A Thanksgiving Sleigh Ride

By WILLIAM WALTERS:

NE might search the map for a week without finding the town of Tsilam, though it is an important shipping port in the logwood district of Yucatan, that part of Mexico which is nearest to the island of Cuba-that is, it is quite important for a port without any people to speak of-and the reason why it would not be detected is that the first two letters of Tsilam, the T and s, are replaced by an inverted C. which has the same "power" in pronunciation. The United States consul in Merida. the capital of Yucatan, promised me that if I would lie over another steamer instead of proceeding directly to Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico be would celebrate Thanksgiving day. which fell due in the interval, in a fit ting and appropriate manner He would not tell me exactly how he intended to do it, but I knew him well enough to feel assured of something novel in store and so postponed the trip to Vera Cruz and placed myself unreservedly in his hands

"Shows you've got sense," said he approvingly, "to trust me for the time being. Now, as a great and just reward I'm going to give you the time of your life. I've arranged for a grand-'poo,' which is the vernacular for a wild turkey hunt, and the native name for that turkey, by the way, is pavo del monte, or the peacock of the hills. It is a smaller but more beautiful burd than the wild turkey of North Ameri-Its meat has a finer flavor, and its plumage is glorious, every feather being typed with a great golden 'eye,' life the peacock's, which fact has caused the naturalists to name it the Melengris occillarus

"But enough of turkey terminology You can hunt that up for yourself in the books on the subject. Two years ago last jaine I loss the use of my left arm, could not use it and could only move fit with the help of my right hand. My heart was so weak I could not sleep nights for smothering spells. I was out of sorts all over and could eat nothing. I grew so weak that I could not wak without staggiering hise's drunken man and my home doctor sand he could do nothing for me. I was in so much pain I was almost wild. I could not take morphine not opium as they made me worse. So I got to thinking about Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervy e and the more I thought the more I wanted to try them. I would to the Dr. Miles Medical Co for advice which I followed to the lefter. I can say today that I ain "lad I did as I am a vell woman now; can vork and can walk two or three miles and non mind it. I can also use my arm again as well as ever. You do not know, how thank fully I am for those grand medicines Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Nervy. I then! Dr. Miles' Kenedies are the best in the world, and if I should get sick again I should yake the same course. The remedies also heiped my daughter Vida so won'derfully that I should have written you before to trank you, but I wanted to be sare that the cure was refinanced, which I now know to be take was refinanced, which I now know to be due to the Dr. Miles' Remedies. McKALE DENIES TELLING GRAND JURY'S SECRETS.

SOME FACTS ACCOUNTED FOR IN AN ODD MANNER.

ALL TELL A STORY FAVORABLE FOR SUTTON.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 19 .- The principal witness in the Holbrook trial Wednesday afternoon was William H McKale, who was a member of the grand jury that indicted Sutton He said that he supposed he is the "Mac" referred to by Holbrook in several letters to Sutton regarding the work of the grand jury McKale denied having fiven Holbrook or any one else scoreis ot the grand jury and could not account for Holbrook's letters to Su ton containing reports of grand jury testimony which he said Le secured from Mac'

Witness admitted calling on Sutton in Detroit after indictment, but de-nied Sution's statement that they discussed grand jury matters. Said he went there to have Sutton transact hall for examination. legal business for him He could not explain how he happened to go to the man he had so recently voted to su-

ici. McKaje also said that when before Judge Weist, when the investigation of the Sutton jury was being made, he did not recall testimony given yesterday, although questioned regarding that particular matter. Depied that his memory was refreshed recently by the detense.

y Foreman Brown on Stand. The first witness sworn in the Holbrook case in the morning was Foreman Fred Brown of the Sutton jury. He swore that no bribe was offered him, that no one talked with him about the case, nor, so far as he knew, to any member of the jury He also swore that when the jury reached its verdict Deputy Hodge and not Deputy Loomis, as claimed by Sutton, answered to his rap on the jury foom door, and to Hodge he simply announced that the jury had agreed

Brown stuck to the statement made at the trial, that he had never met Sulton up to that time, although admitting that a year or so before he rode in a carriage from Mason to Dans. ville with Governor Pingree, Sheriff Mollwen and a third person, whom he did not meet or know, during a ein-paign trip of Pingree The chird party, noth Port of hottlinba

It is said Five Grains of Arsenic Was Found.

Owosso, Mich., Nov. 29-Dr. Moses Domberg of the University of Michigan, who analyzed the contents of George Leachman's stomach, has reported the presence, it is said, of five grains of arsenic. To become operative, arsenic-must be absorbed, so Di. Domberg had no means of knowing how much had been administered to Leachman, as the latter was dead from the effects of the drug in his sys tem. 'It is said that in normal persons more than one-sixth of a grain will ordinarilly produce death, so the murderer of Leachman made sure he had enough.

CHAPTER V. "MY KAME IS TURRÍAN—PIERRE TUR-BIAN. "

Beryl had not written the letter of congratulation to her cousin without a considerable struggle.

She did not like and did not trust Lola, and she had noticed in her many things that had sharpened this distrust She had at one time seen a great deal of Lola, as Mrs. Villyers had made many efforts to bring the two girls to-getter, and though at first Beryl had to some extent come within the influence of Lola's unquestionably attractive. manner there had been no regard or real affection between them.

Quite irrespective of her own disappointment—and how deep and stinging and bitter that was no one but herself knew—Beryl was dead against the mar-riage. She felt that Lola did not love Taffray even with such love as she was capable of feeling. She had bewitched him with her lustrous beauty and glamoured him with her surface sensuous charms, but that was all.

Had Beryl written as she felt, therefore, her letter world have been very different, but she had a far too genuine friendship for her consin to want to cause him anything but pleasure. She would have done her utmost to prevent the match, but she would not say a word to wound Sir Jaffray's feeling.

Nor was this feeling altogether free from a touch of self. So far asshe could help it, not a soul should think that she was in reality anything but pleased at the marriage. She was no feel to more and pule over a lost romance, and she no fidiculous ideas exaggerating the effects of the disappointment to her. It would have been an infinite and indescribable pleasure to pass through life by the side of Sir Jahlay as his wife, but she did not intend that they break ing of the dream should gloom and speil

You never know what you want at a time which lets the knowledge be of the least possible use. I didn't want to force you into the marriage, child. I'm not a brute or a Bluebeard."

The last connection was not very clear, but it let Beryl turn the question. "Bluebeard married all the women himself, dad," she said. Laughing and placing her hands on his shoulders, she

And then he resumed his reading, interrupted by paness of thought. panses of thought.

But he never doubted for a moment that he had now read Beryl's feelings accurately, and she was careful to keep up her spirits and keep down her feelings until her father was quite reconciled to the fact of the arrangement having come to an untimely end.

-With Sir Juffray, Beigl took a somewhat similar course.

Lady Walcote at her position and in the end prevailed. What did more than anything else, however, to make the girl's real feelings difficult to understand was her attirade toward Lola herself. She acted precisely as she might have done had there never been any idea that she herself should marry Sir Jaffray, and she bore herself toward Lola as though the latter, by her engagement to the haronet, had become a member of the inner circle of the family and was therefore to be treated as an intimate.

- She was neither so cordial at first that people could think she was seeking to hide any mortification under that cover nor so distant as to suggest hostility toward the girl who had sup-planted her. She allowed the relations between them to develop naturally, and she drilled herself to take a keen interest in all the preparations for the mar

In this way she completely baffled Lola herself, quick and shrewd though the latter was. She could not under stand that any woman who had really loved a man could see him taken away from her and yet harbor no anger against the woman who had taken him.

'If she'd done it to me, I'd have poisoned her!" she exclaimed to herself more than once after she had been watching Beryl closely and had been "She can't more puzzled than usual." have cared for him, or she's the most artful devil that ever wore petticoats. -In time she came to the conclusion that Beryl's calmness was not, as she had thought at first, a mask, but the natural expression of a weman who had no deep feelings to stir or in whom they had nêver been stirred.

Thus during the preparations for the wedding the two girls were much together, and when people knew that Beryl was to be the chief bridesmaid, and that she and Lady Walcote were as keenly interested in all the details of the wedding as Lola herself, they read Beryl's conduct from the surface and agreed that she and not Sir Jaffray was

In the early part of the New Year Bervl was booked for a visit to an old friend's house, and after busying herself with some of the preparations she was walking one afternoon in the park close by the drive and not far from the house when she noticed a stranger going toward the house. It is not wise to ask your guests what portion of the bird they prefer. Six or eight might choose a leg, and thus you have made some bitter enemies for life.

Many people make the mistake of carving the breast of the furkey first. Always leave this until the list and thus get a good portion of it for yourself.

Do not fail to send the cook the choicest portions of the bird at the earliest possible moment. Some cooks do not mind waiting five or ten min ures for their Thanksgiving dinner, but It is well to take no chances.
