NORTHVILLE, MICH., MAY 6, 1904.

Just a Plain Citizen.

The Detroit papers that have seen fit to oppose Fred M. Warner's candidacy publish extracts from such papers out of the state as also oppose him. To show that not all papers follow the lead of the big dailies, however, we publish the following from the Fort Huron Herald of April 15, and everyone who has ever known Fred Warner will endorse every word of it:

"I have not the measure of Homer Warren's acquaintance and, of course, never dined with him at the Detroit Club. In fact very few of the sturdy yeomen of St. Clair county have had the opportunity to don their swallow tails and flora Detroit Club accoutrements, and as a rule they do not care to have their governors or senators with any such aristocratic gathering. We are rather inclined to think that the Fort Huron Herald is a good paper."

Such contracts between transportation companies are not analogous to ordinary contracts. The courts are already overburdened with questions that are semi-judicial, and UPON CONGRESS, as the representative of the American people, should rest the responsibility of determining by a well conceived law the extent, if any, to which the expedition of competing carriers should be permitted.

In this connection the question suggests itself as to whether all inter-state carriers should not be required to operate UNDER A FEDERAL CHARTER. It would not subject them to my great fear of state federal power, which is already plenary, but it would enable the federal government to deal with them in a less indirect manner.

The effect, however, with a federal charter is that its authority is limited to inter-state traffic and can confer none to operate within the borders of a state. This would subject the carriers to all the inconvenience of two charters, and thus make consolidation more difficult.

In view of the centralizing tendencies of steam and electricity, the country will eventually consider the propriety of such an amendment to the constitution as will grant to transportation companies the right to run their business THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY under the protection of a federal charter.

SUCH A LAW WOULD UNQUESTIONABLY GO FAR TO OBLITERATE STATE LINES AND CREATE A GOVERNMENT MORE STRONGLY CENTRALIZED THAN THE WILDEST DREAM OF ALEXANDER HAMILTON. BUT NEITHER HAMILTON NOR JEFFERSON EVER CONCEIVED THE POSSIBILITY OF THE RAILROAD OR THE TELEGRAPH.

Federal Control Of Railroads

By J. M. BECK, Ex-Assistant Attorney General of the United States

FEW if any cases since the Dred Scott decision have excited greater interest than that of the Northern Securities merger, but this interest is more due to the MAGNITUDE OF THE MONEY INTERESTS involved than to any novel principle of jurisprudence thereby declared.

THE UNDERLYING QUESTION, HOWEVER, IS AS TO WHETHER COMPETITION BETWEEN RAILWAYS IS LONGER EITHER PRACTICABLE OR DESIRABLE.

Other nations have reached the conclusion that the consolidation of railways into a few and even into one system is of greater benefit to the public than a number of SEPARATE SYSTEMS. But it must be remembered that in most of these countries the question is solved by the merger of the railroads into the government, which owns and operates them.

Whether in the absence of state ownership the consolidation of transportation companies is desirable is a question about which men may reasonably differ, and no question should receive earlier and more earnest consideration at the hands of congress.

The Northern Securities decision is also of interest as indicating a future retreat by a majority of the court from the extreme position of the joint traffic cases that the Sherman antitrust law FORBIDDEN ALL RESTRAINTS OF TRADE. As common law the courts reserved the right to determine whether under the circumstances of a particular case a contract in restraint of trade was reasonable or unreasonable, and unquestionably the increasing tendency of the courts has been to regard such restraints, except in EXTREME cases, as reasonable.

As to ordinary contracts between man and man, this does not impose an excessive burden upon the judiciary, but as to the grave and vital questions which underlie railroad management I believe that it would be most unfortunate to cast upon the judiciary the burden of determining when a railroad consolidation was reasonable or unreasonable.

Such contracts between transportation companies are not analogous to ordinary contracts. The courts are already overburdened with questions that are semi-judicial, and UPON CONGRESS, as the representative of the American people, should rest the responsibility of determining by a well conceived law the extent, if any, to which the expedition of competing carriers should be permitted.

In this connection the question suggests itself as to whether all inter-state carriers should not be required to operate UNDER A FEDERAL CHARTER. It would not subject them to my great fear of state federal power, which is already plenary, but it would enable the federal government to deal with them in a less indirect manner.

The effect, however, with a federal charter is that its authority is limited to inter-state traffic and can confer none to operate within the borders of a state. This would subject the carriers to all the inconvenience of two charters, and thus make consolidation more difficult.

In view of the centralizing tendencies of steam and electricity, the country will eventually consider the propriety of such an amendment to the constitution as will grant to transportation companies the right to run their business THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY under the protection of a federal charter.

The Regulation of Financial Institutions

By F. D. KILBURN, New York State Superintendent of Banks

All unqualifiedly in favor of state control. ADEQUATE AND COSE CONTROL, not only of trust companies, but of all institutions of a financial nature which invite the public confidence and deal with the PEOPLE'S MONEY. The control should be sufficiently comprehensive as to regulate the organization, provide ample supervision, and restrict investment in a way that will conserve, in so far as human ingenuity can provide, the interests of the public.

Investments in untried securities, promotion of questionable enterprises, speculative underwriting of stocks and bonds, and all other things of a character involving dangerous investment or promotion of individual interests, should not only be prohibited, but MADE A PENAL OFFENSE if indulged in contrary to law.

Immigration and the Schools

By Dr. W. H. MAXWELL, Superintendent New York City Schools

EW YORK has shown a greater increase in its school attendance than any city in the world, and, though there are several contributory causes, THE CHIEF CAUSE IS IMMIGRATION. The number of immigrants in 1890 was 311,713 and in 1903 939,830, and diminution is not probable. The change in the character of the immigrants from the Teutonic races of twenty years ago to the present is not probable. The change in the character of the immigrants from Latin and Slavish peoples of recent years has given educators much to think about, and particularly so here in New York, where a comparatively large percentage of the influx remains.

The significance of the problem lies in the fact that the immigrant of today DOES NOT ASSIMILATE as readily as did his Teutonic predecessor.

WORLD'S FAIR POET.

Edmund Clarence Stedman, Author of the Exposition Hymn.

Edmund Clarence Stedman the famous poet and critic, who wrote the hymn sung at the opening ceremonies of the Louisian Purchase exposition at St. Louis, shortly after three and ten, is erect and full of life, sparkling with health and his eyes ready as ever.

In his early youth Mr. Stedman gave promise of becoming one of America's foremost scholars. Fate decreed, however, that he cast his lot in Wall Street and became a banker and broker, thus delaying somewhat the development of his literary gift.

CHAPTER IX

ALL morning horsemen had been galloping through Six Crossroads, sometimes singly, oftener in company. At 1 o'clock the last posse passed through on its return to the county seat, and after that there was a long, complete silence, while the many corners were undisturbed by a single hoof beat. No unbroken note broken from his mouth stall. The sparse young corn that used to nod and chuckle greenly stood rigid in the fields. Up the Platerville road desparingly cackled one old hen, with her wobbling sailor's gait with a superstitious horror of nothing. She hid herself in the shadow underneath a rickety barn and was still.

Only on the Wimby farm were there signs of life. The old lady who had sent Harkless roses sat by the window all morning and wiped her eyes, watching the horsemen ride by. Sometimes they would hail her and tell her there was nothing yet. About 2 o'clock her husband rattled up in a buckboard and got out the shotgun of the late and more authentic Mr. Wimby. This he carefully cleaned and oiled in spite of his hammerless and quite useless condition, sitting meanwhile by the window opposite his wife and often looking up from his work to shake his weak fist at his neighbors' domiciles and crack decrepit curses and denunciations.

But the Crossroads was ready. It knew what was coming now. Frightened, desperate, sullen, it was ready.

The afternoon wore on, and lengthening shadows fell upon a peaceful scene which had seen a sleeping-country. The sun died pale, already dusky, stretched its screeching length between green borders flecked with purple and yellow and white weed flowers and the tree shadows were not steady but warm blue and tender glows in the general perfume of still light and the sky, curving its deep indigo, dark, translucent blue over it, with no sun to drift off to spend time to be reflected in the clouds of the west, the last yellow and greenish, dashed but still mounting. A whispering of the wind, like the quiet life of a valley of pistol shot.

But the customization of the day had shown its end in a fit, when John Harkless, who had been riding hard, could be dimly seen a rider moving maddeningly fast upon the road.

A heavy rider kept in to stir the air and prevent winds, was moving in increasing, maddeningly狂暴。

The pole ascended a long, light slope leading west up to the Crossroads. From a treetop of ironwood at the foot of this slope was thrust the vestige of an undivided heart of four feet. Its surface was covered with the upper thin cloud of dust intensely. A redness rose under the burnt yellow skin and colored the wizened cheeks.

She stepped aside out of the way and started up the road. She ran with the speed of a fleet little terror, not opening her lips, not calling out, but holding her two thin hands high above her head; that was all. But Bob Wilkerson was come to Dunsbane at last, and the messenger said. Out of the weeds in the corner of the snake fence, in the upper part of the low-slung hill, lifted the heads of men, wizened yellow, broken, like the houses where their fellows were posted. Lying on the roofs and from the rear, there was but one thing for them to do to keep from being driven into the slotted pier. They scarcely preferred to do so. With a wild, joyous yell, scrabbling in the bay of young hoards breaking into view of their quarry, the Platerville men followed.

The last vestige of the delirious sadness of Six Crossroads was the same.

Good Health to the Children

Children especially are fond of dainties, and the housekeeper must look carefully to their food.

As good cake can be made only with good eggs, so also a cake that is healthful as well as dainty must be raised with a pure and perfect baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder is indispensable in the preparation of the highest quality of food. It imparts that peculiar lightness, sweetness and flavor noticed in the finest cake, biscuit, doughnuts, crusts, etc., and what is more important, renders the food wholesome and agreeable to young and old.
