MEMORIAL EXERCISES AGAIN OBSERVED

NORTHVILLE PEOPLE HONOR THE SOLDIER DEAD.

Patriotic Exercises by School Largely Attended.

Another year has passed and once again we have gathered to strew with flowers the graves of those brave men who so nobly gave their lives for their country and the people of Northville and vicinity showed their patriotism by turning out in large numbers to assist in the exercises of the day.

Sunday evening the annual G. A. R. memorial service was held in the Methodist church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. G. Stephens, assisted by Pastors Jerome and Dimmock of the Presbyterian and Baptist churches. The sermon was an excellent one and very appropriate to the occasion, and the music consisted of familiar patriotic songs. There were two vacant chairs, draped in accordance with the custom of the G. A. R., and B. G. Webster of the Post gave a short history of the two comrades who had been mustered out during the year by the final conqueror. At the close of the service, Mrs. S. J. Lawrence, Patriotic Instructor of the local W. R. C., presented, in fitting and beautiful words, a handsome silk flag to the church, an observance which has lately been adopted by the order. A large audience was present, the W. R. C. attending in a body as usual.

On Wednesday afternoon the usual patriotic exercises by the school were held in the Rink and were largely attended. These exercises were given under direction of their teachers and consisted of songs and recitations appropriate to the occasion.

At two o'clock Thursday afternoon the Rink was well filled with people who listened with marked attention to the orator of the day, E. H. Jefferies of Detroit.

After the exercises in the Rink the members of the G. A. R. Post and W. R. C. marched to the cemetery and left their tokens of remembrance on the graves of their heroic dead.

Cavell—Cook.

Dr. E. B. Cavell, veterinary surgeon, and Miss Izetta Cook, both well known and highly respected young people of this place, were quietly married by the Rev. Hicks in the Methodist parsonage at Windsor Saturday morning. They returned to Detroit where a wedding breakfast was served at the Fenobscot Inn. The wedding party consisted of five members.

The bride and groom returned to Northville where they will make their future home. The best wishes of a host of friends go with them.

Sackett-Butler.

Married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Butler, in the presence of immediate friends on Wednesday, May 29, Royal L. Sackett of Detroit and Miss Jessie V. Butler of Northville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. G. Stephens, under a beautiful wreath of apple blossoms. After congratulations light refreshments were served. The young couple left on the evening train for their home in Detroit. Mr. and Mrs. Sackett are well known in Northville and much respected and their many friends wish them the best of success.

A Pleasant Event.

A very pleasant social event was the progressive card party given Tuesday afternoon in Ambler's hall by Mesdames Frank Ambler and W. E. Ambler. The color scheme was pink and white which was carried out in decorations, score cards, cakes, ice cream and lunch cloths making a pretty effect. The first prize was won by Mrs. Milo Johnson and the consolation by Miss Della Simonds. One sad feature was the illness of Mrs. W. E. Ambler which prevented her being present.

HOW TO ADVERTISE

EFFECTIVE METHODS THAT WILL BRING RESULTS.

SHOULD TELL THE PRICES

Generalities Are Meaningless to the Public—Why the Mail-Order Man Wins—Try the Plan.

If you, Mr. Merchant, would compete with the mail-order houses there are three main essentials to success—the goods—the prices—the advertising.

The last of these is quite as essential as either of the others.

In the great majority of cases the local merchant has the goods, and he makes the prices, but in very many cases he either fails to do the advertising, or what he does do is not effective in the same way that the mail-order man's advertising is effective.

The writing of effective advertising is not an art, it is not a business that requires years of study to learn. A few hours of study and comparison will give you every essential detail that you will need.

It is comparatively safe to say that 75 per cent. of the advertising carried by local merchants in the local papers is worded in generalities only. Such advertisements as the following are found in every paper:

GO TO BLANK'S

FOR Hardware, Stoves and Tinware

BEST GOODS LOWEST PRICES

The mail-order man's advertising is different. It is specific, and while the glowing descriptions given are often 89c for hardwood folding Clothes Bar of exceptional size for the money.

22c for full sized very best quality Wash Boards.
75c for medium sized galvanized iron Wash Boards.
24c for 12-in. heavy galvanized iron water or scrub pail.
45c for best quality fiber Water Pail of exceptional size.
79c for an excellent quality of ironing boards that will not warp.
54c for an extra large heavy willow Clothes Basket.

The prices given here are of course mere fiction, but the prices Blank should quote in his advertisement should show the public that he is giving bargains; they should be prices that would compare favorably with the prices of the mail-order catalogues, and he should impress it upon the public that he not only shows them what they are buying before they pay for it, but that the purchaser has no freight to pay, and does not have to wait an interminable time for the goods he buys, as when ordering of the mail-order houses.

It is specific advertising that draws. The advertiser who describes in detail the goods he has to sell, and quotes the price he asks for it will attract the favorable attention of the public far more often than the one who deals only in generalities. It is this kind of advertising that is attracting the dollars from the smaller cities and towns and farms to the mail-order houses of the city. It is this kind of advertising that drew $200,000 into the coffers of the Chicago mail-order houses alone last year, and it is this kind of advertising on the part of the local merchants that the mail-order houses fear more than any other one thing.

But, Mr. Merchant, whether your line be hardware, dry goods, groceries, clothing or other commodities, it is well to go further than your newspaper advertising, though this is the foundation of success. Go to the local

By the aid of the editor the home magnate out of the home community can advertise: advertise systematically and persistently. Tell the public what you have to offer, and tell it, so they will understand.

Misleading—a thing which Blank's advertising should never be—they attract the attention of the reader and possible purchaser because they tell about some one thing that he may possibly want.

The mail-order man makes a run on a few things which he is willing to sell at a close margin of profit in order to attract trade in his general line on which heavy profits are made. Blank should advertise hardware in much the same manner the mail-order man advertises hardware, and he has this advantage—he can invite the people of the community to visit his store and see the goods for themselves so they will know just what they are buying.

If, instead of expressing meaningless generalities in a two-inch space, Blank had used a little more space and properly displayed an advertisement something like the following he would have been sure to have attracted attention to his store, and in all probability would have been surprised at the drawing power of his advertising:

WASHDAY BARGAIN SALE

merchant can ride the mail-order magnate out of the home community on the rail of publicity. The moral is advertise: advertise systematically and persistently. Tell the public what you have to offer, and tell it, so they will understand.

printer and have him make you little catalogues of your own. They do not need to be large affairs, but small folders of four, eight or 16 pages. Put into these folders the descriptions and prices of the goods you are carrying, or leaders in the line. Be sure that the prices quoted are right, then put one of these into the hands of every customer; keep them circulating throughout the community, and make a practice of getting out a new one every few weeks.

You, Mr. Merchant, can make advertising pay larger returns than the mail-order man secures; you can make it the mainstay of your business, and you can make it the means of killing the mail-order competition in your community. And when you do this do not begrudge the publisher the reasonable price he asks you for adequate space in his columns. He will give you better value than any other commodity you can buy.

Blue Ribbon Races.

When the day of the great M. & M. stake arrives, July 23, there will be found in the big field of twenty-six eligibles, a number of trotters ready to step right up to the record for that classic. From a standpoint of quality there has never been an M. & M. field which surpasses that of 1907. Between now and the day when thousands of people will assemble at the Grosse Pointe track to see them, these trotters may engage in a desultory struggle here or there to better fit them for the supreme effort, but none will be to his limit until the afternoon of the battle for the $10,000 stake.

RAILROAD

COMMISSION

RAILROADS ARE PUTTING UP THE USUAL FIGHT.

Seems Tough After Getting Used to Running the State.

The railroads have been extensively heard by the senate, railroad committee during the past few weeks in opposition to the bill creating a state board of railroad commissioners of three members to have the general regulation, under the terms of the bill, of the business of the companies of Michigan. The hearing will be concluded this week. The objections thus far voiced by representatives of the companies go to practically every provision of the bill. These objections are based on practical and constitutional grounds. It is claimed that the bill takes the management of the business of the company officials and turns it over to the three state commissioners. It is urged, too, that the bill is unconstitutional because it seeks to delegate to the commissioners both legislative and judicial powers and also because it violates that provision of the constitution which prohibits the state from engaging in the work of internal improvements.

The attorney for the Pete Marquette vigorously attacked the provision which requires steam roads to transfer business to the electric lines, asserting that no such requirement should be enforced at least until the electric lines are equipped with rolling stock so that they can make some sort of an exchange of cars. Thus far only the objectors to the bill have been heard. The friends of the measure are confident that in the main its provisions are reasonable and they point to the fact that just the same sort of a fight is being made against this bill as made by the companies against similar bills in other states, yet business is being transacted without embarrassment to the companies and with much greater satisfaction to shippers and the general public in states which have enacted these bills into laws.

Mrs. J. W. Rogers Dead.

Mrs. J. W. Rogers died at her home on Dunlap street about nine o'clock last night of heart failure. She had been ill but a few days and her sudden death is a shock to the community in which she lived. She was highly respected and the sympathy of the friends is extended to the bereaved husband and family.

The Value of Individuality in a Man

Can any man of character afford to obscure it with a nondescript appearance at first sight? Custom made clothing emphasizes it. A tailor not merely fits a man's figure—we suit the personality as well. The coat must be made for the man, otherwise it is not his in any personal sense. It may be in style, but not in his style. Consider the economy of custom made clothing. It lasts and looks well till worn out.

To cheapen your appearance is poor economy at best.

EDMUND'S LOVE.

"Before I give you my answer," she said, "there is one thing that you must tell me. Don't answer hastily. I want the truth. Have you ever proposed to any other girl?"

He looked down at the floor, and drew a deep, long breath. It was evident that he was sorely troubled. Turning to her at last with an appealing look he begged:

"Don't compel me to answer that question. Is it not enough that I love you with all my heart and with all my soul? I have never loved any other girl. I will confess that I may have thought I did, but I know now that it wasn't love. I never knew what love was until I met you."

"No," she firmly declared, "you must tell me all I insist on knowing her name and when and how it happened."

If it must be," he groaned. "I will confess everything. Mabel Fletcher and I were alone in the Osmonds' conservatory, and somehow closed the door, locking us in. The poor girl seemed so distressed about it that I asked her to be my wife. Luckily, Mrs. Osmond missed us, and let us out after we had been imprisoned for ten or fifteen minutes. Now I suppose you will despise me. Ah, why did you compel me to tell you? I assure you I was actuated only by pity. Oh, if you could only believe me when I say that without you my life will be a miserable failure. If you would only—"

"Did she refuse you?"

"No. That's the worst of it. She said, 'Yes,' and still thinks that she and I are going to be married."

"Take me, Edmund. Oh, I am so happy."

Addicted to Profanity.

An aged negro was called as a witness in an Alabama court. Before he was sworn the presiding magistrate directed the usual question be put to the negro: "Do you know the nature of an oath?" The old man shifted himself from one foot to the other before replying. A sly grin crept into his face. "Well, judge," said he, "I can't say how 'tis wid mos' folks but 'yo' honah, I reckon it's sorter secon' nature wid me."

A Compliment.

"Of course," said Miss Clumsy, "Mr. Kidder's language is not always elegant, but he can be very complimentary in his rough way." "Yes," asked Miss Wise. "Yes, he says I'm a bird." "Hub! So is an ostrich."

Extravagance No Bar.

He knew she was extravagant, but he had the nerve to propose, nevertheless.

"Why do you want to marry me?" she asked, after the manner of her sex.

"I'm afraid I'll acquire a bank account if I don't," he explained—Chicago Daily News.

Overruled.

The Maid—And do you make love to every girl you meet the same as you do to me?

Young Lawyer—My dear young lady, it is unprofessional to ask a question that would tend to incriminate the witness—Chicago Daily News.

Antiquity of Playing Cards.

The origin of playing cards is lost in antiquity, though some historians have attempted to fix approximate dates. In the year 1377 a German monk living in Switzerland mentions the fact that card games had been introduced into that country.

A loophole for Standard Oil is shown in the contention that companies as well as individuals are immune from indictment where evidence has been given before the grand jury.

SIDE LIGHTS ON MICHIGAN

A WILD BLIZZARD SWEEP OVER THE STATE WITH HEAVY SNOW FALL.

GREAT DAMAGE TO CROPS

Snow Blows Busy at the Soo, Saginaw Storm-Bound, and Other Cities Suffer Quite Severely.

Reports From Various Points.

Snow began to come down in quantity throughout the state Sunday night and continued Monday. It raged over the entire Saginaw valley, at times assuming the proportions of a winter blizzard, while at Mackinaw straits no one can remember ever having experienced a worse day. At noon the wind had increased to 40 miles, driving thick snow before it and all vessels sought shelter wherever possible. The snowstorm brought navigation to a practical standstill and heavy gales swept over the lakes.

Michigan cities suffered severely from the grip of the winter blizzard. In Saginaw, for example, the fall of the temperature was 35 degrees since Sunday, and the snowstorm which followed caused considerable suffering among the poor families without fuel, while business was practically at a standstill. The prize report for May 27 comes from Sault Ste. Marie. Eight inches of snow had fallen there and street railway traffic was delayed.

Shipping was tied up. From 2 to 4 inches of snow reported throughout the peninsula, says this. Snow report. High winds from the northwest drive this snow in clouds and street sweepers are running on the trolley lines the same as in midwinter. All business is at a standstill and the crop damage is heavy.

Three inches of snow fell at Alpena, accompanied by a northwest gale of 45 miles an hour. Grand Haven reports that several barns in that section were destroyed by lightning, and in the barn of County Treasurer Walter Clark a valuable driving house was killed. A blizzard was raging at Muskegon and telephone wires put out of commission, while South Haven reports snow and a drop in the mercury of 50 degrees since Sunday.

So far as Detroit is concerned it has just been a case of record. The rainfall at 7 o'clock Sunday evening the total rainfall for the day was 1.2 inches at the Union Trust building. By 7 o'clock Sunday morning it had rained more than changed the figures to .98. The big storm here was 1.51 inches expected, at least the weather observer says so. A week ago the storm was over Utah and since that time it has been traveling slowly in this direction. The temperature Monday morning went as low as 39 degrees, but at that time was higher than at most other places in the state.

It is estimated that the storm will cause thousands of dollars in loss to the farmers and fruit growers. At Ludington they are reporting hailstones as large as robins' eggs, a fall of three inches and much damage to trees, and at Negaunee, after 24 hours of rain, it began to snow so that the ground became covered.

There was a heavy flurry of snow at Grand Rapids; six inches at Waters, with a blizzard raging, six inches at Petoskey and the mercury hovering about the freezing point and the wind blowing a gale. At Cassopolis snow had been falling for several hours and Coldwater reports a snowstorm, with the mercury at 38.

One fatality is reported. Frank Walsh, a farmer of Puddleford four and a half miles north of Jackson, was killed by lightning Sunday night while standing in the doorway of a barn. The barn was only slightly burned. A few miles north the residence of Joseph Lowden was struck.

"Stand by to Man the Yards."

Naval maneuvers on the Great Lakes will receive an impetus this summer under the direction of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry. It is reported at the naval militia headquarters it is planned to have a board of officers from the regular service direct the joint work of the naval militia of the lake states.

The organizations from Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin and Indiana will be brought together under a general order for joint maneuvers. The officers who will direct the maneuvers will be made up from the complement of the ship Michigan. An inspection of the work of the organizations will be made by officials from Washington.

It is desired that the highest point of efficiency may be reached through service on the lakes, so that in time of hostilities there will be in the militia organizations a well trained corps at the disposal of the government as a reserve force.

Perished in Burning House.

Albert A. Cowson, a farmer living 11 miles south of here, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the farmhouse early Saturday. The house was occupied by Cowson, his wife and two sons Mrs. Cowson and the boys were saved, but they were unable to get their father and husband out and his body was nearly consumed. Cowson had lived there for over 25 years. He was 69 years old.

The fire caught from the kitchen stove.

By an odd coincidence, Mr. and Mrs. Van Aken are both in an Ann Arbor hospital for operations for appendicitis.

A bulletin from the labor bureau says 175,000,000 pounds of beet sugar was manufactured in Michigan in 1906, in 16 factories. Seven out of ten farmers report sugar beet growing more profitable than any other crop.

The offices of the Western Michigan conference of the Adventist church will be moved to Plainwell from Osgo. Plans are being made to locate an Adventist manufacturing concern, church and school in Plainwell.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

"Do you mind telling me what it was?"

"Willoughby, the man who was killed, loved a Miss Brett. She was at this hotel last night with her mother. They heard of my being here, and did me the honor to send for me, and to ask from me the details of the tragedy."

Locke's heavy face was agitated equally by sympathy and surprise.

"Miss Brett!" he cried. "That must be the sister of Sir Mortimer Brett."

"You know her?" I demanded eagerly.

"I have never seen her, but I know something of Sir Mortimer. He is the most picturesque figure in the English diplomatic service."

"Why picturesque? That is a strange adjective to describe a British minister. Who is he, and how do you happen to know him?"

"He is consul general and minister plenipotentiary at Sofia, Bulgaria. There is not an attaché in Europe today who has not an inquisitive eye cocked at Sir Mortimer Brett."

"And his claims to distinction?"

"Two only, my dear fellow, but they are sufficient to make any man notorious. First of all, scandal has been busy with his illustrious name. However I am afraid that's a very ordinary sort of notoriety. But when I tell you the sober fact that if he just winked war would break out in the Balkan peninsula you will grant that he is a factor in the game of European politics."

"I have heard enough to have my curiosity excited. Tell me more of the man who controls the destiny of a nation. The scandal, for instance, is it a matter of common newspaper publicity?"

"I have figured in the papers myself lately, and I feel a certain sympathy for a fellow-sufferer."

"Oh, the newspapers have made him squirm a bit, no doubt. But my sources of information are more accurate than mere newspaper gossip. You see, I happen to be the American consul here."

"Then your gossip of the embassies ought to be worth listening to."

I settled myself in my chair and lighted a fresh cigarette.

"My dear chap, you are asking too much of me—call you are! The situation in the Balkans! Good Lord, that's too appalling a subject to be discussed between two friends who have just met."

"Locke," I replied diplomatically, "I suppose you wish to discuss me and my unfortunate affair. Well, I don't. If you wish to show me that you believe me not quite so black as I am painted, ignore the matter completely."

"Of course, of course," he hastened to assure me. "And you really wish to understand why I would break out to-morrow in the Balkans if Sir Mortimer Brett lifted his little finger?"

"If such a knowledge is the prelude to the scandal that concerns him."

"Very well," he agreed good-naturedly. "But don't despair if you are still muddled after ten minutes' talk on Balkan politics. Count von Bulow has said that the man who comprehends the situation in the Balkan State does not exist. But to understand how Sir Mortimer's influence may plunge Europe into war to-day, just as surely as when Madame de Pompadour twisted Louis XV about her little finger, you must know something of the trouble that seethes and bubbles in Turkish-Macedonia."

"Even the word Turkish-Macedonia is a mere geographical name to me."

"Hang it, have I got to give you a lesson in geography as well as in history?" growled Locke. "Well, Macedonia is actually no state or country. It is simply a term to designate a strip of Turkish territory immediately to the south of Bulgaria. It is with independent Bulgaria and insurgent Macedonia that our friend Sir Mortimer Brett is concerned. In a word, the situation is this: Bulgaria, long freed from the Turkish yoke, would help struggling Macedonia to gain her freedom."

"Macedonia itself is an extraordinary hodgepodge of races—Greeks, Turks, Serbs, Bosnians, Bulgars—there are a dozen dirty little races, and half a dozen fanatic sects all ready to fly at each other's throats if they were not too busy struggling for their freedom. But Greek, Catholic, Jew, they are all ready to die cheerfully if they can down their Turkish oppressor. It is just this sublime struggle for freedom that gives a touch of nobility to mongrel, snarling, snapping Macedonia. These Macedonians for years have been putting up one of the pluckiest running fights imaginable. The House of Commons indulges in solemn piffle about what they choose to call the Balance of Criminality. In other words, they profess to think that the atrocities committed by the Turks and the Macedonians are equally horrible. But, as a matter of fact, English knowledge of Macedonian affairs is doled out by the London Times, which in turn gets its facts from the English embassy at Constantinople, professedly pro-Turkish in its sympathies."

"How do you account for that?" I demanded with a show of interest. Locke's lecture was not thrilling, but I listened patiently; for I realized that his information was necessary if I would understand Sir Mortimer's predicament.

"The missionaries," continued Locke, "know only too well that the unspeakable Turk is an even greater scoundrel than Mr. Gladstone chose to believe him. But the Foreign Office, you will understand, does not intend to risk the peace of Europe because the missionaries rave about the outraging and slaughter of a few thousands of Macedonian women and children."

"For several years they have continued a guerrilla warfare—if you can dignify the dynamiting of a railroad or a bridge and the stealthy slaughter of unarmed bands as warfare. The Macedonian campaign has been managed by a body of men who have their headquarters at Sofia, in Bulgaria."

"They fight in bands. Their arms are hidden in the fields or in the caves of the mountains. When a Turkish host surrounds one of these bands it

"Yes, it is about his diplomatic head that the elements rage. But a Jewish banker of New York city runs him a close second in importance."

"A remarkable statement, that."

"And this little Jew is a remarkable man. A Macedonian by birth, he has made five score of millions in America. But he remembers his country in the time of her need. It is he who offers to clothe, arm, and feed the Bulgarian army, if it fights for the freedom of his race. His one condition is this: the invasion must have a reasonably sure chance of success. That is assured, he thinks, when England agrees to stand behind Bulgaria."

"And the name of this Jewish banker?"

"Otto Kuhn. One must not forget him."

"So that when the king's messenger comes here he will still be unable to deliver his dispatches. As you say, it is an extraordinary state of affairs. I suppose that Sir Mortimer continues to be a properly credited ambassador until he receives those dispatches?"

"Undoubtedly."

"And in the meanwhile there is a hue and cry for him?"

"My dear fellow, I have told you repeatedly that you are behind the scenes. Ostensibly Sir Mortimer has gone to the mountains for his health. But the arrival here in Lucerne of the mother and daughter is significant."

"They come to rescue him from the influence of Countess Sarahoff of course. But if she has disappeared with Sir Mortimer—"

NORTHVILLE, MICH., MAY 31, '07.

Couple Milken More.

An increase of two hundred million dollars in the currency and coins and other circulating medium of our country during the past year, is not the fact of most importance in connection with the nation's growth in wealth during this period. Nor is the further interesting fact that the amount of money in circulation in the United States was $34 for each inhabitant on the first day of the present month, the highest per capita amount on record, worthy of first consideration. But the larger number of persons than ever before who during the past few years have become home owners or have entered upon the purchase and payment for homes, the increase in the number of bank depositors, the decrease in the number of mortgages and the sums they represent and the improvement in many details of ordinary life for the greater number of people—these are matters more directly related to the increasing wealth of our country than could be indicated through an increase in coins and currency or through the larger per capita circulation of money in the United States.

The M. A. C. Bi-Centennial.

With the dozen or more college presidents and educational dignitaries in attendance on the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the Michigan Agricultural college, this week, and with the general of the army and other military notables on hand, and with this extraordinary assemblage headed today in person by the president of the United States, Michigan will for a little time occupy a place on the stage very near to the footlights. And in our distinguished visitors didn't possess the information in advance they will probably have heard several times while here that in matters such as relate to this celebration, education and agriculture and the encouragement and up-building of the upstaples and forces they represent, Michigan permanently deserves almost a central position on the fore-front of the platform.

Doesn't Shorten the Session.

Whatever other results may have accompanied or will later follow the withdrawal of the railroad pass as a legislative emolument it is already quite evident that shorter legislative sessions are not to be expected. The legislature practically adjourns Thursday afternoons and begins its next week's work on Tuesday morning, just as it did in the gone-by days when railroad passes were in nearly every hand.

Workhouse Romance.

An interesting workhouse romance has just been brought to light in Brighton, England. A Frenchman in the infirmary, a colored man, was placed, by a curious coincidence, in the bed next a man who was recognized by the negro as his old master. The white man had been a wealthy planter in the West Indies, and, after squandering large sums of money, had descended, until he was a Brighton pauper.

The Duty of All.

We live not merely in the world, but for the world as well as for ourselves. And in upturning the different strata of society what precious metal is oft discovered, what unsuspected spiritual values encountered! Ah, this is world-serving, life-bettering and gaining by giving of our time, talent, money or cheer, even more than we give.

School Notes.

[By a Pup.]

Iva Jackson of the Fourth grade is about to leave school.

The A Seventh grade pupils have finished English history.

The First grade has been drawing dandelions and fishing scenes.

Marion Power of the Fourth grade is absent on account of her eyes.

The First grade has drawn shields and colored them red, white and blue.

The Memorial exercises held in the Rink Wednesday afternoon were largely attended.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Richardson taught the grades the "Flag Salute" Tuesday.

The B class of the Second grade received the silver star for good behavior last week.

All those in the First grade who got A in spelling have their papers put up on the wall.

The Third grade pupils have drawn some very pretty apple blossoms and painted them.

The Second grade are studying botany and have mounted cowslips, violets and may-flowers.

Miss May Coldren taught the Second grade Tuesday morning Miss Coldren, the teacher, being sick.

The Changes of Time.

The physical characteristics of the English are altering rapidly says a writer. The tall, graceful woman with the finely shaped head, well chiseled nose, kindly eyes, sweet smile, small feet and hands, and light tread is almost extinct; she is being replaced by big-made women, with a firm chin, hard-looking, and taking long, decisive strides.

Proof of a Real Bargain.

It would never seem a real bargain to a woman unless she had to get her clothes ripped off fighting through a crowd to buy it.—New York Press.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]

Next Sunday morning the Knights of Pythias will attend service in our church.

Baptist Church Notes.

[By a Member.]

Our Sunday school is making arrangements to observe Children's Day June 9th.

Services as usual Sunday. Morning subject "Christ's Reconciliation." Evening "God's Requirements of the Past."

The regular monthly business meeting of the B. Y. P. U. will be held next Wednesday evening with Miss Ethel Scott. We hope there will be a good attendance.

We were very much disappointed that Miss Nellie Yaba could not be with us last Wednesday, but she was in another part of the state and was unable to get here on that day. However she has promised to be here next Wednesday afternoon, June 5, and speak to us in the church. Everybody is invited to come and hear her.

Methodist Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]

Those wishing their children baptized on Children's Day will kindly make it known to the pastor and it will be done.

The committee appointed to look after the program for Children's Day is a good one. A splendid time may be expected.

Preaching services next Sunday evening by the pastor preceded by the Epworth League meeting at six o'clock. A cordial welcome to all.

The Thimble party of the ladies' Aid held at Mrs. Chas. Thornton's on Tuesday afternoon was well attended and all enjoyed themselves socially. Ice cream and cake were served.

We enjoyed a visit on Wednesday last from the Rev. M. H. Bartram and wife of South Lyon. Mr. Bartram was pastor of the Methodist church here some twenty-one years ago.

Quarterly meeting services will be held Sunday morning beginning with love feast at 9:15 to be followed with the administration of the Lord's Supper. We hope for a large attendance.

That was a beautiful silk flag presented to the church last Sunday evening by the ladies' Relief Corps. Such thoughtfulness will not be forgotten. In the short address accompanying the presentation the thoughts expressed were very beautiful and touching. We are proud of our ladies' Relief Corps.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

PARDRIDGE & BLACKWELL.

WE SPECULATED ON WASH GOODS! WON! YOU SAVE!

It was Jay Gould who said the man who could see five minutes ahead of the world was a rich man. It's so with everything. The real estate man who gets rich is the man who finds which way the city is going and gets in the way of it. The merchant who wins must be the merchant who is on the right side of the market.

Now "cottons" must be spelled with an "s" for it is now as big a speculative commodity in Wall Street as coppers, or wheat or railroad 4's. We figured the cotton market six months ago. Bought future deliveries by the ton. We stood to make a great deal of money, or lose it. We made it. Today we can sell our Wash Goods cheaper than they can be bought at wholesale and still make our regular percentage of profit.

If other dealers are similarly situated why do their prices show the market advances? We're giving customers the benefit of our timely purchases—"foresight" some would call it, others would say "luck." So far as you are concerned "bargains" is the word that sums up the situation. And here are the figures—just a few quotations:

MAN-A-LIN Is An Excellent Remedy for Constipation.

There are many ailments directly dependent upon constipation, such as biliousness, discolored and pimpled skin, inactive liver, dyspepsia, over-worked kidneys and headache.

Remove constipation and all of these ailments disappear.

MAN-A-LIN can be relied upon to produce a gentle action of the bowels, making pills and drastic cathartics entirely unnecessary.

A dose or two of Man-a-lin is advisable in slight febrile attacks, la grippe, colds and influenza.

Council Proceedings.

A special meeting of the village council was held Tuesday evening May 28. Present: President Stanley, Trustees Carpenter, Ryder, Richardson, Gay.

On motion the following resolution was adopted: By Trustee Richardson—Resolved That the village of Northville construct thereon a water tower to furnish water for sprinkler systems hereafter installed in the various factories in said village, said tower to cost not more than $1500.00.

Said tower to be located in the place most accessible and convenient to the factories about to install a sprinkler system and as suggested and advised by the sprinkler company which equips such factories with such system, as near as such suggestion and advice may be practicable.

That if possible, in view of the requirements thereof, the same be located on the land now belonging to this village and if not so located and the same be placed on private property, that the same be so placed on private property only after the owner thereof has executed and delivered to this village a lease of the ground to be covered thereby, with the free right of ingress thereto, said lease to give said village the free right and use to said ground for so long as it may be occupied by said tower.

That any factory installing a sprinkler system in this village may connect the same free of charge with said tower so long as such connections do not interfere with its use by the other factory interests and do not conflict with the requirements of the sprinkler system already using the same, provided such requirements are reasonable. That a committee of this council be appointed by the President thereof to make the necessary contract and do all acts necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution. That said sum of $1500.00 be spread on the general tax roll of said village in the year of 1907 in addition to the sum of $8,000.00 already provided for.

That all factories using the water trough said tower before they connect therewith, enter into a contract with said village to pay their proportionate share of the expense of keeping the same in repair and pay their proportionate share of reasonable insurance thereon.

On motion council adjourned.
THOMAS E. MURLOCK, Village Clerk.

Michigan still keeps up her reputation as a producer of more kinds of odd weather than any other old state in the union. May has a record of about two nice days.

Our enterprising hardware firms took advantage of the snow storm Monday morning and displayed a fine line of snow shovels, sleds, etc. in front of their stores.

E. J. Bradner & Son, cigar manufacturers, have purchased the old laundry building on west Main street of Harry German and will remodel the second story into living rooms and the lower floor will be used for the manufacture of cigars.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather Saturday the ball game between the hometown and Sellings & May team of Detroit did not materialize. Saturday of this week the home team will go over to Ypsilanti and try to do those fellows up.

Mrs. James Huff and Miss Mabel Burgess gave a "towel shower" at the home of the latter Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Camilla Wheeler. There were about twenty-five present. Cards were the principal feature of amusement. A luncheon was served.

The Lapham bank has installed its new safe. The steel money chest is of the circular screw door order, one of the most approved devices made by the National Lock Co. of Cleveland and is burglar proof. It is cased inside a big fire-proof jacket the upper part of which is arranged for the storage of books, papers, etc.

The Home Telephone Co. of Detroit has taken over the Telephone Co.'s plant and business and M. A. Porter has been made general manager for the Northville division and Floyd Shafer local manager for the Northville station. The Home company, recently leased one of the John Hirsch buildings on Atwater street for storage and equipment purposes preparatory to the extension of their system here.

While on a recent visit to Northville, Dr. J. A. Attridge of Detroit met with an accident which gave him a startling shake-up, from which he hasn't yet fully recovered. He caught his toe on the plank driveway which goes into Henry Lowden's place from High street and was thrown violently to the ground. The plank projects two or three inches above the walk at this place and has been in a dangerous condition for some time. Fortunately the doctor was not seriously injured but he certainly took a tumble that was a corker.

Mr. Filkins' Hens.

[Floyd E. Evans, Eighth-Grade Pupil]

Mr. Benjamin G. Filkins has ten most lovely hens:

Nine eggs a day is the record of this flock of Uncle Ben's.

One of his hens is busy. Upon some eggs she's setting. Every time you go near the nest the hen commences fretting.

She's been setting on these eggs. The time I do not know. After a while the hens will peep and the roosters begin to crow.

His hens are taught to keep in their lines. Tho' no rules they are given. All the rule in his henery—Is a high fence, most to heaven.

After a while his hens will stop—Laying so many nice "augs". For all of them will want to set. And will have to be shut in a cage.

These hens are very patient—I think To live in such a crowded quarter But every day they have their grain And Benny takes them water.

Mrs. R. Neelands is still very poorly.

The Northville Gun club tournament, which is being held here this week is largely attended and the pling, ping of the guns were heard all day yesterday.

Regular Conclave of Northville Commandery No. 39, K. T. will be held Tuesday evening, June 4. A large attendance is requested as special drill will be held.

A large and enthusiastic crowd witnessed the ball game here yesterday between the Herculeans of Detroit and the home team. The latter winning by a score of 9 to 2.

The library entertainment which was to have been given this (Friday) evening has been postponed until next Friday evening, June 7. Please bear the date in mind and be sure to attend.

Beatown people have been on the move this week. Mr. VanAken and family are moving into the house vacated by R. R. Darwin and family. Samuel Wilkinson and family will move into the house where VanAken's lived and John Buckley will move into the Wilkinson house.

Few Good Stories Written.

"Since the world began," says Julian Hawthorne, "there have been written perhaps 100 supremely good works of fiction. Assume that the first of these was the Iliad, now about 3,000 years old. One hundred good stories in 3,000 years is a story every generation. Since the battle of Waterloo, then, there have been rather less than three of them. Probably we are overrating the number rather than the contrary. When you consider the matter, three supremely good stories in a hundred years is a very high average."

Valencia Fete Day Costume.

In Valencia, on the fete days, the little girls have their hair dressed just exactly like that of their older sisters, having the front locks parted and coiled up into a wheel at each temple, and the back hair elaborately arranged from the nape of the neck to a few inches above the head, the coiffure being held secure by fancy pins.

SERIAL STORYTHE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Author of "THE MAIN CHANCE," "ZELDA DAMERON," Etc.

Copyright, 1907, by Melville Merrill Co.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

"Well," he exclaimed, "this has been very pleasant, but I must run. I have just been over to see Morgan, the caretaker, at the resort village. The poor fellow accidentally shot himself yesterday cleaning his gun or something of that sort, and he has an ugly hole in his arm that will shut him up for a month or worse. He gave me an errand to do for him. He's a conscientious fellow and wished me to write for him to Mr. Pickering that he'd been hurt, but was attending to his duties. Pickering owns a house at the farther end of the colony, and Morgan has charge of it. You know Pickering, of course?"

I looked my clerical neighbor straight in the eye, a trifle coldly, perhaps. I was wondering why Morgan, with whom I had enjoyed a duel in my own cellar only a few hours before, should be reporting his injury to Arthur Pickering.

"I think I have seen Morgan about here," I said.

"Oh, yes! He's a woodsman and a hunter—our Nimrod of the lake."

"A good sort, very likely!"

"I dare say. He has sometimes brought me ducks during the season."

"To be sure! They shoot ducks at night—those Hoosier hunters—so I hear!"

He laughed as he shook himself into his greatcoat.

"That's possible, though unsportsmanlike. But we don't have to look a gift mallard in the eye."

We laughed together. It was easy to laugh with him.

"By the way, I forgot to get Pickering's address from Morgan. If you happen to have it—"

"With pleasure," I said. "Alexis Building, Broadway New York."

"Good! That's easy to remember," he said, smiling and turning up his coat collar. "Don't forget me, I'm quartered in a hermit's cell back of the chapel, and I believe we can find many matters of interest to talk about."

"I'm confident of it," I said, glad of the sympathy and cheer that seemed to emanate from his stalwart figure. I threw on my overcoat and walked to the gate with him and saw him hurry toward the village with long strides.

CHAPTER XII.

I Explore a Passage.

"Dates!" I found him busy replenishing the candlesticks in the library. It seemed to me that he was always poking about with an air of candor. "There are a good many queer things in this world, but I guess you're one of the queerest. I don't mind telling you that there are times when I think you're a thoroughly bad lot, and then again I question my judgment and don't give you credit for being much more than a doddering fool."

He was standing under a ladder beneath the great crystal chandelier and looked down upon me with that patient inquiry that is so appealing in a dog—in, say, the eyes of an Irish setter, when you accidentally step on his tail.

"Yes, Mr. Glenarm," he replied humbly.

"Now, I want you to grasp this idea that I'm going to dig into this old shell top and bottom, I'm going to blow it up with dynamite, if I please, and I catch you spying on me or reporting my doings to my enemies, or engaging in any questionable performances whatever, I'll hang you between the posts out there in the school wall—do you understand?"—so that the sweet Sisters of St. Agatha and the dear little school girls and the chaplain and all the rest will shudder through all their lives at the very thought of you."

"Certainly, Mr. Glenarm,"—and his tone was the same he would have used if I had asked him to pass me the matches, and under my breath I imagined him to the hardest tortures of the fiery pit.

"Now, as to Morgan—"

"Yes, sir."

"What possible business do you suppose he has with Mr. Pickering?" I demanded.

"Why, sir, that's clear enough. Mr. Pickering owns a house up the lake, he got it through your grandfather. Morgan has the care of it, sir."

"Very plausible, indeed!"—and I sent him off to his work.

After luncheon I went to the end of the corridor, and began to sound the walls. They were as solid as rock, and responded dumbly to the strokes of the hammer. I sounded them on both sides, retracing my steps to the stairway, becoming more and more impatient at my ill-luck or stupidity. There was every reason why I should know my own house, and yet a stranger and an outlaw ran through it with amazing daring.

After an hour's idle search I returned to the end of the corridor, repeated all my previous soundings, and, I fear, indulged in long idle unbecoming a gentleman. Then, in my blind anger, I found what patient search had not disclosed.

I threw the hammer from me in a fit of temper and it struck one of the square blocks in the cement floor which gave forth a hollow sound. I was on my knees in an instant, my fingers searching the cracks, and drawing down close I could feel a current of air, slight but unmistakable, against my face.

The cement square, though exactly like the others in the cellar floor, was evidently only an imitation, with an opening beneath.

The block was fitted into its place, with a nicety that testified to the skill of the hand that had adjusted it. I broke a blade of my pocket-knife trying to pry it up, but, in a moment, I succeeded, and found it to be in reality a trap door, hinged to the substantial part of the floor.

A current of cool, fresh air, the same that had surprised me in the night, struck my face as I lay flat and peered into the opening. The lower passage was as black as pitch, and I lighted a lantern I had brought with me, found that wooden steps gave safe conduct below and went down.

I stood erect in the passage and had several inches to spare. It extended both ways, running back under the foundations of the house, and cut squarely under the park before the house and toward the school wall. The air grew steadily fresher, until, after I had gone about two hundred yards, I reached a point where the wind seemed to beat down on me from above. I put up my hands and found two openings about three yards apart, through which the air sucked steadily. I moved out of the current with a chuckle in my throat and a grin on my face. I had passed under the gate in the school wall, and I knew now why the piece other, now it was an august hymn now a theme from Wagner, and finally Mendelssohn's spring song won the cold, dark chapel to light and warmth with its exultant notes.

She ceased suddenly with a little sigh and struck her hands together for the place was cold. As she reached up to put out the lights I stepped forward to the chance steps.

"Please allow me to do that for you."

She turned toward me, gathering a cape about her.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" she asked, looking about quickly. "I don't remember that you were invited."

"I didn't know I was coming myself," I remarked truthfully, lifting my hand to the lamp.

"That is my opinion of you, that you're a rather unexpected person. But thank you, very much."

She showed no disposition to prolong the interview, but hurried toward the door, and reached the vestibule before I came up with her.

"You can't go any farther, Mr. Glenarm," she said, and waited as though to make sure I understood. Straight before us through the wood and beyond the school buildings the sun faded suddenly. Night was following fast upon the gray twilight and already the bolder planets were aflame in the sky. The path led straight ahead beneath the black boughs.

"I might perhaps walk to the dormitory, or whatever you call it," I said.

"Thank you, no! I'm late and haven't time to bother with you. It's against the rules, you know, for us to receive visitors."

She stepped out upon the path.

"But I'm not a caller, I'm just a neighbor! And I owe you several calls anyhow."

She laughed but did not pause and followed a pace behind her.

"Oh Yes, I'm Terribly Wicked, Squire Glenarm."

that held it had been built so high— they were hollow and were the means of sending fresh air into the tunnel.

When I had traveled about twenty yards more I felt a slight vibration accompanied by a muffled roar, and almost immediately came to a rough wooden stair that marked the end of the passage. I had no means of judging directions, but I assumed that I was well within the school wall.

I climbed the steps and in a moment stood blinking my lantern in hand, in a small, floored room. Overhead the tumult and thunder of an organ explained the rumor and roar I had heard below. I was in the crypt of St. Agatha's chapel. The inside of the door by which I had entered was a part of the wainscoting of the room and the opening was wholly covered with a map of the Holy Land.

It was all very strange and interesting. I looked at my watch and found that it was five o'clock, but I resolved to go into the chapel before going home.

The way up was clear enough, and I was soon in the vestibule. I opened the door, expecting to find a service in progress, but the little church was empty save where, at the right of the chancel, an organist was filling the church with the notes of an exultant march. Cap in hand I stole forward, and sank down in one of the pews.

A lamp over the organ keyboard gave the only light in the chapel, and made an aureole about her head, about the uncovered head of Olivia Gladys Armstrong! I smiled as I recognized her and smiled, too, as I remembered her name. But the joy she brought to the music, the happiness in her face as she raised it in the minor harmonies, her isolation, marked by the little Isle of light against the dark background of the choir—these things touched and moved me, and I bent forward, my arms upon the pew in front of me, watching and listening with a kind of awed wonder.

There was no pause in the outpouring of the melody. She changed songs and manuals with swift fingers and passed from one composition to another.

"I hope you don't think for a moment that I chased a rabbit on your side of the fence in the hope of meeting you, do you, Mr. Glenarm?"

"Be it far from me! I'm glad I came, though, for I liked your music immensely. I'm a earnest; I think it quite wonderful, Miss Armstrong."

She paid no heed to me.

"And I hope I may promise myself the pleasure of hearing you often."

"You are very kind about my poor music, Mr. Glenarm, but as I'm going away—"

I felt my heart sink a trifle. She was the only amusing person I had met at Glenarm, and the thought of losing her gave a darker note to the bleak landscape.

"That's really too bad! And just when we were getting acquainted! And I was coming to church Sunday to hear you play and to play for snow, so you'd come over often to chase rabbits!"

This, I thought, softened her heart at any rate her tone changed.

"I don't play for services, they're afraid to let me for fear I'd run comic opera tunes into the Te Deum!"

"How shocking!"

"Do you know, Mr. Glenarm,"—her tone became confidential and her pace slackened—"we call you the squire, at St. Agatha's, and the lord of the manor, and names like that! All the girls are perfectly crazy about you. They'd be wild if they thought I talked with you, clandestinely, is that the way you pronounce it?"

"Anything you say and any way you say it satisfies me," I replied.

"That's ever so nice of you," she said, mockingly again.

I felt foolish and guilty. She would probably get roundly scolded if the grave sisters learned of her talks with me, and very likely I should win their hearty contempt. But I did not turn back.

"I hope the reason you're leaving isn't—"

"I hesitated. "Ill conduct? Oh, yes; I'm terribly wicked, Squire Glenarm! They're sending me off."

THE WOMAN IN THE CAR

By J. H. LEONHARDT

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Bracebridge stood on the steps of the Casino. He had just tempted Fortune, and for once the jade had proved a prize. To describe his remorse would be impossible; he wondered dully what his mother would think when he would seek her out that night in their unpretentious hotel that overlooked the bay of Mofoca and tell her that the trip would have to be postponed; that they must hasten home without delay. He knew very well what she would do—how she would take his head on her shoulder and lay her soft, faded cheek against his ruddy one and say, "Never mind, boy. You've earned yourself for a fool, and then chuckled grimly as he thought of the surplusage of money he would have when he had pawned various articles of apparel, the proceeds of which would go to buy tickets for home."

"Just enough for a box of cigarettes," he muttered as he stumbled down the steps to the street.

"Sir, can you not understand even English?" spoke a delicious, musical voice. Bracebridge scrambled slowly back to earth from the realms of despair into which he had descended. A big red limousine car stood by the curb, and from its window protruded a vision of pink and gold and fineness that caused Bracebridge to unclasp with a haste that was more worshipful than grateful.

"What do you want?" he asked, rudely, for his dulled brain was not as quick as it was wont to be, nor his tongue as smooth, but the next instant he blushed in confusion at his own gruffness. "I beg your pardon, madam, can I be of service to you?"

"You can," she sighed relieved. "Come into the car and she threw open the door, making room for him beside her."

But, said Bracebridge hesitating.

"Come if you are going," she spoke patiently at the same time using and grasping his wrist and trying to tug him inside. Bracebridge, though it may sound paradoxical, could not resist that ineffective tug on his arm; he stepped from the curb and dropped on the seat beside her.

"Away, Adolphe," she cried, sharply. The chauffeur started the machine with a rush.

Bracebridge had a sensation of a swift journey through the night, but it was a dim one for he was busy thinking in the woman's beauty as he sat beside him her neck encircled by a pearl collar an expensive opera look thrown over her nude shoulders. Surely he had never seen the equal of this woman for beauty, she seemed almost set aside from him, a goddess; he could not converse with her. Once he tried to speak, but could get no further than "Madam," whereat he became confused, and stammered himself into silence again. The girl laughed mischievously at his sorry attempt, then looked at him sideways, out of the corner of her violet-colored eyes, and said lowly, "I am human; you are afraid, as though you might be in the presence of a deity. I would not harm a living creature, and surely not you. Besides, I am smaller than you see." She ranged her ungloved hand in white kid beside Bracebridge's larger ones.

And then the eternal masculine assumption of soul arose in Bracebridge. He could not tell from whence came his sudden courage, but with a bounce he captured her fingers and threw his muscular arm around her; she struggled hard to release herself, but saw it was useless. She stopped, panting.

"You are muzzing my frock, I will call Adolphe, you insolent man," she said, between gasps.

Bracebridge let go her hands and grasped her bare arms, facing her towards him. His eyes were burning, he felt a weakening sensation as he touched her white flesh, a feeling of longing—longing and desire that he could not control. To know that this beautiful creature was at his mercy exhilarated him; he leaned slowly toward her, nearer, and nearer, he could feel her shorted breath on his cheek. He gazed into her eyes, and he blinked, then shut them tightly, murmuring weakly, "Your shining eyes—they blind me." He bent still closer to her, and pressed his lips to hers in one shuddering ecstasy of joy and love. He could have sworn that those two rosebuds returned the pressure of his lips. She gave a surrendering sigh and laid her head upon his shoulder, her arms slipping around his neck. He crushed her to his breast victoriously.

Their one little second passed quickly. The car ran to the curb and stopped with a jerk, and they slipped apart. When the door was opened Bracebridge was saying: "I am clumsy, madam, in arranging your cloak, and I greatly fear your ruffles will be spoiled." He stepped out and looked around; they were back in front of the Casino again.

"I thank you greatly that you will aid me at all, sir," she said, smiling. I abducted you on a wager, sir, I could carry off the first gentleman saw at the Casino."

"And may I see you to-morrow?" he asked, his soul in suspense.

"The heart cannot be controlled," she whispered softly. "Drive on."

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Adolphe. The machine whirled away.

"And now to purchase those cigarettes," said Bracebridge. Something crackled in his coat pocket; he felt, and it was a newspaper.

"How did I get that," he asked himself, opening it absently. The flaming headlines caught his eye:

WOMAN IN RED AUTO
ROBS ENGLISH LORD.Most Daring Scheme in Years—Lord
Algermon the Victim.

He put his hand in his change pocket, where reposed his last five-franc note, "a remnant of the last battle."

"The devil, that girl has touched me!" he cried. "I was a fool not to think before what her game was. But thank the gods that I am only a common person; they'll never know what a fool I've been, as they know about the Englishman. I don't believe I will smoke cigarettes to-night." He added, as an afterthought, "He pulled out his old briar pipe, lighting it in silence; then he slowly took his way toward the hotel."

"This, said to lose your money and your ideal on one summer's eve," he quoth, very crestfallen.

INDOOR PARTY GAME.

Musical Terms Can Be Made to Give a Pleasant Half-Hour.

In playing this pretty game each guest is given a dainty card, to which is fastened a small pencil by a cord or a ribbon. They are then told that the "music room" is full of articles of interest and that they are to discover them and write down their names.

They may hunt singly or in couples, working their lists out separately or together, as the hostess desires, and the best answer receives a prize, a box of candy in the form of a musical instrument being appropriate.

The attention is called to the articles about the room, which are numbered, and opposite to corresponding numbers on their cards they must write the names.

Each object numbered must have some musical significance, and one need not be musical to guess them, as certain terms are so common that every one knows them.

Here is a list of articles that might be used in the game, with the significant answer to each:

1. Quire of paper (Choir).
2. Three dolls dressed alike (Triplets).
3. Carpenter's brace (Brace).
4. Watch (Time).
5. Razor (Sharp).
6. Chinrest of a violin (Rest).
7. Card bearing the letters XL (Forty).
8. Some one's name (Signature).
9. Pair of scales (Scales).
10. Base of a table bolt (Bass).
11. Peck measures containing two beats (Two beats in a measure).
12. Heavy string (Chord).
13. Flatiron—with the letter B on its face (B flat).
14. Caudboard letter G hung on chandelier (High C).
15. Lump of tar (Pitch).
16. Pipe stem (Stem).
17. Half-tone picture (Half tone).
18. Bank note (Note).
19. Baby's shoe—with an O on the sole (Solo).
20. Stout cane (Staff).
21. Necktie (Tie).
22. Bar of soap (Bar).
23. Door key (Key).
24. Tape measure (measure).
25. Quarter dollar with a black court plaster dot on it (A dotted quarter).

MADAME MERRI.

The Pace That Kills.

Attaches of the British legation in Washington are beginning to wonder how long Ambassador Bryce will be able to keep up his present pace in the matter of public dinners and addresses. Since his arrival in this country about two months ago he has been involved in an endless chain of such affairs. The demands upon his stomach and vocabulary have been incessant and, while his accomplishments are many, his versatility, great and his capacity for productive achievement large, his friends remember that he is nearly 70 years old and that perhaps it is time the venerable diplomat should be relieved from such a test of his endurance.

Sagacity of Ancients.

Many quotations came from the works of Thales, the Greek philosopher and one of the seven wise men. It was he who said, "Know thyself." "Few words are a sign of prudent judgment;" "Search after wisdom, and choose what is most worthy;" "There is nothing more beautiful than the world;" "Time is the wisest thing, for it invents and discovers all things."

He also said that it was the hardest thing in the world to know oneself, and the easiest to admonish another. In his youth Thales was urged to marry; but he said, "It is too soon;" and later in life, upon being urged again, he said, "It is too late."

An Insinuation Feared.

BACKACHE IS KIDNEYACHE.

Cure the Kidneys and the Pain Will Never Return.

Only one way to cure aching back. Cure the cause, the kidneys. Thousands tell of cures made by Doan's Kidney Pills. John C. Coleman, a prominent merchant of Swainsboro, Ga., says: "For several years my kidneys were affected, and my back ached day and night. I was languid, nervous and lame in the morning. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me right away, and the great relief that followed has been permanent." Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box.

SAHARA GROWING DRYER.

French Observer Says the Oases Are Shrinking and Will Disappear.

C. F. Gautier, a French explorer, is authority for the statement that the Sahara is continuously becoming drier to such an extent that the oases are perceptibly drying up and will disappear altogether in a relatively short time. He quotes historic records and physical signs to show that springs were at one time more plentiful than now, and that the extent of the patches where vegetation flourishes were much greater even 50 to 100 years ago.

As the climate of the region has undergone no change in perhaps thousands of years, he believes that the disappearance of the water must be due to purely mechanical causes. He considers that it is due to the continual advance of the great sand masses to the north, thus forming an impenetrable barrier against the watershed of the Atlas mountains—N. Y. Sun.

Seven Billion Gallons of Milk.

The 7,500,000,000 gallons of commercial milk annually consumed represents an enormous white river pouring across the U. S. in every direction and yet few people realize that it is fast becoming a veritable river Styx, for it is so disease laden that millions of people are day-by-day drinking disease in various forms from this greatest of disease-spreading agents. Chiefest among these diseases is Consumption. Health office reports show that 25% of the Dairy Cows have Bovine Tuberculosis and through the milk and meat are dealing out Consumption to the people at an alarming rate. An effective remedy is recently claimed in the simple feeding Rasawa in small doses to the cattle. The remedy is cheap and a few cents worth procured at any Drug Store will render a cow entirely immune is the claim made in a free booklet issued by The Mutual Mercantile Co., Cleveland, O. How to Convince a Man

In dealing with others in the intellectual region, the objects should be not to convince, but to get people to state their own views, and to realize that unless a man convinces himself no one else can. The method should be not to attack conclusions, but to ask patiently for the evidence upon which these conclusions are based.

Laxative Iron-Ox Tablets

Cure Biliousness

The most common causes of biliousness is some perversion of the functions of the liver, or the retention of bile in the bile duct.

YELLOW SALLOW SKIN IS AN INDICATION OF BILIOUSNESS.

"Laxative Iron-Ox Tablets are the best laxative I have ever used. They have cleared up my yellow skin and no other remedy has ever done so. I am 40 lbs. heavier than when I commenced using them."
(Carey J. G. Graham, Golden Home, Bath, N. Y.)

Laxative Iron-Ox Tablets tone and strengthen the bowels, and stimulate the secretions of the liver. If the bowels and liver are active and working harmoniously, waste matter and poisons which cause biliousness, stomach trouble, headache, backache, colds and rheumatism cannot accumulate in the system.

A good deal of amusement was caused by the recent announcement in the French "Journal Officiel" that Auguste Paul Henri Anjarian was nominated to a clerkship in the post office. Anjarian applied for the berth when he retired from the g. merie years ago. But he died in 19

How to Keep Well.
Stop worrying. Stop hurrying. Cleanse the body and mind of all impurities. Eat to live, instead of living to eat. Take plenty of exercise in the open air. Breathe deeply. Love your neighbor. And call upon a doctor for aid if you must.

FARMINGTON NEWS.

Calvin Goss was a Detroit visitor Saturday.

F. L. Cook & Co. will close their stores all day Decoration Day.

Lila Smith visited her aunt, Miss Maude McGregor, at Northville Friday.

Men are here putting in the new sewer. This will be a great benefit to the place.

A new porch is being built on the new Grace House. It is a very pretty piece of work.

Rev. Chas. Collins left Monday for Grandford, Ont., to spend a couple of weeks with relatives.

Louie Gow, who has been ill with appendicitis, is recovering and is able to sit up a very little.

Rev. Chas. Collins and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Grace attended the Memorial service at Northville Sunday evening.

A pleasant surprise party was given Mrs. A. McGee Friday in honor of her birthday. Only her children were present.

F. L. Cook & Co. have rented the store recently occupied by L. W. Sowle and have put in a full line of up-to-date furniture.

Chauncey Wolcott of Pontiac was in town Sunday to attend the Memorial services. He was the guest of L. W. Sowle and family.

Memorial services passed off very nicely in both churches. In the afternoon the service was held in the Methodist church and Rev. Chas. Collins preached a fine sermon. Owing to the storm, but few of the G. A. R. members were present. In the evening a patriotic program was given in the Universalist church and was quite largely attended. They were much enjoyed by all.

On Friday evening thirteen of the "Tour to Cuba" girls from Detroit were royally entertained at the home of Mrs. Fred L. Cook. The evening was pleasantly passed in reminiscences of their trip. Light refreshments were served.

WHERE TEETH COME FROM.

America Makes the Most of the False Molars.

"The flippant remark of the drummer from Philadelphia, that if there were any gnashing of teeth in the other world 75 per cent. of the gnashing would be done by artificial teeth made in America, was not far from the mark." So says H. D. Jones in an article in the Technical World magazine.

"America leads the world" in the artificial tooth industry and Philadelphia still places a large percentage of the total output. False teeth are shipped from this country to the remote corners of the earth. They are to be found in the mouths of Japanese, Chinese, Hindoos, and even, it is very likely, assisting in the mastication of the Cady rations of the Zulus of South Africa. Indeed, it is not beyond the limit of possibility that cannibal feasts are conducted with the aid of American-made artificial teeth.

"The largest plant in the world for the making of artificial teeth is to be found in Philadelphia. The industry has grown to its present mammoth proportions within a comparatively short time for the dentists of old days made the teeth for his customers in a room adjoining the operating department. They were usually ill-fitting and, being made from bone or ivory, would not stand the wear long. The discovery of a way to make false teeth by a composition that was practically indestructible marked the beginning of a new era in the ability of the human family to repair the ravages of time."

Webster a Dull Speaker.

Daniel Webster was an intolerably dull speaker unless aroused by special conditions, said the late Oliver Dyer, who used to report him. "I have often nearly fallen asleep," said Dyer a year or two ago, "when reporting Webster—so lethargic was his ordinary manner, so long-winded his sentences and so droning his voice."

SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.

NERVOUSNESS.

Nervousness makes people miserable, blue, and unhappy. They think something terrible is going to happen. At night they toss and worry and are not rested. They tire easily and haven't much energy. They think many things are the matter with them—Consumption, Kidney trouble, or twenty other diseases. It's just stomach trouble, nothing else in the world. Two bottles of Cooper's New Discovery will put the stomach in shape in three weeks. I know this because I've seen it tried a thousand times. Then all nervousness will disappear. I know this too, because I've seen it happen a thousand times. Here's a letter I got the other day:

"My system was badly run down and my stomach and nerves in an awful shape. I could not digest my food, was always tired and would often feel faint and dizzy."

"I had heard so much of your New Discovery medicine that I began taking it. Relief and strength and happiness were found in the very first bottle and the benefit I have received from it has been truly wonderful. I am no longer nervous, my appetite and digestion are good and I eat everything and sleep well." Mrs. W. J. Schaurer, 220 Guthrie St., Louisville, Ky.

We sell Cooper's New Discovery. It makes tired, worn out, nervous people happy.

City and Country illness.

It is a mistake to suppose that the oldest countries always have the largest proportion of city dwellers. Argentina has a greater urban population, relatively to the total, than France, and Australia than Spain.

CONFIRMED PROOF.

Residents of Northville Cannot Doubt what Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from chills and pains of bad backache from distressing kidney ailments—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Northville, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Northville kidney sufferers.

Henry Priest, retired molder, living on Mill street, Northville, Mich., says: "Mrs. Priest and I have as great confidence in the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills today as we had five years ago when Mrs. Priest allowed a statement telling her experience with this remedy to be published in our local papers. I have also used the pills with gratifying results. I was annoyed by a severe backache which made my work more than ordinarily difficult to perform. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Murdock Bros. Drug store. In a short time the backache vanished and I now have no trouble of the kind. Mrs. Priest suffered severe aching across her back accompanied with rheumatic pains so bad at times that she could hardly get around. After using Doan's Kidney Pills all her aches and pains disappeared. We both heartily endorse the claims made for your remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50c. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
