LIGHT VOTE POLLED

GAVE BIG REPUBLICAN MAJORITIES HOWEVER.

Burke, Dever and Gully Were Considerably Cut.

A comparative light vote was polled here Tuesday only 422 of the 700 odd votes were polled.

The republican majorities however were larger than two years ago.

Cass Denton for Representative and Charlie Townsend for Congress-man led the ticket, with no opposition. Denton had 351 votes and Townsend 345.

Fred Warner received 208 majority as against 135 two years ago.

On the county ticket the cutting was done by the republicans on Dever, Gully and Burke. Dever ran 29 behind, Gully 28 and Burke 6%. Those three were the victims of the cutting machines all over the county.

MRS. BLAIR DIED SUNDAY.

Wife of Wm. Blair Who Is in Feeble Health.

Mrs. William Blair died at her home here Sunday night after a long illness. She was 67 years of age last March and has been married over forty-seven years, much of that time being a resident of Northville. She was born in Macomb County, Mar. 5, 1839.

Mrs. Blair was a most excellent woman and had hosts of friends in this place who deeply sympathize with the family in their loss.

The funeral occurred from the home Tuesday afternoon Rev. W. G. Stephens officiating. The interment was in Rural Hill cemetery.

Deceased leaves a husband in poor health, one son Charles A. of Detroit, one daughter, Mrs. Fred Fry of this place, four sisters, Mrs. C. A. Hutton, Mrs. W. Halley of Flint, Mrs. Chas. Wilson of Detroit, Mrs. Norton Joy of Pennsylvania and one brother, Dr. Gillet of Wixom.

Cranston—Metts.

Mr. Clifford Cranston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jewett Cranston of this place, was married to Miss Cora Metts of Detroit on Monday of this week by Rev. George Elliott of the Grand River Avenue Methodist church. They arrived home here Monday night and will make this their future residence.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank all those who so kindly assisted us during our late bereavement and assure them of our appreciation.

WM. BLAIR.
MR. AND MRS. C. A. BLAIR.
MR. AND MRS. F. A. FRY.

MADE GREAT RUN.

Cong. Townsend Did It in Wayne County.

The Townsend sentiment in Wayne county is emphasized by the fact that Charlie Townsend received 3000 majority in Wayne county at Tuesday's election running about 500 ahead of the ticket.

GREAT VICTORY FOR WARNER.

He Will Get Upwards of 100,000 Majority.

Governor Warner is re-elected by a majority of nearly 100,000 and probably leads the state ticket. This is a magnificent endorsement of his grand service to the state as its chief executive.

Allen—Murdock

Mr. Fred Allen, son of Landlord Allen of the Owen house, Farmington, was married on Thursday of last week to Miss Ione Murdock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Murdock of this place. They will reside in Farmington.

The bride has many friends, both here and Farmington who wish them success and happiness in their new life.

Was She To Blame?

Local people will have an opportunity of witnessing one of the pronounced successes of the season on Saturday, Nov. 10th, when J. G. Stutz's beautiful pastoral comedy, "Was She To Blame" will be presented in the Opera House.

The play is a worthy companion to "Way Down East" and "The Old Homestead" abounding with the pictures of rural life in New England and society life in Old England. Popular prices, 15, 25 and 35 cents. Reserved seats at Murdock's Drug store.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

(By the Pastor)

The State Sunday school Convention will meet at Jackson on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

The pastor will begin next Sunday evening a series of sermons on "Present Day Problems." The first sermon will be on "The Problem of the Child."

The offering next Sunday morning will be for our Foreign Mission work. Let it be a liberal thank offering for our recent accessories and personal benefits received.

Last Sunday morning the Lord's Supper was celebrated and twenty-two members received into the church. Of these six came by letter and sixteen on confession of their faith. Nine received baptism. Most of those received are young men and we trust they will be a source of strength to the church in the years to come.

NOVI PIONEER'S FUNERAL SATURDAY

WASHINGTON WEST DIED THERE LAST WEEK.

Had Reached Ripe Old Age of Nearly Four Score Years.

In the passing away of Washington West on Oct. 31, Novi has lost one who had been for the past forty years one of her highly esteemed and valued citizens and the head of one of her most prominent families.

Although a very quiet and unassuming nature, Mr. West was a man who could always be relied upon to be on the side of all that was good and right, one who spoke ill of none and of whom no ill was spoken. A model husband, and father, a steadfast friend and an upright citizen, he needs no greater eulogy.

Mr. West was born in Cayuga county, N. Y., in 1827 and was married to Mary Conolly in 1860.

On Thanksgiving day, forty years ago, they entered into possession of their Michigan home, the farm east of Novi that has ever since been the scene of a more than ordinarily harmonious and peaceful home life.

About fifteen years ago, Mr. West was severely injured by a fall, from which he never fully recovered. For a little over four weeks previous to his death he had been confined to his bed although suffering but little pain. His closing days were typical of his life—quiet, calm, with an abiding faith in God and the better life to come. On Wednesday night, Oct. 31, he peacefully fell asleep, as he had often wished he might be permitted to do, the angel of death calling so gently as not to disturb his beloved and faithful wife, who had lain down beside him for a few moments' rest.

The funeral services were held at the residence Saturday, conducted by Rev. Robert Collins of the Novi Baptist church. Exceptionally beautiful vocal music was given by Mrs. Alice Flint of Ypsilanti and her son, Loren of Novi.

A son and a daughter, Lee L. West and Mrs. Jessie Durfee both of Novi, are left to comfort the widow in her bereavement.

Baptist Church Notes.

(By a Member)

At the B. Y. P. U. business meeting Wednesday evening Jennie Matson was elected assistant secretary and treasurer for the remainder of the year.

Usual services Sunday. The subject of the morning sermon will be "The Message of Jesus to His Business House." The evening sermon will be a continuation of the previous Sunday evening subject.

There was a large attendance at the Missionary meeting at the parsonage Wednesday. Miss Nicolette gave a very interesting talk about her work among the French in Detroit. At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served and all reported a very pleasant time.

The various pupils of the third grade, who have been ill, are back and all are doing good work.

Ethel Freeman, of the tenth grade, has moved to Ypsilanti. Her school-mates will miss her very much.

Miss Layton, teacher of the eighth grade, was taken sick with the grip Wednesday morning and the pupils were excused, there being no school until Friday.

Methodist Church Notes.

(By the Pastor.)

The Ladies' Aid will meet next Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Lou Van Valkenburg. A large attendance is desired.

The Official Board will meet at the parsonage for the transaction of important business next Monday evening at 7:00 o'clock.

The Sunday schools of our church in the state of Michigan contributed for missions last year $14,204.

The ladies of the church appreciate the liberal patronage given them on Wednesday evening, Oct. 30, at their chicken-pie supper. The proceeds were $28 which they will put to the best use.

Public worship next Sunday at the usual time. In the evening the subject will be "Some Lessons the Late Union Revival Meetings Taught Us." I would like you to hear them.

Mrs. Wm. Blair, one of the most faithful and loyal members that our church has had, after months of patient suffering left us last Sunday evening for her home in the skies. Her labors are ended and her works do follow her.

Suburban News.

Wayne people are watching for another electric railway which will run through to Chicago with Pullman sleepers and other late improvements.

One doesn't have to learn how to kiss. It comes natural as hugging a basque pattern in a hammock—South Lyon Herald.

And Editor Samson a married man at that.

The South Lyon School notes speak of a captured Larva specimen thus: "In one stage it is brown and in another stage it is white." It might be added also that by placing it in a newspaper it would be read.

The Wayne Review lets on that nothing has been heard down that way about the steal of 1,000 lbs of copper wire from the D. P. & N electric. The reason Northville heard of it so quickly was because the wire wasn't cooned here.

In telling how to teach a young lady to run an auto, George Neal, the young, good looking and unmarried associate editor of Orion Review winds up thusly:

"Now she may take the wheel, advance the spark and throw in the clutch. It will then be your turn to grow nervous. While the girl is clutching the machine you clutch the girl. This will appear quite natural under the circumstances. It will then be time to rest. This should not take any longer than the rest of the afternoon. By the time you have got so you can kiss the girl without getting nervous, she ought to be able to run the machine. You can then both sit back and hold tight."

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

"A Desperate Chance" will be presented at the Whitney all next week. While the Biddle Brothers are largely concerned in the plot they are not idled and put on a pedestal and regarded as heroes, or held up as shining examples for the rising generation to emulate. While many thrilling scenes are depicted the play contains an unusually strong vein of heart interest, while the comedy is well provided for. Matinees daily except on Wednesday.

Lyceum Theater—Detroit.

Elaborated and exploited under progressive management "His Last Dollar," with David Higgins and Eleanor Montell at the head or a large and capable coterie of players, comes to the Lyceum Nov. 11 evening for a week's engagement. Thoroughbred race horses are carried for one particular scene, which has been claimed by press and public as one of the cleverest bits of stage realism ever introduced.

Michigan's State Lands.

It is due to the interests of a large and important section of Michigan, if not to the individuals involved, that the recent fake and sensational statements made with reference to the alleged wrongs committed through the purchase of state tax lands, should not be dismissed or permitted to rest as a campaign incident, to be made use of in some future political emergency if desired. There are many thousand acres of unoccupied lands in the northern counties of our state, now in possession of the state, which must be sold if that section is ever to reach its best development. The purchase of this land should be urged and encouraged in behalf of the entire state and all its people, rather than regarded with suspicion and exploited as an offense. The exigencies of political campaigns may sometimes suggest unworthy requirements, but they should not lead to that sort of sensationalism which disregards every consideration of fairness and makes an incident of political misrepresentation the permanent interests of an important section of the state.

Trust Legislation.

It is no longer a question in any part of this union as to whether republican legislation in opposition to trusts and combinations will stand the test of the courts and of all efforts to avoid and evade them. The recently convicted members of an ice trust in the city of Toledo, Ohio, are now serving a sentence in the workhouse and in addition there to will each be compelled to pay a fine of $27,000. These convicted ice dealers are men of wealth and prominence in their home city. But they were entitled only to the fair trials which they received, and no further consideration was given them. The enactment of laws in opposition to trusts and the enforcement of such laws are no longer political issues.

Council to Be Congratulated.

The people of Northville will, we are sure, unite with the Record in extending its congratulations to the council in the step they have taken in ordering the electric lights run until 1:00 a. m. standard time for residences and until 12:45 a. m. on the streets. There is no question but what this will be appreciated by every user of electricity and the increased expense will be easily offset by the convenience and the extra amount of juice used.

It was a light vote but Governor Warner managed to get about 100,000 more than the Mr. Kimmeler.

Convict Refused Burial Honors.

A splendid funeral procession was proceeding from Hengo, Japan, to bury the remains of Taroff, the head of a gambling den, when the police stopped the ceremony, as the dead man was believed to be an escaped convict. This was found to be true and the body was taken to the prison burial ground.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven that it is a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Many Persons Have Catarrh of Kidneys But Do Not Recognize It.

A War Veteran Spends Hundreds of Dollars in His Attempt to Cure Kidney Trouble. He Took Pe-Ru-na Upon a Friend's Advice and It Proved the Best Medicine He Ever Used.

CATARRH of the kidneys is a very much neglected disease. It is not until the disease has a firm hold upon the kidneys that the patient begins to realize that there is some derangement of these organs.

The slight backaches, the feelings of lassitude, and other warning symptoms of kidney disease are overlooked.

They are not serious enough to detain the patient from his regular work.

Even when he discovers that the kidneys are affected, he does not recognize the difficulty as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh is sometimes so very gradual in its approach and its earlier symptoms cause such slight discomfort that it is not noticed.

However, when it is once firmly seated in the kidneys, it becomes a difficult disease to exterminate.

Indeed, catarrh of the kidneys is more serious than catarrh affecting some of the other organs of the body.

In the kidneys, it is liable to terminate in Bright's Disease or diabetes, both of which are recognized as very serious ailments, if not fatal.

The thing to be done, when catarrh of the kidneys is discovered, is to take some internal, systemic catarrh remedy, one that reaches the very source of the catarrh and removes the cause of the difficulty.

Such a remedy has been found in Peru-na. It reaches catarrh, no matter where it may be located in the body—whether in the more exposed membranes of the nose and throat, or whether in the remotest part of the kidneys.

That Peru-na is at once the safest and most reliable remedy for catarrh of the kidneys is proven by the many testimonials written by those who have experienced its benefits.

The testimonial given here is only a specimen of the many testimonials on our records, pertaining to the relief afforded by Peru-na in severe cases of kidney trouble.

For free medical advice, address Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

PE-RU-NA FOR KIDNEY DISEASE

"I am an old war veteran. I contracted severe bladder and kidney trouble. I spent hundreds of dollars and consulted a host of doctors, but neither did me any good. Finally some of my comrades who had been cured by Peru-na advised me to try it. I at once bought a bottle and found it helped me so much that I kept using it for nearly four months. Peru-na has proven the best medicine I ever used. My pains are gone and I believe myself to be cured. I feel well and would not be without a bottle in time of need for ten times its cost."

Josh Billings said that "the only thing some underwear is good for is to make a fellow scratch and forget his other troubles." That was before the day of Wright's Health Underwear.

It is the fleece of comfort and can't scratch. The spring principle in the loop-fleece of Wright's Health Underwear makes it keep its original fluffiness and retain its valuable properties until worn out.

This Fleece of Comfort and of Health absorbs perspiration and prevents chill, at the same time allowing the skin to breathe easily and naturally.

Wearing Wright's Health Underwear means freedom from colds and better health generally.

THE SHOE FOR LADIES.

$3.00

$4.00.

This season, because of the higher prices of leather, the larger proportion of shoes are being deliberately cheapened in quality to keep the price down.

But few people can detect the deception beneath the gloss and veneer of the surface finish. The one way to make certain of securing honest value is to insist upon the "Queen Quality" trade mark. It protects. It is not only an indication that the quality and workmanship is of the best, but that they fit as they should fit, that the styles are original and exclusive, and that they are formed according to fashion's latest dictates.

Mrs. W. S. Jerome most royally entertained her Sunday school class at the parsonage Friday evening, last week. There were thirty present. Mr. and Mrs. Merritt and Miss Anna Jerome did some clever song and violin acts. There was a lot of picture puzzles and dainty lunch. Some of the younger boys didn't behave real well but they evidently had a good time—so much so that some of them were not able to be at Sunday school Sunday.

"And it came to pass that after he had advertised his goods, there came unto him great multitudes from all the regions round about and did buy of him. And when his competitors saw it they marveled among themselves, saying: 'How be it that this man is busy while we loaf idly about our doors?' And he spake unto them: In this last age of push and rustle it is easier for a camel to enter the eye of a needle than for a man to flourish without advertising."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional treatment.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the membrane lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be brought out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing more than an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE TICKING OF THE CLOCK.
Soothing Company to Some Sleepers
Cause of Wakefulness in Others.

"Not all people," said the jeweler,
"like the ticking of a clock. It is a pleasant sound to most people, but not to all."

Some people, clock lovers, these could sleep without a clock in the room. Its ticking is company, and it scares away the spooks. Such people would wake up if the clock should stop in the middle of the night.

But there are other people who can't sleep with a clock in the same room and who if they found themselves in a strange place, anywhere
with a clock in their sleeping apartment, would stop the clock before they went to bed.

Of course there is much of habit
in this, but we have our fancies about clocks, as we do about all things else."

HARD TO SEE.
Even When the Facts About Coffee
Are Plain

"It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see."
That the average man or woman
does not see the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffeine—the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh
at you if they don't know the facts.
Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of colic drinkers from the above condition, and a large per cent of the coffee family will shun then shouldn't take the drug, and keep on drinking coffee or tea.

Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household," writes a lady. "It irritates the stomach and creates a feeling of indignity and heaviness. It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum
that we discovered the cause and cure
of these ills."

"The only reason I am sure why Postum is not used altogether to the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritious beverage.
There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes.
Then it is delicious." Name given by

SERIAL STORY

DUKE OF DEVIL- MAY-CARE

By HARRIS DICKSON
Author of
"The Black Wolf's Breed," Etc.
(Copyright, 1905, by D. Appleton & Co.)

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

Joe Balfour bounded to his feet,
caught Duke's shoulder and shook him. But the other man did not look up; he only replied wearily:

"I didn't know him; never saw him
before; some poor devil of a lumberman, I think."

"How did it happen?"

"Do you remember that table just behind the partition in Catalina's saloon—where we had lunch early last night? Next to the side door? It happened right there; I went back again about the middle of the night."

"What was the trouble?"

"I can't remember exactly how it commenced; there was nothing much.
I was drinking a little but not enough to affect me. I went in the saloon
There was a big crowd in the front part, so I went into the back part and sat down at a table opposite this man. He was eating oysters. I think he had some words. He looked at me, but I ought to have paid no attention to that. He was drunk he could hardly stand. Then he tried to get up, with a fork in his hand.
I didn't mean to hurt him, but I snatched a bottle and hit him in the head; broke his skull. The blood spurted out all over everything, he fell, and I don't think he ever moved."

"Who saw it?"

"No one," he said. "I was the lawyer's instinctive question."

"Nobodies; it made no noise. I got out by the side door and ran. Before I had gone half a block I remembered my hat and had to go back for it. He was lying there, dead, with one arm doubled under him. A lot of fellows from the cook-light were singing in the front room; but they couldn't hear a word."

Joe sat down, stunned and bewildered, as Duke went on:

"I ran out again. Joe, you don't know how awful it is to be on a silent street with nothing but your own footsteps, and to know that you can't run away from yourself. When I got up the hill as far as Cherry street I felt an insane desire to see that man again. I thought how cowardly it was of me to leave him lying there with nobody to help him.
I tried my best not to go back but it was no use, I had to go. I sneaked down the hill through the alleys, got to the door, and stopped."

"I knew exactly how the man would look. Lay there on his face with that arm doubled under him, and a puddle of blood at his head. I hung back in the dark and tried to reason myself out of it. My head was just as clear as it is now, I understood it fully. I remembered reading a long time ago that hundreds of murderers are captured at the morgue in Paris every year, just because they could not resist the desire to go back and look at the people they had killed."

That was awful, but I opened the door, and went in. The body had been carried away, and a negro was scrubbing the floor."

"I searched for him all over town,
at all of the undertaker shops, but could not find where they had taken him. There's a dead woman over yonder at Drury's parlors. I went in and looked at her a long time. It is very solemn to look at the dead—
they are so still and white. Then I came here."

He had spoken on and on in a low voice, more to himself than to his friend. When he stopped, everything grew deadly still. The clock ticked, the fire crackled. It was nearly five o'clock.

There came a sharp footfall on the flagstones outside, it sounded very loud almost as if it were in the house. Stricken with terror Duke grasped the arms of his chair and listened until the early traveler had passed.

Joe dressed himself in silence.
When he was done he touched his friend on the shoulder.

"You stay here old man," he said gently, "I'm going down to see about this thing."

It should have been daylight but looking to the horizon one could not guess from which direction to expect a lagged sun.

CHAPTER VII
THE FLIGHT

In the first faint gray of dawn Joe Balfour leaped from Catalina's saloon.

"Lucky thing," he muttered, "that nobody saw it."

He was a lawyer; such affairs as this were part of life's routine, and Joe had come to look upon them with a coldly professional eye. As he drew nearer to the old brick house where Duke awaited him, his mouth closed firmly. "But it's a pretty tough lesson."

He opened the door softly and went to his room. Duke was sitting in the same chair, in the same position as when Joe left him.

The Duke of Devil-May-Care was no coward—physical or moral—and he had been looking squarely into the face of the thing that he had done.

"Well, Joe?" he glanced up inquiringly.

For a few moments the lawyer did not speak. When he had taken off his gloves and laid his overcoat across the bed, he turned as deliberately as if his friend were merely a casual client seeking advice.

"Noel, you must be low for a day or two and see what happens; at least until you sober up."

"Sober up? I'm sober. What do you think it takes to straighten a fellow?"

"You are devilish lucky; not a human being saw you, or knows that you were there. I don't believe they could ever prove that you went into that saloon. The man was a stranger and has no friends to make a row.
By the way, what did you do with your overcoat?"

Duke tried hard to think, then gave it up and looked helplessly at Joe.

"I don't know. I can't remember much until I saw that man drop.
After that everything is clear enough.
Was it cold last night?"

"Cold enough for me to wear my coat."

"Oh, well, I may have checked it in the hotel, maybe I left it at the saloon. Look here, Joe, don't you worry about me, old fellow." He stood up and faced the other man.

"It's no-
body's fault but mine, and I've been thinking it all out. I mixed up with that crowd deliberately, and now I won't whine or lie about it. But Joe,
I want you to believe me, I did not mean to kill that poor devil, he was too drunk to hurt me, even if he did have a fork in his hand. He couldn't stand up. I came to town in a bad temper, mad at everybody and everything—that's all there is to it. Now I'm going to give myself up and take my medicine—it can't be worse than what I took last night. I tell you,

"Duke understood; it glorified—and crushed him. He stood at the window staring into vacancy, then
came back slowly and took his seat
before the fire."

Joe sat on the edge of the bed and
watched him; he seemed to be thinking very hard. Duke turned his head
with a jerk and asked: "Joe, when a
fellow is arrested they search him,
don't they?"

"Yes."

It took him a long time to make up his mind, then he commenced tearing Anita's note into strips, and laid them
on the fire. The song he kept. His lips quivered as he watched the fragments swirl, flame up and crackle
into dead black ashes.

"Hold on, Joe."

The man in the chair rocked to and fro.

"She doesn't say a word about Vance," he thought. "I don't believe it, I won't believe it, unless she tells me herself." He rocked again, and presently he smiled—smiled at the very beauty of the faith that there was in him.

Suddenly he sprang erect, with blazing eyes.

"Joe, I wish that infernal old woman were in hell, and I had the receipt for her."

"You shouldn't speak so of a lady."

"I know it, I know it, but I'm tired of being so polite, I'm going to be honest for awhile. Sometimes a man must say what he thinks or choke.
She's wicked both of us."

Joe said nothing, Duke sank into the chair again.

Well, I'm no baby to blame some body else; it's too late."

When Joe had arranged his necktie,
and combed his hair with maddening deliberation he came and took the seat beside Duke.

"Now, Noel," he said, in that quiet tone of his which precluded argument, "there's a big cellar under this house. You must keep out of sight to-day and wait developments. Jim will take your meals to you. When I come home to dinner we'll decide what is best. Come, now, it's breakfast time."

Without a word of protest Duke followed into the entry. Joe lifted the cellar door and led the way down a narrow flight of steps. He had half disappeared when Duke stopped.

"Hold on, Joe, I'm mixing you up in this thing now. Isn't this some sort of a crime?"

"Accessory after the fact—that's all."

"I won't do it—I won't."

"Yes, you will." Joe caught his sleeve and dragged him down. "Think of her." Then Duke went down into the darkness.

Duke snatched the note away,
walked to the window, and his hand trembled as he opened it. Something told out and fluttered to the floor—a withered jonquil. He stooped to pick it up, with such a smile as Joe had never seen before. Headless of any other presence he touched the flower
to his lips, and began to read:

My Dear Mr. Duke: Don't be angry; I couldn't help it, indeed I couldn't. My aunt hurried us off so unexpectedly that I had no way of letting you know.
And don't be too hard on Aunt Alice;
she's been suffering wretchedly for a day or two, but she's better now. I saw you going out to that horrid old rooster-light
You did that just to make me feel that I was the cause of it.

Who was your friend? The one in the red jacket? You associate with some very distinguished-looking people. The one that went with you?

You must come and get down on your knees before I will forgive you. And I won't tell you to save your life that I am going to Nannie Kerr's precisely at 11
to-morrow.

Aunt Alice is dragging us to Mardi Gras on the 12th. You know how crazy I have been about going to the carnival, but now I believe I had rather stay at home.

We are going to stay at a curious old place called the Hotel Louis le Grande.
Aunt Alice says it is 'way down in the French part of town, on Valois street.

ANITA.

P. S.—Here is your jonquil—you understand?

Duke did understand; it glorified—
and crushed him. He stood at the window staring into vacancy, then
came back slowly and took his seat
before the fire.

Joe sat on the edge of the bed and
watched him; he seemed to be thinking very hard. Duke turned his head
with a jerk and asked: "Joe, when a
fellow is arrested they search him,
don't they?"

"Yes."

It took him a long time to make up
his mind, then he commenced tearing Anita's note into strips, and laid them
on the fire. The song he kept. His
lips quivered as he watched the fragments swirl, flame up and crackle

WOMEN'S VOICES

Thousands of women suffer
daily backache,
headache, dizzy
spells, languor,
nervousness, and
a dozen other symptoms of kidney trouble, but lay it to other causes. Make no mistake. Keep
the kidneys well,
and these aches
and troubles will disappear.

Mrs. Anthony
Cadrette, 77 Mechanic street, Leominster, Mass., says: "My sight failed, I had sharp pain in my back and bearing-down pains through the hips.
I was nervous, fretful and miserable.
The urine was greatly disordered and I began to have the swellings of dropsy. I was running down fast, when I started using Doan's Kidney Pills. A wonderful change came and after using them faithfully for a short time I was well."

The Zulu War Cry.

The Zulu war cry, used whenever they take the field by the South African footballers now in London, has puzzled our newspapers, not one of which seems able to spell it correctly, says Notes and Queries. The Daily Express gives it as "Igamiibo," and the Daily Mail as "Igamiibo." The cry really consists of two words, and should be written "Igama layo." "Igama"
is Zulu for "name" and "layo" is a possessive pronoun, meaning either
"his" or "their." This the Daily Mail
although quite wrong in its orthography
of the cry, is right in saying that it merely means "That is his name." The explanation is that Zulu etiquette does not allow warriors, when they rush into battle, to mention the names of their enemies, but the leaders shout out, "That is his name," pointing to the victims with their spears.

Romance in Writers' Lives.

A strange comedy and tragedy was woven into the lives of Ibsen and Bjornson. As young men they were great friends, then politics flung them apart, they quarreled and never met for years and years. Strange fate brought the children of these two great writers together and Bjornson's
daughter married Ibsen's only child.
The fathers met after a quarter of a century of separation at the wedding of their children.

The Ideal Family Laxative.

is one that can be used by the entire family, young and old, weak and strong, without any danger of harmful effects. It should have properties which insure the same dose always having the same effect, otherwise the quantity will have to be increased and finally lose its effect altogether. These properties can be found in that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills, because its ingredients are of the purest herbal extracts, and every pill is kept for three years before being sold, which allows time to mellow. We do not believe there is a laxative on the market that is so carefully made.

Brandreth's Pills are the same fine laxative tonic pills your grandparents used. They have been in use for over a century and are for sale everywhere,
either plain or sugar-coated.

Finnegan Saves the Ship

By Morgan Robertson

(Copyright, by Joseph F. Bonies)

"Finnegan is getting drunk," said the executive officer, as he joined the group on the after superstructure deck. "Trouble is coming from some where."

"Here is Finnegan now." They peered down over the break of the superstructure at a gray-haired, emaciated old man, with a vacant smile on his face.

"Jes' wanted to tell the cap'n 'bout it," mumbled Finnegan. "Battleships are bad gun platforms—he wants ter know it."

The first lieutenant and surgeon exchanged glances.

"What's on his mind?" asked the former. "Battleships are the best gun platforms afloat."

The group separated, and Mr. Clarkson went to the forward 13-inch turret, where a damaged gun-mount demanded attention; and, this attended to, his mind was taken up with the target practice of all the gun-crews for the next three hours. Later the old man himself appeared in the turret, where the executive officer and the gun crews were perspiring over the work. Both guns had been loaded with solid shot, and were to be fired at extreme elevation.

"Good gunsh," remarked Finnegan, as the men took positions for firing. "Good gunsh—shoot a long way—but can't hit, tornado boats."

"Yes," answered Mr. Clarkson, eyeing him severely. "Good gunsh—shoot ten miles—over the horizon. Get out of here."

The hairless and useless old fellow was hustled out and into the arms of the listening surgeon, who led him away. Then the port gun was fired, and a huge pointed cylinder of solid steel weighing over a half ton went up into the air, while the great gun sagged back on its oil cushion.

But there were other sounds in the turret than the roar of the gun; there were the crackling of breaking steel, the swishing of hot oil and the exclamations of startled men. No one was injured; but investigation disclosed that the turret flooring had given way, that the elevating gear of both guns was damaged beyond immediate repair, and that the hydraulic rammers were disabled.

The charge in the other gun could

"Why Did You Fire That Gun, Finnegan?"

not be extracted, and the condition of the gun mount made it unwise to discharge the gun. The whole forward 13-inch turret was out of commission and could not be repaired away from a dockyard so, with one gun empty, the other loaded, and both pointing upward at an angle of 15 degrees, they swung the turret amidships and left it.

Next morning being Sunday, Mr. Parmlee, the chaplain, held services on the berth-deck.

As his voice dropped its cadence in the final amen every man there sprang to his feet, for preceding the amen by a tenth of a second there rang through the ship a thundering report and a crash that came of nothing less than the discharge of a 13-inch gun.

Church "let out." Away they went, an undisciplined mob, and surrounded Finnegan descending from the big forward turret, with a startled, dumfounded expression on his face and blood streaming from a wound in it inflicted by some flying fragment of the further wrecked turret gear. The big starboard gun had been fired, and though it now pointed higher than before, its center of gravity was unquestionably lower; for it had broken down through the weakened flooring and hung in the wreckage, a menace to everything beneath it.

Dr. Bryce was permitted to do the questioning.

"Why did you fire the gun, Finnegan?" he asked kindly.

"Fore Gawd, sir," whimpered the old fellow, "I dunno—I felt like it—and I dunno. I felt I oughter—that is, 'fore I did it—then I felt like a fool."

"Why did you feel that you ought to fire it? What did you think was wrong?"

"I felt—ah night—yes, sir—all night

I kinder dreamed o' firin' it—gettin' rid o' the weight. 'Twas on my mind when I turned out, and I jes' couldn't help it, sir."

Because Finnegan had disturbed church on that stormy Sabbath morning, he was consigned to the brig—where he went to sleep. But his sleep was short, for soon after there sounded through the ship the bugle call to quarters.

Going to the bridge, Dr. Bryce found those of his brother officers not at stations inspecting through the rangefinders a line of long, low, four-funnelled craft about a mile ahead, the most sinister and evil-appearing of all seagoing war craft, torpedo boat destroyers.

"Great guns!" exclaimed Mr. Clarkson, as the surgeon reached his side. "Is it possible that Finnegan had clairvoyant knowledge that they were there and tried to hit them?" He said that the big guns would shoot a long way.

"But he also said," answered the doctor, with doubt and speculation in his face, "that torpedo boats couldn't be hit. One thought, as a subliminal inspiration, would annul the other."

"Yet everything he's said or done has relevancy except one: Why did he fire that big gun?"

"Because he was drunk," growled the listening engineer.

The sea was heavy, running in two directions; and not only the big battleship, but the smaller, lighter and faster craft ahead were tossed, and tumbled about in a manner to make accurate gun fire impossible.

But herein lay the difference and the problem in hand. While the Argyl had nothing but gun fire with which to withstand those swift and elusive enemies, and was left helpless by its elimination, they, on the contrary, weakly endowed in this form of aggressiveness, dominated the situation by possession of a weapon of war unaffected by the non-stability of gun platforms.

There were four destroyers in sight through the smother, each a magnified torpedo boat, able to take to the sea, but carrying the usual pair of tubes and store of torpedoes.

The Argyl barked and spat with her small and secondary guns, but not an enemy was hit. Not a gun could be aimed in that furious turmoil of tossing water, which drove the ship down broadside to 45 degrees and pitched her fore and aft to 20. And soon firing was stopped because it was a sheer waste of ammunition. The officers uneasily paced the bridge.

"Battleships are bad gun platforms," said Mr. Clarkson, significantly to the surgeon, as for a moment their eyes met in passing.

"And big guns can't hit torpedo boats," answered the surgeon when they passed again.

"But big guns shoot a long way," returned the executive, next time they passed. "What the devil did he mean?"

"Don't know. Wait—it'll work out. He meant something."

"Here they come!" called the captain suddenly. "Resume firing—every gun that will bear."

But the storm of shot and shell flew wild, and the rushing destroyers came on, to half the distance, to a third; in a moment they would be within easy torpedo range.

But before that moment arrived a shout went up from a casemate. One boat had been hit, for a cloud of steam arose, and she swung out of her course. Then more shouts were heard, two others stopped, one the center of a radiating effluence of red, which changed to thick, yellow smoke, and hid her fragments from view, the other emitting steam like the first. The fourth wheeled about and fled, followed by shot and shell which went remarkably true compared with the inaccuracy of the preceding fire.

The dazed and astonished officers on the bridge, and the exulting crews at the gun positions, did not, until the last of the quartet had settled beneath the surface from the deadly accuracy of the fire which ensued, realize that the sea had calmed—that, though the big ship still lifted and fell from the action of the ground-swell, there were no disturbing waves, no cross seas—no aim-destroying heave. The troubled ocean had become like plastic glass, though the wind still held its hurricane force and the air was filled with horizontal rain and spindrift.

There was no time for speculation; they had sunk but four destroyers. With guns silent and crews at stations, they steamed on through the storm, looking for that fifth long, low craft, and soon, through a break in the gray receding wall of spume into which they seemed to be rushing, they sighted her, quiet and inert but for her sluggish rolling—a two-masted craft, with gaffs aloft and the red ensign of England flying union down from her mainmast head—a merchant steamer in distress.

The battleship slowed down and lowered her boats. Before they were well clear of her side the listening officers on the bridge heard the exclamatory words of the men that manned them, telling of oil—oil upon the oars, oil upon the sea.

"Yes," said the rescued steamer skipper, as he told of his plight a little later, "she's a tank-steamer and was doomed for the bottom anyhow when those torpedo boats came up. But it wasn't them that sunk her and spread all this oil about—it was the act of God. Something came down sideways out o' the sky—a meteor, I think—and went right through us. Curious—it left a round hole, about 13 inches across."

"It was most certainly the act of God," said Mr. Parmlee reverentially, as they discussed it a little later.

"Finnegan's bullhead luck," commented the irreverent engineer,

FROM GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

Mothers Should Watch the Development of Their Daughters—Interesting Experiences of Misses Borman and Mills.

MATILDA BORMAN MYRTLE MILLS

Every mother possesses information which is of vital interest to her young daughter.

Too often this is never imparted or is withheld until serious harm has resulted to the growing girl through her ignorance of nature's mysterious and wonderful laws and penalties.

Girls' over-sensitiveness and modesty often puzzle their mothers and baffle physicians, as they so often withhold their confidence from their mothers and conceal the symptoms which ought to be told to their physician at this critical period.

When a girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness, or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, when she is a mystery to herself, and friends, her mother should come to her aid, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will, at this time, prepare the system for the coming change, and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities.

Hundreds of letters from young girls and from mothers, expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them, have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., at Lynn, Mass.

Miss Mills has written the two following letters to Mrs. Pinkham, which will be read with interest:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (First Letter) "I am but fifteen years of age, am depressed, have dizzy spells, chills, headache and back-ache, and as I have heard that you can give helpful advice to girls in my condition, I am writing you—Myrtle Mills, Oklawaha, Ill."

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (Second Letter) "I write to you to tell you what your valuable medicine has done for me. When I consulted several doctors, but they failed to understand my case and I did not receive any benefit from their treatment, I followed your advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now healthy and well, and all the distressing symptoms which I had at that time have disappeared. —Myrtle Mills, Oklawaha, Ill."

Miss Matilda Borman writes Mrs. Pinkham as follows:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my periods were irregular and painful, and I always had such dreadful headaches. —But since taking the Compound my headaches have entirely left me, my periods are regular, and I am getting strong and well. I am telling all my girl friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. —Matilda Borman, Farmington, Iowa."

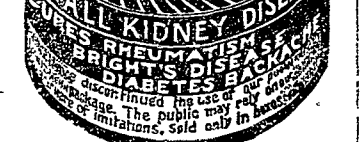

If you know of any young girl who is sick and needs motherly advice, ask her to address Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her every detail of her symptoms, and to keep nothing back. She will receive advice absolutely free, from a source that has no rival in the experience of woman's ills, and it will, if followed, put her on the right road to a strong, healthy and happy womanhood.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for the greatest number of cures of female ills of any medicine that the world has ever known. Why don't you try it?

Uncanny Chinese Legend.— There are the two celebrated towers of the imperial city, the Bell tower and the Drum tower. As to the casting of the bell in the former there is this legend: There had been two unsuccessful attempts and the life of the founder was threatened in case of a third failure. His daughter discovered by occult means that nothing but the blood of a virgin mingled with the molten metal would insure success. So at the next casting she sacrificed her life by throwing herself into the molten metal, leaving only one shoe behind. The casting was perfect. But when the bell was first struck "all were horror-stricken as, after the heavy boom of the bell, came a low wail as of a girl in agony, distinctly saying the word 'heish,' shoe. And to this day people when they hear it, say, 'There's poor Koar's voice calling out for her shoe.'"—Shanghai Times.

Who wishes to better his condition in life, or who desires to start his sons on the road to success, and especially every reader who wants to own land, should send a postal to-day for a free copy of the new book, "A Good Dairy District."

It tells all about a comparatively new region just coming into prominence as a successful dairying country. Land is very cheap, pure water and nutritious grasses are abundant, there is a market for all products at good prices, the climate is equable and healthful and the settlers already there are desirable neighbors.

Very cheap round-trip tickets on the west and third Tuesdays afford a splendid opportunity for investigation. For particulars address

Success in the Gulf Coast Country

Here is an example of what YOU could do.

Sugar Cane from One Acre Brings $240.

Mr. P. B. Blalack, of Brownsville, Texas, raised sixty tons of sugar-cane on one acre last year. He sold his crop for $240. He raises more cane to the acre than is produced elsewhere—also raises better cane. And there are many other cases of remarkable success in the Gulf Coast Country. We have compiled a booklet setting them forth—it is yours for the asking.

One reason for success there is the richness of the soil. With this soil, the mild weather all the year round, and the plentiful supply of water for irrigation, the farmer raises immense crops. Garden truck of all varieties is raised in the winter and marketed in the early Spring when it brings the highest price. Any truck farmer can easily make more than $100 an acre.

Wouldn't you like to have a small farm in the Gulf Coast Country, where success does not depend on uncertain weather with irregular rainfall?

Now the land is cheap and you can get it on easy terms. Twenty acres will cost you about $500. The cost of clearing it is about $5 an acre. The cost of water for irrigation varies. You may want an artesian well of your own; you may get water from some river; or you may get it from your neighbor. But the cost is not great, and those who have tried it have netted from the first crop a sum which has paid all expenses and left a good surplus.

Take a trip down there and see for yourself—that's the best way. Every first and third Tuesday of each month, we will sell round-trip tickets to any point in the Gulf Coast Country and return at the following rates:

From Chicago,	$25.00
From St. Louis,	20.00
From Kansas City,	20.00
From Peoria,	23.00
From St. Paul,	23.00
From Minneapolis,	23.00

These tickets will be good 30 days and they will permit you to stop over at any point. Low rates for one way tickets on some days, also.

Let me send you our book describing the wonderful crops produced in this marvelous country. Don't delay, write me to day.

Help! Help! I'm Falling

Thus cried the hair. And a kind neighbor came to the rescue with a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor. The hair was saved! This was because Ayer's Hair Vigor is a regular hair medicine. Falling hair is caused by a germ, and this medicine completely destroys these germs. Then the healthy scalp gives rich, healthy hair.

The funeral services of Warren B. Estes were held in the Methodist church Monday. The church was filled with those who mourned his loss. The altar had been draped with black and white and decorated with potted plants. Rev. L. H. Stevens the pastor conducted the services assisted by Rev. M. E. Munser of the Baptist church and Rev. Frederick Strong of Milford. Twenty-one years ago Rev. Strong married Mr. and Mrs. Estes. He also preached the funeral sermon of Mr. Estes' father. The singers could with difficulty restrain their tears recalling the many times the departed had sung with them and had been chorister for several years. The casket was covered with beautiful flowers from loving friends and societies. Mr. Estes was born March 27, 1864 near Tecumseh, and while yet a boy moved with his parents to the town line near Wixom. In 1885 he was married to Hattie H. Welch and since then have resided in this vicinity with the exception of ten years spent in Detroit. Their home has been blessed by two exemplary boys, Floyd and Clarence, who are left to be the stay and comfort of their mother. Mr. Estes had been ailing for some time and for several weeks it was plain that his life was short. He was very patient and trustful throughout his sickness—in fact his whole life had shown the christian virtues.

Mrs. Estes feels very grateful to all those who have shown their kindness through her husband's sickness and death and to those who sent flowers.
