ANOTHER BATTLE

GOVERNOR WARNER IN BIG CONTEST AGAIN THIS WEEK.

Question Whether People or Conventions Shall Nominate Governor.

This week the primary election bill is being wrestled with in the house. Every faction within the republican party that can be rounded up on any excuse and herded into the anti-Warner corral will be found safe within the fence. The fight against the bill is being made by those who feel that the proposed amendments to the present law will jeopardize their chances for future political preferment in machine conventions of the old style.

Everyone still smiles when they meet someone else, but it is not improbable that this will not bring about an open rupture, for a number of gentlemen with political ambitions are asking their friends in and out of the capital to aid them to prevent the 40 per cent clause being wiped out of the present law and all possibility removed of a convention nominating a governor. The amendment to allow the people to nominate a United States senator may be approved, but there are a number of things being said about it on the quiet and those making the remarks do not smile when they make them.

Legislators who have been left alone by their close political friends to act as they saw fit regarding other policies of the governor are being interviewed regarding the primary bill. It is not only an endeavor to defeat the bill on behalf of some men who are against that kind of a law, but it is also another attempt to again beat Warner.

Fuel was added to the fire of their wrath when the bill was introduced in the senate the other day with its strict provisions regarding the use of money or any other emolument at primary elections. It is asserted that Pat Kelley, lieutenant-governor is to blame for that bill and they say it is really an intimation that he clamps the lid on altogether too tight.

The fight against the proposition of providing in the primary bill for the nomination of United States senators will to a large extent be made under cover. Amendments are proposed which would effectively make the bill of no use to the people. But opposition to the removal of the 40 per cent clause will be waged in any old way to defeat it, and if that is not possible to force a compromise without entirely removing the limit as to the number of votes the successful candidate for governor must receive.

The situation at present seems to be that the boxer element in the legislature, the shadows of the immortal nineteen, the other relics of the machine and many of the men who have nice little booms which they fear will be adversely affected by the bill as proposed, are trying once more to get together to fight the governor. It will not add many to the governor's known opponents but as this is a bill affecting the personal interests of some politicians they are attempting to make the fight better than any of their previous ones.

It is probable that the governor will meet them in the same way he has been adroitly handling legislation since the session opened. There will be a canvass made; those who are considered doubtful but whose home folks are right will begin to hear from home by telegraph and telephone and letters in no uncertain tone and in no small number. There will be heart to heart talks with others and when the time comes the bunch will be put up against the proposition of going on the record as being against trusting the people to nominate United States senators and preventing machine methods being resumed within the party along the lines of old days in the nomination of governor and lieutenant-governor.

This is one more battle on the part of the governor in the interest of the common people and they are battles which are much harder than those in behalf of the corporations, but when they are once won there is more glory somewhere and sometimes for the man who stands for what he feels and knows to be right—and that is Governor Warner's only hope of reward, the commendation of the people.

Governor Warner feels the people have emphatically said the governor and lieutenant-governor shall be nominated by a direct vote and he does not propose to take any chances, if he can prevent it, of having those nominations thrown into a convention.

A RAILROAD COMMISSION.

One to Be Created with Powers to Regulate.

Good progress is being made with the bill creating a railroad commission with very wide powers as to supervision, regulation of freight rates, demurrage charges, etc. A bill on this subject has already been introduced in each house, and Railroad Commissioner Glasgow and the Senate railroad committee with the acquiescence of Governor Warner are laboring to get it in practical working order. When the details of this bill are perfected the administration will be behind it and aid in its passage. There is little doubt that the framers of the bill already introduced and the commissioner will be able to get together on a mutually satisfactory measure, so that the enactment of such a law is quite probable.

The bill will provide for the appointment of a commission of three persons as commissioners of railroads and they will have special powers in the regulation of railway matters.

ON JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION BOARD

HON. R. C. SMITH.

The ex-Congressman of Adrian who has been appointed by Governor Warner as one of the board of Michigan managers of the Jamestown exposition. "Hank" has been made treasurer of the board. The popular gentleman's friends in this section will be glad to learn of his new honors.

The sermon next Sunday evening will be on "How to Write."

The Ladies' Aid society will meet next Wednesday afternoon at 2:30.

Baptist Church Notes.

[By a Member.]

The regular monthly business meeting of the B. Y. P. U. will be held with Miss Edna Sterling next Wednesday evening.

The monthly Missionary meeting will be held at the parsonage next Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Sloan has charge of the program.

The subject of the sermon Sunday morning will be "The Words of Jesus to the Impure Church." In the evening the subject will be "Bearing the Master's Marks."

The Birthday party and tea at Mrs. VanZile's Wednesday was largely attended and all report a very pleasant time. The receipts from the tea and birthday offerings amount to about thirteen dollars.

Methodist Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]

The N. M. C. met at Floyd Evan's Tuesday evening.

Public worship next Sunday at the usual hours. All made welcome.

The Ladies' Aid will hold a birthday thimble party at the home of Mrs. R. Neelands this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Ladies may invite their friends.

Dr. E. E. Castor will lecture in our church this evening. Admission ten cents; lecture to begin at 7:30. Rev. Castor has traveled in Palestine which will be the subject of his lecture. All who can would do well to hear him. He is said to be one of the best lecturers in our state. The price of the lecture is no indication of its value.

A very pleasing event was the banquet given in the church Friday evening by the first intermediate class, called "His Helpers," under the supervision of the teacher, Miss Effie Risner, and Mrs. Wm. Somerville, musical director of the class. The supper was served at six o'clock after which the program was given, W. H. Hutton, Sunday school superintendent, acting as toastmaster. The program consisted of toasts and musical numbers and at the close a Lilly drill and class song was given and a pantomime, illustrating the beautiful hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee" and a tableau, "Clinging to the Cross," the red light being thrown upon it to make the scene more effectual. The affair was a success and reflects much credit on the class and its management.

Arnot-Ellis.

Married at the home of the bride's parents in Lexington on Thursday, April 25, Mr. Howard Arnot and Miss Jennie Ellis. Mr. Arnot is one of the employees of the Stimpson Scale & Mfg. Co. They will reside in Northville.

THEY WON OUT ONCE MORE

Another Victory for the People at Lansing.

The vote on eliminating of the 40 per cent clause in the nomination of Governor and Lieut. Governor at the primaries was won by the governor's friends yesterday in the legislature by a vote of 44 to 36 and the insertion of the clause providing for direct vote for U. S. Senator was a still greater victory.

A Complete Surprise.

Mrs. Price was given a very pleasant surprise Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. Z. Darwin where she was visiting. About two o'clock a company of ladies from the Methodist church came in for a little visit with her before she leaves for her home in Saginaw and after spending some time in a social way she was presented with a beautiful new dress as a token of the high esteem in which she is held not only in the church but in the community. Mrs. Price has been in business here the past two years and has won many friends who regret her leaving.

School Notes.

[By a Pop.]

The Third grade is designing wall paper.

The Second grade pupils are planting seeds.

The kindergarten has a new window box.

William Grant is a new pupil in the kindergarten.

Almost all the "measly" pupils have returned to school.

The Sixth grade has taken up geography note book work.

Pole-vaulting is the favorite outdoor sport just at present for the older boys.

The Second grade has been drawing and coloring some gayly colored wood-peckers.

The Second grade has just completed the learning of Robert Stevenson's poem, "The Moon."

The Third grade pupils have chosen a motto for themselves, which is "Not how much, but how well."

Maude Korabacher of the Sixth grade is back in school after having been absent on account of abscesses in her ears.

The grades are all having their monthly tests a week earlier than usual on account of the extra week of spring vacation.

Evidently the saying that "Money has wings," is true, for over a dollar has disappeared from one of the pupil's coat pockets.

The A class of the Eighth grade received their treat Monday night after school which was peanuts and conundrums, Frances Clark winning as a prize a chinaman made out of peanuts.

Next Friday morning the Fourth grade is to have a race on the multiplication tables from one to twelve, the victorious one having a half holiday. Hester Power has already said them in three and one-half minutes.

SIDE LIGHTS ON MICHIGAN

TWO EATON COUNTY FARMERS
NEARLY 70 YEARS OLD
TO BE TRIED.

MURDER OF JOHN BOUTS.

Levi and Charles Tubbs, Father and Uncle of George Tubbs, to Stand Trial for Conspiracy to Kill.

History of the Case.

The first criminal case to be tried in circuit court, Charlotte, will be the murder charge against Levi and Charles Tubbs, father and uncle respectively of George Tubbs, now serving a life sentence for the killing of Contractor John Bouts in November, 1904.

Both men are nearly 70 years old. Before the Bout's shooting the family were rich, but the trial of the son made it necessary to put a mortgage on the farm, which is one of the finest in the county.

The prosecution will attempt to prove that the trio entered into a conspiracy and that the old men are equally guilty with the boy who fired the fatal shot.

The defense will contend that the old men did not know that George had a weapon and that the belief that shooting was necessary was the product of his own mind.

On the trial of the young man he swore that he shot to protect his aged father, whose life he feared to strike with an unlighted cigar. George bought the revolver in Nashville the day before the murder, which occurred on a Sunday morning, and the prosecution will try to prove that the weapon was purchased with the understanding that it would be used the next day to prevent Bout's and his men from working on Sunday.

After the shot was fired Powers and Bigler, Bout's workmen, picked up the wounded man and lifted him into the wagon and drove away. He died before the men reached the road. The defendants dragged the tools of the ditcher out in the road and put back the rail fence and started for the house, where George was arrested a couple of hours later. The two elder Tubbs were taken into custody a few days later, but were afterward released on bail.

George will be brought from Jackson to testify for his father and Uncle Charles and in all probability tell the jury that the old gentlemen knew nothing about the weapon, which he claims he bought to shoot a troublesome dog.

There is considerable local sentiment against trying the old men, but in Kalamazoo, where the Tubbs farm is located, the sentiment is against the old men, it being the general belief in that section that the father and the uncle are really more to blame than George, who mentally is a weakling and who has been a quiet and peaceful man all his life.

"Uncle Charley" is a bachelor and has a reputation for being quarrelsome, and many lay the present trouble to his aggressiveness. Levi has more friends than Charley and George has more sympathizers than both his father and uncle combined.

In view of the wide publicity given the case both at the time of the murder and the trial of the young man, considerable trouble will undoubtedly be experienced in getting a jury.

The Short Curtain.

White Pigeon's short curtain sensation had an echo recently when Rev. C. H. Anderson was granted a decree of divorce and was given the custody of his children on the grounds of insanity.

Rev. Mr. Anderson engaged Evangelist L. E. Allen in December, 1905, to conduct evangelistic services at White Pigeon, the evangelist being a guest at the preacher's home while in that town.

One night he said he peeked under a short curtain and saw his wife and Allen in a compromising position. He went and got two of his church members to look so that they might be witnesses.

Rev. Mr. Allen was acquitted of any wrongdoing at a church trial in Gratiot county. Mrs. Anderson always denied the story. Both were present during the divorce proceedings but neither testified.

Ex-Congressman Stephenson.

A friend of ex-Congressman Sam Stephenson, of Menominee, brings word to Lansing that the old Republican war horse and millionaire lumber operator is nearly at the end of his days. It is a case of old age slowly but surely sapping his vitality. Michigan never sent a more picturesque character to congress than Sam Stephenson or one who in his bluff, hearty way could get more things for his district. He was elected four times.

The Board Quit.

The Big Rapids board of public works has quit. The members feel they were snubbed by Mayor Wright, the council and city attorney. The board of public works suggested that bonds be issued for $5,000 for pumping station improvements. The city attorney says the city has gone the charter limit in appropriations.

The mad dog scare of a couple of weeks ago in Dundee was proven to be genuine when a cow, owned by Clarence Stowell, was taken with convulsions as it was being led to water. It showed all the signs of hydrophobia and had to be killed.

Rep. Dennis Murray is proprietor of the Keely institute in Grand Rapids. He has introduced a bill raising the salaries of the aldermen and police judge of Grand Rapids. A new Michigan law permits sending drunks to a jag cure, and the question now is, where will the local police judge send the drunks that are arrested.

THREE DEAD.

Mother Returns Home to Find Children Burned to Death.

While Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hicks, of Port Huron, were down town on a shopping tour Saturday night their three children were burned to death, presumably through the explosion of a can of gasoline.

The charred and blackened remains were found by the mother upon her return. Hicks, when he arrived at the house, found his wife unconscious beside the dead children, with the 15-months old baby moaning in its death agony.

The parents looked and bolted the door of the kitchen when they started down town. The eldest child was a girl, Ethel, 11 years old, then came Joseph, a boy of 9, and Ralph, the baby boy.

Just how the accident occurred is a mystery. A can of gasoline was in the house and it is believed that the children placed it upon the stove and fouched a match to it to see the blaze.

Hicks called the neighbors. Coroners Falk and Schwikert and Under-sheriff Davidson were summoned. After looking into the case the officers decided it was an accident and will not hold an inquest.

Hicks is a molder employed at the Malleable Iron works. He is heart broken over the tragedy and his wife is in a serious condition.

Died in Battle.

Mrs. Thieme, a well known resident of St. Joseph, has been notified that her son John was among the slain in a recent battle between the troops of Honduras and Nicaragua. John Thieme left St. Joe several years ago, and "faded" about a world where he never appeared to be a chance of adventure. He was home occasionally, but for the past year no one knew where he was. In the course of his wanderings he arrived in Central America about the time the war broke out, and he immediately became a soldier. The news of his death was sent by a chunk of Thieme's remains were given a decent burial by the natives, who have a wholesome respect for Americans.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Dutch dialect monologues and songs are interwoven between campaign speeches by Cent. Dekema, Republican candidate for congress.

Jackson physician fears Clifford Sturges, aged 14 years, may lose the sight of one or both eyes as a result of a piece of a dynamite cap which the lad exploded biting him in the leg.

Nether the undertakers of Inland at Homer had a casket large enough to hold the remains of Mrs. Luther, and a casket factory of Traverse City had to build one of extra large dimensions for her.

Thirteen Sunday schools have united in an organization known as the Saginaw City Sunday School association, and will work to extend Sunday school work throughout the city, regardless of denomination.

Rev. J. Murray Taylor, pastor of Christ church, Saginaw, who is being sued for damages by Mrs. May C. Eastman, denies ever attempting to kiss or hug the complainant, who is a former member of his flock.

Samuel Robinson, statistician of the Michigan State Firemen's association, is sending out circulars calling the attention of Michigan firemen to the thirty-third annual convention to be held in Detroit June 4, 5 and 6. Gay Northrup, of Detroit, is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Fred A. Jolley, of Alpena county, is back home and relates his unpleasant experience of being detained at Ellis Island by United States government officials, on his return from England, on the charge that he was not a resident of this country. Congressman Loud straightened matters out for Jolley.

Some of the farmer members of the house are kicking about the binder twine bill. They claim it is drawn in the interests of the retail dealers of the state, and does not give the farmer any preference in buying his twine from the prison. An attempt will be made to iron out the proposition when the bill reaches the senate.

Word has just been received from Omaha, Neb., that a private tourist car filled with passengers, many from Elmira, is side-tracked on the railroad yards there, and quarantined. Diphtheria has attacked three passengers and the railroad company refuses to carry the car on to California, and the hospitals won't admit the sick.

Grieving over a disappointment of an adverse law suit, Mrs. Lucinda Smith, aged 70 years, a resident of Kalamazoo for more than half a century, is dead. Mrs. Smith had died her home to a local man and wife, and was to receive in return $1,000 cash and a home for life. She alleged she never received the money she had been living with friends.

Alpena's "Carrie Nation," Mrs. Anna Orban, is again on the warpath. She went into John Smoock's saloon, attempted to drive the bartender out with a big hammer, was herself ejected and then broke the window in the door with her fist. A warrant has been issued for Mrs. Orban on the charge of maliciously destroying property. Mrs. Orban, last September, went into the same saloon, ousted everybody in the place, and, with two friends, held the saloon and restaurant in the basement four days before the sheriff could gain possession.

As the Albatross steamed into the little harbor, I saw Mowbray Langdon's Indolence at anchor. I glanced toward Stenben Point—where his cousins, the Vivians, lived—and thought I recognized his launch at their pier. We saluted the Indolence; the Indolence saluted us. My launch was piped away and took me ashore. I strolled along the path that wound round the base of the hill toward the kennels. At the crossing of the path down from the house, I paused and lingered on the glimpse of one of the corner towers of the great Showy Palace. I was muttering something—I listened to myself. It was: "Mulholland, Mrs. Mulholland and the four little Mulhollands." And I felt like laughing aloud such a joke was it that I should be envying a policeman's potato patch and his fat wife and his four brats, and that he should be in a position to pity me.

You may be imagining that, through all, Anita had been dominating my mind. That is the way it is in the romances; but not in life. No doubt here, are men who brood upon the impossible, and moon-and-maunder away their lives over the grave of a dead love, no doubt there are people who will say that, because I did not shoot Langdon or her, or myself, or fly to a desert or pose in the crowded places of the world as the last scene of a tragedy, I therefore cared little about her. I offer them this suggestion: A man strong enough to give a love worth a woman's while is strong enough to live on without her when he finds he may not live with her.

As I stood there that summer day, looking toward the crest of the hill, at the mocking mausoleum of my dead dream, I realized what the incessant battle of the street had meant to me. "There is peace for the only in the storm," said I. "But, thank God, there is peace for me somewhere."

Through the foliage I had glimpses of some one coming slowly down the zigzag path. Presently, at one of the turnings half-way up the hill, appeared Mowbray Langdon. "What is he doing here," thought I, scarcely able to believe my eyes. Here of all places! And then I forgot the strangeness of his being at Dawn Hill in the strangeness of his expression. For it was apparent, even at the distance which separated us that he was suffering from some great and recent blow. He looked old and haggard; he walked like a man who neither knows nor cares where he is going.

He did not seem me and my impulse was to avoid him by continuing on toward the kennels. I had no especial feeling against him; I had not lost Anita because she cared for him or he for her; but because she did not care for me—simply that to meet would be awkward, disagreeable for us both. At the slight noise of my movement to go on, he halted, glanced round eagerly, as if he hoped the sound had been made by some one he wished to see. His glance fell on me. He stopped short, was for an instant disconcerted; then his face lighted up with devilish joy. "You!" he cried. "Just the man!" And he descended more rapidly.

At first I could make nothing of this remark. But as he drew nearer and nearer, and his ugly mood became more apparent, I felt that he was looking forward to provoking me into giving him a distraction from whatever was tormenting him. I wanted a few minutes and we were face to face, I outwardly calm, but my anger slowly lighting up as he deliberately applied to the torch of his insolent eyes. He was wearing his old familiar air of cynical assurance. Evidently, with his recovered fortune, he had recovered his conviction of his great superiority to the rest of the human race—the child had climbed back on the chair that made it tall and had forgotten its tumble. And I was wondering again that I, so short a time before, had been crude enough to be fascinated and fooled by those tawdry posings and pretenses. For the man as I now saw him, was obviously shallow and vain, a slave to those poor "man-of-the-world" passions—ostentation and cynicism and skill at vices old as mankind and tedious as a treadmill, the commonplace routine of the idle and foolish and purposeless. A clever, handsome fellow, but the more pitiful that he was by nature above the uses to which he prostituted himself.

He fought hard to keep his eyes steadily on mine; but they would waver and shift. Not, however, before I had found deep down in them the beginnings of fear. "You see, you were mistaken," said I. "You have nothing to say to me—or I to you."

He knew I had looked straight to the bottom of his real self, and had seen the coward that is in every man who has been bred to appearances only. Up rose his vanity, the coward's substitute for courage. "You think I am afraid of you?" he sneered, bluffing and blustering like the school bull.

"I don't in the least care whether you are or not," replied I. "What are you doing here, anyhow?" It was as if I had thrown off the cover of a furnace. "I came to get the woman I love," he cried. "You stole her from me! You tricked me! But, by God, Blacklock, I'll never pause until I get her back and punish you!" He was brave enough now, drunk with the fumes from his brave words. "All my life," he raged arrogantly on, "I've had whatever I wanted. I've let nothing interfere—nothing and nobody. I've been too forbearing with you, first, because I knew she could never care for you, and, then, because I rather admired your pluck and impudence. I like to see fellows kick their way up among us from the common people."

I put my hand on his shoulder. No doubt the fiend that rose within me, as from the dead, looked at him from my eyes. He has great physical strength, but he winced under that weight and grip, and across his face flitted the terror that must come to any man at first sense of being in the angry clutch of one stronger than he. I slowly released him—I had tested and realized my physical superiority; to use it would be cheap and cowardly.

"You can't provoke me to descend to expression. I rather expected him to show some of that amused contempt with which men of his sort always receive a new idea that is beyond the range of their narrow, conventional minds. For I did not expect him to understand why I was not only willing, but even eager, to relinquish a woman whom I could hold only by asserting a property right in her. And I do not think he did understand me, though his manner changed to a sort of grudging respect. He was, I believe, about to make some impulsive, generous speech, when we heard the quick strokes of iron-shod hoofs on the path from the kennels and the stables—is there any sound more arresting?—Past us at a gallop swept a horse, on his back—Anita. She was not in riding-habit; the wind fluttered the sleeves of her blouse, blew her uncovered hair this way and that about her beautiful face. She sped on toward the landing, though I fancied she had seen us.

Anita at Dawn Hill—Langdon, in a furious temper, descending from the house toward the landing—Anita presently, riding like mad—to overtake him," thought I. And I read confirmation in his triumphant eyes. In another mood, I suppose my fury would have been beyond my power to restrain it. Just then—the day grew dark for me, and I wanted to hide away somewhere. Heart-sick, I was ashamed for her, hated myself for having blundered into surprising her.

She reappeared at the turn round which she had vanished. I now noted that she was riding without saddle or bridle, with only a halter round the horse's neck—then she had seen us, had stopped and come back as soon as she could. She dropped from the horse, looked swiftly at me, at him, at me again, with intense anxiety.

"I saw your yacht in the harbor only a moment ago," she said to me. She was almost panting. "I feared you might meet him. So I came."

"As you see, he is quite intact," said I. "I must ask that you and he leave the place at once." And I went given you to me. Let us go. Let me take you to the Vivians." He threw out his arms in a wild, passionate gesture; he was utterly unlike himself. His emotion burst through and shattered pose and cynicism and hard crust of selfishness like the exploding powder bursting the shell. "I can't give you up, Anita!" he exclaimed in a tone of utter desperation. "I can't! I can't!"

But her gaze was all this time steadily on me, as if she feared I would go, should she look away. "I will tell you myself," she said, rapidly, to me. "We—Uncle Howard and I—read in the papers how they had all turned against you, and he brought me over here. He has been telegraphing for you. This morning he went to town to search for you. About an hour ago Langdon came. I refused to see him, as I have ever since the time I told you about at Alva's. He persisted, until at last I had the servant request him to leave the house."

"But now there's no longer any reason for your staying, Anita," he pleaded. "He has said you are free. Why stay when you would really no more be here than if you were to go, leaving one of your empty dresses?"

She had not for an instant taken her gaze from me; and so strange were her eyes, so compelling, that I seemed unable to move or speak. But now she released me to blaze upon him—and never shall I forget any detail of her face or voice as she said to him: "That is false, Mowbray Langdon. I told you the truth when I told you I loved him!"

So violent was her emotion that she had to pause for self-control. And I? I was overwhelmed, dazed, stunned. When she went on, she was looking at neither of us. "Yes; I loved him, almost from the first—from the day he came to the box at the laces. I was ashamed, poor creature that my parents had made me! I was ashamed of it. And I tried to hate him and thought I did. And when he showed me that he no longer cared, my pride goaded me into the folly of trying to listen to you. But I loved him more than ever. And as you and he stand here—I am ashamed again—ashamed that I was ever so blind and ignorant and prejudiced as to compare him with—she looked at Langdon—"with you. Do you believe me now—now that I humble myself before him here in your presence?"

I should have had no heart at all if I had not felt pity for him. His face was gray, and on it were those signs of age that strong emotion brings to the surface after 40. "You could have convinced me in no other way," he replied, after a silence, and in a voice I should not have recognized.

Silence again. Presently he raised his head and with something of his old cynicism bowed to her.

"You have avenged much and many," said he. "I have often had a presentiment that my day of wrath would come."

He lifted his hat, bowed at me without looking at me, and, drawing the tatters of his pose still further over his wounds, moved away toward the landing.

I still in a stupor watched him until he had disappeared. When I turned to her she dropped her eyes. "Uncle Howard will be back this afternoon," said she. "If I may, I'll stay at the house until he comes to take me."

A weary, heart-suppressed sigh escaped from her. I knew how she must be reading my silence, but I was still unable to speak. She went to the house, browsing near by, she stroked his muzzle. Lingeringly she turned her fingers in his mane, as if about to spring to his back. That reminded me of a thousand and one changes in her—little changes each a tinge in itself, yet taken all together, making a complete transformation.

"Let me help you," I managed to say. And I bent, and made a step of my hand.

She touched her fingers to my shoulder, set her narrow, graceful foot upon my palm. But she did not rise. I glanced up, she was gazing wistfully down at me.

"Women have to learn by experience just-as do men," said she, feebly. "Yet men will not tolerate it."

I suppose I must suddenly have looked what I was unable to put into words—for her eyes grew very wide, and, with a cry that was a sigh and a sob and a laugh and a caress all in one, she slid into my arms and her face was burning against mine.

Do you remember the night at the theater," she murmured, "when your lips almost touched my neck?—I loved you then—Black Matt—Black Matt!"

And I found voice, and the horse wandered away.

your level," said I, with the easy philosophy of him who clearly has the better of the argument.

He was shaking from head to foot, not with terror, but with impotent rage. How much we owe to accident! The mere accident of my physical superiority had put him at hopeless disadvantage; had made him feel inferior to me as no victory of mental or moral superiority could possibly have done. And I myself felt a greater contempt for him than the discovery of his treachery and his shallowness had together inspired.

"I shan't indulge in flappoodle," I went on. "I'll be frank. A year ago, if any man had faced me with a claim upon a woman who was married to me, I'd probably have dealt with him as your vanity and what you call 'honor' would force you, to try to deal with a similar situation. But I live to learn, and I'm fortunately, not afraid to follow a new light. There is the vanity of so-called honor; there is also the demand of justice—of fair play. As I have told her, so I now tell you—she is free to go. But I shall say one thing to you that I did not say to her. If you do not deal fairly with her, I shall see to it that there are ten thorns to every rose in that bed of roses on which you lie. You are contemptible in many ways—perhaps that's why women like you. But there must be some good in you, or possibilities of good, or you could not have won and kept her love."

MRS. M. M. MARSHALL

Catarrh of Digestive Organs and Bowels.
MRS. MARY M. MARSHALL, Tip-ton, Mo., writes:
"I suffered three years with catarrh of the digestive organs and bowels. I was unable to find relief, until as a last resort I was induced to try Peruna."
"I began the use of Peruna when I was confined to the bed and can say that I experienced benefit from the first dose."
"I have taken five bottles in all and believe that I am cured of my trouble."
"I am enjoying as good health as an old lady of my age could expect. My age is 77."
"I recommend your medicines to sufferers whenever I meet them, and some of my friends are using them with great success."
"I will always feel grateful to you for your grand medicine and kind advice and trust that many others may be as greatly benefited as I have been."
Peruna For Bowel Trouble.
Mrs. L. S. Tinker, 822 Second street, Macon, Ga., writes:
"Two years ago my grandson suffered with hemorrhages of the bowels and he was treated by different doctors, but without cure."
"We quit all other treatment, and began the use of Peruna, and after the use of three bottles he seemed to be quite well. He is able now to walk six miles to school every day."
"Peruna has certainly worked wonders for him, and I shall not hesitate to recommend it."

MISS ANNA CARSTEN

Miss Anna Carsten, Clayton, Ill., writes:
"Your medicine, Peruna, did me so much good. I believe I should have been dead by this time if I had not used it."
"I am feeling so well now and have no trouble with my stomach. I have not taken any medicine for four or five months."
"If I am ever troubled with anything of the kind again, I shall take nothing but Peruna. I can cheerfully recommend it to my friends."
A Severe Cough.
Mrs. Emma Martin, Odessa, Mo., writes:
"I cannot thank you enough for curing me. For two years I doctored my cough which cost me many dollars, but still I seemed to get worse. My cough was so bad I could not sleep."
"Finally I purchased a bottle of Peruna. I took it according to directions, and in a short while I felt better, and after I had taken a second bottle I felt entirely well."
"After the use of six bottles I feel that I am cured, and therefore recommend this grand medicine to all who suffer with a cough as I did."

MISS EVA SCHELLE

Miss Eva Schelle, 127 N. Quincy St., Topeka, Kas., writes:
"I unhesitatingly recommend Peruna as a splendid specific for catarrhal affections. I was a sufferer with this trouble off and on for a number of years and each fresh cold added to the difficulty."
"Finally I began taking Peruna for a cold and was glad to note that it was ridding me of the catarrh also."
"I continued to use it faithfully and the result was a complete cure in a very few months."

MRS. CHRISTINA CLOW

Mrs. Christina Clow, 411 E. Platte Ave., Colorado Springs, Col., writes:
"I have taken Peruna off and on for six years and have found it very beneficial in a great many ways."
"I took it for a cough and a cold, also for catarrh of the head, and it cured me. I took it for a tonic and it gave me strength. I have every reason to speak well of your medicine."

FAITH THAT CANNOT BE SHAKEN.

Despite everything that sensational magazines may say, the women of the United States continue to have faith in Peruna.
These women know a great deal more about Peruna than the editors who have, for selfish purposes, written against it. These women have tried Peruna in their families. They have taken it themselves. They know it will help them.
They have suffered from various ailments, and Peruna has come to their relief, even when the doctors failed to cure them.
Such women cannot be convinced by any editorial spasm that their favorite household remedy is a humbug. Peruna goes right on in its conquest over disease. Its fame is spreading all over the earth.
Especially among American women is Peruna a beloved household remedy. It is entirely useless for anyone to try to dissuade them from the results of their own experience.
Peruna is a remedy for the mucous membranes. It therefore has a beneficial effect upon the internal organs of the body that are lined by mucous membranes.

For various chronic climatic diseases Peruna is a reliable remedy.
The testimonials concerning Peruna are given in the language of the people. We do not change or add to anything they may say concerning it.
The evidence is overwhelming that Peruna is a safe, reliable, invaluable remedy for the household.
Headache and Backache.
Mrs. Franziska Gaengel, Dominion 1, Old Bridgeport Mines, C. B., Canada, writes:
"I thank you for the benefit which I derived from Peruna. There may be many who are suffering from the same disease that I had, for which they have not yet been able to find the correct remedy."
"For the benefit of such persons I wish to say that I suffered with headache and backache and had a severe cough. I was in bed several weeks and could not do my work. I tried many remedies in vain."

"Then I consulted Dr. Hartman, who advised me to take Peruna and gave me further instructions, which I carefully observed."
"I felt better after taking the first bottle. I have taken several bottles now and am feeling so well that I can do all my work."
"I will never be without Peruna again, and recommend it to all."
Catarrh of the Stomach.
Mrs. Mary Allen, Route 6, Franklin, Tenn., writes:
"I am glad to be able to tell you that I am well of catarrh of the stomach, and am sincerely thankful to you for your advice."
"If it had not been for Peruna I would never have been well. I had three physicians. One of them told my husband that he could not cure me."
"I had been sick about nine months when a friend asked me to try Peruna to gratify her; so I commenced taking it. I can eat and walk and work."
"Everybody says I look as well as I ever did. Oh, you don't know how thankful I do feel to you! I have got several other people to take Peruna. I praise it to everybody."

Continue Taxing Mortgages.

The Davis bill exempting credits from taxation is now before the house, having been favorably reported by the committee on taxation. There is apparently a strong sentiment in its favor. The old question of mortgage taxation will be fought out again. The arguments for and against the measure are the same as of old, no new ones having been advanced by either side. In fact the question has been before the legislature so many times that the stock of arguments have been long since exhausted. Gov. Warner has always been opposed to exemption, having voted against the bill when a member of the legislature. Whether he will veto the bill if passed this year is not known. But one thing is sure and that is the governor does not believe in taking from the tax rolls fifty or more millions of valuations of the best kind in the state and add the taxes paid on that valuation to other property already assessed for about all it will stand.

Direct Vote for U. S. Senator.

If the members of the legislature have any doubt as to the wishes of their constituents on the question of providing for the nomination of United States senators by direct vote their doubt must be due to the fact that they have not been reading the newspapers of the state. There was lack of agreement between the newspapers as to some phases of the primary election plan, but there is an almost unanimous demand through the papers for the privilege of a direct vote by the people in the selection of the party nominee for United States senator.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured
with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Prop., Toledo, Ohio. Spring Suits and Overcoats for Men.

The wonderful growth of this Clothing business continues—one-third greater last month than in March of any previous year. All signs point to an even larger volume of sales for April. Thousands of men who have bought here in past seasons are coming back. Their friends are coming with them. Every old friend and every new acquaintance is assured of satisfaction.

Good Values and Straightforward Methods Win Success

We study styles and fabrics, have our regular lines of Clothing made up for us by a number of the foremost manufacturers in this country, whose goods meet on our tables in fair competition. The influence of this method is directly toward better prices; for every garment must sell upon its merits. The question is not "How much can we get for this?" but "What will the price be with our usual small margin of profit added?"

The "Smart Clothes" are, as a whole, the finest we sell, and the finest ready-to-wear clothes we know of. But our other makes are just as worthy values—of thoroughly reliable quality and correct style. Our aim is to have the best you can buy at the price you want to pay—And We Have It.

Men's Suits, $5.00 to $45.00.
Men's Trousers, $1.00 to $10.00.

Men's Overcoats, $8.75 to $28.00.
Men's Fancy Vests, $1.00 to $6.00.

We have said that the secret of our Clothing success, which is no secret at all, is in giving good values. And the growth has been accelerated by frequently giving extra values. We watch the manufacturers—and they watch us. They know our capacity for closing out lots quickly, and come here first when pressed to dispose of stocks on hand.

NORTHVILLE.

The City in Brief.

J. M. Green has been on the sick list the past two weeks.

Mrs. H. M. White has been ill the past week with erysipelas.

Superior Ely is the proud possessor of a new trotting sulky.

Mrs. Lou VanValkenburg is able to be out again after a week's illness.

The Carrington house on Church street has been sold to Henry Van Aken.

George Wilkes is able to be out again after a two weeks' tussle with the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Taylor have moved here from Milford and occupy rooms in Mrs. Postal's house.

Fred Savage has recovered his health and returned to Detroit. He is working for the National Express Co.

The Wayne County Convention of King's Daughters will be held in Ambler's hall Saturday afternoon of this week.

The farmers have a good deal of their spring plowing done, but it has been so cold and dry that the sowing could not be done.

Mrs. L. N. Starkweather and daughter, Mrs. Bert Phillips, have been very ill the past week. At last report they were better.

On the 19th of April the Record Keeper of the L. O. T. M. M. received a check for one thousand dollars payable to the beneficiaries of Mary E. Dolph.

Sam McLain's left hand got tangled up in a grooving machine in Dubuair's factory yesterday afternoon and the first three fingers were cut off even with the little finger.

Mrs. Richard Timlin, nee Suse Holmes, entertained a number of her friends Tuesday evening. Cards were played for a time and a fine lunch was served which was greatly enjoyed.

The Farmington Enterprise-Herald comes to us under the new management and is a very clean, up-to-date paper. It is certainly a wonderful improvement over the management of the past year.

Davies, the "Hand Cuff King," who gave an exhibition in the Opera House Friday evening, was all that he advertised himself to be. He showed remarkable ability in being able to free himself from numerous "cuffs."

The Northville Juniors played their first game of base ball with the Farmington Juniors Saturday afternoon at this place and defeated them in a score of 15 to 14. The return game will be played at Farmington April 27.

Fred Woodman, a former Northville boy, who has been in South America for some time in the interest of the Port Huron Engine & Thresher Co., has just returned. While abroad he visited England, Spain and other places of interest.

The rooms in the Opera house block, recently vacated by A. Fata, have been rented and fitted up for a reading room and gymnasium for the young men of the place. This is an excellent idea and deserves the hearty support of the citizens of this place.

Walter Brown, while operating one of the machines in the factory of the Stimpson Scale & Mfg. Co. Monday, got his hand caught in some way and the result was the loss of his little finger. He has gone to his home in Milan until the wound is healed and he is able to resume his work.

Walter Arlington of this town who has severed his connection with Uncle Sam after serving thirty years in the U. S. army, has been placed on the retired list of the army. He is well known by the old residents of this town having purchased the property of Clarence Hutton some twenty years ago.

At the eastern extremity of Dunlap street live seven old residents of Northville, namely: Mr. and Mrs. Northrop, Mr. Slaght, Mr. Charter, Mr. Bradley, Mrs. Barrett and Mrs. Hake, whose combined ages are 575 years and although they have outlived the allotted time, they are comparatively well and seem to enjoy life as well as ever.

A large tarantula dropped on the floor from a bunch of bananas in J. S. Haddock's store Saturday. It was one of the largest ever seen in Michigan and to those who were trying to capture it, it looked as large as a bear. They chloroformed the "terrible beast" and finally succeeded in getting it into a wire cornpopper, where he has been kept a prisoner ever since. Mr. Haddock expects to put it in alcohol and keep it on exhibition.

Doan's Regulets cure constipation without griping, nausea, nor any weakening effect. Ask your druggist for them. 25 cents per box.

George Rayson has been quite ill this week.

Mrs. Cogswell has been quite ill this week at the home of Mrs. Fred Lyke.

J. S. Haddock is delivering goods in a fine new covered delivery wagon this week.

Evolution of Household Remedies.

The modern patent medicine business is the natural outgrowth of the old-time household remedies.

In the early history of this country, every family had its home-made medicines. Herb teas, laxatives and tonics, were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor. Such remedies as picra, which was aloe and quassia, dissolved in apple brandy. Sometimes a hop tonic, made of whiskey, hops and bitter barks. A score or more of popular, home-made remedies were thus compounded, the formulas for which were passed along from house to house, sometimes written, sometimes verbally communicated.

The patent medicine business is a natural outgrowth from this whole-some, old-time custom. In the beginning, some enterprising doctor, impressed by the usefulness of one of these home-made remedies, would take it up, improve it in many ways, manufacture it on a large scale, advertise it mainly through almanacs for the home, and thus it would become used over a large area. LATTERLY THE HOUSE-REMEDY BUSINESS TOOK A MORE EXACT AND SCIENTIFIC FORM.

Peruna was originally one of these old-time remedies. It was used by the Algonquians, of Pennsylvania, before it was offered to the public for sale. Dr. Hartman, THE ORIGINAL COMPOUNDER OF PERUNA, is of Algonquian origin. First, he prescribed it for his neighbors and his patients. For sale of it increased, and at last he established a manufactory and furnished it to the general drug trade.

Peruna is useful in a great many ailments; such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and catarrhal diseases generally. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES HAVE LEARNED THE USE OF PERUNA and its value in the treatment of these ailments. They have learned to trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's judgment, and to rely on his remedy, PERUNA.

GONE FOREVER.

Ten years ago a farmer put his initials on a dollar bill. The next day he went to the nearest town and spent it with a merchant. Before the year was out he got the dollar back. Four times in six years the dollar came back to him for produce and three times he heard of it in the pocket of his neighbors.

The last time he got it back four years ago. He sent it to a mail order house. He never has seen that dollar since, and never will. That dollar bill will never pay any more school or road tax for him will never build or brighten any of the homes of the community. He sent it out of the circle of usefulness to him and his neighbors.

Patronize your local merchant who helps you to pay your taxes, support your schools and churches and lends a helping hand in times of distress and trouble.

Great Stunt by Geonimo.

In a single day Geonimo, when in his prime, ran 19 miles on foot, made 400 miles on one stretch as fast as he could change horses, and so completely captured him that three sets of officers were needed to finish the chase, and not more than one-third of the troops who started were in at the finish, says a writer in Outlook.

Winkled and crafty and cool as his swarthy face to day, but the fire of his infernal energy has died and he is no more than a relic of the Geonimo of whom Gen Miles said after their first meeting:

"He rode into our camp and dismounted, a prisoner. He was one of the brightest, most resolute, determined men I ever met, with the sharpest, clearest dark eye. Every movement showed power and energy."

SKIN SORE EIGHT YEARS.

Spent $300 on Doctors and Remedies but Got No Relief—Cuticura Cures in a Week.

"Upon the limbs and between the toes my skin was rough and sore, and the sore under the arms, and I had to say at home several times because of my affliction. Up to a week or so ago I had tried many other remedies, several doctors, and spent about three hundred dollars, without any success. Out this is to day the seventh day that I have been using the Cuticura Remedies (costing a dollar and a half), which have cured me completely, so that I can again attend to my business. I went to work again tonight. I had been suffering for eight years and have now been cured by the Cuticura Remedies within a week. Fritz Hirschbach, 24 Columbus Ave., New York, N. Y., March 29 and April 6, 1906."

Custom Strict in Japan.

Society is very strict in Japan about the little matters of hairdressing, and would be the woman who would neglect to abide by the prevailing custom. Not alone in the better classes, but among the poorer people as well, the eligible young woman, the widow who wishes to marry again, and the widow who doesn't, may always be distinguished by the way in which they dress their hair.

Lies often tread on the toes of the oppressed truth.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

One thing only I found—the slight scar of a hammer-head on the oak paneling that ran around the bedroom. The wood had been struck near the base and at the top of every panel, for though the mark was not perceptible on all, a test had evidently been made systematically. With this as a beginning, I found a moment later a spot of tallow under a heavy table in one corner. Evidently the furniture had been moved to permit of the closest scrutiny of the paneling. Glenam House really promised to prove exciting. I took from a drawer a small revolver, filled its chambers with cartridges and thrust it into my hip pocket, whistling meanwhile Larry Donovan's favorite air, "The Marche Funebre de Marionnettes." My heart went out to Larry as I scented adventure, and I wished him with me, but speculations as to Larry's whereabouts were always fruitless, and quite likely he was in jail somewhere. The ham of whose excellence Bates had hinted was no disappointment. There is I have always held, nothing better in this world than a properly baked ham, and the specimen Bates placed before me was a delight to the eye, so adorned was it with spices; so crisply brown its outer coat, and a taste—that first tentative taste—the one the sauce was added—was like a dream of Facilius come true. I felt that I could forge a good deal in a clock with that touch—anything short of arson and assassination.

"Bates," I said, as he stood forth where I could see him, you cook amazingly well. Where did you learn the business?"

I can hardly say I know it, sir. Your luncheon grand, it grew very capricious. Glenam I had to learn to control him and I believe I did it, sir. I don't pardon the concept.

He didn't one of you did he? I can read him, sir.

No, Mr. Glenam. It was his heart that had his warning of it.

At last to be back. To his heart of the touch—on my as well as his. I had a feeling of it. I had to keep a close watch on him. I had to keep a close watch on him.

The big door and I went playing. I had a feeling of it. I had to keep a close watch on him. I had to keep a close watch on him.

I had a feeling of it. I had to keep a close watch on him. I had to keep a close watch on him.

To day and the of much material for my collection and I reviewed my latest catch. There was how- ever one incident that I found unpleasant in the retrospect. I had been guilty of most uncharitable conduct toward one of the girls of St. Agatha's. It had certainly been unbecoming in me to sit on the wall however unwillingly, and listen to the words—few though they were—that passed between her and the chaplain. I forgot the spot through the window. I forgot Bates and the interest my room possessed for him and his unknown acquaintance, but the sudden distrust and contempt I had awakened in the girl by my childish behavior annoyed me intensely.

I lost presently found my cap and went out into the moon flooded wood toward the lake. The tangle was not so great when you knew the way and there was indeed as I had found, the air suggestion of a man.

The moon glowed a broad highway across the water, the air was sharp and still. I followed the wall of St. Agatha's to the gate climbed up and sat down in the shadow of the pillar farthest from the lake. I drew out a cigarette and was about to light it when I heard a sound as of a story or story.

As I knew no stone pavement, I was peering toward the lake when a man walking boldly about the moonlit wall toward me. The moonlight threw his figure into clear relief. Several times he paused, bent down and tapped on the wall with an object he carried in his hand.

"Tap, tap tap!" The man with the hammer was examining the farther side of the gate, and very likely he would carry his investigations beyond it. I drew up my legs and crouched in the shadow of the pillar, revolver in hand. I was not anxious to invite an encounter; I much preferred to wait for a disclosure of the purpose that lay behind this mysterious tapping upon walls.

But the matter was taken out of my own hands before I had a chance to deliberate. The man dropped to the ground, sounded the stone base under the gate, likewise the pillars, evidently without results, struck a spiteful crack upon the iron bars, then stood up abruptly and looked me straight in the eyes. It was Morgan, the caretaker of the summer colony.

"Good evening, Mr. Morgan," I said, setting the revolver into my hand.

"Certainly my question. What were you doing in my house to-day?"

He smiled again, shaking his head. "You're really fooling, Mr. Glenam. I wasn't in your house to-day; I never was in it in my life!"

His white teeth gleamed in his light beard; his hat was pushed back from his forehead so that I saw his eyes and he wore unmistakably the air of a man whose conscience is perfectly clear. I was confident that he lied, but without appealing to Bates I was not prepared to prove it.

"But you can't deny that you're on my grounds now, can you?" I had dropped the revolver to my knee but I raised it again.

Certainly not, Mr. Glenam. If you'll allow me to explain—"

"That's precisely what I want you to do."

"Well, it may seem strange," he laughed, and I felt the least bit foolish.

There was no doubt about his surprise, he fell back, staring at me hard, and instinctively drawing the hammer over his shoulder as though to fling it at me.

"Just stay where you are a moment, Morgan," I said pleasantly, and dropped to a sitting position on the wall for greater ease in talking to him.

He stood sullenly, the hammer dangling at arm's length, while my revolver covered his head.

"Now, if you please, I'd like to know what you mean by proving about here and rummaging my house?"

"Oh, it's you, is it, Mr. Glenam? Well, you certainly gave me a bad scare."

His air was one of relief and his teeth showed pleasantly through his beard.

"I certainly am. But you haven't answered my question. What were you doing in my house to-day?"

He smiled again, shaking his head. "You're really fooling, Mr. Glenam. I wasn't in your house to-day; I never was in it in my life!"

after the dying figure of the caretaker. He clearly had the advantage of familiarity with the wood, striking off boldly into the heart of it, and quickly widening the distance between us; but I kept on, even after I ceased to hear him thumping through the undergrowth, and came out presently at the margin of the lake about 50 feet from the boat-house. I waited in its shadow for some time, expecting to see the fellow again, but he did not appear.

I found the wall with difficulty and followed it back to the gate. It would be just as well, I thought, to possess myself of the hammer; and I dropped down on the St. Agatha side of the wall and groped about among the leaves until I found it.

Then I walked home, went into the library, alight with its many candles just as I had left it, and sat down before the fire to meditate. I had been absent from the house only forty-five minutes.

CHAPTER VIII.

A String of Gold Beads.

A moment after I had flung myself down before the fire, Bates entered with a fresh supply of wood. I watched him narrowly for some sign of perturbation, but he was not to be caught off guard. Possibly he had not heard the shots in the wood; at any rate, he tended the fire with his usual gravity, and after brushing the hearth paused respectfully.

"Is there anything further, sir?" I believe not, Bates. Oh! here's a hammer. I picked up out in the grounds a bit ago. I wish you'd see if it belongs to the house."

"It doesn't belong here, I think, sir. But we sometimes find tools left by ish to be pointing a pistol at the head of a fellow of so amiable a spirit.

"Hurry," I commanded.

"Well, as I was saying, it may seem strange, but I was just examining the wall to determine the character of the work. One of the cottages on the lake left me with the job of building a fence on his place, and I've been expecting to come over to look at this affair. You see, Mr. Glenam, your honored grandfather was a master in such matters and I didn't see any harm in getting the benefit—to put it so—of his experience."

I laughed. He had denied having entered the house with so much assurance that I had been prepared for some really plausible explanation of his interest in the wall.

"Morgan—you said it was Morgan, didn't you—you are undoubtedly a member of the first water."

He had been killed for saying less he said.

And for doing less than fire through the door at a man's head. It wasn't friendly of you."

I don't see why you center all your suspicions on me. You exaggerate my importance, Mr. Glenam. I'm only the man-of-all-work at a summer resort."

"I wouldn't believe you, Morgan, if you swore on a stack of Bibles as high as this wall."

"Thanks," he ejaculated mockingly. Like a flash he swung the hammer over his head and drove it at me, and at the same moment I fired. The hammer-head struck the pillar near the outer edge and in such a manner that the handle flew around and smote me smartly in the face. By the time I reached the ground the man was already running rapidly through the park, darting in and out among the trees, and I made after him at hot speed.

The hammer-handle had struck my mouth, and the whole lower half of my face stung from the blow. I abused myself roundly for managing the encounter so stupidly, and in my rage fired twice with no aim whatever.

the carpenters that worked on the house. Shall I put this in the tool chest, sir?"

Never mind. I need such a thing now and then and I'll keep it handy.

"Very good, Mr. Glenam."

We were not getting anywhere, the fellow was certainly an incomparable actor.

You must find it pretty lonely here, Bates? Don't hesitate to go to the village when you like."

I thank you, Mr. Glenam, but I am not much for idling. I keep a few books by me for the evenings. An anecdote is not what you would exactly call a diverting village."

I fancy not. But the caretaker over at the summer resort has even a loonier time I suppose. That's what I'd call a pretty cheerless job—watching summer cottages in the winter."

"That's Morgan, sir. I meet him occasionally when I go to the village. He's a very worthy person. I should call him, on slight acquaintance."

"No doubt of it, Bates. Any time through the winter you want to have him in for a social glass, it's all right with me."

When I plunged into the wood in the middle of the next afternoon it was with the definite purpose of returning to the upper end of the lake for an interview with Morgan, who had, so Bates informed me, a small house back of the cottages.

I took the canoe I had chosen for my own use from the boat-house and paddled up the lake. The air was still warm, but the wind that blew out of the south tasted of rain. I scanned the water and the borders of the lake for signs of life, more particularly, I may as well admit, for a certain maroon canoe and a girl in a red tam-o'-shanter, but lake and summer cottages were mine alone. I landed and began at once my search for Morgan. There were many paths through the woods back of the cottages, and I followed several futilely before I at last found a small house snugly hid away in a thicket of young maples.

WEIGHT AND HEALTH

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE NEED THE TONIC TREATMENT.

Mrs. J. D. Johnson, of 603 West Hickman St., Columbia, Mo., says:

"Following an operation two years ago, dropsy set in, and my left side was so swollen the doctor said he would have to tap out the water. There was constant pain and a gurgling sensation around my heart, and I could not raise my arm above my head. The kidney action was disordered and passages of the secretions too frequent. On the advice of my husband I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using two boxes my trouble has not reappeared. This is wonderful, after suffering two years."

AGE TOLD BY THE PULSE.

From Birth to Death the Beats Have a Steady Decrease.

How old are you? Ask your pulse. The human pulse has a wide range, even in perfectly healthy persons. The female pulse always beats faster than the male, and from birth to death the pulse beats steadily decrease. It has been said by great authorities that the age and sex of a person could be ascertained by the rate of the pulse alone. Babies at birth have a pulse beat of 180 times a minute in case of a girl and 150 in the case of boys. At the age of four or five the pulse beats will have fallen respectively to 110 and 100. Males' and youths' pulses average 95, and 90. Mature men and women average 80 and 75. Elderly men and women have an average of 60 and 50. An old woman's pulse rarely if ever, sinks below 50, but among men a pulse beat below 50 is quite common. There are, however, great variations consistent with health. Napoleon's pulse is said to have beaten only 44 times a minute.

BLOOD GETS SOUR.

Gives Advice and Tells of Simple Home Mixture.

At this time of year, as a well-known authority, the kidneys become weak, clogged and inactive, failing to filter out the poisons and acids which sour the blood, causing not only facial and bodily eruptions, but the worst forms of Rheumatism, Nerve, and Stomach troubles, Backache and painful, annoying urinary affections.

It is worth anyone's time now to get from some good prescription pharmacy the following ingredients: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take four teaspoonful doses after your meals and at bedtime.

This simple home-made mixture will force the kidneys to normal health action so they will filter and drain all uric acid and poisonous waste matter from the blood, and expel this in the urine at the same time restoring the run wood count—that is, 95 per cent of blood corpuscles—which is absolutely indispensable to perfect health.

HOW CLASSIC WAS WRITTEN.

Bret Harte's Great Poem Result of an Inspiration.

The war correspondent, Frederic V. Willers, has recorded a talk with Bret Harte apropos of the poem, "Dickens in Camp." "We all felt his loss most keenly in the States," said Harte.

"On hearing of his death (I) sat down about three in the afternoon to write an editorial on the great author. I wrote one and then tore it up. Then another, after much pains, was written. This did not please me, so I tore it up. I wrote yet another and threw it into the waste paper basket; it would not do. It was getting late, and I was now keeping the paper waiting for press. I was drumming on my desk, absolutely without another thought in my head; I had run dry. Suddenly I mechanically began to write and the result was the thing you seem to like so much. Well, Mr. Willers, you are not far out. I like it, too."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or in perfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh that cannot be cured by local applications. Send for circulars free. HALL'S CATARRH CURE. Sold by Druggists, etc. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

This Woman Took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, Gained Thirty Pounds and Has Been Well Ever Since.

How many women—and men too—are suffering from a general decline in health, which the ordinary remedies seem unable to check? How many husbands see their wives wasting away, steadily losing health and beauty, and are powerless to help? Consumption and other germ diseases find in these debilitated systems easy prey, for the lowered vitality is unequal to the task of fighting off the infection of these diseases to which most of us are almost daily exposed.

The symptoms indicating the decline which may have results so fatal could scarcely be better described than in the statement of Mrs. William Manley, of 92 Court Street, Utica, N. Y. Her case is a typical one. She says:

"For six months after the birth of my baby, I suffered from sick, dizzy, headache, which seemed like a rush of blood to my forehead, just back of my eyes. Some days they twisted so I could hardly see and black spots floated before them. The least exertion brought on this sickness. My appetite was poor and I was often sick to my stomach."

"If I tried to work my feet soon became swollen, paining me terribly. I had sinking spells and grew pale and nervous. I was so thin that I weighed only 95 pounds."

"One day when at the drug store to get headache powders I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills instead. I soon noticed that my headache was disappearing and my nerves gradually grew stronger. The pills gave me a hearty appetite and I now weigh over 130 pounds. I believe the pills to be the best tonic and builder a woman can take, as they certainly helped me when my condition was critical and I have never been seriously ill since."

The great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills lies in the fact that they actually make new blood and this carries health and strength to every portion of the body. The stomach is toned up, the nerves are strengthened, every organ is stimulated to do its work.

If you are ill and the treatment you are taking does not cure you, write for proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done in similar cases or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Northville Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lame legs, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy, or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Northville testimony:

L. W. Hutton, living on Main street, Northville, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and can give them my hearty endorsement. A year or two ago I was troubled with pains across my back and loins, sometimes severe and causing me great annoyance. I was told it was caused by the kidneys being disordered but none of the remedies I used helped or cured me. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and got them at Murdoch Bros. drug store. They relieved me almost immediately. I was soon entirely well and have not been bothered in the same way since. Mrs. Hutton also used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and the result was just as satisfactory as in my case. I can heartily endorse the claims made for your reliable remedy."

SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.

DEBILITY.

Many people who talk to me say: "I feel half sick all the time. I don't just know what's the matter with me." This is general debility. It's very common. People who get in this shape have my sympathy. They aren't sick enough for bed so they drag around and their families get exasperated with them.

E. McDade.

There are two causes for this condition; bad habits and a weak stomach. By bad habits I mean eating irregularly and too fast and not chewing the food thoroughly. The stomach gives out and loss of appetite, biliousness, constipation, and general debility result. First get the stomach in shape and then be more careful in the future, and the worn out, despondent, half sick feeling will be a thing of the past.

Two bottles of Cooper's New Discovery will put the stomach in shape. Common sense will do the rest. There are fifty thousand people in this country who know this to be true because they've tried it.

Here's a letter from one of them: "I was all run down from overwork, lost ambition and energy and could not sleep. It was difficult for me to attend to my work owing to that tired-out feeling. I secured two bottles of the New Discovery medicine and determined to try it. The result delighted me for renewed strength and vigor and energy came with the first few doses. It's effect was different from anything I had ever taken. I finished the two bottles now and feel well and strong again." E. McDade, 839 Dix Ave., Detroit, Mich.

We hear favorable reports of these famous medicines every day. Ask us about them.
