWAY.

How the 100 Mile Track on Long Island Will Be Built. General Ror Stone, who, backed by the leading automobile manufacturers and clubs of America, has developed an elaborate plan for an automobile speedway on Long Island is a veteran of two wars and for several years was the head of the good roads bureau in the agricultural department. General Stone believes that special roads for the use of automobiles are necessary and that without them the sport and industry can never attain proper development. The speedway as planned by General Stone will start from the eastern end of the Black-well's island bridge, in Long Island City, the road at this end being sunken and inclosed so as to allow full speed from the outset. It will continue in an easterly direction, keeping the middle line of the island until Montauk Point, about 113 miles away, is reached.

This location, it is believed, will secure a perfect alignment, easy grades and cheap construction, while it would serve for branching roads north and south should the need for them arise. According to calculations the system would be more than self supporting.

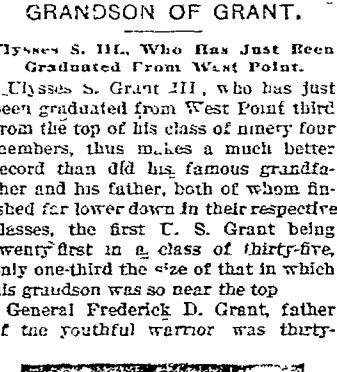

The motorway as planned will be constructed with a double track of steel plates, each track about five feet between centers, with ten feet space between the tracks, and the same out side making the whole roadway forty feet wide. Outside this will be hedges and wire netting fence to keep out animals and beyond the fence a row of trees on each side.

All highways are to be carried over the motorway by raising them five feet and sinking the motorway to the same extent. The entrance to the speedway will be by gates from the inner fast highway, and these will be toll-gates, for all who use it must pay for the privilege. Between midnight and morning the road will be open to freight motors for farm and garden service entering New York city. When it is desired to use the speedway for races all cars but the contestants will be excluded. The cost of the road will be about $15,000 per mile.

General Stone is an old soldier and won honor as the leader of the famous brigade of Pennsylvania Bucklebs which he raised at Gettysburg. He was wounded and lay two days on the field. During the Spanish war he led the scouts in Porto Rico.

GRANDSON OF GRANT.

Ulysses S. III, Who Has Just Been Graduated From West Point. Ulysses S. Grant III, who has just been graduated from West Point third from the top of his class of ninety four members, thus makes a much better record than did his famous grandfather and his father, both of whom finished far lower down in their respective classes, the first U. S. Grant being twenty-first in a class of thirty-five, only one-third the size of that in which his grandson was so near the top. General Frederick D. Grant, father of the youthful warrior was thirty-fourth in his class. By reason of his high standing young Grant receives the usual coveted appointment to the engineering corps. When General U. S. Grant was on his deathbed he addressed a letter to the president of the United States asking for the appointment of his namesake and grandson to the United States Military academy. This application was indorsed two years later by General W. T. Sherman and four years ago was presented to President McKinley, who immediately made the appointment. Young Grant has been a diligent student, as his record shows, and was one of the most popular members of his class. He is twenty-one years old.

PRIEST TRIED DROWNING.
Fr. Reilly, of Adrian, Jumped Into a Creek.

Adrian, Mich., Aug. 26.—Rev. Fr. Charles O. Reilly, spiritual director of St. Joseph's academy, was found in the water of an artificial pond, formed in a creek running through Oakwood cemetery Tuesday morning. He was unconscious, and since resuscitation has been unable to tell how he came to be in a drowning condition. The impressions is that the respected priest attempted to commit suicide.

It has been his custom to walk through the cemetery mornings. The entrance to the cemetery is made by a bridge over the creek. The strongest evidence of a suicidal attempt is that the priest's case was found upon the bridge rail, as if left there when he declared to enter the water.

Sexton Willoughby, of the cemetery, and O. E. Church, who lives near by, rescued Dr. Reilly.

Fr. Reilly was in no condition to explain his mishap, but to the query put to him by the sheriff, who said "You must have jumped," he replied, "Yes, I guess I did."

Dr. Reilly was for some time been in poor health, and in consequence in poor spirits.

Gallant Eleventh in Reunion.
Quincy, Mich., Aug. 26.—The thirty-eighth annual reunion of the Eleventh Michigan Infantry opened here Tuesday with about seventy present. Each of the ten companies is represented. Headed by the famous Simmons' martial band, a parade was given. The principal address was delivered by Captain F. D. Newberry, of Coldwater. His talk was principally of army reminiscences of the Cuban and Philippine wars he being a participant in both, as well as the civil war.

Color and Age No Bar.
Prescott, Mich., Aug. 26.—Thomas Daugherty, of Reno, a well-to-do widower of 68 years, has just been united in marriage to a colored girl of 18. The bride was a waitress on a local restaurant, and enjoys an excellent reputation for honesty and industry. That she was well thought of by her employers is attested by their gift to her, as a wedding present of a gold watch.

New Rural Routes.
Washington, Aug. 26.—Rural free delivery established to commence Oct. 1. Muskogee, Muskogee county, additional service routes 1 and 5, length of routes, 50 1/2 miles, population served, 1,445. New Lothrop, Spawnee county, additional carrier routes 3 and 4, length of routes, 45 miles, population served, 1,022. Woodland, Barry county, additional service route 2, length of route, 21 miles, population served, 476.

Painted His Stock.
Chobogon, Mich., Aug. 26.—Thomas Moogey, a prominent farmer, has been adjudged insane. His insanity first attracted attention last week, when he painted the hanks of his horses and cows to keep the flies off. As he was being taken to jail he wanted to stop so it would match the other. Officers will take him to Traverse City.

Peddler Dead in His Wagon.
Mason, Mich., Aug. 26.—A peddler, probably Frank Lehman, of Toleag, was found dead in his old democrat wagon by the side of a road three miles west of town Tuesday morning. The officers are not positive as to his identity.

Leg Cut Off by Engine.
Jackson, Mich., Aug. 26.—William Seid, 20 years of age, apprentice to the trade of machinist at the Michigan Central shops, was run over by a switch engine in the yards and a leg severed. He started to board the engine to ride home when the accident happened.

Love Led to Tragedy.
Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 26.—Abee Sample, of this city, killed herself Tuesday morning by firing two bullets into her breast. Despondency over love affairs is responsible. She became prominent here two years ago in connection with the murder of Mrs. David Leslie by Miss Daisy Carlton, being an intimate friend of the latter girl and was with her when Mrs. Leslie was killed.

Heat Prostrated Many.
Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 26.—The hot wave which swept over central Illinois resulted in a number of prostrations. William Campher, crazed by the heat had to be placed in a straight jacket. J. W. Higgins, a Chicago & Alton engineer was overcome by heat at Jacksonville while on his locomotive and is in a critical condition.

Drowned Her Child.
Branard, Minn., Aug. 26.—The police have arrested Mrs. Albert Williams, John Berrig and George Dill on the charge of murdering Mrs. Williams' 3-year-old daughter. Mrs. Williams admitted to the chief of police that Berrig had advised her to drown the child, as it was half-witted and worthless. The river was dragged and the body of the child found.

Ate Toadstools.
La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 26.—As a result of eating of mushrooms picked in their yard the entire family of six of B. L. Schuler of this city, and a guest, Mrs. A. Clark, of Chicago, are seriously ill with ptomaine poisoning. It is thought that toadstools were mixed with the mushrooms.

Not a Luxury.

From the Salem, Oregon, Sentinel

About twenty years ago persons who were privileged to hear Edison's first crude phonograph thought it a wonderful thing, but little did they dream that these machines in improved and perfected form would within a few years be available to every home. Then the records were made on tin foil and it was impossible to preserve them. Later the recording was done on wax and by delicate handing the records were good for considerable service. Today the records are perfect, being molded from hard wax. With proper handling they will last for years. The Columbia Phonograph Co. is turning out first class graphophones so cheap that no family can afford to do without the pleasure and satisfaction of owning one. The writer has had one in his family three years and looks upon it now as a necessity rather than a luxury.

Both are just the sort you'd choose for your boy to wear at school and the last you'd look for under price. Such reductions mean much to every mother, in fact they make buying elsewhere costly for them.

Where else but at Traver's is the Best assured? Where else are you as certain of satisfaction as you are at this store? It's the same now when prices are reduced as it is at any other time—your money will be returned if you are not suited. Just remember that prices are easy to quote, but it's quality that tells the tale. Mail orders bring satisfaction we guarantee that.

The City in Brief.

School commences Monday. The W. R. C. resumed its regular meetings Wednesday evening. Mrs. J. W. Fuller is suffering from the effects of a slight paralytic stroke since Monday. Programs for the state gun shoot have been issued from the Record office this week. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fry will soon be settled in their new home on South Center street. Workmen are preparing the Quain residence for occupancy by the kindergarten and first grade. The M. E. Sunday-school had a great time at Orchard lake Wednesday. They went by special D. T. electric car. Mrs. Claude Burgess entertained a number of young ladies Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Myra Clark of Helena, Mont. L. V. Carpenter has so far recovered from his recent illness as to be able to get about the streets again with the aid of a cane and a wheel chair to bring him down town. Milton Burrows is driving a fine roadster which he purchased in Detroit last Saturday. Milt says he is not speedy, but don't try to drive by him if you can't go a 25 clip.

Letters for the following persons are advertised at the postoffice this week:
Mr. John Deam
Mrs. S. H. Crumb
Mr. Albert Moss

That was a pleasant little "surprise" that a few friends gave Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Wednesday evening in honor of their out-of-town guests. If not an entire, or a "really and truly" surprise, it was none the less appreciated.

After two years of faithful service as extra conductor on the Detroit United, Charlie Blackburn has been given a regular run, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Harry Weaver, who quits to go into the undertaking business at Farmington.

A. W. Olde was one of the spectators of the terrible death of the little girl who was ground to death under a street car on Grand River avenue in Detroit Wednesday afternoon. Little Goldie Whitehead, formerly of this place, was with the unfortunate victim when the accident occurred.

The Loyal Temperance Legion will hold its first meeting with Mrs. Van Zile Tuesday evening, Sept. 1, from 8 to 9:30 o'clock. A fine program is in preparation. The lesson helps are received and first lesson will be taken up that evening. Every member is urged to be present. Invite your friends.

Don't you wish you had a grandmother? Yesterday being Miss Lida Richardson's eighteenth birthday, Mrs. Edward Whitaker took dinner with her daughter, Mrs. T. G. Richardson, and as Mrs. Whitaker wished to see dinner plates on the table at their proper places, upside down, the table was so set, and from now on Miss Lida will be peering under every plate she chances to see. Upon lifting her plate on this occasion she uncovered a nest roll of bills containing one hundred dollars as a birthday present from her grandmother Whitaker. Miss Lida ate more supper than she did dinner.

DUNHAM MADE HAPPY.

Pension Department Does Worthy Act for Him.

David Dunham is about the happiest man in Northville today. Mr. Neal took his pension case up personally with the authorities at Washington ten days ago and yesterday he was advised by the department that Mr. Dunham's claim had been readjusted and that he would now receive $12 per month. David will probably also get some back pension.

The case is an exceptionally worthy one, but for some unaccountable reason has been hanging fire for some six years despite the efforts of congressmen and pension attorneys and in the meantime Mr. Dunham has in a measure been obliged to depend upon charity for a portion of his existence because of his disability to work.

The Journal's Question

The Detroit Journal wants to know Mr. Warner's position on primary reform. Possibly the Journal doesn't know that legislators pass laws and the governor has only to sign or veto them. The Record will guarantee that Mr. Warner, or any other man elected governor, would sign any primary bill the legislature might pass. If the newspapers will see to it that a majority of each house of the legislature is pledged to primary reform then there will be no trouble so far as the governor is concerned. The trouble is with the legislature. If trouble there be—for Governor Bliss has signed every primary that has come before him.

Made a Serious Charge

Maude Worvie of Northville township, a young lady of nineteen, made complaint before Justice Valentine last Monday against Marlon Angle, aged twenty-one, also of Northville township, the charge preferred being bastardy. Angle was arrested the same day by Deputy Springer and on being brought into court pleaded not guilty. His examination was placed for Thursday the 20th, his father going on a bond for his appearance. Later the case was settled out of court and the charge withdrawn. Plymouth Mail.

WHY SO TIRED?

Profit by the Experience of a Northville Citizen.

That constant tired feeling, tells of kidneys over-worked. So does backache and many other ills. There is one cure for every kidney ail, for backache, urinary disorders, diabetes. Let a Northville citizen tell you.

Mrs. Henry Garthel says, "I suffered for a long time from pain in the back and loins sometimes exceedingly severe. At different times I tried medicines which were recommended to me, but got little or no benefit from them. Noticing Doan's Kidney Pills endorsed by so many people I concluded to try them and got a box at Murdock Bros. drug store. They turned out exactly as represented. They gave me perfect relief in a very short time. I cannot express my high appreciation of Doan's Kidney Pills.

Price 50c per box. For sale by all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name—Doan—and take no substitute.

Auto With a Searchlight.

An automobile soon lately had mounted on its turtle back, forward, a sizable searchlight, useful, presumably, for revealing the nature of country roads for two or three hundred yards ahead, on straight and level stretches.

"EL MOCHO," DIPLOMAT.

Famous Venezuelan Fighter Now Minister to the United States. General Jose Manuel Hernandez, who, as minister plenipotentiary, will re-establish the Venezuelan legation at Washington, is called by his countrymen "El Mocho" ("The Malmed"). The nickname is a term of endearment and indicates the popularity of the battle-scarred veteran, who in thirty-three years has fought in over a dozen rebellions, sometimes for, sometimes against the government. It was in one of these rebellions, in a battle at Ciudad Bolivar, that one of his fingers and part of another of the right hand were shot away; hence the nickname. General Hernandez is of Spanish parentage and when a boy was apprenticed to a carpenter, but he left that vocation for a military career. He was first under fire in 1868, when he took part in the revolution which overthrew General Falcon. He fought against Garmen Blanco and was sent several times to prison.

Some years later he was in the United States, where he remained, studying and traveling, until 1896. Return to Venezuela he became in 1897 the candidate of the Conservative party for president. The government declared his opponent, Andrade, elected. Hernandez appealed to the supreme court and was thrown into prison by Crespo. He was released in February, 1898, and in ten days had raised an army and led a revolt against Crespo, who was slain in battle.

In October 1899, General Hernandez started a revolt against General Castro. After many battles he was defeated and imprisoned. He was in and out of prison several times until Dec. 29, 1902, when he was released upon his declaration of a desire to go to his country in the transatlantic which treaty with England and Germany. Appointment of this nature of the old, a prior and revolutionist was shown by his appointment as minister to the United States.

LORENZO PEROSI.

The talented priest-composer discovered by Plus X.

Among the notable deeds of Pope Plus X was his discovery some years ago of a rare musical genius among the priests of Venice. Lorenzo Perosi sprang into fame in 1899 and was hailed as "the Wagner of church music." His "Resurrection of Christ," the fourth of his oratorios, was heard at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York in 1900 and had already delighted the critic audiences of the continent. Perosi was born at Fontana in 1872. He inherited musical talent and as a youth won distinction as a pianist, organist and composer. His own prefer-

LOTTS OF WORK FOR IDLE HANDS.

Lead and urgent are the calls from western farms and orchards for scores of thousands of wage earners for the harvesting of the crops and the garnering of the fruits. But too many idlers, tramps and beggars in our cities, and in the country regions also, turn deaf ears to such appeals and refuse tempting opportunities to earn honest and comfortable livings. The vagrant spirit, the "dead beat" desire to get along without working, is too conspicuous everywhere—New York Tribune.

DISENTERY CURED WITHOUT THE AID OF A DOCTOR.

I am just up from a hard shell of the "flux" (dysentery) says Mr. J. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Birmingham, Penn. I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without taking a doctor. I consider it the best colic medicine in the world. There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for to do so is to prescribe a cure that will do little or nothing. Objection made during the heated season. Send for free sample. SOMEWHAT INCONGRUOUS.

Felix Joe Bennett, the restaurant man who once ran a place in Chicago and who now operates a number of eating houses in New York, is going to take down his "Watch Your Hat" signs. All the biblical quotations will remain, but since the supreme court decision relieves the proprietors from responsibility he is going to yield the point which has subjected him to so much good-natured rebuke. Many Chicagoans will remember the "Holy Joe" signs. One of them reads, "Trust in the Lord and be of good cheer," while directly underneath appeared another "Watch your hat."—Chicago Chronicle.

The cession of all that part of Graustark lying north of Edelweiss, including fourteen towns, all of our mines and our most productive farming and grazing lands. In that event Graustark will be no larger than that of the good sized farms in your western country. There will be nothing left for her royal highness to rule save a tract so small that the word principality will be a travesty and a jest—this city and twenty-five miles to the south, a strip about 150 miles long. Think of it! Twenty-five by 150 miles, and yet called a principality! Once the proudest and most prosperous state in the east, considering its size, reduced to that! Ah, gentlemen—gentlemen, I cannot think of it without tearing out a heart string and suffering such pains as mortal man has never endured. I lived in Graustark's days of wealth, power and supremacy. God has condemned me to live in the days of her dependency, weakness and poverty. Let us talk no more of this unpleasant subject."

"Will your excellency, since it is distasteful to you, I hope, however, you will permit me to ask how much you are short of the amount," said Lorry, considerably, yet curiously.

"Our minister of finance, Gaspon, will be able to produce 15,000,000 gavyos at the stated time, far from enough. This amount has been sucked from the people from excessive levy and has been hoarded for the dreaded day. Try as we would, it has been impossible to raise the full amount. The people have been bled and have responded nobly, sacrificing everything to meet the treaty terms honorably, but the strain has been too great. Our army has cost us large sums. We have strengthened our defenses and could, should we go to war, defeat Axphain. But we have our treaty to honor. We could not take up arms to save ourselves from that honest lord."

"Our levies have barely brought the amount necessary to maintain an army large enough to inspire respect among those who are ready to leap upon us the instant we show the least sign of distress. They are about us powers that have held us from year with us simply because we have availed with our show of force. It has been our safeguard, and there is not a citizen of Graustark who objects to the manner in which state affairs are conducted. They know that our army is an economy at any price. Until last spring we were confident that we could raise the full amount due Axphain, but the people in the rural districts were unable to meet the levies on account of the panic that came at a most unfortunate time. That is why we were hurried home from your country, Mr. Lorry. Gaspon had cabled the princess that affairs were in a hopeless condition, begging her to come home and do what she could in a final appeal to the people, knowing the love they had for her. She came and has seen these loyal subjects offer their lives for her and for Graustark, but utterly unable to give what they have not—money. She asked them if she should disband the army, and there was a negative vote from one end of the land to the other. Then the army agreed to serve on half pay until all was tided over. Public officers are giving their services free, and many of our wealthy people have advanced loans on bonds, worthless as they may seem, and still we have not the required amount."

"Cannot the loan be extended a few years?" asked Lorry, angry with the ruler in the north taking the woes of Graustark as much to heart as if they were his own.

"Not one day! Not in London, Paris nor Berlin."

Lorry lay back and allowed Anguish to lead the conversation into other channels. The count remained for half an hour, saying as he left that the princess and his wife had expressed a desire to be remembered to their guests.

"Her royal highness spent the evening with the ministers of finance and war, and her poor head, I doubt not, is reeking from the effects of the consultation. These are weighty matters for a woman to have on her hands," solemnly stated the count, pausing for an instant at the door of the apartment.

As he had closed it the Americans looked long and thoughtfully at each other each feeling a respect for the grim old gentleman that they had never felt for man before.

CHAPTER XIII UNDER MOON AND MONASTERY.

FOR TWO DAYS Lorry lived through intermittent stages of delight and despondency. His recovery from the effects of the blow administered by Danox was naturally rapid, his strong young constitution coming to the rescue bravely. He saw much of the princess, more of the Countess Dagmar, and made the acquaintance of many lords and ladies for whom he cared but little except when they chose to talk of their girlish ruler. The atmosphere of the castle was laden with a depression that could not be overcome by an assimilated gaiety.

The princess could not hide the trouble that had sprung up in her eyes. Her laugh, her gay conversation, her rare composure and gentle hauteur were powerless to drive away the haunted, worried gleam in those expressive eyes or blue. Lorry had it on his tongue's end a dozen times during the next day or so after the count's narrative to question her about the condition of affairs as they appeared to her.

The Countess Dagmar, when not monopolized by the very progressive or aggressive Anguish, unfolded to Lorry certain pages in the personal history of the princess, and he, of course, encouraged her confidential humor, although there was nothing encouraging in it for him.

Down by the great fountain, while the soldiers were on parade, the fair but volatile countess unfolded to Lorry a story that wrenched his heart so savagely that anger, resentment, helplessness and love oozed forth and enveloped him in a multitude of emotions that would not disperse.

"She will not mind my telling you, because she considers you the very best of men, Mr. Lorry," said the countess, who had learned her English under the Princess Yette's tutor.

It seems, according to the very truthful account given by the lady, that the princess had it in her power to save Graustark from disgrace and practical destruction. The Prince of Axphain's son, Lorenz, was deeply enamored of her, infatuated by her marvelous beauty and accomplishments. He had persuaded his father to consider a matrimonial alliance with her to be one of great value to Axphain. The old prince, therefore, some months before the arrival of the Americans in Graustark sent to the princess a substitute ultimatum, couched in terms so polite and conciliatory that there could be no mistaking his sincerity. He agreed to give Graustark a new lease of life, as it were, by extending the fifteen years or, in other words, to grant the conquered an additional ten years in which to pay off the obligations imposed by the treaty. He furthermore offered a considerable reduction in the rate of interest for the next ten years. But he had a condition attached to this good and gracious proposition—the marriage of Graustark's sovereign, his ambassador set forth the advantages of such an alliance, and departed with a message that the matter should have most serious consideration.

The old prince's proposition was a blow to the princess, who was placed in a trying position. By sacrificing herself she could save her country, but in so doing her life was to be plunged into interminable darkness. She did not love nor did she respect Lorenz, who was not favorably supplied with civilized intelligence.

The proposition was laid before the cabinet and the nobility by the princess "Cannot the loan be extended a few years?"

herself, who said that she would be guided by any decision they might reach. The counselors to a man refused to sacrifice their girlish ruler, and the people vociferously ratified the resolution. But the princess would not allow them to send an answer to Axphain until she could see a way clear to save her people in some other manner. An embassy was sent to the Prince of Dawsbergen. His domain touched Graustark on the south, and he ruled a wild, turbulent class of mountaineers and herdsmen. This embassy sought to secure an indorsement of the loan from Prince Gabriel sufficient to meet the coming crisis. Gabriel, himself smitten by the charms of the princess, once offered himself in marriage, agreeing to advance, in case she accepted him, 20,000,000 gavyos at a rather high rate of interest for fifteen years. His love for her was so great that he would pawn the entire principality for an answer that would make him the happiest man on earth. Now, the troubled princess abhorred Gabriel. Of the two, Lorenz was much to be preferred. Gabriel flew into a rage upon the receipt of this rebuff and openly avowed his intention to make her suffer. His infatuation became a mania, and up to the very day on which the countess told the story he persisted in his appeals to the princess. In person he had gone to her to plead his guilt on his knees, groveling at her feet. He went so far as to exclaim madly in the presence of the alarmed but relentless object of his love that he would win her or turn the whole earth into everything unpleasant. So it was that the Princess of Graustark, erstwhile Miss Guggenlocker, was being dragged through the most unhappy affairs that ever beset a sovereign. Within a month she was to fly away five-thirds of her domain, transforming multitudes of her beloved and loving people into subjects of the hated Axphain or to sell herself, body and soul, to a loathsome bidder in the guise of a sutor, and with all this confronting her, she had come to the realization of a truth so sad and distracting that it was breaking her tortured heart. She was in love, but with no royal prince! Of this, however, the countess knew nothing, so Lorry had one great secret to cherish alone.

"Has she chosen the course she will pursue?" asked Lorry as the countess concluded her story. His face was turned away.

"She cannot decide. We have wept together over this dreadful, this horrible thing. You do not know what it means to all of us, Mr. Lorry. We love her, and there is not one in our land who would sacrifice her to save this territory. As for Gabriel, Graustark would kill her before she should go to him. Still she cannot let herself sacrifice those northern subjects when by a single act she can save them. You see, the princess has not forgotten that her father brought this war upon the people, and she feels it her duty to pay the penalty of his error, whatever the cost."

"Is there no other to whom she can turn—no other course?" asked Lorry.

"There is none who would assist us, bankrupt as we are. There is a question I want to ask, Mr. Lorry. Please look at me. Do not stare at the fountain all the time. Why have you come to Edelweiss?" She asked the question so boldly that his startled embarrassment was an unspoken confession. He called himself and hesitated long before answering, weighing his reply. She sat close beside him, her clear gray eyes reading him like a book.

"I came to see a Miss Guggenlocker," he answered at last.

"For what purpose? There must have been an urgent cause to bring you so far. You are not an American banker?"

"I had intended to ask her to be my wife," he said, knowing that secrecy was useless and seeing a faint hope.

"You did not find Miss Guggenlocker?"

"No, I have not found her."

"And are you going home disappointed, Mr. Lorry, because she is not here?"

"I leave the answer to your tender imagination."

There was a long pause.

"May I ask when you expect to leave Graustark?" she asked somewhat timidly.

"Why do you wish to know?" he asked in turn.

"Because I know how hopeless your quest has been. You have found Miss Guggenlocker, but she is held behind a wall so strong and impenetrable that you cannot reach her with the question you came to ask. You have come to that wall, and now you must turn back. I have asked how long."

"Not until your princess bids me take up my load and go. You see, my lady, I love to sit beneath the shadow of the wall you describe. It will require a royal edict to compel me to abandon my position."

"You cannot expect the princess to drive you from her country, you who have done so much for her. You must go, Mr. Lorry, without her bidding."

"Yes, for your presence outside that wall may make the imprisonment all the more insupportable for the one your love cannot reach. Do you understand me?"

"Has the one behind the wall instructed you to say this to me?" he asked incredulously.

"She has not. I do not know her heart, but I am a woman and have a woman's foresight. If you wish to be kind and good to her, go."

"I cannot," he exclaimed, his pent feelings bursting forth. "I cannot go."

"You will not be so selfish and so cruel as to increase the horror of the wreck that is sure to come," she said, drawing back.

"You know, countess, of the life-saving crews who draw from the wrecks of ships lives that were hopelessly lost. There is to be a wreck here. Is there to be a life saver? When the night is darkest, the sea wildest, when hope is gone, is not that the time when rescue is most precious? Tell me, you who know all there is of this approaching disaster?"

"I cannot command you to leave Edelweiss. I can only tell you that you will have something to answer for if you stay," said the countess.

"Will you help me if I show to you that I can reach the wreck and save the one who clings to it despairingly?" he asked, smiling, suddenly calm and confident.

"Willingly, for I love the one who is going down in the sea. I have spoken to you seriously, though, and I trust you will not misunderstand me. I like you and I like Mr. Anguish. You could stay here forever so far as I am concerned."

nothing to indicate that she remembered the hour spent beside his couch a day or so before; he had uttered none of the words that struggled to rush from his lips—the questions, the pleadings, the vows. Where was she now? Not in that gay crowd below, for he had scanned every figure with the hawk's eye, cloaked again, no doubt, with her ministers, wearying her tired brain, her brave heart into fatigue without rest.

Her court still trembled with the excitement of the daring attempt of the abductors and their swift punishment. Functionaries flocked to Edelweiss to inquire after the welfare of the princess, and indignation was at the highest pitch. There were theories innumerable as to the identity of the arch conspirator. Baron Dangloss was at sea completely. He cursed himself and everybody else for the hasty and ill timed execution of the hirelings. It was quite evident that the buzzing wonder and intense feeling of the people had for the moment driven out all thought of the coming day of judgment and its bitter atonement for all Graustark. Today the castle was full of the nobility, drawn to its walls by the news that had startled them beyond all expression. The police were at work, the military trembled with rage, the people clamored for the apprehension of the man who had been the instigator of this audacity. The general belief was that some brigand chief from the south had planned the great theft for the purpose of securing a fabulous ransom. Grenfall Lorry had an astonishing theory in his mind, and the more he thought it over the more firmly it was imbedded.

The warm, blue coils from the cigar waited away into the night, carrying with them a myriad of tangled thoughts of her, of Axphain, of the abductor, of himself, of everything. A light step on the stone floor of the shadowy balcony attracted his attention. He turned his head and saw the Princess Yette. She was walking slowly toward the balustrade, not aware of his presence. There was no covering for the dark hair, no wrap about the white shoulders. She wore an exquisite gown of white, shimmering with the reflections from the moon that scaled the mountain top. She stood at the balustrade, her hands clasping a bouquet of red roses, her chin lifted, her eyes gazing toward the mountain's crest, the prettiest picture he had ever seen. The strange dizziness of love overpowered him. How long he reveled in the glory of the picture he knew not, for it was as if he looked from a dream. At last he saw her look down upon the roses, lift them slowly and drop them over the rail. They fell to the ground below. He thought he understood—the gift of a prince dispensed.

They were not twenty feet apart. He advanced to her side, his hat in one hand, his stick—the one that felled the Viennese—trembling by the other.

"I did not know you were here," she exclaimed in half-frightened amazement. "I left my ladies inside."

He was standing beside her looking down into the eyes.

"And I am richer because of your ignorance," he said softly. "I have seen a picture that shall never leave my memory—never! Its beauty enthralled, enraptured. Then I saw the drama of the roses. Ah, your highness, the crown is not always a mask."

"The roses were—were of no consequence," she faltered.

"I have heard how you stand between two suitors and that wretched treaty. My heart has ached to tell you how I pity you."

"It is not pity I need but courage. My will will aid me in my duty, Mr. Lorry. It stands plainly before me, this duty, but I have not the courage to take it up and place it about my neck forever."

"You do not cannot love this Lorenz," he asked.

"Love him?" she cried. "Ah, I forget! You do not know him. Yet I shall doubtless be his wife. There was an eternity of despair in that low, steady voice."

"You shall not! I swear you shall not!"

"Oh, he is a prince! I must accept the offer that means salvation to Graustark. Why do you make it harder with torture which you think is kindness? Listen to me. Next week I am to give my answer. He will be here in this castle. My father brought this calamity upon Graustark, I must hit it from the people. What has my happiness to do with it?"

Her sudden strength silenced him, crushed him with the real awakening of helplessness. He stood beside her, looking up at the cold, monastery, strangely conscious that she was gazing toward the same dizzy height.

"It looks so peaceful up there," she said at last.

"But so cold and cheerless," he added drearily. There was another long silence in which two hearts communed through the medium of that faraway sentinel. "They have not discovered a clue to the chief abductor. Love me? He asked in an effort to return to his proper subject."

"Baron Dangloss believes he has a clew—a meager and unsatisfactory one. He admits—and today sent officers to Gantoo's to investigate the actions of a strange man who was there last week—a man who styled himself the Count of Arabazon and who claimed to be of Vienna. Some Austrians had been hunting stags and bears in the north, however, and it is possible he is one of them." She spoke slowly, her eyes still bent on the home of the monks.

"Your highness, I have a theory, a bold and perhaps a criminal theory but you will allow me to tell you why I am possessed of it. I am aware that there is a Prince Gabriel. It is my opinion that no Viennese is guilty, nor are the brigands to be accused of this masterpiece in crime. Have you thought how far a man may go to obtain his heart's desire?"

She looked at him instantly, her eyes wide with growing comprehension, the solution to the mystery darting into her mind like a flash.

"You mean"—she began stopping as if afraid to voice the suspicion.

"That Prince Gabriel is the man who bought your guards and hired Geddos and Ostrom to carry you to the place where he could own you, whether you would or no," said Lorry.

"But he could never have forced me to marry him, and I should sooner or later have exposed him," she whispered argumentatively. "He could not expect me to be silent and submit to a marriage under such circumstances. He knows that I would denounce him even at the altar."

The prettiest picture he had ever seen.

"You do not appreciate my estimate of that gentleman."

"What is to become of me?" she almost sobbed in an anguish of fear. "I see now—I see plainly! It was Gabriel and he would have done as you say. A shudder ran through her figure, and he tenderly whispered in her ear.

"The danger is past. He can do no more, your highness. Were I positive that he is the man—and I believe he is—I would hunt him down this night."

Her eyes closed, happily under his gaze, her hand dropped timidly from his arm, and a sweet sense of security filled her soul.

"I am not afraid," she murmured. "Because I am here?" he asked bending nearer.

"Because God can bless with the same hand that punishes," she answered emphatically, lifting her lashes again and looking into his eyes with a love at last unmasked. "He gives me a man to love and denies me happiness. He makes of me a woman, but he does not unmake me a princess. Through you he thwarts a villain, through you he crushes the innocent. More than ever, I thank you for coming into my life. You, and you alone guided by the God who loves and dispises me, saved me from Gabriel."

"I only ask"—he began eagerly, but she interrupted.

"You should not ask anything, for I have said I cannot pay. I owe you all I have, but cannot pay the debt."

"I shall not let you forget," he murmured.

"Tomorrow if you live, I will take you over the castle and let you see the squalor in which I exist—my throne-room, my chapel, my banquet hall, my ballroom, my conservatory, my apothecary. You may say it is wealth but I shall call it poverty," she said.

"Tomorrow, if you will be so kind."

"Perhaps I may be poorer after I have saved Graustark," she said.

"I would to God I could save you from that!" he said.

"I would to God you could," she said. Her manner changed suddenly. She laughed gayly, turned a bright face to him. "I hear your friends are out there in the darkness. It is delightfully infectious."

CHAPTER XIV
THE EPISODE OF THE THRONEROOM.

THIS is the throneroom. Alode! The Princess Yette paused before two massive doors. It was the next afternoon, and she had already shown him the palace of a queen, the lover of a pauper!

"Through the afternoon not one word other than those which might have passed between good friends escaped the lips of either. He was all interest, she all consciousness. Alode, the sturdy guard, swung open the doors, drew the curtain and stood aside for them to pass. Into the quiet hall she led him, a princess in a gown of gray, a souter in tweeds. Inside the doors he paused.

"And I thought you were Miss Guggenlocker," she said. She laughed with the glee of a child who has charmed and delirated through surprise.

"Am I not a feeble mate to sit on that throne and rule all that comes within its reach?" She directed his attention to the throne at the opposite end of the hall. "From this seat I can instruct any lawless statesman, weigh their wisdom and pass upon it as if I were Demosthenes, challenge the evils that may drive monarchs mad, and wonder if my crown is so straight."

"Let me be ambassador from the United States and kneel at the throne your highness."

"I could not engage in a jest with the crown my ancestors wore, Mr. Lorry. It is sacred, thou thoughtless American. Come, we will draw nearer that you may see the beauty of the workmanship in that great old chair."

They stood at the base of the low, velvet stage on which stood the chair, with its high back, its massive arms and legs shimmering in the light from the lofty windows. It was of gold, inlaid with precious stones—diamonds, rubies, emeralds, sapphires and other wondrous jewels—a relic of ancient craftsmanship.

"I never sit in the center. Always at the side or the other, usually leaning my elbow on the arm. You see, the discussions are generally so long and dreary that I become fatigued. One time—I am ashamed to confess it—I went to sleep on the throne. That was long ago. I manage to keep awake very well of late. Do you like my throneroom?"

"And to think that it is yours!"

"It is this room that gives me the right to be hailed with 'Long live the princess!' Not with 'campaing yells and 'Hurrah for Yette!' How does that sound? 'Hurrah for Yette!'" She was laughing merrily.

"Don't say it! It sounds sacrilegious, revolting!"

"For over three years—since I was eighteen—I have been supreme in that chair. During the years of my reign prior to that time I sat there with my Uncle Gaspar standing beside me. How often I begged him to sit down with me! There was so much room, and he certainly must have grown tired of standing. One time I cried because he frowned at me when I persisted in the presence of a great assemblage of nobles from Dawsbergen. It seems that it was a most important audience that I was granting, but I thought more of my uncle's tired old legs. I remember saying through my sobs of mortification that I would have him beheaded. You are to guess whether that startling threat created consternation or mirth."

"What a whimsical little princess you must have been, weeping and pouting and going to sleep!" he laughed. "And how sedate and wise you have become!"

"Thank you. How very nice you are. I have felt all along that some one would discern my effort to be dignified and sedate. They say I am wise and good and gracious, but that is to be expected. They said that of sovereigns as far back as the deluge, I've heard. Would you really like to see me in that old chair?" she asked.

"Ah, you are still a woman," he said, smiling at her pretty vanity. "Nothing could impress me more pleasantly."

She stepped carelessly and impulsively upon the royal platform, leaned against the arm of the throne, and with the charming blush of consciousness turned to him with the quickness of a guilty conscience, eager to hear his praise, but fearful lest he secretly condemned her conceit. His eyes were burning with the admiration that knows no defining, and his breath came quick and sharp through parted lips. He involuntarily placed a foot upon the bottom step, as if to spring to her side.

"You must not come up here!" she cried, shrinking back, her hands extended in fluttering remonstrance. "I cannot permit that at all!"

"I beg your pardon!" he cried. "That is all the humble plebeian can say. That I may be more completely under this fairy spell, pray cast about yourself the robe of rank and take up the scepter. Perhaps I may fall upon my face."

"And hurt your head all over again," she said, laughing nervously. She hesitated for a moment, a perplexed frown crossing her brow. Then she jerked a rich robe from the back of the throne and placed it about her shoulders as only a woman can. Taking up the scepter, she stood before the great chair and, with a smile on her lips, held it above his head, saying softly:

"Graustark welcomes the American prince."

He sank to his knee before the real princess, kissed the hem of her robe and rose with face pallid. The chasm was now endless in its immensity. The princess glightly seated herself on the throne, placed her elbow on the high arm, her white chin in her hand and tranquilly surveyed the voiceless American prince.

"You have not said 'Thank you,'" she said bluntly, her eyes waverin' beneath his steady gaze.

"I am only thinking how easy it would be to cross the gulf that has between us. With two movements of my body I can place it before you, with a third I can be sitting at your side. It is not so difficult after all," he said, hungrily eying the broad chair.

"No man unless a prince, ever sat upon this throne," she said.

"You have called me a prince?"

"Oh, I jested," she cried quickly comprehending his intention. "I forbid you!"

Her command came too late, for he was beside her on the throne of Graustark! She sat perfectly rigid for a moment, intense fear in her eyes.

"Do you know what you have done?" she whispered miserably.

"I surped the throne," he replied assuming a case and composure he did not feel. Truly he was guilty of unprecedented presumption.

"You have desecrated—desecrated! Do you hear?" she went on, paying no attention to his protest.

"Do you wish to have a prince that is not a prince, easy to take and easy to get away, use Chamberlain's sword and Live the Queen? For sale by G. C. Huxton."

Believes Sea Serpent Exists! The naturalist of the Belgica expedition lately told the Zoological Society of France that he believes the sea serpent to exist, and that it is not at all an imaginary creature of song and story. He says it is not a reptile, but a mammal of the order of the pinneps, to which family the seals belong. In form it resembles somewhat the extinct plesiosaurus, attaining a length of 200 feet, the head and neck being one-fourth of the length, the trunk one-fourth and the tail one-half. It never approaches the coast except in pursuit of the fish on which it lives.
