There Are Other Machines: The Democratic papers of the state are using columns of space telling about the awfulness of the republican state organization which they dub the "machines".

There are other machines. It is generally supposed that there must be an organization, or machine, in every walk of life, be it business, social, religious or political. Every successful business house, bank and corporation has it, every church, factory, bank, business house has an organization to shape its affairs as well as political bodies, be they republican, democratic, prohibitionist, socialist, free silver or what not.

Next came the Grand Rapids democratic convention. Wayne county and dozens of other counties had instructed for Stearns, Campau. The machine, was there with his whip. He wasn't even elected to the office, but Campau gave the whip after another whip through the air and the dance was on and Campau was swayed and might and unseated.

It was a case where Campau was right. However, and his ear-splitting judgment showed he knew more than his party, but when that party and the newspapers which represent that party talk about machines they should just remember there are others—and the others is Campau.

FARMERS' MONTH AT WORLD'S FAIR

Biggest Department of the Great Exposition Ready for the Inspection of the Army of Men Who Made Its Creation Possible.

Now that crops have been or are being laid by, the farmer prepares for his trip to the World's Fair, a treat that has long been promised him and for which he has patiently waited. No exposition has offered so many inducements for the farmer's presence as this one at St. Louis, nor has any previous exposition given the prominence and space to the subject of agriculture.

August and September are ostensibly the farmer's months at the Exposition, for it is at this season that the agricultural exhibits are the freshest and best. Products of the new crops are pouring into the booths from every state in the Union, and additions are constantly being made to the gorgeous display.

Headquarters for visiting farmers may be found in every state section of the great Agriculture Palace, but for their special convenience there has just been completed a Grange House, situated on the grounds of the Exposition.

Agriculture is given more prominence than any other department at the Exposition, the paramount importance of this great industry having been fully appreciated from the very beginning of the World's Fair movement.

About seventy acres of ground are covered by the agriculture and horticulture department at the fair, large outdoor spaces being devoted to this industry. Outside there are growing crops, trees and flowers, an instructive eye-ear farm, and a fine United States Government Plant Industry and Gardens in all parts of the grounds.

enough to occupy the attention of visitors for many days. Nothing to compare with them was ever attempted before. They are the climax of several decades of educational work which is placing farming on a high plane and is making scientific agriculture a pleasing reality.

Council Proceedings

An adjourned regular meeting of the Council of Northville, Mich., was held at the home of Mrs. M. O. Stevens, on Monday, August 22, 1904. The following bills were introduced and passed: A bill to amend the charter of the city of Northville, Mich., to provide for the election of a mayor and council.

Value of Wild Animals: An elephant costs $5,000 and he is likely to live twenty years. A lion will cost $1,000 and is good for twelve years. A Siberian tiger costs $3,000, a polar bear $1,000 and a black bear $200.

The Poor Little Dog: "You had better love Hannah, the cook, feed her lap dog of yours something besides breakfast food and cream," growled Mr. Flittington to his wife. "I found him on top of the dresser this morning gnawing up my bone collar buttons." - Cleveland Leader.

When Intermittents Were Permitted: The following curious rule appears under paragraph 6c of the municipal regulations governing burials at Glenside, Pa.: "Interments are only permitted after death has taken place. In all other cases a certificate signed by the mayor is required."

Being honorably a wife, the name of my wife was absent and I was permitted to enter the quickly and permanently, after a long and hard fight. - C. E. Conwell, Valley Street, Sumner, N. Y.

Central African Beer: Central African makes a kind of sweet beer which is effervescent, and tastes a good deal like champagne. It is made by infusing water and banana juice, and allowing this to ferment. It is said to be wholesome, but it is drunk only by women and children.

Varying Cries of Children: When a child suffers from inflammation of the lungs it moans, but rarely cries. When suffering from bronchitis the cry is gruff and rattling. When suffering from croup the cry is sharp and fretful. When hungry it is fretful and wailing.

Insulin Prevented: The startling announcement that a preventive of suicide had been discovered will interest everybody. A run-down, nervous, and melancholy man, who had been suffering from suicidal tendencies, was cured by the use of insulin. The chief growth in American exports to Russia has been in cotton, agricultural implements, copper and its manufactures, and naval stores.

Quick Mail Delivery: Letters dropped into a box in Paris are delivered in Berlin within an hour and a half, and sometimes within thirty-five minutes. They are whisked through tubes by pneumatic power.

Experts to Russia: The chief growth in American exports to Russia has been in cotton, agricultural implements, copper and its manufactures, and naval stores.

Put an End to it All: A grievous ailment comes as a result of unbalanced pain from overworked organs. Business Backache, Liver complaint and Constipation. Dr. King's New Life Pills they put an end to it all. They are gentle but thorough. Try them. Only 25c. Guaranteed by Geo. C. Hueston's drug store.

Just Chills and Fever: It was the young physician's first experience on the witness stand and he had just testified: "I found the plaintiff suffering from a rigor, followed by febrile symptoms attending a rise of temperature." "And what do you mean by that?" inquired the judge. "He had chills and fever," meekly replied the doctor.

A Sweet Breath

is a never failing sign of a healthy stomach. When the breath is bad the stomach is out of order. There is no remedy in the world equal to Kodol Dyspepsia-Cure for curing indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders. Mrs. Mary S. Crick, of White Plains, N.Y., writes: "I have been a dyspeptic for years; tried all kinds of remedies but continued to grow worse. By the use of Kodol I began to improve at once, and after taking a few bottles I was fully restored in weight, health and strength and can eat whatever I like. Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by all druggists."

Moslem Cemeteries: When once filled in a Moslem Grave is never re-opened on any account. To remove the faintest change of its thus being defiled a cypress tree is planted after every interment, so that the cemeteries resemble forests more than anything else.

PHILIPPINES AT WORLD'S FAIR

Complete Exhibition of Island People and Industries Covers Forty-seven Acres and is Independent of Larger Show.

Not even in the heart of Manila city could there be found forty-seven acres of Philippine territory as interesting as that amount of space covered by the islands' display at the World's Fair. Here is an exposition within an exposition, a little wheel that revolves independently of the larger one encompassing it.

Scores of buildings are filled with exhibits, native life is depicted by as many different villages as there are tribes on the islands, military drills are given by Philippine troops, and concerts are rendered by native bands. For its amusement features the Philippine exposition has the humorous Igor-lows, ever at war among themselves and with the whole outside world. Despite their ferocity they are a clever race, and their slaves and are expert seamen, while long continued pillage on the high seas has surrounded them with many of the luxuries and conveniences of western civilization.

The buildings of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries show all the varied natural products, also the extremely primitive processes as yet in vogue, while in the Women's building were introduced a number of native manufactures, including the beautiful fabrics from the jute, banana and pineapple fibers. This information is collated in the Building of Commerce, where a unique and most effective method of exhibiting is followed. In one hall are samples of all the articles produced for export, among which Manila fiber, of course, holds the chief place of prominence, while in a second hall are all the manufactures from every country that are imported and find a ready market among the populace. Thus the business man gets a dual lesson. He sees what he can profitably take from the islands, and also what he may profitably send to them. When it is added that a large number of representative Filipinos have been brought over to visit the Exposition and study American business methods and manufactures, it will be recognized that great benefit both to the islands and to the world at large must result from this work of manual enlightenment.

visitors who dine on dog meat, and are entertained by Visayan actors and actresses. Nothing is lacking to make the show complete.

The Administration building is a replica of the government offices in Manila, while the Art and Education building reproduces in miniature the cathedral within the walled city, even the mellowed tints of age being faithfully rendered. A section of the ancient but still scrupulously town hall has been reconstructed to serve the double purpose of a gateway to the show and a museum of arms and war relics. The other main buildings are types of Filipino homes, being built of unadorned timber, bamboo and rattan, with thatched roofs and broad verandas.

Then there are the tribal villages nestled under the trees, some of the houses perched high up among the boughs, others on piles above the waters of the Arrowhead lake, all of them actual dwellings fashioned of native materials by native workmanship and illustrating the manners, customs and pursuits of their occupants. Here are women weaving a coarse cloth on a rude hand loom, others making baskets, others tending irrigated fields of rice. One group of men are in village council, trying an offender according to their tribal laws; others are slowly moving in a circular dance to the thump of tom-toms and the clang of brass gongs; others, again, are smelting iron by the aid of a primitive but most ingenious bellows, the constituent parts of which are a bamboo tube and an air-tight mop of feathers working therein, like the piston of a spring. And these are but a few of an almost endless variety of life pictures.

The ethnological problem is a somewhat complicated one, but although there are no fewer than sixteen races represented among the village dwellers, the scouts and the constabulary, each race speaking its own dialect and following its own customs, all may be roughly classified into four groups—the true aboriginals or non-Malays, the pagan Malays, the Christian Malays and the Mohammedan Malays.

The first are the dwarf Negritos, with dark skins and woolly heads, wearers of scanty raiment, proficient in the use of the bow and poisoned arrow, a race of nomads and forest dwellers, pagans pure and simple. They live in their own stockaded village.

Next to them are the Igorrotes, whose origin is traced back to the first wave of Malay invasion. Here, again, we have scanty clothing, amounting almost to nudity, but copper colored skins, long wavy tresses, pleasant featured faces and fine physiques, even though the stature be small. Among these pagan Malays are the head hunters and the dog eaters. They are savages, yet have their code of laws and a knowledge of several primitive industries.

The Christian Malays, produced by the second wave of invasion, are represented by the Visayans, a tall and handsome race, dressing well, living in pretty homes, skilled in weaving, dyeing, basket making, hat making, wood carving and other handicrafts, musicians of no mean merit, the one group of natives who came early and thoroughly under the influence of the early Spanish settlers.

Very different are the Moros, who swept into the islands from the Malay peninsula last of all, bringing with them their Mohammedan religion, also a knowledge of gunpowder acquired with the Koran from the Arabs—fanatics like their teachers, pirates, blood-thirsty, treacherous and vindictive fel-

WILLIAM K. VAN REYPEN.

Former Surgeon General of Navy, Was in Head of Red Cross Society.

The American Red Cross Society at its recent meeting in Washington chose as its new head Dr. William Kullerbocker Van Reypen, former surgeon general of the United States army and a lifelong student of the question of relieving suffering caused by war. At the international medical congress in Moscow in 1897 an address that received high praise was made by Dr. Van Reypen on care of the wounded in the navy. In connection with this address he showed drawings he had made of a model ambulance ship. A few months afterward he obtained an opportunity to carry out his ideas. He was appointed surgeon general of the navy. Anticipating the outbreak of war with Spain he secured the fitting of the ambulance ship Solage, the first complete ship of its kind, whose good work during the unpleasantness with Spain is now a matter of history. Dr. Van Reypen was born in New Jersey, Nov. 14, 1840, and graduated from both the academic and medical departments of the University of the City of New York. While a student he served in the Union army as assistant surgeon of the Second New Jersey regiment. In 1861 he entered the navy, and soon afterward was sent to Key West to take charge of the naval hospital there, an assignment which proved an important one, as there were fifty-three cases of yellow fever at the hospital, and many patients were sent to Key West from the ships of the blockading squadron. His appointment as surgeon general of the navy in 1887 found him fully prepared for his duties, and he made an excellent record in that capacity during the Spanish war. Dr. Van Reypen went on the retired list in 1892 with the rank of rear admiral.

Dr. Van Reypen was born in New Jersey, Nov. 14, 1840, and graduated from both the academic and medical departments of the University of the City of New York. While a student he served in the Union army as assistant surgeon of the Second New Jersey regiment. In 1861 he entered the navy, and soon afterward was sent to Key West to take charge of the naval hospital there, an assignment which proved an important one, as there were fifty-three cases of yellow fever at the hospital, and many patients were sent to Key West from the ships of the blockading squadron. His appointment as surgeon general of the navy in 1887 found him fully prepared for his duties, and he made an excellent record in that capacity during the Spanish war. Dr. Van Reypen went on the retired list in 1892 with the rank of rear admiral.

Anticipating the outbreak of war with Spain he secured the fitting of the ambulance ship Solage, the first complete ship of its kind, whose good work during the unpleasantness with Spain is now a matter of history. A Good Soldier.

Bayard, the flower of the French knightly, the soldier without fear or reproach, never forgot his mother's parting words. She said to him: "My boy, serve God first; pray to Him night and morning; be kind and charitable to all; avoid envy, hatred and lying as vices unworthy of a Christian, and never neglect to comfort widows and orphans."

Accidents come with distressing frequency on the farm. Cuts, bruises, stings, sprains, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil relieves the pain instantly. Never safe without it.

Confession of a Doctor.

A London physician, at the risk of giving away the secrets of his profession, writes to a paper that in the course of thirteen visits to a victim of the grip he could do but two things of positive value. The first was to open a window and the second was to pull off three of the six blankets under which the patient was sweltering.

DeWitt is the Name.

When you go to buy White Hazel Salve look for the name DEWITT on every box. The pure, unadulterated White Hazel Salve is used in making DeWitt's White Hazel Salve, which is the best salve in the world for cuts, burns, bruises, boils, eczema and piles. The popularity of DeWitt's White Hazel Salve, due to its many cures, has caused numerous worthless counterfeits to be placed on the market. The genuine bears the name E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. Sold by all druggists.

Gorilla a Fierce Fighter.

The gorilla is a most formidable opponent in battle, its great strength lying in its powerful arms. Few animals of the forest have the slightest chance of overcoming a gorilla; but a python has been known to encircle its coils round the gorilla's body, only, however, to have its own body torn open by its adversary's hands.

Holding Hands.

The way was steep and throned, And I was weary, And I was weary, To reach my home too soon, Eager in the pathway, Where the stars shined, I walked to sea and father, And they were holding hands.

But, as I watched them sadly, The men in anger hung, And the little ones, Than to his own and long, I heard him say, "Remember, One warm boy's hands, 'Tis not so bad, I reckon, Without our holding hands."

Yes, little hands are clinging, And little feet are tread, But little hearts are tender, And little lives are frail, If one I knew could only, Come back to give commands, I'd gladly walk forever, For our holding hands— Milwaukee Journal

REPRESENTATIVE MEN ON THE WORLD'S FAIR
What Distinguished Statesmen and Others Say of the Educational and Inspiring Exposition at St. Louis.
The public utterances of distinguished men who have visited the world's fair have but one note, and that of emphatic praise. Here are some of their comments:
Hon. John Hay, secretary of state: "I have never seen nor heard of anything so fine."
Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury: "Any father of a bright boy can afford to send him to the Fair simply to study any one of at least a thousand exhibits."
Hon. Charles H. Grosvenor of Ohio: "A visit of ten days by a man of ordinary aptness and appreciative capacity to the Fair is almost equal to a postgraduate course in a university."
Hon. Benjamin B. Odell, governor of New York: "St. Louis has been badly misrepresented by accounts which say that her weather is unfavorable. The Fair is wonderful."
Hon. George C. Pardee, governor of California: "The governor of the Golden State, who has spent all his life within her borders, finds that he knew only a little about his state until he came to the Fair and saw all her varied products assembled together."
Hon. Albert B. Cummins, governor of Iowa: "The Louisiana Purchase Exposition is on the grandest scale of any exposition the world has ever seen."
Hon. William B. Ewing, governor of Missouri: "The more I see of the Exposition the more I enjoy it."
Hon. Fenimore Chatterton, governor of Wyoming: "I wish the Fair the greatest success. It certainly deserves it."
Hon. Franklin Murphy, governor of New Jersey: "It is well worth coming from New Jersey to see even a small part of this Fair."
Hon. R. B. White, governor of West Virginia: "I cannot speak too strongly of the greatness of this Fair."
Hon. William J. Bryan: "The Exposition is an unparalleled wonder."
Hon. John Sharp Williams, member of congress from Mississippi: "The most wonderful thing of its kind."
Hon. Hoke Smith of Georgia, formerly secretary of interior under President Cleveland: "I am highly pleased with the Exposition and believe it to be one of the triumphs of modern civilization."
Hon. Perry Belmont of New York: "In magnitude and beauty the Fair is wonderful. It is worth coming a long distance to see."
Hon. Daniel J. Campau, chairman of the Michigan delegation to the Democratic national convention at St. Louis: "It is positively sinful for parents to fail to bring their children to see the Fair."
Hon. Paul Dupuy, editor of Le Petit Journal of Paris, France: "I admire the Exposition for its immensity, its spirit of the sublime, its general beauty, and its completeness."
Prince George of Bavaria: "I have never seen anything prettier than the St. Louis World's Fair buildings, when outlined at night with their millions of electric lights."
Hon. Louis E. McComas of Maryland: "The greatest fair in the world."
Hon. John E. Bryan of New Jersey: "The people have no idea of the greatness of the Exposition. Every American should see it."
Hon. T. F. Shanks, president of the Clover Leaf route of Chicago: "The Fair is a big success and will continue to be a greater success as it progresses."

PE-RU-NA NECESSARY TO THE HOME
A Letter From Congressman White, of North Carolina.

HON. GEORGE H. WHITE.
Congressman George Henry White, of Tarboro, N. C., writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman in regard to the merits of the great catarrh cure, Peruna:
House of Representatives, Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.
Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.
Gentlemen: "I am more than satisfied with Peruna, and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."
Very respectfully,
George H. White.
Mrs. Nannie Wallace, Tulare, Cal., President of the Western Baptist Missionary Society, writes:
"I consider Peruna an indispensable article in my medicine chest. It is twenty medicines in one, and has so far cured every sickness that has been in my home for five years. I consider it of special value to weakly women, as it builds up the general health, drives out disease and keeps you in the best of health."—Mrs. Nannie Wallace.
"If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis."
Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
Korean Dress.
Eight years ago an attempt was made to introduce European dress in Seoul, but the change could not be made because of conservative opposition, especially on the part of the women. At present the only Koreans who wear European garments are the soldiers and politicians.

L. W. Hutton, who has been quite ill, is now better.

Miss Lizzie Starkweather has been quite ill this week.

The Northville K. T. go to Pontiac for a fraternal visit next Tuesday night.

The L. T. L. held a "measuring" party at the Cohen home Tuesday evening.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church will have a bake sale next week Saturday.

The W. R. C. resumed regular meetings Wednesday evening after a month's vacation.

Catholic services will be held at the home of Mrs. Ives, Dundas street, Sunday morning at 8:00 o'clock.

A pleasant thimble party was given by the ladies of the Methodist church at Mrs. Charles Filkins' Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. Henry and F. N. Perrin planted 2,500 small-mouth bass in Walled Lake Monday. They were from the Northville U. S. fish hatchery.

Baptist ladies bake sale in the vacant Amble store, Main street, tomorrow, Saturday. Last week's slips will be good at this sale.

Michael Roach, who lives at Spring brook cheese factory north of Farmington, will sell a lot of live stock and farm produce on August 31.

The steam thrasher is now abroad in the highways and byways, helping the "o-tommy-bles" to make things lively for the nervous horses and ditto drivers.

The entertainment in the Methodist church Monday evening by John Seaman Gams was very fine and deserved a much larger audience than was present. Mr. Gams' reading and singing won high praise from all who heard him.

The immense old willow tree which has been for many years an "ancient landmark" on Center street just south of Main broke again during one of the recent storms and has now been all cut down and cleared away, making things look very unfamiliar down that way.

Northville's familiar popcorn wagon now has a formidable rival, one of our bustling young business "men." Fred Taft, having established another "Fred's" outfit, does not occupy a whole lot of space but it gets there just the same, and is doing a thriving business.

Mrs. C. H. Jennings, Boston—"Our babies (twins), were sickly. Had several doctors, but no results. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea made them strong and robust." 35 cents. Tea or tablet form. Murdock Bros.

Prohibit Export of Game. By an edict of the Minister of Agriculture in Hungary, the exportation of living game or eggs is prohibited.

Special meeting of Orient chapter, O. E. S., this Friday evening. All members requested to be present.

Rev. W. S. Jerome will conduct services as usual in the Presbyterian church next Sunday.

Owing to temporary repairs having to be made Monday and Tuesday on the engine, electric light patrons may be half an hour late in receiving the current.

A union Sunday-school picnic is to be held in Benron's grove next week Thursday. A special car will be provided on the D. P. & N. to carry the picnicers to and fro.

The new school janitor, Frank Fry, Sr., has had a force of women at work this week cleaning the building preparatory to the beginning of school week after next.

Miss J. Dolly Beigen has resigned her position as teacher of the seventh grade of the Northville school and Miss Mattie Williams of Plymouth has been secured to fill the vacancy.

The Woman's Relief Corps at its meeting Wednesday evening voted to change its place of abode from the GAR hall to the Library building, and the meetings will be held at the latter place hereafter.

One of the sons of the late Willis Carpenter, who was drowned a few months ago at South Lyon and who was buried from the home of his brother, Fred Carpenter, of this place, has recently become violently insane and has been taken to the Pontiac asylum.

Mrs. Charles Garfield gave her daughter, Elizabeth, a large birthday party on August 11th. The many friends of the young lady pronounced it a merry affair. Ice cream and cake were liberally served, while the music and dancing made everyone rejoice.

The board of managers of the Library association will give a military pedro party in the library next week Friday evening to which everybody is invited, both ladies and gentlemen. The affair is for the benefit of the library and should be well patronized.

The new roof on the Masonic Temple is nearing completion, having been rebuilt on a plan that will do away with the bad leakage which had nearly ruined the handsome interior decorations and which was due to the former roof being constructed in such a way that the rain could not be properly drained off.

The Boston Globe recently gave an illustrated sketch of an out-door bed room which J. H. Herbenier, formerly of this place, has at his home in Providence, R. I., where he sleeps in all kinds of weather, in accordance with the fast increasing belief that fresh air, especially during sleep, is a preventive or cure for all human ills.

J. R. Nash writes to Northville friends from Los Angeles that he is happy and contented, reads the Record and is a much better health than when he left Northville. He sends pictures of some of the bass that are caught out there weighing anywhere from 175 to 200 pounds apiece, some of them six feet tall and over five feet around the waist. Mr. Nash has just passed his 70th birthday.

One of the most miraculous escapes that ever occurred here was that of five children, who were in a team-truck at Arthur Brooks' Tuesday when a colt which E. L. White was hitching to a cart at his barn ran away, apparently making a bee line for the group on the other side of the street. The animal, kicking and squealing as it ran, was almost upon the children in a moment, but some how they were all out of the team-truck when it dashed right through where they had been but an instant before. Little Hugh Dabbitt was not a foot from the horse and cart as they went by and Fernalyn Brooks' sleeve bore a mark from one of the colt's hoofs.

Rob. Terkes' "professional" ball team went up to Detroit Wednesday and mopped the earth with his brother George's aggregation by a score of 10 to 20. The Northville fellows were given a royal good time by the Detroiters. They were taken to Belle Isle in a steam launch and later banqueted at Wolfe's. As a partial description of the game the Detroit Tribune referring to Dr. Turner, says: "One of their number, with a front like a Tammany alderman's, couldn't see over it to the plate as he stood six inches back. He had his eye on the ball, though, and when he landed he stamped the outfielders. Then he tore around the bases like a runaway freight car, only to be run down between second and third. Gasping for breath he fell prone upon his back, forming an insurmountable obstruction on the base line." Turner made or forced to be made 7 or the 20 scores.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ford and baby visited the latter parents in Plymouth Sunday.

Miss Lizzie Wagenschultz and Mr. Brebnar of Mt. Clemens visited her sister, Mrs. James Ford this week.

Jay Wellfare and wife of near Walled Lake were severely bruised about the hands and arms by being thrown from their carriage in turning a sharp corner over in Bealtown last night. Drs. Burgess and Turner were called and later they were able to return home.

Baptist Church Notes.

[By a Member.]

The regular prayer service will be held Thursday evening at 7:30.

The ladies of the church will meet for a business meeting with Mrs. Welch at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Northrop, at 7 p. m. August 31.

The highest text Sunday, both morning and evening, will be occupied by Miss Irene Lewis. The subject for the evening will be "Superstitions of the Twentieth Century."

The Filigree Ball

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

first time he came to. Indeed, he had only time to speak his name before he fell dead. This name was what made this dispatch important to me. It was William Pfeiffer. For me there was but one William Pfeiffer in the Klondike—my husband—and he was dead! That was why you found me laughing. But not in mirth, I am not so bad as that. But because I could breathe again without feeling a "catch" about my throat. I did not know till then how nearly I had been stifled.

"The wreck of our marriage came. I was mad with gaiety and ecstacy with hope. Nothing had occurred to mar my prospects. But God had his eye upon me and in the midst of my happiness and the hum of our final preparations his bolt fell. It struck me while I was at the dressmaker's shop in Fourteenth street. I was leaning over a table, chattering like a magpie, over the way I wanted a gown trimmed, when my eye fell on a scrap of newspaper. In which something had come rolled to me; it was torn at the edge, but on the bit lying under my eyes I saw my husband's name, William Pfeiffer. The paper was a Denver one. There was but one William Pfeiffer in Denver—and he was my husband. And I read—feeling nothing. Then I read again, and the world, my world, went from under my feet, for the man who had fallen dead in the camp at Nome was Wallace, William's brother, and not William himself. William had been left behind on the road by his more energetic brother, who had pushed on for success through the worst storm and under the worst conditions possible even in that God-forsaken region. With the lost one in mind, the one word that Wallace uttered in sight of rescue was William. It was Wallace who had fallen dead, and while William might have perished also, and doubtless had, I had no certainty of it. And my wedding day was set for Thursday.

"Why didn't I tell Cora? Why didn't I tell you?—I wish held my tongue, besides, I had had time to think before I saw either of you, and to reason a bit and feel sure that if Wallace had been sent enough to fall dead on reaching the camp, William could never have survived on the open road; for Wallace was the stronger of the two and the most hardy every way. Free I certainly was. Some later paper would assure me of this. But for three nights I did not sleep.

"The caprice which had led me to choose the old Moore house as the married in led me to plan dressing there on my wedding morning. It was early when we started, Cora and I, for Waverley avenue, but not too early for the approaches to that dreadful house to be crowded with people, eager to see the darling bride. Why I should have shrunk so from that crowd I cannot say. I trembled at sight of their faces and at the sound of their voices, and if by chance a hand was thrust forward farther than the rest I cowered back instinctively and nearly screamed. Did I dread to recognize a too familiar face? The paper I had seen bore a date six months back. A man could arrive here from Alaska in that time. Or was my conscience aroused at last and clamoring to be heard when it was too late? On the corner of N street the carriage suddenly stopped. A man had crossed in front of it. I caught one glimpse of a lifetime were concentrated into one instant of agonizing fear. It was William Pfeiffer. I knew the look; I knew the gait. He was gone in a moment and the carriage rolled on. But I knew my doom as well that minute, as I did an hour later. My husband was alive and he was here.

"You were waiting at the curb when I arrived, and I remember how my heart stood still when you laid your hand on the carriage door and confronted me with that light on your face I had never seen disturbed since we first pledged ourselves to marry. In terror I seized the hand which seemed my one refuge in this hour of mortal trouble, and hastened into the house which for all its doleful history had never received within its doors a heart more burdened or rebellious. I pressed your hand with mine and smiled.—Oh, G. M. If you could have seen what lay beneath that smile! For with my entrance beneath those dark doors a heritage I remembered how I had been told by my father when I was a very little girl—I presume when he first felt a hand of death upon him—that it ever I was in mortal trouble—great trouble, he had said, where no deliverance seemed possible—I was to open a little golden ball, which he showed me, and take out what I should find inside and hold it close up before a picture which had hung from time immemorial in the southwest corner of this old house.

"He could not tell me what I should encounter there—this I remember his saying—but something that would assist me, something which had passed with good effect from father down to child for many generations. Only, if I would be blessed in my undertakings, I must not open the golden ball nor endeavor to find out its mystery, unless my trouble threatened death or some great disaster. Such a trouble had indeed come to me, and, startling coincidence, I was at this moment in the very house where this picture hung, and, more startling fact yet, the golden ball needed to interpret its meaning was round my neck, for with such jealous was this tacitly tricker always behind me. She must come upon it unexpectedly, just as I had you to do. Only thus can I reach either of you with any power. If I could but think of some excuse for sending her to the book where I propose to hide it! That would give her a chance of reading it before you do, and this would be best. She may know how to prepare or contrive for you—I hope so. Cora is a noble woman; but the secret which kept my thoughts in such a whirl has held us apart.

"You did what I asked. You found a place for Rudge's letter in the rooming corps. Surprised as you were at the interest I expressed in him, you honored my first request and said nothing. Would you have shown the same anxious eagerness if you had known why I whispered those few words to him from the carriage door, why I could neither rest nor sleep till he and the other boy were safely out of town? I must leave a line for you to show to people if they wonder why I killed myself so soon after my seemingly happy marriage. You will find it in the same book with this letter. Some one will tell you to look in the book—I cannot write any more.

"I cannot help writing. It is all that connects me now with life and with you. But I have nothing more to say except forgive—forgive—
"Do you think that God looks at his wretched ones differently from what men do? That he will have tenderness for one so sorry that he will even find place? Oh, my mother is there, my father! Oh, that makes it fearful to go to meet—but it was my father who led me into this—only he did not know—There! I will think only of God.

"Good-by—good-by—good"
That was all. It ended, as it began, without name and without date—the final heart throbs of a soul awakened to its own act when it was quite too late, a piteous memorial which daunted each one of us as we read it, and when finished drew us all together in the hall out of the sight and hearing of the two persons most intimately concerned in it.

Possibly because all had one thought—a thrilling one, which the major was the first to give utterance to:
"The man she killed was buried under the name of Wallace. How's that if he was her husband, William?"

An officer we had not before noted was standing near the front door. He came forward at this and placed a telegram in the superintendent's hand. It was from the same source as the one he had just received and appeared to settle this very question.

"I have just learned that the man married was not the one who kept store in Owsoso, but his brother William, who afterward died in Klondike. It is Wallace whose death you are investigating."

"What snarl is here?" asked the major.
"I think I understand," I ventured to say in my turn. "The husband was the one left at the door by the brother who staggered into camp for aid. He was a weak man, the weaker of the two, she said, and probably died, while Wallace, after seemingly collapsing, recovered. This last she did not know, having failed to read the whole of the newspaper slip which fell about it, and so when she saw some one with the Pfeiffer air and figure and was told later that Mr. Pfeiffer was waiting to see her she took it for granted that it was her husband, believing positively that Wallace was dead. The latter, moreover, may have clung to life, more like his brother in the time that had elapsed."

"A possible explanation which adds greatly to the tragic aspects of the situation. She was probably a widow when she touched the fatal spring. Who will tell the man inside there? It will be his crowning blow."

May 11, crouching in front of this house with his nose to the curbstone?"
"It is; I noted him particularly; he seemed to be watching the opposite house."
Instantly I turned upon Mr. Moore. "Is Rudge the dog to do that?" I asked, "if his master were not there? Tylice have I myself seen him in the selfsame place and with the selfsame air of expectant attention, and both times you had crossed to the house which you acknowledged he will approach no nearer than the curb on this side of the street."

"You have me," was the short reply with which Mr. Moore gave up the struggle. "Rudge, go back to your place. When you are wanted in the courtroom I will let you know."
The smile with which he said this was sarcastic enough, but it was sarcasm directed mainly against himself. We were not surprised when, after some sharp persuasion on the part of the major, he launched into the following recital of his secret relation to what he called the last tragedy ever likely to occur in the Moore family.

"I never thought it wrong to be curious about the old place; I never thought it wrong to be curious about its mysteries. I only considered it wrong, or at all events ill judged, to annoy Veronica in regard to them, or to trouble her in any way about the means by which I might effect an entrance into its walls. So I took the one that offered and said nothing.

"I have visited the old house many times during my sojourn in this little cottage. The last time was, as one of your number has so ably discovered, on the most memorable night in its history; the one in which Mrs. Jeffrey's remarkable death occurred there. The interest roused in me by the unexpected recurrence of the old fatality attending the library hearthstone reached its culmination when I perceived one night the glint of a candle burning in the southwest chamber. I did not know who was responsible for this light, but I strongly suspected it to be Mr. Jeffrey, for who else would dare to light a candle in this disused house without first seeing that all the shutters were fast?"

"I did not dislike Mr. Jeffrey or question his right to do this. Nevertheless I was very angry. Though allied to a Moore, he was not one himself, and the difference in our privileges affected me strongly; consequently I watched till he came out and upon positively re-gnizing his figure veiled in my wrath and jealous indignation to visit the old house myself on the following night and make one final attempt to learn the secret which would again make me feel myself the equal of this man, if not his superior."

"It was early when I went; indeed it was not quite dark, but knowing the gloom of those old halls and the almost impenetrable nature of the darkness which settles over the library the moment the twilight sets in, I put in my pocket two or three candles, the candles, sirs, about which you have made such a coil. My errand was twofold—I wanted first to see what Mr. Jeffrey had been up to the night before and next to spend an hour over a certain look of old memoirs which in recalling the past might explain the present. You remember a door leading into the library from the parlor room. It was by this door I entered, bringing with me from the kitchen the chair you afterward found there."

"I knew where the volume of memoirs I speak of was to be found; you do, too. I see for it was my hand which had placed it in its present concealment. Quite determined to reread such portions of it as I had long before marked as pertinent to the very attempt I had in mind, I brought in the candleburn from the parlor and drew out a table to hold it. But I waited a few moments before taking down the book itself. I wanted first to learn what Mr. Jeffrey had been doing upstairs the night before, so leaving the light burning in the parlor, I proceeded to the southwest chamber, holding an unlit candle in my hand, the light feebly diffused through the halls from some upper windows being sufficient for me to see my way. But in the chamber itself all was dark.

"The wind had not yet risen and the shutter which a half hour later moved so restlessly on its creaking hinges bugged the window so tightly that I imagined Mr. Jeffrey had fastened it the night before. Looking for some receptacle in which to set the candle I now lit, I failed to find anything but an empty tumbler, so I made use of that. Then I glanced about me, but seeing nothing worth my attention—Mrs. Jeffrey's wedding fixings did not interest me, and everything else about the room looking natural except the overturned chair, which struck me as immaterial—I hurried downstairs again, leaving the candle burning behind me in case I should wish to return aloft after I had refreshed my mind with what had been written about this old room."

"Not a sound disturbed the house as I seated myself to my reading in front of the library shelves. I was as much alone under that desolate roof as mortal could be with me, anywhere within reach of him. I enjoyed the solitude and was making a very pretty theory for myself on a scrap of paper I tore from another old book when a noise suddenly rose in front of which, slight as it was, was quite unmistakable to ears trained to listening. Some one was unlocking the front door.

"Naturally I thought it to be Mr. Jeffrey returning for a second visit to his wife's house, and knowing what I might expect to be surprised me on the premises. I restored the book hastily to its place and as hastily blew out the candle. Then, with every intention of flight, I backed toward the door by which I had entered. But some impulse stronger than that of escape made me stop just before I reached it. I could see nothing—the place was dark as Tophet—but I could listen. The person—Mr. Jeffrey or some other—was coming my way, and in perfect darkness, I could hear the faltering steps—the fingers dragging along the walls; then a rustle as of skirts, proving the intruder to be a woman—a fact which greatly surprised me—then a long, drawn sigh or gasp.

"This last determined me. The situation was too intense for me to leave without first learning who the woman was who in terror and shrinking dared to drag her half resisting feet through these empty halls and into a place cursed with such unwholesome memories. I did not think of Veronica. No one looks for a butterfly in the depths of a dungeon. But I did think of Miss Tuttle—that woman of resolute will. Without attempting to imagine the reason for her presence, I stood my ground, and darkened till the heavy mahogany door at the other end of the room began to swing in by jerks under the faint and tremulous push of a terrified hand. Then there came silence—a long silence—followed by a moan so agonized that I realized that whatever was the cause of this panting woman's presence here, it was due to no mere errand of curiosity. This whetted my purpose. Anything done in this house was in a way done to me, so I remained quiet and watched. But the sounds which now and then came from the remote corner upon which my attention was concentrated were very eloquent.

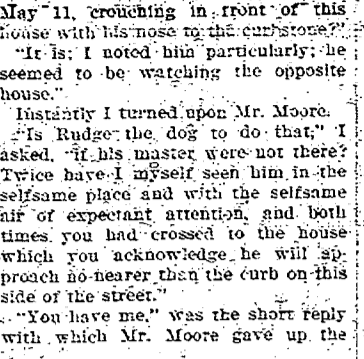

"I heard sighs and latter groans, with now and then a unwarmed prayer broken by a low wailing, in which I caught the name of Francis. And still, possibly on account of the interference of this name, I thought the woman near me to be Miss Tuttle, and even went so far as to imagine the cause of her suffering if not the nature of her position. Words succeeded cries and I caught phrases expressive of fear and some sort of agonized hesitation. Once these broken ejaculations were interrupted by a dull sound. Something had dropped to the bare floor. We shall never know what it was, but I have no doubt that it was the pistol and that the marks of dust to be found on the connecting ribbon were made by her own fingers in taking it again in her hand. (You will remember that these same fingers had but a few minutes previous groped their way along the walls.) For her voice soon took a different tone, and such unintelligible phrases as these could be heard issuing from her partly paralyzed lips:

"I must! I can never meet his eye again alive. He would despise me. Brave enough to be another's blood—courage—when—when—Oh, God, forgive me! Then another silence, during which I almost made up my mind to interfere, then a loud report and a flash so startling and unexpected that I recoiled, during which the room leaped into sudden view—she, too, Veronica, with her face drawn and set like a woman's—then darkness again and a heavy fall which shook the floor if not my hard old heart. The flash and that fall enlightened me. I had just witnessed the suicide of the last Moore saving myself a suicide for which I was totally unprepared and one which I do not yet understand.

"I did not go over to her. She was as dead when she fell as she ever would be. In the flash which lit everything I had seen where her pistol was pointed. Why disturb her, then? Nor did I return upstairs. I had small interest now in anything but my own escape from a situation more or less compromising. Do you blame me for this? I was her heir, and I was where I had no legal right to be. Do you think that I was called upon to publish my shame and tell how I lingered there while my own niece shot herself before my eyes? That shot made me a millionaire. This certainly was excitement enough for one day. Besides, I did not leave her there neglected. I notified you later after I had got my breath and had found some excitement."

"That wasn't enough? Ah, I see that you are all models of courage and magnanimity. You would have laid yourselves open to every reproach rather than let a little necessary perjury pass your lips. But I am no model. I am simply an old man who has been too hardy dealt with for seventy long years to possess every virtue. I made a mistake—I see it now—trusted a dog when I shouldn't—but if Rudge had not seen ghosts—well, what now?"

"We had, one and all, with an involuntary impulse turned our backs upon him."
"What are you doing?" he hotly demanded.
"Only what all Washington will do tomorrow and afterward the whole world," gravely returned the major. Then, as an ejaculation escaped the astonished millionaire, he impressively added: "A perjury which allows an innocent man and woman to remain un-

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the glands to secrete mucus instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

relieves all inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the stomach, protects the nerves, and cures bad breath, sour rising, a sense of fullness after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

The major denounces Uncle David

Get the suspicion of murder for five weeks is one which not only the law has a right to punish, but which all society will condemn. Henceforth you will find yourself under a ban, Mr. Moore." Time amply verified this prophecy. Mr. Moore's living in great style in the Moore house and drives horses which are conspicuous even in Washington, but no one accepts his invitations, and he is as much of a recluse in his present mansion as he ever was in the humble cottage in which his days of penury were spent.

My story ends here. The matter never came before the grand jury. Suicide had been proved, and there the affair rested.

THE END.

Dainty Cup and Saucer.

In the hands of an expert, cups of any description containing tea leaves or coffee grounds will serve for telling fortunes, but now there is a new teacup which makes seership possible for any one who desires to look into the future via the before-mentioned tea leaves or coffee grounds. The cup and saucer are daintily packed in a box. They are accompanied by a book explaining the mysteries. The saucer is worked with circles and the cup is divided by geometrical lines. These diverge from the center inside—that is to say the bottom—and are crossed by circles like a miniature globe. The stars and signs of the zodiac are in the spaces thus formed. On the bottom of the cup on the inside the sun is indicated, and should light on the bank of tea leaves in whatsoever square they may lie.

Limit of Wisdom.

Many a scientific man who knows enough to predict years in advance the exact hour and minutes of an eclipse isn't practical enough to hold his smoked glass with the smoked side away from him so that he won't smut his nose when he is studying the phenomenon.—Somerville Journal.

Why Dresses Fade.

Nearly all organic colors are bleached by the continued action of light and air. Light alone can cause changes, and favors the formation of small quantities of ozone and hydrogen peroxide, especially in the presence of water, which is always to be found in all ordinary materials.

Too Much Experience. "No, my boy," said the old gentleman, "I shall not make you my bookkeeper, although you are to have a place in my office. As a bookkeeper you are just a little too expert for me, for I learned what you can do with figures by studying the expense accounts you sent me while at college."

Water of the Mediterranean. Most of the Mediterranean is over a mile deep, but if its surface were lowered only eight hundred feet it would be separated from the Atlantic by the Strait of Gibraltar, and divided into two seas by a land connection between Sicily and the African coast of Tunis.

The Death Penalty. A "Scientific" magazine recently inquired of a certain match manufacturer, "How many of your boys have had the death penalty?" He was told that he had never had any. He was asked why he had never had any. He replied that he had never had any.

Caterpillar Stop Train. Caterpillars have become a plague in New York State. In some cases they have been known to eat away the rails of the tracks and cut across the rails, stopping the trains by the combined caterpillars.

HERE'S WHAT'S WANTED.

A CITIZEN OF NORTHVILLE SUPPLIES THE INFORMATION.

Over half the complaints of mankind originate with the kidneys.

A slight touch of backache at first. Twinges and shooting pains in the loins follow. They must be checked, they lead to graver complications. The sufferer seeks relief. Plasters are tried, and liniments for the back. So-called kidney cures which do not cure. The long-suffered-for result seems unobtainable.

If you suffer, do you want relief? Follow the plan adopted by this Northville citizen.

J. M. Amherst, living on Main street, says: "Mrs. Amherst and I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procuring them at Murock Bros', drug store, and the treatment proved very satisfactory. We both had a lame back of a rheumatic nature, and although we used several remedies, we derived more benefit from a box of Doan's Kidney Pills than any other medicine we ever tried. We do not hesitate to endorse so valuable a remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitutes.
