COMMENCEMENT IN NORTHVILLE

PROGRAM BEGINS WITH BACCA-
LAUREATE SERMON JUNE 19.

Address by Dr. C. O. Hoyt of State
Normal June 23.

Commencement week is again at hand, and once more all is bustle and excitement in school rooms, homes and the printing office. Class officers are apportioning the minutes to make them go as far as possible in the multitude of duties and preparations. Teachers and students are making the most of the time left them to work together and the young people who are the central figures in all the various functions of the season are involved in a bewildering maze of relief and regrets, anticipations and apprehensions, sighs and smiles and thoughts of dresses and diplomas, gifts and graduating honors.

The Northville High school this year sends out from its portals a class of fifteen young men and women who thus enter on a new and important stage of their life journey, a point from which they take, practically, their first look out upon the world as individuals, and from which they make choice, independently or compulsorily as their environments may permit, of their future vocations in life.

The program for the week begins with the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday evening, June 19, which is to be given by Rev. J. M. Shank in the Methodist church at the usual hour of service.

The class day exercises are to be held on Wednesday evening, June 22, beginning at eight o'clock.

Thursday evening, June 23, at eight o'clock Dr. C. O. Hoyt of the State Normal College will give an address, taking for his subject the question, "Does it pay to educate?" This part of the commencement time program is looked forward to with much interest and will definitely well worth the attention of the class and their friends.

Friday evening, June 24, the eighth grade exercises will take place. This function has become so popular here that it is only slightly less in importance than the graduation of the class itself, and the emergence of the heavy of bright grade pupils into high school work is always signalized by a most delightful evening's entertainment.

All the meetings mentioned will be held in the Methodist church, and all are free to the public except the address by Dr. Hoyt to which an admission fee of ten cents will be required to pay in part the cost of the lecture. The names of the graduates who are to receive the sheep skins dated '94 are:

THE STATE CONVENTION

Booked for Detroit to Be Held
June 30

The primary election plan of electing two delegates from each town and five from each ward in the city direct to the state convention to be held in Detroit June 30 is evoking much interest just at this time all over the country. The fact that no county conventions are to be held this year for the nomination of county officers or members of the legislature makes this state convention really the only interesting convention to be held and in all probability there will be numerous candidates from each of the townships for a place on the delegation.

While it is conceded that Fred M. Warner will receive the nomination for governor, yet there are many people who want to see how it is done and especially this year when the convention has received so much advertising.

Marquette and Berrien for Warner. Republican county conventions will now come fast, and it is expected that by June 20 more than half the delegates to the state convention will have been elected. Marquette county convention was held last Saturday and, though the delegates were not instructed, Warner men say the fourteen from that county will be for the Farmington cheese maker. Berrien county's convention was held Wednesday and Warner delegates were elected. June 10 Washburn county's convention will come off, as well as that of Cass county. Kalamazoo's convention will be held Saturday. Next week in a dozen more of the big counties will elect their delegates.

Warner men now claim 25 delegates to those elected so far.

COUNTY TREAS.

SNOW DEAD

POPULAR OFFICIAL SUCCUMBED
TO PNEUMONIA

Board of Supervisors Will Fill the Vacancy

County Treasurer Fred Snow, one of Wayne county's most popular officials, died Tuesday night of pneumonia. He had been ill for some time but it was thought until Monday he would pull through. Snow was the very picture of health and had a physique that would appear easily withstand almost any disease. Although a democrat he was held in high esteem by the republican party as well as his own and his renomination and election was a foregone conclusion. His untimely death is deeply regretted upon all sides.

The board of supervisors will be called upon to elect Mr. Snow's successor to fill out the unexpired term, which lasts until July 1 of next year. Ex Ald. Lake Huron of Detroit is prominently mentioned in the place and the supervisors will probably agree upon him as the most available man and the one who would be the most satisfactory to the people of the county in general.

Leave Their Horses

HIPPODALE, Mich., June 8.—The Rite Lotte Carriers association of Hillsdale county held its annual meeting this evening. This is the oldest and largest and strongest organization of rural letter carriers in the state. A home insurance feature, whereby the association insures the lives of the horses of its members has been incorporated into the constitution of the association, and is one of its strong features.

To Bond For High School.

Three Rivers, Mich., June 8.—A special meeting of the voters of school district No. 1 of the township of Lockport, which includes all of the city schools, with a few of the voters living outside of the communities, has been called for June 10 to vote on a proposition to bond the district to the sum of $20,000 to build a high school building on a site that was purchased in the fourth ward of the city last year.

Molded Counterfeit Nickels.
Detroit, Mich., June 8.—Carleton W. Maine and Horace W. Gray pleaded guilty before Judge Swan Tuesday to molding counterfeit nickels. Maine said he had been led into the criminal occupation by Frank J. Gordon who was camping near his home at North Adams. In view of their previous good reputations the court released the defendants on bail in the sum of $500 each to appear when ordered.

Couldn't Stand Abuse.
Menominee, Mich., June 8.—Mrs. Minnie Raufer committed suicide by hanging. She left a note addressed to her father explaining the cause, saying it was abuse. She was attired in her wedding gown and had a purse containing $100 in her pocket.

ENDED BY WEEPING

MRS. COLLINS' ATTORNEY THUS CLOSED HIS ARGUMENT.

CELEBRATED OWOSO MURDER
CASE NEARING THE END.

PROSECUTOR CHAPMAN INCLINED TO ROAST DEFENSE.

Owosso, Mich., June 8.—The arguments in the Collins murder trial were partially completed by the prosecution and entirely finished by the defense Tuesday. The courtroom was crowded and hundreds of people stood on the walk about the open windows or the confirmer listening breathlessly to the addresses of the attorneys.

Attorney McCurdy for the defense began by apologizing to the court, opposing attorneys and witnesses for losing his temper several times during the trial. He treated the case from the beginning down to the time that Leachman's stomach was sent to Ann Arbor for analysis.

Prof. Moses Gomberg, who performed the analysis, came in for scoring at the hands of the attorney. He said that Prof. Gomberg had analyzed the stomach and also the elixir balm which it contained and did not know whether the arsenic was in the fluid or in the stomach.

A letter which Mr. Gomberg wrote to Prosecutor Parker before the analysis last fall came in for a severe scoring. The professor according to the letter seemed to be in some doubt as to the propriety of making the analysis because of some circumstances, but nevertheless wished to make it.

"Why did he write this letter if he is an honest man?" said Mr. McCurdy. "Unless he wanted a big job at $150 and $50 a day witness fees?"

The attorney referred to the fact that Dr. Shoemaker of New Lothrop had given Leachman during his last days sixty grains of subnitrate of bismuth in three days. This substance is closely allied to arsenic. It is old and often contains arsenic. Yet no chemist expert had been put on the stand to show that this particular bismuth is free from arsenic.

Question of Motives

"There is no case in which a theory could be advanced," said Mr. McCurdy, "but I would rather have the conviction of a level-headed man upon this case than of the fine theories advanced. I do not believe that upon the theory you will stand a woman to conviction. In that task up the question of motives and the finding of the guilty man, I think the evidence on your side is clear enough to prove that he is guilty without being compelled to do so."

Mr. Collins' attorney, however, said he also writes. Prosecutor Chapman, who arose suddenly in pathos, repeating dryly, "I am here to answer the state's main charge," said, "I shall not allow a word to be said in my defense." I have got my wife at home," he said. "I have got my son at home." Rights of "mother to protect his state," he said. "My Chapman took a other seat at the defense by reasoning, "I hope I shall never be compelled to apologize in an important case because of my obstreperous action."

The prosecution has three hours and twenty minutes yet to argue and as the judge's charge will consume two hours, the case will not get to the jury before late this afternoon.

Fully twice that number remained under the awnings. Notwithstanding all that it took nearly an hour for the parade to pass you point. There were in all twelve bands, many brass and many flute and decorated batons.

The afternoon was devoted to field day sports and another parade for the park took place.

The Open Shop And "Parryasis"

By SAMUEL COMPERS, President American Federation of Labor

RADE unionism is attacked today more bitterly than ever before. There is this to be said, however: In the early days ALL CLASSES were arrayed against us. Today we have to contend with only a small and evil souled remnant.

In the days of our youth men who were not satisfied with wages and met to discuss means of bettering their condition were CONSPIRATORS AND OUTLAWS. They buried the records of their meetings and planned for freedom in the depths of forests.

One who ran away from ill paid or degraded toil and was captured was branded with a white hot iron with the letter "V" for villain or vagabond. If he ran away and was caught a second time he was branded with "S" for slave. For a third offense he was HANGED.

It is well to know the history of this movement to realize the valcys of tears that have been traversed, the myriad sacrifices that have been made—the lives that have been given up for the progress whose fruits we enjoy.

WE FACE TODAY A CONCENTRATION OF CAPITAL AND A DISEASE-OF CAPITAL WHICH I MAY CALL PARRYASIS.

There was harmony between employers and employed until the sick movement to bring about what Parryized capitalists call the OPEN shop, but which is really the NONUNION shop, raised its lead. Philadelphia workingmen agreed this year with their employers upon questions of hours and labor conditions. The question of wages was no obstacle.

They were content to have a member of the Builders' Exchange as an umpire in disputes. They were willing to sign an agreement which would do away with the sympathetic strike, but they demanded, and the Parryized employers refused, THE PRINCIPLE OF THE UNION SHOP.

How inconsistent! What agreement would be binding in a nonunion shop? What would be the sense of a union making an agreement with an employer who could and would Chincize the establishment WHENEVER HE PLEASED?

THE SO CALLED OPEN SHOP MEANS A NONUNION SHOP. IT IS THE VEHICLE OF THE HYPOCRITICAL EMPLOYER WHO PRETENDS FAIRNESS FOR LABOR, BUT WHO HAS HIS DAGGER HIDDEN IN HIS SLEEVE. I WOULD MUCH RATHER DEAL WITH AN OUTSPOKEN ANTIUNIONIST THAN WITH ONE OF THESE HYPOCRITES.

I am IRREVOCABLY opposed to the principle of the sympathetic strike. It hurts the cause of labor. But I am more heartily against the nonunion shop, and to thwart the capitolists who are striving for that end I would resort to ANY LEGAL means, including the unsparing use of the sympathetic strike.

The small soul'd persons who are trying to turn back the clock of labor's progress are engaged in an impossible task. You cannot teach a man the alphabet and then prevent him from framing the words Man, God, Liberty.

The spirituality of generations of sufferers, the weight of millions of toilers and citizens are back of this movement for the UNION shop. Men are not going back to chains, to the sixteen hour day, to nonunionism, division of effort and SLAVERY.

WE REALIZE THE FORCE OF WHAT JOHN HANCOCK SAID IN INDEPENDENCE HALL, "WE MUST HANG TOGETHER OR WE WILL HANG SEPARATELY."

Arbitration Should Be Prompted by Justice And Humanity

By NELSON A. MILES, Lieutenant General U. S. A. (Retired)

ARBITRATION is not altogether commendable for the powerful. There is no particular credit resorting to arbitration. WHILE BOTH PARTIES ARE AFRAID OR EQUALLY MATCHED and fearing that their countries may be overrun devastated or ruined.

THE MOST COMMENDABLE THEORY OF ARBITRATION IS THAT OF THE HIGH SENSE OF HONOR AND JUSTICE AND HUMANITY.

It is far more commendable for a powerful nation to lay aside for the time being its great power and influence and say to the weak, like the U.S.A., We will adjust our differences AS BETWEEN MEN, and we will be governed by a high sense of honor and justice. That is commendable, that is grand and glorious, and I trust that not only this proposed arbitration treaty with Great Britain that is being advanced and urged will be adopted, but I trust it will be the stepping stone, the example to ALL NATIONS of the world to unite in a better civilization and a better understanding and a better settlement of the differences that divide them. MEN are accustomed to resort to the civil courts or courts of arbitration to end their differences.

WHY SHOULD NOT GOVERNMENTS, THAT ARE THE CREATION, THE TOLERATION OF MEN, BE GOVERNED BY THE SAME RULE, MORE OR LESS, THAT GOVERNS INDIVIDUALS?

Highest Types of American Life

By HAMILTON W. MARSH, Editor and Essayist

W<sup>H</sup>OM would we name, is asked, to give the HIGHEST types of American life? Not the great leaders of commercial life, but the PIONEERS of the west, men of the old south, sturdy New Englanders. Our idealism would not pick THE GREAT INDUSTRIAL CENTERS of our country as the things to be most proud of, but would name Niagara falls, the Yosemite valley, the Yellowstone park. We are idealists.

The Gentleman From Indiana

In advance came the boys, whooping and somersaulting, and behind them rode a band of mounted men, surging with the back of her left hand and still mechanically waving her handkerchief with her right. "Isn't it beautiful?" she said, not ceasing to unconsciously flutter the little square of cambric. "There was such a throng that I grew faint and had to come away. I don't mind your seeing me cry. Pretty near everybody cried when he walked up the steps and we saw that he was lame."

John Harkless looked down upon the politics when it is red must steel his eyes to see many a man with the heartburn. After the men of Amo came the Harkless club of Gainesville, Mr. Harkless in the van with the step of a grenadier. There followed, next Mr. Ephraim Watts, bearing a light wand in his hand and leading a detachment of workers from the oil field in their stained blue overalls and blouses, and after them came Mr. Martin and Mr. Landis at the head of an organization recognized in the "order of procession" printed in the Herald as "the business men of Plattville." The band played in such magnificence that every high-stepping foot in all the line came down with the same jubilant plunk and lifted again with a unanimity as complete as that of the last vote the convention had taken that day. The leaders of the procession set a brisk pace, and who could have set any other kind of a pace when on parade to the strains of such a band playing such a tune as "A New Coon in Town" with all its might and main?

But as the line swung into the square there came a moment when the time was ended and the musicians paused for breath and there fell comparative quiet. Among the ranks of the "business men" ambled Mr. Wilkerson, singing at the top of his voice, and now he could be heard distinctly enough for those near him to distinguish the melody with which it was his intention to favor the public:

"Glory, glory, hallelujah!
As we go marching on!"

The words, the air, that husky voice, recalled to the men of Carlow another day and another procession not like this one. And the song Wilkerson was singing is the one song every northern born American knows and can sing.

The leader of the band caught the sound, signaled to his men, twenty instruments rose as one to twenty mouths, the snare drum rattled, the big drum roared, the leader threw his baton over his head, and music burst from twenty brazen throats.

"Glory, glory, hallelujah!"

Instantaneously the whole procession began to sing the refrain, and the people in the street and those in the wagons and carriages and those leaning from the windows joined with one accord. The ringing bells caught the time of the song and the upper air reverberated in the rhythm.

"These!" repeated Ross sternly.

"These rossettes—these streamers—that stoppipe all this blue moon?"

Ross turned pale. "Robert, he said inquisitively. "Robert?" He seemed unable to give up the decorations referred to.

"Yes," answered John. "These roses on the chairs at the hotel?"

"Oh!" Ross answered. "That." He fingered the band on the stoppipe, as if he saw it for the first time. "Yes, I see."

"But what's it for?"

"Why—it's—it's likely meant for decorations."

"It seems to have been here some time."

"Yes. I reckon it's most due to be called in. It's been up ever since."

"We'll put it up, Ross?"

"We did."

"What for?"

Ross was visibly embarrassed. "Why—for the other editor."

"For Mr. Fisbee?"

"Land, no. You don't suppose we'd go to all that work and bother to bring things up for that old gentleman do you?"

"I meant young Mr. Fisbee. He is the other editor, isn't he?"

"Oh!" said Ross. "Young Mr. Fisbee? Yes, we put 'em up for him."

"You did? Did he appreciate them?"

"Well, he seemed to kind of like 'em."

"Where is he now? I came here to find him."

"He's gone."

"Gone? Hasn't he been here this afternoon?"

The baritone stopped in front of the consciousness, and Harkless pulled up a line they made for him to speak, when he turned to them to speak, they began to cheer again, and he had to wait for them to quiet down.

"We can't bear him from over here," said Briscoe. "We're too far off. Mr. Meredith, suppose you take the ladies closer in; I stay with the horses."

"He's a great man, isn't he?" Meredith said to Harkless as he handed her out of the buckboard. "I've been trying to realize that he's the same old fellow I've been treating so familiarly, all day long."

"Yes, he is a great man," she answered. "This is only the beginning."

"That's true," said Briscoe. "Only wait awhile, and we'll all go on to Washington and get a thrill down our backs when we hear the speaker say, 'The gentleman from Indiana,' and see

"No," said Harkless. "I want to give him the Herd. Do you know where he is?"

Mr. Martin stroked his beard deliberately. "The person you speak of hadn't ought to be very hard to find in Carlow, and—well, maybe when found you'd want to put a kind of a codicil to that deed to the Herald. The committee was reckless enough to hire that carriage of yours by the day, and Keating and Warren Smith are sitting in it up at the corner with their feet on the cushions to show how used they are to riding around with four white horses every day in the week. It's waiting till you're ready to go out to Briscoe. There's an hour before supper time, and you can talk to young Fisbee all you want. He's out there."

The first words Warren Smith spoke had lifted the veil of young Fisbee's duplicity; had shown John with what fine intelligence and supreme delicacy and sympathetic young Fisbee had worked for him, had understood him and had made him. If the open attack on McCune had been made and the damnable evidence published in Harkless' own paper while Harkless himself was a candidate and rival he would have felt dishonored. The McCune papers could have been used for Halloway's benefit, but not for his own, and young Fisbee had understood and saved him. It was a point of honor that many would have held firmer and more consistent, but one that young Fisbee had compromised was vital to Harkless and this was the man he had discharged like a dishonest servant, the man who had thrown what in Carlow eyes was riches into his lap, the man who had made his paper and who had made him and saved him. Harkless wanted to see young Fisbee as he longed to see only one other person in the world.

As the barouche drove up to the brick house he made out through the trees a retreating flutter of skirts on the porch, and the thought crossed his mind that Minnie had thrown indoors to give some final directions toward the preparation of the banquet. But when the barouche halted at the gate he was surprised to see her waving to him from the steps, while Tom Meredith and Mr. Bence and Mr. Boswell formed a little court around her. Like Willets' face up on her back at the same moment, and the judge was waiting in front of the gate. Harkless stepped out of the barouche and took his band "I old young Fisbee was here."

"Young Fisbee is here," said the judge. "Listen. My father is a gentle old man with white hair and kind eyes. My name is my uncle's. He and my aunt have been good to me as a father and mother since I was seven years old, and they gave me their name by law, and I lived with them. My father came to see me once a year, I never came to see him. He always told me everything was well with him, that life was happy, and I thought it was easier for him not having me to take care of, he has been so poor ever since I was a child. Once he lost the little he had left to him in the world, his only way of making his living. He had no friends; he was hungry and desperate, and he wandered. I was dancing and going about wearing jewels—only I did not know. All the time the brave heart wrote me happy letters. I should have known, for there was one who did and who saved him. When at last I came to see my father he told me—he had written of his idol before, but it was not till I came that he told it all to me. Do you know what I felt? While his daughter was dancing on the camomile on the bank. At the foot of the garden, near the creek, there were roses, tulips, hydrangeas, flower beds, and beyond them one broad shaft of sun smote the creek banks for a mile in that land and creased the garden like a bright, taut drawn yell. Harkless pressed the bushes and stepped out into this gold brilliance. Then he uttered a cry and stopped. Harkless was standing beside the hydrangeas with both hands pressed to his face and her eyes cast on the ground. She had run away as far as she could run. There were high roses extending down to the creek on either side, and the water was beyond."

"You?" he said. "You? You?" She did not lift her eyes, but began to move away from him with little backward steps. When she reached the bench on the bank she spoke with a quick intake of breath and in a voice he almost failed to hear, the insect whisper, and her words came so slowly that sometimes in mid-sentence she stopped to catch her breath. "Can you—will you keep me—the Herald?"

"Keep you?"

He came near her. "I don't understand. Is it you—you—who are here again?"

"Have you forgiven me?" You know now—why I wouldn't resign? You forgive me—that telegram?"

"What telegram?"

"The one that came to you this morning."

"Your telegram?"

"Yes."

"Did you send me one?"

"Yes."

"It did not come to me."

"But—what was it about?"

"It was signed," she said; "it was signed."

She paused and turned half away, not lifting the downcast lashes. Her hand, resting upon the back of the bench, was shaking. She put it behind her. Then her eyes were lifted a little, and though they did not meet his he saw them and a glory shone into his heart. Her voice fell still lower, and two heavy tears rolled down her cheeks. "It was signed," she whispered, "it was signed—H. Fisbee."

He began to tremble from head to foot. There was a long silence. She had turned full away from him. When he spoke his voice was as low as hers, and he spoke as slowly as she had.

"You mean—then it was you?"

"Yes."

"You?"

"And you—you have—you have been here all the time?"

"All—all except the week—you were hurt."

The bright veil that wrapped them was drawn away, and they stood in the

"Did you know you are to drive me into town in the phaeton for the fireworks?" she asked.

"Fireworks?"

"Yes. The great Halloway has come home! Even in the darkness he could see the look the vision had given him when the horoscope turned into the square. She smiled upon him, and said, "All afternoon I was wishing I could have been your mother!"

He clasped her hand more tightly.

"This wonderful world!" he cried.

"Yesterday I had a doctor—a doctor to cure me of lovesickness!"

After a time they had proceeded a little nearer the house. "We must hurry," she said. "I am sure they have been waiting for us." This was true, they had.

From the dining room came laughter and hearty voices, and the windows were bright with the light of many lamps. By and by they stood just outside the patch of light that fell from one of the windows.

"Look!" said Helen. "Aren't they good, dear people?"

"The beautiful people!" he answered.

THE END.

"All for three years" she writes, "endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed imminent when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Filters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I am completely recovered."
