NEW BANK BUILDING

LAPHAM STATE SAVINGS WILL ERECT TWO STORY BRICK.

Purchased Yerkes Property, Corner Main and Center Streets.

One of the most important purchases of real estate and business transactions made in Northville for some years was that by the Lapham State Savings bank on Monday, in which it secured all the Charles Yerkes property on the northeast corner of Main and Center streets.

The property is now occupied by John Steers' hardware store, Geo. Gillie's feed store and City Attorney C. C. Yerkes and faces on both Main and Center streets.

During the summer the bank people will commence on the property the erection of a handsome two-story brick, business and office building. The bank will occupy the corner which will be fitted up especially for the purpose. There will be two fine stores on Center street and the second story will be fitted up for offices.

The moving away of the old buildings and the substitution of a modern brick structure on that corner will be a big improvement to the village as well as making an ideal location for the new bank.

W. C. T. U. Reorganized.

The Northville W. C. T. U., having reorganized, met at the home of Mrs. Ed. Vanderhoof Monday at 2:30 p. m. with fourteen members and two visitors present. Five trustees were elected, Mesdames Brock, Hetley, VanZile, Ryder and Coldren. A new secretary, Mrs. J. B. Cook, was also elected, and Mrs. Greer was elected Press Supt. A fine talk on "Moral Contests", also a recitation, was given by Mrs. Butler of Detroit. The ladies feel quite encouraged over their work now, and wish all ladies interested in good work to attend these meetings which are held the first Monday in each month at 2:30 p. m. in the rooms now occupied by the Y. M. A. C. in the Opera house building. Lady visitors always welcome. Literary programs given at each meeting.

Notice to Taxpayers.

The Board of Review for the village of Northville will meet in the Village Hall in said village on Friday and Saturday, May 17 and 18 at 9 o'clock a. m. of each of said days for the purpose of reviewing the assessment roll of said village. Taxpayers deeming themselves aggrieved may be heard at that time.

THE NORTHVILLE BALL CLUB WON

EXCITING GAME PLAYED HERE SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Chilly Winds Did Not Keep Big Crowd Away.

The ball game played here Saturday between the newly organized team of the Stimpson Scale & Mfg. Co. and the Cleary Business College team, was largely attended despite the cold weather. It was very exciting from start to finish and when it was found that Northville had won in a score of eight to six the enthusiasm of the crowd knew no bounds and was expressed in hearty cheers. The feature of the game was the catching of Moffat and Clark in the field.

Harry German as pitcher for the home team and Fink acting in the same capacity for the visiting team were star attractions each claiming a good share of honors. "Southpaw" Hinkley umpired the game in a very creditable manner.

In the evening the young ladies of the place gave a dancing party in the rink which closed the day's festivities in a very pleasing manner.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all our neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted us in our late bereavement, also to those who sent the beautiful flowers.

Notice.

We are selling goods so low that our competitors are notifying the factories we buy from not to sell us goods. Notwithstanding this fact we are able to buy all the goods we want.

I. SATOVSKY & SON.

NARROW ESCAPE.

George Carson While Temporarily Deranged Attempts Suicide.

While laboring under a mental depression, George W. Carson, one of our most highly respected citizens, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide Tuesday morning. He had gone to the barn to do the chores and when found about six o'clock he was bleeding profusely from a gash in the throat reaching from ear to ear but not deep enough to sever the jugular vein. He was carried into the house and Dr. Burgess and Rev. S. F. Dimmock were summoned, who immediately went to work to relieve the sufferer. He is resting comfortably and it is thought he will soon recover.

Mr. Carson's illness and mental trouble was brought on by over work. His many friends hope for his recovery.

FOR BETTER FIRE PROTECTION

PEOPLE TO BE ASKED TO VOTE ON IT.

Water Tower for Factories' Automatic Extinguishers.

In order to properly equip the factories with automatic fire extinguishers it is necessary, the factory people say, to have a big tower for an additional or emergency protection, besides the water works.

The proposition was presented to the council Monday night by Mr. Stimpson of the Stimpson Scale & Mfg. Co. and the council decided to put it up to the people to vote on it. The tower would cost about $1,800 and would supply all the factories.

It seems that the insurance companies now demand the towersystem in addition to the direct pressure before they will reduce their insurance rates for factories.

Married Sixty-three Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel P. Kellogg of Plymouth celebrated the sixty-third anniversary of their marriage, April 27, with a number of friends and relatives from different parts of the country. Mrs. Kellogg is the daughter of Dr. Elijah Northrop, one of the first practicing physicians of Plymouth and sister of J. C. Northrop of this place.

A niece from Baltimore, Md., Mrs. Bowman and daughter of Detroit, Mrs. C. A. Franklin of Binghamton, N. Y. and Mrs. J. C. Northrop of this place were entertained to dinner at the old Kellogg homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg's long wedded life has been one of unalloyed peace and happiness and at their advanced age they are still blessed with good health.

BIG GUN SHOOT HERE

NORTHVILLE CLUB PREPARING FOR MANY VISITORS.

To Be a Regular Old Fashioned State Tournament.

The Northville Gun club is preparing to entertain a lot of visitors here on the occasion of the large tournament which is to take place May 30 and 31.

There will be events galore and prizes of a proportion in keeping with the occasion.

Shooters from all over the state will be present and dozens of Northville sportsmen will participate for honors—and coin. Secretary R. R. Darwin and President Merritt Stanley of the local gun club are hustling night and day making final arrangements.

Methodist Church Notes.

The Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. R. M. Johnson next Tuesday afternoon. Members requested to be present.

Baptist Church Notes.

(By a Member.)

Several of the ladies attended the missionary meeting of the Wayne Baptist association at Plymouth yesterday.

The subject of the sermon Sunday morning will be "The Eternal Message of the Son of God to the Church in Thyatira." The evening subject will be "The Pearl of Great Price."

Presbyterian Church Notes.

(By the Pastor.)

Services next Sunday at the usual hour.

The offering next Sunday morning will be for the Board of Ministerial Relief.

According to one of our best Biblical scholars the wife of Joseph was Mrs. Joseph.

The Ladies' Missionary meeting will be held at Mrs. Kate Yerkes' next Tuesday afternoon, May 14, at 2:30 o'clock.

The Ladies' Aid society will hold a sale of advertisers' and manufacturers' samples May 24th and 25th. This is intended to be a mutual benefit to business men and to the society. Many contributions have been received not only from our business men but from nearly every part of the United States, of every conceivable kind of goods. This will be a rare opportunity for bargains of every description. As articles are contributed gratuitously all goods will be undersold rather than otherwise. All bargain-lovers should wait for the sale. A fine program will be rendered on one of the evenings.

Negro Children Like Poetry.

"Negro children are fond of poetry—more so than white children."

This is what Mrs. Carrie Whitney, public librarian, says.

"Not long ago," she continued, "I saw a negro boy in here, deeply engrossed in a rather large book. I walked gently up behind him. What do you suppose he was reading? You couldn't guess in a year. It was Dante's Inferno. His little face showed eagerness, too, to learn of that terrible picture Dante drew."

"The poems of Eugene Field are particularly attractive to the negro children. And every few days one of them makes a request for the poem which says 'An' the Goblins 'll get you, ef you don't watch out.'"

CHAPTER IV.

The Coward.

As she left me I again caught the look of wonder, a resentful wonder, a curiosity that was even harsh and stern.

I seated myself opposite the woman I had unconsciously wronged. For the first time she looked at me, and I saw with relief that neither pain nor anguish lurked in her clear eyes. There was no outraged love nor tenderness. Nor was there pity for herself or for me. But even so, it seemed to me pathetic that a woman should be so strong.

"I wish to hear everything. Begin, please, with your first meeting with Mr. Willoughby. Tell me all—the last moment."

"I shall not spare either yourself or myself," I promised.

"Did you know Mr. Willoughby intimately? Were you at Oxford with him? I think I do not remember his speaking of you."

She spoke slowly, with a certain aloofness. A desire to be just struggled with a manifest dislike—a dislike that was evidently not lessened because of my studied calm. Perhaps she thought of a fervent expression of penitence more fitting. But instinctively I knew that an hysterical repentance would increase her contempt for me. I preferred her hatred to that. And so I told my story absolutely without feeling.

"I met him for the first time the night before his death."

"Indeed!" Her voice trembled with anger. She was indignant that he should have discussed his love with an utter stranger.

"It was not until we had both given up hope that he mentioned you, Miss Brett," I said with some sternness.

"But surely his death was the result of a quite unexpected accident." The newspapers gave one that impression, she exclaimed suspiciously. The words and the look accused me of falsehood.

"The accident came only after we were both utterly exhausted by the sufferings of a night spent on the mountain paths."

"And were the newspapers correct in saying that you were not an experienced mountain climber? And did Mr. Willoughby know that?"

"Yes, I am simply a tourist. This is the first time I have been in Europe. I came to Switzerland as thousands of others come—to see the mountains from an hotel piazza or a railway train. To me, as to most tourists, the Alps were simply a gigantic panorama to be viewed complacently, as one looks at Niagara Falls. To climb them never occurred to me until I met Mr. Willoughby."

"I was making the usual circular tour, Interlaken, Scheidegg, Lauterbrunnen, Gindelwald. Mr. Willoughby happened to sit next to me at the table d'hôte at the Bear hotel. He was an athlete, Switzerland to him was simply an immense playground; he spoke of the trophies he had won at Queen's fields in the same breath as his exploits in scaling a mountain top. At first I listened to him with indifference; his enthusiasm amused me—nothing more. I had supposed that people climbed mountains simply for the view, because on the summit one could see a little farther than at one were merely on the mountain-side. But as he talked I began to understand. It was a game—a conflict—a battle if you wish—in which one pitted one's strength and wit in a hand to hand fight with nature."

"Gradually his enthusiasm aroused mine. I was weary of sight-seeing. The horde of tourists disgusted me. Before we had finished our cigars I longed to pick my first Edelweiss, to play this new game myself. I hinted vaguely at dangers, but my companion laughed at them. I was presumptuous enough to think that where he led I might follow."

"The usual mistake of the tourist, I believe," commented Miss Brett coldly. "And you begged that you might go with him on his next climb?"

"At least I was willing enough to do so when he suggested that. He was planning to make the Strategy Pass. I confess that the word pass did not sound especially formidable, for he declared that guides were not at all necessary. So I agreed to make the ascent with him. I did not realize that mountain climbing, more than any other sport, required arduous training."

"The next morning at 11 o'clock we started from Gindelwald. We were provided with the customary paraphernalia of the Alpine climber; but our climb to the Schwarzegg Club Hut, at the Upper Ice-fall, where we were to spend the night, might have been made with walking sticks instead of alpenstocks. It was for the most part a simple path over glassy slopes on the eastern side of the Lower Grindelwald Glacier—a bypath winding along the cliffs."

"We were aroused the next morning before it was light, and I was rather relieved when two guides who were waiting at the hut for a party expected that day, shook their heads at the weather, and warned us that it would not be safe to attempt the pass alone. My companion laughed at their fears. The heavens were quite clear; the stars shone faintly; the moon was waning; there was no hint of wind or storm. He assured me that the protests of the guides was a clumsy attempt to frighten us into engaging their services. They were waiting for us; it was the usual trick. I accepted his explanation as plausible enough. I was unwilling to disappoint him now that we had started, but for the first time I felt some misgiving.

"I shall not weary you with the description of our climb. The ascent was steep and trying in places, over ice and rock. In about four hours we reached the Zassenberg Châlets and the Central Ice-fall. A stiff scramble of an hour brought us to the frozen snow of a plateau. Here our path seemed to me less clear but my companion advanced with confidence. I felt the altitude now distressingly. I had quains of mountain sickness. Still I struggled after him, until we came to the base of a precipitous wall of ice. We had passed over the last of the glaciers we had reached the summit."

"I supposed now that the worst was over. But the descent was by far the most difficult and dangerous part of our day's work. Every step had to be taken with extreme care. We were roped off course, and I annoyed Mr. Willoughby by being compelled to halt repeatedly. The fact is, I was frightfully exhausted, though I struggled after him as doggedly as I could.

"At last the descent became less hazardous. I believe that we should have arrived at Grimsel safely had we continued our way in a direct line and with the care that had characterized our first movements. But my companion attempted more and more difficult feats of climbing. As a rule I did not follow him. But presently a mountain ledge obstructed our path. Two courses were open to us. We could make a long but safe detour around it, or we could scale it. My companion decided upon the latter course. I again fastened the rope about my waist and followed him."

"Do you wish me to infer that the boyish confidence of Mr. Willoughby led to the tragedy?" Helena asked in a passionless voice.

"I wish you to infer nothing."

"But you place the blame at least tacitly, on one who is dead and cannot defend himself," she insisted angrily.

"I am sorry you should think so. I am trying to give you the facts quite simply—the absolute truth."

"I do not wish to wrong you," she said in a low voice. "I wish to be just to you, Mr. Haddon."

"Just when I realized that we were in danger I hardly know. Or perhaps I should be more honest if I said that I cannot tell just when I began to feel afraid. We had climbed cautiously and slowly around the ledge. Mr. Willoughby was in the lead. Suddenly, as we reached this shoulder, a flake of snow touched my cheek."

"Clinging to the face of the rock, I looked down. The ice slopes were turning yellow in the cold early evening light. But far below they were hidden by mists, which even as we looked seemed to gather volume and to roll onward and upward, threatening to engulf us. The sky was laden. As we made the ledge a gust of wind almost swept us from our foothold. The snow fell more thickly, it came, it seemed, from every quarter in an instant."

"We had made the ledge in safety, but even as we looked about us the mist enveloped us. It was impossible to see more than a few yards ahead. Still we struggled on slowly and mechanically. Rocks, which in ordinary circumstances would have seemed quite easy, suddenly appalled us; for we were unable to see where to put hand or foot."

"Even to my inexperienced eyes we were in a terrible predicament. Willoughby, however, was cheerful and confident. If he had misgivings he kept them to himself. I followed him blindly."

"Suddenly to our complete dismay the descent was cut off by a precipice, the rocks on either side falling almost sheer to the glacier beneath. Further attempt was useless that night. Even Willoughby acknowledged that. There was nothing for it but to bivouac for the night, and trust for better luck on the morrow."

"It is impossible for me to describe for you the sufferings of that terrible night. We gathered such stones as we could find on the narrow mountain ledge, and placed them as a protection against the biting wind. We consumed the last morsel of food. We had already drunk our tea. We huddled close to each other for warmth. We shivered, not for moments, but for 15 minutes at a time. Every now and then we chafed each other's hands to

She came from a race of soldiers. They, too, had suffered and died, and their honor had been stainless. Why should she make any allowance for my suffering and weakness? When all is said, weakness to her meant cowardice. She forgot, as the world had forgotten, that it is not so difficult to be brave when the danger is a familiar one. She looked at me quite unmoved.

"The rocks," I continued, "were covered with snow and were ice-glazed. Willoughby was anxious now. And yet it was impossible to linger; no one would dream of looking for us on this side of the mountain. So that presently when the sun rose higher and we were partially warm, I stumbled, painfully and slowly, after my companion."

"For a time I followed him mechanically in perfect silence. Suddenly he came to a pause. He told me very quietly that we were lost. He pointed as a proof of that to the overhanging ledge around which we had climbed the evening before. I am clearly at the end of my story, Miss Brett."

Again she shuddered, and we both looked at the little beacon light flickering very faintly now. About us the people laughed and talked, the orchestra was playing a Strauss waltz. "Do not spare me, please," whispered Helena.

"To retrace our steps was impossible. Just around the mountain-side we knew that we should find ourselves in comparative safety. But to climb down the overhanging precipice had been appalling; difficult the day before. Now, exhausted in mind and body, the rocks slippery with snow and ice, it seemed impossible for me, at least. And yet it is I who am alive to tell you how desperate that chance was."

"Generous to the last, he insisted that I go first. The rope was fastened about my waist; I climbed down the overhanging cliff, supported by the rope held by my companion above."

"I reached the ledge I was safe. But I had put forth the last of my strength. I could only stand there, fighting for my breath. Almost immediately Willoughby flung down the rope and warned me that he was coming and that I should be ready to give him what assistance I could. I tried to speak—to implore him to delay the descent for a few moments, my voice seemed a mere whisper. Probably he did not hear me. Or he dared not delay lest he should lose his own nerve, for he must have known that the chances were wholly against him."

"Not even for you can I linger over the details of these last awful moments. He had almost accomplished the impossible. He was just above me. I could have reached up and clasped his hand. And then what I had feared what I had known would happen, did happen. His feet slipped. He was hanging by his arms. He called to me in a strong and steady voice to come to his aid. I did not. At least, until it was too late. He hung there one frightful instant, and then—"

"Helena clasped her hands convulsively. 'And so the end came,' she murmured. 'And he died without one word.'"

"It is my right to know," she looked at me with burning eyes. "Yes, he spoke one word—one—"

"And that was—"

"'Coward!'" I whispered.

CHAPTER V.

A Life for a Life.

A long silence fell between us. I looked where the little beacon light had flickered feebly a few moments before. It had gone out. With an effort, I sought the face of the girl who sat opposite me.

She had judged I knew that. She looked at me as if I were a being apart, of another world. By my own confession I had shut myself out of her world. The man who had loved her loyally had died as the strong people of her race had died. That proud race supported her. For her I existed no longer. She gathered her skirts about her. She inclined her head slightly. She was going out of my life. She had uttered no spoken reproach. But her look, her every movement, echoed the verdict of the man who was dead.

I pushed back my chair. Thank Heaven, the ordeal was over, that was my first thought. Then I hesitated. Suddenly I longed to make this woman understand.

When others had pointed the finger of scorn I had refused to be crushed, because I believed their censure unjust. I had grown almost indifferent as to whether people despised me or not. But this was the first woman to whom I had spoken since the tragedy. Had she loved Willoughby, it would have been hopeless to expect any sympathy from her. She would have felt toward me a lifelong hatred.

But she did not love Willoughby. It was merely a sense of duty that had urged her to seek from me my story. Perhaps she wished to tell it to his bereaved parents. It was to be a sort of reparation owed to the memory of the man who had loved her.

She had judged me without emotion, without passion. She had spoken no words of reproach or anger. She was leaving me in silence. But I knew that the silence of this woman would haunt me as no spoken word of bitterness ever could. It was a silence that would irritate and madden with the coming years. It was hopeless to make her understand, to expect one word of sympathy. But at least she should see, though it were in anger, I leaned toward her, there was a certain pride in my humanity.

I paused. I looked at her wistfully. I saw no pity or sympathy in her eyes.

Confections for Tea Table

DAINTIES, THAT WILL PLEASE AFTERNOON CALLERS.

Many Kinds of Biscuit and Cake, and of Course Jam, Are Served at This Increasingly Popular Function.

Since the custom of taking afternoon tea is not only well established in this country but now in danger of becoming an untimely feast, it is astonishing to note the numerous little dainties and extra trimmings which are being served to pique and delight the appetite. It is no longer merely a cup of tea and a slice of thin bread and butter that may be expected between four and 5:30 o'clock. Jam has been added to the list and often hot Scotch scones and English muffins. Besides the tea table proper there stands usually a sort of "rack" table, pyramidal in shape and having three shelves, one above the other and round like plates. Each one is covered with attractive china holding some fascinating "bit" of cake. Jam of one or two kinds is suggested in between them and after the hostess has ascertained which jam and biscuit her guest prefers she spreads it for him herself before passing it on a small plate. This little attention appears very gracious.

Among the biscuits those of "health food" reputation are often found and jam is spread over them to add to their somewhat questionable lastness. Other hostesses have fine, small, flat wafers of whole wheat covered with chocolate in their own kitchens before serving. They are then above reproach to pass with tea. The biscuit itself is digestible, the chocolate tasty and nourishing. Biscuits covered with cheese, on the contrary, while highly agreeable to the taste, are avoided by those hyper-careful about their diet.

"Strawberry jam is undoubtedly the favorite for spreading on English muffins. Blackberry jam or guava is chosen to spread on the health food biscuits, especially those made of graham or whole wheat. Scotch scones are spread only through the middle with fresh butter. These scones are very similar to old-fashioned soda biscuits and are invariably served hot. In size they are little larger than a quarter of a dollar. The number that some people can make disappear is therefore readily counted."

Waiver toast finds a place at afternoon tea. In making it the bread is cut as thin as possible and it is then toasted until extremely crisp. It is eaten dry or with jam, but it is never buttered.

When cake appears at afternoon tea the fashion rages for a rich pound cake showing through in many large raisins. Europeans invariably refer to it as "American plum cake" and regard it as a specialty of this country. In entertaining foreigners, therefore, it is perhaps the most acceptable cake to offer.

PRETTY FRAME FOR PHOTOGRAPHS

Gold-Tinsel Embroidery Thread and Gold Braid Used.

This is a very pretty frame, the gold embroidered silk being most effective. The sketch shows just a quarter of the frame in its full size, so that the silk should be cut from this with one-half inch turnings at each edge. A medium shade of olive-green is used for our model and the simple embroidery pattern is worked with gold-tinsel embroidery thread and a tiny little gold braid which edges the opening and is put on in a wavy line.

Cut a stout piece of cardboard the shape shown but one-half inch smaller at each edge than the silk also cut a hole in the center snip the edges of silk cover the face of the card with a thin layer of wadding, place a piece of glass behind the opening, fix it by secotine, then fix the back by secotine to the sides and upper edge—or else place the photo in position, then secotine the whole edge of the back. For the support, take a double strip of paper, cover with dark green paper, and fix to the center of back. A strip of black tape or elastic fixed to support and to the back of frame, will prevent it slipping.

BROWN SERGE WALKING DRESS.

Blouse Jacket and Skirt of Somewhat Novel Design.

Cigar brown serge is used for this dress. The skirt is a seven-gore pattern, machine stitched several times at the foot.

The blouse jacket opens in front to show a white vest that is hooked in visibly, and has a line of knot stitches worked with brown silk up each side of the opening. The revers are edged with plaided silk, and the deep waistband is fastened by silk-covered buttons.

tons; two one-half inch tucks are carried from the waist quite over the shoulder each side.

The puffed sleeves have turn up cuffs, finished by plaided silk.

Crown chip hat, trimmed with velvet and a leather mount.

Streamers on Dress Hats.

A lot of the newest dress hats have streamers. A particularly nice one of fine leghorn piled with blossoms had long streamers that were to fall down the back of the hat. The ribbon with small blossoms from the hat tightly fastened on its length

VOGUE OF THE PICTURE HAT.

Model Is Sure to Be Worn This Season with Tub Frocks.

As everything else in the realm of dress that has succeeded has widened its influence and scope of usefulness, so with the picture hat, which is this season for the first time worn with tub frocks, that is, the picture hat with waving plumes, ostriches, etc. as we think of it in the full sense of the word. And this season's models are worn more to the back of the head than of yore. It is a new feature to be noted in the smartest modes.

The mushroom shape will grow in popularity as the warmer weather comes, for while it answers every purpose of beauty, one of its main objects is also to afford protection from the sun. A delightful effect in white cloth, with an edge of black velvet, has a bow of the same and looks very pretty. It is trimmed with clusters of shaded black and white feathers, completing a graceful arch.

The Season's Sashes.

Several novel kinds of sashes have appeared this spring upon gowns designed for younger women. One of these ribbon garnitures, made from opalescent moire with a narrow black edge, had two fine black silk tassels hanging from the forked points of the swallowtail effect into which the ends were divided. Another sash, made for a charming biscuit colored costume, was likewise of moire ribbon, in this case plain black, tied in a high bow at the back, the hems being finished with fringe. Still another was made of delicate chine ribbon having an exquisitely variegated fringe harmonizing with the floral colors of the sash.

To Renew Smelling Salts.

Smelling salts can be made to last four years if fresh spirits are poured over the balls of salt from time to time, so as to keep up the original strength of the mixture. Many people use spirits of ammonia in this connection, but a still more powerful specific may be found in a combination of this spirit with oil of lavender, in the proportion of two parts of the former to one of the latter, says Woman's Life. In procuring the ammonia, however, care must be taken to avoid choosing aromatic spirits of ammonia in error, the water which it contains preventing it from amalgamating with the oil.

Ten Cents Extra on Trains.

Some question has been raised as to why the railroads should desire that tickets be bought at local ticket offices rather than have the cash fare paid to the conductors on the train. This is a requirement that in any other line of business would not be thought in the least unreasonable. Tickets are issued in order that the passenger business of railroad companies may be properly accounted for and audited. It is certainly more economical and in accordance with any sensible system to require that one method in accordance with issuing evidences of payments and receipts for fare should be followed in return for increased taxes and two-cent fares Michigan can well afford to extend this consideration to the railroads. The proposition is to charge ten cents extra for fares paid on the train, the amount to be refunded to the passenger upon application at any ticket office.

President Roosevelt Coming

Lansing will be the Mecca for politicians and the people of the state generally on May 31 President Roosevelt will be here to deliver an address in connection with the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Agricultural College and great preparations are being made for the event. It is also expected that the President will briefly address the legislature in joint convention. A regiment of state troops and a goodly portion of the state naval brigade will be ordered here to participate in the parade and it will be a gala day generally. The college celebration, which will continue three days, will attract the leading educators of the country as well as the alumni of the institution from the uttermost parts. It promises to be one of the most important events in the history of the state.

A Railroad Commission.

The railroad commission bill is now before the senate having been favorably reported by the railroad committee and ordered printed. This is not the measure prepared by the Grand Rapids Board of Trade and Michigan Manufacturers' Association, although it embodies many of its provisions. It is the joint production of Railroad Commissioner Glasgow and his office force, the railroad committee and others who advised extensively with Governor Warner and Attorney General Bird. It is said to embody all the best provisions of similar laws of other states. The bill will be much in the lime-light during the ensuing fortnight and will be carefully tried out before finally passed upon. It clothes the commission with vast powers, although giving the companies a right of appeal from its decisions.

More Trouble With the Language.

"He's a steady drinker, isn't he?" "He's a drinker, all right, but he's never steady." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Electrically Ripened Bananas.

An English electrical expert has discovered a means of ripening bananas to order. The bunches are hung in an airtight glass case in which are a number of electric lights. The artificial light and heat hasten the ripening process in proportion to the number of lights turned on. Records have been made which enable the operators to make delivery of any desired quantities at any agreed time. — Popular Mechanics.

School Notes.

[By a Pupil.]

Jay Bennett of the First grade is back in school.

Hattie Pagel of the Seventh grade has returned to school.

The A Sixth pupils are learning to write compound and complex sentences.

Valentine Giger of the Kindergarten is back in school after a long absence.

The High school boys are developing their muscles by disc throwing and hurdle racing.

The B class of the Sixth grade has finished reading "Rip Van Winkle" and are now re-producing the story.

Don Yerkes of the Fifth grade has returned to school after an absence of five weeks.

The Kindergarten have a chicken coop on their blackboard which not only holds little chickens but a calendar for May also.

Last week Wednesday the members of the botany class of the High school went to the woods and secured many specimens.

The Second grade pupils are rejoicing as one of their cocoons, which they have kept in a box all winter, has turned into a butterfly.

All those in the A Class of the Third grade who repeat all of the multiplication table this morning are to be given a half holiday.

The pupils of the Second grade who are fortunate enough to get A in spelling every Friday get the honor of having their papers put on the wall.

The Fourth grade is making a collection of a little of everything and placing them on a low shelf on the wall where they may be seen at any time.

The Second grade pupils enjoyed a walk to the woods Thursday afternoon with their teacher, Miss Col-dren. They came home laden with pretty flowers.

A Cigar Store Secret.

Every tobaccoist has on his counter a machine for cutting off the ends of cigars. These machines are popular for the reason that they pay for themselves many times over every year.

The ends that smokers cut off are carefully gathered from the counter, and it takes but a few hundred of them to make a pound of good tobacco. This can be sold for 40 or 50 cents.

Some cigar store clerks are very solicitous to see that the patron does not overlook the cutting machine. They push it towards him, and he is impressed with their politeness. These clerks have for a perquisite the machine's cuttings. This adds several dollars weekly to their salaries.

Illness from Ozone.

Serious gastric troubles among workmen in large electric plants are attributed by a German authority to ozone poisoning and not to electric radiations. Ozone is produced in large quantities, and with amon, hene nitrogen it forms nitric acid, explaining the acid taste often noticed. An effective remedy is free ventilation and separation of high tension apparatus from workrooms.

HAD CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

Congressman Meekison Gives Praise To Pe-ru-na For His Relief From Catarrh.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON COMMENDS PE-RU-NA.

"I have used several bottles of Peru-na and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing." —David Meekison.

OTHER REMARKABLE CURES.

Mr. Jacob L. Davis, Galena, Stone county, Mo., writes: "I have been in bad health for thirty-seven years, and after taking twelve bottles of your Peru-na I am cured." Mr. A. E. Kidd, well-known architect, 5477 Jefferson Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes: "I have had catarrh over half of my life. I tried nearly every catarrh remedy advertised, beside a great many physicians' treatments, all of which failed. I had heard and read of Peru-na and decided to try it. I have taken seven bottles of it and weigh 172 pounds."

A SINCERE RECOMMENDATION.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, R. F. D. No. 2, Shelby, Oceana Co., Mich., writes: "Two years ago I was badly afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. I had had a run of typhoid fever, was very depleted. I could find nothing I could eat without causing distress and sour stomach. Finally I came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peru-na advertised, began to take it. It helped me soon, and after taking three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach-trouble, and can now eat anything."

It is hoped that many of our young boys and men will find pleasure in spending some of their spare time at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. There is always interesting reading matter and it is a clean place for them. The W. C. T. Fred Fenn, one of Northville's R. F. D. carriers, had a most remarkable experience last week with his auto-bicycle. The animal balked a few miles east of town and landed with Fred over in a sand pile. Finally it got on its feet again and with Fred still in the saddle it started down the road at a 20% clip. It was a wild, wild race and when Fred finally had the animal stopped again he had all his mail distributed along the highway for three miles. He finished the trip on foot and until his iron horse is thoroughly broke he will not put it again in commission.

J. S. Haddock had a narrow escape from being run over by the cars Wednesday morning. He had been out delivering groceries and was returning home by way of Rogers' condensery on the base line and when within about five feet of the track the southbound Pere Marquette train went whizzing by. He could not see the train and account of the buildings along the street and the freight cars on the siding. The train gave no signal and the roar could not be heard above the noise of the machinery in the condensery. This shows the necessity of an electric bell being placed at this crossing to warn people of approaching trains. Mr. Haddock feels very thankful that he was fortunate enough to escape.

OLD ARTICLES REJUVENATED

The Change Effected, at a Very Moderate Expense.

Faded out or dingy carpets, rugs or portieres spoil the appearance of any room. To buy new ones is expensive and one's purse is not always equal to such a demand. They can be rejuvenated, given a fresh and clean appearance and changed in color to suit the decorations of any room, by sending them to the L. C. Brossy Dyeing Co., 289 Woodward Avenue, with branches at 82 Gratiot Avenue, 162 Randolph Street, 71 East Larned Street and 86 Michigan Avenue, Detroit. The cost is moderate and the economy of such a proceeding is manifest. The firm also make a specialty of manufacturing handsome rugs from old carpets, and their system gives yard for yard. They also dry-clean wearing apparel, restoring old garments to pristine freshness. When one is tired of wearing her old suit or waist, she can send it to Brossy's and have it cleaned and dyed another color at slight expense. The firm is one of the oldest established in Michigan and its experience and advice are valuable aids to customers. Only expert workmen are employed. The electric cars pass the doors of the main office and all the branches. The L. C. Brossy Dyeing Co.'s booklet of hints on renovating may be had free for the asking, and they will be happy to promptly furnish estimates on every description of work for do.

SEEDING COMMENCED IN WESTERN CANADA.

The Prospects for a Large Acreage to Be Sown in Wheat.

St. Paul, April 24, 1907.—Word has been received at the office of the Canadian Government in St. Paul that seeding has commenced at various points throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The heavy snowfall during the past winter has left the ground in splendid shape for successful seeding operations. The fine weather of the past few days has taken much of the frost out of the ground and during next week there will scarcely be a district in which the seeder is not being operated. The most optimistic conditions exist, and in all districts the farmers are busy getting things in shape. There will be a very large acreage sown in spring wheat, oats and barley. At many points throughout the three provinces the newcomers are busy unloading their stock and effects, working night and day in order to get on their farms and become active agencies in the effort to make the year 1907 the banner year in grain producing in Western Canada. As compared with districts many hundred miles further south than this, it will be seen that Western Canada ranks amongst the first in the line of seeding operations for the present year. It is safe to say that farmers who get in their crop before the 20th or 24th of May, will receive magnificent returns. A number of those coming in this spring, who had not their land prepared last fall, will break up enough land to get in a crop of oats and barley and probably some flax. This, together with the vegetables they will plant, will give them ample food for themselves and stock during the coming summer and winter. These early seeding operations are not confined to one district, but are spread over a country 900 miles long by 400 miles in width.

The agents of the Canadian Government, located at different points throughout the United States, are busy giving information regarding the many new districts that are being made available for settlers. Low railway rates, information and literature are given on application to the agent, whose name appears in advertisement elsewhere in this paper.

PUT RELIGIOUS DUTY SECOND.

Stern Laws of Business Come First, Says Austrian Court.

An interesting case at law, which centered on the observance of an old Jewish custom, was decided in Vienna recently. A merchant, says the American Israelite, discharged a clerk on account of neglect of duty. Among the charges against him was that he came to the store late in the morning because he attended service at the synagogue in order to say Kaddish—the prayer for the dead—for his father. The clerk argued that it was his privilege and his duty to say the prayer for his departed father, while the merchant, who was also a religious man, maintained that "if Moses had known that a man had to pay 8,000 gulden a year rent he would have made different laws." The judge would not allow such an argument, but decided in favor of the merchant, because the daily attendance at the synagogue could not be considered the right of the clerk without the consent of the employer.

A Fish Story.

"Trout protection! Nonsense!" said a gunner of local eminence. "Trout are amply able to protect themselves. Look at their depredations among ducks, for example, and you will agree with me that it's the birds that need protection. It's a common thing for a trout to jump from the water, seize a duck by the neck, drag the unfortunate fowl into the depths sufficiently to leave its feet sticking in the air, where it can get no purchase upon the universe, and thus drown it. Then the trout picks the feathers from the bird, eats it at its leisure and swims away out of the jurisdiction of the courts. Are there any fishermen? None? Too bad. This would be a match for one of their fish stories."

FRIENDS HELP

St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get on my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down."

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have as delicious an article as Postum."

"Another lady, who had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years, found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and beginning Postum twice a day. She was wholly cured. Still another friend told me that Postum Food Coffee was a Godsend to her, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking Postum. "So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

I HAD WORKED MYSELF into a great passion and fairly roared my challenge, pounding the table in my rage.

"Yes, sir—I quite understand you, sir. But I'm afraid, sir—"

"Of course you're afraid!" I shouted, enraged anew by his halting speech. "You have every reason in the world to be afraid. You've probably heard that I'm a bad lot and a worthless adventurer, but you can tell Sister Theresa or Pickering or anybody you please that I'm ten-times as bad as I've ever been painted. Now clear out of here!"

I knocked about the library all morning without easing my spirit, and after luncheon I went off for a tramp. Winter had indeed come and possessed the earth, and it had given me a new landscape. The snow continued to fall in great, heavy flakes, and the ground was whitening fast.

A rabbit's track caught my eye and I followed it, hardly conscious that I did so. Then the clear punt of two small shoes mingled with the rabbit's trail. A few moments later I picked up an overshoe, probably lost in the chase by one of Sister Theresa's girls. I reflected that I remembered that while at Tech I had collected a diversity of memorabilia from school girl acquaintances and here I was beginning a new series with a string of beads and an overshoe!

A rabbit is always an attractive quarry. Few things besides riches are so elusive, and the little fellows have, I am sure, a shrewd humor peculiar to themselves. I rather envied the school girl who had ventured forth for a walk in the first snow storm of the season, and recalled Aldrich's turn on Gaudier lines as I followed the double trail.

"If ever you tread, a few moulds betrays that light foot all the same. Upon this glistening snowy fold, At every step it's a sign your name."

A pretty autograph, indeed! The snow fell steadily and I tramped on over the joint signature of the girl and the rabbit. Near the lake they parted company, the rabbit leading off at a tangent, on a line parallel with the lake, while his pursuer's steps pointed toward the boat house.

There was, so far as I knew, only one student of adventurous blood at St. Agatha's, and I was not in the least surprised to see, on the little sheltered balcony of the boat house, the red tam-o'-shanter. She wore, too, the covert coat I remembered from the day I saw her first from the wall. Her back was toward me as I drew near; her hands were thrust into her pockets. She was evidently enjoying the soft mingling of the snow with the still, blue waters of the lake, and a girl and a snow storm are, if you ask my opinion, a pretty combination. The fact of a girl's facing a winter storm argues mightily in her favor, testifies, if you will allow me, to a serene and dauntless spirit for one thing, and a sound constitution for another.

I ran up the steps, my cap in one hand, her overshoe in the other. She drew back a trifle, just enough to bring my conscience to its knees.

"I didn't mean to listen that day. I just happened to be on the wall, and it was a thoroughly underbred trick—my twitting you about it—and I should have told you before if I'd known how to see you."

"May I trouble you for that shoe?" she said with tremendous dignity.

"They taught that cold disdain of man I suppose as a required study at St. Agatha's."

"Oh, certainly! Won't you allow it?"

"Thank you, no."

"She took the damn bit of rubber—a red overshoe, even I snail and hal ovel by associations, isn't pretty—as Venus might have received a soft-shiel, crab from the hand of a fresh young merman. I was between her and the steps to which her eyes turned."

"Of course, if you won't accept my apology I can't do anything about it; but I hope you understand that I'm sincere and humble, and anxious to be forgiven."

"You seem to be making a good deal of a small matter—"

"I wasn't referring to the overshoe!" said

She did not relent.

"If you'll only go away—"

"She rested one hand against the corner of the boat house, while she flicked the overshoe to her foot. She wore, I noticed, brown gloves with cuffs."

"How can I go away? You children are always leaving things about for me to pick up. I'm perfectly worn out carrying some girl's beads about with me, and I spoiled a good glove on your overshoe."

"It relieves you of the beads, if you please."

She thrust her hands into the pockets of her coat and shook the tam-o'-shanter out to establish it in a more comfortable spot on her head.

The beads had been in my corduroy coat since I found them. I drew them out and gave them to her.

"Thank you; thank you very much." "Of course they are yours, Miss—"

"Of course they're mine," she said indignantly, and turned to go.

"We'll waive proof of property and that sort of thing. I'm sorry not to establish a more neighborly feeling with St. Agatha's. The stone wall may seem formidable, but it's not of my building—I must open the gate. That wall's a trifle steep for climbing."

I was amusing myself with the idea that my identity was a dark mystery to her. I had read English novels in which the young lord of the manor is always mistaken for the game keeper's son by the pretty daughter of the curate who has come home from school to be the belle of the county. But my lady of the red tam-o'-shanter was not a creature of illusions.

"It serves a very good purpose—the wall, I mean—Mr. Glenarm."

She was walking down the steps and I followed, pleased to hear my name from her lips. I am not a man to suffer from a lost school girl to cross my lands unattended in a snow storm; and the piazza of a boat house is not, I submit, a pleasant loafing place on a winter day.

She marched before me, her hands in her pockets—I liked her, particularly that way—with an easy swing and a light and certain step. Her remark about the wall did not encourage further conversation and I fell back upon the poets.

"Stone walls do not a prison make, Nor iron bars a cage."

I quoted.

"I have heard that—before!" she said, half turned her face and laughed as she hastened on.

Her brilliant cheeks were a delight.

We approached the gate. Her indifference to the storm delighted me. Here, I thought in my admiration, is a real product of the Western world. I felt that we had made strides toward such a comradeship as it is proper should exist between a school girl in her teens and a male neighbor of 27.

I was—going back to English fiction—the young squire walking home with the curate's pretty young daughter and conversing with fine condescension.

"We girls all wish we could come over and help hunt the lost treasure. It must be simply splendid to live in a house where there's a mystery—secret passages and chests of doubloons and all that sort of thing! My! Squire Glenarm, I suppose you spend all your nights exploring secret passages?"

This free expression of opinion startled me, though she seemed wholly innocent of impertinence.

"Who says there's any secret about the house?" I demanded.

"Oh, Ferguson, the gardener, and all the girls!"

"I fear Ferguson is drawing on his imagination."

"Well, all the people in the village think so. I've heard the candy shop woman speak of it often."

"She'd better attend to her taffy," I retorted.

"Oh, you mustn't be sensitive about it! All us girls think it ever so romantic, and we call you sometimes the lord of the realm, and when we see you walking through the darkening wood at eventide we say, 'My lord is brooding upon the treasure chests.'"

This, delivered in the stilted tone of one who was half quoting and half improvising, was irresistibly funny, and I laughed with good will.

INDIANA PEOPLE IN WESTERN CANADA.

What Shall We Do?—I've Got to Build Granaries.

A letter written to a Canadian Government agent from Tipton, Indiana, is but one of many similar that are in the hands of the Canadian government agents whose privilege it is to offer one hundred and sixty acres of land free, and low railway fares. But here is a copy of the letter:

"Tipton, Ind., Nov. 28, 1906.

"At your earnest solicitation a party of us from Tipton left May 15 for Western Canada. Our interviews with you and a careful study of your literature led us to expect great things of your country when we should arrive there, and we were not disappointed. We went prepared to make a careful examination of the country and its resources, and we did so. At early dawn the second morning out of Tipton we awoke in a new world. As far as the eye could reach was an apparently limitless expanse of new sown wheat and prairie grasses. The vivid green of the wheat just beginning to stool out, and the inky blackness of the soil contrasted in a way beautiful to see. An hour or two later we steamed into Winnipeg. Here we found a number of surprises. A hundred thousand souls well housed, with every convenience that goes to make a modern up-to-date city—banks, hotels, newspapers, stores, electric light, street railways, sewerage, waterworks, asphalt pavements, everything. With eyes and ears open we traveled for two thousand miles through Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, going out over the Canadian Pacific railway, via Calgary to Edmonton, and returning to Winnipeg over the Canadian Northern railway. In the meantime we made several side trips and stopped off at a number of points where we made drives into the surrounding country. On every hand were evidences of prosperity. The growing wheat, oats, rye, flax, barley, not little patches, but great fields, many of them a square mile in extent, the three, five and sometimes seven-horse teams laying over an inky black ribbon of yellow stubble, generally in furrows straight as gun barrels and at right angles from the roads stretching into the distance, contrasted strangely with our little fields at home. The towns both large and small were doubly conspicuous, made so, first by their newness and second by the towering elevators necessary to hold the immense crops of wheat grown in the immediate neighborhood.

The newness, the thrift, the hustle, the sound of saw and hammer, the teats housing owners of buildings in various stages of completion, the piles of household effects and agricultural implements at the railway stations waiting to be hauled out to the "claims," the occasional steam plow turning its twenty or thirty acres a day, the sod house, the unpainted house of wood, the up-to-date modern residence with large red barn by, all these were seen everywhere we went, an earnest of prosperity and wealth to be. We talked with men and visited their places that four years ago was unbroken prairie. Their houses, barns, implements and live stock were the equal of anything in Tipton County, and why not, when they were raising five, ten and twenty, yes, in one instance, forty thousand bushels of wheat a year. The fact that such large yields of wheat are raised so easily and so surely impressed us very favorably. And when we saw men who four or five years ago commenced there with two or three thousand dollars, and were now as well fixed and making money much easier and many times faster than lots of our acquaintances in Indiana farms fifty years cleared and valued at four times as much, we decided to invest. So we bought in partnership a little over two thousand acres, some of it improved and in wheat.

Before leaving Indiana we agreed that if the opportunities were as great as they were represented to be, that we would buy, and own in partnership a body of land, and leave one of our number to look after and operate it. This we accordingly did.

Just before time to cross I received a letter from him. "What shall we do?" said he; "I've got to build granaries. There's so much wheat that the railways are just swamped. We can't get cars and the elevators are all full. I never saw anything like it." In reply we wrote, "Good for you. Go ahead and build, your story sounds better than the letters we used to get from our friends in Kansas when they bewailed the fact that the hard wheat had been destroyed by the chinch bugs and the corn by hot winds, and that they must sell the stock for means to live on. Yes, build by all means." And he did, and our wheat put in by a renter made twenty-seven bushels per acre.

Very truly yours,

No Criticism to Make.

Mrs. Hwfa Williams, the English society leader, talked at a dance in New York about the fashion of riding astride that has taken hold of English equestriennes.

"Some of our young women," said Mrs. Williams, "dress out and out like men. They wear a long coat-cut like a hunting coat, a cap, riding breeches and top boots. It is a handsome costume and it is not immodest, but undoubtedly it attracts a good deal of attention. They have been telling in London lately a story about an English girl who has adopted this riding rig. Pulling up her horse one afternoon she said to an artisan who was passing: 'Can you tell me if this is the way to Wareham?'"

"The man looked her over carefully. Then he touched his cap in a respectful manner and replied: 'Yes, miss, yes—you seem to 'ave got 'em on all right.'"

We used Cuticura Remedies for our baby, who was nearly bald when young. She has very nice hair now. She is very fleshy, and we had so much trouble with heat that we would bathe her with Cuticura Soap and then apply Cuticura Ointment, it would dry the heat up so much quicker than anything else. ### Querer Idea of a Joke.

It is alleged that an English gentleman once told of a great joke he played on a friend. He was coming along the street with some companions and he discovered his friend's house on fire, with his friend in the third story window shouting for help. "Jump!" he cried. "Jump! We'll hold a blanket for you." "What was the joke?" the hearer asked. "Why," the Englishman replied, "we had no blanket at all!"

RHEUMATISM

Old Mr. Rheumatism hangs on tight and bites and pinches when he takes hold. It's quite a job to shake him off.

LAWRENCE TUSCANY.

I know better. It's that overworked and over crowded stomach giving the kidneys part of its work and the kidneys can't do it. I found this out with Cooper's New Discovery. It puts the stomach in shape, that's all it does, and yet I have seen thousands of people get rid of rheumatism by taking it. That is why I am positive that rheumatism is caused by stomach trouble. Here is a sample of letters I get every day on the subject.

"For a long time I have been a victim of sciatica and inflammatory rheumatism, and my suffering has been too great to describe. For weeks I lay helpless with every joint in my body so tender and sore that I could not bear to move. The slightest touch would cause me the greatest agony. Several doctors treated me but they failed entirely. I tried many remedies but nothing seemed to reach my case, so I continued to lay helpless. My kidneys and stomach were affected also. I could eat but little, digest less and gradually my strength left. I lost flesh rapidly."

"I began the use of the famous Cooper medicines of which I heard so much. To my surprise and delight I improved immediately, and after using several bottles I felt like another person. My strength and appetite returned. The pain and soreness left me and now I feel better than I have for months." Lawrence Tuscany, 1122 Aldrich Ave., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

WOLF RAIDED SHEEPFOLD.

George B. Israel, who lives on the farm of Sheriff Samuel Parks, in Johnson township, Brown county, thought his sheep were being killed by Oscar Ault's dog. Israel went to the Ault home armed with a gun, where he intended to kill the sheep-killing dog. A fight took place between the two men, and after they had paid their fines before Justice Robinson of Johnson township they learned that he had just trapped a large timber wolf. The neighbors immediately made friends and decided that the wolf had been killing the sheep instead of the dog, as supposed. The pet of the dead wolf was taken to Nashville. Numerous wolf tracks have been found in Johnson township and a number of farmers are looking for other wolves which they believe have been visiting sheepfolds.—Columbus correspondence Indianapolis News

WHERE MANKIND IS KING.

Gift of Speech Puts Him in a Class by Himself.

The gift of speech is the last proof of Divine favor, in virtue of which mankind has the rest of the animal kingdom faded, and stands in a class by himself.

Some beasts are stronger than men, and some know more, but no beast can be such a bore as a man, nor can any beast slipp over, in the true sense of the term. These distinctions we owe to the gift of speech.

The gift of speech, moreover, lays us under compulsion to read a great many things—which otherwise we would not, in order that when we have nothing to say, we may nevertheless say something. Thus we promote the publishing business, create a demand for wood pulp, assist in the deforestation of the earth's surface, stir up a new school of kickers, increase discontent, and contribute, at length, to progress and petulance.

Our ancestors used to consider speech a means of concealing thought, but we have nothing to conceal—Puck.

BANKING COMMISSIONER'S NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN. BANKING DEPARTMENT, office of the Commissioner. Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that THE LAPHAM STATE SAVINGS BANK, in the Village of Northville, in the County of Wayne, State of Michigan, has complied with all the provisions of the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan required to be complied with before a corporation shall be authorized to commence the business of Banking.

Now, Therefore, I, Henry M. Zimmermann, Commissioner of the State Banking Department, do hereby certify that the Lapham State Savings Bank, in the Village of Northville, in the County of Wayne and State of Michigan, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in section seven of the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

In Testimony Whereof, Witness my hand and Seal of Office at Lansing, this Twelfth day of April, 1907.

H. M. ZIMMERMANN,
Commissioner of the Banking Department.

No. 307.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

Few Jews Commit Suicide.

Hebrews rarely commit suicide. In London there were only five cases in 34 years. Not a single suicide of a Jewess was recorded last year in the United States.

The Best Laxative for Children.

Parents should see to it that their children have one natural, easy movement of the bowels each day. Do not dose the child with salts or gripping pills, as they are too powerful in effect, and thereby cause their little bodies to pieces, leaving the bowels weakened and less able to react naturally than before. Laxative Iron-ox Tablets tone and strengthen the bowels, and stimulate all the little organs to healthy activity. Chocolate coated tablets, easy to take, never gripe or nauseate. 10c, 25c and $1.00.
