TRIED TO WRECK P. M. R. R. TRAIN

COLORED BOY NAMED HALEY UNDER ARREST.

Piled Ties and Iron on Track Near Meads Mills.

John Haley, a 16-year old colored lad, whose parents live between here and Plymouth was arrested Sunday on suspicion of having on two different occasions, put ties on the Pere Marquette tracks near Meads Mills, which might have wrecked a train on each occasion, but, for timely discovery.

On both of the occasions the train that escaped was the afternoon passenger from Detroit for Saginaw and Bay City. The first attempt was made a week ago Sunday. The place was on a curve at Meads Mills. Some members of the Harrison family, living in the neighborhood, happened on the track before the train was due and removed the obstruction. No report was made of the fact however. The second attempt was made last week Tuesday. This time Harry Hann, janitor at the Yarnall Institute, found ties, bolts and spikes piled on the track. He reported the matter and furnished information which led to Haley's arrest. The latter has also been known as Johnson and Edmonds. Haley now claims he did not put the obstructions on the track.

In Justice Valentine's court Tuesday morning the case was adjourned to Sept. 9th, pending further investigation into the affair.

POLITICS STIRRED UP IN DETROIT.

WESSELIUS SAYS JUSTUS S. WILL TAP 'NOTHER BAR'L.

Three State Senators Were the Leading Attraction.

There was a spasmodic discussion of state politics in Detroit last week owing to the presence in the city of Senators Doherty, Glazier and Morfitt, but all avowed that their meeting was accidental and there was nothing special going on. There is considerable anxiety among the politicians to find out whether Justus Stearns is to be a candidate for governor against Secretary of State Warner, as they figure that if he does decide to make a third trial, his biggest fight will be made in Wayne county.

The life-up in Wayne county is a bit indefinite at present, but there is little doubt of the fact that Warner will have the backing of the Republican machine. Those who control affairs out through the state declare that Warner will win hands down and they are even doubtful that Stearns will make a campaign, though it is said that Stearns's announcement has already been prepared and that it will be sprung at the first favorable opportunity.

A good deal of quiet work has been done in the last few weeks in the interest of Senator Burrows, more as a matter of precaution than anything else, as the opinion prevails that William Alden Smith's candidacy will not materialize.

In creating Warner's fence the fact has come out that his legislative friends took care to give him the nucleus of a far reaching machine by placing in his power the naming of the enumerators of the state census for which $100,000 will be expended. This bit of diplomacy means a good deal for Warner, as the appointees can very well look after his official interests, which practically gives him the benefit of a house-to-house canvass.

The taking of the census and the expense for the same is provided for by the constitution, but the manner of the appointment of the enumerators by the secretary of state is the provision of the new law and while it will insure more accuracy in the reports, at the same time it will incidentally provide a very nice machine of about 2,000 people for Mr. Warner. The appointments will be made next spring.

GEORGE WALTERS. GETS NEW JOB

FORMER NEWSPAPER BOY WELL KNOWN HERE.

Vice Consul at Hankow, China.—Mrs.
Walters in Northville Now.

The many Northville friends of George A. Walters, formerly of this place, are warmly congratulating him on the recent honors conferred upon him in China, where he went a few months ago in his capacity as the special agent of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada.

Mr. Walters, who nine or ten years ago was employed as foreman on the Record and later as reporter for several Detroit papers, is now by virtue of a recent appointment, vice and deputy consul general and marshal of the consular court of Hankow, China, the second largest shipping port of that kingdom.

The appointment, coming unsolicited as it did from Consul General Wilcox, is a direct and emphatic recognition of Mr. Walters' integrity and ability, and in the opinion of the appointee's friends on this side of the globe shows excellent judgment on the part of the consul general.

The new vice consul is a veteran of the Cuban war, during which he nearly lost his life, and is a brother of Charles Walters of this place and of Frank and Henry Walters, attorneys of Detroit.

His wife, who was Ethel Johnson of this place, is now residing at her mother's home here and may later join her husband in that far away country.

SCHOOL MARMS ARE VERY SCARCE

DEARTH OF 'EM OVER IN OAK-LAND COUNTY.

Have to Advertise in Newspapers

Wanted—School teachers in Oakland county. School Commissioner Elliott asks the newspapers to call attention to the fact that directors of a number of fractional school districts in that county are unable to secure teachers for the fall term.

The commissioner gives the following list of directors addresses and the schools they represent. They are all in need of teachers and the commissioner suggests that someone out of a job apply for one of them.

Chris Faller, director of district 5, Farmington; F. D. Dudgee, Northville. Novi fractional district 6: Homer Chapman, Wixom. Novi fractional district 10: John Cannon, Pontiac. Waterford fractional district 3. A. B. Hubbard, Clarkston. White Lake fractional district 5.

We go to press too early to give particulars of the State Gun club shoot here, except to say the attendance is good and everybody is having an enjoyable time.

Obituary.

Mrs. Arvilla Vaughn Knapp, whose death on Thursday, August 27th, was briefly noted last week, was born in Perrington, N. Y., nearly 72 years ago and had been a respected resident of this vicinity since her youth. She was married to William Knapp in 1857. Mrs. Knapp was a woman of estimable character and had been for many years a member of the Northville Baptist church. Her years of suffering were borne with exemplary Christian patience and faith. Besides her husband she leaves a sister and two brothers.

The funeral was held at the home Sunday and the burial took place at the Knapp cemetery.

Walled Lake vs Pontiac.

Appreciation of the fact that dissatisfaction with the decisions at the ball game at the Farmington picnic last week has caused the Walled Lake team to challenge the Pontiac "Tigers" to play for $50 a side, it looks as if the Walled Lake boys really had cause for complaint somewhere, as they certainly had their opponents outclassed in the Farmington game at every point until the last half of the ninth inning, at which juncture the former were in the lead 7 to 4, but they appeared to get rattled after that and the final score was called at 8 to 7 in favor of the Tigers.

Annual School Meeting

The annual school meeting will be held in the school building Monday night at which time two trustees in place of Dr. Blanchard and E. H. Lapham are to be elected.

Those gentlemen have served the district very efficiently for three years past and have proven valuable members of the board and the general opinion seems to be that they should be re-elected.

The annual school meetings are always important and the taxpayers of the district should be well represented.

It is estimated that nearly all the pine timber now growing in Minnesota (about 30,000,000 feet) will be cut and marketed within the next fifteen years.

THE STATE FAIR PONTIAC NEXT WEEK

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR THE BIGGEST EXHIBIT EVER.

Electric Car Co. Promises Ample
Service for a Big Crowd

The Michigan State Fair at Pontiac, Sept. 7 to 11 next, says Secretary Butterfield, will exceed in interest and variety of features any previous exhibition. The facilities for the comfort and entertainment of visitors have been greatly improved. The demands for space far exceed any previous record, thus insuring the most complete general exhibition of Michigan's products ever seen. The thrilling bicycle plunge and dive, the Rexos' graceful exhibition in hoop rolling and on roller skates, Muslin's educated pigs and sheep, foot races on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday; ladies' driving, farmers' race and fire department, team races are among the side attractions.

The electric car companies say they will be prepared to give service that will amply care for the big crowd expected.

Suburban News.

A swamp on the Carler farm over in Pleasant Valley, Oakland county, has a number of bushels of white huckleberries in it. This is no white lie.

The editor of the Carleton Times had a narrow escape from being paralyzed the other day. A man subscribed for the Times for three years and paid in advance.

Wayne postoffice was burgled last week of over $500 worth of cash and stamps, which was far from white. No doubt there was more than one male involved in the affair.

A dental office at Ann Arbor was burglarized last week and among the other things taken were $5 worth of teeth. Somebody had nerve to chew such plunder as that.

A. F. Neundorff of Farmington has a night-blooming cereus and the other evening a number of his friends watched the plant unfold its rare bloom. The company was not a bit lonesome over it.

A direct insult to our lighting system—appearing in the streets with a lantern.—Birmingham Electric.

Maybe the party who did it was light-headed.

A couple at Fenton, who are about to be married, were each given a handkerchief shower and they now have so many of those articles they don't use them. They are not blowing about it, or course, but run 'em.

Two Fenton bicyclists, who were scorching along one of the streets after dark were both badly injured by a head end collision with each other. If it would only happen that way oftener maybe it would break up the practice instead of breaking up so many innocent pedestrians.

A Holly liveryman let a horse to some people to go huckleberrying and the animal, which was hitched all day at the edge of the swamp in a precarious condition from what is diagnosed as a rattlesnake bite. The owner will probably be the next party to go burying with that horse.

A little Oxford boy who went with the Baptist Sunday-school to Belle Isle dropped his hat in the bear's den and it was immediately chewed up. This was in the morning so that little boy went hatless all day.—Orion Review.

He had to go bare-headed all day because the bear headed for his hat for about a minute. Sech is true.

Born, Thursday noon, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bridgman, a nine pound boy. Mr. B. has been advertising in our want columns the past month for a girl and he is now convinced that it does not pay to advertise—Fenton Independent.

Some people are never satisfied with anything a newspaper does, even when they get more than they expected from their advertisements.

The farmers in the vicinity of Grand Blanc have sworn vengeance against the autoists who frequent that region and are going to do things to 'em if the law doesn't. The horseless vehicles are run at such reckless speed that people are afraid to venture on the roads with horses lest they should suddenly find themselves the owners of vehicleless horses, not to mention limbless or lifeless bodies.

ESCAPED BEING GORED.

Owosso Butcher Had an Exciting Experience.

Owosso, Mich. Sept. 2.—"My insurance isn't the usual 'whore'," said Drovers William Donigan to the clerk of a local fraternal insurance society yesterday. "I want to pay it right off. When a bull shakes hands with death, it's a pretty sight."

Donigan went into a department of his store in Owosso, south of the city, and set up a rope over the horns of a large bull which he had caught there. Driving that the proper which reduced him to brief "stake" was about to begin, the bull began to run on a light. He lowered his head and pushed a Donigan. The latter flung his rope. As he threw himself behind a post, the bull struck it full tilt and Donigan's right arm was caught between the bull's horn and the post.

With a wrench that removed several inches of skin, Donigan got free and once more retreated, while the animal following with rage, charged again. Donigan backed into a corner. Three times the bull tried to gore his body, but the sharp horns were so wide that they struck the walls on each side. Donigan reached a pitchfork and after several minutes of desperate flailing, reached a place of safety exhausted. The bull was promptly killed.

The Low's Delay.

Lansing, Mich. Sept. 2.—Under the court rules it will be about seven months before the evidence and pleadings in the suits brought by the rail road companies to upset the assessments made by the State Board of Assessors can be completed and the case submitted to Judge Waddy of the United States district court at Grand Rapids. The companies now have three months in which to submit their proofs, the state will then have an equal length of time in which to put in its evidence, and the companies will be allowed forty days for rebuttal. Following this the state will have ten days in which to complete its case.

Must Move the Wall.

Owosso, Mich., Sept. 2.—The common council has ordered proceedings begun to compel Rev. Fr. Slane to remove the wall of the school building he is erecting from the street, it being claimed it encroaches eleven inches. At a former meeting a motion not to interfere was carried, but the city attorney decided it illegal, and last night a vote of the aldermen gave the mayor an opportunity to decide the battle in his own favor by the casting vote.

Accused Demands Investigation.

Ann Arbor, Mich. Sept. 2.—Editor L. J. Lsmer of the Union Record has made some sensational charges against V. L. Snodgrass, keeper of the county poorhouse, in which he alleges cruelty to inmates and negatively that among other things Snodgrass does anything and has asked the court to send him to jail.

Shot Deafened by Mistake.

Owosso, Mich. Sept. 2.—Mary, daughter of Daniel Swan, a well-to-do farmer living north of this place, is dead from a gunshot wound inflicted by her father. She was picking corn for dinner when Swan, seeing the tops waving and thinking crows were in the field, fired, the charge taking effect in the girl's breast.

Simply Forced to It.

"The found out why Snodgrass is so conceited. He told me himself." "He did? Well, that's refreshing." "Yes," he said, he spent half his life trying to make people think well of him—without success. Then he decided the only way to get a thing done is to do it yourself."

Young Ball Stars.

Owen of Chicago Americans and Others Promise Well in National Game.

The complaint is often heard from managers and magnates that there are not enough good ball players for two major leagues. That is a true bill to day, but it bids fair not to be in another year or two at the rate new players are being developed. There will never be enough so called stars to fill the ranks of sixteen clubs. Competition for men who play with their heads as well as their hands and feet, will always be strong, but there is no reason why the rank and file should not be made up of high class material in a short time, because the demand will naturally create a supply.

More young men of intelligence will take up the game as a profession with the greater inducements offered through the existence of two big leagues.

A cursory glance at the scores of a single day reveals quite an array of talent which is new to fast company this year, but has made a place for itself alongside the veterans. In the American league the Philadelphia Athletics have Henley Bender and Hoffman; Boston has Gibson and Jake Stahl; Chicago has Flaherty, Pitcher Owens, Alcock and Slattery, Cleveland has Abbott; Detroit has Carr and Kissinger; New York has Wolfe, Deering and Beville, and Washington has Moran and Robinson.

In the National league the newcomers who have earned permanent places are Boston—Stanley, Aubrey and Abbatino, Brooklyn—Schmidt, Jones, Ritter and Jordan; Chicago—Weimer, Evers, Raub and Williams, New York—Babb, Philadelphia, Roth; Pittsburgh—Wilhelm, Phelps, Sebring and Weaver, St. Louis—Dunleavy, Brown and Hackett.

Not all of these men are stars, but out of the list may be found many, like Bender and Hoffman of the Athletics, Flaherty, Slattery and Owen of the White Sox, Abbott of Cleveland, Gibson of Boston, Weimer and Evers of the Colts, Schmidt and Jones of Brooklyn, Pabb of McGraw's team and Wilhelm and Phelps of Pittsburgh, who have shown ability to hold their own in an, company and have a team the making of stars. And these are only a few of the many who are only waiting for the greater opportunity.

PITCHER OWEN OF THE CHICAGO AMERICANS.

they have to make good nowadays over a few years ago, when there were veterans enough to go around. Three years ago a youngster from a minor league was lucky to get into a championship game, and then if he did not show great promise at once he was sent back to the minors.

The process of development in most of the minors is slow, because they do not play as fast or as scientific a game. Therefore the young player of today gets far better advantages through being put in a position regularly and given a chance to learn from actual playing with older and better men.

Five years ago it would have been a marvel if half a dozen new players lasted a season in a major league, and in that number there would have been one or two stars perhaps.

Professional baseball players this season are as numerous as tips on the races. There are now seventeen important professional leagues and probably ten times as many of the smaller semi-professional and amateur organizations.

The seventeen referred to are the National league, American league, American association, Southern league, Western league, Eastern league, New York State league, New England league, California league, Pacific Northwestern association, Three I league, Cotton State league, Texas league, Central league, Kentucky-Tennessee league, Connecticut State league and Virginia-North Carolina league.

These leagues average eight clubs each, which means that 136 aggregations rally at the call of the umpire's "Play ball!" Many of these clubs carry from fifteen to twenty players on the pay-roll. Others use only twelve to fourteen. The average, however, easily reaches fifteen men to a team.

Lou Dillon's Speed.

New Trotting Champion May Put Record Still Lower—What Sanders Says.

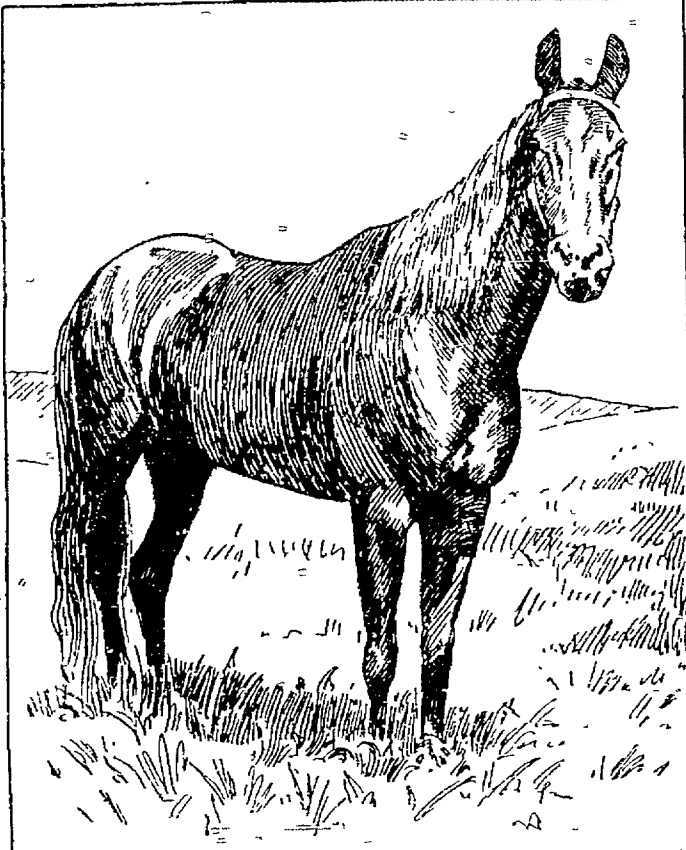

The light harness horse world is now talking about the possibility of the new world's champion trotter, Lou Dillon, 2:00, going the distance in 1:58 or better. Experts agree that she has more speed "up her sleeve," and her owner, C. G. K. Billings, formerly of Chicago, is confident that she will do better than 2 minutes flat, possibly going the mile in 1:58.

Mr. Billings says: "I'm glad I decided to let my horse have a chance at the Readville track. It was very fast. I think Lou Dillon can go below 2 minutes."

Millard Sanders, driver and trainer of Lou Dillon, says: "The two minute trotter has appeared, but I firmly believe that Lou Dillon is able to lower the mark still lower, to 1:59 or 1:58. There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that Lou Dillon has every trotting record at her mercy from one to two miles. She has lasting endurance and is easily the stoutest hearted horse the world has ever seen. She is unusually reliable and in all her career has never disappointed me. In fact, she has bettered her marks more than any rational man could expect."

"To demonstrate that she has not nearly reached her limit you have only to study the fractions of today's mile. She did the last quarter in 25 and the last eighth in 14 seconds, which in itself is one of the most marvelous exhibitions ever given by a trotting horse. The majority of fast horses practically stagger across the line, while Lou Dillon finished at a 1:52 gait. She wanted more, and took me a quarter of a mile to pull her up. No sooner was she unharnessed than she began prancing around like a horse that had just gone a 2:40 mile instead of doing a record making mile in 2:00."

"Many horses cannot go farther than a mile at top speed. Lou Dillon is different. If her owner desires I have not the remotest doubt that she could easily break Creascus' record for two miles. She has done what few horsemen ever dared to hope for, and she can do still better."

Lou Dillon has gamely won her right to a niche in the trotting hall of fame, and she is the greatest of the sure gaited horses that have forged into the ranks of the world beaters. The trotting record has dropped a minute since 1890, and the horses that have figured in lowering it are as follows:

M. and M. Coincidence. When John Taylor, 2:10 1/4, won this year's M. and M. stake at Detroit he pulled the same sulky that Rhythmic did when he won it last year, and Robert Mc pulled the same bike to victory in the M. and M. Consolation stake.

In the Golf World.

The Invading Team of English Players and Its Successful Tour : Coming Women's National Tourney to Be Held at Wheaton, Ill.

The team of English golfers now visiting the United States has shown us that the average British player is superior to the average American exponent of the game. While we may be able to build faster yachts than the Britishers, they certainly can play a stronger game of golf.

The team is composed of men from Oxford and Cambridge universities and is made up as follows:

Oxford—T. Mansfield Hunter, A. J. T. Bramston, H. G. B. Ellis, G. B. Barne, C. H. Allison, H. W. Beveridge and C. N. Day.

Cambridge—John K. Low, captain; Norman F. Hunter, P. W. Leathart and D. P. Ransom.

Four of the visitors—J. L. Low, H. W. Beveridge and the Hunter boys—are Scotchmen and the other seven are Englishmen.

Johnnie Low, the captain of the team, is a fine, easy going, genial chap, whom all the visitors swear by. He is a member of the St. Andrews club. Mr. Low won the Calcutta cup in 1892, the Jubilee vase in 1897 and the Glen courses as far as we have gone. Myopia is just the same as some of our best courses at home, and we have heard that the Wheaton course is even better than any we have yet played over."

Beveridge, Ransom, Allison and Barne are the tallest members of the squad, and they all hit a tremendous ball. The shortest member, Leathart, is as tall as J. W. Taylor.

The big men are powerful hitters, albeit a bit slow. H. G. B. Ellis, who seems to be the most observant of the visitors, gets a long ball with a short swing back and a quiet but exhaustive finish.

It is really a pleasure to watch the visitors play, their execution being the apotheosis of golfing finesse.

The clean hitting of the Britishers and their marvelous putting impress an onlooker. They waste no time in addressing the ball or getting lines on the green, but just send the ball along about its business.

The visitors have been the object of much interest, and quite a gallery follows the men as they play in four-somes, three ball and single matches. Their "hit or miss" style of play, practically without studying a stroke, is something new to the usual dwelling before shots in which most American golfers indulge, but the visitors get the distance just the same. C. H. Allison, who is just twenty-one years old and an undergraduate of Oxford, is the only player of the eleven who appears to study his shots. Before putting, particularly, he usually deliberates for a few shots. Allison is decidedly steady in his work throughout.

H. G. B. Ellis has one of the most finished swings of the British team. He is strong and powerful and gets a long ball. His work on the green is marked by the same apparent carelessness that characterized the play of most of his team mates.

The Englishmen have played on many courses, and thus far have been uniformly successful. At Boston and Chicago they won decisive victories, and several important matches remain for them to play. They were in New York during the America's cup races and were guests of the New York Yacht club on board the club steamer during the contests between Reliance and Shamrock III.

There is a strong likelihood that the United States Golf association will put up an international cup to be competed for by the visitors. President Windeler is in favor of the scheme, which originated in Chicago. The cup, if offered, will be played for every year on the course designated by the holders of the trophy.

The women's national tourney is scheduled to take place at Wheaton, Ill., during the last week of September. All the leading players of the feminine world are to be on hand, and one of the spectators will be Miss Rhonda Adair, women's champion of Great Britain.

Miss Bessie Anthony of Glenview, near Chicago, and champion woman player of the Western Golf association, is one of the favorites for the event, as also is Mrs. E. A. Manice, the eastern woman who has been prominent in women's tourneys for several years. Mrs. Stout, formerly Miss Genevieve Hecker, who has held the championship title for two years, is confident of again winning the title and, having defeated Mrs. Manice, Miss Anthony and the other leaders in the past, is certain that she can repeat her triumphs.

As the coming tournament is to be held in the territory of the Western Golf association many players who have never yet appeared in a national contest will compete. By removing this meeting from the east to the west the U. S. G. A. acted wisely and in a manner that will serve to arouse interest in the game in localities where but little attention has formerly been awarded it.

Trotting Snap Shot.

Prince of Oringe, 2:07 1/2, seems to hold the 2:08 trotts safe.

Den Rench has his two gray trotters, Texas and Re-wood, in fine form at present. Both look due to do something.

"Long-Shot" Cox has succeeded Fred Hyde as driver of Audubon Boy, 2:03 1/4; Wamscoat, 2:10 1/4, and the other horses in the Capital City stable.

W. J. Andrews has Promise, 2:12 1/4, in grand form. He was at Billy Buck's necktie in 2:07 1/4.

Head

Hurt So Badly Was Nearly Crazy.

Had no Sleep—Could Hardly Lie Down.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Permanently Cured Me.

"A year ago I suffered from extreme nervous stomach trouble. I was afraid of everything, could not bear to hear singing or music, and reading or hearing of a death nearly brought on my own. I could not sleep or hardly lie down. The back of my head hurt me so badly I nearly went crazy. My shoulders hurt and the least thing I did would bring on an attack of extreme nervousness. There were times when I would have a lump in my throat and my mouth would be so dry I could hardly speak. I was in despair until I began to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I have taken in all twelve bottles and consider myself permanently cured. My home doctor has since remarked on my healthy appearance and said he wished he could say his medicine helped me. He knows it was Dr. Miles' Nervine. We are never without the Anti-Pain Pills and consider your medicines household remedies. I cannot say enough for the Nervine, because in addition to my own case my daughter, who was out of school for a long time because of St. Vitus' dance, was completely cured by eight bottles. She is now feeling fine and going to school every day. We thank you for your kindness and will never stop singing the praises of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine."—Mrs. C. E. Ring, Lima, O.

All druggists sell and guarantee first bottle Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for free. Send for free book on Nervous and Heart Diseases. Address Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

In defending a divorce suit a Brooklyn man stated under oath that his wife thought more of her pet dog than of him. "Well, mine de Stae," said once "The more I see of men, the better I like dogs."

Library Donations.
For the year ended May 31, 1903, 308,400 was donated to the funding of libraries, of which Mr. Carnegie gave $6,679,000 for buildings.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. "He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diphtheria," was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief when a neighbor, learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and after less than twenty-four hours, for sale by all druggists.

The first stone of the new campaign of St. Mark at Venice, to take the place of the one that collapsed last July, has been laid with solemn ceremony, and let us hope with modern cement, warranted to stick through coming centuries.

Poison Sold to Drinkers.
The absinthe and other appetizers sold in Parisian cafes at four cents a glass are made of ingredients which are fit only for manufacturing purposes.

What Is Life?
In the last analysis nobody knows, but we do know that it is under strict law. Those that live even slightly, puny results. Frequent living means derangement of the organs, resulting in Constipation, Headache or Liver trouble. In King's New Life Pills quickly readjust this. It's gentle, yet thorough. Only 25c at Geo. C. Hueston's drug store.

And Naturally.
A cynical philosopher once said that the average inhabitant of England—or any other country, for that matter—would feel the loss of his own little finger more acutely than he would the intelligence that the whole of China had been destroyed by some convulsion of nature.

That Harvard professor who has discovered the germ of smallpox has our permission to keep it.

Half-Sick

"I first used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in the fall of 1848. Since then I have taken it every spring as a blood-purifying and nerve-strengthening medicine."

S. T. Jones, Wichita, Kans.

If you feel run down, are easily tired, if your nerves are weak and your blood is thin, then begin to take the good old standard family medicine, Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It's a regular nerve lifter, a perfect blood builder.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and you will be satisfied.

GONE WITH THE CASH

HILLSDALE MAN ROBS WIFE AND MACCABEES.

WAS FINANCE-KEEPER OF THE TENT THERE.

STARTED FOR PORT HURON, BUT NEVER REACHED THERE.

Hillsdale, Mich., Sept. 3.—George N. Briggs of this city is missing, with several hundred dollars in cash being belonging to his wife and nearly $500 of Maccabee friends, which he had in his possession as finance-keeper of the Hillsdale tent.

Briggs had been a resident of Hillsdale for several years and was a painter by trade, but for some time has been conducting a grocery. A short time ago he sold his interest in the store to his partner and gave out that he was to have a position in the Maccabee tent to organize tents in Ohio.

On the day he left he told friends he had been summoned to Port Huron to consult with the great commander on matters connected with the order, and was to go there that night. About the same time the officers of the local tent were notified by the grand treasurer that an assessment for death benefits due from the tent had not been paid. This led to an investigation and it was ascertained that Briggs had collected the money and claimed to have forwarded it.

Correspondence with Port Huron re-vealed the fact that Briggs had not been summoned there, neither had he been there. His wife had $700 in one of the city banks and she has just ascertained that her husband had drawn it all out, and that she was penniless, with herself and a child to care for.

Caught the Quack.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 3.—Officers succeeded last night in capturing Dr. Paul Newton, who is alleged to have secured $200 from W. Howard, a Godus farmer, under false pretenses. Newton was introduced to the Howard family by a neighbor, claiming to be a specialist from the Chicago Medical college, and was employed to treat Mrs. Howard for asthma. Howard gave a note due in six months, no money to be paid until the lady was cured. Mrs. Howard took the medicine prescribed, but grew worse. In the meantime Newton cashed the note at the bank and left the country.

Post Telle Sir Thomas.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 3.—C. W. Post, the Postum Cereal millionaire, has received a message from Sir Thomas Lipton, thanking him for the suggestion that the Shamrock be sailed once with a Yankee crew. The telegram is non-committal, but shows Sir Thomas may be thinking it over. Post offers to pay all expenses if the Yankee crew will run Shamrock as fast as whether victory depends on boat or men. Post believes Lipton, who is a friend of his, will accept.

Another National Bank.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 3.—The Central National bank, capital $200,000, surplus $50,000, has been organized here. The president is Edward C. Hinman, secretary-treasurer of the American Steam Pump company; vice president, Frank Wolfe, Mendon, bank; second vice-president, Carroll L. Post, brother of the Postum Cereal millionaire; Frank G. Evans, who has been connected with the First National bank, is cashier.

Build World's Fair Boats.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 3.—The Truscon Boat company of this city has secured a contract with the managers of the St. Louis exposition to manufacture all the electric, gas and gasoline launches, gondolas and other craft that will be used at the big fair next year. The contract calls for thirty-one launches on the first order, which must be completed and the boats shipped by April 1.

Praise For State Troops.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 3.—Adj. Gen. Brown is in receipt of a letter from Maj. Gen. Bates thanking him for the promptness and thoroughness with which his requests of the department for information in connection with the trip of the Michigan National Guard to Kentucky have been met. The plan for the mobilization of the troops by railroads for transportation is especially commended by General Bates.

Moonshining in Michigan.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 3.—A former saloonkeeper says moonshine whiskey is being made in this country from sugar beet molasses. He has asked $100 from a representative of the government for information that will lead to the arrest of the illicit distillers, but the money is not forthcoming and he declines to disclose the identity of the men engaged in the illegal work.

Dying in England.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 3.—A cablegram from England announces that Richard Padley of this city, who went there some months ago to spend a year in his old home, had been stricken with apoplexy and there was little hope of his recovery. Mr. Padley is a pioneer settler of Bay City, having lived here since 1852.

ILLEGAL FISHING.

Game Warden Gets After Violators of State Law.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 3.—Game Warden Chapman reports that the first twelve days of August were spent in visiting the remote commercial fishing grounds in upper Michigan. A tug was chartered and all of the fisheries on the south shore of Lake Superior, except those in Ontonagon county and at the extreme end of Keweenaw point, were inspected. All of the fishermen at Isle Royale were visited and their deep water nets were lifted to determine the kind and size of fish being taken. It was found that many miles of 24-inch mesh nets were being fished at a depth averaging 600 feet, and that 50 per cent of the fish taken were lake trout, half of which were immature, and of unlawful size.

The warden is bending every energy to correct this evil, which, if not checked, will destroy commercial fishing in Michigan waters. All of the violators are now being prosecuted.

IMPORTANT CATTLE SALE.

Asylum Holsteins Bought by New York Parties.

Pontiac, Mich., Sept. 2.—Probably the largest deal in Holstein cattle ever consummated in the state took place Wednesday morning, when W. C. Hunt of Syracuse, N. Y., paid the Eastern Michigan asylum $1,260 as the purchase price of fifteen head from the blooded asylum herd. The cattle were started for their new home yesterday. Mr. Hunt paid $100 each for three cows and $60 each for six heifers.

The asylum is beginning to reap the fruits of its policy of keeping only the finest of blooded stock to provide milk for the inmates. The herd is well known to Holstein fanciers throughout the country, as is demonstrated when it becomes necessary to dispose of the surplus increase.

Michigan Patents.

Washington, Sept. 3.—These Michigan patents have been granted: Henry Bothy, Emmett, thrashing machine; Edward Davis, Detroit, railway brake; Boyd J. Punsch, jack pine rail joint; Perry B. Garrison, Three Rivers, walking beam for handcars; Judson M. Griffin, Detroit, abridging shoe; Henry L. Haskell, Ludington, polishing machine; Horace B. Murdock, Detroit, car or scull; John Nelson, West Bay City, rail joint; Lafayette R. Parsons, Detroit, vaccine and preparing same; Lester B. Perrin, Detroit, automatic fastener for car doors; Joseph H. Robbins, Owosso, table leg fastening; Edgar O. Sutton, Detroit, machine for forming butter pats; Edward S. Wheeler, Detroit, attachment for dust pans; Sherman S. Withington, Adrian, tie wire fence.

St. Joe's Big Banquet.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 3.—The largest banquet held in this city in many years was that last night at the Hotel Whitcomb tendered by the business men to the stockholders of the Cooper-Wells knitting mill because the latter refused a bonus from the city when they rebuilt their factory, destroyed by fire last February. A. W. Wells, the leading stockholder, is one of our wealthiest men and refused a liberal offer from the city, declaring his company able to build the factory unaided. Two hundred business men attended the banquet, at which Rev. W. P. French, pastor of the First Methodist church, presided as toastmaster.

Detroit Is Growing.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 3.—Detroit has a population of 389,844 people according to the new city directory which was issued yesterday by R. L. Polk & Co. The thirty-seventh annual edition of the directory shows a number of improvements over those of former issue. The book contains 800 more pages than did its predecessor, and a total of 155,940 names are in the list. Figuring on the conservative basis of two and one-half persons to each name entered, the population of the city amounts up to 389,844, an increase of 13,408 over last year.

Disease in Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 3.—Rheumatism, diarrhea, neuralgia, bronchitis and tonsillitis in the order named, caused the most sickness in Michigan during the past week. Meningitis was reported present at 1 place, measles at 20, whooping cough at 27, diphtheria at 29, smallpox at 30, scarlet fever at 52, typhoid fever at 72 and consumption at 216.

Double Track Fatality.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 3.—John Jankovak, walking on a Michigan Central track on the west side Wednesday, stepped to another track to avoid a passenger train and was struck by a freight engine, receiving injuries from which he died in a short time. He was 55 years old and leaves a large family.

Burglars Made Big haul.

Newberry, Mich., Sept. 3.—John I. Bellaire's store at Seney, in which is also the postoffice, twenty miles west of here, was broken into Tuesday night and the safe blown open with nitroglycerine. The burglars got $50 in cash, $3,000 in negotiable notes, besides postage stamps and money order blanks. The books were also taken.

Pere Marquette Buys a Road.

Potoskey, Mich., Sept. 3.—The Pere Marquette will shorten its distance from Potoskey to Detroit by sixty miles. It has purchased the Klondike road in Kalamazoo county, which can easily be connected with the Pere Marquette at Clare and at Bellaire, thus giving a cross-state route that will reduce their time to Detroit two hours.

FREE WITH HIS PISTOL

QUARRELSOME MAN AT 500 SHOT A WOMAN.

OTHER PERSONS HIS TARGETS, BUT NO ONE HIT.

BATTLE CREEK MAN SHOT BY A NIGHT PROWLER.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 2.—The fact that Charles Stranyer was a poor shot saved him from committing murder Tuesday afternoon, but as it is he will have to answer to a charge of shooting Mrs. Strubling, wife of the well-known Portage avenue grocer, through the shoulder, inflicting a bad wound.

Stranyer and a man who gives his name as Frank Trathen became mixed up in a row in a barber shop at about 2 o'clock and were ordered out. When in the street Stranyer drew a revolver and fired three shots, fortunately hitting nobody. He then started off down the street and in a minute saw Mrs. Strubling's pet dog on the sidewalk.

Without provocation, Stranyer lunged the dog, whereupon Mrs. Strubling remonstrated. Without a word Stranyer again drew his gun and fired point-blank at Mrs. Strubling, hitting her in the shoulder.

Attracted by the sound of the fusillade, Officers Roberts and Coulter ran up and nabbed Stranyer just as he was walking away.

The shooting in two places in such a short time attracted a big crowd on the street, and there were threats against Stranyer, which caused the officers to hustle him to the county jail as quickly as possible, without stopping to lodge him in the police station.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 2.—A strange woman, probably a thief, shot William Woods, a well known citizen, as he stepped out upon his rear porch at 11:05 o'clock at night to investigate suspicious noises which had annoyed his family just prior to his return home.

Woods was armed with an iron rod while his son carried a shotgun. The unknown man fired a bullet from a 38-caliber revolver, which the police state was poisoned. The bullet entered Woods' right side, passed through the chest wall and coming out fell in a pocket of his coat.

After changing the assassin's front blocks Woods returned and called a doctor to dress and authorize the wound. Unless the poison takes effect Woods will recover. The police have a clue.

Convicts on a Strike.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 2.—As an exemplification of the beauties of mild treatment, a little strike occurring in the state prison Tuesday morning was not a great success. Ten convicts employed on the broom contract refused to work one day last week, alleging that their daily bill of fare was insufficient. Investigation of their complaint was made and it was decided groundless. The strikers, continuing obdurate, they were placed in the bull pen on bread and water. It is hinted that the amusements, so marked a feature of prison life, have also been denied them.

The Governor's Pension.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Governor A. T. Bliss of Michigan, whose recently granted pension has created so much interest, was pensioned at the rate of $12 per month for inability to perform manual labor. The pension was granted under the act of 1890, which provides that any soldier who served at least 90 days in volunteer service who is disabled to the extent that he is unable to perform manual labor may be pensioned at rates varying from $6 to $12 per month the latter being the maximum amount which may be paid under that act. The governor also drew close to $500 back pay.

Mammoth Coal Sheds.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 2.—The trouble in storing a large quantity of coal is the danger of spontaneous combustion. The University of Michigan uses over 13,000 tons a year. To have a sufficient supply on hand and to guard against a shortage of cars, etc., a monster shed, 300 feet long and 70 feet wide has been constructed along the Ann Arbor railroad on Madison street.

Operators Get a Raise.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 2.—The Pere Marquette Railroad company has voluntarily advanced the wages of all telegraph operators upon its system a little better than 10 per cent. An order to this effect was issued Tuesday morning and brought good news to a large body of key manipulators employed at various stations along the main line and the various divisions.

Died of Fright.

Bozoye, Mich., Sept. 2.—Mrs. Fredericka Kirschner, a resident of Wilson and 54 years of age, has died from the effects of a bad fright. While berrying in the woods a few weeks ago she got temporarily lost and the fear that she might perish worked on her so that she was never herself again.

END OF KING'S PRIVATE BAND

English Monarch Not a Lover of Stately Music.

King Edward has given order for the disbandment of his private band, one of the ancient features of his court. In its present form it was established by Charles II, and some authorities assert that a "state" band existed in the days of Queen Elizabeth. It is composed of thirty-four musicians, under the direction of Sir Walter Parratt, "master of the music." Its members are the best that can be secured in England, and this is the real cause of its dissolution. Unlike his mother, King Edward does not care much for state concerts by his own musicians, and since his accession the duties of the band have been confined chiefly to the playing of light music, including ragtime, during royal dinners. This they regard as undignified and the king regards as extravagant. The same music can be played as well by fewer and less notable musicians.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance of the treatment of croup in thousands of homes yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers, in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It cures whooping cough or other harmful substance and is given as confidently to a baby as to an adult.

For sale by all druggists.

ACCORDING TO HIS FOLLY.

Fresh Young Man Who Bantered a Jap Answered in Kind.

A young Japanese compositor employed on a Japanese paper hardly a stone's throw from the Mail and Express' building, was riding down town in a city hall train the other morning. He was engrossed in his morning paper and paid little attention to the other passengers. But a fresh-looking young man who sat next to him and who had been eyeing him all along, suddenly said:

"What sort of a 'nese' are you, anyway? A Chinese or a Japanese?" The little Jap was not caught napping. Quick as a wink he replied: "What sort of a 'key' are you anyway? A monkey, a donkey, or a Yankee?"

The fresh young man had no more to say, and left the train quickly when City Hall station was reached.—New York Mail and Express.

No need to fear sudden attacks of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, summer complaint of any sort, if you have Dr. Fowles' Extract of Wild Strawberry in the medicine chest.

Makes Division of Salary.

An English mayor has handed over his official salary to be divided between the poor and the town bands. Andrew D. White wants the colleges to train young men for a less holding. That's not a bad idea, but how are the trained young men to get the of-fices?

Fearful Odds Against Him.

Baldwin, alone and destitute such in spirit, was the condition of an old soldier by name of J. I. Hivens Veselsky. O. For years he was troubled with kidney disease and neither doctors nor medicines gave him relief. At length he tried Electric Batters. It put him on his feet in short order and now he testifies, "I'm on the road to complete recovery." Best on earth for Liver and Kidney troubles and all forms of Stomach and Bowel Complaints. Only 50c per bottle. Geo. C. Hueston, Detroit.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Wayne.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Wayne held at the Probate Court Room in the City of Detroit, on the 2nd day of August, 1903, the within and foregoing petition of the Estate of John J. Hueston, deceased, was read and the same was found to conform to the requirements of the act of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, approved March 1st, 1892, relating to the Probate of Wills and the Administration of the Estates of Decedents, and the Court ordered that the same be admitted to probate and that the executor named therein be and he is hereby appointed executor of the said estate of John J. Hueston, deceased, and that he do and he is hereby directed to execute the duties of such executor according to law.

CLOTHES FOR THE BOYS

Proud of your boys aren't you? You should be, and we are mighty proud of the clothes here ready for them.

Know we'll both be proud indeed when your boy appears in our clothes.

Every suit is of absolutely pure wool fabrics, made up stylish too and in a manner that is most pleasing.

And variety we show is broad and satisfying.

You'll find our clothes, because they are clothes of quality are quite a little bit better than the best you've ever seen and they are not a bit more expensive.

NORTHVILLE.

The City in Brief.

Regular council meeting Monday night.

D. Brockett and family are about to move to Detroit.

George Clark of Grace avenue has been seriously ill for a week past.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Barley at Rochester, Aug. 27, a son.

Mrs. C. G. Harrington is somewhat better and sits up a part of each day.

Regular meeting of Mystic lodge No. 100, K. of P., Tuesday evening Sept. 5th. Work, first and second ranks.

It is safe to say that upon not one dog in ten in Northville is there any dog tax paid. The present dog tax laws are a g.

C. E. Clarkson, who has been sick for some months, is able to be out walking up town for the first time last Saturday.

The annual picnic of the Northville Woman's club was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Parsons and was largely attended and very enjoyable.

Miss Sadie Hughes has been re-engaged as teacher of the school at Mead's Mills, where she has given such good satisfaction that her salary has been raised without solicitation on her part.

Tuesday, Sept. 8, the WCTU will meet with Mrs. Little. Any wishing to attend will be welcome.

The regular monthly meeting of the Library board occurs at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon. Members please "N. B."

A delegation of WRC ladies gave Mrs. Lizzie Brockett, who is soon to leave Northville, a "flower shower" Tuesday evening.

The Robert Thomas dog-killing case was thrown out of court Saturday upon the non-appearance of the complaining witness.

Charlie Harrington is nursing an injured hip as the result of a fall last week. His brother Dar has been caring for him and he is recovering.

See how quickly you can write in figures eleven thousand eleven hundred and eleven. After you have learned how to do it ask some one else to try.

FOUND—Fraternity or Sorority Pin set with pearls. Owner can obtain same at Spencer Clark's by proving property and paying 25c for this notice.

The LOTMM tender a reception to the people who so kindly assisted toward making their play a success; also the KOTM's and their wives, at their hall Tuesday evening, Sept. 5.

A lusty and lively tarantula was found in a bunch of bananas at Wheeler's grocery by Ward Cook a few days ago. The boys caged the big spider safely and have it on exhibition.

Northville's ice dealers don't have to be entirely disconsolate because of the unfavorable summer for that trade, as they are also in the fuel business, and when the one product isn't in demand the other is.

In speaking last week of the postal law in regard to all R. F. D. letters requiring two cent postage, the Record should have said that the rule in question does not apply to unsent printed matter or circulars.

Miss May White is very ill with sunstroke at Orion, where she had been nursing at the De'ou Cancer Institute. She is supposed to have contracted the disease from a friend whose clothing was infected by lack of proper precaution.

Northville friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Perry of Cheboygan, formerly of this place, have received the announcement of the marriage of Miss Margaret Perry to Charles F. Schenk of that city August 26th. They will reside in Cheboygan.

Leonard Charter celebrated his 77th birthday last week Friday and in the evening his children and grandchildren gathered around the festive board and enjoyed themselves for a few hours. Fourteen were present and among other good things each child gave grandpa a big clay pipe.

Dan Wickes, a former Waynate, but who for a number of years was a resident of Northville, hailed in town last week from the far west in a seedy and dilapidated condition. He was a complete enigma to his friends who knew him when he was in better spirits and raiment—Wayne Cor. Detroit Tribune.

Mary had a little lamb which followed her to church, and stood around outside the door like an owl upon its perch. Why don't the little lamb come in? the watchful people cried, why Mary told the silly thing to watch for her outside. So you, each gentle maiden, may, one and all, still find some sheephead waiting near the door, if you admire that kind—Dx.

Will Crampton, for several years a well known and popular blacksmith here, and who has been running the Palmer shop for some time past, is about to go into business in Pontiac, having bought a half interest in a flourishing establishment in that city. "Billie" is a competent and obliging workman and his many Northville friends will wish for him the best of success.

The resignation of Conductor Harry Weaver has necessitated several changes on the D. T. R. Mr. Weaver's run has been given to Bruce Babcock, who will move to Detroit. Mr. Babcock's run will go to Frank Thompson, whose run will be taken by Mr. Dame of the Orchard Lake end of the line. Mr. Dame's run goes to first extra Charles Blackburn, who will probably move from Northville to this village—Farmington Enterprise.

Forrest Ball has recently returned from Lakeside camp near Grayling, where he went as the guest of Mrs. Clara Sessions and family and where he had a rather unpleasant experience just before his return. The room occupied by Charlie Sessions and Forrest caught fire and destroyed everything belonging to the boys except the clothing they had on. Quite a sum of money was partially burned, which it is thought may be at least partly redeemable.

This is the place where you get the best goods for the least money. Tea, coffee, whole and ground, spices, and flavoring extracts.

CITIZEN'S TEA & COFFEE CO.

Special communication of Northville Lodge No. 186 F. & A. M. Monday evening, Sept. 7, to work Second degree.

W. H. Hutton is to have the management of the play which is to be put on in the opera house by the King's Daughters soon.

The census of the Northville school district has just been completed by Paul Dubuar. There are 456 entitled to draw public money, 41 more than last year.

There will be services in the Universalist church, Plymouth, next Sunday at 10:45 a. m. Preaching by Rev. S. Louisa Haight. All are cordially invited.

J. R. Blackwood and family are about to return to Northville for the benefit of the health of their children. Mr. Blackwood will still carry on his business at South Lyon.

The King's Daughters are now prepared to do all kinds of plain sewing, such as children's clothes, underwear, comfortables, etc., at reasonable prices. Any person wishing such work done will kindly inform Mrs. Bristol.

Always have your name and address on the upper left hand corner of your envelope; then if you forget to address or stamp a letter you will not be obliged to wait several weeks while it goes to the dead letter office, and is opened and returned to you.

Baptist Church Notes.

[By a Member]

Mr. Morse will occupy the Baptist pulpit Sunday.

The BYPU will hold a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Taff Monday evening, Sept. 7.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

[By the Pastor]

The S. D. Circle will meet at Mrs. Jerome's next Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock.

The Ladies Aid society held their first meeting of the year at Mrs. Jane Sessions' on Wednesday afternoon.

The sermon next Sunday morning will be on "The Christian in the World." In the evening on "The Basis of Responsibility."

The large congregations on Sunday were especially gratifying. The sermon in the evening was based upon the recent International yacht race.

We are sorry to lose Prof. Smith from the place he has so long and satisfactorily filled. We hope arrangements can be made by which the choir may still have the benefit of his training.

Methodist Church Notes.

[By the Pastor]

Probationers are to be received into full membership next Sunday morning.

The pastor and choir attended the funeral of Mrs. Knapp at the residence Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

Tuesday evening, Sept. 8th, occurs the annual election of officers in the Epworth League in the Epworth League rooms.

The pastor and wife attended the reception given by Rev. Dr. Shier at 273 Putnam Ave., Detroit, Thursday evening, Sept. 3.

By a rising vote the last quarterly conference unanimously passed resolutions requesting the pastor's return another year.

The Brotherhood of St. Paul of the M. E. church of Plymouth had charge of our evening service last Sunday to the pleasure and profit of a crowded house.

The Harvest Festival Reunion at our church Monday evening, Sept. 14, will be unique in that the men of the board of stewards are to furnish and prepare and serve the refreshments. More of this next week.

Subject of the sermon next Sunday morning, "Why? A Question of Billions," and in the evening, "Broader Ideas of Religion." Also a short prelude will be given on "The Northville Woman's Literary Club."

Electric Line For Cadillac.

Cadillac, Mich., Sept. 2.—The council has before it a proposition to grant a franchise for an electric line in twelve of the principal streets and around the little lake. The projectors are W. J. Cornwell of this city, F. O. Gaffney of Lake City and James H. Orr of Warren, O.

HEALTH

"I don't think we could keep house without Theodor's Black-Draught. We have used it in the family for over two years with the best of results. I have not had a doctor in the house for that length of time. It is a doctor in itself and always ready to make a person well and happy." JAMES HALL, Jacksonville, Ill.

Because this great medicine relieves stomach pains, frees the constipated bowels and invigorates the torpid liver and weakens kidneys.

No Doctor

is necessary in the home where Theodor's Black-Draught is kept. Families living in the country, miles from any physician, have been kept in health for years with this medicine as their only doctor. Theodor's Black-Draught cures biliousness, dyspepsia, colds, chills and fever, bad blood, headaches, diarrhoea, constipation, colic and almost every other ailment because the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys so nearly control the health.

The examination was held Thursday afternoon, Barlow meanwhile being released on his own recognizance.

Lycium Theater—Detroit.

"At the Old Cross Roads," which appears at the Lycium theatre commencing Sept. 6th, with a special Labor day parade, is the play which met with such unusual success at the Grand Opera House, New York City, when at every performance hundreds of people were unable to gain admission to the theatre. In beauty and adherence to nature the old cross roads scene exceeds anything of the kind ever seen on the stage. A special feature is the "American Four Quartet."

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

The Whitney Theatre will offer as its attraction next week Rowland A. Clifford's magnificent production, "Over Niagara Falls." The play is from the pen of Joseph LeBrandt, author of "On the Stroke of Twelve," "Caught in the Web" and other well known melodramatic successes, and is believed to be his best effort. The scenic and electrical effects are most elaborate and splendid, the scene showing the falls by moonlight being a revelation in the scene artist's world. Matinees daily except Wednesday.

Avenue Theatre, Detroit.

Among the big attractions at the Avenue Theatre, Detroit, next week will be Agn, the great mystery. The act is indescribable and one of the present day marvels of the stage. Milton and Dollie Nobles presenting their uproariously funny one-act comedy, "A Blue Grass Widow" will also be one of the head liners.

NORTHVILLE PEOPLE

Can Always Find the Best of Proof in Home Testimony.

The following public statement comes from a resident who can be seen on the street, who can be interviewed at her home, and will be only too pleased to give minute particulars to anyone who really suffers from any of the consequences which inevitably follow weakened and over-excited kidneys. It is not such evidence of more value than a published statement from some citizen of a far-away place?

Mrs. L. E. Fanatia, husband book keeper in the Dubuay factory, and living at 63 Randolph street, says: "I most assuredly think Doan's Kidney Pills a remedy of great merit. I was bothered for some time with a dull aching miserable feeling in my back which to say the least was very annoying. In some way Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and thinking if they did not do me any good they would not do me any harm. I procured a box at Murdock Bros. drug store and began the treatment. I will cheerfully say this I derived more benefit from them than any other remedy I ever used."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a running sound or imp-per hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Cases of deafness are cured by Catarrh Cure, which is not a drug, but an actual correction of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (proved by ear) that can be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

Puts Comfort Before Looks.

Secretary of War Root is a firm believer in the idea that a soldier should look the soldier when engaged in military work, but he also realizes that in very hot weather some measure of smart appearance must give way to comfort, so he has practically said: "Bother your uniforms; dress as you please." Indeed, he has set the example for his bureau chiefs at the war department by stripping off coat and waistcoat and making himself as nearly comfortable as possible in a becoming colored shirt waist.

By
GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Copyright, 1901, by Herbert S. Stone

"Peccavi. Ah, your highness, I delight in my sin! For once I am a power. I speak from the throne. You will not have me abdicate in the zenith of my glory? Be kind, most gracious one. Besides, you did not once cry because your uncle refused to sit with you? Had he been the possessor of a dangerous wound, as I am, and had he found himself so weak that he could stand no longer, I am sure he would have done as I have—sat down in preference to falling limp at your feet. You do not know how badly I am wounded," he pleaded, with the subtlest double meaning.

"Why should you wound me? she asked plaintively. 'You have no right to treat the throne I occupy as a subject for pranks and indignities. I do not believe you could be so forgetful.' There was a proud and pitiful resentment in her voice that brought him to his senses at once. He had defied her throne. In shame and humiliation he cried:

"I am a fool, an ingrate! You have been too gentle with me. For this despicable act of mine I cannot ask pardon, and it would be beneath you to grant it. I have hurt you, and I can never atone. I forgot how sacred is your throne. Let me depart in disgrace." He stood erect as if to forsake the throne he had stained, but she, swayed by a complete reversal of feeling, timidly, pleadingly touched his arm.

"Stay! It is my throne, after all. I shall divide it, as well as the sin, with you. Sit down again, I beg of you. For a brief spell I would rule beside a man who is fit to be a king, but who is a desecrator. There can be no harm, and no one shall be the wiser for this sentimental departure from royal custom. We are children anyhow, mere children."

With an exclamation of delight he resumed his position beside her. His

"Altogether," she cried in frantic terror, hand trembling as he took up hers to carry it to his lips. "We are children—playing with fire," he murmured, this ingrate, this fool!

She allowed her hand to lie limply in his, her head sinking to the back of the chair. When her hand was near his feverish lips, cool and white and trusting, he checked the upward progress. Slowly he raised his eyes to study her face, finding that hers were closed, the semblance of a smile touching her lips as if they were in a happy dream.

The lips! The lips! The lips! The madness of love rushed into his heart; a expectant hand was forgotten; his every hope and every desire measured itself against his discretion as he looked upon the tempting face. Could he kiss those lips but once his life would be complete.

With a start she opened her eyes, doubtless at the command of the masterful ones above. The eyes of blue met the eyes of gray in a short, sharp struggle, and the blue went down in surrender. His lips triumphed slowly, drawing closer and closer as if restrained and impelled by the same emotion—arrogant love.

"O, your eyes, darling," he whispered, and she obeyed. Then their lips met—her first kiss of love!

She trembled from head to foot, perfectly powerless beneath the spell. Again he kissed a princess on her throne. At this second kiss her eyes grew wide with terror, and she sprang from his side, standing before him like one bereft of reason.

"Oh, my God! What have you done?" she wailed. He staggered to his feet, dizzy with joy.

"H!" cried a gruff voice from the door. The guilty ones whirled to look upon the witness to their blissful crime. Inside the curtains, with carbine leveled at the head of the American, stood Alode, the guard, his face distorted with rage. The princess screamed and leaped between Lorry and the threatening carbine.

"Alode!" she cried in frantic terror. He angrily cried out something in his native tongue and she breathlessly, imploringly replied Lorry did not understand their words, but he knew that she had saved him from death at the hand of her loyal, erring guard. Alode lowered his gun, bowed low and turned his back upon the throne.

Nor did he betray surprise when Lorry informed him in answer to a question—that he intended to remain in Edelweiss for some time, adding that he could not expect him to do likewise if he preferred to return to Paris. But Mr. Anguish preferred to remain in Edelweiss. Had not the Countess Dagmar told him she would always be happy to see him at the castle, and had he any reason to renounce its walls? And so it was that they tarried together.

Lorry loitered aimlessly, moodily, about the town, spending gloomy days and wretched nights. He reasoned that it were wisdom to fly, but a force stronger than reason held him in Edelweiss. He ventured several times to the castle wall, but turned back resolutely. There was hope in his breast that she might send for him. There was at least the possibility of seeing her should she ride through the streets. Anguish, on the other hand, visited the castle daily. He spent hours with the pretty countess, undismayed by the noble moths that fluttered about her flame, and he was ever persistent, light hearted and gay. He brought to Lorry's ears all that he could learn of the princess. Several times he had seen her and had spoken with her. She inquired casually after the health of his friend, but nothing more. From the countess he ascertained that her highness was sleeping soundly, eating heartily and apparently enjoying the best of spirits, information decidedly irritating to the one who received it second hand.

They had been at the hotel for over a week when one afternoon Anguish rushed into the room out of breath and scarcely able to control his excitement.

"What's up?" cried Lorry. "Has the countess sacked you?"

"Not on your color! But something is up, and I am its discoverer. You remember what you said about suspecting Prince Gabriel of being the chief rascal in the abduction job? Well, my boy, I am now willing to stake my life that he is the man!" The news bearer sat down on the edge of the bed and drew the first long breath he had had in a long time.

"Why do you think so?" demanded the other, all interest.

"Heard him talking just now. I didn't know who the fellow was at first, but he was talking to some strange looking soldiers as I passed. As soon as I heard his voice I knew he was Michael. There isn't any question about it, Lorry. I am positive. He did not observe me, but I suppose by this time he has learned that his little job was frustrated by two Americans who heard the plot near the castle gates. He has nerve to come here, hasn't he?"

"If he is guilty, yes. Still he may feel secure because he is a powerful prince and able to resist any accusation with a show of force. Where is he now?"

"I left him there. Come on. We'll go down, and you can see for yourself."

"The hurried to the corridor, which was swarming with men in strange uniforms. There were a few Graustark officers, but the majority of the buzzing conversationists were dressed in a rich gray uniform.

"Who are these strangers?" asked Lorry.

"Oh, I forgot to tell you. Prince Lorenz is also here, and these gray fellows are a part of his retinue. Lorenz has come on to the castle. What's the matter?" Lorry had turned pale and was reaching for the wall with unsteady hand.

"He has come for his answer," he said slowly, painfully.

"That's right. I hadn't thought of that. I hope she turns him down. But there's Gabriel over yonder. See those three fellows in blue? The middle one is the prince."

Near the door leading to the piazza stood several men, gray and blue. The man designated as Gabriel was in the center, talking gayly and somewhat loudly, puffing at a cigarette between sentences. He was not ill, but he was strongly and compactly built. His hair and cropped beard were as black as coal, his eyes wide, black and lined. It was a pleasure word face, and Lorry shuddered as he thought of the princess in the power of this evil looking wretch. They leisurely made their way to a spot near the talkers. There was no mistaking the voice. Prince Gabriel and Michael were one up the same beyond all doubt. But how to prove it to the satisfaction of others? Skepticism would follow any attempt to proclaim the prince guilty because his voice sounded like that of the chief conspirator. In a matter where whole nations were concerned the gravest importance would be attached to the accusation of a ruler. Satisfying themselves as to the identity of that peculiar voice, the friends passed through to the piazza.

"What's to be done?" asked Anguish, boiling over with excitement.

"We must go to Baron Dangloss, tell him of our positive discovery, and then consult Count Halfont."

Things to consider, gentlemen. For my part, I would be overjoyed to serve the villain and to serve him as we did his tools, but my hands are tied, you see. I would suggest that you go at once to the princess and Count Halfont, tell them of your suspicions."

"Not suspicious, my lord—facts," interrupted Anguish.

"Well, then, facts, and ascertain how they feel about taking up a proposition that may mean war. May I ask you to come at once to me with their answer. It is possible that they will call for a consultation with the ministers, nobles and high officers. Still, I fear they will be unwilling to risk much on the rather flimsy proof you can give. Gabriel is powerful, and we do not seek a war with him. There is another foe for whom we are quietly whetting our swords." The significant remark caused both listeners to prick up their ears. But he disappointed their curiosity, and they were left to speculate as to whom the other foe might be. Did he mean that Graustark was secretly, slyly, making ready to resist, treaty or no treaty?

It required prolonged urging on the part of Anguish to persuade Lorry to accompany him to the castle, but when once determined to go, before the princess with their tale, he was eager, impatient, to cross the distance that lay between the hotel and the forbidden grounds. They walked rapidly down Castle avenue and were soon at the gates. The guard knew them, and they were admitted without a word. As they hurried through the park they saw many strange men in gray, gaudy uniforms, and it occurred to Lorry that their visit, no matter how great its importance, was ill timed. Prince Lorenz was holding the center of the stage.

Anguish, with his customary impulsiveness, overruled Lorry's objections, and they proceeded toward the entrance. The guards of the princess saluted profoundly, while the minions of Lorenz stared with ill bred wonder upon these two tall men from another world. It could be seen that the castle was astir with excitement, subdued and pregnant with thriving hopes and fears. The nobility of Graustark was there. The visitors of Asaphim were being entertained.

At the castle doors the two men met their first obstacle, but they had anticipated its presence. Two guards halted them peremptorily.

"We must see her royal highness," said Anguish, but the men could not understand him. They stoically stood their ground, shaking their heads.

"Let us find some one who can understand us," advised Lorry and in a few moments they presented themselves before the guards, accompanied by a young nobleman with whom they had acquaintance. He succeeded in advancing them to the reception hall in side the doors and found for them a servant who would carry a message to the princess if it were possible to gain her presence. The nobleman doubted very much, however, if the message hastily written by Lorry could find its way to her, as she had never been so occupied as now.

Lorry in his brief note prayed for a short audience for himself and Mr. Anguish, requesting that Count Halfont be present. He informed her that his mission was of the most imperative nature and that it related to a discovery made concerning the prince who had tried to abduct her. In conclusion he wrote that Baron Dangloss had required him to lay certain facts before her and that he had come with no intention to annoy her.

While they sat in the waiting room they saw through the glass doors dozens of richly attired men and women in the hall beyond. They were conversing animatedly, Graustark men and women with dejected faces, Asaphimians with exultation glowing in every glance. Lorry's heart sank within him. It seemed hours before the servant returned to bid them follow him. Then his blood leaped madly through veins that had been chilled and lifeless. He was to see her again.

Their guide conducted them to a small anteroom, where he left them. A few moments later the door opened, and there swept quickly into the room the Countess Dagmar, not the princess. Her face was drawn with the trouble and sorrow she was trying so hard to conceal. Both men were on their feet in an instant, advancing to meet her.

"The princess? Is she ill?" demanded Lorry.

"Not ill, but mad, I fear," answered she, giving a hand to each. "Mr. Lorry, she bids me say to you that she cannot see you. She appreciates the importance of your mission and thanks you for the interest you have taken. Also she authorizes me to assure you that nothing can be done at present regarding the business on which you come."

"She refuses to see us," said he slowly, his face whiter than ever.

"Nay, she begs that you will excuse her. Her highness is sorely worn and distressed today, and I fear, cannot endure all that is happening. She is apparently calm and composed, but I who know her so well, can see the strain beneath."

"Surely she must see the urgency of quick action in this matter of ours," cried Anguish half angrily. "We are not dogs to be kicked out of the castle. We have a right to be treated fairly."

"We cannot censure the princess, Harry," said Lorry calmly. "We have come because we would defend her and she sees fit to reject our good offices. There is but one thing left for us to do—depart as we came."

"But I don't like it a little bit," growled the other.

"If you only knew, Mr. Anguish, you would not be so harsh and unjust," remonstrated the lady warmly. "Turning to Lorry, she said: 'She asked me to hand you this, and to bid you retain it as a token of her undying esteem.'"

She handed him a small, exquisite miniature of the princess—framed in gold inlaid with rubies. He took it dumbly in his fingers, but dared not look at the portrait it contained. With what might have seemed disrespect he dropped the treasure into his coat pocket.

"Tell her I shall always retain it as a token of her esteem," he said. "And now may I ask whether she handed my note to her uncle, the count?"

The countess blushed in a most unaccountable manner.

"Not while I was with her," she said, recovering the presence of mind she apparently had lost.

"She destroyed it, I presume," said he, laughing harshly.

"I saw her place it in her bosom, sir, and with the right hand," cried the countess as if betraying a state secret.

"In her—? You are telling me the truth?" cried he, his face lighting up.

"Now, see here, Lorry, don't begin to question the countess' word. I won't stand for that," interposed Anguish good humoredly.

"I should be more than base to say falsely that she had done anything so absurd," said the countess indignantly.

"Where is she now?" asked Lorry.

"In her boudoir. The Prince Lorenz is with her—alone."

"What?" he cried, jealousy darting into his existence. He had never known jealousy before.

"They are betrothed," said she, with an effort. There was a dead silence, broken by Lorry's deep groan as he turned and walked blindly to the opposite side of the room. He stopped in front of a huge painting and stared at it, but did not see a line or a tint.

"You don't mean to say she has accepted?" half whispered Anguish.

"Nothing less."

"Thank God, you are only a countess," he said tenderly.

"Why—why—what difference can it make—I mean, why do you say that?" she stammered, crimson to her hair.

"Because you won't have to sell yourself at a sacrifice," he said foolishly. Lorry came back to them at this juncture, outwardly calm and deliberate.

"Tell us about it, pray. We had guessed as much."

"Out there are his people—the wretched," she cried vindictively, her pretty face in a helpless frown. "Today was the day, you know, on which he was to have his answer. He came and knelt in the audience chamber. All Graustark had implored her to refuse the hated offer, but the babe him rise, and there, before us all, promised to become his bride."

"The greatest sorrow Graustark has ever known grows out of that decision. She is determined to give for us what her father's folly lost. To do this she becomes the bride of a life wretch, a man who sells her pure nature when he thinks of her. Oh, we sought to dissuade her, we begged, we entreated, but without avail. She will not part from one foot of Graustark, to save herself. See the triumphant smiles on their faces the bride!" she pointed unthinkingly to the chattering visitors in the hall. Already they think the castle theirs. The nation of Graustark and Asaphim just what they most desired, but we could not make her see it so."

"Is the day set?" asked Lorry bravely after a moment's silent inspection of the dithyrambic victors.

"Yes, and there is to be no delay. The marriage contract has already been signed. The date is Nov. 20, the day on which we are to account to Bohanz for our war debt. The old prince's wedding gift to Graustark is to be a document favoring us with a ten years' extension," she said scornfully.

"And where is she to live?"

"Here, of course. She is Graustark's ruler and here she insists on abiding. Just contemplate our court! Overrun with those Asaphim dogs! Ah, she has wounded Graustark more than she has helped her."

There was nothing more to be said of done, so after a few moments the Americans took their departure. The countess bade them farewell, saying that she must return to the princess.

"I'll see you tomorrow," said Anguish, with rare assurance and the air of an old and indispensable friend.

"And you, Mr. Lorry?" she said curiously.

"I am very much occupied," he murmured.

"You do wrong in seeking to deceive me," she whispered as Anguish passed through the door ahead of them. "I know why you do not come."

"Has she told you?"

"I have guessed. Would that it could have been you and not the other!"

"You see, it's this way: I'm just as much hit as you, and it is not a princess that I have to contend with."

"You mean that you are in love with the countess?"

"Emphatically."

"I'm sorry for you."

"Think she'll turn me down?"

"These miserable counts or dukes?"

"Oh, I'm not so sure about that. These counts and dukes come over and marry our American girls. I don't see why I can't step in and pick out a nice little countess if I want to."

"She is not as avaricious as the counts and dukes, I'll wager. She cares nothing for your money."

"Well, she's as poor as a church mouse," said the other doggedly.

"The countess poor? How do you know?"

"I asked her one day and she told me all about it," said Anguish.

As soon as the Russian authorities can spare the time after counting up the victims in southern Russia they can proceed with the good work of demanding that the sultan put a stop to the persecutions in Macedonia.

Case of Jar.

In China a jar placed on the roof of a house with the bottom end toward the street indicates that the daughter of the house is not yet of age to marry. As soon as she has developed into a marriageable maiden the jar is turned with its mouth toward the street. When the young lady gets married the jar is removed altogether. Wouldn't that jar you?

Before Rome Was Founded.

In one of the tombs recently excavated in the Roman Forum a vase was discovered, the inscriptions on which show that it belongs to the twelfth century before Christ, or 40 years before the reputed date of the founding of Rome. Signor Boni, the director of the excavations, believes the tomb to be a relic of a city which existed and had disappeared before Rome was founded.

Stomach Trouble.

"I have been troubled with my stomach for the past four years," says Dr. L. B. of Clover Nook Farm, Greenfield, Mass. "A few days ago I was induced to try a box of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. I have taken part of them and feel a great deal better. If you have any trouble with your stomach try a box of these Tablets. You are certain to be cured with the result. Price 25 cents."

Lots of Work for Idle Hands.

Long and urgent are the calls from western farms and orchards for scores of thousands of wage earners for the harvesting of the crops and the garnering of the fruits. But too many idlers, tramps and beggars in our cities, and in the country regions also, turn deaf ears to such appeals and refuse tempting opportunities to earn honest and comfortable livings. The vagrant spirit, the "dead-beat" desire to get along without working, is too conspicuous everywhere.—New York Tribune.

"Peccavi. Ah, your highness, I delight in my sin! For once I am a power. I speak from the throne. You will not have me abdicate in the zenith of my glory? Be kind, most gracious one. Besides, did you not once cry because your uncle refused to sit with you? Had he been the possessor of a dangerous wound, as I am, and had he found himself so weak that he could stand no longer, I am sure he would have done as I have—sat down in preference to falling limp at your feet. You do not know how badly I am wounded," he pleaded, with the subtlest double meaning.

"Why should you wound me?" she asked plaintively. "You have no right to treat the throne I occupy as a subject for pranks and indignities. I did not believe you could be so forgetful. There was a proud and pitiful resentment in her voice that brought him to his senses at once. He had defied her throne. In shame and humiliation he cried:

"I am a fool, an ingrate! You have been too gentle with me. For this despicable act of mine I cannot ask pardon, and it would be beneath you to grant it. I have hurt you, and I can never atone. I forgot how sacred is your throne. Let me depart in disgrace." He stood erect as if to forsake the throne he had stained, but she, swayed by a complete reversal of feeling, timidly, pleadingly touched his arm.

"Stay! It is my throne, after all. I shall divide it, as well as the sun, with you. Sit down again, I beg of you. For a brief spell I would rule beside a man who is fit to be a king, but who is a desecrator. There can be no harm, and no one shall be the wiser for this sentimental departure from royal custom. We are children anyhow, mere children."

With an exclamation of delight he resumed his position beside her. His

"Altogether," she cried in frantic terror, hand trembled as he took up hers to carry it to his lips. "We are children—playing with fire," he murmured, this ingrate, this fool!

She allowed her hand to lie limply in his, her head sinking to the back of the chair. When her hand was near his feverish lips, cool and white and trusting, he checked the upward progress. Slowly he raised his eyes to study her face, finding that hers were closed, the semblance of a smile touching her lips as if they were in a happy dream.

The lips! The lips! The lips! The madness of love rushed into his heart; a expert hand was forgotten; his every hope and every desire measured itself against his discretion as he looked upon the tempting face. Could he kiss those lips but once his life would be complete.

With a start she opened her eyes, doubtless at the command of the masterful ones above. The eyes of blue met the eyes of gray in a short, sharp struggle, and the blue went down in surrender. His lips trembled slowly, drawing closer and closer as if restrained and impelled by the same emotion—arrogant love.

"Oh, my eyes, darling," he whispered, and she obeyed. Their lips met—and their first kiss!

She trembled from head to foot, perfectly powerless beneath the spell. Again he kissed a princess on her throne. At this second kiss her eyes, gray wide with terror and she sprang from his side, standing before him like one bereft of reason.

"Oh, my God! What have you done?" she wailed. He staggered to his feet, dizzy with joy.

"Did" grow a gruff voice from the door, and the guilty ones whirled to look upon the witness to their blissful crime. Inside the curtains, with carbine leveled at the head of the American, stood Alode, the guard, his face distorted with rage. The princess screamed and leaped between Lorry and the threatening carbine.

"Alode!" she cried in frantic terror. He angrily cried out something in his native tongue and she, breathlessly, imploringly replied. Lorry did not understand their words, but he knew that she had saved him from death at the hand of her loyal, armed guard. Alode lowered his gun, bowed low, and turned his back upon the throne.

"He—would have killed you," she said tremulously, her face the picture of combined agony and relief. She remembered the blighting kisses and then the averted disaster.

"You—what did you say to him?" he asked.

"I—I—oh, I will not tell you," she cried.

"I beg of you."

"I told him that he was to—was to put down his gun."

"I know that, but why?" he persisted.

"I—ah, to save you, stupid!"

"How did you explain the—the?" He hesitated, generously.

"I told him that I had not been—that I had not been—"

"Say it!"

"That I had not been—offended!" she gasped, standing stiff and straight, with eyes glued upon the obedient guard.

"You were not?" he rapturously cried.

"I said it only to save your life!" she cried, turning fiercely upon him.

"I shall never forgive you—never! You must go—you must leave here at once! Do you hear? I cannot have you near me now, I cannot see you again. What have I given you the right to say of me?"

"Stop! It is as sacred as—"

"Yes, yes, I understand! I trust you, but you must go! Find some excuse to give your friend and go today! Go now!" she cried intensely, "for it putting her hands to her temples, then to her eyes."

Without waiting to hear his remonstrance, if indeed he had the power to utter one, she glided swiftly toward the curtains, allowing him to follow at his will. Dazed and crushed at the sudden end to everything, he dragged his footless after. At the door she spoke in low, imperative tones to the motionless Alode, who dropped to his knees and muttered a reverential response. As Lorry passed beneath the hand that held the curtain aside he glanced at the face of the man who had been witness to their weakness. He was looking straight ahead, and from his expression it could not have been detected that he knew there was a man on earth sane himself. In the hall she turned to him, her face cold and pale.

"I have faithful guards about me now. Alode has said he did not see you in the throneroom. He will do before he will say otherwise," she said, her lips trembling with shame.

"By your command?"

"By my request. I do not command my men to lie."

Side by side they passed down the quiet hall, silent, thoughtful, the strain of death upon their hearts.

"I shall obey the only command you have given, then. This day I leave the castle. You will let me come again—to see you? There can be no harm."

"No! You must leave Graustark at once!" she interrupted, the tones low.

"I refuse to go! I shall remain in Edelweiss, near you, just so long as I feel that I may be of service to you."

"I cannot drive you out as I would a thief," she said pointedly.

At the top of the broad staircase he held out his hand and murmured:

"Goodby, your highness."

"Goodby," she said simply, placing her hand in his after a moment's hesitation. Then she left him.

An hour later the two Americans, one strangely subdued, the other curious, excited and impatient, stood before the castle waiting for the carriage. Count Halfont was with them, begging them to remain, as he could see no reason for the sudden leaving.

Lorry assured him that they had trespassed long enough on the court's hospitality and that he would feel much more comfortable at the hotel. Anguish looked narrowly at his friend's face, but said nothing. He was beginning to understand.

"Let us walk to the gates. The count will oblige us by instructing the coachman to follow," said Lorry, eager to be off.

"Allow me to join you in the walk, gentlemen," said Count Caspar, immediately instructing a lackey to send the carriage after them. He and Lorry walked on together, Anguish lingering behind, having caught sight of the Countess Dagmar. That charming and unconventional piece of nobility promptly followed the prime minister's example and escorted the remaining guest to the gate.

Far down the walk Lorry turned for a last glance at the castle from which love had banished him. Yet he was standing on the balcony, looking not at the monastery, but at the exile.

She remained there long after the carriage had passed her gates bearing the Americans swiftly over the white Castle avenue, and there were tears in her eyes.

CHAPTER XV.
THE BETROTHAL.

HARRY Anguish was a discreet, forbearing fellow. He did not demand a full explanation of his friend. There was enough natural wit in his merry head to see that in connection with their departure there was something that would not admit of discussion even by confidential friends. He shrewdly formed his own conclusions and held his peace.

Nor did he betray surprise when Lorry informed him in answer to a question that he intended to remain in Edelweiss for some time, adding that he could not expect him to do likewise if he preferred to return to Paris. But Mr. Anguish preferred to remain in Edelweiss. Had not the Countess Dagmar told him she would always be happy to see him at the castle, and had he any reason to renounce its walls? And so it was that they tarried together.

Lorry loitered aimlessly, moodily, about the town, spending gloomy days and wretched nights. He reasoned that it were wisdom to fly, but a force stronger than reason held him in Edelweiss. He ventured several times to the castle wall, but turned back reluctantly. There was hope in his breast that she might send for him. There was at least the possibility of seeing her should she ride through the streets. Anguish, on the other hand, visited the castle daily. He spent hours with the pretty countess, undismayed by the noble moths that fluttered about her flame, and he was ever persistent, light hearted and gay. He brought to Lorry's ears all that he could learn of the princess. Several times he had seen her and had spoken with her. She inquired casually after the health of his friend, but nothing more. From the countess he ascertained that her highness was sleeping soundly, eating heartily and apparently enjoying the best of spirits, information decidedly irritating to the one who received it second hand.

They had been at the hotel for over a week, when one afternoon Anguish rushed into the room out of breath and scarcely able to control his excitement.

"What's up?" cried Lorry. "Has the countess sicked you?"

"Not on your coin! But something is up, and I am its discoverer. You remember what you said about suspecting Prince Gabriel of being the chief rascal in the abduction job? Well, my boy, I am now willing to stake my life that he is the man!" The news bearer sat down on the edge of the bed and drew the first long breath he had had in a long time.

"Why do you think so?" demanded the other, all interest.

"Heard him talking just now—I didn't know who the fellow was at first, but he was talking to some strange-looking soldiers as I passed. As soon as I heard his voice I knew he was Michael! There isn't any question about it, Lorry. I am positive. "If he is guilty, yes. Still he may feel secure because he is a powerful prince and able to resent any accusation with a show of force. Where is he now?"

"I left him there, I came on. We'll go down, and you can see for yourself."

They hurried to the corridor, which was swarming with men in strange uniforms. There were a few Graustark officers, but the majority of the buzzing conversationists were dressed in a rich gray uniform.

"Who are these strangers?" asked Lorry.

Near the door leading to the piazza stood several men, gray and blue. The man designated as Gabriel was in the center, talking gayly and somewhat loudly, puffing at a cigarette between sentences. He was not ill, but he was strongly and compactly built. His hair and cropped beard were as black as coal, his eyes wide, black and lined. It was a pleasure worn face, and Lorry shuddered as he thought of the princess in the power of this evil looking wretch. They leisurely made their way to a spot near the talkers. There was no mistaking the voice. Prince Gabriel and Michael were one and the same beyond all doubt. But how to prove it to the satisfaction of others? "What's to be done?" asked Anguish, boiling over with excitement.

"We must go to Baron Dangloss, tell him of our positive discovery, and then consult Count Halfont."

"And her royal highness, of course."

"Yes, I suppose so," said Lorry, flicking the ashes from his cigar with a finger that was now steady. He was serving the princess again.

They hurried to the tower and were soon in the presence of the fierce little chief of police. Lorry had spent many hours with Dangloss of late, and they had become friends. His grim old face blanched perceptibly as he heard the assertions of the young men. He shook his head despairingly.

"It may be as you say, gentlemen, but I am afraid we can do nothing. To charge a prince with such a crime and on such evidence would be madness. I am of your belief, however. Prince Gabriel is the man I have suspected. Now I am convinced. Before we can do anything in such a grave matter it will be necessary to consult the princess and her ministers. In case we conclude to accuse the Prince of Dawsbergen it must be after careful and judicious thought. There are many things to consider, gentlemen. Formerly, I would be overjoyed to seize the villain and to serve him as we did his tools, but my hands are tied, you see. I would suggest that you go at once to the princess and Count Halfont, tell them of your suspicions."

"Not suspicious, my lord—facts," interrupted Anguish.

"Well, then, facts, and ascertain how they feel about taking up a proposition that may mean war. May I ask you to come at once to me with their answer. It is possible that they will call for a constitution with the ministers, nobles and high officers. Still, I fear they will be unwilling to risk much on the rather flimsy proof you can give. Gabriel is powerful, and we do not seek a war with him. There is another foe for whom we are quietly whetting our swords. The significant remark caused both listeners to prick up their ears. But he disappointed their curiosity, and they were left to speculate as to whom the other foe might be. Did he mean that Graustark was secretly, slyly, making ready to resist, treaty or no treaty?

It required prolonged urging on the part of Anguish to persuade Lorry to accompany him to the castle, but when once determined to go, before the princess with their tale, he was eager, impatient, to cross the distance that lay between the hotel and the forbidden grounds. They walked rapidly down Castle avenue and were soon at the gates. The guard knew them, and they were admitted without a word. It could be seen that the castle was astir with excitement, subdued and pregnant with thrilling hopes and fears. The nobility of Graustark was there. The visitors of Asphain were being entertained.

At the castle doors the two men met their first obstacle, but they had anticipated its presence. Two guards halted them peremptorily.

"We must see her royal highness," said Anguish, but the men could not understand him. They solemnly stood their ground, shaking their heads.

"Let us find some one who can understand us," advised Lorry, and in a few moments they presented themselves before the guards, accompanied by a young nobleman with whom they had become acquainted. He succeeded in advancing them to the reception hall in spite of the doors and found for them a servant who would carry a message to the princess if it were possible to gain her presence. The nobleman doubted very much, however, if the message hastily written by Lorry could find its way to her, as she had never been so occupied as now.

Lorry in his brief note played for a short audience for himself and Mr. Anguish, requesting that Count Halfont be present. He informed her that his mission was of the most imperative nature and that it related to a discovery made concerning the prince who had tried to abduct her. In conclusion he wrote that Baron Dangloss had required him to lay certain facts before her and that he had come with no intention to annoy her.

While they sat in the waiting room they saw through the glass doors dozens of richly attired men and women in the hall beyond. They were conversing animatedly, Graustark men and women with deflated faces, Asphainians with exultation glowing in every glance. Lorry's heart sank within him. It seemed hours before the servant returned to bid them follow him. Then his blood leaped madly through veins that had been chilled and lifeless. He was to see her again!

The guide conducted them to a small anteroom, where he left them. A few moments later the door opened, and there swept quickly into the room the Countess Dagmar, not the princess. Her face was drawn with the trouble and sorrow she was trying so hard to conceal. Both men were on their feet in an instant, advancing to meet her.

"The princess? Is she ill?" demanded Lorry.

"Not ill, but mad, I fear," answered she, giving a hand to each. "Mr. Lorry, she bids me say to you that she cannot see you. She appreciates the importance of your mission and thanks you for the interest you have taken. Also she authorizes me to assure you that nothing can be done at present regarding the business on which you come."

"She refuses to see us," said he slowly, his face whiter than ever.

"Nay; she begs that you will excuse her. Her highness is sorely worn and distressed today, and, I fear, cannot endure all that is happening. She is apparently calm and composed, but I who know her so well, can see the strain beneath."

"Surely she must see the urgency of quick action in this matter of ours!" cried Anguish, anxiously. "We are not dogs to be kicked out of the castle. We have a right to be treated fairly!"

"We cannot censure the princess," Harry said Lorry calmly. "We have come because we would befriend her, and she sees fit to reject our good offices. There is but one thing left for us to do—depart as we came."

"But I don't like it a little bit," growled the other.

"If you only knew, Mr. Anguish, you would not be so harsh and unjust," remonstrated the lady warmly. Turning to Lorry, she said, "She asked me to hand you this and to bid you retain it as a token of her undying esteem."

She handed him a small, exquisite miniature of the princess framed in gold inlaid with rubies. He took it daintily in his fingers, but dared not look at the portrait it contained. With what might have seemed disrespect he dropped the treasure into his coat pocket.

"Tell her I shall always retain it as a token of her esteem," he said. "And now may I ask whether she banded my note to her uncle, the count?"

The countess blushed in a most unaccountable manner.

"Not while I was with her," she said, recovering the presence of mind she apparently had lost.

"She destroyed it, I presume," said he, laughing harshly.

"I saw her place it in her bosom, sir, and with the right hand," cried the countess as if betraying a state secret.

"In her—? You are telling me the truth?" cried he, his face lighting up.

"Now, see here, Lorry, don't begin to question the countess's word. I won't stand for that," interposed Anguish good humoredly.

"I should be more than base to say falsely that she had done anything so absurd," said the countess indignantly.

"Where is she now?" asked Lorry.

"In her boudoir. The Prince Lorenz is with her—alone."

"What?" he cried, jealousy darting into his existence. He had never known jealousy before.

"They are betrothed," said she, with an effort. There was a dead silence, broken by Lorry's deep groan as he turned and walked blindly to the opposite side of the room. He stopped in front of a huge painting and stared at it, but did not see a line or a tint.

"You don't mean to say she has accepted?" half whispered Anguish.

"Nothing, less."

"Thank God, you are only a countess," he said tenderly.

"Why—why—what difference can it make—I mean, why do you say that?" she stammered, crimson to her hair.

"Because you won't have to sell yourself at a sacrifice," he said foolishly. Lorry came back to them at this juncture, outwardly calm and deliberate.

"Tell us about it, pray. We had guessed as much."

"Out there are his people—the wretches!" she cried vindictively, her pretty face in a helpless frown. "Today was the day, you know, on which he was to have his answer. He came and knelt in the audience chamber. All Graustark had implored her to refuse the hated offer, but she bade him rise, and there, before us all, promised to become his bride."

"The greatest sorrow Graustark has ever known grows out of that decision. She is determined to save for us what her father's folly lost. To do this she becomes the bride of a vile wretch, a man who sold her pure nature when he flirts with her. Oh, we sought to dissuade her—we begged, we entreated, but without avail. She will not permit one fool of Graustark to save herself. See the triumphant smile on her face—the brides!" She pointed maliciously to the chattering visitors in the hall. "Already they think the castle theirs. The union of Graustark and Asphain! Just what they most desired, but we could not make her see it so."

"Is the day set?" asked Lorry bravely after a moment's silent inspection of the dark, bowed visitors.

"Yes, and there is to be no delay. The marriage contract has already been signed. The date is Nov. 20, the day on which we are to account to Poland for our war debt. The old prince's wedding gift to Graustark is to be a document favoring us with a ten years' extension," she said scornfully.

"And where is she to live?"

"Here, of course. She is Graustark's ruler, and here she has to abide. Just contemplate our court! Overrun with those Asphain dogs! Ah, she has wounded Graustark more than she has helped her."

There was nothing more to be said or done, so after a few moments the Americans took their departure. The countess bade them farewell, saying that she must return to the princess.

"I'll see you tomorrow," said Anguish, with rare assurance and the air of an old and indispensable friend.

"And you, Mr. Lorry?" she said curiously.

"I am very much occupied," he mumbled.

"You do wrong in seeking to deceive me," she whispered as Anguish passed through the door ahead of them. "I know why you do not come."

"Has she told you?"

"I have guessed. Would that it could have been you and not the other!"

"One cannot be a man and a prince at the same time, I fancy," he said bitterly.

"Nor can one be a princess and a woman."

Lorry recalled the conversation in the sickroom two weeks before and smiled ironically. The friendly girl led them at the door and they passed out of the castle.

"I shall leave Edelweiss tomorrow," said one more to himself than to his companion as they crossed the parade. The other gave a start and did not look pleased. Then he instinctively glanced toward the castle.

"The princess is at the window," he cried, catching Lorry's arm and pointing back. But the other refused to turn, walking on blindly. "You ought not to have acted like that, Gren," said Anguish a few moments later. "She saw me call your attention to her, and she saw you refuse to look back. I don't think that you should have hurt her." Lorry did not respond, and there was no word between them until they were outside the castle gates.

"You may leave tomorrow, Lorry, if you like, but I'm going to stay awhile," said Harry a trifle confusedly.

"Haven't you had enough of the place?"

"I don't care a whoop for the place."

"You see, it's this way—I'm just as much as you, and it is not a princess that I have to contend with."

"You mean that you are in love with the countess?"

"Emphatically."

"I'm sorry for you."

"Think she'll turn me down?"

"Unless you buy a title of one of these miserable counts or dukes."

"Oh, I'm not so sure about that. These counts and dukes come over and marry our American girls. I don't see why I can't step in and pick out a nice little countess if I want to."

"She is not as avaricious as the counts and dukes, I'll wager. She cares nothing for your money."

"Well, she's as poor as a church mouse," said the other doggedly.

"The countess poor? How do you know?"

"I asked her one day, and she told me all about it," said Anguish.

As soon as the Russian authorities can spare the time after counting up the victims in southern Russia they can proceed with the good work of demanding that the sultan put a stop to the persecutions in Macedonia.

Case of Jar.

In China a jar placed on the roof of a house with the bottom end toward the street indicates that the daughter of the house is not yet of age to marry. As soon as she has developed into a marriageable maiden the jar is turned with its mouth toward the street. When the young lady gets married the jar is removed altogether. Wouldn't that jar you?

Diphtheria, sore throat, croup, infant and permanent cure. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. At any drug store.

Priest and Painter.

Ray A. H. Shields, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Boston, is an artist as well as a priest. He earned enough money painting the past winter to afford a summer in the galleries of the old world, and sails for Europe to paint in the national gallery of London, in the Louvre and Luxembourg galleries during his vacation season.

Feet swollen to immense size.

I had kidney trouble so bad that I could not work. Says I. C. Cox, of Valley View, Ky.: "My feet were swollen to immense size and I was confined to my bed and physicians were unable to give me any relief. My doctor finally prescribed Foley's Kidney Cure which made a well run of me." Sold by Mundock Bros.

Before Rome Was Founded.

In one of the tombs recently excavated in the Roman Forum a vase was discovered, the inscriptions on which show that it belongs to the twelfth century before Christ or 40 years before the reputed date of the founding of Rome. Signor Boni, the director of the excavations, believes the tomb to be a relic of a city which existed and had disappeared before Rome was founded.

Stomach Trouble.

I have been troubled with my stomach for the past four years," says D. L. Beach, of Clover Nook Farm, Greenfield, Mass.: "A few days ago I was induced to buy a box of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. I have taken part of them and feel a great deal better. If you have any trouble with your stomach try a box of these Tablets. You are certain to be pleased with the result. Price 25 cents."

Lots of Work for Idle Hands.

Land and urgent are the calls from western farms and orchards for scores of thousands of wage earners for the harvesting of the crops and for the garnering of the fruits. But too many idlers, tramps and beggars in our cities, and in the country regions also, turn deaf ears to such appeals and refuse tempting opportunities to earn honest and comfortable livings. The vagrant spirit, the "dead-beat" desire to get along without working, is too conspicuous everywhere.—New York Tribune.

The 1903 Latest Perfected
GRAPHOPHONES
RECORDS are as far in advance of what may have previously heard

Type A0
$30

A vintage gramophone with a large, flared horn. The base is a dark, rectangular wooden cabinet with a small label on the front that reads 'Gramophone'. The horn is made of a light-colored material, possibly brass or wood, and is mounted on a turntable. The overall design is classic and elegant.

Real Music, Real Voices, AND
Real Reproduction of Sound
CHARACTERIZE THE
Up-to-date Graphophone

You will make a great mistake to buy any Talking Machine
until you have heard the latest Graphophone.
