

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

Vol. XXXVIII, No. 48.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1907.

$1.00 Per Year in Advance

PEOPLE TO SAY

WILL VOTE IN SEPTEMBER AS TO 40 PER CENT CLAUSE.

Also As to Direct Nomination of U. S. Senator.

Although unsuccessful in his efforts to have the primary law amended so as to eliminate the requirement that a candidate must poll 40 per cent of the total vote cast in order to capture a nomination for governor, Governor Warner has not given up the fight by any means, but formally notified the legislators that he will call them together in special session next spring to give further consideration to this matter. In the meantime he proposes to have the electors of the state give expression to an opinion on the subject.

On the last day of the session the two houses adopted a concurrent resolution directing the secretary of state to prepare ballots to be voted at the election to be held in September for the purpose of electing members of the constitutional convention. By these ballots the electors will simply declare whether or not they desire the primary law amended so as to do away with the 40 percent provision and thus permit the person receiving the highest number of votes to be the nominee for governor or lieutenant governor, also to provide for the nomination of candidates for United States senator nominated by direct vote and to do away with several primary days and require all nominations to be made on the same days, thus saving the people $50,000 per election.

The fact that Lieut. Gov. Kelley, as presiding officer of the senate, broke a tie vote on this concurrent resolution, caused the opposition to protest vigorously, but he insisted that he was within his constitutional rights. The supreme court may be called upon to pass on this question.

TUESDAY'S BALL GAME

Results in Broken Leg for Farmington Man.

A game of ball was played here Tuesday afternoon between the business men of Farmington and the business men of this place. Before the game was called the boys were doing a little practicing and John Lapham, one of the visiting team, turned quickly to catch the ball when the spike in his shoe caught in the ground holding his leg in a stationary position breaking the small bone and fracturing the large one just above the ankle. He was taken to Dr. Henry who reduced the fracture. Mr. Lapham was placed on the 5.30 D. U. R. car and taken to his home in Farmington. It will be some time before he plays ball again.

The game was played and Northville won in a score of eight to eleven.

A Pleasant Event.

The annual picnic of the Northville Woman's club was held Friday afternoon at the beautiful home of Miss Mary Power, for the second time, the place being such an ideal one for the gathering that the hospitable invitation of the hostess to make it a permanent location for the purpose seems destined to be gratefully accepted. The entire affair was a most delightful one, the weather was perfect and the attendance probably the largest in the picnic annals of the club. The members and their guests numbered about one hundred happy people, who thoroughly enjoyed themselves visiting or playing the various games arranged for by the committee in charge, whose members certainly did themselves proud by the perfection of the entire program, including the elegant supper. Everyone seemed to be sorry when it came time to take the car for home, the last of the company did not get back to town until 8:30.

JULY FOURTH VERY QUIET

TWO EXCITING BALL GAMES WELL ATTENDED.

No Serious Accidents or Fires Reported.

July Fourth passed off very quietly here and up to going to press no serious accidents from fire crackers, caps, etc., have been reported. The business places and residences were decorated with flags and bunting and everybody had a day "off" and enjoyed a good rest—in one way or another.

Two exciting and largely attended ball games were played on athletic park, both being won by Northville. The forenoon game was pitched by Hinkley and Simms for Northville and they put up some fine work in the box. Marshall and Dredman were the Detroit battery. Score 8 to 7.

Rutter caught both games for Northville in his usual easy manner. The afternoon game was pitched by Gorman for Northville and Watson and Johnson were Detroit's batter-les. Score 4 to 3.

A number of family reunions were held and the day was much enjoyed.

MORTGAGES NOT EXEMPTED.

Bill to Take 'Em from Tax Rolls Didn't Pass.

Real estate mortgages and other credits will not be exempt from taxation in Michigan during the next two years. The Davis bill, which provided for exemption, passed the house with flying colors and bid fair to pass the senate, but a majority of the members of the taxation committee of the latter body concluded not to report the bill and that was the end of it. It is figured that had the bill become a law, which was quite improbable in view of the governor's opposition, it would have caused the removal of $200,000,000 from the assessment rolls. In other words it would have meant an increase of about 10 per cent on everybody's taxes—except of course the mortgagees's.

Notice to Taxpayers.

Village taxes will be received at the store of Carpenter & Huff by either Mr. Carpenter or myself Saturdays and any evening of each week during the month of June and July up to and including Wednesday, July 10, the final day for the collection of Village Taxes.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A Pleasant One Celebrated at the Home of E. W. Wood.

A very pleasant family gathering was held Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wood on Buchner Hill in honor of the former's mother, Mrs. W. A. Wood's, birthday. There were present Mrs. J. B. Watts and two sons of Brownwood, Texas, Mrs. George Fowler and daughter, Daisy, Mrs. S. A. Rossman of Pontiac, Miss Marion Porter of Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burling, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Atchinson and little son and Mrs. Allie Ashley of Detroit and Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Wood and children of this place, making about twenty-five in all. A sumptuous dinner was served and the day was much enjoyed by all.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Ninety-six Delegates to be Elected Sept. 7.

The constitutional convention which will undertake the task of drafting a new constitution which will be approved by a majority of the voters of the state, will consist of 96 members, three delegates from each senatorial district. The nominations will be made August 13 and the election will take place September 17. The bill provides that the delegates shall not receive compensation after January 31, so it is altogether probable that the convention will not continue in session after that date. The convention is to hold its first session October 22. The electors of the state will vote on the adoption of the proposed constitution at the general election in April next. It is said that many members of the legislature will be candidates.

SAD DEATH OF MRS. FRANK BROWN

NORTHVILLE MOURNS THE LOSS OF A NOBLE WOMAN.

Survived by Aged Mother, Husband and Five Children.

The death of Mrs. Frank Brown, which occurred at her home on North Center street Tuesday afternoon, has cast a gloom over the entire community in which she lived. She was taken ill about two months ago with typhoid fever which terminated in tuberculosis.

She was one of those retiring, unassuming women whom to know was to love for, in her life was simplicity, friendship and faithfulness and nothing can be said to add lustre to the splendid character and noble womanhood of the deceased.

Mrs. Brown was formerly Jennie Cowley and was born in Farmington forty-four years ago. In 1878 she was married to Frank Brown, who with five children, Mrs. Raymond Siegler of Ann Arbor, Perry of Detroit, Mrs. O. R. Bromley of Detroit, Ledger and Frank, Jr., of this place and an aged mother survive her.

Everything was done to restore her health but all to no avail as the disease was too stubborn to yield to medical aid.

She will be greatly missed, not only in her family where she was needed so much, but by her neighbors and friends and also in the W. R. C. of which she was an honored member.

The funeral will be held from the house this (Friday) afternoon at one o'clock local time. Rev. D. M. Ward of Farmington officiating and the remains taken to Farmington for burial.

RAILROAD COMMISSION

GOVERNOR WILL APPOINT ONE IN NEAR FUTURE.

Two Members are Already Selected for Board.

The enactment of a railroad commission law by the legislature as advocated by Governor Warner is a great triumph for the people. While the law is less restrictive than was desired by many, it nevertheless makes provision for an excellent start in the direction of regulating more adequately the operations of the railroads transacting business in Michigan and can be improved by future legislators as experience may warrant. It is conceded that it marks a new epoch in the matter of railroad regulation in Michigan and that there will be no return to the old system, but rather a constantly forward movement which shall be just and fair to all concerned. Two members, the present commissioner C. L. Glasgow, and Geo. Dickenson of Pontiac are already selected. The third must be an attorney and a democrat. The governor will probably announce the appointment next month.

The Value of Individuality in a Man

Can any man of character afford to obscure it with a nondescript appearance at first sight? Custom made clothing emphasizes it. A tailor not merely fits a man's figure—we suit the personality as well. The coat must be made for the man, otherwise it is not his in any personal sense. It may be in style, but not in his style. Consider the economy of custom made clothing. It lasts and looks well till worn out. To cheapen your appearance is poor economy at best.

THE HAYWOOD TRIAL.

Counsel for Haywood put on the stand in the Boise trial Morris Friedman, formerly a stenographer for the Pinkerton detective agency at Denver, who said he was acting as a spy for the Western Federation of Miners. His testimony tends to show that the Pinkertons, acting for the Mine Owners' association and the Citizens' alliance conspired to destroy the federation.

Counsel for William D. Haywood at Boise, in their efforts to discredit the testimony of Harry Orchard, put a witness on the stand whose testimony strongly indicated that the explosion in the Victor mine was an accident and not a crime.

In the Haywood trial at Boise, Idaho, a ruling by the court materially limited the showing of the defense as to the alleged counter conspiracy by the mine owners.

William F. Davis, who, according to Harry Orchard, was a leader in several of the mine crimes in Idaho, was put on the stand by the Haywood defense and denied Orchard's statements. His testimony was weakened somewhat by Senator Borah's severe cross-examination.

The first direct testimony in the defense of William D. Haywood was chiefly directed toward showing that Harry Orchard, blaming Frank Steunenberg for the loss of his interest in the Hercules mine, had threatened to have revenge by killing him, and that the conduct of Orchard and K. C. Sterling, both before the Independence explosion, when they were frequently seen together, and afterwards, when Sterling called off the bloodhound that was following Orchard's trail, justified the inference that the mine owners in spired the crime.

SIDE LIGHTS ON MICHIGAN

THE GOVERNOR HAS SIGNED THE BILLS AND WILL REST DURING JULY.

SIX POCKET VETOED

A Clever Bill For Chippewa County Among Them—Session Cost One Hundred and Sixty Thousand.

Special Session in February.

Gov. Warner signed the last bill shortly after 6 o'clock Friday night, and left Lansing for his home, deciding not to remain for the formal adjournment at noon Saturday. During the month of July he will accept no engagements, having promised his family that he would remain with them at Cass Lake.

The governor exercised his power of pocket veto on six bills, which are as follows: Military bill; Detroit police court bill, changing date of selecting keeper of Tuscola county house; bill deeding delinquent state tax lands in Chippewa county to the county for road purposes at 10 cents an acre; creating townships of Rhors and Gordon in Alcona county; changing a school district in Arenac county.

By all odds the cleverest bill that slipped through the legislature under the guise of being a local bill was the one providing that all delinquent state tax lands in Chippewa county should be deeded to the county at 10 cents an acre. During the day the governor received a number of telegrams urging him not to forget the bill so he looked it over very carefully with the result that he marked it "N. G."

There are now 49,605 acres of delinquent state tax lands in Chippewa county, which are estimated to be worth $53,434 by the state land office. The policy of the state is to auction off this land so that the state can get the taxes and the Chippewa bill would set a bad precedent as the state now has on hand some 300,000 acres of delinquent tax lands and would get very little return if sold to the counties at 10 cents an acre.

The governor is wondering how such a bill ever got through. The present session cost the state $160,000.

Before leaving Gov. Warner said that he would probably call the special session for February 1, so that it can immediately follow the constitutional convention which will begin its work October 22.

Three Were Killed.

A man supposed to be R. C. Richards, aged about 35, of Chicago, was killed at Metamora Monday morning by a Michigan Central train. The man was sent from Chicago by an employment bureau with a gang of railroad men. He had been drinking and crawled out of a car window and ran into an approaching train. His body was cut to pieces. He was well dressed.

Vere Wilds, employed on the farm of Jos. Wiggins just west of Baday Creek, went to that city for a Sunday fishing trip, taking with him the two little sons of his employer—Earl, aged 10, and Robert, aged 6. While he was tending to his lines the boys played on the Grand Trunk railroad bridge. They heard a freight train approaching from the west and stepped to the other track to let it pass, and did not hear an excursion train from Detroit coming on the other track until it was almost upon them. The boys were in full view of Wilds, who yelled frantically at them, but before they could escape they were struck and instantly killed.

Detroit's Tax Levy.

Detroit's tax levy for the present year, according to figures just completed by the tax assessors, is $15.46 per $1,000 of valuation, an increase of 74 cents over the levy of last year. The total tax valuation of the city, everything included, is $345,997,280, approximately an increase of $30,000,000 over the valuation of last year. But of the total valuation of city property only $223,131,730 is assessable for city purposes. The valuations on which taxes are collectable only for state and county purposes are $2,305,650 on municipal bonds and $10,560,000 on D. U. R. franchises. The total valuation on the basis of $15.46 per $1,000 will net the city $4,996,735.94. The increase in the levy is explained as being due to the increase in the budget.

Edwardsburg Badly Scorched.

Edwardsburg was partly destroyed by fire at 12:30 Sunday night. Losses: Head building, $500; Mead estate building, $1,000; J. D. Bean, druggist and postmaster, stock and building, $2,750; O. N. Hunt & Co., general store, $1,500; Pullman Telephone Co. exchange, $200; Fari G. Sherman, household goods, $100. Insurance, $2,400. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The village has no fire fighting apparatus.

Edwardsburg is a village of 400 inhabitants, on the Grand Trunk railroad, in Onawa township, Cass county. The business places destroyed were among the principal ones of the village.

Chris Callan, postmaster at Curran, Osceola county, was drowned in Au-Sable river while trout fishing.

A score of Eckford township farmers turned out with all kinds of weapons to pursue a "bear" whose tracks had been discovered in a field. The trail led toward the river and as they neared the stream the hunters came upon a huge turtle that was making for the water. They captured the turtle, which weighed 58 pounds.

Although it caused her heart ache that only a mother knows, Mrs. Brush, of Lansing, requested that her 17-year-old daughter, Alice Brush, be sent to the Detroit house of correction for 90 days. The girl stole a gold watch, and has in many ways proven an incorrigible.

AROUND THE STATE.

Pontiac city water works is in need of $100,000 improvements and extensions.

Four hundred acres of fine farm land near Bellevue has been sold to eastern men for cement purposes.

Gordon Bailey, 3-year-old son of a Sault Ste. Marie merchant was run over by a street car, and both of his legs had to be cut off.

Henry Sehermann, aged 7, of Saginaw, was struck in the head with a baseball and after being about as usual for several days suddenly died.

Chas. Jones, a farm hand living south of Morenci, tried to hang himself, and, failing in this, slashed his throat with a razor. He will die.

A huge tank of oil provided excellent fuel for fire when a Pere Marquette freight was wrecked near LaPeere. Four cars were destroyed.

Robert Copeland, 10 years old, of Flint, was thrown out in a runaway and seriously injured. He struck on his head, and was picked up in a semi-conscious condition.

Sparks from a traction engine started a fire in Kalkaska which destroyed the residence of Mrs. James Hages, the lively barn of Wm. Hainstock, and damaged the hotel. Loss $4,000.

Officers of the grand lodge, F. & A. M., laid the cornerstone of the new public school building in Port Huron. Mayor Bell, Grand Master Sweet and Rev. M. E. Whalen made addresses.

Work on Flint's new $50,000 freight sheds to be erected by the Grand Trunk railway company, is begun. Much of the material is on the ground, and the contracts for the brick laying are let.

Because it requires a two-thirds vote to decide on the location of the proposed new agricultural school, the Menominee board of supervisors is in a deadlock. They stand 10 to 8, and won't budge.

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

The suite allotted me was at the end of a gloomy corridor. I threw open one of the narrow windows. The noisy stream below, beating futilely against the walls, almost deafened the voice of the servant as he asked if I could be of assistance to me. I looked out. There was a sheer drop of some 50 feet.

That fact vaguely disconcerted me. The words of Dr. Starva were a jarring note that sobered my excitement. When I had dressed I was almost prepared to find the massive door of my chamber locked or barred. I had entered the spider's web audaciously enough. To escape might be less simple.

The dinner was simply but well served in a small dining-room. Had my situation been less serious I might have felt some humor at the elaborate deference shown me by my companions for the benefit of the two servants who waited on us. Even Dr. Starva followed the lead of Madame de Varnier in solemn if cynical obedience.

But did Madame de Varnier believe me so complaisant a fool, that, like another Bottom, I was expected in this modern Midsummer Night's Dream to accept this deference without question? I became more and more convinced that she did not. Once she even referred to the events of the night before in such a manner that I believed her not ignorant of my true condition. If she were persuaded that I had been acting a part then, that would account for her confidence in expecting me to continue acting that part. It would give her encouragement that I was the willing tool she looked for.

And suppose that she really believed that, did she think that I expected no reward? She had hinted that in serving her ends I was to serve myself as well. But Madame de Varnier was not the kind of woman to believe that a man would be allured by a promise so vague. Then the reward?

She had protested that she had not expected me to fall in love with her. She had protested that, but in the same breath she had confessed a half-resolve to bring me to her feet. Now as she exerted every charm of coquetry she was giving the lie to her own words. Oh, the reward was obvious enough, if I chose to take it.

"We will smoke our cigarettes in my favorite music room. You must hear Dr. Starva play on the cello. You have had the piano carefully tuned, Jacques?"

"All is in readiness," replied the servant, as he preceded us with candles.

Dr. Starva had pushed back his chair eagerly. For the first time since I had met him his face lost something of its heavy sullen expression.

"My fingers have not the practice," he said modestly, "but to play with Madame de Varnier—ah, that is worth while."

We were in the music room that Madame de Varnier had described to me so enthusiastically the day before.

Dimly lighted with wax candles, paneled in dark oak to the ceiling, the floor waxed and polished to a dazzling luster, it was a room almost bare, but it had its melancholy charm. There was little furniture. At one end of the room was a row of carved seats built into the wall. There were no pictures or tapestries. The one touch of color was the vivid flame of blazing logs.

The strife of the world, its hesitations and its shams, I leave behind when I enter here," said Madame de Varnier sentimentally. "Look, I throw open this casement. The noisy Aare drowns my voice. Beyond, you see the moonlight on the valleys, and still beyond, the mountains. This is your seat: Once this was a chapel; in these carved seats the monks chanted vespers; in the seat of honor which you occupy drowsed the father superior. When you hear the enchanting melodies of Dr. Starva you will not have lived in vain."

This hour at least was innocent. Perhaps it was the lull before the storm, but why should I look for clouds when the heavens were clear?

The long, darkly paneled room, its shining floor seeming to rise and fall mysteriously in the flickering firelight, the noisy murmur of the stream below, the white moonlight that struggled feebly through the casement windows—all had its charm. And these two adventurers, unscrupulous and conscienceless, had abandoned themselves for the moment to the joy of their music.

I looked over toward Madame de Varnier. The shaded light of the candles fell on her white shoulders. The color of her beauty had never been more seductive.

I felt myself incredulously if this woman was the desperate adventurer whom Locke had warned me to distrust.

Slowly she looked where I sat; I seemed to draw her eyes toward me. She smiled vaguely, a smile that was adorable—yes, I could almost persuade myself that it was the smile of an innocent girl. For a moment I was content to forget the unpleasant task that was before me; to invest even the monster by her side in the garb of humanity.

The servant who had shown me to my rooms appeared at the door, letters on his salver. I held up my hand warningly to him that he should not disturb them, and motioned that he bring the letters to me. He did so without either of the musicians noticing his entrance.

The sonata of Beethoven swept to its glorious climax. I started to my feet to take the letters to Madame de Varnier.

But without a pause Dr. Starva began a tender romance. The woman sat at the piano, her hands falling idly to her lap.

Again she smiled across the room at me. But now it was no longer spontaneous. The lips held something of that indefinable cruelty of that woman of the Renaissance made famous by Da Vinci. I frowned; I refused to meet that smile.

Then, as I looked down deliberately, I felt myself turn pale. A shudder convulsed me.

I was gazing in horror at an envelope that bore the interdicted stamp of Bulgaria, the death-mask.

Did she know the ghastly significance of that double stamp? Was she one of the desperate band that had doomed Ferdinand?

I resolved to play a hazardous experiment. I would thrust that stamp under her eyes without warning. Consummate actress though she was, she would find it difficult to repress a tremor if she were guilty.

Dr. Starva's head was still bent lovingly over his cello. I reached the piano without disturbing him.

I placed the letters in front of Madame de Varnier, the envelope that bore the death-mask on the top of the little pile. I watched her closely.

She took the letters carelessly in her hands. The stamp at once arrested her attention. She regarded it with a frank curiosity. She even called my attention to it.

"It is one of the new issue," she whispered, so as not to disturb Dr. Starva; and continued to sort her letters.

I was almost convinced of her innocence, but not quite. I had yet my experiment to play.

She had opened one of the letters and was engrossed in its contents. As for Dr. Starva, he was lost to the world.

I took the envelope that bore the mysterious symbol, and placing it in such a manner that the death-mask could be most easily seen by the woman, I began to trace the likeness of Prince Ferdinand, meanwhile watching her intently.

Her letter was short. Its meaning had excited her strangely. For some time she was regardless of my action. But presently she followed the motions of my pencil as I traced the eyes closed in death, the drooping mouth, and the graying wound.

Still my pencil moved slowly but carefully over the features of the doomed prince. I began to think I must be more explicit after all.

And then her hands fell lifeless on the keys. The crash echoed discordantly in the empty room. Dr. Starva looked up in angry surprise. Madame de Varnier had fainted.

Dr. Starva shuffled rapidly to her side; he shook her shoulder.

"Sophie! Sophie!" he cried, and then he saw the letter and its stamp.

His face was suddenly distorted. His hairy hand closed over the letter. She held it rigid even in her unconsciousness. He unbent her jeweled fingers with cruel strength. Now he looked at me with the suspicion and hate of a savage beast brought to bay.

"How much do you know?" his blazing eyes asked. "And if I do know?" mine answered.

Slowly Madame de Varnier opened her eyes. Equally anxious, Starva and myself watched her recover consciousness.

I was quite convinced now that she had not been aware of the significance of that stamp. The horror that had deprived her of her reason for the time being proved that. The fierce haste with which Dr. Starva had snatched the letter from her lifeless hand and had concealed it, bore out my conviction. Then if my surmises were correct, would she communicate to Dr. Starva her newly acquired knowledge?

"It was the heat, I think, and the fatigue of the journey," were the first words she spoke. I heard them with relief. Beyond question she wished to conceal from Starva that she had seen the death-mask.

Whether he was satisfied with her reasons was less certain. He paced the length of the room, his head bent in thought; his intertwined fingers, moving agitatedly, betrayed his concern. Madame de Varnier carefully they should have been traced to the chateau so easily and so quickly threw them into consternation. Dr. Starva was the first to recover his presence of mind.

"Whom does he wish to see this time?" he demanded harshly.

"He asks for his Excellency, the English ambassador," replied the servant, looking at me askance. "But if he is engaged, or not well, he is anxious to speak with madam."

At first I was surprised that the man had not brought the card directly to myself. It was strange that he should ignore me if he had been given to understand that I was Sir Mortimer. But if he were in the confidence of Madame de Varnier he would do precisely that.

Frankly, the coming of Captain Forbes at this time was a surprise scarcely less disagreeable for me than for them. To-morrow, or the day after, he would have been perhaps only too welcome. But now the intrusion was premature. It interfered with my own plans as well as theirs.

More than that, I could have wished myself in a position to forewarn him, to explain my tactics. It looked as if I were again in danger of being caught red-handed in a criminal deception. More than ever would Captain Forbes be convinced that I was one of the conspirators if he discovered at this moment that I was not Sir Mortimer.

The man and woman conversed together excitedly in a barbaric tongue. Dr. Starva, it was evident, was vehemently advocating some plan; Madame de Varnier opposing it. But the shock to which she had been subjected previous to the coming of Captain Forbes had left her unstrung; almost apathetic. Hitherto the man had been sulkily subservient to the woman; now his animal strength fought for the ascendancy. He was brushing away her agitated protests. It was he who commanded the servant.

"Show this Captain Forbes to the armory. I shall see him myself." Again he spoke fiercely to Madame de Varnier. She listened to him in silence, her eyes cast down. He strode to the door, stood there a moment hesitating, then left the room, shutting the door behind him.

Madame de Varnier remained where he had left her trembling violently, her hands covering her face. This was my opportunity to appeal to the woman, and not the adventuress. I took her unresisting hand and led her to one of the carved seats.

"Madame de Varnier, it is a desperate game you are playing," I said sternly yet gently. "I don't know what the stakes are, but you are not going to win them."

A white hand clung to my coat sleeve. "Why do you say that?" she cried, staring at me with frightened eyes.

I pointed silently to the card she still held in her hand.

"There is one factor to be reckoned with."

She tossed her head in defiance. "Dr. Starva has reckoned with him already, my friend. Perhaps not in the best way, but effectually at least. And the other?"

"Well, there is myself."

She smiled on me wanly. "If you were an enemy that might be more serious, I admit. But I have reckoned with you. You are to be my friend. You are to help me."

"That remains to be seen. But the third and most serious factor is treachery," I added quietly.

"My God! Treachery!"

"Do you trust Dr. Starva absolutely? Dare you tell me that the death-mask had as little meaning for him as for you, until I showed you that significance?"

"But you understood its meaning as well as he. Who are you that you should have this knowledge?"

"I know, perhaps, more than you think, Madame de Varnier."

"It is incredible," she cried passionately. "that I, the Countess Sarahoff, should be in the dark, while an American tourist—"

The name had slipped out in her anger, she bit her lips.

"Oh you need feel no consternation. I might have called you by that name several hours ago."

"Since you know so much," she said in bitter disgust, "perhaps you know the service I expect to ask of you?"

"I might make a shrewd guess at even that."

She sank back, her fingers interlocked supporting her head. She remained some time in gloomy thought.

Suddenly a door slammed. I heard a faint shout; a tramping of feet. Then there was quiet again. I glanced at my companion. She was listening intently, her hands clutching the carved arms of the seat.

"Bah, I think I am a hysterical schoolgirl," she shrugged her shoulders in self-contempt. "Say that you know everything, monsieur, so much the better. It will save the trouble of explaining on the morrow. For I shall go on with my plan. There is danger, yes, but I have expected danger. It is too late to retreat. I have risked all on a single throw. I shall win. Say that there is treachery—I shall know how to deal with it. He is not indisputable. Yes, my friend, I have a plan that cannot fail."

"You are mistaken," I said obstinately. "Your plan will fail because, if Dr. Starva is not necessary to its success, I am. And I—"

"You will perform the service I shall ask of you. I hope, I trust, that you will do this service gladly. Not for myself, perhaps, but that you may bring happiness and peace to a downtrodden people."

CHAPTER XVII.

Captain Forbes Intrudes.

There was a silence lasting several seconds. Panic was written on both their faces. Evidently they had looked for no such intrusion as this—above all for no visitor so inconvenient as the king's messenger. They had confidently counted on a clear field for the execution of their plans. That

HIS GREATEST DEED

EVANGELIST TELLS OF VICTORY HE PRIZES.

Story of a Woman with a Secret, and Two Souls Brought to Grace—Chief, Flower of His American Campaign.

Gipsy Smith, the English evangelist who sailed for home recently, preparatory to a campaign in Australia, told the story the night before he left at a dinner given in his honor, of the greatest conquest, in his opinion, he had made in this country on his tour of seven months.

He said he had preached 450 times, had answered innumerable calls of various kinds and had seen thousands stand up to profess a Christian life. The convert of whom he was most proud was a fashionable woman in a western city who had come to his meetings with a secret that was eating out her heart. He said:

"This woman was not yet of middle age and her life apparently had been given up to frivolity. She led a society life. She was extravagant in her dress and thoroughly worldly. It must have been the dreadful secret that she carried that attracted her to my meetings."

"Her friends were surprised to see her go in. At the first meeting she attended she was visibly shaken. She came again and the storm broke."

"She sought me out and unburied her soul. There was a motherless little girl in another city for whom she longed. Her conscience was stirred."

"For all her married life she had been concealing a great sorrow and sin and she had gone into worldly affairs to attempt to forget it all. She asked me what she should do."

"How can I ever tell my husband?" she asked. "It may destroy our home. It may kill me."

"Where is your husband?" I asked.

"He told me he was in Philadelphia and I said I would talk to the pastor of the church that they attend occasionally."

"That man had a long head. He told the woman to telegraph for her husband to come home at once. She did so and he responded. She met him with tears in her eyes but a smiling face, for she had been wrestling in prayer, and asked him to come to my meetings."

"He was surprised at first that he should be called home for such a purpose and was not inclined to file it. He saw that his wife was worked up over the matter and he yielded to her entreaties to listen to me because he feared the effect if he disappointed her. He attended half a dozen meetings and the fervor reached him and he became a real convert."

"In his enthusiasm he asked if there was anything he could do to prove his faith."

"Can you stand a great sorrow?" asked that pastor.

"Yes," he said, "gladly."

"Then with great tact the preacher told about that motherless little one, while the wife sat by sobbing as if her heart would break."

"Wife," he said, "let us take the first train to-morrow and get that child. I have sinned in the same way myself. I thank God for this day."

"And now," said Gipsy Smith, "there is a happy household out there in the west, and openness where there was secrecy, and love where there was deceit and sharing the happiness of that couple is a little girl who never before knew a mother's love. I tell you if I had accomplished nothing more than that on my trip over here my work would have been more than repaid. That case alone I regard as the chief flower of this campaign."

The Slow Gordon Setter.

Years ago the Gordon setter was quite a favorite and much in use by sportsmen of this country. In later years, however, this really good dog was displaced in greater part by the pointer and English setter.

The Gordon, says Ed. F. Haberlein in Dogdom, is the largest and heaviest of all bird dogs, more clumsy and usually slow. Where most hunting is done in woodland and thickets and a slow working dog is needed so as not to get "lost" almost continually he fills the bill well—works close to the gun, has good nose, is steady on point, and, if properly trained a very good retriever from land and water.

The Gordon is easily trained and retains his training well, is also of good, pleasant disposition and admirable companion. At this age, however, when so very much stress is laid on speed and wide range, the Gordon is not "in it" because he is a slow, pottering dog as a rule.

A Loud Habit.

A well-known comedian met a fellow actor the other day in Herald square.

"Hello, Jack!" he said. "Anything to do this evening?"

"Nothing special," replied the other. "Well, let's go to the Hotel Astor and hear the newly rich eat soap."

IN SUNSHINE.

Lightning Killed Man and Did Some Very Remarkable Things.

A bolt of lightning from an almost cloudless sky struck and instantly killed Joseph Bourassa, one of the old residents of Ecorse township at noon Saturday as he was hoeing his garden. One of his shoes was blown to shreds, the other was found twenty feet away, wholly intact, his clothes were stripped from his body and his whiskers were shaved clean from his face, but not a hair of his head was even singed.

The clothes not blown away caught fire and were consuming the body of the old man when a son, working nearby, extinguished them. The young man says it was not raining, the sun even shining at intervals. When the bolt came he did not realize what had happened until he saw the almost nude body of his father. His body and hands were frightfully burned, but the face, although cleanly shorn of whiskers, was not scorched. The handle of the hoe he was wielding was burned to a char.

Mr. Bourassa had a large family and had lived in Ecorse township his entire life. He leaves a widow and twelve children, most of them grown up.

NO RECRETS.

Old Soldier Stabbed Car Conductor Nine Times.

W. F. Johnson, a civil war veteran and an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, stabbed Conductor Luther E. Haney, of Grand Rapids, nine times, because he had been told to stand aside to permit other passengers to get on and off. Haney is still alive, but his condition is serious.

Johnson is 63 years old and has been in the Soldiers' Home over three years. He says that he was born and reared in Detroit and served in the Sixth Michigan cavalry during the civil war as bugler. Enlisting in the Fifth U. S. cavalry he served during the Indian wars in the southwest if the early '70s as sergeant. He was discharged for disability. He is a carpenter and says that he lived 30 years in Colorado.

Johnson stabbed the conductor twice in the neck, once on the left wrist, twice in the abdomen, once on the left arm and once on the right wrist.

"I do not regret what I did," said the old soldier.

APPROPRIATIONS.

This Is the Amount the Taxpayers Will Have to Raise.

Complete figures on the appropriations of the last legislature were given out Monday. NORTHVILLE, MICH., JULY 5, '07.

The 1907-8 Appropriation.

Although the aggregate appropriations for 1907 and 1908 are $1,800,000 greater than those of the preceding biennial period, it should be borne in mind that the needs of the state are constantly growing and the prices of all kinds of commodities have materially increased during the past two years. Building material cost more than ever before and the cost of maintaining the increasing number of inmates of the various state institutions is greater. There has been no general tendency on the part of the present legislature to grant appropriations of new objects and purposes. In fact very little of this was done. In the special message which Gov. Warner sent to the legislature during the closing hours of the session he made the statement that it is very difficult to see wherein most of the appropriations could have been lessened. He also directed attention to the fact that more than 95 per cent of the total increase over the appropriations made by the legislature of 1905 was confined to the educational and charitable institutions of the state, increasing the efficiency of the state militia, providing for improving the highways of the state and establishing a binder-twine plant in the state prison at Jackson. The binder-twine plant will, it is confidently predicted, be made a profit for the state in addition to furnishing the farmers with twine at a price less than that charged by the trust. Michigan has always been in the forefront as regards its educational institutions and the care of its dependent citizens, and Governor Warner is doubtless correct in his statement that the taxpayers of the state will not object to paying the slightly increased cost of maintaining this supremacy. The total increased appropriations, as pointed out by the governor, will call for the payment of an increased tax of less than six cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Poor Excuse.

"We felt sorry for Doyle," was the excuse given by a Detroit jurymen for a verdict of assault and battery at the conclusion of the trial of a man who had sought to murder his wife and his wife's sister. He committed the crime in the course of a drunken rage and the condition was sought in order to prepare for the deed. The crime was not denied. The wife was made a cripple for life through the furious attempt of her husband to kill her. But the jury "felt sorry for Doyle" and called his crime assault and battery, to which a slight fine can be attached. Such verdicts put a strain not only upon our jury system but they create perplexing doubt touching some phases of our entire theory of self-government.

Constitutional Convention.

Judging by the announcements and interviews appearing throughout the state press it seems to have been decided that the coming constitutional convention is to be but a somewhat condensed reassembling of the recent legislature. The officers and detailed management of the convention seems also to have been decided in advance. Perhaps that will be just as the people would have it, and perhaps it is not.

Do You Love This Old Town?

If you do, of course you want to see the town grow. You want to see the storekeepers prosper, and the banks bulge with deposits, and the townspeople wearing glad clothes, and the farmers falling over each other to come in and buy new hay rakes and patent plows. Of course you do. Because, likewise of course, when things are that way you get your share of the general prosperity.

But what are you doing to contribute to the general prosperity? Are you patronizing home industries in preference to outside industries? Do you buy your clothes and groceries and garden tools and so forth here at home?

Well, you admit, you do send away for a good many things you happen to see advertised. Aha! And are they advertised in this paper? No, indeed—in the mail order journals and catalogues. Quite true. And you would just as soon buy them here if they were advertised by the local merchants, wouldn't you? Why, yes.

Well, now, there's a neat hint to some of our local storekeepers and dealers who perhaps haven't discovered why they are losing a lot of home trade which they ought to keep.

It's a wise business man that knows his own opportunities.

The need of a fire alarm system so that people can locate the fire by the ring of the bell is demonstrated every time an alarm is turned in. Some system should be devised so that everybody may know at once where to look for the fire. Much valuable time can be saved if this is done.

If the people of this vicinity would like to do a little home missionary work this is the time of year it can be done by taking one or two little children from the Fresh Air society of Detroit and giving them a couple weeks' outing in the country or in our pretty little village. It will do them a world of good and also do good to those who are helping in this way. Too often we forget about "Even as ye do it unto one of the least of these," etc.

Mrs. A. B. Smith, living on First Ave., in what is known as the Hinman house, went out for a short time Monday afternoon leaving the children to amuse themselves which they did by the use of matches and paper and a blaze was soon started. It was discovered by one of the neighbors who rang in an alarm but by the time the department arrived, had the fire extinguished. This was the first time the new fire bell had been used and it rang out loud and clear and is a great improvement over the old one.

"Pray do not trouble about it, Sister Theresa. There are a good many things about my grandfather's affairs that I don't understand, but I'm not going to see an old friend of his swindled. There's more in all this than appears. My grandfather seems to have mislaid or lost most of his assets before he died. And yet he had the reputation of being a pretty cautious business man."

"The impression is abroad, as you must know, that your grandfather concealed his fortune before his death. The people hereabouts believe so; and Mr. Pickering, the executor, has been unable to trace it."

"Yes, I believe Mr. Pickering has not been able to solve the problem," I said and laughed.

"But, of course, you and he will co-operate in an effort to find the lost property."

She bent forward slightly; her eyes, as they met mine examined me with a keen interest.

"Why shouldn't I be frank with you, Sister Theresa? I have every reason for believing Arthur Pickering a scoundrel. He does not care to co-operate with me in searching for this money. The fact is that he is very much wishes to eliminate me as a factor in the settlement of the estate. I speak carefully, I know exactly what I am saying."

She bowed her head slightly and was silent for a moment. The silence was the more marked from the fact that the hood of her habit concealed her face.

"What you say is very serious," "Yes, and his offense is equally serious. It may seem odd for me to be saying this to you when I am a stranger—when you may be pardoned for having no very high opinion of me."

She turned her face to me—it was singularly gentle and refined—not a face to associate with an idea of self-seeking or duplicity.

"I sent for you, Mr. Glenarm, because I had a very good opinion of you, because for one reason, you are the grandson of your grandfather!"—and the friendly light in her gray eyes drove away any lingering doubt I may have had as to her sincerity. "I wished to warn you to have a care for your own safety. I don't warn you against Arthur Pickering alone, but against the countryside. The idea of a hidden fortune, alluring, a mysterious house and a lost treasure make a very enticing combination. I fancy Mr. Glenarm did not realize that he was creating dangers for the people he wished to help."

She was silent again, her eyes bent meditatively upon me. Then she spoke abruptly.

"Mr. Pickering wishes to marry; my niece."

"Ah, I have been waiting to hear that. I am exceedingly glad to know that he has no noble ambition. But Miss Devereux isn't encouraging him, as near as I can make out. She refused to go to California with his party—I happen to know that."

"That whole California episode would have been amusing if it had not been ridiculous. Marian never had the slightest idea of going with him; but she is sometimes a little—shall I say perverse?"

"Please do! I like the word—and the quality!"

"—And Mr. Pickering's rather elaborate methods of wooing?"

"He's as heavy as lead!" I declared.

"—Amuse Marian up to a certain point, then they annoy her. He has implied pretty strongly that the claim against me could be easily adjusted if Marian marries him. But she will never marry him, whether she benefits by your grandfather's will or however that may be."

"I should say not," I declared with a warmth that caused Sister Theresa to sweep me with those wonderful gray eyes. "But first he expects to find this fortune and endow Miss Devereux with it. That is a part of the scheme. And my own interest in the estate must be eliminated before he can bring that condition about. But, Sister Theresa, I am not so easily got rid of as Arthur Pickering imagines. My staying qualities, which were always weak in the eyes of my family, have been braced and strengthened."

"Yes," I thought pleased and hope were expressed in the movement of her heart warmed to me.

"Sister Theresa, you and I are understanding each other much better than I imagined we should—and we both laughed, feeling a real sympathy growing between us."

"Yes, I believe we are—and the smile lighted her face again."

"So I can tell you two things. The first is that Arthur Pickering will never find my grandfather's lost fortune, assuming that any exists. The second is that in no event will he marry your niece."

"You speak with a good deal of confidence," she said and laughed a low, murmuring laugh. "I thought there was relief in it. "But I didn't suppose Marian's affairs interested you."

"They don't, Sister Theresa. Her affairs are not of the slightest importance—but she is!"

There was frank inquiry in her eyes now.

"But you don't know her—you have missed your opportunity."

"To be sure, I don't know her; but I know Olivia Gladys Armstrong. She's a particular friend of mine—we have chased rabbits together, and she told me a great deal. I have formed a very good opinion of Miss Devereux in that way. Oh, that note you wrote about Olivia's intrusions beyond the wall! I ought to thank you for it—but I really didn't mind."

"A note? I never wrote you a note until to-day!"

"Well, some one did!" I said, then she smiled.

"Oh, that must have been Marian! She was always Olivia's loyal friend and apologist."

"I should say so."

"But you shouldn't have known Olivia—it is unpardonable! If she played tricks upon you, you should not have taken advantage of them to make her acquaintance. That wasn't fair to me!"

"I suppose not! But I protest against this deportation. The landscape hereabouts is only so much sky, snow and lumber without Olivia."

"We miss her, too," replied Sister Theresa. "We have less to do!"

"I went home and studied the timetable."

CHAPTER XVII.

Golden Butterflies.

If you are one of those cautious people who must verify by the calendar bought a seat in the Washington sleeper and after supper in the dining car made myself comfortable and dozed and dreamed as the train plunged through the dark. The through-passengers about me went to bed, and I was left sprawling out in my open section, between the shadowy frontier between the known world and dreamland.

"We're running into Cincinnati ten minutes late," said the porter's voice, and in a moment I was in the vestibule and out, hurrying to a hotel. At the St. Botolph I ordered a carriage and broke all records changing my clothes. The time-table informed me that the Chicago express left at half past one. There was no reason why I should not be safe at Glenarm House by my usual breakfast hour in the morning if all went well. To avoid loss of time in returning to the station I paid the hotel charge and carried my bag away with me.

"Doctor Armstrong's residence? Yes, sir; I've already taken two loads there."

The carriage was soon climbing what seemed to be a mountain to the heights above Cincinnati. To this day I associate Ohio's most interesting city with a lonely carriage ride that was as strange to me as a trackless jungle in the wilds of Africa. And my heart began to perform strange tattoos on my ribs. I was going to the house of a gentleman who did not know of my existence, to see a girl who was his guest, to whom I had never, as the conventions go, been presented. It did not seem half so easy, now that I was well launched upon the adventure.

I stopped the cabman just as he was about to enter an iron gateway whose posts bore two great lamps.

I Swung Myself Out Upon the Limb of a Big Maple.

every new moon you read of in a book, and if you are pained to discover the historian lifting anchor and spreading sail contrary to the reckonings of the nautical almanac, I beg to call your attention to these items from the timetable of the Mid-Western and Southern Railway for December, 1901: The southbound express passed Annandale at exactly 53 minutes after four p. m. It was scheduled to reach Cincinnati at 11 o'clock sharp. This, I trust, is sufficiently explicit.

To the student of morals and motives I will say a further word. I had resolved to practice deception in running away from Glenarm House to keep my promise to Marian Devereux. By leaving I should forfeit my right to any part of my grandfather's estate, but of more immediate importance was my absence from Glenarm House at this juncture, when the attacks of Morgan and the strange ways of Bates made it clearly my duty to remain. Pickering and I were engaged in a sharp contest, and I was beginning to enjoy it to the full, but I did not falter in my determination to visit Cincinnati, hoping to return without my absence being discovered; so the next afternoon I began preparing for my journey.

"Bates, I fear that I'm taking a severe cold and I'm going to dose myself with whisky and quinine and go to bed. I shan't want any dinner—nothing until you see me again."

I yawned and stretched myself with a groan.

"I'm very sorry, sir. Shant I call a doctor?"

"Not a bit of it. I'll sleep it off and be as lively as a cricket in the morning."

At four o'clock I told him to carry some hot water and lemons to my rooms, bade him an emphatic good-night and locked the door as he left. Then I packed my evening clothes in a suitcase. I threw the bag and heavy ulster from a window, swung myself out upon the limb of a big maple and let it bend me to its sharpest and then dropped lightly to the ground.

I passed the gate and struck off toward the village with a joyful sense of freedom. I reached the station without incident and waited in the freight shed to keep out of sight of the station loafers until my train drew up, then I slipped aboard.

"That's all right, sir. I can drive right in."

"But you needn't," I said, jumping out. "Wait right here."

Doctor Armstrong's residence was brilliantly lighted, and the strains of a waltz stole across the lawn cheerily. I made a detour and studied the house, seeking a door by which I could enter without passing the unfriendly Giltair of a host and hostess on guard to welcome belated guests.

A long conservatory filled with tropical plants gave me an opportunity. Promenaders were passing idly through it and out into another part of the house by an exit I could not see. A handsome, spectacled gentleman opened a glass door within a yard of where I stood, sniffed the air and said to his companion as he turned back with a shrug into the conservatory:

"There's no sign of snow. It isn't Christmas weather at all."

He strolled away through the palms and I instantly threw off my ulster and cap, cast them behind some bushes and boldly opened the door and entered.

The ball room was on the third floor but the guests were straggling down to supper and I took my stand at the foot of the broad stairway and glanced up carelessly as though waiting for some one. It was a large and brilliant company and many a lovely face passed me as I stood waiting. The very size of the gathering gave me security, and I smoothed my gloves complacently.

The spectacled gentleman whose interest in the weather had given me a valued hint of the open conservatory door, came now and stood beside me. He even put his hand on my arm with intimate friendliness.

May Find Market in Sudan.

A British officer in the Sudan suggests that the educating of the natives in the matter of wearing apparel will be a work of time. "Their purchasing power is still far greater than their expenditure," he writes. "Many an Arab owns 200 head of cattle and only one shirt."

In Massachusetts the illegal sale of street railway transfers is made punishable by a fine not exceeding $50 or imprisonment for not more than 60 days.

LOVE AS A SIDE DISH

"Why do you blush when he passes?" I demanded reproachfully, stooping to pick up Kitty's fan as Clement Carter disappeared into the house.

"I didn't," declared Kitty, indignantly.

"You fluttered," I retorted. "And that's the same thing."

Kitty sat up straight and gazed at me in consternation.

"The insult," she declared furiously, "which you have offered to—to my sex! Just as if I were an old maid!"

she added with true feminine paradox.

"Aren't old maids of your sex?" I asked in gentle surprise.

"They're the only ones who flutter," asserted Kitty, positively.

"Not at all," I retorted. "I've known plenty of widows who changed color and their conversation at the mere entrance of a man upon the scene; and dozens of debutantes who became tongue-tied or tremulous the moment a decent-looking chap appeared in the drawing room. Even most married women," I added, "lose their poise and the point of their remarks at sight of the approach of a masculine creature. It doesn't seem to be a matter of a woman's age or her condition, but—"

"Of the importance she accords to men," broke in Kitty scathingly.

"There are individuals of both sexes," she added wittingly, "who are too easily impressed by the opposite sex."

"Not at all," I objected. "I never knew a schoolboy so insignificant and homely and inconsequential that he didn't scorn girls. You see, to men, woman is a sideshow, a mere incident, while to a woman, man represents the whole menu of social existence, the piece de resistance, the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end."

"Of course," proceeded Kitty, ignoring my thrust, "there are plenty of women who overrate men and—"

and look at them through magnifying glasses."

"And who flutter?" I put in hastily, "at their mere presence?"

"But," she continued coldly, "they are women who don't know them."

"What?"

"Old maids," returned Kitty, "and widows whose husbands have been dead a long time and young girls who have no brothers to help them get a true perspective on the masculine creature. And there are other women so abnormally self-conscious and vain that they can't be their natural selves in the presence of any man."

"It's awfully flattering," I began enthusiastically, "to think that we can be so agitating—"

"Oh, it isn't the man that really agitates them," retorted Kitty.

"No," I rejoined promptly, "it's the set of their shirts, or the tilt of their hats, or the curl of their hair, or the thought of whether there is any powder on their noses, or of what they shall say to be scintillating, or—"

"Isn't this the seventh waltz?" asked Kitty suddenly, rising and looking earnestly at her program. "I must go. Mr. Carter must be looking for me."

"Oh, no," I retorted, "I just saw him come out with the Tredwells. Are you going to flutter again, Kitty?"

For Kitty had sat down with a sudden exclamation and was nervously pulling the remains of her fan to shreds.

"The idea," she exclaimed indignantly, "of accusing me of—of anything like that. Only unpopular women flutter." Kitty flung out the word scornfully.

"They're unpopular because they do flutter," I contended calmly, lighting another cigarette.

"Or course," I said, relenting a little, "there are plenty of women who do take men as a side dish; but they are either those who are born with a 'mission' or those who are like yourself, Kitty."

"What?" Kitty looked up suspiciously.

"Who have so many side dishes," I explained, "and are so constantly in the company of men that they lose that awe of the sex—"

"Sh!" cried Kitty, as a dark form emerged from the vines and passed so near us that he swept Kitty's ruffles.

"There he goes!"

"The devil!" I ejaculated.

"No, Clement Carter," corrected Kitty.

"Kitty," I exclaimed reproachfully, "you're tearing that fan to pieces."

Kitty dropped the bauble nervously.

"There!" I exclaimed, picking up the scraps, "you were fluttering."

"I wasn't."

"And at the near sight of him!" I looked my disgust.

"Oh, no," declared Kitty hastily, "not at the sight of him. It was for fear he might catch sight of me, Mr. Carter."

"What?"

"And you," added Kitty.

"That's very sweet of you," I began.

"And because," continued Kitty, carefully fitting the sticks of her fan together, "he once said that whenever he wanted to find me, he had only to look in a dark corner—"

"For you!" I exclaimed in feigned surprise.

"No—for you," retorted Kitty.

"Clement Carter," I declared, beligerently, "is—"

"Stop!" cried Kitty. "You shan't talk about my friends."

"Is the most envious man I know," I finished carefully. But somehow, I couldn't muster any hard feelings against him just then.

Is the Sailors' Friend.

Sixty thousand sailors look to H. A. Hanbury for advice and for protection. Mr. Hanbury is the United States shipping commissioner for the port of New York. He is the sailors' judge and jury. The men who sign on foreign craft now must appear before him for their papers instead of going to the consuls of the various countries. He decides all disputed questions between the men and their sailing masters. Many of the abuses of these men that formerly were common, such as compelling them to buy their outfits from the ship owners or captains, have been done away with under Mr. Hanbury's rule. His office is on the Battery park, New York, where he easily can reach all the ships leaving that port.

INSURANCE INVESTMENTS.

How One Company's Assets Are Distributed in the South and West.

In connection with its withdrawal from Texas, along with many other companies, rather than to submit to the new law which requires that 75% of the reserves on Texas policies shall be invested in securities of that state, which securities shall be deposited in the state and subjected to heavy taxation in addition to the large tax now imposed on life insurance premiums, the Equitable Life Assurance Society has made public the distribution of its assets, at the end of the second year of the new management. The Equitable now has $10,958,000 invested in Texas, which is twice as much as the new law requires, but the management decided that to submit to the additional taxation would be an injustice to its policyholders in other states, which impose no such penalty on the thrift of their citizens.

The Equitable's report shows that more than 37% of its total reserves are now invested in the southern and western states, while only 35% of its total insurance is carried in these states. Its investments are distributed as follows: Ala., $2,099,000; Ark., $974,000; Cal., $4,038,000; Col., $5,227,000; Fla., $4,924,000; Ga., $4,648,000; Idaho, $5,197,000; Ill., $12,617,000; Ind., $443,000; Iowa, $6,836,000; Kan., $3,690,000; Ky., $2,631,000; La., $3,054,000; Md., $2,207,000; Mich., $6,009,000; Minn., $2,065,000; Miss., $767,000; Mo., $3,197,000; Mont., $1,890,000; Neb., $7,526,000; Nev., $840,000; New Mex., $1,376,000; N. C., $1,649,000; N. D., $877,000; Ohio, $11,634,000; Okla., $1,006,000; Ore., $1,138,000; S. C., $975,000; S. HAPPENED AT BAD TIME.

Minister's Fall Significant in View of Previous Words.

In a small church in one of the mining towns of Pennsylvania was a pulpit both antique and unique. It was about the size and shape of a flour barrel, was elevated from the floor about four feet and was fastened to the wall. The ascent was by narrow winding steps.

A minister from a neighboring town, a man of great vigor and vehemence, preached there one Sunday while preaching he bent forward and shouted out with great force the words of his text:

"The righteous shall stand, but the wicked shall fall."

Just as these words escaped from his lips, the pulpit broke from its fastenings, and he fell out and rolled over on the floor before his congregation. In an instant he was on his feet again and said:

"Brethren, I am not hurt, and I don't mind the fall much, but I do hate the connection."

COFFEE COMPLEXION.

Many Ladies Have Poor Complexions from Coffee.

"Coffee caused dark colored blotches on my face and body. I had been drinking it for a long while and these blotches gradually appeared, until finally they became permanent and were about as dark as coffee itself."

"I formerly had as fine a complexion as one could ask for."

"When I became convinced that coffee was the cause of my trouble, I changed and took to using Postum Food Coffee, and as I made it well, according to directions, I liked it very much, and have since that time used it in place of coffee."

"I am thankful to say I am not nervous any more, as I was when I was drinking coffee, and my complexion is now as fair and good as it was years ago. It is very plain that coffee caused the trouble."

Most bad complexions are caused by some disturbance of the stomach and coffee is the greatest disturber of digestion known. Almost any woman can have a fair complexion if she will leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee and nutritious, healthy food in proper quantity. Postum furnishes certain elements from the natural grains from the field that Nature uses to rebuild the nervous system and when that is in good condition, one can depend upon a good complexion as well as a good healthy body.

DAINTY SALAD DISH

COMBINATION OF TOMATO AND PINEAPPLE.

Something New to Serve at the Next Luncheon—Proper Mixture of Ingredients for the Appetizer.

For tomato and pineapple salad, peel medium sized tomatoes. Remove a thin slice from top of each and take out seeds and pulp. Sprinkle with a little salt and place in the refrigerator for an hour. Just before serving fill the tomatoes with fresh pineapple, thoroughly chilled, cut in small pieces or shredded, and nut meats, using two-thirds pineapple and one-third nuts. Mix with mayonnaise dressing; garnish with a little of the dressing, and halves of nut meats. Serve on a bed of lettuce leaves or water-cress.

Most salads should be dressed just before serving; whether French dressing or mayonnaise is used. Celery or lettuce wilt if left in oil and vinegar. Celery should not even be washed long before serving, as it becomes rusty. Potato salad takes up large quantities of oil, and need to be very well mixed with whatever dressing is used.

Salads made of greens should always be served crisp and cold. Canned or cold cooked left-over vegetables are well utilized in salads, but are best mixed with French dressing, and should be placed in the refrigerator for an hour or so before serving. Meats for salads should be freed from skin and gristle, cut into small pieces, and allowed to stand, with French dressing before combining with vegetables.

A dinner set usually consists of from 100 to 150 pieces. All large houses carry a number of stock patterns, so that one may replace at any time a half-dozen or dozen plates or cups and saucers. These stock patterns are not confined to the cheaper grades, but many of them are artistic in design and of the best quality of domestic and imported china. Blue and white is particularly attractive for breakfast. It is no economy to buy a cheap ware, and the simpler the color and design, the better. Gold is expensive. It is well to choose china which has the name of the maker on the bottom. If one lives in a large city, where special sales are held once or twice a year, great bargains may be picked up.

Shabby Carpets.

To clean and brighten a shabby carpet, cut an ounce of yellow soap into small squares, and make into a lather with a pint of boiling water. Add to this a quart of water and one ounce of borax. Place the mixture on the range and bring it to a boil; then remove it, and when quite cold add an ounce each of alcohol and ammonia and half an ounce of glycerin. Wipe over a small portion of the carpet at a time, and rub vigorously with a clean flannel (which should be repeatedly turned as it gets soiled) dipped in the mixture, until all the spots are removed and the color revived. When you have finished you will be delighted to find how nice your once shabby carpet looks.

Lavender Linen.

Lavender linen when combined with white linen and lace is very becoming to those who can wear this delicate color. A pretty dress of this color was made in a jumper suit with all edges piped with white linen. The front and back part of the waist, instead of being closed with straps running from side to side, was fastened together with plain panels, the front one being joined at the bust line and buttoned to the jumper straps, with three white pearl buttons on each side. The back was of a similar design. This was worn over a white guimpe, the full, short lace sleeves being capped with white piped Chinese sleeves. The skirt was nine-gored with no trimming.

Porch Furnishing.

For a cottage on the lake or seashore the deep porch may be made a picture in deep blues and the brilliant scarlet of Turkey reds. This scarlet tone may always be used effectively in porch furnishings, especially when the scarlet and white East India cottons are in combination. Delft blue gives a lovely porchroom also, the hammock in blue and white cord; denim cover in blue worked with white for the table, blue denim cushions for the chairs, as well as piled in the hammock; a big wicker armchair petticoated and cushioned in blue and white Japanese cotton crepe, and on the floor a blue and white "hit or miss" rug in cotton.

Braiding Thin Goods.

The best way to braid thin materials is to have the pattern stamped on heavy paper or cardboard and baste the material over the stamped pattern. Follow the outline of the pattern, sewing by hand or with the machine. It takes some skill and experience, however, to use the machine for this work. If the braid is put on by machine the stitching is done through the paper and the paper is afterward cut away from the back.

Save on Sugar Bills.

During the fruit season, when your sugar bill is large, and you feel you can't afford to make more jelly or jam because of the sugar needed, try cooking down the fruit juice, sealing it up well, and putting away until winter. Then make your jelly or jam as needed.

Mrs. Henry Garfield, living on Randolph street, Northville, Mich., says: "I suffered for a long time with pains in the back and loins, sometimes exceedingly severe. I tried different medicines which were recommended to me, but got little or no benefit from them. Noticing that Doan's Kidney Pills were endorsed by many people who had used them, I got a box at Murdoch Bros. drug store. They acted exactly as represented and gave me perfect relief in a very short time."

(From statement made Jan. 7th, 1902.)

Cured To Stay Cured.

On Nov. 26, 1906, Mrs. Garfield repeated her former statement, and added: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an excellent remedy, and I do not hesitate to re-endorse them and can advise their use to all suffering from backache or kidney trouble. I was so completely relieved by their use that I have not found it necessary to use them or any other remedy of the kind since."

On a recent occasion "down south" three little negroes, Moses, Jackson and Timmy, were called into "the house" by "Marse" John, who had owned their grandfather. He informed them that he would give ten bright new cents to the one of them who would tell him what were the three best things in the world. The coins were placed on a table and the white man held out three straws of different lengths, the boy who should draw the longest straw to have the first say. Timmy, the happy winner of this straw, was asked:

"Well, what are the three best things in the world?"

Without a moment's hesitation he answered nautically.

"I knows. The three bestest things in de worl' am possum 'n' sweet 'taties 'n' gravy."

Moses and Jackson made a simultaneous grab for the money and made off with it, one of them shouting back in a belligerent tone:

"He ain't gwine to hab de money, too, for dem's all de bestest things in de worl'."

"Will Mrs. Ultry-Mural," said the leader of the day, "kindly tell us what she infers from this?"

"Why," replied Mrs. Ultry-Mural, "it would seem that the emperor must have lived in a very remote suburb, or else he didn't possess the despotic power we have sometimes supposed."
