BUSINESS BOOMIN'

ALL NORTHVILLE FACTORIES BUSY AS BEES.

Are Way Behind on Orders in Every Department.

An enquiry at the leading Northville factories finds a decided boom in business and in every case there seems to be a scarcity of the right kind of help, while orders are piling in faster than the goods can be shipped out.

At the Bell Foundry, President Harmon had forty men employed and was buried up with work. The main orders were for bells and castings for the Seale company. More men of the right kind could be employed if they could be found. The new addition lately finished by this company makes it one of the ideal foundries of Michigan.

At the Stimpson Scale Co's works seventy men were just as busy as bees in buckwheat time. Manager Gay says there are three months orders on hand now and the running of the factory for two and a half hours nights is but a partial solution of the problem to get the work out on time. The orders are thick in all departments. Coffee mills, big scales, little scales, meat scales and all kinds of scales with a "ship quick" notation on each order is what every mail brings in. Mr. Stimpson and Mr. Gay are more than pleased with their location here and the outlook for business.

At the Globe Co. Ltd., factory Manager Yerkes and his hustling assistant, C. A. Dolph, were up to their ears with orders and "how to do ten days work in six", was causing gray hairs to grow where black ones should have first choice. The company is way behind on Sanitary wood work orders and it seems utterly impossible to get anywhere near caught up. The fact that a number of the men are setting up work in Detroit this week has put the church furniture department back and skilled workmen are in demand here as in other places.

At the Dulbar factory about the same state of affairs existed. Here forty-five men were busy getting out lumber for shipment and manufacturing wheelbarrows and tackle blocks. Mr. Dulbar reports many orders on hand and the lumber and manufacturing business is brisk.

The Northville Slipper Co's factory is working to its fullest capacity, a part of the time nights. About six people are employed and about 288 pairs of slippers and women's shoes are turned out each week. The company has lately installed all new machinery.

HIS NEXT TACKLE.

Football Player (out of training): "I haven't had a square meal for three months—you're my meat!" —Bartholomew in Minneapolis Journal.

WINTER NIGHT CLUB

Will Open up for Business Next Wednesday Night.

The "Winter Night" club which ran so successfully last winter has been revived and will have its first meeting next week Wednesday night. There will be a general discussion of "How to Better Northville, Spiritually, Morally, Financially and otherwise."

All the men folks of the village are invited to join the club and to aid in the good work.

Mrs. Earnest Roe Dead.

Mrs. Earnest Roe, aged 33, formerly a prominent teacher in the Plymouth schools, is dead of consumption. She spent the past two winters in Asheville, N. C., in the hope of benefiting her health. A husband and three children survive her.

She was a young lady much respected which was attested by the large attendance at her funeral which was held at the home on Tuesday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. W. G. Stephens of Northville.

Mr. Corbett Very Ill.

Mr. Corbett, who lives in the McKay house in Northside, is seriously ill with typhoid fever. He probably contracted the disease just before moving here from Milan. The doctor holds out but little hope for his recovery.

No Raffles.

The fact that some raffles were to be held in the village next week brought a complaint to President Harmon of the village council and he now gives notice that no raffles of any kind can be held in Northville.

Suburban News.

Mrs. R. C. Chaffee of Plymouth has just passed her 93rd birthday.

Had a fly wedding at Pontiac last week. John Wells of Detroit married Iva Bird. Well, well.

It is said that Charlie Rutter of Romulus is slated to succeed "Jack" (rowley as one of the superintendents of the poor.

Some Farmingtonites are laying plans for a travelling library that will just trot around between a half dozen families.

The Orion Review notes the birth of an eight pound girl to Mr. and Mrs. Will Sweet. Oh, sugar and molasses. Isn't that sweet to the sweets?

Flummerfelt-Nellis Co. is a new $25,000 Wyandotte concern. The Herald doesn't say what they will manufacture, but its probably a line of "felts".

Ex-County Treasurer Charles Buhner will be one of the leading candidates for county auditor to succeed Lou Burt at the spring primaries.

The Plymouth Mail is calling down the council there for attempting to run an electric light line a mile or two out of town to accommodate one customer.

One thing about burglarizing the Orion post-office, no matter how often the burglars tap it, they always find something worth while inside to pay for their trouble.

You may not know it, but Orion has a "beenery". It takes seventeen nice looking young ladies every day to separate the stones from the Bostons and they don't catch 'em all either.

Wyandotte is being livened up with a good old fashioned strike at the tresh yards. Anytime Wyandotte hasn't a strike on at the school or one of its shops it's because of the observance of some national holiday.

D. U. R. people are still trying to get a line on the chaps who borrowed 'steen hundred odd feet of their copper feed wire. The trolley company will feed them for a while at the H. of C., where they have other kinds of feed and recreation.

The Wayne Review intimates that the old school house there is likely to tumble down some stormy night and wants the school board to wake up long enough to build a new one with the surplus money in the taxpayers pockets as a result of the big bunch of primary money on hand.

The holiday observance in the autumn of 1621 by the people of Plymouth, so often referred to as our earliest New England Thanksgiving, cannot be justly characterized, because our early Thanksgiving in

Man is so constituted that he is forever straining for blessings from afar while overlooking those at his feet.

It seems we cannot be thankful for a little good despite the dictum that "man wants but little here below"

The harvest coming after the care and toil of tilling the soil, the sowing of seed and anxious watching of the fields, has therefore been almost universally set apart as a time for special thanks, or Thanksgiving.

It is interesting to observe that while Thanksgiving Day as we know it, is a peculiarly American festival, harvest festivals were celebrated more than 5,000 years ago.

According to religious usage, the people left their houses and came forth to live in the booths or tents made of twigs, branches and brushwood, during the holy session of eight days.

But if the Wisconsin dairy commissioner succeeds in removing the distinguishing feature of Limburger cheese will it still be Limburger?

Chess is the national game of Japan. All will admit that it is a scientific and highly interesting game, but Americans want a game that moves along more rapidly.

The department of agriculture has discovered that there is no meat in the mince-meat of commerce.

LONG SERMONS, AND LONG FACES

Early Thanksgivings Were Not Festive, But Solemn, Occasions—Modernized by Circumstances.

So strong was the spirit of our ancestors that when the detested Gov. Andros issued his Thanksgiving proclamation they refused to eat turkey, just to spit him.

Notwithstanding a quite prevalent opinion to the contrary, for which certain historical writers are largely responsible, Thanksgiving is a day for family reunions, feasting and social enjoyment, is practically a modern institution, owing to its present importance in the main to the conveniences of travel that came

Massachusetts, for generations, were solely religious observances, while that famous Plymouth celebration of 1621 was a harvest festival, never designated as Thanksgiving by its promoters, and having no religious significance whatever, so far as known.

Moreover, it comprised not merely a single day of feasting and merrymaking, but a whole week of it, and was designed solely for relaxation after many months of privation and arduous toil.

There is no record of a similar joyous celebration in our annals for generations afterward, the Thanksgivings referred to in subsequent years until after the revolution having been nearly as strict religious affairs as Sunday itself, and so far as we have any existing evidence, not greatly given to gastronomy.

No mention of Thanksgiving is found in a contemporary list of holidays for merrymaking as late as 1700.

Until as late as the war of 1812, or later, Thanksgiving was not a regular annual affair, either its appointment being in recognition of special blessings, either spiritual or material, and usually deferred until such an excuse for its appointment offered, even though it might be for two or three years, as was frequently the case.

It usually came in the autumn, however, and generally a bountiful harvest was mentioned as an incidental cause.

For more than 60 years after the arrival of the Pilgrims Thanksgiving was appointed by the legislature, and its respectful, religious observance was quite as obligatory as was obedience to any law of the commonwealth that carries with it a legal penalty.

Great Heat in Deep Mines.

The latest determination of rise in temperature in descending underground gives 24.3 feet for every degree centigrade or 135 feet for a rise of one degree Fahrenheit.

Experiments made in deep mines to prove that the heat of the rocks does not preclude mining operations at even 3,000 feet, because if the recognized formula of 125 degrees Fahrenheit at 3,500 feet, demonstrated that such a temperature is not reached.

The assertion sometimes made that mining might extend to as great a depth as 10,000 feet if haulage could be accomplished is untenable.

Since His Mother Died.

A smart lawyer had been bullying the witness in a laundry case.

Finally he asked: "How long have you been getting your washing done at this place?"

"Ever since your mother died," answered the witness.

"What do you mean, sir?" asked the lawyer, frowning.

"Just what I say, sir," calmly replied the witness.

"Do you mean to insinuate that my mother ever did your washing? You don't."

"No; I mean just what I say. Your mother died six years ago. Since then I have had my washing done (his laundry)."

"Then the witness was allowed to step down amid the giggles of the multitude.

FISH BY THE MILLION.

Enormous Proportions of This Industry in the East.

The results of the New England fisheries in 1905 broke all records. Maine contributed to the food supply of the world 1,000,000,000 packed sardines, valued at $5,000,000, and in fresh fish alone Boston sold $4,000,000 worth.

The great "wharf" in Boston handled 100,000,000 pounds of fresh fish, valued at $2,500,000. At this wharf as many as 50 fishing vessels have been moored at one time.

Gloucester, the home of the Grand Banks fishing fleet, provided for the world's consumption 125,000,000 pounds of salt fish, valued at $5,750,000, and handled fresh fish to the value of $2,000,000.

In the latter part of 1905 a revolution was promised in fishing methods by the addition of a new steam trawler to the fleet. Since fishing began on the Banks the work has been done by sailing vessels, which send out dories on the fishing grounds as, which in the voyages back and forth between Boston and the Banks, are at the mercy of storms.

There are now more than 500 vessels of all sizes in the fishing fleet, ranging in value from $1,000 to $15,000, the entire fleet being valued at about $9,000,000.

The new steamer cost her owners $60,000. She is equipped to permit of all fishing operations being carried on from her deck without the use of dories and the consequent loss of life attendant upon the old methods of fishing when boats were frequently lost in the fog or run down by Atlantic steamers.

The Spray drags her own trawl nets and is expected to make huge hauls and fast time between the fishing grounds and the home port—Scrap Book.

Refined Cruelty of a Boy.

"For genuine cruelty the average five-year-old boy has got a Hottentot cannibal kicked to a frazzle," said the proud father of a young hopeful the other day.

"The latest trick of my kid is a winner, but was sort of rough on the victim, which was our pet cat. About three weeks ago we noticed that pussy suddenly stopped eating and drinking. All the choice bits of meats and dishes of milk were left untouched.

"For several days we explained it by supposing that the cat was getting more than the ordinary number of mice and eating them to the exclusion of our offerings, but we soon noticed that she was becoming thin and gaunt and did not seem inclined to move about and purr as she used to. One day, after two weeks of this, I picked up the now skeleton cat and began to stroke it with my neck.

"What do you think I found? A thick rubber band stretched tightly around the throat, concealed by the long fur. It just permitted the cat to breathe, but she could not eat. I removed it and now she is getting along all right. When I asked the boy about it he said he just wanted to see if kitty would strangle. If it had been anything else but a cat it would have been dead in no time."

What's the Matter with Detroit. For years, the honest count of election ballots in the city of Detroit has been a problem. Every legislature for a decade past has labored with laws to prevent error and to compel men to be honest in that city.

Josh Billings said that "the only thing some underwear is good for is to make a fellow scratch and forget his other troubles." That was before the day of Wright's Health Underwear.

It is the fleece of comfort and can't scratch. The spring principle in the loop-fleece of Wright's Health Underwear makes it keep its original fluffiness and retain its valuable properties until worn out. This Fleece of Comfort and of Health absorbs perspiration and prevents chill, at the same time allowing the skin to breathe easily and naturally. Wearing Wright's Health Underwear means freedom from colds and better health generally. Wright's costs no more than ordinary underwear.

SERIAL STORY

DUKE OF DEVIL-MAY-CARE

By HARRIS DICKSON Author of "The Black Wolf's Breed," Etc.

The girl came running. Monsieur Victor indicated Mrs. Ashton's foot with a gesture most delicate and gallant, laid his hand upon his heart and bowed himself backward from the room.

Archimise, deft and quick with comical shrugs that sent the girls giggling again, stripped Mrs. Ashton's foot and bathed it so speedily that the old lady forgot to grumble. The maid spoke no English, but her keen eyes missed nothing, and she was aware the moment that they needed her no longer.

"These French maids put me in a fog," remind me of a wasp buzzing around," grumbled Mrs. Ashton. The girls were wandering about the large room, commenting on everything.

"Look, Alice, at that tapestry; it is a thousand years old. A crucifix, see the red cross. Just think of it, we are in the very room where a prince used to stay—Lafitte was a prince, wasn't he? Maybe that was his cabinet, all right; I wonder how you open it. Wouldn't it be grand if we could find some of Lafitte's treasures?"

Mrs. Ashton undressed herself methodically; plates, Gen. Jackson and the duke of Orleans were all alike to her, she was very sleepy. The enthusiastic girls went down on their knees before that artfully carved Spanish cabinet, and began prying into its secrets.

Four panels below, and a shelf above which seemed to let down the lid of a desk. The two maids experimented with its iron framework and complicated fastenings until, after drawer flew open—all empty, commonplace, disappoint-

"Come you girls were going to bed," said the mamma in a minute, "see that picture Napoleon at the Battle of Lodi." Alice picked out the French inscription, and felt very proud of herself.

"What's that other one—the woman behind the bars?"

"Charlotte Corday in prison," I suppose," Mrs. Ashton interrupted. "Go to bed, I'm tired, and I have a lot of shopping to do to-morrow."

"Oh night, mamma," Alice kept saying around looking at things that were very curious things that they were eager to examine. "Look, Alice," Alice whispered when they had opened the door—look at those knobs they're cut glass, like diamonds, stop-ners. By this one is broken."

The hallway seemed so big and dark so full of weird shadows and mummings, and as they caught each other's hands and ran laughing to their room. "Isn't it scary here?" said Alice as she closed the door safely behind them.

CHAPTER IX THE HOUR WITH THE BROKEN KNOB.

All the time the conscience tortured Alice that ever walked by night all by herself, and all the music memory which haunt an ancient French garden, could not keep two travel-worn girls from sleeping. At nine o'clock in the morning Archimise, with her hair and rolls, knocked twice before they awoke.

"Presently they burst into the hall, enthusiastic and singing, for the sun shone bright. Carnival had come, and the world was full of things for them to do.

"I have a new hat for you," Alice said gayly as she raced along the hall and stopped at her mother's door. She tapped lightly, then was no reply.

"Do you wake her up," Alice said. "Let's explore."

"All right," Alice eagerly agreed. They slipped out, one behind the other like dime novel heroes, to the hallway. The girls leaned over the railing and looked down upon an empty doorway. It was dull and dim, the sanctuary of perpetual twilight. Still green palms in greater numbers ranged themselves with rather regularity, one at the base of the column. Heavy green benches, that no one ever came to sit upon, were between a solemn parrot perched back and forth on the back of a bench.

Some one had been at breakfast. The two girls looked curiously down at the little table to see what sort of breakfast these people would have. Coffee, smoking in the cup, some funny little twisted rolls, a box of cigarettes, a newspaper—that seemed to be all. But whoever it was had eaten and gone.

A fountain splashed in the center of the court, choking like a child with the whooping-cough, then spluttering out again. Two love-making pigeons strutted along the coping with their peculiar "coo-coo-coo." The parrot nearly burst his throat trying to imitate, then scolded at them.

"Just like some of those queer old places that Balzac writes about," Alice whispered as if she were afraid to talk aloud. "Aren't you glad we came?"

"Yes; but it doesn't look like the same place we came to last night; I'm all turned around."

Alice glanced at her hair hands, and sprang up. "I've left my rings, let me run and get them." She darted back to their room, leaving Anita to wander aimlessly around the balcony.

At the head of the stair Anita stopped and leaned on the rail again, watching the fountain. She had much to think about, and this was a very quiet place.

Without meaning to listen she became conscious of a mumbering of voices, somewhere down the stairs it was such a queerly constructed house, so arched and vaulted, so full of baffling echoes that she became curious to know where the sounds really came from. At first she thought they came from directly across the court, out of that queer little passage-way which looked as though it might lead to a crypt. Then the sounds seemed to be right at her feet, directly underneath.

There was a little room at the foot of the stair, Anita could see that the member? Oh!" Her face lighted. She stepped to the what-not and picked up the missing rings from a couch shelf.

"I hid them here last night, and forgot. But I was so excited last night that I could not remember anything."

They went out through the hall to the balcony again; but Anita was very silent.

Monsieur Victor had settled down to his interrupted breakfast in the court, reading a paper, lazily enjoying his morning coffee and cigarettes.

Anita gave a quick gasp as two Brazilian monkeys scampered out from underneath a bench.

"Toi, Mim; toi, Pietro," the Frenchman called, and both his obedient pets cuddled in his lap.

Alice's eyes wandered about expectantly, as if a bird of paradise, or even an elephant, might suddenly appear from somewhere else. It was possible for anything to happen in such a place as this.

The two girls went slowly down the stairs. Stripes of gilt peeled from the moldy columns; plaster fell from the ceiling, exposing great patches of naked lath. The marble floor of the entry, in alternate squares of black and white, was damp and badly worn. Everything seemed different when the sunshine laid it bare.

"I declare, Anita, I can hardly realize that this is the place where we came in last night!"

Anita nodded, she was looking at the half-open door of that little room, and wondering.

They walked on through the entry, and stood for a moment looking out upon the street.

Old Hippolyte busied himself sweeping the banquet—a sort of guiding tribute that he paid to the eccentricities of their guests. The street itself was quite deserted, the girls gazed up and down door was not shut tightly, the men must be in there. She listened quite negligently as she listened to the fountain or the parrot. Suddenly she started, and grasped the rail. She heard quite plainly, in a loud and angry tone. "But I tell you I won't wait, can't you understand plain English? I must leave New Orleans at once."

Disgusted as it was by the hollow echoes of the house, Anita felt sure that she recognized the voice of Noel Duke.

Then she heard the Frenchman Monsieur Victor—she was sure it was he—"Zat I can not do, monsieur, it would ruin my reputation of my house. Ladies would be afraid to come here, a lady must be always protect."

"But I will pay you—I will pay you more than."

"Bah, what is money to honor?" I laugh monsieur, I laugh at your money."

The men tried to be cautious, Anita could not hear what was said, only a broken sentence or two came up; that was all—not enough for her to understand. But they were talking, talking earnestly!

The Frenchman's voice rose again. "Vair good, you go away, you come to this house no more; zen I say nothing, no one shall ever know."

A door slammed. Anita was still listening to that when Alice called, "Anita, oh, Anita, come here; I can't find my rings anywhere."

The men had gone. Anita saw Monsieur Victor come out of the little room and walk through the entry toward the front.

"Come back here; please come," Alice called again from the room. Puzzled and worried more than she would admit, she went back to her cousin.

"Oh!" Anita exclaimed, and drew back.

At the window of Pedro's Place opposite—the street was very narrow—she saw a man's face pressed close to the pane—a tense, harassed, and anxious face. The eyes were staring straight into hers, and were so like Noel Duke's that they startled her. The face vanished; she must be mistaken. But she could not rid herself of an uncomfortable impression.

"What's the matter?" Alice asked.

"Nothing; maybe we'd better go now and wake aunty," she said, and pulled Alice after her into the entry.

Monsieur Victor did not glance up as they repossessed along the balcony above his head, entered the hall, and knocked at Mrs. Ashton's door—knocked—and knocked again.

"Mother!" Alice called, and no answer came. "Mother!" Alice tried the door; it was locked. "Anita I'm frightened," she whispered.

Anita stepped to the end of the hall and called, "Monsieur Victor!"

The Frenchman came up smiling, with a newspaper in his hand. "What does it, ma'm'selle?"

"My mother did not go out anywhere, did she?" Alice inquired. "Her door is locked; she doesn't answer."

Monsieur Victor looked puzzled, he did not seem to comprehend. Alice rapped louder on the door.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF A FISH Matrimonial Dialogue After One Month of Married Life.

"This fish is bad, Ethel," I said, as I surveyed a piece of ancient-looking plate.

Ethel looked up from her plate with a start. "Bad?" she said. "I think you must be mistaken, Jack."

"Not much room for a mistake here. The fish doth protest too much."

"You have had a bad day downtown, I retorted Ethel, and in consequence are somewhat critical and bad-tempered."

"One doesn't need to be very critical to discover a fact that is so obvious."

"The fish isn't bad, and you have no right to say so. It's a reflection on me."

"Nothing of the sort. It's a reflection on the fish dealer."

"It's a reflection on my housekeeping." And I got three prizes for domestic economy at school and I have studied the subject deeply ever since we were engaged. And here you are finding fault after we have been married only a month! And Ethel burst into tears.

"Well, there is no need to make such a fuss over a small matter."

"It's not a small matter to be found fault with by one's husband. And I thought you so different from other men!"

Here followed another rainstorm: "And I thought you were a deal prettier and had more common sense than the average woman."

Ethel unconsciously ran a rebellious curl into position at this remark.

"You married me simply because you wanted a housekeeper. I can order the fish but I can't order the weather," she moaned as she proceeded to drench a lace-handkerchief. I could not help but notice, with a certain amount of satisfaction that she was one of the very few women who can cry without making their noses red.

"Don't behave like a spoiled child," I said. "Do try and be reasonable."

"The law interferes when a man beats his wife," continued Ethel, "but when he treats her with refined cruelty she has no remedy." And the lace handkerchief went into play again.

"I think I had better leave you to yourself for a short time," I said, "and then, perhaps, when I return you will be clothed in your right mind. I will look in at the club."

Ethel sat bolt upright at the mention of the odious word.

"Club," she said, and her eyes blazed. "Yes, go to the club, stay at the club, live at the club! And may the club fall in upon all those heartless husbands who have deserted their heartbroken wives!"

"A nice, pious wish for a four weeks old wife."

"It's a fate too good for such conduct."

"If during my absence," I said, "you find time hang heavily on your hands, you might read 'Much Ado About Nothing.'"

"Thanks for the advice," retorted Ethel. "Men are not the indispensable creatures they appear to think I shall have no difficulty in occupying my time. I, too, will look in at my club."

"Ethel," I said, sternly, "I was not aware you belonged to a club."

"That's quite likely," she replied in an exasperating tone of voice. "Bella Dashwood belongs to the 'Doves,' and I will look her up this evening. It will be a good opportunity to have my name put down for membership. It is as well to have outside interests when one's husband is merely a lodger."

At this remark I stalked out of the room and closed the door with a deal of energy.

On entering the club I met a fat, selfish bachelor. I am now of the opinion that all bachelors are selfish.

"Looking rather hippy, Carlton," he cried. "Doesn't double harness suit you?" I notice all you newly married men slink back here after a few weeks of matrimonial strife."

I refrained from kicking the animated barrel and passed into the billiard room. After missing a couple of easy carams and nearly slicing a piece of the cloth, I threw the whole business up in disgust and returned home. I wondered how Ethel was enjoying herself at the club. I thought I would just look in her room to make sure that she had gone. The door was open and I entered. There was Ethel, and as she caught sight of me she immediately pushed a book, which I recognized as a learned treatise on cookery, under some cushions. Her eyes were very red and I felt like a brute.

"They keep very good hours at your club," I said.

"O, I didn't go after all; it was too much trouble to change my things and you enjoy yourself?" she asked with formal politeness.

"No; I didn't."

"I trust your capacity for enjoyment has not entirely deserted you."

AWFUL SUFFERING. From Dreadful Pains from Wound on Foot—System All Run Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura.

"Words cannot speak highly enough for the Cuticura Remedies. I am now seventy-two years of age. My system had been all run down. My blood was so bad that blood poisoning had set in. I had several doctors attending me, so finally I went to the hospital where I was laid up for two months. My foot and ankle were almost beyond recognition. Dark blood flowed out of wounds in many places and I was so disheartened that I thought surely my last chance was slowly leaving me. As the foot did not improve, you can readily imagine how I felt. I was simply disgusted and tired of life. I stood this pain, which was dreadful, for six months, and during this time I was not able to wear a shoe and not able to work. Some one spoke to me about Cuticura. The consequences were I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies of one of my friends who was a druggist, and the praise that I gave after the second application: 'beyond description; it seemed a miracle for the Cuticura Remedies took effect immediately. I washed the foot with the Cuticura Soap before applying the Ointment and I took the Resolvent at the same time. After two weeks' treatment my foot was healed completely. People who had seen my foot during my illness and who have seen it since the cure, can hardly believe their own eyes. Robert Schoenhauer, Newburg, N. Y., August 21, 1905."

"Old Man" Libby is one of the best known guide camp keepers in the state of Maine, and for years has been totally blind. Four years ago he carried into Bangor the carcass of a deer, and had it taken to the office of Fish and Game Commissioner Carpenter Libby expressed the wish that the venison be given to the Bangor hospital.

Carpenter wanted to know who killed the deer, and was much surprised when Libby claimed to have been the destroyer.

"Why, Libby," he asked, "how did you, a blind man, manage to kill this deer?"

"Wal, you see," drawled Libby, "I was standing outside my tent yesterday morning, ax in hand, just going to chop a little wood, when I felt this damned critter rushing onto me. I thought 'twas a bear, so I bawled off and soaked him."

The commissioner always has a grin on tap when telling this story, for he has doubts as to who killed the deer.

KAISER'S DIGNITY WAS HURT. Offended by Shoes of One of His Consular Agents.

The enthusiasm of the good Norwegians for Queen Alexandra is the more remarkable as, in the matter of crowned heads, they have some excuse for affecting to be blasé.

The German emperor, of course, is a regular frequenter of the fjords, but he allows no liberties to be taken with his sacred person. On one occasion when the Hohenzollern anchored off a little town, the German consular agent, as in duty bound, went aboard to pay his respects; but, not being possessed of a uniform, it did not appear to him necessary to appear at midday in the comic opera kit of evening dress on board the vessel.

He therefore presented himself in an attire that compromised the official correctness of frock coat by brown boots. His majesty, however, resented the informality, called the attention of the consul general at Bergen to the solecism, and announced his intention of ceasing to honor the place with any further visit.—London P. His Monument. There has been set in a cemetery in Orwell, Oswego county, N. Y., as the memorial of a lumberman, framed of granite and marble, the exact reproduction in miniature of a sawmill in the town of Redfield, which was owned by the deceased.

INSOMNIA CURED. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored Wrecked Nerves to Normal Condition and Good Health Followed.

The sufferer from sleeplessness too often resorts to habit-forming drugs in order to secure the coveted rest. But sleep obtained by the use of opiates is not refreshing, and the benefit is but temporary at best.

Mrs. E. A. Fletcher, of 59 Blodgett street, Manchester, N. H., is living evidence of the truth of this statement. She says: "I received a shock of an apoplectic character. It was so severe that the sight of my right eye was affected, causing me to see objects double. I was confined to my bed about four weeks, at one time being told by the doctor that I could not get well. When I could leave my bed I was in such a nervous state that I could not sleep at night. I would get up and sit on a chair until completely tired out and then go back to bed and sleep from exhaustion."

"I had been under the doctor's care for six weeks when my sister, Miss Loveland, of Everett, persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I began taking the pills with the result that I soon experienced relief. One night soon after taking them I lay awake only a short time and the next night I rested well. From that time I slept well every night and soon got well and strong. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a number of times, and my niece has taken them for weak nerves and poor blood and found them very beneficial."

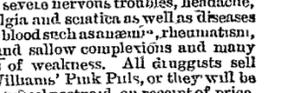

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured many severe nervous troubles, headache, neuralgia and scintilla as well as diseases of the blood such as anæmia, rheumatism, pale and sallow complexion and many forms of weakness. All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

LIFE'S DAILY ROUND

MULTIFARIOUS DUTIES OF THE HOUSEKEEPER.

Much of Work Required is a Labor of Love, But Should Be Lightened Whenever Possible—Reliance on Washing Fluid.

In these days of specialization the housekeeper is about the only one left undisputed "Jack of All Trades." Every boy and girl leaving school has drummed into their heads that they must choose one thing and make the most of it, if they would reach the top.

The women are women, brilliant, advanced ones, who are hotly advocating the revolt of "mothers," claiming that she can do more for her own and the world at large if relieved from the thousand and one petty avocations that go to make up the grand total in the daily round.

On the western coast of the United States, at Monterey, Cal., Mrs. Fish keeps the lamps lighted in the Point Pinos lighthouse. On the eastern coast at South Portland, Me., Mrs. Gordon earns her living by working as a deep-sea diver.

One of the oldest, safest and most favorably known remedies in the world to-day is Brandreth's Pills—a blood purifier and laxative. Being purely vegetable, they can be used by old or young with perfect safety.

A reliable washing fluid is a great lightener of labor. Here is the recipe for one that has been used in the same home for 30 years.

Good Home-Made Paste. A good paste which is yet inexpensive is a necessity in any home where there are children, since many a rainy day can be put in happily with a paste jar, a pair of scissors and an old magazine or two.

Setting the Color. Before a new print, section or gloria goes into the tub set the colors. Dissolve a handful of salt in a tub of cold water and soak about ten minutes.

Laundry Hint. In assorting clothes for washing, use cold water for stains such as fruit-impregnation. Stains that are from fruit or coffee must be treated with boiling water.

To Remove Match Marks. To remove match marks, rub with piece of cut lemon and afterwards with a cloth dipped in clear water. The stain will or slowly disappear.

A MISSOURI WOMAN

Tells a Story of Awful Suffering and Wonderful Relief.

Mrs. J. B. Johnson, of 803 West Hickman street, Columbia, Mo., says:

Following an operation two years ago, dropsy set in, and my left side was so swollen the doctor said he would have to tap out the water.

There was constant pain and a gurgling sensation around my heart, and I could not raise my arm above my head.

The kidney action was disordered and passages of the secretions too frequent. On the advice of my husband I began using Doan's Kidney Pills.

Since using two boxes my trouble has not reappeared. This is wonderful, after suffering two years.

There has been much discussion as to Coffee and Postum lately, so much in fact that some of the coffee importers and roasters have taken to type to promote the sale of their wares.

In the coffee-importers' book a chapter is headed "Coffee as a Medicine," and advocates its use as such.

Every physician knows, and every thoughtful person should know, that habitual use of any "medicine" of the drug-stimulant type of coffee or whiskey quickly causes irritation of the tissues and organs stimulated.

FEARFUL PAINS

SUGGESTIONS HOW WOMEN MAY FIND RELIEF.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely.

Thousands of women have testified in grateful letters to Mrs. Pinkham that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes woman's special pains and irregularities.

It provides a safe and sure way of escape from distressing and dangerous weaknesses and diseases.

Miss Nellie Holmes, of 540 N. Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

Your medicine is indeed an ideal medicine for women. I suffered misery for years with painful periods, headaches, and bearing-down pains.

Mrs. Tillie Hart, of Larimore, N. D., writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

I might have been spared many months of suffering and pain had I only known of the efficacy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

manhood and womanhood, whose faces have become deformed or whose expression is unnatural or unpleasant, because they have no knowledge of the improvement which could be made by a competent Dentist.

The results of irregular teeth are that they mar the appearance of the individual, interfere with clearness of speech, impair the ability to masticate the food thoroughly, and by reason of their crowded or abnormal position afford favorable lodgment for food particles and thereby induce decay.

When a child presents itself I study the features and the irregularities and oral deformities. I look at the child's face and then at its profile, and endeavor to ascertain if possible, what facial change will be brought about by any corrective art that may be applied to the case. In my judgment more is lost than gained by the removal of teeth for the correction of irregularity and should never be done, except, possibly in very rare cases. I consider it possible to take any person

I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief.
