

THE NORTHLVILLE RECORD.

Vol. XXXV. No. 45.

NORTHLVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY JUNE 17, 1904

$1.00 Per Year in Advance

Warner's Nomination Is Now Assured.

Nearly Enough Delegates Have Been Elected and Instructed for Him.

Has 450 Now and Lots of Sure Counties Yet to Hear from.

Takes 548 Ballots to Nominate--Warner Will Get Over 700 on First Ballot.

The following counties elected Warner delegates this week: Barr, 13; Branch, 16; Gogebic, 6; Ingham, 21; Bay, 24; Lapeer, 6; Livingston, 11; Eaton, 18; Schoolcraft, 3; Kalamazoo, 29. Total, 141. Previously instructed for Warner, 300. This assures Warner's nomination. As it only takes 548 votes to nominate, and the following equipment far above the average, 13 counties have long since been conceded to the Oakland county delegate from the Farmington High school makers: Chippewa, Genesee, Gratiot, when only fourteen years of age; Hillsdale, Jackson, Macomb, Monroe, Oakland, Tuscola, Wexford. These will bring the number to over 800, to say nothing of a number of other counties in the doubtful column which will bring the grand total to over 700 on the first ballot.

"The prospects now are," said a well known up state politician to the Record, "that before the convention convenes at least two of the other candidates will withdraw from the race and practically leave a clear field for Warner, who in any event will be nominated on the first ballot."

That Warner is the choice of the whole people and of no clique or machine is easily proven by the way all classes of citizens and especially those from the more humble walks of life, have rallied about him, and notwithstanding the abuse heaped upon him by some big daily newspapers, the people have never wavered in their faith for him. Without the use of money or the promise of patronage county after county has fallen into line for the Oakland county man and wherever a contest has occurred his friends have won out by large majorities.

The total number of delegates elected to date is 21. Of this number 4 are for Warner, 10 Stevens, 7 Warren, 19 Horton & Doubtful.

The life story of Fred S. Warner who reaches only his fortieth birthday on the twenty-first of next month, is but another of the many which may be found in the history of our country, a good living example to the young men of America as to what ability, industry, perseverance and personal integrity can do, all unaided by the leverage of wealth or inheritance.

Although he first saw the light in England, Mr. Warner is essentially an American, as he was only three months old when brought to this country by his parents. Becoming motherless, he was adopted in infancy by Hon. P. Dean Warner, a man for whom that acquired title is no misnomer as evidenced by the results of his upbringing of the young life committed to his care, and in whose character he implanted, by precept and example, the seeds of the Union Church Services.

The pastor of the village churches have arranged the following schedule of Union Sunday evening services during the summer, each pastor to preach in his own church: June 19, Shank; June 26, Dimmock; July 3, Jerome; July 10, Shank; 17th Methodist anniversary; July 24, Jerome; July 31, Dimmock.

FRED S. WARNER of Oakland County, who will be nominated for governor of Michigan by the delegation in party at Detroit on June 20 next.

STARS' DOIN'S

GREAT SUCCESS

EXCELLENT ENTERTAINMENT EACH EVENING.

Goodly Sum Realized for O. E. S. Treasury.

As predicted the Eastern Star festival held in Masonic hall last week was a signal success from start to finish. The members took well repaid for their strenuous work, the net proceeds will foot up nearly $175. The fine work and candy booths, ice cream tables, fish pond, etc., all had a large patronage all through the fair and the special features were all roundly thanked by participants.

The opening of Art Fair's "Under the Impress of the War" which began on Friday, 12th disclosed a wide variety of striking pictures, many of which will hang long in the home of the owner. The cordiality of those who sat trembling in some being especially noticeable while others, who came to attend, were evidently prepared for the worst.

The next night a social event Friday evening also proved a success, featuring a large company, eating it with evident enjoyment the worked pork and beans, the gherkins and onions, typical of Southern viands, although no attempt was made to stir up the spirit or the occasion sufficiently to get the full-gressed pig squeals every day when he thinks of the meal before him. Some of our lively Northville ladies are supposed to be surreptitiously peering for the ladies' race and if they do go in it will be to win.

There is no reason why we cannot have a "great big day" as there are attractions enough of various kinds promised to insure satisfactory entertainment for all who come and that the attendance will be all that can be desired seems to be beyond doubt.

Warren's singing is the fact that every word is as distinctly enunciated as in conversation. Theatrons in the "Man from Texas" won new laurels for themselves, as did all our local instrumental and vocal musicians who had parts on the program throughout the festival.

A big crowd of people viewed and interviewed the sixty-five babies on exhibition Saturday afternoon, and nobody coveted the position of the judges, as an infinitely superior brand of wisdom to that displayed by Solomon on the occasion of the one baby (or one baby) show at which he is recorded as officiating would have been inadequate to pass upon the merits of such a bewildering array of infantile beauty and brightness. The judges were Detroit women, and, so far as the Record has been able to ascertain, escaped in safety. By an unforeseen accident a part of the list of babies awarded prizes was destroyed, so that the committee was unable to furnish the Record with a list of names, a fact which we much regret, but as it would be manifest injustice to give a partial list only are obliged to omit the whole. Saturday evening Galley's quartet (Miss Hill or Trotter) charmed the large audience with their excellent singing, the prominent voice of the Garrison soloist, Mr. Nuszkowski, winning especially enthusiastic applause. Our own exceptionally talented reader, Miss P. Miller, of whom Northville people are justly proud, fully excelled her of if that were possible, and was obliged to respond to a double encore. Miss West of NEAL also gave recreation in a very pleasing manner. The whole affair was one of the best things ever gotten up in Northville and was a credit to all concerned.

Notice to Water Takers

Supt Huff of the water works calls the attention of water users to the rules governing the same as printed on the back of the water receipt. There is plenty of water in the springs just now but if people persist in a needless waste of it, the hour restrictions will have to be enforced.

Water taken from neighboring hydrant, the owner of hydrant is responsible for payment.

Hugh Had to Pay.

My friend Hugh heard the water running, but neglected to investigate until the water company told him something must be wrong. The plumber came and found the leak that tired the meter and Hugh paid for both.

Offers to Mortgage Body.

At a recent meeting of the medical faculty of Queen's University Ontario, a proposal was received from a man in need of money to mortgage his body to the institution. The communication was shelved.

Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilatation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentation—Evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms:

Shortness of Breath after exercise.

Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one's side. Pain in Spine. Cervous Cough. Sniffles of Heart and Lungs. Paleness of Face and Lips. Paroxysms of Headache. Irritation of Eyes.

The ladies of the C. A. R. occupied their second day's sots on the routine business and reports. The address of welcome was given by Past Commander W. J. Murrill of Paragon Post, and the response was made by Mrs. Adele Egan of Muskegon.

The Woman's Relief Corps of the department of Michigan opened its twenty-first annual session at 9 o'clock with 42 corps represented by delegations about 500 being in attendance.

Department Commander Mrs. Anna Redfield of Jackson made the opening address, and the address of welcome was given by the commander of the Battle Creek corps, Mrs. Mary Hart.

The response was made by Department Commander Mrs. Udell of Jackson.

Well Off Financially.

The financial condition of the corps is one of the most pleasing features of the past year's work. The great economy has been used but every demand has been met and there still remains in the treasury a fine balance.

The per capita tax was last year lowered from 4 cents to 7 cents causing a deficit of $345.56 in the yearly receipts.

Mrs. Udell strongly urged the re-establishment of the old rule.

The annual session of the Sons of Veterans department of Michigan in the city of Battle Creek, Mich., June 16, was a success due to the skillful arrangement of the local committee.

Dr. W. H. Marshall, president of the department, presided over the meeting.

For a Hundred Years.

For a hundred years or more, which has been recognized as a century, the world remained for Dr. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago, discoverer of the virtues of Witch Hazel, a leading manufacturer in the field of the pharmaceutical industry.

Ben Cook was the victim of an unfortunate accident yesterday at the L. C. Brooks farm northeast of town. He was assisting at some carpenter work on one of the barns when a scaffolding on which he was standing gave way and he was thrown to the ground breaking his leg.

Some one certainly going to get into trouble if the description of our cemetery continues complete as are again long made, not only of the structures and receptacles for flowers, taking of the flags from the V. F. W. and M. R. C. members, but plants have been dug up and cut away which have been set out on the graves. It is hard to understand who can prove to us who is responsible for this work.

CHAPTER I.

FOR a detective whose talents had not been recognized at headquarters I possessed an ambition which, fortunately for my standing with the Lieutenant of the precinct, had not yet been expressed in words. Though I had small reason for expecting great things of myself, I had always cherished the hope that if a big case came my way I should be found able to do something with it—something more than is, than I had seen accomplished by the police of the District of Columbia since I had had the honor of being one of them number. Therefore, when I found myself plunged, almost without my own volition, into the Jeffrey-Moore affair, I believed that the opportunity had come whereby I might distinguish myself.

It had complications, this Jeffrey-Moore affair; greater ones than the public ever knew, keen as the interest in it ran both in and out of Washington.

This is why I propose to tell the story of this great tragedy from my own standpoint, even if in so doing I risk the charge of attempting to exploit my own connection with this celebrated case. In its course I encountered as many disappointments as triumphs, and brought it to the affair as it was satisfied for I am a lover of women and—

But I am keeping you from the story itself.

I was at the station house the night Uncle David came in. He was always called Uncle David, even by the up-chins who followed him in the street, so I am showing him no disrespect, gentlemen though he be, by giving him a title which so completely characterized him in those days as did his moodiest ways, his quidnunc airings and the persistency with which he kept at his side his great master Rudge.

I had long since heard of the old gentleman as one of the most interesting residents of the precinct. I had even seen him more than once on the avenue, and I had never before been brought face to face with him, and consequently had much too superficial a knowledge of his condition to determine definitely whether the queer light in his tall, thin eyes wasatural to them or sprung from the result of press or excitement. But when he began to talk I detected an air as stale as trencher to his tones and detected that there was a note of surprise, right or wrong, though he appeared to have nothing morearming to impart than the fact that he had seen a light burning in some house so presumably empty.

It was all so trivial that I gave him but scant attention till he let a narrow fall which caused me to prick up my ears and even to put in a word "The Moore house," he had said.

"The Moore house?" I repeated in amazement. "Are you speaking of the Moore house?"

A thousand recollections came with the name.

"What other?" he grumbled, directing toward me a look as keen as it was impudent. "Do you think that I would bother myself long about a house I had no interest in, or drag Rudge from his warm rug to see some ungrateful neighbor from a possible burglary? No, it is my house which some rogue has chosen to enter! That is," he snarled, corrected, as he saw surprise in every eye, "the house where the law will give me. If anything ever happens to that old girl whom my brother left behind him."

Growing some words at the dog who showed a decided inclination to lie down where he was, the old man made for the door and a another moment would have been in the street if I had not stepped after him.

"You are a Moore and live in or near that old house?" I asked.

The surprise with which he met this question daunted me a little.

"How long have you been in Washington, I say, I like to ask?" was his acid retort.

"Oh, some five months."

His good nature, or what passed for such in this irascible old man, returned in an instant, and he curtsied but not unkindly remarked:

"You haven't learned much in that time?" Then, with a nod more cere monious than many another man's bow, he added, with sudden dignity, "I am of the elder branch and live in the cottage fronting the old place. I am the only resident on the block. When you have lived here longer you the holy words were said, a panic had seized the guests, and emptied the house as suddenly and completely as though the plague had been discovered there.

This is why I listened to follow Uncle David when he told me that all was not right in this house of tragic memories.

CHAPTER II.

TROUGH past seventy, Uncle David was a brisk walker, and on this night in particular he sped along so fast that he was half way down H street by the time I had turned the corner of New Hampshire avenue.

His gaunt but ungraceful figure, merged in that of the dog trotting closely at his heels, was the only moving object in the dreary vista of this the most desolate block in Washington. As I neared the building I was so impressed by the surrounding stillness that I was ready to vow that the shadows were denser here than elsewhere and that the few gas lamps which flickered at intervals down the street shone with a more feeble ray than in any other equal length of street in Washington.

Meanwhile the shadow of Uncle David had vanished from the pavement. He had paused beside a fence which, hung with vines, surrounded and nearly hid from sight the little cottage, he had mentioned as the only house on the block with the exception of the great Moore place, in other words, his home.

"As I came abreast of him I heard him muttering, not to his dog, as was his custom, but to himself. In fact, the dog was not to be seen, and this description on the part of his constant companion seemed to add to his disturbance and distract him beyond all reason. I could distinguish these words among the many he directed toward the unseen animal:

"You're a knowing one—too knowing! You see that loosened shutter over the way as plainly as I do; but you're a coward to shrink away from it. I don't. I face the thing and, what's more, I'll show you yet what I think of a dog that can't stand his ground and help his old master out with some show of courage. Rudge does it! Well, let it crack. I don't mind its cracking glad as I should be to know whose hand—Hello! You've come to give you?" This to me. I had just stepped up to him.

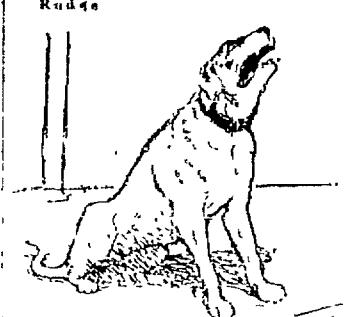

"Hello! Now, what is the matter with the Moore house?"

He must have expected the question yet his answer was a long time coming. His voice, too, sounded strained and was pitched quite too high to be natural. But he evidently did not expect me to show surprise at his manner.

"Look at that window over there!" he cried at last. "That one with the slightly open shutter? Watch and you will see that shutter move. There it creaked! Didn't you hear it?"

A growl. It was more like a moan than a bark. It came from the porch behind us. In

Rudge

After the old dog had uttered his sound, with a gesture of his tail as it was in motion, I stood silent.

"Be still there! If you leave the house to look about, shut your jaws shut, don't let me follow who barks along now. What fool you are! I declare, he intended on going to his master and Lulu to me, that dog is getting old. He can't be trusted any more. He torments his master just when—The rest was lost in Lulu's throat, which rattled with something more than impatient anger.

Meanwhile I had been attentively scrutinizing the house thus pointedly brought to my notice. I had seen it many times before, but, as it happened, had never stopped to look at it when the huge trees surrounding it were shrouded in darkness. The black hollow of its disused portal looked out from shadows which acquired some of their somberness from the tragic memory connected with its empty void.

Its aspect was scarcely reassuring.

Not that superstition lent its terror to the lonely scene, but that through the blank panes of window, alternately appearing and disappearing from view as the shutter pointed out by Uncle David flew to and fro in the wind I saw or was persuaded that I saw a beam of light which argued at the known presence with a walls which had so lately been declared unfit for my master's habitation.

"You are right," I now remarked to the treacherous figure at my side. "Some one is prowling through the house you der."

"Can it possibly be Mrs. Jeffrey or her husband?"

"At night and with no gas in the house? Hardly."

The words were natural, but the voice was not. Neither was his manner quite suited to the occasion. Glaring him another sly glance and marking how unceasingly he edged away from me in the darkness, I cried out more cheerfully than he possibly expected.

"I will summon another officer, and we three will just ship across and investigate."

"Not I!" was his violent rejoinder as he swung open a gate concealed in the vines behind him. "The Jeffreys would resent my intrusion if they ever happened to hear of it."

"I am the only resident on the block. When you have lived here longer you

"Indeed!" I laughed, sounding my whistle. Then, soberly enough, for I was more than a little struck by the oddity of his behavior. "I thought him as well worth investigating as the house in which he shows such an interest. You do right to let that count. Come and see what's up in the house you are so ready to call yours."

But he only drew farther into the shade.

"I have no business over there," he objected. "Veronica and I have never been on good terms. I was not even invited to her wedding, though I live within a stone's throw of the door. No; I have done my duty in calling attention to that light, and whether it's the bullethead of a burglar—perhaps you don't know that there are rare treasures on the bookshelves of the great library—or whether it is the fantastic illumination which frightens fool folks and some food dogs. I do none with it and done with you, too, for nothing."

As he said this he mounted to his door and disappeared under the vines hanging like a shroud over the front of the house. In another moment the rich peal of an organ sounded from within, followed by the prolonged howling of Rudge who, either from a lack of appreciation of his master's music or in utter disapproval of me—the one I believe he ever been able to make out which was accustomed to add this undesirable accompaniment to every strain from the old man's hand. The playing did not cease because of these outrageous discords. On the contrary it increased in force and volume, causing Rudge's expression of pain or pleasure to increase also. The result can be imagined. As I listened to the interlacing howls of the dog cutting cle a through the strains of harmonies of his master I wondered if the shadows cast by the towering structure of the great Moore house were to blame for Uncle David's lack of neighbors.

Meanwhile Hubbard, who was the first to hear my shout, came running down the block. As he passed me the left, or what we call a left, appeared in the window toward which my attention had been directed.

"Some one's in the Moore house!" I declared. In as matter of fact for us I could command.

Hubbard of a big fellow, the biggest fellow on the force and so far as my own experience with him had gone, as stout and in perturbable as the best of iron. But after a quick glance at the towering walls of the lonely building he showed a decided embarrasment and seemed in no haste to cross the street.

With difficulty I concealed my dis gusted Hubbard.

He was right, I felt as if I were shutting the lid of a coffin when I finally closed the door.

Our next steps took us into the rear, where we found Hubbis to details, and with a certain dread fully justified by the event, we made for the door disturbed by the two Cornishmen columns.

It was just like the rest, and, call me coward or call my fool, I have called Hubbard both, you will remember, I found that it cost me an effort to lay my hand on its mahogany panels. Danger, if danger there was, lurked here and while I had never known myself to quail before any ordinary antagonist, I, like others of my ilk have no especial fondness for unseen and mysterious perils.

Hubbard who up to this point had followed me almost to the death, now receded into the room that was in no wise necessary. It was with a sense of entering home upon the scene that I finally closed the door and crossed the threshold of the room which I had entered to find that the two Cornishmen had not been idle. They had indeed taken advantage of the opportunity to lay hands on the windowsills and had broken them, so that the glass lay scattered on the floor.

"Come!" I cried, stepping down from the curb. "Let's go over and investigate."

The property is valuable, the furnishings are handsome, and there is no end of costly books on the library shelves. You have nothing but a re ason to be afraid of."

"Come!" I cried, stepping down from the curb. "Let's go over and investigate."

He nodded rapidly stroking the first of the two dogs which had been sent to his post office which he endeavored to carry off with him. I recited.
