A RIDE TO DEATH

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY TOOK PLACE HERE SATURDAY.

Detroit Man Instantly Killed in D. U. R. Accident.

Our usually peaceful village was startled and shocked into a babel of excitement about nine o'clock Saturday morning when death's exacting toll of human life touched victim here and Charles Gamble, member of the crew of the gravel train operating in the pits of the Detroit United Railway was hurled into eternity other lives immediately endangered, property damaged to a considerable amount and a happy home in Detroit desolated and broken up.

The gravel train consisting of the "boat" and six cars was coming from Detroit, and as was necessary, had turned around on the "Y" at Farmington Junction and was running backwards up to the pit near the P. M. Depot.

As the train came over the rise near C. C. Yerkes' residence the breaking of a coupling separated four of the cars from the rest. The motorman immediately began to try to overtake the runaway cars, whistling to attract the attention of Gamble, who was stationed ahead as a lookout, but his efforts were unavailing, and the unfortunate man seems to have failed to notice that anything was wrong until the cars shot past the switch leading to the gravel pit. He was then seen to spring up and attempt to put on the brake, apparently not realizing his terrible danger even then, although there was but a few feet between the cars and him at that time attained a terrible rate of speed—or else earth, and they stopped, mute, maimed witnesses of the awful force of gravitation uncontrolled. Whirling hands were instantly at work, but it was only a lifeless body that they took from the wreck, the victim's neck being broken. The poor fellow's body was not mangled as might naturally have been expected.

Coroner C. M. Joslin was summoned and after the proper steps had been taken, the corpse was removed to the Porter undertaking rooms and later was taken to the girl's home at 18 Lewis Ave., Detroit, where Mr. Gamble left a young wife and child. He was about 30 years of age, and is spoken of in the highest terms by those who knew him. He was a member of the Woodmen society and a 2nd degree police in that order.

Hundreds of people visited the scene of the wreck during the day Saturday. The company went to work as soon as possible to remove the wreckage and before night the broken cars had been taken away and all that was left to indicate the tragedy was the torn-up lawn and shattered cement walks and trees in front of the Hutton and Beebe homes.

An inquest was held Monday forenoon before Justice Joslin, and the jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the facts as above, with the opinion that the D. U. R. was guilty of negligence in not having the cars properly equipped with effective brakes. The men on the coroner's jury were B. G. Webster, M. S. Nicolson, James Callahan, J. A. Dehuar, C. A. Sessions, and H. O. Waid. Lawyers from Detroit were present at the inquest in behalf of the company and of Mrs. Gamble.

It is considered almost a miracle, and one to be thankful for, that no vehicles or pedestrians happened to be passing at the moment the train rushed down the grade to the end of its career of destruction, as nothing could have gotten out of the way. Such was the awful speed of the runaway cars.

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

"Chinatown Charlie" will be the offering at the Whitney next week, matinees daily except Wednesday.

This is one of the largest productions that will visit the Whitney this season, twelve different scenes being portrayed during the action of the play. The play is thrilling to the extreme, especially the opium den scenes and goes to make one of the most interesting stories of "Chinatown" of New York ever written.

All patrons are requested to have their Laundry work in not later than Wednesday evening for the next three weeks. During my absence on a vacation. FRANK M. COMBER.

THE MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

GREAT PROMISES FOR A BIG ONE THIS YEAR

President Postal and His Board Hustling.

The coming State Fair, which is to open on Thursday, August 20, promises to be one of the best Michigan has ever had. Last year's exhibition, rushed into shape and conducted under difficulties that nothing except the very highest executive ability and enterprise could have overcome, showed conclusively what might be expected with a year

The hustling president of the State Fair association and the jolly landlord of Detroit's most popular hotel, the Grosvenor House more of time for preparation and improvement.

The grounds, buildings and general facilities will be so greatly different in appearance and convenience at the coming show as to be scarcely recognizable as the same place, and the entries promise to be a surprise to even the most enthusiastic of the friends of a permanent home for the State Association's big annual event. President Postal is very evidently capable of running other large enterprises besides his popular big hotel and he is going to demonstrate the fact beyond future controversy with the State Fair of 1906.

In digging for a sewer in Holly last week a portion of an ancient "corduroy" road made of oak logs a foot through was discovered ten feet under ground, the wood being in a perfect state of preservation. The date of the road is beyond the memory of the "old-timers." It's safe to say that if that kind of "pavement" were in style at present automobiles wouldn't b—

Ortonville is a healthy place but people will frequently go there to die after this. W. Dye has bought an island in Orton Lake and although he is not a colored man or in the coloring business he will have a dye house. Several other people were dying to get the island and build cottages thereon, but before they knew it the dye was cast and the land was sold.

The N. V. and the Record are perfectly willing to take the Times' word for it without passing judgment from personal knowledge, so "let the music swell!"

That John Norris of Oxford, a war veteran of 22 years is still industriously plying his trade as a carpenter and joiner is asserted by the Orton Review's Oxford correspondent, who probably saw John saw. It is this a plane, unvarnished fact is auger-well for John's living to a good old age. He must have good timber in his frame and be well joined. He doesn't work for his board either.

Official Pontiac is making—or trying to make—the telephone companies—or their poles in the back yards instead of along the streets and public Pontiac commends the idea a most instances. Of course there is a lot of wire-pulling in connection, but the idea is a good one in the way of solving the municipal beauty problem and might be generally adopted with good results to the looks of towns that is if the back yards don't object.

One of the questions discussed at the Webster Farmers' Club this week was "Does it Pay to Pick Huckleberries?" We have not yet learned how the matter was decided but anyway the Northville market has not yet been affected. Huckleberry pie is a powerful opponent for the anti's—if there are any—to argue against and whoever attacks its fundamental possibilities is certainly an iconoclast and deserves the most crusty treatment.

THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

THE NOMINEES WERE NAMED BY A UNANIMOUS VOTE FOR EACH OF THEM, WITH APPLAUSE.

THE PLATFORM AND GENERAL FEATURES.

The Republican state convention was held in the Light Guard Armory, Detroit, on Tuesday to nominate state officers and transact the usual convention business. There was no inharmonious, no objections to any candidates, no scramble for place and all was done in harmony and unanimity. The preliminaries of the night before showed that there would be nothing to delay the proceedings and there was no delay.

The convention was called to order by Chairman Diekmann and prayer was offered by Rev. Mac H. Wallace. The delegates were welcomed by Mayor Codd. Representative Fordner, chairman, was chosen temporary chairman, and made a lengthy address. Committees were appointed and a recess taken till 1:30 p.m.

At the afternoon session speeches were made by Governor Warner, P. H. Kelley, candidate for lieutenant governor; Senator Burrows and others. The governor's address embraced these points:

As a summary of two years of close observation, he expressed the conviction that there never was a time when the people watched as carefully and interestedly the conduct of public affairs and when officials generally were more responsive to public sentiment.

In an inventory of the accomplishments of his administration, he frankly admitted that some of the 1,020 acts of the legislature to which he had given his assent had proven a disappointment. One of these was the law making changes of venue mandatory.

Another was the law limiting to dependent relatives the right of action against those responsible for death or injury caused by carelessness or neglect.

Another was the Galbraith law permuting manipulation under the guise of "equalizing values" in fixing the railroad rate of taxation. Its passage, however, had the advantage of resulting in a judicial determination of an important question.

Overly cautious for Republican optimism were outlined and satisfaction with the primary law and he expressed gratitude for the honor of being the first beneficiary under its operation.

Correction of defects in that law were recommended. General legislation for the more efficient regulation of corporations was also recommended.

The candidates for governor and lieutenant governor having been named in the time preliminary, the clerk was completed by the unanimous choice of the convention for all the other places and is here given:

The platform.

The committee on resolutions received this one from William Alden Smith.

Resolved, That this convention favors the nomination of candidates by direct vote of the people.

There was some discussion which ended by a compromise and the committee made this report which was unanimously adopted and so became the platform of the party.

We, the representative Republicans of Michigan, in convention assembled, unreservedly and cordially endorse the patriotic, courageous and aggressive administration of President Roosevelt.

We admire him as the embodiment of the high ideals of the Republican party, for his insistence upon adequate and efficient railroad legislation, and for his demands that the welfare and interests of the people shall be first considered, regardless of selfish promptings, and of the organized protests of greed and power.

Under his administration the enforcement of law has been prompt and impartial, recognizing neither position nor station in dealing with violators and in urging the requirements of justice.

We are glad to give voice to the high appreciation of the part of the Republicans of Michigan for the splendid work of the fifty-ninth congress, and to the Michigan members of that body for their legislation of the last session.

In our judgment the declarations of President Roosevelt that no congress in the last quarter of a century has accomplished so much good for the whole people of the United States, is a just tribute to the wisdom and patriotism of the Republican majority of that body.

The prosperity of our state at the present time and through recent years surpasses all former records made by our own or any other nation since civilization began. This prosperity has been and is being shared by the working men and the farmer, by the merchant and the manufacturer, and by all men and women who make up the great body of the American producers and consumers. These conditions illustrate again, as they have so happily in other periods of American history, the material value of Republican policy and Republican principles, as established in Republican laws and applied by Republican administrations.

We emphatically affirm our continued belief in the wisdom of the Republican protective tariff policy. Whatever changes in tariff schedules may be necessary should be so made as to preserve the Republican principle of protection and to add the further benefit of American industry and employment.

As Michigan Republicans, as well as in our own capacity as delegates representing the working forces of our party in a section of the state, we are most glad to give cordial endorsement to the re-nomination of Gov. Fred M. Warner as the Republican candidate for governor, already made by 75,000 Republican votes. In every feature of his official course as governor of Michigan, Gov. Fred M. Warner fulfilled the promises made by himself to the people of this state and made in his behalf by those who knew him.

To be courteous, honest and true he has assisted in the enactment of laws which he believed were desired by a majority of the people and has vigorously opposed other enactments, the purposes of which he deemed undesirable. He has familiarized himself with the status and needs of our state institutions, and with sincere regard for their growth and advancement, has successfully urged the greatest possible economy and care. The people of Michigan know Gov. Warner, and their knowledge of his qualities as a man will lead them to elect him as his successor in November by an overwhelming majority. We also heartily and approve the nomination of the Hon. Patrick H. Kelley as the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor. We endorse the administration of state affairs by all of the state officers and believe their records will result in their election by overwhelming majorities.

We commend the last legislature for its efficiency and success in the disposition of matters of state import importance, for its practical economy in providing for state expenditures and for its fulfillment of its promises made to the people of the state by our party.

We believe that the action of that body in the enactment of a primary election law, which is giving the people of this state an opportunity to enter upon the practical test of the direct nomination system, is a general fulfillment of our party's promises, and is an assurance that in such details as may be found necessary that law will be so perfected as to as fully as possible meet the best purposes it seeks to attain.

We heartily approve the action taken by Gov. Warner in appointing a delegation of distinguished citizens to represent the state at the Iowa convention to be held in September next. We earnestly recommend to those delegates that they direct their efforts to the end that the people of the United States so amend the constitution of the United States as to permit the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

Yale taxpayers have voted to bond for $14,000 to build cement sidewalk throughout the city.

James Lewis, aged 20, employed in a Flint factory, has been arrested, and the police say he has confessed to stealing two horses from Thomas Doyle and Robert Daly. The horses have been recovered.

Grant E. Garble, of Allegan, came to the Kalamazoo asylum, and saying that he was insane, asked for treatment. He was turned over to the police and was sent back to Allegan. It was learned that he was really sane and he was again sent back to the asylum.

THE FIGHT AGAINST PRISON CONTRACT LABOR WILL CONTINUE.

CONTRACTS STILL HOLD.

No More Convicts Will Be Added to Working Force on Them. There Are Other Things to Do.

Opinions on the Ruling.

"This decision against the broom contract at Jackson is," says H. H. Smith, speaking as attorney for the Michigan Manufacturers' association, "the first step in the fight that will be made by the manufacturers of the state to drive out contract prison labor from Michigan prisons. It does not mean," said Mr. Smith, "that Michigan convicts will have to remain idle. There are plenty of trades for manufacture which do not come within the prohibition of the constitution. It only prohibits, as it is constituted by this case, the manufacture of articles, the majority of which for Michigan consumption are made in Michigan. We do not understand that this will prohibit, for instance, the manufacture of binding twine, as suggested by Warren Armstrong. The Manufacturers' association is already making an extensive investigation of the methods adopted by other states in handling this question."

"Two plans have received considerable favor, first, the manufacture for state use as now in practice in New York, and second, the use of convicts on the roads as is done in some of the southern states. Recent investigation of the New York plan seem to show that it is successful."

"Existing prison contracts will be carried out and men who are now working on such contracts in the prisons of the state will continue their work as long as they may remain in prison, or as long as the prison board desire to employ them. This is the plain inference from the interpretation put upon the recent supreme court decision by a state official of high standing. He points out that the decision declares it to be in contravention of the constitution to have a convict at a trade. There will be no more new men put on contract work and no convicts 'bought a trade' but those that are now working will continue their work."

"As I understand the situation," said Warren James Russell of Marquette, "the decision cannot have the immediate effect of putting an end to broom making at Jackson or the continuance of mechanical trades at that or other penal institutions. It is the constitution that the supreme court has been called to uphold, and a significant feature of the situation is the fact that there is no statutory law in force designed to make effective that portion of the constitution under which the complaints are moved against the penitentiary officials in brief while the court is made it plain that the manufacture of brooms at Jackson is contrary to the fundamental law, the government of the state must see to it that the continuance of the broom making in violation of the contract with the Broom-Broom Company."

In Marquette prison the convict population is at present engaged in the manufacture of cigars and over all it is the opinion that when the ruling of the supreme court on the permanency of the cigar contract, at least, is threatened."

Save the Potatoes.

I. R. Taft, horticulturist at the Michigan experiment station, Agricultural college, has issued an interesting bulletin on potato blight as follows: "Hundreds of dollars are lost each year in Michigan by the blighting and rotting of potatoes. Although its destructiveness is increased by wet, muggy weather, the disease is really caused by a fungus, the growth of which, if not entirely prevented by thoroughly spraying the vines with blue vitriol and lime, commonly called Bordeaux mixture."

It seldom attacks early varieties that ripen before August 1, but if they are injured by beetles it will often pay to spray them with Bordeaux mixture and paris green, which will also control another fungus known as 'early blight'."

Hung Himself.

Michael F. Messenger, a well known resident of Saginaw, and for nine years superintendent of the county poor farm, committed suicide Sunday by hanging himself with a towel in the bathroom of his home. His body was found several hours later. His suicide is believed to be due to grief over the death of his only son. Messenger came to Saginaw 30 years ago and was a member of many secret orders, including the Masons, and was also a veteran of the civil war.

William Sewell, a negro, paroled after being sentenced to state prison from Mason has failed to report to the prison officials as he should have done.

Mrs. L. Wilcox and Mrs. Ellen Wallace were thrown from a carriage in Lansingburg and Mrs. Wilcox sustained several broken ribs and is likely to die.

Yale taxpayers have voted to bond for $14,000 to build cement sidewalk throughout the city.

James Lewis, aged 20, employed in a Flint factory, has been arrested, and the police say he has confessed to stealing two horses from Thomas Doyle and Robert Daly. The horses have been recovered.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., AUG. 3, 1906.

The Inconsistency of It

The inconsistency of it is conspicuously absent from the attitude of a good many Detroit people in regard to the much discussed question of opening the state fair grounds to the public on Sunday. While the Record believes that both the opponents and the supporters of the decision to have the state Association's big show accessible to the people on the one Sunday when it can be so may be able to show good cause for their opinions pro and con, it naturally occurs to any thinking person that some of the energy expended in the effort to keep the fair gates shut one Sunday in a year and liquor selling kept outside of them, might be profitably applied to seeing that the laws are enforced against the booze business in Detroit some of the rest of the time at least. The gates of Electric Park, an accused prototype of the "Midway" are wide open every Sunday during the "season", the bars of nearly all the hotels in the city doing business, the said, 52 Sundays in the year and theatres making a specialty of Sunday performance, while it is an open secret that the majority of the saloons are accessible at nearly all the twenty-four hours of all the 365 days. A single Sunday at the fair with no chance to buy anything more delightful than pink lemonade or new born baby "clothes" to a man up a tree. It seems especially providential opportunity to be real good on the sabbath day for once, while engaged in the exhilarating but unobscuring pastime of looking at the cows and pigs and chickens, uttering wondering comments on the big pumpkins and squashes, or recklessly squandering their substance in one of the numerous of the popular entertainments of the chewing-gum merchants. Consequently, they are indeed a most interesting and profitable possession, an extremely hard to get and exceedingly difficult to handle on.

Increasing State Income.

The increase in Michigan's annual primary school fund distribution, from hardly one dollar a few years ago to over eleven dollars for the present year, with an assured payment hereafter to each school child of from four to six dollars per year, is an incident in Michigan affairs in the highest degree creditable to the management of state matters during recent years. The income through which this primary school increase is provided comes from the much larger receipts to the state from several sources, the railroad tax payments being of course the principal item. But the state's income has increased and is increasing from every source from which earnings have ever been received, while state expenditures in most directions have not increased. That is a condition which should be quite satisfactory to the people of Michigan.

The Governor's Convention Speech.

Governor Warner's friends are exceedingly proud of his admirable speech at the state convention. It was certainly an able, comprehensive, truthful statement of facts and a convincing refutation of many accusations and prophecies made by Mr. Warner's former would-be detractors. Besides this, it was eminently characteristic of the personality of the governor in its courteousness and entire freedom from anything approaching recrimination or partisan enmity towards his fellow citizens who do not agree with his political creed.

STOCK-LOADING CHUTE.

Can Be Permanently Located Near the Scale House Where Animals Are Weighed.

In addition to having a set of wagon scales snugly housed, every farm ought to have a loading chute, so that when live stock is ready for market and has been weighed, the animals, especially hogs and sheep, can readily be driven into the wagon and drawn to market.

In the accompanying illustration is shown a plan that has been adopted with considerable success by a reader.

A HANDY STATIONARY LOADING CHUTE.

of The Prairie Farmer in Livingston county, Michigan. His loading chute is built at the side of the scale house, so that when the hogs or sheep have been weighed the door can be readily opened and the animals urged out into the chute and then driven into the wagon.

In building a chute in this way the matter of measurements must be governed largely by condition. The height must be according to the wagon. It will be well to have considerable length, so that the animal will not be too great.

Strong posts must be set in the ground so as to support the frame. The bottom should be of plank with cleats across so as to provide footing. The sides may be made of inch lumber, but should be high enough so that whatever is being loaded cannot jump out.

WATER IN THE PASTURAGE.

Vital Importance of Having Fresh Water and Plenty of It for the Stock.

Few farms are provided with an abundance of good, fresh water in the pasture fields. Water may be obtained in most farms without going into very heavy expense. Cows to quire a great deal of water and they should have it as fresh and pure as possible. Where water may be obtained at a reasonable depth it is economy to sink a well as near as possible to the corners of four fields. A zigzag fence and a long trough may be reached from each pasture or a short pipe underground may be used. Wind mills are cheaper for pumping than any other power. A small mill will keep the trough full most of the time. The few days when it is necessary to pump by hand are just about sufficient to give a man a correct idea of the value of the mill, and he also can get a good deal better idea of the amount of water the cows will drink. Cows having water constantly before them will drink a great deal more than they will if obliged to travel some distance to get it, and they will give more milk in proportion, says the Standard Guide. A few pounds of milk additional each day will easily pay the interest on the cost of the outfit.

HOG HELPS.

Do not keep the hogs in one lot till it gets dusty.

A good sow in perfect health always loses flesh while suckling a litter of pigs and needs to be well fed.

Usually the hogs with coarse, straight hair will not fatten near so rapidly as the one with the soft, fine hair.

As a rule aged brood sows are the most prolific, the best mothers and produce the most vigorous offspring.

The thumps in pigs is often caused by an excess of fat about the internal organs and especially around the heart.

Every farrowing sow should have a shelter to herself and be put in it in time to get acquainted with her surroundings.

To make hogs most profitable a steady daily gain must be secured from the time the pig is farrowed until it is marketed.

Pigs often lack vigor because the brood sows are kept too fat. A good thrifty condition is much better for the pigs than too much fat.

Give the pigs a fair start in life by feeding the sow upon milk producing rations. There is nothing much better than skim milk mixed with shorts. All waste from the kitchen are wholesome and suitable as food for pigs, but a swill barrel that is never empty and never clean impairs the system of a hog and his owner's profits.

Feeding Milk.

Milk as a food for pigs has a feeding value far beyond its actual food elements if given in the proper combination with other rations, but it is a great waste to raise pigs exclusively upon it, no matter how plentiful it may be. Middlings and grass should be fed with it, and so double the number of pigs kept with the same amount of milk.

FEEDING TANKAGE TO HOGS.

What the Experiments at the Michigan Experiment Station Demonstrated.

Often a farmer feels the need of something that will take the place of or else help out the skim milk portion of the ration for pigs. Up in Michigan creameries and cheese factories have been making serious inroads into the supply of skim milk on the farm. The farmers have seen fit to sell this product, and at the same time desire to raise pigs. How to sell their milk and yet at the same time raise their pigs successfully has been a problem with many of them.

The state experiment station has come to their assistance in an effort to provide a link for the gap. In Bulletin 237, just issued, Shaw shows what he has been able to do with digester tankage, which is a packing house product. After a number of experiments Shaw has reached conclusions which are substantially as follows:

1. The gains were greater in every case where tankage was used in the ration fed to the pigs.

2. The gains of the pigs were more marked as the feeding period was prolonged, showing that the digester taken not only made good gains, but agreed well with the pigs.

3. In every test made the pigs which had the tankage made the cheapest gains, though in one or two cases better gains were made with the milk.

The tankage used in this experiment as sold by a leading packer at the Union stockyards, Chicago. It was guaranteed to contain 60 per cent. protein, 10 per cent. fat and 6 per cent. phosphorus. The cost to the station was $22.50 a ton. The corn meals used was valued at $20 per ton, middlings $20 per ton, and skim milk 20 cents per hundredweight.

VALUE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS.

Figures Which Mount Into the Billions Show Importance of Industry.

There were 12,147,344,550 pounds of milk and 588,186,171 pounds of cream used in 1904 in the manufacture of 557,278,111 pounds of butter, 312,687,299 pounds of cheese, and 305,135,182 pounds of condensed milk.

These figures are part of the census of manufactures for 1905. The total cost of the material used in the industry was $112,929,277, while the value of the products was $163,132,789, an increase of the former of 41.3 per cent. and of the latter of 28.6 per cent.

The number of establishments dropped from 9,212 to 8,926, while the capital increased 30 per cent. to $17,255,656. There were 7,507 salaried officials and clerks and 15,757 engaged in the manufacture of these articles. These figures show that the industry is growing and that the value of the products is increasing.

RINGING HOGS UNAIDED.

Easily Done with Slip Noose When Work Is Done Near a Fence.

I have rung some very large hogs with no assistance whatever. Procure a rope five or six feet long and tie at one end, as a running loop shows. At the other end tie an old stirrup for a foot rest. Lay the noose on the ground close to the fence. Scatter corn around the loop, and let the hog get interested in his eating before you try catching him.

A little maneuvering is often required before you can get the rope in his mouth, but when once in there is no get away, says Farm and Home. Be quick about tightening the noose. Now draw his head up until his front feet are off the ground, place your foot in the stirrup, and you are ready to insert the rings. Have the rings and rings in your pocket. A half-inch rope, if new, is large enough. With the proper kind of noose, simply pull the end of rope to loose it.

Blue Grass His Only Pasture.

The pasture that suits the best for the grazing of cattle is the blue grass pasture, writes an Ogle county correspondent of the Farmers' Review. I cannot compare this with other grass in wild pasture, as I have never had any experience with pastures other than the blue grass pastures. My method is to buy my feeders in the fall, keep them on full feed in the winter and in the spring turn them on the pastures with a full feed of corn. Of course our pastures can be improved because there is room for improvement in everything.

The World's Goat Population.

The use of goat flesh throughout the world assumes very large dimensions. We know something of the numbers killed in cultivated countries, but we know nothing of the millions slaughtered for food in the interior of China and Central Africa. One writer declares that if we could take account of the goats used in these populous countries the figures of the annual consumption of goats would have to be increased by at least 70,000,000 head.

The Young Pig.

The pig that is not vigorous cannot grow. Good health must be insured. Good pasture and plenty of it will make the pig healthy unless it is diseased to start with.

AN INSPIRED MOMENT.

By MAUCHLINE MUIR.

She looked away across the water at Mount Rainier's sun-painted slope, a puzzled frown of self-contempt on her forehead.

Hendricks, waiting for his answer, rested on his oars and looked at her. "I'm ashamed of myself, Tom," she said at last. "I have always flattered myself that I knew what I wanted, but now I don't seem to know my own mind."

His steady blue eyes met hers fairly. "Does that mean there is a chance for me, Edie?"

"I don't know. Of course I like you immensely. There isn't any need to tell you that."

Hendricks was the type of man that breeds faith in human nature. Edith Vance could not conceive of his telling a lie any more than she could think of him as disloyal to a friend. It was not in him to be anything but steadfast. She wished at times that he would lose control of himself, capture her imagination and take her heart by storm.

As fingers along the strings of a harp, a sudden summer shower swept across the lake. Big drops began to fall out of the darkening sky. After them came a slight rain in a rising wind.

"Fraid we're in for it, Edie. Wrap my coat around you," said the young man, and he put his great flat back into rhythmic strokes.

The white spray went spurting from the boat's bow as it leaped forward.

"For where are you making?" she asked presently.

"There's a deserted loggers' hut below Moorland where we used to camp when we went fishing. I don't think I'd better try for Seattle just now," he answered.

The rain was falling steadily by the time they reached the shore. The girl was flushed and radiant with the excitement of their battle with the rising waves.

The uphill climb against the wind had beaten the blood into her face and left it rich with color when she pushed open the door of the shack. The gloom within the hut was at first

BOAT HIS HANDS AND LEGS SE.

Impenetrable to her eyes, fresh from the light, so that she stood for a moment uncertain in the doorway.

To the disheveled young savage who scrambled to his feet, rifle in hand, from the bed of ferns, she seemed a very goddess of the forest storm. In his alert attitude was an ominous stealth that sent a deadly paralysis of fear over the girl. She wanted to cry out, but something clutched at her throat and stifled the scream.

"Come in, miss, and shut the door!" The voice was low and gentle, but not the less it compelled her to a fearful obedience. His glancing eyes had for her the rattlesnake's baleful fascination.

"Are you alone?" "No—a friend—the storm caught us—he stopped to tie the boat," she faltered.

His eyes narrowed. Frowning, he considered for a moment, then ordered the girl to a wooden stool by the fireplace. The man leaned against the table, facing the door watchfully, with his rifle held easily in both hands.

Her pounding heart stood still as the door opened. Hendricks, burdened with an armful of wood, hesitated in the dim light as she had done.

"Where away, Edie?" he called, cheerfully.

"If you drop that wood or move a hand, you're a dead man," came crisply from the outlaw.

The eyes of the two men met and fastened like the grip of steel. Recognition leaped to both their minds.

"Are you here, Edie?" he asked, evenly.

"Yes, Tom."

"Good. Don't be afraid."

Nor was she any longer. Somehow a weight had lifted from her breast.

The half-breed took the trouble to make sure Hendricks had no weapon before he let him unbuckle himself.

"You may sit down," he commanded, and Edith observed a curious note of triumphant hostility in his voice.

"Thank you," answered the young lawyer, smiling whimsically, and he moved over to a seat beside the girl.

Something in the ease with which Hendricks had accepted the situation, perhaps his lazy indifference of manner, stirred the outlaw's vanity and resentment.

"Do you know who I am?" he demanded, sullenly.

Hendricks looked quietly at him. "Oh, yes, I know you. You are Spence Sharkey."

The desperado swore a vile oath.

"You'll know me better before long. I haven't forgotten you either, Mr. Prosecuting Attorney Hendricks. I swore I'd remember you, and I have. I'm in great luck to get a chance to get even so soon."

"Well, you had better make the most of it. I rather think they'll hang you when they take you."

The half-breed moistened his dry lips. The eyes in his furtive face narrowed to thin slits where vanity and cowardice struggled together.

"They won't take me," he boasted, though a shivering white ran through his braggadocio. "I'll get away to the head of the lake in your boat. Three posses have been after me a week and they haven't caught me. I seen a chance, and doubled on them twice right after I broke prison."

"I read the account of your escape," said Hendricks.

He did not go into particulars. He had no desire that the girl beside him should know that this man had treacherously killed a guard and a fellow convict in his break for liberty, and he was content that she should remain in ignorance of the fact that through his efforts Sharkey had been sent up as a "differ" three years before.

For Hendricks was afraid to the marrow of his bones. The murderer's evil record rose to his mind, and worse than his criminal career was that racial mixture of bad white with mongrel negro and cruel Indian blood.

The young lawyer read purposed murder and worse in his face. Fear alone had hitherto held him from his intent.

The leaden hours dragged down the deeper dusk, and at length Sharkey made his move. He forced them to lead the way to the boat while he followed through the dripping ferns in his imagination Tom Hendricks felt, every step of the way to the shore, a leaden bullet plinking into his spine, but not once did he turn his head. It was his cue to appear confident, for he knew that under the edge of Mercer Island the outlaw expected to murder him, if he could restrain himself till they reached that point.

Under the persuasion of Sharkey's rifle the Seattle lawyer shoved off the boat and pulled to the end of the wharf. Here the convict stepped cautiously down, and at the same moment Hendricks pushed the boat from the landing with an oar and rose to his feet. The girl on the wharf gave a cry, for Tom was swaying violently from side to side.

"Sit down or I'll shoot!" screamed the half-breed, trying to balance in the rocking boat.

"Shoot and be damned!" cried Hendricks, a fierce light shining in his eyes.

He leaped across the seat toward his enemy, a wild shout rang out skyward, and the next moment the impact of his charge had flung both men from the overturning boat into the water.

The lawyer came to the surface first. The boat was drifting far out into the lake, bottom up, electric beyond the reach of immediate rescue. He swam a few strokes toward the shore then turned, "Waiting for the convict was in difficulties. Apparently he could not swim. Tom reached him as he came up the second time, but as the man flung out his arms wildly for his neck, he caught him by the hair and soured him down once and again. He had the convict unconscious before they reached the shore, and when the fellow came to himself he found his hands and legs bound securely with a bit of rope Edith had found on the wharf.

Hendricks ran up the fisherman's flag to attract the Bellevue boat and 20 minutes later he had the pleasure of handing over his captive to the sheriff of King county, who was on it, returning to Seattle after an unsuccessful hunt for Sharkey.

Tom called on Edith Vance next evening to inquire whether she had suffered any ill effects from their adventure. He would probably have called anyway, he explained, but it served as a very reasonable excuse.

"Do you need 'excuses'?" Edith asked.

"Well, no, I don't. But I thought perhaps you might think I did. This happens to be the third time I have been here this week, you know."

"It is very generous of you to come so often—you who are the hero of the hour. Are all heroes that way?"

"Can't say, never met one."

Under her dark lashes she looked at her clean-limbed lover so long that he was fain at length to break the silence fatuously.

"I have been a concited little prig. You see, Tom, I had never seen you in an inspired moment, and I supposed you didn't have them."

"You guessed right. I don't have them," he told her promptly.

"Oh, yes, you do. I have seen them."

"Was that when I played see-saw with the boat?"

"It was when you saved both our lives through a long afternoon of strain. If you had shown the least fear—"

Hendricks flushed. "Oh, you are exaggerating. It was you that kept your head, Edie. I never saw finer nerve. You were splendid, dear."

"Mr. Hendricks!"

His flush deepened. "Oh, well. It slipped out, Edie."

"You must not let such things slip out," she told him, severely.

"A fellow can't help it sometimes."

"A fellow will have to help it, unless—"

"very softly and demurely—"

a fellow justifies himself by explaining whether he really means it."

"Edie!"

Hendricks stood amazed for just one second, then he strode across the room to her.

FOUR YEARS OF AGONY.

Whole Foot Nothing But Proud Flesh—Had to Use Crutches—Cuticura Remedies the Best on Earth.

"In the year 1899 the side of my right foot was cut off from the little toe down to the heel, and the physician who had charge of me was trying to sew up the side of my foot, but with no success. At last my whole foot and way up above my calf was nothing but proud flesh. I suffered untold agonies for four years, and tried different physicians and all kinds of ointments. I could walk only with crutches. In two weeks afterwards I saw a change in my limb. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment often during the day, and kept it up for seven months, when my limb was healed up just the same as if I never had trouble. It is eight months now since I stopped using Cuticura Remedies, the best on God's earth. I am working at the present day after five years of suffering. The cost of Cuticura Ointment and Soap was only $6, but the doctors' bills were more like $600. John M. Lloyd, 718 S. Arch Ave., Alliance, Ohio, June 27, 1905."

Iodine a Cure for Snake Bite.

For a sure cure for snake bite, take about seven drops of iodine, scarify and bathe the wound also with iodine. This remedy was first used by a medical officer in British service in India. It has cured both man and a number of animals; it never fails; it is really wonderful in its effects.

One instance I will relate. A young man, working for me in the harvest field was bitten by a very large rattlesnake on one of his large toes. I gave him about seven drops of tincture of iodine on a little sugar, and to make doubly sure repeated the dose an hour later. His foot swelled, but next morning he was all right. I have had animals whose bodies have swelled considerably, but all have recovered from the bite.—Topeka Capital.

Merit is the best advertisement in the world. People speak well of things they know are good. They pass the good word along.

The best breakfast food is EGG O SEE, for it contains all the life-giving properties of nature's best food, which is wheat.

EGG O SEE is deeply in debt to the thousands of wives and mothers who use it in their homes, for these good women tell their neighbors about this great food.

Children and aged persons alike are friends of EGG O SEE.

Meat and common sense are the things that advertise EGG O SEE. Most EGG O SEE is cheap. A 10 cent package contains ten liberal breakfasts. EGG O SEE is sold everywhere. Grocers must keep it if they want to keep their good customers, for good customers insist on buying EGG O SEE.

The fact that no preparation, no cooking is required, makes EGG O SEE very popular. Open the package, put as much as you like in a dish, pour on milk or cream and eat. It is delicious. It is wholesome. It makes you strong.

Throws Rays Half a Mile.

Light rays half a mile long and 24 times as powerful as the sort commonly in use are the new oxy-petrol flame lights that have been invented for the motorists. The lamp consists of an oxy-petrol blowpipe flame playing on a piece of specially refractory material. A reservoir of material is to be carried on the car and also a cylinder of compressed oxygen. Presumably a stream of oxygen under pressure is saturated with petrol vapor and burnt in the blowpipe and a small, extremely hot flame is produced this being caused to impinge on something more refractory than lime.

Harriman Lines to Become Floral Routes.

Executive officers of the Union Pacific read in Chicago are planning to build several large greenhouses along the main lines of this company in Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah and other districts, with the object of having at every table in every dining car over the entire system a bouquet of freshly cut flowers at every meal. In addition to table and other decorations it is planned to grow flowers on a scale sufficiently large to allow a free distribution of roses to women and carnations, or other seasonal flower, not only in dining cars but to passengers in every car of every train, and in winter as well as in summer, the idea being to make patrons feel that the flowers are a part of the trip over this road and not precious little souvenirs. The greenhouses will probably be located at Grand Island, Neb., Cheyenne, Wyo., Denver, Col. and Ogden, Utah. In California and in the territory of the Sunset route in the south the company has no trouble in getting outdoor flowers all year. But even in these districts the scheme of flowers for passengers and car decorations is to be enlarged upon. Dining rooms along all lines are to be supplied freely with plants and blooms. The California and southern resources with the greenhouses to be built along the central route will put the Union, Southern Pacific and Oregon Short Line in a position where they may become known as the floral lines, an appellation officers of the Harriman lines hope to merit.
