NATURE'S TEARS GAVE TRIBUTE

AS DID CHURCH, SCHOOL AND PEOPLE TO SOLDIER DEAD

Memorial Exercises Friday, Sunday and Monday.

The school exercises in the Methodist church last Friday afternoon in honor of our country's defenders who have laid down their arms forever, were well attended, as usual, and the children demonstrated, as they always do, that the instruction given them along the lines of patriotism is far from wasted. Patriotism is one of the most vital of the principles that the instructors of youth are called upon to instill into the minds of our coming men and women, and the utmost care is needed that it be patriotism pure and undenied, untainted by partisanship or sectional prejudice.

On Sunday evening a large audience assembled in the Methodist church to listen to the annual memorial sermon, which was delivered by Rev. John M. Shank, about twenty five of the members of Allen M. Harmon Post and a similar number from the Woman's Relief Corps, attending in a body. The music was in charge of the Methodist choir and was appropriate to the day and the occasion. A pleasing feature was a solo by I. J. Collins.

The program as arranged for Monday was somewhat interfered with by the rain, which continued so unabatedly all the forenoon that it was not thought expedient for the details from the Post to visit the outlying cemeteries, and the decoration of the graves here was also deferred until another day, although an abundance of floral tributes had been prepared as usual by the W. R. C.

The address of the day was given in the afternoon at the Opera House by Rev. Chester Berry, pastor of the First Baptist church, and is spoken of in the highest terms, many pronouncing it one of the best Memorial day addresses ever given here. Mr. Berry is peculiarly fitted to speak on such an occasion as he himself is a veteran soldier who knows whereof he speaks by personal experience, and although he counts among his memories the horrors of prison life in Andersonville he handles his remembrance with a broad-mindedness and freedom from sectionalism, which is extremely refreshing in view of the unpatriotic narrowness of too many speakers, and which proves him to be a man of exceptional intellectual penetration and clearness of view as well as unquestioned patriotism of the right sort.

Will Take No Part In Saturday's Primary.

Mr. Neal Will Have Nothing to Do with It and Re- quests His friends to Not Vote.

Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Perrin of the township committee have called a primary for Saturday afternoon to endorse a candidate for the legislature.

Act 111 of the laws of 1903 approved and made effective March 3, 1903, and which now governs all the nominations for all county and legislative nominations in Wayne county provides as follows:

SEC. 2. Primary elections within the County of Wayne held for the purpose of selecting candidates of any political party for election at any regular election, no public office the incumbent of which is required by law to be elected by electors of said county or of some sub-division thereof shall be held at the time place and in the manner in this act provided AND NOT OTHERWISE.

SEC. 3. All primary elections shall be held in each district or precinct in townships, villages and cities other than the city of Detroit, primary elections shall be held in each district or precinct on the third Wednesday preceding any April election and on the third Wednesday preceding any November election.

At the October primaries the voters of Northville and every other township in the district will have an opportunity to express their choice for nominees in a legal manner, no matter who they may be, no how many there are—and there may be a dozen by that time.

This voting by proxy called for Saturday will settle no controversy at all and is entirely unneeded for in view of the above quoted law and in any event can only result in more strife and discord within the party.

There can be no objections to the friends of Mr. Benton meeting and endorsing him, but it must certainly be conceded that it was outside the province of the township committee to call a meeting for the purpose of endorsing any candidate for any office.

In view of this and looking always to the best interests of both Northville and its people and harmony in the republican party, Mr. Neal refused absolutely to have anything whatever to do with a petty voting contest of this kind which could not be considered a lawful primary or held under legal restrictions and which in no event could settle any question at issue.

Mr. Neal also requests that his friends have nothing to do with Saturday's contest and that they refrain from voting at all until the legal primaries are held in October in accordance with Sec. 2 and 7 of Act 111 as above quoted.

Long before the legal primaries in October, Northville may have half a dozen candidates for the legislature or it may have none.

Mr. Neal has never for a moment doubted Mr. Benton's popularity in this town and no republican has been more loyal to him in his long career of office holding than Neal, and should Mr. Benton be the choice of the republicans of this district at the October primaries, no one will work harder for his success than Neal.

At the October primaries the voters of Northville and every other township in the district will have an opportunity to express their choice for nominees in a legal manner, no matter who they may be, no how many there are—and there may be a dozen by that time.

INVADIED CANADA

Northville Masons Visit Chatham Brethren.

On Monday last the members of Northville lodge, F. & A. M., to the number of 67, by a special car via the Wabash R. R., invaded Canada for the purpose of conferring the third degree upon a candidate for the Chatham lodge.

Arrived at Chatham they were escorted by a silver cornet band to Rankin hotel, where all were entertained and none permitted to pay for anything while in the city. Those Canadian Masons know how to entertain royally and the city was opened to the Northville brethren, its public institutions and factories were visited and no pains were spared to make the guests welcome.

The work of the Northville lodge was keenly and studiously watched by the Chatham brethren and Worshipful Master Carrothers came in for much public and private commendation, as did also all who participated in the work.

The visitors left on Tuesday afternoon for home, with feelings of strong attachment to their brethren of King Edward's dominions who had anticipated every need and provided every comfort.

ANCIENT ACCOUNTS

Books of Plymouth Primary Schools and Township Treasurers.

The Record has been interviewing a couple of relics of the earlier days of this township. The proceedings of the Inspectors of Primary Schools from 1877 to 1891, and the township treasurer's accounts from 1870 to 1882—and has discovered among many other interesting facts that a "Cavern Bense" fifty four years ago cost $2, that the roads and bridges fund for that year was $70, the township tax $100 and the state and county tax $2,712 10.

The first number to open an account in the book was Thomas S. Jones in 1870 and the last to use it was J. C. Knapp in 1880.

In the older book we find it first recorded that in 1877 George A. Jones, Jesse Grant and Lewis W. Purdy were elected school inspectors. In 1878 our school district No. 2 had 118 scholars and was appropriated $728 school money. The smallest school had 12 pupils and the appropriation was $210.

NEW FACTORY

Northville May Get a New One in Near Future

Several gentlemen from Detroit were here last week Friday looking over the vacant factory buildings here with a view of bringing one of their iron industries to Northville. They were shown about the buildings and the town by Village President Harmon, Mr. Phillips and Mr. Neal and were so favorably impressed that the prospect for another factory here appears now to be rather good.

Library Election June 10.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Ladies' Library association occurs next Friday afternoon, June 10, at the library. Every lady holding a card or one in each family where a card is held is entitled to a vote, and the trustees would be extremely gratified to see every family represented at the annual meeting. All subscribers realize the benefit of the library to our village and all should turn out and help elect its officers.

"An Undiscovered Country."

In a love story told by a little girl of five years to her dolls was overheard this evidence of keen observation: "The man was handsome and about thirty-five. The woman was very pretty, but was dateless. Anybody could tell how old that man was, but how long that woman had been here was an undiscovered country."

There are two candidates for county clerk in the city of Detroit. Wouldn't it look nice to see the city committee calling a primary to see whether Louis Hines or Will McGregor should be nominated?

Choose his two candidates for county auditor. The township committee should call a primary to see who should be endorsed.

The Republican National Convention

THEODORE ROOSEVELT will be nominated for the presidency by the Republican national convention, which meets in the Coliseum, Chicago, on June 21. No other name will even be considered. Out of nearly 1,000 delegates who will vote on this question about 900 have been instructed by state conventions of the party to cast their ballots for President Roosevelt. Most if not all of those remaining are in favor of his nomination, although uninstructed, so that, barring accidents, Mr. Roosevelt will be the unanimous choice of the convention and will probably be nominated by acclamation.

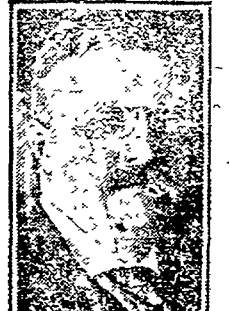

It is a singular fact that such a nomination will be unprecedented in the history of the American republic. In the past a vice president who succeeded to the presidency on the death of the incumbent of the office has uniformly been denied a nomination by his party on the conclusion of the term for which his predecessor was elected. Chester A. Arthur succeeded to the presidency on the death of James A. Garfield and sought the nomination of his party in 1884, but it was given to James G. Blaine. Andrew Johnson became president on the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, but in 1858 the Republican party nominated for the presidency Thos. S. Grant. Millard Fillmore became president in 1850 on the death of Zachary Taylor, who had been inaugurated the previous year. On the expiration of the term Mr. Fillmore though still in his prime, was relegated to private life. The Whigs, to which party President Fillmore belonged, nominated General Winfield Scott. He was defeated, and Franklin Pierce, the Democratic nominee, became president.

The first American president to die in office was William Henry Harrison, whose death occurred just one month after his inauguration, in April 1841. He was succeeded by Vice President John Tyler, who at the end of the term stepped down and out. Mr. Tyler belonged to the Whig party and it was expected that he would be re-nominated, but he was defeated, the nominee of the Democrats, James K. Polk, being elected. A new precedent will be set by the Republican nomination of Theodore Roosevelt, and the nation will be lucky to find the vice president, a nomination of greater value in the eyes of aspirants to the presidency in the future.

The leading candidates for the second place on the ticket are Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana and Representative Robert Roberts of Illinois. There is a general agreement that the candidate for vice president should come from the middle West. Mr. Roosevelt being a resident of New York state, Senator Fairbanks was elected to the United States senate in 1897. The term which he is now serving will not expire until 1905. He was born in Ohio in 1832, graduated from Ohio Wesleyan university in 1852 and began practicing law in 1854. He is regarded as one of the ablest members of the United States senate. Representative Hitt has had a long career in politics. It began with representing the Lincoln-Douglas delegates in 1858. He was born in Ohio in 1824, educated at Rock River seminary and De Paul university, and his first important public position was that of secretary of legation at Paris to which he was appointed by President Grant in 1874. President Garfield made him assistant secretary of state, and when in 1881 he was elected to congress his diplomatic experience won him the important position of chairman of the house committee on foreign affairs, which he has held with great ability.

Although there is to be no contest over the nomination for president, the Republican convention will be protracted over several days. It will be called to order by the vice chairman of the national committee, the postmaster general, Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin. A temporary chairman will be chosen, who will probably be the Hon. Elihu

It Will Meet In Chicago June 21. Theodore Roosevelt To Be Nominated For President

Root, former secretary of war. He will deliver an address, after which committees will be appointed, and then in accordance with custom, a recess will be taken until the following day. The permanent chairman is likely to be the Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, representative from Illinois and speaker of the house or representatives. The adoption of a platform will be the business of most general interest aside from the nomination of the candidates.

The principal speech in nomination of Mr. Roosevelt will be made by former Governor Frank S. Black of New York. Ex-Governor Black is a magnetic speaker, and his speech will doubtless be well worth hearing.

Not the least important business incident to the convention will be the selection of a chairman of the national committee to succeed the late Senator Hanna. The choice is likely to be Secretary George Bruce Cortright, now head of the department of commerce and labor, who will thus become the manager of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign. The Coliseum, in which the convention is to be held, was dedicated in 1900. President McKinley being present. It has a seating capacity of 10,000. There will be about 400 persons in official attendance at the convention. The delegates number 1,000, and the grand total of delegates and alternates is 1,302 or nearly 2,000.

About 1,000 press representatives including photographers, artists, telegraph operators, messengers, etc., will be in attendance. The sergeant at arms, who is the business officer of the convention, has about 200 deputies, 200 messengers, 200 page boys, and 100 doorkeepers under his direction. The forty-five national committees will have private secretaries, stenographers and clerks who have to be provided for an official attendance of about 500 and bring the official attendance up to about 1,500. It is estimated that at least 20,000 people will be drawn to Chicago by the convention. The expense of reporting a national convention is enormous. It cost the Associated Press over $100,000 to report the various conventions of 1903 and over $120,000 was expended on one convention of that year alone. The expense of these affairs do not take into consideration all the amount expended by other press associations and individual newspapers. All of the large cities have their individual correspondents of the scene, many of them sending a staff or several men and incurring a large expense.

An estimate as to the total expense that will be incurred in connection with the Republican convention on at Chicago, based on the cost of previous conventions gives $1,100,000 as the amount that will be paid out in railroad fares, hotel bills, reporting of the convention and similar expenditures. The present secretary of the Republican national committee is Luther D. Doer, a young Ohio editor and politician, who was the confidential secretary of the late Senator Hanna. Upon the resignation of Perry S. Heath as secretary of the national committee Mr. Doer was chosen to succeed him. Senator Hanna thought very well of the young man, and he doubtless will continue to serve the national committee as its secretary.

Mr. Doer's rise in politics has been rather remarkable. At sixteen he was editing and managing a country paper. It was a small paper, but young Doer succeeded with it. Eight years ago he was employed by Charles Dick, then assistant secretary of the Republican national committee to do clerical work for him, and Doer took to the duties so well that Dick pushed him along into Senator Hanna's employ, and almost before he knew it Doer was getting more for assisting him than the salary which Mr. Hanna drew from the government as a member of the United States senate. Senator Hanna did not bother with details. He trusted all that to his secretary, who justified the confidence reposed in him.

Should Have Known Better. "What was the trouble between Josher and his wife?" "She stated that a certain young lady of their acquaintance was the handsomest girl in town, and he agreed with her."—Butte Inter Mountain.

Japan Will Fight Alone to The End
By BARON KANEKO, Ex-Cabinet Minister of Japan

JAPAN neither needs nor seeks the aid of China in the present conflict. SHE WILL FIGHT ALONE TO THE END and will never give up the struggle as long as she has either men or money left. We heartily indorse the course of the United States in taking steps to insure the neutrality of China.

When I left Tokyo the display of enthusiasm was remarkable. Even the boys and girls were wild with patriotism. The war was inevitable, and now that it has come there will be no yielding on the part of Japan. The war might have been delayed a year or two, but IT HAD TO COME.

KOREA'S PLACE IN THE STRUGGLE IS NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED. LET RUSSIA SEIZE HER, AND, TRUE TO HER GEOGRAPHICAL FORMATION, SHE WOULD PROVE A DAGGER PRESENTED AT THE HEART OF JAPAN.

Since my arrival in America I have been surprised to find that there is a class of people that regards the conflict as a religious war—as a struggle between paganism and Christianity. That might have been possible a few hundred years ago, but it is not today. Japan is fighting FOR HER EXISTENCE.

Personally I believe that the czar is opposed to the war, but he is in the hands of advisers who wish to plunge the nation into war. I visited Russia about a dozen years ago, and I found the Russians charming as INDIVIDUALS, but very different as a nation. Russia makes promises only to break them.

To whatever region Russia has extended her power she has brought the policy of the closed door. With Japan the reverse is true, and the present war from a commercial standpoint is a conflict between the "open door" and the "closed door."

I have found that there is considerable misconception in this country in regard to the purpose of the Japanese loan just floated in New York. These millions WILL NOT SERVE AS A WAR FUND, but will be left here to serve in maintaining the trade balance between Japan and America.

It was at the centennial exhibition of 1876 that Japan made her first display for American eyes, and it was from this beginning that the immense trade between our nations sprang.

TODAY JAPAN IS DEPENDENT UPON AMERICA FOR ALL HER COTTON. SHE GETS HER LOCOMOTIVES AND WARSHIPS FROM PHILADELPHIA, AND THE CROWN PRINCE IS HAVING A PALACE BUILT TODAY WITH STEEL BEAMS BROUGHT ALL THE WAY FROM PITTSBURG.

Labor Should Be Protected Against Immigration

ECONOMICALLY Americans are more prosperous than the residents of any other country in the world, partly because our standard of living is higher, partly because our land is less crowded in proportion to our resources. Consequently there must be, without restriction, a constant flow of people into the U. S. AN EQUILIBRIUM IS ESTABLISHED that is, until our surplus resources are exhausted and our land is as crowded as that of other countries. This is as inevitable as that water will seek its own level.

To protect laborers some sort of tariff should be placed ON LABORERS. In other words, they should know how to read and write, as our own citizens are obliged to, or show tangible proof of saving habits or be in some way so selected that good will come to this country with them sufficient to offset the constant tendency to reduce economically our national well being. For, economically, 1,000,000 immigrants a year are rapidly CONSUMING THE VERY ADVANTAGES WHICH WE PRIZE.

Far more important is the effect of immigration on the American race. We are today taxing severely our powers of assimilation. With the example of the old world staring us in the face, we are developing in all our great cities NEW FOREIGN SLUMS, as if the fundamental character of our new world were of no consequence. Even the horrors of the old slave ships are almost forgotten in the American problem of today. The million immigrants a year now coming are in the foreground, but it is the millions upon millions INTO WHICH THEY WILL GROW which should most make us stop and think.

LET US NOT BE FURTHER MISLED BY A CHARITABLE INTEREST IN THE GOOD EFFECT OF EMIGRATION ON FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The South's Obligation to the Negro

THE negro is here. He is a man and a citizen. He is USEFUL AND VALUABLE in his sphere. Within that sphere he must be guaranteed the equal protection of the law, and his education along proper lines—mainly agricultural and industrial—is at once A DUTY AND A NECESSITY. No approach toward social equality or social recognition will ever be tolerated in Louisiana. Separate schools, separate churches, separate cars, separate places of entertainment will be enforced. RACIAL DISTINCTION AND INTEGRITY MUST BE PRESERVED. But there is room enough in this broad southland, with proper lines of limitation and demarcation, for the two races to live on terms of mutual trust, MUTUAL HELP, good understanding and concord.

The Hearst men were defeated at the convention for re-nomination to make the promise for the convention session one of a decidedly bell-curve color. As nearly as could be ascertained after the district caucuses were over the Hearst men had eight or nine delegates in the bunch which will do business as a strict delegation from Michigan at the St. Louis convention.

Every-Hearst candidate for delegate-at-large was voted down, and no candidate for the honor was successful with the Campau O. K. and the unbroken 110 votes of Wayne. Chairman Hemans did not call the afternoon session to order until nearly 4 o'clock, the committee on credentials having gotten into a wrangle over the contest in Manistee county, which was the chief thorn in the side of the state central committee the day before.

The first vote of the convention occurred over the report of the credentials committee admitting the regularly elected delegation from Manistee county. As soon as the permanent organization took charge the greatest event of the day took place. Thomas E. Barkworth got the floor and said: "Mr. Chairman, I move that the secretary of this convention cast the vote of the entire delegations present for Daniel J. Campau for Michigan's member of the national Democratic committee."

The resolutions pledged faith in the future action of the national convention; properly denounced "the criminally aggressive, despotic un-American, extravagant and dishonest Republican administration"; appreciated Daniel Campau's good work for the party; directed the delegation to vote as a unit; expressed sorrow over the death of Judge Luraud, deplored the death of Justin R. Whiting, and last of all pledged support to the principles of primary reform.

Jackson, Mich., June 1.—Judge Parkerson handed down a decision annulling the petition of Corvus Lasaze and Jordan, who were seeking release from prison on a writ of habeas corpus. Eastern Navies. Russia had its origin in a boat which Prince Elizabeth sent to Ivan the Terrible, and with which later Peter the Great got the "sea craze." Some of them were well known, were trained in the United States.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Why is it that Ayer's Hair Vigor does so many remarkable things? Because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair, puts new life into it. The hair cannot keep from growing. And gradually all the dark, rich color of early life comes back to gray hair.

When I first used Ayer's Hair Vigor I had about all my hair gone. I had used many other remedies, but none did me any good. I then used Ayer's Hair Vigor and in a few weeks my hair began to grow again. It is now as thick as ever.

THE TRIUMPHS OF PE-RU-NA INCREASE.

Thousands of Chronic Ailments of Women Cured Every Month—Disguised Internal Catarrh the Enemy of Women—Pe-ru-na the Only Internal Systemic Catarrh Remedy Yet Devised—Prominent Cases in Illustration.

Nervous Depression.

Summer months are peculiarly the months of nervous diseases, especially nervous prostration and other depressed states of the nervous system. People who are not at all inclined to be nervous or suffer from weak nerves find, this time especially trying. Sultry heat and electrical disturbances of the atmosphere are probably the cause of this. Invalids need to be particularly careful to fortify the nervous system by the use of Peru-na.

Miss Helen Rolof, Kaukauna, Wis., writes: "Several times during the past two years or more my system has been greatly in need of a tonic, and at those times Peru-na has been of great help in building up the system, restoring my appetite and securing restful sleep. I know a great number of women who suffer from the troubles peculiar to the sex, and with the best results."—Helen Rolof

MISS LOUISE BERTSEL.

Miss Louise Bertsel, 10 1/2 Second street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "My health was excellent until about six months ago, when I seemed to have a collapse from overdoing socially, and the doctor ordered an entire change of scene and climate. As this was an absolute impossibility at the time, I tried to find relief in another way, and I was advised by a friend who gave Peru-na to take the place of the tonic. I took it for a few days, and the result was so good that I was able to go on with my work. I have since taken it several times, and it has always been of great help to me."—Louise Bertsel

MISS HELEN ROLOF.

Time: The medicine only is obtained by each patient at her own drug store. Those desiring to become regular patients have only to send address, duration of disease and treatment previously received, and directions for the first month's treatment will be sent at once.

Over half the women have Catarrh in some form or another. And yet, probably not a tenth of the women know that their disease is catarrh. To distinguish catarrh of various organs it is necessary to specify it as such. Another name for it is gonorrhea, another name for it is gonorrhoea, and another name for it is gonorrhoea. It is a disease which is very common, and it is very dangerous. It is a disease which is very common, and it is very dangerous. It is a disease which is very common, and it is very dangerous.

MISS JENNIE FINLEY.

Miss Jennie Finley, 79 Madison Street, Memphis, Tenn., writes: "Three years ago I had very poor health, and while I was only sick about occasionally, I was unable to enjoy life, and lacked vitality and strength. I was an easy subject to cold and malaria. Four bottles of Peru-na changed my entire physical condition. My head stopped aching, my strength returned, and the poison was driven out of my blood till I felt like a new and well woman once more. It is a truly great medicine and well worthy the good things its friends say about it, and it will always have my endorsement."—Jennie Finley

WOMEN WHO WRITE.

Annual Meeting of State Association at Hillsdale. Hillsdale, Mich, June 1.—The fifteenth annual meeting of the Michigan Woman's Press Association opened here Tuesday afternoon. As but few of the members were present, the session was short. The roll of members was called and one or two committees appointed. The evening session was held in the Baptist church, with a larger attendance of members and seats were well filled with citizens of the city to welcome them. Mayor Goodrich in behalf of the citizens, welcomed the association. He referred to the good work of the press and its influence in moulding public opinion and in this work, no women were a recognized force. Mrs. Sada Murray Bemis of Carson City responded in behalf of the association. Miss Nabel Bates the president, read her annual address.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE accommodation train wandered down through the afternoon sunshine, stopping at every village and every country postoffice on the line. There was a passenger in the smoker who found the stops at these wayside hamlets interminable. He got up and paced the aisle now and then, and his companion reminded him that this was not certain to hasten the hour of their arrival at their destination. "I know that," answered he, "but I've got to beat McCune."

"By the way," observed Meredith, "you left your stick behind."

"You don't think I need a club to face?"

Tom choked. "Oh, no; I wasn't thinking of your giving H. Fishbe a beating. I mean to lean on."

"I don't want it. I've got to walk lame all my life, but I'm not going to hobble on a stick."

Tom looked at him sadly for a moment. It was true, and the Crossroads might hug themselves in their cells over the thought. For the rest of his life John Harkless was to walk with just the limp that themselves would have had if, as in former days, their sentence had been to the ball and chain.

"Sit down, boy, sit down," said Meredith, and his friend obeyed.

The window was open beside the two young men, and the breeze that blew in soothed like a balm, yet held a tang and spice in it, a hint of walnuts and of coming frost. There was a newness in the atmosphere that day, a bright invigoration, that set the blood tingling. The hot months were done with, languor was routed. Autumn spoke to industry, told of the sowing of another harvest, of the tawny sheek, of the purple grape, of the red apple, and called upon muscle and laughter, breathing gayety into men's hearts. The little stations hummed with bustle and noise, big fern wagons rattled off up the village streets and raced with "cut under" or omnibuses; people walked with quick steps, the baggage-masters called cheerily to the trapezoids, and the brakemen laughed goodly to rattling girls. At times the train ran in two shadowy groves, and delicate landscape vistas framed in branches, opened, closed, and succeeded in order, and then the travelers were carried beyond into the level open again and looked out to where the intensely blue September skies ran down to the low horizon, meeting the boundless expanse of corn. It takes a long time for the full beauty of the flat lands to reach a man's soul. Once there, no hills nor sea, nor growing in leaves of palm still suffice him. It is the beauty in the world that makes it so beautiful. There are people who do not consider Indiana a beautiful word, but let it ring true in your ears, and it has a richer sound than Valhalla.

All at once they anger ran out of John Harkless. He was a hard man in anger to tarry with. And in place of it a strong sense of some coming began to take possession of him. He was going home. Back to Plattville. Where I belong," he said to himself without bitterness, and it was the truth. "Every man cometh to his own place in the end."

Yes, as one leaves a gay acquaintance of the playhouse lobby for some hard handed, tried old friend, so he would wave the outer world goodspeed and come back to the old ways of Carlow. What though the years were dusty, he had his friends and his memories and his old black briar pipe. He had a girl's picture that he should carry in his heart till his last day, and if his life was sadder it was infinitely richer for it. His winter friends would be not so lonely for her sake, and, losing her, he lost not everything, for he had had the rare blessing of having known her. And what in a world was to be healed of such a hurt? Far better to have had it than to not a smug pace unscathed. He had been a dillard, a saggard, weary of himself, unfit to fight, a failure in life and a failure in love. That was ended. He was tired of failing, and it was time to succeed or avow it. To accept the worst that fate can deal and to wring courage from it instead of deamur—that is success, and it was the success that he would have. He would take fate by the neck. But had it done him unkindness? He looked out over the beautiful, "monotonous" landscape, and he answered heartily, "No!" There was ignorance in man, but no unkindness. Were man utterly wise he were utterly kind. The Crossroads had not known better, that was all.

The unflinching aisles of corn swam pleasantly before his eyes. The earth darkened to man's wants and answered. The clean-cut sun and summer rains hastened the fruition. Yonder stood the brown bar-stack, garnered to feed the industrious horse that had earned his need. There was the straw thatched shelter for the cattle. How the orchard boughs beat with their burdens! The big red barn stood stored with the harvest, for this was Carlow county, and he was coming home.

They crossed a byroad. An old man with a streaky gray chin beard was sitting on a sack of oats in a seatless wagon waiting for the train to pass

Harkless seized his companion excitedly by the elbow. "Tommy," he cried, "it's Kinn Ferriss! Look! Did you see that old fellow?"

"I saw a particularly uninterested and uninteresting gentleman sitting on a bag," replied his friend.

"Why, that's old Kinn! Ferriss. He's going to town. He lives on the edge of the county."

"Can this be true?" said Meredith gravely.

"I wonder," said Harkless thoughtfully a few moments later—"I wonder why he had them changed around."

"Who changed around?"

"The team. He always used to drive the bay or the near side and the sorrel on the off."

"And at present," rejoined Meredith, "I am to understand that he is driving the sorrel on the near side and the bay on the off?"

"That's it," returned the other. "He must have worked them like that for some time, because they didn't look uneasy. They're all right about the trap, those two. I've seen them stand with their heads almost against a fast freight. See there." He pointed to a white frame farmhouse with green blinds. "That's Win Hubbard's. We're just outside of Beaver."

"Beaver? Elucidate Beaver, boy."

"Beaver? Meredith, your information ends at home. What do you know of your own state if you are ignorant of Beaver? Beaver is that city of Carlow county next in importance and population to Plattville."

"Tom put his head out of the window. 'I fancy you are right,' he said. 'I already see five people there.'"

Meredith had observed the change in his companion's mood. He had watched him closely all day, looking for a return of his malady, but he came to the conclusion that in truth a miracle had been wrought, for the lethargy was gone and vigor seemed to increase in Harkless with every turn of the wheels that brought them nearer Plattville and the nearer they drew to Plattville the higher the spirits of both the young men rose. Meredith knew what was happening there, and he began to be a little excited. As he had said, there were five people visible at Beaver, and he wondered where they lived, as the only building in sight was the station, and to satisfy his curiosity he walked out to the vestibule. The little station stood in the woods, and brown leaves whirled along the platform. One of the five people was an old lady and she carried a bag. The other four were men—one of them handed the conductor a telegram. Meredith had the official say. "All right, Beavert, ahead. I'll hold it five minutes."

The man sprang up the steps of the smoker and looked in. He turned to Meredith. "Do you know if it is a gentleman in the gray coat?"

Harkless. "Yes, it is his best day, and I don't want to lose it. The gray is a smoker always gives me a spasm."

Yes, that's Mr. Harkless."

The man jumped to the platform. "All right, boys," he said. "Up her go!"

The doors of the freight room were thrown open, and a big bundle of colored stunts was dragged out and hastily unfolded. One of the men ran to the farther end of the car with a strap of red, white and blue bunting and tucked it securely, while another fastened the other extremity to the railing of the steps by Meredith. The two companions of this pair performed the same operation with another strip on the other side of the car. They ran similar lines of bunting near the roof from end to end so that except for the windows the sides of the car were completely covered by the national colors. Then they draped the vestibules with flags. It was all done in a trice.

Meredith's heart was beating fast. "What's it all about?" he asked.

"Picnic down the line," answered the man in charge, removing a tack from his mouth. He motioned to the conductor, "Go ahead!"

The wheels began to move; the decelerators remained on the station platform, letting the train pass them, but Meredith, craning his neck from the steps saw that they jumped on the last car.

"What's the celebration?" asked Harkless when Meredith returned.

"Picnic down the line," said Meredith.

"Nipping weather for a picnic. A bit cool, don't you think? One of those fellows looked like a friend of mine, Homer Tabbs, or as Homer might look if he were in disgrace. He had his hat hung on his eyes, and he slobbered like a thief in melodrama as he tacked up the bunting on this side of the car."

He continued to point out various familiar places, finally breaking out enthusiastically as they drew nearer the town: "Hello! Look there—beyond the grove yonder! See that house?"

"Yes, John."

"That's the Bowlders. You've got to know the Bowlders."

"I'd like to."

"The kindest people in the world. The Briscoe house we can't see because it's so shut in by trees, and besides, it's a mile or so ahead of us. We'll go out there for supper tonight. Don't you like Briscoe? He's the best they make. We'll go uptown with Judd Bennett in the omnibus, and you'll know how a rapid machine gun sounds. I want to go straight to the Herald office," he finished, with a suddenly daring air.

"After all, there may be some explanation," Meredith suggested with a little hesitancy. "H. Fishbe might turn-out to be a more honest man than you think."

Harkless threw his head back and laughed. "Honest! A man in the pay of Rodney McCune! Well, we can let it wait till we get there. Listen! There's the whistle that means we're getting near home. Why, there's an owl well!"

"So it is."

"And another—three, five, seven—seven in sight at once! They tried it three miles south and failed, but you can't fool Eph Watts, bless him! I want you to know Watts."

They ran by the outrigger-houses of the town amid a thousand descriptive exclamations from Harkless, who wished Meredith to meet every one in Carlow. But he came to a pause in the middle of a word. "Do you hear music," he asked abruptly, "or is it only the rhythm of the ties?"

"It seems to me there's music in the air," answered his companion. "I've been fancying I heard it for a minute or so. There! No—yes. It's a band, isn't it?"

"No. What would a band—yes, it is."

The train slowed up and stopped at a water tank 200 yards east of the station, and their uncertainty was at an end. From somewhere down the track came the detonating boom of a cannon. There was a clash of brass, and the travelers became sure of a band playing "Marching Through Georgia."

Meredith laid his hand on his companion's shoulder. "John," he said, "John!"

The cannon fired again, and there came a cheer from 3,000 throats, the shouters all unseen. The engine coughed and panted, the train rolled on, and in another moment it had stopped alongside the station in the midst of a riotous jam of bumpy people who were waving flags and banners and handkerchiefs and tossing their hats high in the air and shouting themselves hoarse. The band played in dumb show. It could not hear itself play. The people came at the smoker like a long wave and Warren Smith, Briscoe, Keating and Mr. Bence of Gaines were swept ahead of it. Before the train stopped they had rushed eagerly up the steps and entered the car. Harkless was on his feet and started to meet them. He stopped.

"What does it mean?" he said and began to grow pale. "Is Halloway—did McCune—have you?"

Warren Smith seized one of his hands and Briscoe the other. "What does it mean?" cried Warren. "It means that you were nominated for congress at five minutes after I clock this afternoon."

"On the second ballot," shouted a judge, "just as young Fishbe pinned it weeks ago."

It was one of the great crowds of Carlow's history. Since noon an almost unintermittent procession of pedestrians and vehicles had been making its way to the station, and every one, on backward buggy and cart wheel, had his flag or bunting or streamer of ribbons tied to the whip. The excitement increased as the time grew short. Everybody was struggling for a better position. The people in wagons and carriages stood upon the seats, and the pedestrians beset their climbing on the wheels of the following vehicles with feet on the hubs of opposite wagons. Everybody was bound to see him. When the whistle announced the coming of the train the hind leg in to play the cannon fired, horns blew and the cheering ebbed and reached till Harkless's vault resounded with the noise of the people of Carlow were making.

There was one heart that almost stopped beating. Helen was standing on the front seat of the Briscoe backboard, with Minnie beside her and it is the consolation the horses pranced and backed so that Lige Walters ran to hold them. But Helen did not notice the frightened roars, nor did she know that Minnie clutched her round the waist to keep her from falling. Her eyes were fixed intently on the smoke of the faraway engine, and her hand, lifted to her face in an uncertain tremulous fashion as it was one day in a circus tent, was laid against the deepest blush that ever mantled a girl's cheek. When the train reached the platform she saw Briscoe and the others rush into the bunting covered car and there ensued what was to her an almost intolerable pause of expectation while the crowd assailed the windows of the smoker, leaping up and climbing on each other's shoulders to catch the first glimpse of him. Briscoe and a red faced young man (a stranger to Plattville) came down the steps, laughing like boys, and then Keating and Bence, and then Warren Smith. As the lawyer reached the platform he turned toward the door of the car and waved his hand as in welcome. "Here he is, boys," he shouted.

At that it was as if all the noise that had gone before had been mere leakage of pent up enthusiasm. A thousand horns blared deafeningly; the whistle of the locomotive and that of Hubbard's mill were added to the din; the courthouse bell was pealing out a welcome, and the church bells were ringing; the cannon thundered, and then cheer on cheer shook the air as John Harkless came out under the flags and passed down the steps of the car.

When Helen saw him over the heads of the people and through heaving tumult of flags and hats and handkerchiefs she suddenly gave a frightened glance about her and jumped down from her high perch and sank into the back seat of the backboard, with her burning face turned from the station and her eyes fixed on the ground. She wanted to run away, as she had run from him the first time she ever saw him, and then, as now, he came in triumph, hailed by the plaudits of his fellow townsfolk.

It means that you were nominated for congress!

Jows, and now, as on that long departed day of her young girlhood, he was borne high over the heads of the people, for Minnie cried to her to look—they were carrying him on their shoulders to his carriage. She had had only that brief glimpse of him before he was lost in the crowd that was so glad to get him back again and so proud of him; but she had seen that he looked very white and solemn.

Briscoe brought Tom Meredith through the crowd and put him in the backboard beside Helen. "All right, Lige," called the judge to Willetts, who was at the horses' heads. "You go out into line with the boys; they want you. We'll go down on Main street to see the parade," he explained, gathering the reins in his hand.

"Did you tell him about Mr. Halloway?" asked Helen, leaning forward anxiously.

"Warren told him before we left the car," answered Briscoe. "He'd have declined on the spot, I expect, if we hadn't made him sure it was all right with Kedge."

"If I understood what Mr. Smith was saying, Halloway must have behaved very well," said Meredith.

The judge laughed. "He saw it was the only way to beat McCune, and he'd have given his life and Harkless's, too, rather than let McCune have it."

"Why did you leave Mr. Harkless?" Helen asked her cousin, her eyes meeting his.

"My dear girl," he replied, "because, for some inexplicable reason, my lady cousin has not nominated me for congress and, oddly enough, the undiscriminating multitude were not cheering for me, the artillery was not in action to celebrate me, the band was not playing to do me honor. Why should I ride in the midst of a procession that knows me not? Why should I go in there in an open brougham, with four white horses to draw it and draped with silver flags? Since these things were not for me, I flew to your side to discuss my spleen under the benign epithet of a cousin."

"Then who is with him?"

"The population of this portion of Indiana, I take it."

"Oh, it's all right," said the judge, leaning back to spit to Helen. "It is not Smith and you rather as to ride in the carriage with him. You need not be afraid of any of them. I'll know what H. Fishbe is doing. I'll know what H. Fishbe is doing. Of course they know it's to let you to break it to him how a girl has run his paper."

The old gentleman chuckled and looked out of the corner of his eye at his daughter, whose expression was inscrutable.

"I," cried Helen. "I tell him! No one must tell him. He need never know it."

Briscoe reached back and patted her cheek. "How long do you suppose he will be here in Plattville without its leaking out?"

"But when they kept watch over him for months nobody told him."

"Ah," said Briscoe, "it is this is different."

"No, no, no," she exclaimed. "It must be kept from him somehow."

"He'll know it by tomorrow, so you better tell him this evening."

"This evening?"

"Yes, you'll have a good chance. 'I will!'"

"He's coming to supper with us—he and your father, of course, and Keating and Bence and Boswell and Smith and Tom Martin and Lige. We're going to have a big time, with you and Minnie to do the honors, and we're all coming into town afterward for the fireworks, and I'll let Lum drive you in the phaeton. You'll have plenty of chances to talk it over with him and tell him all about it."

Helen gave a little gasp. "Never!" she cried. "Never!"

The backboard stopped on the Herald corner, and here, and along Main street the line of vehicles which had followed it from the station took positions to await the parade. The square was almost a solid mass of bunting, and the north entrance of the courthouse had been decorated with streamers and flags so as to make a sort of stand. Either the crowd was already streaming and hither the procession made its way. At intervals the gun boomed from the station, and Schofields' Henry was winnowing the air with his bell. Nobody had a better time that day than Schofields' Henry, except old Wilkerson, who was with the procession.

PU LUN TSEE.

Democratic Chinese Prince Who Is New American's Guest.

It is strange that the clever Chinese Prince Pu Lun Tsee who is now visiting this country in the capacity of imperial ambassador to China from the Louisiana Purchase Exposition is inclined to be so unostentatious in his manners so far as the customs of his nation will permit. At the court-metre of China prescribes a great many forms and ceremonies that most ordinarily be complied with in honoring a personage of his high rank.

It has been said that a cat may look at a king, but the saying does not apply to China.

PRINCE PU LUN TSEE.

At home an ordinary personage would not be permitted in the course of an audience with Prince Pu Lun to lift his eyes above the button on the left breast of his coat. Royalty is regarded as divinity in China and the prince is close of kin to the Son of Heaven and the grandson of an emperor. If the rules of etiquette that prevail in China were enforced here and President Francis or Secretary Stevens of the St. Louis world's fair were accorded the honor of an official interview with his highness the imperial commissioner, the favored gentleman would have to rise several hours before daylight and, after waiting before the door of the audience chamber, be received at sunrise. He would then have to go on all fours and in approaching and retiring kneeling in separate and distinct times, knocking his forehead against the floor three times at each kotow. If invited to dinner with the prince, to go other acts of humbleness he would be called upon to perform would be that of washing his face in the imperial presence at the close of the meal. Fortunately for the Americans concerned all these rules of etiquette have not been rigidly enforced during the stay of Prince Pu Lun in this country.

John Flindley Wallace of Chicago, well qualified for the work.

John Flindley Wallace, who will superintend the building of the great Panama canal, has a very high standing in engineering circles in the United States.

Mr. Wallace's main achievement so far in his career is the rebuilding of the Illinois Central railroad, which since he became its chief engineer in 1901 has been almost entirely reconstructed and the improvements in both construction and operation which have been introduced have made it one of the foremost examples of up to date

JAPANESE DANCERS.

Pretty Accomplishments of the Celebrated Geisha Girls.

The geisha, or professional girl entertainer of Japan, is trained in the arts of dancing and singing in schools especially established for that purpose. After the girl has become a proficient dancer she receives a salary according to her popularity. She is, in fact, an actress, the word "geisha" meaning what actor does in English.

The geishas, however, are not only dancers and singers. It is necessary that they play several musical instruments, so that when a party of them is engaged to provide the music while the other girls dance. The geisha is a most graceful and elegant figure, and her instruments most commonly played by the geishas.

When a Japanese desires to arrange some entertainment, the amusement of the occasion is entrusted to the geisha. Geisha girls are trained in the art of dancing, singing, and playing musical instruments. They are also trained in the art of conversation and are very polite and graceful in their manners.

These girls are possessed of wonderful charm and play by the hour to the hearts of the gentlemen. Many of them are of high social position and the wives of some of the most prominent men in Japan. They are very beautiful and their dresses are of the most elegant and costly materials. They are very popular and are much sought after by the gentlemen.

The Essence of Trade Unionism

By JOHN MITCHELL, President United Mine Workers of America

THE idea of the joint trade agreement is the ESSENCE of trade unionism. We have now 350,000 men working under conditions which are fixed by joint agreement. No situation has changed so much as the coal situation. Some time ago it was owner against owner and no one knew what the other was doing. All interests suffered, the wages of the men were cut until they were no longer sufficient to support live men. The owners, too, lost money. WE ADJUST ALL DIFFERENCES NOW BY AGREEMENTS; we leave no question to arbitration; arbitration is preferable to strikes—that is all. We take the position in our trade that we must settle questions ourselves. Only in Indiana have we called in outside arbitrators, and there the arrangement has failed.

OUTSIDERS CALLED IN HAVE SAID THEY DID NOT UNDERSTAND CONDITIONS, AND THE RESULT OF THE ARBITRATION HAS BEEN UNSATISFACTORY TO BOTH EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES.

I believe in strikes. I also believe in lockouts. Neither side must surrender either of these rights. But I believe neither thing should be resorted to until each side has exhausted every peaceful means for settlement.

Nothing can make so much for industrial peace as the recognition of the independence of labor and capital. The great associations of employers and employees have come to stay. WE WOULD NOT ALTER CONDITIONS IF WE COULD. None of us wants to return to the conditions existing many years ago. We believe the answer to all these questions is the trade agreement.

Under no circumstances would I consent to the arbitration of some FUNDAMENTAL question. I would never consent to arbitrate the eight hour work day or pay right to belong to a union. As an illustration of my position in arbitration I can cite one instance. I have advised the men in Kentucky to accept a wage reduction of 4 1/2 per cent RATHER THAN ACCEPT ARBITRATION, which the employers are perfect willing to grant.

WE PREFER TO DO THIS RATHER THAN HAVE PEOPLE COME IN TO ADJUST OUR AFFAIRS WHO DO NOT UNDERSTAND THEM

What Japan Is Fighting For

By MARQUIS ITO, Chief of the Board of Elder Statesmen of Japan

THE sympathetic attitude of the public opinion of the United States is a great encouragement to us in our faith that in fighting for our own future security and undisturbed enjoyment of the fruits of civilization we are to a certain extent fighting FOR THE COMMON CAUSE OF ALL.

The supremacy of Russia in Korea would mean not only a constant menace to the VERY EXISTENCE of our island empire, but would also mean the whole destruction of our commercial and industrial interests. It is by the armaments we have in the past, not to mention the loss of natural outlet for our expanding people. The constant policy of Russia in this part of the globe has steadily in effect the MONOPOLIZATION OF NATURAL RESOURCES of the entire Korean peninsula.

I am proud of our navy and the negotiations, closed on our side, were not only a great success, but a little more inspired by the spirit of moderation and of TOLERATION FOR THE LITTLE INTERESTS OF OTHERS, things would not have come to this. As it was, there remained no other way for us but to try to enforce by arms what we could not do by reason. And we had to do so or it would have become too late, for Russia was steadily and rapidly augmenting her fighting forces available in this part of her empire, so that before long the sheer mass of her fighting power would have made it a folly for us to attempt to resist the unscrupulous march onward.

THE PRESENT WAR ON OUR PART IS NOTHING BUT THE RESULT OF A COOLLY THOUGHT OUT STEP IN THE CAUSE OF STATE NECESSITY.

Men and Women Cannot Be Taught by Identical Methods

By Professor ALBION W. SMALL, Chicago University

A THOROUGHLY good teacher would unconsciously give DIFFERENT INSTRUCTION to young men and young women in attempting to give the SAME COURSE. In teaching both men and women in college since 1881 my experience has invariably been that the things which interested men did not interest women in the same way, and vice versa, and I have always felt that if I were teaching them separately I should have to put the EMPHASIS at different points in order to do the best work for each.

I have always found that women in college, as a rule, have to be hounded into objecting to anything that the INSTRUCTOR says. One has to approach nearer to the point of absurdity to get them to take a critical attitude toward the instructor's authority than in the case of men. I have no dogma about the permanency of this difference, but so far as my experience goes it is the rule. This would also give me the cue to DIFFERENCES OF TACTICS in the two cases.

I WOULD NOT IN THE ORDINARY ARTS AND SCIENCE CURRICULUM MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE IN THE SUBJECTS OFFERED TO MEN AND WOMEN, BUT I WOULD VARY METHODS IN ADAPTATION TO TASTE AND MENTAL ATTITUDE.
