

J. W. McGraw has purchased 3,000 acres of timber land, mostly from the state, in the southeastern part of Okechoda county and will cut the timber, estimated at between 6,000,000 and 8,000,000 feet. The land was bought principally for a sheep ranch and as soon as the timber is removed Mr. McGraw will begin stocking.

A DESPAIRING WOMAN.

Weak, Nervous and Wretched From Wasting Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Henry A. Reamer, Main and Garst Sts., South Bend, Ind., says:

"When I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was so weak I could hardly drag myself across the room. I was wretched and nervous, and had backache, bearing-down pain, headache, dizziness, and weak eyes. Dropsy set in, and the chest choked, and I was in a state of despair. I had heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I bought a box. I took them, and they brought me relief. I shall never again feel as I did when I was first afflicted. I shall never again feel as I did when I was first afflicted. I shall never again feel as I did when I was first afflicted."

HORTICULTURE

Mushrooms in the Cellar.

The winter is a good time for the farmer with an experimental turn of mind to try growing some mushrooms. He doubtless has his furnace going and the temperature of his cellar will vary from 50 to 70 degrees. This temperature is well suited to the growing of mushrooms. Spawn will cost about 25c per pound, but a single pound will go a long way. The material used for foundation is horse manure. This should be thrown into a heap, first raking out the loose straw. Make a pile of this in the stable in some corner and tramp it firm. After ten days this mass will be found to be heating, when it should be forked over and again packed tight. In a few days this mass will again be heating, but need not be disturbed unless the heating reaches the point of "are-fang-ing."

At this time this can be put into boxes in the cellar, putting about 18 inches in each box. It should be watched for a few days, and if it is found that the temperature is dropping the spawn may be put into it. The spawn should be broken up into pieces perhaps an inch through and inserted for an inch or two under the surface. No water should be applied at this time, but the bed should be packed firmly. At the end of a week the bed may be opened a little to see if the spawn is spreading. This will be indicated by white threads running all through the mass. These threads are the body of the mushroom plant and each thread is known as a mycelium. Masses of these combine to form one plant, and when they have permeated the soil thoroughly, they draw nourishment from all parts to develop fruit. This fruit is pushed out towards the surface and is the part that we call the mushroom. It in turn produces seeds which are known as spores, and in the case of Agaricus campestris, which is the ordinary mushroom of commerce, these spores are pink in color, and for that reason people say "that these mushrooms have pink gills." The most delicious mushrooms are those that are gathered when they are in the button stage, which is the mushroom before the cap is expanded. This is not, however, the most economical time at which to gather the mushrooms. It is better to wait until they have attained the diameter of two or three inches, at which time the cap will be fully expanded and the stem well developed. The stem of this variety is more valuable than the stems of most varieties, and it is at most solid. Many varieties of mushrooms have hollow stems. The mushroom should be more widely cultivated for home use than it has been. To a certain extent it takes the place of meat, as in its habits it leans more towards the animal kingdom than the vegetable kingdom. Most vegetables draw off oxygen and take in carbon. The mushroom throws off carbon, as do the animals, and takes in oxygen. It is very rich in protein and in many localities of Europe takes the place of meat.

To Orchard a Hilltop.

A reader of the Farmers' Review asks if it will be safe for him to plant an orchard on a grassy hillside. It is difficult to give reliable advice on a question of this kind without being "on the ground," so much depends on location, condition of land, object in planting and; above all, the man behind the venture. If the land has been growing good grass for many years, the soil is pretty well filled with roots and it would be safe to plow all the ground as the sod and roots would prevent washing for a season or two. I would plow lengthwise of the hill, also plant trees and do all cultivation same way—never up and down. Ground should be kept loose and clean for at least four feet around the trees all season. I would plant some kind of hardy crop, as potatoes, beans, or even corn the first year, after which cow peas make an ideal orchard crop. They may be cut for hay, or, better yet, be left on the ground as a winter covering, to prevent erosion and provide an abundance of plant food for future use of trees.

In four or five years, the trees ought to begin to bear, and I would then sow grass again, which would be cut and piled under the trees or left unranked on the ground, to decay. With this treatment I believe a good orchard can be grown on hillside, and made to produce profitable crops without the use of fertilizers, for many years at least.

If for any reason the planter feels certain that the above treatment will not hold the soil, my plan would be to dig a place for each tree. Then spade up the ground for a few feet around them and mulch heavily with the cut grass as soon as possible in the season. While I am not an advocate of this method of growing trees in sod ground by mulching, I am convinced there are certain conditions under which it might succeed.—Jno A. Gage, Jefferson Co., Ill., in Farmers' Review.

REMINDED HER OF HENRY CLAY

Bibulous Husband Suggests an Idea to His Amiable Spouse.

When he got home in a night liner at 3 o'clock the other morning he found his wife propped up in bed reading a recent American historical novel. She was quite amiable.

"Oh, good morning," she said, sweetly. "Has the milkman come?"

"He staidied himself against the chiffonier and struck an attitude of extreme dignity."

"What, what you're readin', my dear?" he inquired of her.

"Oh, one of these historical novels," she replied. "It's time to get up, isn't it, so what's the use of your coming to bed?"

"I didn't know you were inshreshted in his'n', my dear," said he, with profound solemnity.

"No," said she. "Well, it is not to be expected that you could be really very familiar with my tastes. By the way, there is a story here of how the eminent Henry Clay happened to say he'd rather be right than president. Do you know I've been thinking over that remark in connection with you."

"Shash sho?" he inquired, wonderingly. "Shitak I'm anuzzer Clay, eh?"

"Well," she replied, soft and low, "I think you'd rather be drunk than president," and then the servant girl's alarm clock could have been heard ferociously ticking in the attic-room.

Bark Salad Palatable Food.

When Admiral Sligsbee's squadron was cruising in the Caribbean sea, in 1904 and the spring of 1905, the officers of his flagship, the Newark, found that bark salad was not only edible but was quite palatable. This remarkable food was made from the bark of a tropical tree, and much enjoyed by the natives along the coast. The rough or outer part is chopped off, and the inner portion chopped into fine slices and made into a salad dressed with oils, spices, &c.

DOCTOR CURED OF ECZEMA.

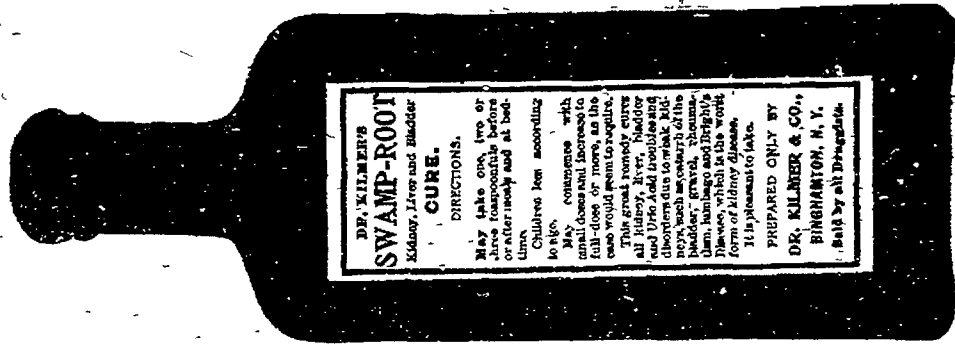

Maryland Physician Cures Himself—Dr. Fisher Says: "Cuticura Remedies Possess True Merit."

"My face was afflicted with eczema in the year 1887. I used the Cuticura Remedies and was entirely cured. I am a practicing physician, and very often prescribe Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Soap in cases of eczema, and they have cured where other remedies have failed. I am not in the habit of endorsing patent medicines, but when I find remedies possessing true merit, such as the Cuticura Remedies do, I am bound minded enough to proclaim their virtues to the world. I have been practicing medicine for sixteen years, and must say I find your Remedies a No. 1. You are at liberty to publish this letter. G. M. Fisher, M. D., Big Point Md. May 24, 1905."

Burglar Was Too Fat.

Guests in a well-known hotel in Paris heard pitiful cries for help coming from the cellar at 1 o'clock in the morning, and the waiters and maid rushed downstairs. The door was locked, but they unlocked it, and discovered a very fat burglar held fast in a ventilator through which he had tried to escape. The burglar and the fat knocked down before he could be extricated.

CERTIFICATE OF PURITY

This is to Certify that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is purely vegetable and does not contain any calomel, mercury, creosote, morphine, opium, strychnine, cocaine, nitrate potash (salt-petre), brofide potassium, narcotic alkaloid, whiskey, wine or any harmful or habit producing drugs. Swamp-Root was discovered through scientific research and study by Dr. Kilmer, who graduated with honors and is now actively engaged in the practice of his profession, which calling he has successfully followed many years.

Faith

You cannot be expected to have faith in Shiloh's Consumption Cure, the Lung Tonic, as a cure for Colds, Coughs and all diseases of the air passages, if you have not tried it. We have faith in it, and we guarantee it. If it doesn't cure you it costs you nothing. If it does it costs you 25c.

That's fair. Try it to-day.

Shiloh has cured many thousands of the most obstinate cases, and we do not hesitate to say that it will cure any Cold, Cough, Throat or Lung trouble. If we did not believe this we would not guarantee it. Shiloh has had an unbroken record of success for thirty years. It has stood every possible test without failure. Further is found in the many testimonials of those who have tried Shiloh and been cured. Mrs. Archie Taylor, Asaph, Pa., writes: "I bought a bottle of Shiloh's Consumption Cure and found it very beneficial. I have two children, and they had a terrible cough. I gave them everything I could think of, but they got no better. I then bought a bottle of Shiloh's Consumption Cure and gave it to the children when they went to bed, and they slept all night. It cured them completely. I shall always keep it in my house."

Proof
