WASN'T IT SIMPLY AWFUL?

TO THINK ARTHUR BIRD HELPED IMPROVE STATE PROPERTY.

Enemies are Hard Up for Knocking Material.

Enemies of Arthur Bird are searching the state with a fine-toothed rake to find some error he has committed and the latest one is that while he was clerk of the Agricultural College board he signed the contract to supply Oakwood with water as authorized by the board of trustees. He happened at the same time to be a part owner in the said Oakwood plant.

It is a great big "mountain out of a mole hill" and about the smallest of the mean dirty attacks brought against Bird by certain enemies of the governor. Of this last deal President Snyder of the Agricultural College says:

President Snyder Says It is All Right.

"I am strongly of the impression that it was all threshed out while the matter was pending in the board, for there were two members who opposed the whole plan from the beginning and there were lawyers on the board. The matter was discussed in several sessions of the board. It was a great advantage to the college, for we were in need of dormitories and residences. Seven or eight professors and a large number of students now reside or are lodged on that property and cutting them off suddenly would hurt them also."

"The supplying of water works no harm to the college. They get water but they pay well for it. Both the Delta and Oakwood schemes benefited us by giving us accommodations and the development of the Angell property out here might do the same."

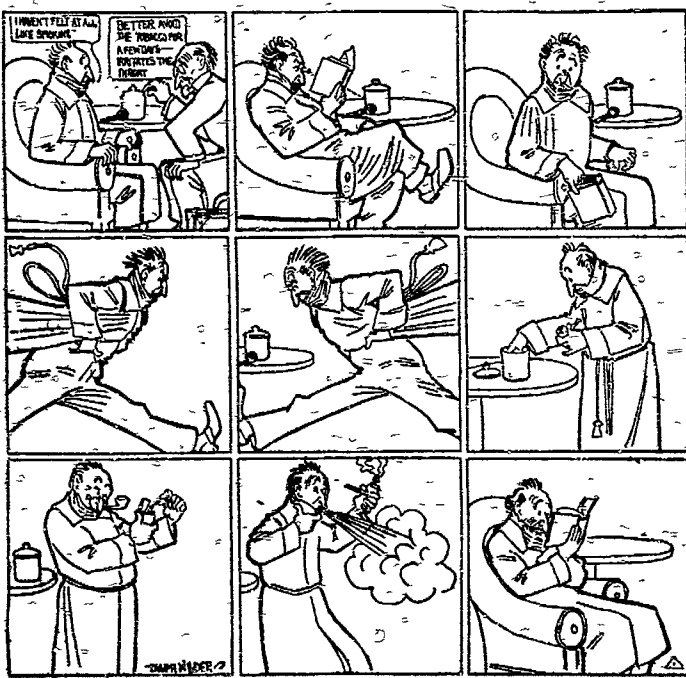

Cahill Says Atty.-Gen. Bird is Wrong.

Judge Edward Cahill, former justice of the supreme court, who drew up the contract between the Oakwood owners and the college, contends that "it is legal in every way and that A. C. Bird is legally and morally blameless in the matter. Judge Cahill differs with Atty.-Gen. Bird at every point. Mr. Bird acted as secretary of the board and was merely an amicus curiae, having the same rights as a clerk of the senate of the house. He violated no law whatever and can neither be prosecuted or sued."

Back of all this endeavor to make trouble for Bird may be found among other things some of the adulterated food people whom Bird has shut out of Michigan and his removal as Dairy & Food Commissioner might mean a triumph for them.

Stegar—Allmendinger.

The people of Northville were very much surprised to learn of the marriage of Miss Fern Allmendinger, one of Northville's popular teachers, to Mr. Phil Stegar, a train dispatcher on the D. J. & C., at Ypsilanti last week. The best wishes of the bride's friends here go with them.

Nacker—Maass.

The marriage of Mr. George Nacker of Farmington and Miss Ida Maass of Farmington occurred Tuesday afternoon at the German Evangelical parsonage, Rev. A. Martin, pastor of the church, performing the ceremony. They were attended by the groom's brother, Rudolph Nacker, and Miss Emma Pauline. Mr. and Mrs. Nacker left for Detroit where they will remain for a few days after which they will be at home to their friends in the Whipple house on Main street. They are both well known in Farmington having lived there all of their lives and the best wishes of a host of friends go with them.

New Officers Elected.

The Northville Woman's Club held its annual and closing meeting for the club year in the library last Friday afternoon, electing officers for the year as follows:

President—Narcia H. Dubuar
Vice Pres.—Eleanor S. Thompson
Sec.—Elizabeth D. Wheeler
Treas.—Sophia L. Benton
Board of directors—Emma Johnson, Mary Power, Mary Ambler, Alice Jerome, Sarah Parsons.

Delegate to state federation, Minnie Hutton, alternate, Grace Gladling.

The business meeting was followed by a social hour, refreshments being served.

Timlin—Holmes.

The marriage of Miss Susie Holmes of this place and Mr. T. Richard Timlin of Detroit was solemnized Saturday afternoon, April 6th, in Detroit and was a great surprise to Northville people.

Mrs. Timlin has been a resident of Northville the past seven years, six of which she has been employed in the millinery store of Mrs. G. A. Timham. She is well known here and has many friends, who wish her many years of happiness and prosperity. The happy couple expect to make Detroit their home.

Cook—Way.

A very pretty and quiet wedding occurred at the home of Mrs. Alice Way in Farmington Tuesday evening when her youngest daughter, Anna M., was united in marriage to Mr. Fred L. Cook of the firm of F. L. Cook & Co. of that place. At about 7:30 o'clock standard time the bridal party took their places beneath a large white bell and Rev. Charles Collins, pastor of the Methodist church, performed the ceremony, using the ring service, in the presence of about thirty relatives and friends. The bride was attended by Miss Lulu L. Grace and M. T. Murray of Lansing acted as best man.

The house was very tastefully decorated in white and green. After congratulations had been extended to the happy couple a dainty wedding supper was served.

The groom has been a resident of Farmington all of his life while the bride has lived there the past four years. They have a host of warm friends who extend to them heartiest congratulations. They were the recipients of many valuable and beautiful presents.

After a short wedding trip to Jackson, Lyons, Owosso, Lansing and Detroit Mr. and Mrs. Cook will be at home to their friends in Farmington.

Found a Few Million.

The state tax commission has done a good stroke of business for the state during the past few weeks by having representatives of the commission examine the mortgage records of counties in Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin adjacent to Michigan. This work has resulted in the uncovering of fully $2,500,000 worth of real estate mortgages which are taxable in Michigan. These mortgages are the property of residents of Michigan who adopted the expedient of loaning their money outside of this state in the hope of escaping taxation. Records of these mortgages will be sent by the commission to the assessing officers of the districts in which the owners reside. The commission is supplying local assessing officers with much valuable information this year.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our appreciation for the aid and sympathy extended and for the beautiful flowers sent during our sad bereavement.

SEYMOUR L. BROWN,
ALMA GIBSON.

Dodge—Delmeter.

Mr. Joshua Dodge of Novi township and Mrs. Sarah Delmeter of Jackson were married at the latter place Friday, March 29, and after enjoying a short wedding trip returned to Northville Wednesday.

In their earlier days they had been sweethearts but for some cause or other had become separated each marrying some one else. Finding each other single again they decided to spend their remaining years together. May joy and happiness be theirs.

A Complete Surprise.

Mrs. Rose Little was very much surprised Friday evening by about twenty of her neighbors and friends coming in to remind her that she had that day passed the sixty-first mile stone in life's journey. At first she could do nothing but stare at the people in blank amazement, but when it dawned upon her what it all meant, she was equal to the occasion and proceeded to entertain her guests in a royal manner.

Several games of cards were played after which Mrs. Rayson, in a few well chosen words, presented Mrs. Little with a beautiful table cloth, a gift from those present. A very enjoyable evening was had.

Victory for the People.

Governor Warner and the state legislature secured a great victory for the people last week in getting through the senate the two cent railroad fare bill and by a vote of 30 to 17 securing a special hearing for the measure in the house this week without reference to the railroad committee, whom the members feared might not be friendly to the measure. The line up in both senate and house warrants the conclusion that all the measures advocated by Governor Warner in the people's interest will be passed.

A Treat In Store.

There is a probability of Northville having an opportunity to see Davies, the Handcuff King, at an early date. An effort will be made to have the local police secure special handcuffs with which to trap Davies who claims to be able to release himself from any handcuffs made.

An idea as to his cleverness may be gained from the fact that he recently released himself from six pairs of handcuffs coupled to a pair of legirons in the space of eight minutes. In addition he extricated himself from two cells in one of Detroit's police stations. No one knows how he does it, but we may have an opportunity to at least see him go through the motion. It is expected that he will appear in Northville the latter part of next week. Don't miss seeing him.

School Notes.

[By a Pupil.]

The Kindergarten has six new pupils.

There are thirteen pupils present in the Second grade out of thirty-nine.

The mason work has been begun on the foundation of our new school-house.

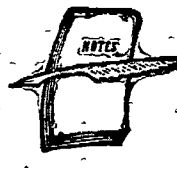

The grades are not able to do much work there being so many absent.

Miss Allmendinger, teacher of the Fourth grade, was married during the spring vacation.

Miss Layton, teacher of the Eighth grade, promised her pupils that which ever class got the highest average department from February until the spring vacation, she would give a treat. The A class won, the score being eighty-seven to eighty-five. The treat is not to be given until those absent on account of sickness have returned.

SAPHRONIA LAGODNE'S PLIGHT AND CRUEL SUFFERING IN A SWAMP.

A RESPECTABLE FARMER

Demented Woman Had Started to Walk to Florida—Story of a Wretched Girl.

Too Cold in Detroit.

After a terrible experience during which she had been left to die alone in the freezing atmosphere of a swamp near South Rockwood by the man who had wronged her, Saphronia Lagodne, the demented 32-year-old woman who left Detroit on the 24th inst. to walk to Florida, because "it is too cold here," was found early in the morning of the 5th lying on the swampy grass, her bare feet submerged ankle deep in water, and her thin clothing saturated with ooze. Her plight was brought about, it is alleged, by a man who had been regarded as a respectable farmer.

The fact that the woman is in a demented state of mind, and has been since her husband deserted her seven years ago, adds to her pitiable condition. Once she was a bright woman. After a happy girlhood she married a widower with three children. He left her after living with her two months, and since then has not been seen or heard from. She had to labor for a living and her sad matrimonial mistake preyed upon and weakened her mind.

The unfortunate woman left home early in the morning as usual with her trunk box on her way to her work in a box factory. No sooner had she gotten out of sight of home than one of her attacks of dementia came on and she made up her mind that Detroit was too cold, and that she would walk to Florida. She took the Lake Shore to Trenton and then struck down what is known as the "U. S." turnpike. She frequently retraced her steps to find a dry place to rest. Finally a man drove up and asked her to ride and a short time after overtook a man who was introduced as the driver's brother. The three rode she says, until she thought she would freeze, and then pulled up at a saloon. One of the men went inside and a little later returned with a whisky bottle and asked her if she did not want to drink. She drank several times until her brain began to whirl and after more riding they stopped at a shed, where the man unhitched his horse and carried her inside. There they stayed all night.

The next morning just before noon the farmer brought out the horse and they started again. He told her he would take her to his home and give her something to eat and wear. They stopped at some house in which were evidences of children and a woman but none was seen. She was given nothing to eat. "I almost starved but he kept saying that he would get something pretty soon, and I waited," she explains.

The victim was given more whisky and again became intoxicated and then put into the wagon and driven toward the lake. Just how long they drove, or where they were, the woman does not know. At last they came to the swamp. They drove in some distance and then the farmer ordered her farther where the horses could get on. She was walking ahead and when she turned around her guide had disappeared.

The unfortunate woman was found by a boy's dog who brought help to rescue her.

Foul Play.

The finding of a pair of brass knuckles near the body of John Dell who was found dead in the woods near Grayling has led to the belief that he was murdered. Dell had considerable money when last seen, two years ago, but his pockets were empty when his body was found.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that Dell met death in some unknown manner.

The deceased leaves a son, Marshall Dell, of Flint, and two daughters one of whom is assistant postmaster here.

Only Intoxicated.

That plain, blunt, Anglo-Saxon word, drunk, used for ages to describe a man's condition when he had imbibed too freely, is henceforth tabooed in St. Joseph's city council. In its stead will be used the milder Latin word "intoxicated." The chief of police has used the word drunk in his reports, and Ald. Wilson said the bluntness of the word "rasped harshly against the nerves," so he made a motion that henceforth the word intoxicated be used in all reports and in all discussions at the council board.

Prisoners in the Flint jail settled the race question when Jack Bradley, colored, arrested on a charge of breaking into a saloon, was given a flogging by Johnson, alleged horse thief.

The total vote on the constitutional amendment relative to convict labor made known Wednesday night, shows a negative majority vote in Muskegon of 1,350. The fight against the passing of the amendment was centered in that city as well as in Detroit and Grand Rapids and the result shows a systematic canvass of the negro unions.

Voting machines were a success in the recent election and the old blank, ballot, will probably be seen no more to Saginaw.

Fear of old age and poor health caused Morris Hochman, aged 77 years, to end his life by swallowing carbolic acid.

The Pontiac, Oxford & Northern railroad, with its 160 miles of track between Pontiac and Cassville, Mich., do so bad during the past year, according to the account of Receiver Lombardy. The disbursements were $161,652.01 receipts $127,649.98 and it was on hand of $13,842.25 as a balance of $27,774.65.

OUR OLD FOLKS.

Michigan's Showing of Old Age Ranking From 70 to 110.

Just when a person leaves off being young and qualifies for entrance into the class of old folks is a question too dangerous for detailed discussion. Some authorities put a separating dash after the age of 65, and perhaps this will answer in the absence of any official ruling. Proceeding on the septuagenarian basis, it is to be remarked that the state of Michigan is rich in ancients; the days of the inhabitants of the Wolverine state are long in the land and Michigan must be a mighty healthful place to live in. The report of the last census shows this very enviable record:

|                    | Men.   | Women. |
|--------------------|--------|--------|
| 70 to 80 years old | 29,703 | 25,490 |
| 80 to 90           | 7,190  | 6,551  |
| 90 to 100          | 487    | 535    |
| Over 100           | 24     | 35     |

From which it will be seen there are more very old women than very old men, and more moderately old men than moderately old women.

Until another claimant shows, Bernard McNally, of Clinton, must be referred to as Michigan's oldest living resident. Mr. McNally, who celebrated last month his 110th birthday, says he would rather base his claim to fame on his ability as a pedro player than as a centenarian. He is acknowledged to be one of the best players of this diverting game in the section. Recently, he was one of the guests at a pedro party given by Mrs. Mary Sullivan, and the way he polished up the other contestants was sure proof that the faculties do not always depart with the weight of the century mark.

It was just twenty-one years ago April 7, 1886, that the worst snowstorm visited Flint. The unusual fall of snow was especially remarkable, inasmuch as on one side of Saginaw street it was seven feet deep, while on the opposite side not a flake fell.

Two years ago Chris Hemminger, a Saginaw saloonman, died from heart disease behind his bar Saturday night, George M. Hemminger, aged 51 years, a brother, died exact in the same manner. John P. Hemminger, of the Hemminger, of Detroit, is another brother.

THE ARGUMENTS OF COUNSEL

DELMAS MAKES THE EFFORT OF HIS LIFE TO SECURE THAW'S ACQUITTAL.

VERDICT NEAR AT HAND

The Long Fight to Save Harry Thaw Is Drawing to a Close With a Rhetorical Flourish.

Delmas' Address.

When the Thaw trial was resumed Monday Justice Fitzgerald overruled District Attorney Jerome's formal protest against the confirmation of the report of the commission in lunacy, which declared Thaw sane. The justice signed the report and ordered that the trial proceed.

Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton was called as the last witness, but the district attorney objected to his testifying at this stage of the case. The objection was sustained and then both the defense and the people announced that they rested Court then adjourned until 2 p. m.

It was a spectacular moment when Delmas rose to address his final plea to the 12 men who are to pass upon the fate of Harry Thaw. No stage setting could have been better than were the surroundings in which the attorney found himself when, with a bow to the court and to the jury, he began his argument, which promised to be as interesting as any of the many sensational features that have marked the development of this trial. The court room was packed to the doors and the corridors crowded.

Every member of the Thaw family and most of the alienists who have testified either for or against Thaw, were present. A good many lawyers, who have been waiting for this opportunity to hear the widely-heralded pleader from the Pacific coast also were on hand.

Mr. Delmas began his appeal by quoting from an utterance of District Attorney Jerome during the trial. He said:

"We have no fight, if the real facts were known, to be here trying this man, and would be absolutely prohibited by the statutes."

Had you heard these words? continued the attorney "from some irresponsible babbling, instead of from an official charged with a great public duty, had they been spoken in a place where idle men resort to indulge in idle talk, instead of in a tribunal where justice presides in solemnity, had the occasion on which they were uttered been a trivial discussion on some insignificant topic instead of a debate the issue of which is life or death and had you, after so hearing them, heard the same man make an appeal to prove that the law demanded forfeit of the life of the man about whom they were spoken these words might not have filled you with amazement."

It is to prevent such a conclusion in this case," went on Mr. Delmas, "that I have undertaken the performance of the onerous task before me. In this task it will be my duty to give you all the help in my power in deciding the question before you."

Mr. Delmas declared he asked a verdict of acquittal under the written laws of the State of New York. He then gave a brief review of the life of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. He declared that Stanford White had committed a felony in his assault upon Evelyn.

In opening his resume of Evelyn's life Mr. Delmas said:

The story is that of two young people whom fate by inscrutable decree had determined to link together, to be united and walk through life in the company of one another. The story covers only a few years. It is the saddest, most mournful and most tragic which the tongue of man has ever uttered or ear of man ever heard. Let me begin briefly with her story—one filled with incidents with which a volume might overflow, or which might be written by the vivid imagination of the most gifted novelist.

The first years of her childhood saw her lose her father and natural protector and left her in charge of a mother who early manifested that character of frivolity and extravagance which were to lead to such deplorable consequences."

Forged Ballots.

The International Policyholders' committee, in a statement made public by Manager George B. Scrugham, presents affidavits to support the committee's charges of fraud in the recent insurance elections. Scrugham gives the names of certain policyholders whose ballots are said to have been forged. Many of these ballots were counted for the administration ticket in the Mutual, if not in the New York Life.

Representatives of the policyholders' committee have been gathering these affidavits for weeks and it is said that cases of forged ballots have been uncovered in more than half the states in the union. The committee will use this information as basis for civil and criminal proceedings.

District Attorney Jerome, it is understood, will consider the matter as soon as the Thaw trial is out of the way.

The farmer members of the house have organized a "Farmers' club." The club starts out with 30 members, and hopes to secure more from the senate.

Arthur Morris, who killed Lewis Skinner, of Wayland township, at Gull Lake recently, by striking him a blow between the eyes with his fist, has been bound over to the May term of the circuit court for trial, charged with manslaughter.

A large force is at work placing what is called the largest single span bridge in Michigan across the Tittabawassee river in Midland. It measures 600 feet.

Col. Booth, U. S. A., inspected Co. G, Houghton Light Infantry, at the Amphidrome. The boys in blue showed up exceptionally fine to the searching eye of the regular army officer.

EVELYN'S MOTHER.

Delmas' Scathing View of Harry Thaw's Mother-in-Law.

In referring to Evelyn Thaw's mother in his argument before the Thaw jury, Delmas launched into a merciless attack on Evelyn Thaw's mother. He first recalled to the jury that in the early part of the trial he said he would not cast any reflections upon her.

"When I said this, gentlemen," Delmas continued, "I wish you to bear in mind that three things had not yet developed, that after this crime had been committed upon this girl, the mother received $300 a month; that the mother had given to the district attorney a written statement by which he might torture the soul of her daughter, by which he might leave her alone in the world—her father dead, her mother unnatural, her husband executed."

"When I learned that every shaft aimed at her heart came from a quiver supplied by her mother; when I learned that it was the mother who was pointing out the sore and tender spots for the district attorney to attack, and when I learned that the poor babblings of a girl in school—her diary—had been furnished by the mother that they might be used against her daughter, I retracted, as I retract now, the statements which I made in behalf of the mother."

An unnatural mother that she was to desert her girl and leave her the victim of this gray-haired man; to receive for a year the wages of her daughter's downfall; to wear diamonds bought with such money as this, and then to come now in the hour of her daughter's supreme agony to steal away the life of her only protector."

"Why, gentlemen of the jury, a beast protects her young. I have even seen a little bird watching over her brood of young, ruffle her brave little feathers until she was twice her natural size and fly straight at a pointer who had come running up, until the dog stood abashed and respected her motherhood."

"Oh, shame upon this woman. Not content with what she had already done she would take away the life of the one human being who came as an angel into the life of this girl on the downward path, who told the girl that whatever she might be in the eyes of a sinful and debauched world, he knew her soul was pure."

WRIGHT'S CRIME.

The people are awaiting with interest the trial of Benjamin C. Wright, which begins on April 15 at Denver. Wright is the former Benton Harbor man, who is accused of poisoning his wife and baby daughter on the night of February 24 last and his trial is expected to prove one of the most sensational in the history of Colorado's jurisprudence. Of the fact that Wright is the murderer of his little family there is little doubt in the minds of the authorities. The man himself confessed the deed at one time but later, on the advice of his attorney, retracted the confession, claiming that it had been wrung from him by the chief of police by threats of violence.

The mystery lies in the method chosen by the murderer to administer the deadly dose and the particular poison that he selected. Expert toxicologists who have examined the bodies of the murdered woman and child have been unable to find the slightest trace of poison in either, yet it is practically certain that some drug was the means taken by Wright to carry out his fiendish plans.

At one time in his checkered career, Wright studied medicine in Chicago, and fellow students claim to remember that he was fond of discussing effects of various kinds of poison.

The murder evidently was planned with such diabolical cunning and executed with such cold-blooded cruelty that interest was aroused to a high pitch. There were even threats of violence toward Wright at one time. According to the belief of the police, supported by strong circumstantial evidence, Wright's sole motive in doing away with his wife and child was to enable him to devote the small sum of money that he gave them for their support to Stella Good, a notorious girl of the streets, with whom he is said to have infatuated.

Scrub Woman Took It.

The mystery surrounding the theft of $173,000 from the United States sub-treasury in Chicago has been cleared.

The alleged thief is said to be a negro scrub woman whom the secret service officers have taken charge of and are endeavoring to get from her some trace of the missing money. The clue to the woman is said to have been obtained from the display of a $1,000 bill by a negro in a saloon.

A search warrant has been issued and the secret service officers will search the home of the washerwoman, but they do not hope apparently for much success.

Oil Will Be Higher.

Attorney-General Bonaparte, in conversation with a well-known public man, gave the following side light on the Standard Oil cases now occupying attention in the federal courts in Chicago:

A man prominently identified with Standard Oil's interests in litigation informed the attorney general that if the corporation he represents be convicted and the minimum penalty be imposed it will mean fines aggregating to $8,000,000. If the maximum penalty be imposed it will mean fines mounting toward $130,000,000. The price of oil would be raised, he said, so that dividends would not suffer.

Isabella county went "wet" by 933 majority.

Prompt efforts of a physician saved Cecil and Grace Richardson, of Traverse City from probable death from ptomaine poisoning. They ate canned tongue and were taken seriously ill.

An Adamless Eden has been organized by women of Bay City who hope to enlist fully 2,000 members known as the Bay City Civic league, to improve the appearance of the city. Unightly lawns, old fences and tumble-down buildings will be cleaned and put in proper shape. Men are not eligible for membership.

"MY RIGHT EYE OFFENDS ME."

Next day Langdon's stocks wavered, going up a little, going down a little, closing at practically the same figures at which they had opened. Then I sprang my sensation—that Langdon and his particular clique, though they controlled the Textile Trust, did not own so much as one-fiftieth of its voting stock. True "captains of industry" that they were, they made their profits not out of dividends, but out of side schemes that absorbed about two-thirds of the earnings of the Trust, and out of gambling in its bonds and stocks. I said in conclusion:

"The largest owner of the stock is Walter G. Edmunds, of Chicago—an honest man. Send your voting proxies to him, and he can take the Textile company away from those now plundering it."

As the annual election of the Trust was only six weeks away, Langdon and his clique were in a panic. They rushed into the market and bought frantically, the public bidding against them. Langdon himself went to Chicago to reason with Edmunds—that is, to try to find out at what figure he could be bought. And so on day after day, I faithfully reported to the public the main occurrences behind the scenes. The Langdon attempt to regain control by purchases of stock failed. He and his allies made what must have been to them appalling sacrifices, but even at the high prices they offered, comparatively little of the stock appeared.

"I've caught them," said I to Joe—the first time, and the last, during that campaign that I indulged in a boast.

"If Edmunds sticks to you I'll be cautious," Joe said. But Edmunds did not. I do not know at what price he sold himself. Probably it was pitifully small; surely usually snatches the instant bait jingles its nose. But I do know that my faith in human nature got its severest shock.

Fortunately, Edmunds had held out, or rather Langdon had delayed in purchasing him long enough for me to gain my main point. The uproar over the Textile Trust had become so great that the national department of commerce dated not refuse an investigation and I straightaway began to spread out in my daily letters the facts of the trust's enormous earnings and of the shameful sources of those earnings.

In the midst of the adulation, of the blares upon the trumpets of fame that saluted my waking and were wanted to me as I fell asleep at night—in the midst of all the tumult, I was often in a great and brooding silence, longing for her, now with the unperious energy of passion, and now with the sad ache of love. What was she doing? What was she thinking? Now that Langdon had again played her false for the old price, with what eyes was she looking into the future?

Alva, settled in a West Side apartment not far from the ancestral white elephant, telephoned, asking me to come. I went, because she could and would give me news of Anita. But as I entered her little drawing-room, I said: "It was curiosity that brought me. I wished to see how you were in stall."

"Isn't it nice and small?" cried she. "I like it. I haven't the slightest difficulty in finding each other—as people so often have in the big houses. And it was Bill this and Billy that, and what Billy said and thought and felt—ago before they were married, she had called him William, and had declared 'Bill' to be the most offensive combination of letters that ever fell from human lips."

"I needn't ask if you are happy," said I presently, with a dismal failure at looking cheerful. I can't stay but a moment. I added, and if I had obeyed my feelings I'd have risen up and taken myself and my pain away from surroundings as hateful to me as a summer sunrise in a death-chamber."

"Oh!" she exclaimed in some confusion. "Then excuse me." And she hastened from the room.

I thought she had come to order, or perhaps to bring the tea. The long minutes dragged away until her hand passed. Hearing a rustling in the hall I rose, intending to take leave this instant she appeared. The rustling stopped just outside. I waited a few seconds, cried: "Well I'm off. Next time I want to be alone. I'll know where to come," and advanced to the door. It was not Alva hesitating there it was Anita.

"I beg your pardon," said I, coldly. If there had been room to pass I should have gone. What devil possessed me? Certainly in all our relations I had found her direct and frank, if anything, too frank. Doubtless it was the influence of my associations down town, where for so many months I had been dealing with the "short-circuit" crowd of high finance who would hardly play the same straight game when an win. My long, steady stretch in that stealthy and sinuous company had put me in the state of mind in which it is impossible to credit any human being with a motive that is decent or an action that is not a dead-fall. Thus the obvious transformation in her made no impression on me. Her haughtiness, her coldness, were gone, and with them had gone all that had been least like her natural self—most like the repellent conventional pattern to which her mother and her associates had molded her. But I was saying to myself, "A trap! Langdon has gone back to his wife. She turns to me." And I loved her and hated her.

"Never," thought I, "has she shown so poor an opinion of me as now."

"My uncle told me day before yesterday that it was not he but you, she said, lifting her eyes to mine. It is inconceivable to me now that I could have misread their honest story; yet I did."

I had no idea your uncle's notion of honor was also eccentric," said I, with a satirical smile that made the blood rush to her face.

"That is unjust to him, she replied earnestly.

"He says he made you no promise of secrecy. And he confessed to me only because he wished to convince me that he had good reason for his high opinion of you."

Really," said I ironically, "and no doubt he found you open wide to conviction—now. This a subtlety to me. She came into the room and seated herself. "Won't you stop, please, for a moment longer?" she said. "I hope that, at least, we can part without bitterness. I understand now that everything is over between us. A woman's vanity makes her believe that a man cares for her die hard. I am convinced now—I assure you, I am. I shall trouble you no more about the past. But I have the right to ask you to hear me when I say that Langdon came, and that I myself sent him away: sent him back to his wife."

"Touching self-sacrifice," said I, ironically.

"No," she replied. "I cannot claim any credit. I sent him away only because you and Alva had taught me how to judge him better. I do not despise him as do you; I know too well what has made him what he is. But I had to send him away."

My comment was an incredulous look and shrug. "I must be going," I said.

"You do not believe me?" she asked. "In my place, would you believe?" replied I. "You say I have taught you. Well, you have taught me, too—for instance, that the years you've spent on your knees in the dusty temple of conventionalism before false gods have made you—fit only for the Langdon sort of thing. You can't learn how to stand erect, and your eyes cannot bear the light."

"I am sorry," she said, slowly, hesitatingly, "that your faith in me died just when I might, perhaps, have justified it. Ours has been a pitiful series of misunderstandings."

"A trap! A trap!" I was warning myself. "You've been a fool long enough. Blacklock. And Alva said: 'Well, Anita, the series is ended now. There's no longer any occasion for our lying or posing to each other. Any arrangements your uncle's lawyers suggest will be made.'"

I was bowing to leave without shaking hands with her. But she would not have it so. "Please!" she said, stretching out her long, slender arm and offering me her hand.

What a devil possessed me that day! With every atom of me longing for her, I yet was able to take her hand and say, with a smile, that was I doubt not as mocking as my tone. By all "The Seven," of course, contrived directly, or indirectly, all but a few of the newspapers with which I had advertised contracts. They also controlled the main sources through which the press was supplied with news—and often and well they had used this control, and surprisingly cautious had they been not so to abuse it that the editors and the public would become suspicious. When my war was at its height, when I was beginning to congratulate myself that the huge magazines of "The Seven" were empty almost to the point at which they must sue for peace on my own terms, all in four days 43 of my 57 newspapers—and they the most important—notified me that they would no longer carry out their contracts to publish my daily letter. They gave as their reason, not the real one, fear of "The Seven," but fear that I would involve them in ruinous libel suits. I who had legal proof for every statement I made; I who was always careful to understate! Next, one press association after another ceased to send out my letter as news, though they had been doing so regularly for months. The public had grown tired of the "sensation," they said.

I countered with a telegram to one or more newspapers in every city and large town in the United States:

"The Seven" are trying to cut the wires between the truth and the public. If you wish my daily letter, telegraph me direct and I will send it at my expense."

The response should have warned "The Seven." But it did not. Under their orders the telegraph companies refused to transmit the letter. I got an injunction. It was obeyed in typical, corrupt corporation fashion—they sent my matter, but so garbled that it was unintelligible. I appealed to the courts. In vain.

To me, it was clear as sin in cloudless noonday sky that there could be but one result of this insolent and despotic denial of my rights and the rights of the people, this public confession of the truth of my charges. I turned everything salable or mortgageable into cash, locked the cash up in my private vaults and waited for the cataclysm.

Thursday—Friday—Saturday. Apparently all was tranquil; apparently the people accepted the Wall Street theory that I was an "exploded sensation." "The Seven" began to preen themselves, the strain upon them to maintain prices, if no less than for three months past, was not notably greater. The crisis would pass, I and my exposures would be forgotten, the routine of reaping the harvests and leaving only the gleanings for the sowers would soon be placidly resumed.

Sunday. Roebuck taken ill as he was passing the basket in the church of which he was the shining light, died at midnight—a beautiful, peaceful death they say, with his daughter reading the Bible aloud and his lips moving in prayer. Some hold that had he lived, the tranquillity would have continued, but this is the view of those who cannot realize that the tide of affairs is no more controlled by the "great men" than is the river led down to the sea by its surface floats, by which we measure the speed and direction of its current. Under that terrific tension, which to the shallow seemed a calm something had to give way. If the dam had not yielded where Roebuck stood guard, it must have yielded somewhere else, or might have gone all in one grand crash.

Monday. You know the story of the artist and his Statue of Grief—how he molded the features a hundred times, always failing, always getting an antichimax, until at last in despair he gave up the impossible and finished the statue with a veil over the face. I have tried again and again to assemble words that would give some not too inadequate impression of that tremendous week in which, with a succession of explosions, each like the crack of doom the financial structure that housed 80,000,000 of people burst collapsed, was engulfed. I cannot I must leave it to your memory or your imagination.

For years the financial leaders, crazed by the excess of power which the people had in ignorance and overconfidence and sloverly good-nature permitted them to acquire, had been tearing out the honest foundations on which alone so vast a structure can hope to rest solid and secure. They had been substituting rotten beams painted to look like stone and iron. The crash had to come—the sooner, the better—when a thing is wrong, each day's delay compounds the cost of righting it. So, with all the horrors of "Wild Week" in mind, all its physical and mental suffering, all its ruin and rotting and bloodshed, I still can insist that I am justly proud of my share in bringing it about. The blame and the shame are wholly upon those who made "Wild Week" necessary and inevitable.

In catastrophes the cry is "Each for himself!" But in a cataclysm, the obvious wise selfishness is generosity, and the cry is, "Stand together, for, singly, we perish." This was a cataclysm. No one could save himself, except the few who, taking my oft-urged advice and following my example, had entered the ark of ready money. Farmer and artisan and professional man and laborer owed merchant, merchant owed banker; banker owed depositor. No one could pay because no one could get what was due him or could realize upon his property. The endless chain of credit that binds together the whole of modern society had snapped in a thousand places. It was to be repaired, instantly and completely. But how—and by whom?

AMERICAN OFFICERS OF HIGH RANK AND OTHERS ENDORSE PE-RU-NA.

Prominent People Recommend the Remedy Pe-ru-na.

Dr. Hartman's World Renowned Catarrh Medicine.

A Remedy for the Grip.
Gen. W. H. Parsons, 925 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes as follows:
"Upon the recommendation of personal friends and many strong testimonials to the efficacy of Peru-na in the treatment of the numerous symptoms of the grip with which I have been affected for four months past, I have been induced to undergo a treatment of this justly celebrated formula.
"I feel a decided change for the better by its use for one week only, especially in toning up the stomach, and a consequent decided effect upon my appetite.
"I therefore feel much encouraged that I am on the road to complete restoration.
"My numerous friends in Texas, where I have had the honor to command a brigade of heretofore cavalry in a four-year war, may accept this voluntary testimonial to the merit of Peru-na from a sense of obligation for its wonderful efficacy."

Pe-ru-na a Good Tonic.
Gen. M. C. Butler, of South Carolina, writes from Washington, D. C., as follows:
"I can recommend Peru-na for dyspepsia and stomach trouble.
"I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved.
"It is indeed a wonderful medicine, and besides a good tonic."

Colds in the Head and Throat.
Chas. W. Bowman, 1st Lieut. and Adj. 4th M. S. M. Cav. Vols., writes from Lanham, Md., as follows:
"Though somewhat averse to patent medicines, and still more averse to becoming a professional affidavit man, it seems only a plain duty in the present instance to add my experience to the columns already written concerning the curative powers of Peru-na.
"I have been particularly benefited by its use for colds in the head and throat.
"I have been able to fully cure myself of a most severe attack in forty-eight hours by its use according to directions.
"I use it as a preventive whenever threatened with an attack.
"Members of my family also use it for like ailments.
"We are recommending it to our friends."

GEN. KIRBY

Gen. A.M. Legg

Recommends Pe-ru-na to the Afflicted.

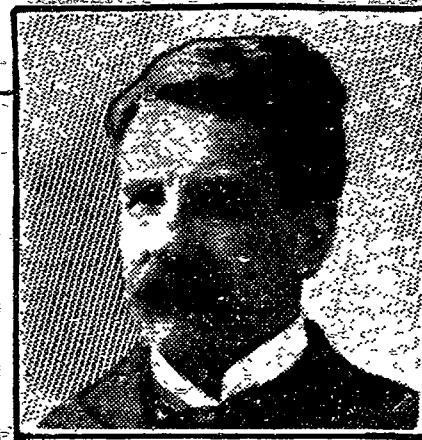

Brig. Gen. D. T. Kirby, Washington, D. C., writes concerning Peru-na, as follows:
"Friends of mine having used your Peru-na catarrh cure with good results, I am impressed with its curative qualities, and can recommend it to those who are afflicted."

An Invigorating Tonic.
Bear-Admiral Hiebhorn, U. S. Navy, Washington, D. C., writes:
"After the use of Peru-na for a short period, I can now cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy to any one who is in need of an invigorating tonic."

For Catarrh of the Stomach.
Gen. W. W. Duffield, Washington, D. C., writes:
"I have used Peru-na in my family and have found it a valuable medicine and take pleasure in recommending it to all who suffer from catarrh of the stomach or who require a tonic of prompt efficacy."

DEAFNESS CAUSED BY CATARRH—RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Gen. A.M. Legg, writes from the Savings Bank Building, Washington, D. C., as follows:
"I take pleasure in endorsing the many recommendations I have heard and read of Peru-na, because of having had knowledge of the truth of so many of them.
"We always tell our sick and ailing friends of the remedies that we have learned, from experience, were good for us when ailing in the same way, and we do it as a duty we feel that we owe them.
"Why is it any the less our duty to advise all the people we can when we know of a good and comparatively inexpensive remedy that makes many cures, and benefits in almost all cases?
"My own little personal experience of being relieved of deafness, caused by a siege of catarrh, warrants me in advising all the afflicted to just try Peru-na."

GEN. YODER

Used Pe-ru-na—Satisfied As to Its Merits—Recommends It to All Sufferers.

Gen. S. S. Yoder, 203 Md. Ave., N. E., Washington, D. C., writes:
"I desire to say that I have found Peru-na to be a wonderful remedy. I only used it for a short time and am thoroughly satisfied as to its merits. I shall gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

When Other Remedies Failed Pe-ru-na Proved Efficacious.

Hon. Geo. W. Honey, National Chaplain U. V. U., Ex-Chaplain 4th Wisconsin Cavalry, Ex-Treas. State of Wisconsin and Ex-Q. Master General State of Texas, G. A. R., writes from 1700 First street, N. E., Washington, D. C., as follows:
"I cannot too highly recommend your preparation for the relief of catarrhal troubles in their various forms.
"Some members of my own family have used it with most gratifying results.
"When other remedies failed, Peru-na proved most efficacious and I cheerfully certify to its curative excellence."

Pe-ru-na, a Standard Treatment For Catarrhal Diseases.

Mr. John C. Nelson, Dayton, Tenn., geologist and mining engineer, while a Captain in the Federal Army during the Civil War, contracted a case of rheumatism. This malady was constant and persistent, inducing the development of other ailments, which also became chronic. After taking a course of Peru-na, Capt. Nelson writes:
"Having been painfully afflicted with chronic rheumatism and the adjunctive complications for many years, and after having received many general and special treatments with only temporary relief, I read your scientific treatise on catarrhal diseases.
"At my request you prescribed a special course of the Peru-na remedies, which I closely followed, and am happy to report that my rheumatism and complicated ailments are subdued, and I feel young again at the age of 69 years.
"Reason will accept your classification of catarrhal diseases as scientific and true, and the Peru-na remedies as a standard treatment for them. I thank you heartily for your skilled and logical advice."

Enjoys Renewed Health and Strength.

New Primary Bill.

The near future will witness another battle royal over an important bit of legislation. This is the Dickin-on bill amending the primary election law. Representative Dickin-on, chairman of the house elections committee, was the author of the present primary law. He wants it amended so as to provide for the nomination of candidates for United States senators by direct vote and also to reduce from 40 to at least 30 per cent of the total, the number of votes the successful candidates for governor and lieutenant governor must have, or else to wipe off entirely the per cent clause so that the candidate receiving the majority vote, the same as in Wayne county, shall be the nominee. Governor Warner will lend his aid in bringing about these meritorious changes when the bill is considered in the house next week. The governor is also in favor of a primary bill for the nomination of all state officers, doing away with all conventions and compelling all parties to use it.

Binder Twine Plant Assured.

Progress is being made in the direction of equipping a plant for the manufacture of binder twine at the Jackson prison. The members of the committees which recently inspected the plant at the prison at Michigan City, Indiana, are enthusiastic in their support of the project, being confident that it will be a money maker for the state and a saving to farmers who purchase its product. The bill making an appropriation for the machinery and for funds with which to carry on the business has been favorably reported by the state prison committee and is now being considered by the committee on appropriation in the senate.

Baptist Church Notes.

(By a Member.)

There was a good turn out at the B. Y. P. U. business meeting Wednesday evening at the parsonage.

Our Sunday school has been unusually small for a couple of Sundays owing to the measles, but we hope to see all the scholars back soon.

The subject of the sermon Sunday morning will be, "God's Message to the Church of First Love." In the evening the subject will be, "The Christian Sabbath—its Use and Abuse."

Miss Nellie Yaba gave us an excellent talk about Burma Sunday evening. The storm no doubt kept many away, but there was a good audience and all enjoyed the service very much.

The ladies will have their next Birthday party April 24 at Mrs. VanZile's. Any ladies having birthdays in April are requested to give their names to Mrs. J. M. Burgess or Mrs. A. Vradenburg.

Methodist Church Notes.

(By the Pastor.)

The First Intermediate class, "His Helpers," will hold their banquet a week from tonight, April 19.

Public worship next Sunday both morning and evening at the usual hours. The pastor will occupy the pulpit. All made welcome.

The Home Missionary meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ferguson Tuesday afternoon, April 16. Members please bring mite boxes.

One of our young ladies led the Epworth League meeting last Sunday evening. She did well! It is hopeful and promising for our homes and country when the young are found on the side of Christ and the church.

Sunday school service follows the close of the morning public worship, about 11.30. Parents are invited to come and bring their children. We endeavor to do the best possible for the moral, intellectual and spiritual life of the young.

It is very gratifying to see the interest that some of our Sunday schools are taking in sending the gospel to those deprived of it. One of our schools in Detroit gave for missions on Easter Sunday the magnificent sum of $935 and another gave more than $300. It is well for the child when educated to give to the cause of God.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. Spencer Clark on Tuesday last. Since their last meeting the president of the society, Mrs. W. H. Ambler, has lost her mother by death. The members of the society felt deeply for their president in the great loss she had sustained. Love and sympathy are beautiful qualities in one's life.

SERIAL STORY
THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES
By MEREDITH NICHOLSON
Author of "THE MAIN CHANCE," "ZELDA DANKER," Etc.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.
I shrugged my shoulders and turned toward Glenarm. My grandfather had left me a cheerful legacy of distrust among my neighbors, the result, probably, of importing foreign labor to work on his house. The surly Morgan had intimated as much; but it did not greatly matter. I had not come to Glenarm to cultivate the rustics, but to fulfill certain obligations laid down in my grandfather's will. I was, so to speak, on duty, and I much preferred that the villagers should let me alone. Comforting myself with these reflections I reached the wharf where I saw Morgan sitting with his feet dangling over the water smoking a pipe.

I nodded in his direction, but he feigned not to see me. A moment later he jumped into his boat and rowed out upon the lake.
When I returned to the house Bates was at work in the kitchen. This was a large square room with heavy timbers showing in the walls and low ceiling. There was a great fireplace in an enormous chimney, fitted with a crane and hobs; but for practical purposes a small range was provided. Bates received me placidly.

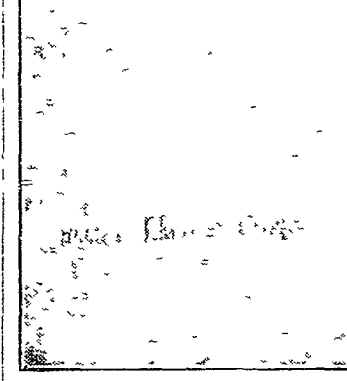

"Yes; it's an unusual room, sir. Mr. Glenarm copied it from an old kitchen in England. He took quite a pride in it. It's a pleasant place to sit in the evening, sir."
He showed me the way below, where I found that the cellar extended under every part of the house and was divided into large chambers. The door of one of them was of heavy oak, bound in iron with a barred opening at the top. A great iron hasp with a heavy padlock and grided area windows gave further the impression of a cell, and I fear that at this as many other things in the curious house. I swore if I did not laugh—thinking of the money my grandfather had expended in calculating his whims. The room was used I noted with pleasure, as a depository for potatoes.

In another of these rooms I found a curious collection of lanterns of every conceivable description grouped on shelves, and next door to this apartment was another, stone con filled with brass candlesticks of many old designs.
I returned to the main floor and sought the comfort of the library where I smoked a pipe over a tedious chapter in an exceedingly dull book on "Norman Revivals and Influences." Then I went out, assuring myself that I should get steadily to work in a day or two.
Bates was soberly chopping wood at a rough pile of timber at the rear of the house. His industry had already impressed me. He had the quiet ways of an ideal serving man.

"Well, Bates, you don't intend to let me freeze to death, do you? There must be enough wood in the pile there to last all winter."
"Yes, sir, I am just cutting a little more of the hickory," said Mr. Glenarm, always preferring it to beech or maple.
I turned toward the unfinished tower in the meadow, from which a windmill pumped water to the house. The iron frame was not wholly covered with stone, but material for the remainder of the work lay scattered at the base. I went on through the wood to make and inspected the boat house. When I followed the pebbly shore to the stone wall where it backed the line of the school grounds. The wall I observed, was of the same solid character here as along the road. I tramped beside it reflecting that my grandfather's estate, in the heart of the Republic would some day give the foreigner complaints and as have done in America.

and, hugging the wall close, ran toward the lake. Instantly the pursuer broke into view. It was Bates, evidently much excited and with an ugly cut across his forehead. He carried a heavy club, and, after listening for a moment for sounds of the enemy, he hurried after the caretaker.
It was not my row, though I must say it awakened my curiosity. I straightened myself out, threw my legs over the school side of the wall and lighted a cigar, feeling cheered by the opportunity the stone barricade offered for observing the world.
As I looked off toward the little church I found two other actors appearing on the scene. A girl stood in a little opening of the wood, talking to a man. Her hands were thrust into the pockets of her covert coat; she wore a red tam-o'-shanter, that made a bright bit of color in the wood. They were not more than a dozen yards away; but a wild growth of young maples lay between us. They profiles were toward me, and the tones of the girl's voice reached me clearly as she addressed her companion. He wore a clergyman's high waistcoat, and I assumed that he was the chaplain whom Bates had mentioned. I am not by nature an eavesdropper, but the girl was clearly making a plea of some kind, and the chaplain's stalwart figure awoke in me an antagonism that held me to the wall.
"If he comes here I shall go away, so you may as well understand it and tell him I shan't see him under any circumstances, and I'm not going to Florida or California or anywhere else on a private car, no matter who chaplains it."

Certainly not unless you want to—certainly not, said the chaplain. "You understand that I'm only giving you his message. He thought it best."
"Not to write to me or to Sister Theresa," broke in the girl contemptuously.
I landed and roamed idly over leaf-strewn walks past nearly a hundred cottages, to whose windows and verandas the winter blinds gave a dreary and inhospitable air. There was, at one point, a casino, whose broad veranda hung over the edge of the lake while beneath, on the water-side, was a boat-house.
I walked back to the wharf, where I had left my canoe, and was about to step into it when I saw, rocking at a similar landing place near-by, another slight craft of the same type as my own, but painted dark maroon. I was sure the canoe had not been there when I landed. Possibly it belonged to Morgan, the caretaker. I walked over and examined it. I even lifted it slightly to test its weight. The paddle lay on the dock beside me and it too I weighed critically, deciding that it was a trifle light for my own taste. Please—if you don't mind—

WHERE CHILDREN ARE TAKEN.

Mrs. Gunbusta Found One of Few Spots in New York.

Mrs. Gunbusta left her pretty cottage in Bumhurst and took the earliest train to the city, says the New York Press. She was going there to find a modern flat for herself, her husband and their four little children. They had tired of the suburbs and decided to move to the city.
Arriving in the metropolis, Mrs. Gunbusta popped into the first real estate office that confronted her, and, going up to a ruddy-faced, chubby man seated at a polished desk, she gasped:
"Excuse me, sir—I'm Mrs. Gunbusta. We're tired of the suburbs—we want to come to the city—that's why I've called—I'm looking for a place where they'll take children—do you know of any such place?"
"Oh, yes, there are a few places left in the city where they take children," replied the man, wheeling about in his chair; "there is a fine place two blocks down, right on the corner; take a look at it; you can't miss seeing it."
"I'll go to see it immediately," and as Mrs. Gunbusta hurried out of the place and walked in the direction indicated the ruddy-faced, chubby fellow's eyes twinkled merrily. Walking down two blocks, what was Mrs. Gunbusta's surprise to see on the corner an immense granite building, on the front of which was a large gilt sign, reading:
"CITY ORPHAN ASYLUM."

very tough, sir. A piece of wood flew up and struck me."
"Too bad!" I said with sympathy. "You'd better rest a bit this afternoon."
"Thank you, sir; but it's only a small matter—only, you might think the cut a trifle disfiguring."
He struck a match for my cigarette, and I left without looking at him again. But as I crossed the threshold of the library I formulated this note: "Bates is a liar, for one thing, and a person with active enemies for another, watch him."
All things considered the day was passing well enough. I picked up a book, threw myself on a comfortable divan to smoke and reflect before continuing my explorations. As I lay there, Bates brought me a telegram, a reply to my message to Pickering. It read:
"Yours announcing arrival received and filed."

It was certainly a queer business, my errand to Glenarm. I lay for a couple of hours dreaming, and counted the candles in the great crystal chandelier until my eyes ached. Then I took my cap and was soon tramping toward the lake.
There were several small boats and a gaffth launch in the boat-house. I dropped a canoe into the water and paddled off toward the summer colony, whose gables and red roofs were plainly visible from the boat-house.
I landed and roamed idly over leaf-strewn walks past nearly a hundred cottages, to whose windows and verandas the winter blinds gave a dreary and inhospitable air. There was, at one point, a casino, whose broad veranda hung over the edge of the lake while beneath, on the water-side, was a boat-house.

It was certainly a queer business, my errand to Glenarm. I lay for a couple of hours dreaming, and counted the candles in the great crystal chandelier until my eyes ached. Then I took my cap and was soon tramping toward the lake.

PERIODICAL MADNESS
By ROBERT C. BROWN.

Homer Parker had never had an affair de coeur and the most singular thing about it was that Homer was 32 years old.
Love had always been somewhat of a joke to him. He had never looked the question fairly in the face and he laughed at the possibility of ever doing so.
"Love is a sort of periodical madness," he used to argue to himself. "They all get over it after a year or two and then they look sourly at the minister who was responsible for trying them up, or down, to love."

In other words, Parker was a cynic. He scoffed at love, made light of it, and boasted his imperviousness. He was wedded to his art, and his art was music. There could never have been a better match; for Parker loved his music as himself.
One day the bachelor went to the phone to call up a friend. The line was busy, he listened a moment. Then he listened a little longer.
A sweet, mellow, musical voice floated over the wire. He had never before heard the like. The beauty, the fullness of that voice held him to the instrument.
"Surely," he thought, "the woman who possesses that voice must be different." And then he listened some more—the sweet voice thrilled him, filled him, and he could not get it out of his mind the whole day.
That night he patiently held the receiver to his ear for half an hour, hoping ever that the same voice would call again.

But his efforts were unrewarded and he went to bed, his brain pulsating with the discovery and his mind seeking for the owner of that voice.
The next morning he listened at the phone and again he heard the same tones. He stood entranced and listened. There was no other voice on earth like it to Parker.
An all consuming desire came over him as he hung up the receiver. He determined to seek out and find that voice.
A small suspicion of love came into his mind, but he laughed it aside in his hurry to assure himself that it was solely in the interests of music that he wished to find the owner of that voice.
Hurriedly putting on his hat and coat he rushed to the telephone office. There he found the names and addresses of the three parties on his line and then he returned home eagerly. They were all on his street; that voice lived within a block of him and yet he did not know its owner.
The thought maddened him, he brooded over it, rushed to the phone in hope of again hearing it—but she line was silent.

Suddenly an idea came to him. He would call up each of the houses on that line and then he could easily locate the voice.
His first attempt was unsuccessful. He excused himself by saying that he had gotten the wrong numbers.
Then he called up the next on his list. A sudden thrill shot through him as he heard the soft "Hello" and realized that it was addressed to him. He said nothing, he had found it and, accordingly, he quietly hung up the receiver with a happy sigh.
"Miss Cornelia Courtland," he read from his list. "Well that's funny—she can't live there alone, can she? But it relieves my mind on one score, anyway. She is not married!"
Again putting on his hat and coat he went out into the street and sauntered past the house, which contained that voice. Then he went into a corner store and waited.

Finally a woman came from the house. His eyes fairly devoured her as she came up the street. Her dress was smart there was no faking of colors in what she wore, there was an artistic air about her that was appearing to Parker she was divine.
He stood awkwardly looking into a showcase when she entered the store.
"Good morning, Mrs. Kendall how is your aunt, Miss Courtland, to-day?" inquired the affable proprietor of the store.
"Somewhat better, thank you," warbled that divine voice, which Parker recognized in a moment.
"His head swam, his fingers grew cold. With a compressed feeling about his chest he strode out into the open air.

Madly he rushed to his room packed up his belongings, and moved far away from that telephone line.
A month later he sighed, as he sat before his bachelor fire, musing to himself: "Love is a sort of periodical madness, they all get over it in a year or two. By George! I hope I do!"
Just a Gentle Hint.
Chief Justice Fuller apparently wishes it to be known that he has no intention of resigning to make room for Mr. Taft. The chief justice recently gave a dinner, at which both the president and Mr. Taft were present. Mr. Fuller showed his guests a new portrait of himself and remarked that it made him look young. "Not a day younger than the original," said Mr. Taft, gracefully. "Thank you," said the justice, adding with what looked like just a trifle of emphasis, "I never felt better in my life."

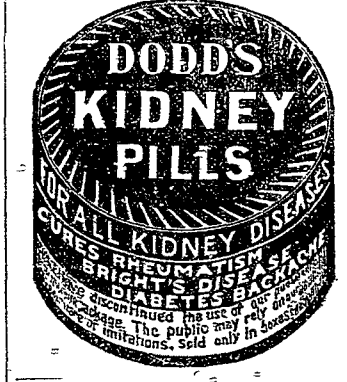

CARE OF THE SICK ROOM.
Above All Things the Walls Should Be Kept Dry.

When the bedroom becomes a sick room there is an added reason why extreme precautions should be used to keep the room in a thoroughly sanitary condition.
Above all things, the bedroom should never be damp. It should be nice and dry, always warm and comfortable in winter, cool and airy in summer, and bright and sunny some parts of the day.
If there is any suspicion of dampness in a bedroom it is probably due, if there is wallpaper on the wall, to the absorption of water by the paper which frequently acts as a blotting paper and holds quantities of water in it. The use of wallpaper on walls is to be deplored, it means disease, ill health and unhappiness. It is frequently the cause of lung trouble, not only because of its dampness but also because of its power to retain infection of many kinds.

The desired method of treating a bedroom wall is to tint it for the alabaster wall is a perfect wall. It never flakes off, chips or peels. It absorbs moisture and expels it, it opens the pores of the plaster and makes a room hyaline and breathable.
The floor in the bedroom should have light, cleanable, dainty rugs that can be easily shaken and a floor that is thoroughly oiled or varnished, that will not absorb moisture. The cracks in the floor should be thoroughly filled and covered. Woodwork in the bedroom should be attended to carefully, window sills should be thoroughly varnished or waxed, and the window casings kept in perfect order. The doors should be wiped off frequently as also should be all the standing woodwork in the bedroom, as the presence of dust on woodwork is a menace to health as well as an evidence of poor housekeeping.

Curious Maps.
Maps for military and general field use are produced by Dr. O. H. F. Vollbehr, of Haleslee, Berlin as microscopic transparencies, each about one and one-half inch by two inches in size. These form slides for the micro photoscope, a special instrument having a hand-mirror-shaped frame, to which is attached a slide holder, with a movable lens over it. The lens slides in two directions, about 70 square miles being shown in each position.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.
As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians as the damage they will do is too great to be paid for by the small amount of relief they may give. HALL'S CATARRH CURE, minutely tested by J. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. ## NEED BACKS.

The kidneys have a great work to do in keeping the blood pure. When they get out of order it causes backache, headaches, dizziness, languor and distressing urinary troubles. Keep the kidneys well and all these sufferings will be saved you. Mrs. S. A. Moore, proprietor of a restaurant at Waterville, Mo., says: "Before using Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered everything from kidney troubles for a year and a half. I had pain in the back and head, and almost continuous in the loins and felt weary all the time. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills brought great relief, and I kept on taking them until in a short time I was cured. I think Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful."

Queer Idea of Chinese.

The following is a quite modern Chinese conception of the foreigners' treatment of infectious cases: "If an epidemic broke out two foreigners took the sick away and put them in a little room, washed them with lime water and then locked them up, so that no one could see them, on purpose that they might soon die and not propagate the disease. Wives and children might cry and weep, but the foreigners would not drive them away with sticks, for until dead no one must see those faces again. Better for all of us to jump into the sea than submit to this."—South China Post.

"I used one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura, and two vials of Cuticura Resolvent Pills, which cost me a dollar and twenty-five cents in all, and am very glad I tried them. For I was completely cured. Walter W. Paglusich, 207 N. Robey St. Chicago Ill. Oct 8 and 10, 1906."

Refugees on Mont Blanc.

Losing one's self on Mont Blanc will soon be counted among the vanished industries. In recent years a number of fine refugees have been built in various parts of the mountain by the Alpine clubs of England, France and other countries and by private individuals. These have made it almost impossible for a man having a bump of locality of average size to be lost, in spite of heavy mists and blinding snowstorms caused by sudden changes of temperature.

HONEST MEDICINE

TRY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR STOMACH TROUBLE.

Convincing Evidence Supported by a Guarantee That Must Convince The Most Skeptical.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a doctor's prescription, used by an eminent practitioner, and for nearly a generation known as a reliable household remedy throughout the United States. Needless to say, no advertised medicine could retain popular favor for so long a period without having great merit and it is the invaluable curative properties of the pills that have made them a standard remedy in every civilized country in the world. Added to this is the absolute guarantee that the pills contain no harmful drug, opiate, narcotic or stimulant. A recent evidence of their efficacy is found in the statement of Mrs. N. B. Whitley, of Berkeley, Ark., who says:

"I had suffered for a good many years from stomach trouble. For a long time I was subject to bad spells of faintness and lack of breath accompanied by an indescribable feeling that seemed to start in my stomach. Whenever I was a little run-down or over-tired, these spells would come on. They occurred frequently but not last very long. I was confined to my bed for ten weeks one time and the doctor pronounced my trouble chronic inflammation of the stomach and bowels. Since that time I have been subject to the fainting spells and at other times to fluttering of the heart and a feeling as though I was smothering. My general health was very bad and I was weak and trembling."

"I had seen Dr. Williams' Pink Pills mentioned in the newspapers and decided to try them. When I began taking the pills I was so run-down in strength that I could hardly do any housework. Now I could walk ten miles if necessary. Both my husband and myself think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best medicine made and we always recommend the pills to our friends."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood and give strength and tone to every part of the body. They have cured serious disorders of the blood and nerves, such as rheumatism, sciatica, anemia, nervousness, headaches, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance and many forms of weakness in either sex. They are sold by all druggists or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

APPETIZING HERBS

RECIPES BOTH PALATABLE AND HEALTHFUL.

Dandelions Boiled with Bacon Make an Ideal Simple Dish—Dandelion Wine a Tonic That is of Value.

Dandelions Boiled with Bacon.—Clean thoroughly a half peck dandelions and put over the fire with boiling water to cover. Cook ten minutes, drain, return to the pan and cover barely with fresh boiling water. Add one pound bacon, two onions chopped, a teaspoonful salt and a bit of red pepper. Cover and boil until tender and nearly dry. Take up the dandelions and mound on a hot dish, surrounded with a circle of the bacon sliced thin and serve with boiled potatoes. Dandelions are also tasty cooked with corn beef or tongue.

Dandelion Wine.—This wine is in great repute as a tonic. It is made from the blossoms alone, rejecting the stems, which would make the wine bitter. Put four quarts of the yellow petals in a kettle with a gallon of boiling water, cover and let them stand three days, stirring twice a day. Strain off the clear liquid, place in the kettle, with the thin yellow peel of one lemon and one orange, and the juice of both with three and a half pounds of sugar, and a half ounce ginger root. Place over the fire and boil slowly half an hour. Take off, and when cooled to lukewarm, spread a half cake of compressed yeast on a half slice toasted bread and add to the mixture. Let this stand in a warm place for two or three days, then put into a demijohn or cask (the wine must fill whatever vessel it is put in), and stand away in a warm place six weeks or more. Fill up occasionally with sweetened water, to make up for that lost in fermentation. When fermentation has stopped, close tightly, leave for three weeks, then bottle.

Watercress for Wit.—"Eat cress and learn wit," say the Greeks; while Pliny asserted that cress vinegar restores sanity. According to analysis, watercress contains iodine, iron, phosphate and a sulpho-nitrogenous oil—a fine combination of wholesome properties. To be perfect, cress should be freshly gathered, well washed in cold water, shaken thoroughly dry, seasoned with salt and eaten with thin slices of bread and butter. Some prefer a dash of lemon juice with cress and a tablespoonful olive oil, but the epicure takes his with salt alone.

How to Hang Pictures.

Oil paintings and water colors should never be allowed to become intimate companions, but the latter may hobnob with etchings, pastels, drawings, photographs, and even engravings, without losing their dignity. An oil painting of exceptional excellence should be given a special position.

Water colors and pastels in delicate tints and black and whites and soft etchings should be properly placed in wall spaces where the light is strong. The darker and more heavily shaded pictures should hang farther away from the light. From the family colored pictures in the clearest light, the glance should be involuntarily but skillfully led to the deeper-toned pictures farther back in the room.

Sometimes, however, a dark corner that needs brightening may demand a lighter picture or a spot of brilliant coloring may be risked. A pen-and-ink sketch with white mat fills in well in such a case. Harmony must be studied, and the position of a picture well considered before its place is decided. One with broad, white mat should never be hung next to a carbon in a heavy black frame. The eye must be led, not jerked, from one picture to another.

To Starch Lace.

There is a great difference of opinion about the starching of lace, some people objecting to any starch being put in it on the grounds that it makes the lace too stiff and tends to destroy it.

Take some clear starch and thin it down until it feels like slightly thickened water, or for heavy, thick laces, a little thicker; soak the lace well in this, then squeeze out gently with the hands; spread it out between the folds of a towel or handkerchief, beat between the hands or pass it through a wringing machine.

Avoid twisting it. After wringing pull the lace out gently with the fingers and roll it up with the wrong side inside, commencing at the left-hand end and with the points or edges away from you. This will be found the most convenient way to have it when ironing.

Odds and Ends of Hair.

When little scraggly ends of hair hang down over your collar all you need is a good brush, some back combs and a little perseverance to make them stay up with the rest. When arranging your coiffure brush these ends briskly and then place two back combs where they are needed. A few invisible hairpins will also conspire against widow locks. A little downy growth of hair on the cheeks should not be tampered with. When genuine bristles develop the electric needle should be used to annihilate them.

Re-Enameling a Bath.

For this you need a proper bath enamel. Sandpaper the bath before applying, and slightly heat the enamel. Heating makes it a little thinner, and it is easier to apply evenly. It will need two coats, or if bad, three.

This is said to be a splendid Spring Blood Tonic and system renovator because of its gentle action in restoring the kidneys to normal activity, forcing them to filter from the blood all impure matter and acids, destroying microorganisms which produce ill health and sour blood. Everyone should take something to cleanse the blood at this time of year, and the above simple prescription is the most highly indorsed of the hundreds of home-remedies generally used. Mix this yourself, then you will know what you are taking.

WOMAN HAS FINE RECORD.

Keeper of Lighthouse, She Has Saved Eighteen Lives.

Ida Lewis recently celebrated her fiftieth year as keeper of the Lime Island lighthouse in the harbor of Newport, R. I. As a girl and woman Ida Lewis has lived a remarkable life. Her bravery and skill in handling a boat are well known and her fame is secure as the great woman life saver in the world, for she has the credit of having saved no less than 18 lives, most of her rescues having been effected in the face of extreme danger and in winter. As keeper of the Lime Island lighthouse, to which post she was appointed in recognition of her bravery and record as a life saver on the death of her father, Miss Lewis has shown herself as careful and efficient as a man could be. She is one of the few women in such a position.

The New York Medical Journal wisely remarks: "The colon bacillus is usually ranked in the saprophytic group of bacteria rather than placed among the organisms distinctly pathogenic for man; but we know that it is far from being devoid of virulence, and that it is capable under certain conditions of gaining increased powers of invading the organism and of manifesting very definite pathogenic effects."

FIND OUT

The Kind of Food That Will Keep You Well.

The true way is to find out what is best to eat and drink, and then cultivate a taste for those things instead of poisoning ourselves with improper, indigestible food, etc.

A conservative Mass. woman writes: "I have used Grape-Nuts 5 years for the young and for the aged; in sickness and in health; at first following directions carefully, later in a variety of ways as my taste and judgment suggested."

"But its most special, personal benefit has been a substitute for meat, and served dry with cream when rheumatic troubles made it important for me to give up the coffee habit."

"Served in this way with the addition of a cup of hot water and a little fruit it has been used at my morning meal for six months, during which time my health has much improved, nerves have grown steadier, and a gradual decrease in my comfort." Name given by Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in page. "There's a Reason."

Women Avoid Operations

When a woman suffering from female trouble is told that an operation is necessary, it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital, the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation has been decided upon as the only cure. The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who by taking made from native roots and herbs, have escaped serious operations, as evidenced by Miss Rose Moore's case, of 307 W. 26th St., N. Y. She writes: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of the very worst form of female trouble and I wish to express to you my deepest gratitude. I suffered intensely for two years so that I was unable to attend to my duties and was a burden to my family. I doctored and doctored with only temporary relief and constantly objecting to an operation which I was advised to undergo. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it cured me of the terrible trouble and I am now in better health than I have been for many years."

Other such cases should encourage every woman to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before she submits to an operation.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

One of the first symptoms of kidney trouble is a slight pain in the small of the back, also a frequent desire to urinate, especially at night. A simple test of your urine will show if you have either bad symptoms, viz: Place some urine in a glass tumbler and allow it to stand twenty-four hours, if there is disease, you will discover a sediment, or a milky, cloudy appearance, or particles aloft. If you have any of these symptoms it shows disease and demands treatment at once.

Kidney disease must not be trifled with, but can be cured if taken in time by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which removes the cause and stops any further trouble.

HOUSEHOLD CARES.

Tax the Women of Northville the Same as Elsewhere.

Hard to attend to household duties with constantly aching back. A woman should not have a bad back, and she wouldn't if the kidneys were well.

Here is a Northville woman who endorses this claim: Mrs. O. S. Harger, living on Center street, Northville, Mich., says: "I have known the value of Doan's Kidney Pills for some time and can recommend them as a most valuable remedy for back-ache. For a long time I suffered with pain in my back that was often quite severe and made it hard for me to do anything, not even ordinary housework. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Murdock Bros. drug store, were the only remedy that ever gave me relief. Since using them I have been better than for a long time before. I have taken occasional doses of the remedy since then and never fail to find relief and they seem to put new life into me."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Keep Moving.

The heavens themselves run continually round; the world is never still; the sun travels to the east and to the west; the moon is ever changing in its course; the stars and planets have their constant motions; the air we breathe is continually agitated by the wind, and the waters never cease to ebb and flow—doubtless for the purpose of their observation and to teach us that we should ever be in action.—Burton.

SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.

CONSTIPATION.

I can tell a person who is constipated on sight. Their complexion is pasty or yellow. Their eyes are dull, and they look and feel sleepy. Nowonder they do. The bowels are a sewer. They carry away the poisonous refuse. If they don't act the poisonous matter is absorbed by the body, and headaches, dullness, bad complexion and eventually serious troubles result.

There is no better rule for good health than that the bowels should move every day at the same hour if possible. Regularity can be acquired by making a habit of this. Foolish people neglect this and when chronic constipation effects them they take pills every few days to force the bowels to perform their natural function. As years go on they require more and more pills. This should be stopped. Cooper's New Discovery will build up the stomach and cause the bowels to act naturally. While taking the medicine get the habit of regularity, then gradually stop taking the medicine.

Here is a sample of letters from those who have tried it: "For sixteen years I have suffered from stomach and liver trouble, and chronic constipation. I had frequent headaches and always felt tired and worn out. I heard of Cooper's New Discovery and began its use. After I had finished one bottle I was wonderfully improved. Constipation gave way to a pleasing regularity of the bowels and I ate better, slept better and felt better than I had for months. It is the greatest medicine I have ever known." Samuel Booren. 1742 Munsey Ave., Scranton Pa.

Our customers who have used them say the Cooper medicines do the work. We sell them.
