$1.00 Per Year in Advance

CORONERS JURY ON THE SALEM WRECK AT NORTHVILLE.

Reading from left to right the jurors in the back row are George Gillis, flour and feed merchant; Nelson Schrader, undertaker; A. K. Carpenter, hardware merchant; Clarence Clark, lawyer. The three seated in front are C. A. Sessions, ex-supervisor and retired shoe merchant; Justice of the Peace, Charles M. Joslin and William H. Ambler, insurance and real estate agent. —From Photo by L. L. Ball.

BEST YEAR IN HISTORY

NORTHVILLE BLDG. & LOAN ASSN. HELD ANNUAL MEETING.

Gained 25 New Members During the Last Year.

The Northville Building & Loan Association held its annual meeting last Friday night and re-elected same directors and same officers, leaving the board constituted as follows:

Officers—President, J. A. Dubuar; Vice-president, E. K. Simonds; Secretary, I. E. VanAtta; Treasurer, F. A. Miller; Attorney, C. C. Yerkes.

Directors—The officers and F. S. Neal, Spencer Clark, B. A. Wheeler, C. A. Sessions, W. H. Cattermole, Roy Clark and Milo Johnson.

The secretary's report showed the best year in the societies' history. First year's stock showed a profit of 6 1/2 per cent or better and nine year stock about nine per cent.

The membership showed 117 against 92, a year ago. There are over eighteen thousand dollars loaned out and the weekly payments amount to about $140.

The loaning of money by this association has proved a great convenience to those who desire to borrow enough to pay for their homes instead of paying rent.

Krumm—Wright.

Mr. Albert Krumm of Plymouth and Miss Agnes V. Wright of Wayne were united in marriage Wednesday afternoon, July 31, at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. W. G. Stephens. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Eckles of near Plymouth and Louie Schroeder of Farmington.

Chapman—Lauray.

The marriage of Milo Chapman and Mabel Lauray, which took place in Windsor some time ago, has just been announced. The young couple will make their home on the Frank Chapman farm.

PROUD LAKE NEWS.

Fred Fry and wife entertained John Putnam of Detroit over Sunday.

Roy Darwin and wife entertained Sam Stevenson and Percy Gauthier of Detroit over Sunday. The Rev. M. Stephens and wife of Northville on Tuesday. Mrs. F. H. Cogswell of Montreal is still enjoying camp life with them. Everybody is having an excellent time and all report there appetites are better than anywhere else and fishing fine.

Man's Whole Duty.

He who is truthful, just, merciful and kindly, does his duty to his race, and fulfills his great end in creation, no matter whether the rays of his life are not visible beyond the walls of his household or whether they strike the ends of the earth.—Lord Lytton.

ARRANGED FOR CHEAP EXCURSION AUGUST 14

Forty Cent Return Rate to Detroit That Day

The local Forester lodge here has arranged for a 40 cent excursion to Detroit for August 14.

The special cars will leave Northville at 7:30 a. m. standard time and everybody is invited.

The attraction will be a delightful day at Belle Isle besides a ball game among the members of the order.

Return cars leave Detroit at 8:00 p. m.

D. U. R. TAKES THE D. P. & N.

NORTHVILLE-WAYNE ELECTRIC GETS NEW LIFE.

Rapid Service and Through Freights for Plymouth.

The D. U. R. has taken over the D. P. & N., better known as the "Dinky line," between Northville and Wayne and have begun to string a new cable and line system. The power house at Plymouth will later be abandoned and the juice furnished from Farmington. The road bed and in fact the whole system will be thoroughly overhauled and Plymouth people will be given the same excellent passenger and freight service that is now given Northville.

Assistant General Superintendent Dorhenan of the D. U. R. tells the Record that just whether the cars will be run from Wayne to Farmington and all change or from Wayne to Northville and change here as at present or make Plymouth the terminal for both ways is not yet decided. "Anyhow," Mr. Dorhenan remarked, "You may assure Plymouth and Northville people of first-class service, for both passengers and freight."

Mr. Dorhenan thinks it will be some time in September before the work will be completed sufficiently to take on the big cars.

Repartee in the Cradle of Liberty.

"I must insist upon order," said Mayor Fitzgerald at Faneuil Hall when the crowd was becoming a little too boisterous. "You can order anything you like," was the ready response from the floor.—Boston Record.

To Preserve Druidical Relics.

The Edinburgh board of works is taking active steps for the preservation of what remains of the Standing Stones of Stennes, in Orkney—next to Stonehenge the most interesting Druidical relic in Great Britain.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

LOCAL CONCERN MEANS BUSINESS THESE DAYS.

Has Leased New Quarters in Building of Lapham Bank.

Assistant Engineer Gardner of the Northville Telephone Co., of Detroit was in town Saturday and Sunday looking over the ground relative to overhauling the Northville system.

The company has contracted with the Lapham Bank people for a ten years lease of the second floor of one of their buildings and it will be built and furnished with special reference to their occupancy.

The company contemplates putting all their wires in the village underground and direct connections will be made with Detroit and other cities. New lines will be built from Northville to Detroit and also western points.

The company means business and will spend a lot of money equipping their new plant with the most modern appliances.

INQUEST FINISHED

SALEM RAILROAD WRECK INQUIRY NOW UP TO JURY.

Verdict Will Be Reached Sometime Today.

The testimony was finished last night and is being argued this forenoon to the jury. The verdict will be reached it is thought shortly afternoon.

The Salem wreck inquest resumed work here Wednesday with Justice Joslin presiding as usual and the full jury present.

General Superintendent Trump took the stand for considerable time during the day and made it very clear to the jury and the public that railroad companies were as anxious as the public to avoid accidents and that wrecks were not deliberately planned by railway officials just for the fun of the thing.

The intelligence displayed by Justice C. M. Joslin as Coroner in handling the inquest has excited favorable comment from all sides, and his selection of the jury was all that could be asked. They are as intelligent a body of citizens as could be found in any community. This was proven by the fact that the Iowa inquest has already been abandoned in favor of Northville. What ever the finding of this jury it will be received as honest, fair and just.

Methodist Church Notes.

By the Pastor.

Public worship next Sunday morning and evening at the usual hours.

We are pleased to see how well our Sunday school is being sustained this warm weather.

At our official meeting held last Monday evening plans were laid for the successful winding up of this conference year. They earnestly desire the help of all friends to aid them in closing the year well.

Last Sunday afternoon we organized a Junior League which is to meet every Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The Misses Woodworths are to be the leaders. We believe good will be done. Let the parents help along in this much needed work.

Baptist Church Notes.

By a Member.

The BYPU will meet next Wednesday evening with Rev. S. F. Dimmock.

The Ladies' Missionary society will meet next Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 with Mrs. McClellan.

Services morning and evening as usual. Subject for morning, "The High Court of Heaven."

The ladies of the Baptist church have decided to have a penny contest Mrs. Larkins and Mrs. Scott were chosen as leaders, the former as Martha and the latter as Mary. The object is to get a mile of pennies. The contest will close November 1, and the winning side, assisted by the gentlemen of the church, will give a supper.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

By the Pastor.

The pastor has changed his plans and will not leave for his vacation till next Monday. Services at 10:30 next Sunday morning as usual. Topic "The Wrong of Worry." All welcome.

Whitney's Opera House—Detroit.

"Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model" the new and sensational melodrama by Oren Davis and the latest A. H. Woods production, which will be next week's offering at the Whitney, possesses a consistent human story. Nellie Gray, the heroine, is employed as a model in a large cloak factory, but her life is made miserable by the persecutions of the foreman and the ribald living of her father. It later develops that the man she supposes to be her father is of no relation to her, but simply that of a foster-father. Knowledge that she is a rich heiress reaches the ears of the foreman of the factory in which she works, who in collusion with her foster-brother, attempt to ruin or kill her.

Lyceum Theater—Detroit.

The regular season at the Lyceum will open August 11th. The opening attraction will be a dramatization of Mary J. Holmes celebrated book, "Lena Rivers," a story as sweet as the honeysuckle, with Miss Cecilia Poynter in the steller role. As the book was one over which our grandmothers both laughed and cried it is hoped the play will appeal equally as interesting to the younger generation.

Kitchen Luxuries

Don't confine all your luxuries to your parlor. There's plenty of luxury in nice kitchen ware. You spend a great deal more time in your kitchen than in your parlor, anyhow, so why be stingy with yourself just to please the people who come to see you? Our new Blue and White Granite Ware is a big improvement over the old black pots and pans. This is beautifully clean, and makes things taste good. Strong and durable, proof against rust, and, above all, absolutely safe to use. Made of sheet steel, covered with two coats of enamel inside and out; inside white, outside mottled with white and dark blue, with a smooth and glossy finish, giving a handsome and attractive appearance. It will make your kitchen a pleasure resort.

The Value of Individuality in a Man

Can any man of character afford to obscure it with a nondescript appearance at first sight? Custom made clothing emphasizes it. A tailor not merely fits a man's figure—we suit the personality as well. The coat must be made for the man, otherwise it is not his in any personal sense. It may be in style, but not in his style. Consider the economy of custom made clothing. It lasts and looks well and worn out. To cheapen your appearance is poor economy at best.

In Memory of George Eliot.

In Aubrey park, Warwickshire, England, the ancestral seat of the Newdegates, a tapered pillar in gray granite on a three-stepped pedestal has been erected to perpetuate the memory of George Eliot. Her birthplace is nearby, and her father, brother and nephew served the Newdegate family in the office of land agent. The monument is the gift of F. A. N. Newdegate.

Ancient Writers on Poisons.

Poison lore, "poison-lehre," as it was long called, was considered a forbidden subject for many ages. Gaten, in his work "On Antidotes," remarks that the only authors who dared to write of poisons were Orpheus, Theophrastus, Morus, Mendelius the younger, Heliodorus of Athens, and a few others. Unfortunately, none of their treatises is in existence.

Jute Sacks by the Thousand.

Immense numbers of jute sacks are annually used in the shipment of nitrate from Chile. They come principally from Australia and the East Indies, and are never used the second time, as the nitrate rots the fiber. During 1906 about 20,000,000 sacks were used, and the demand is constantly growing.

The Effeminate Man.

"If there is anything that makes me feel like going out and practicing with the dumb bells," said the mannish girl, "it is to see a man going about the street wearing pumpos or very low shoes that look like a girl's shoes, daintily tied with wide ribbon in a fetching bow. You'd be surprised how many you see of them, too."

Bride's Foolish Wager.

LATEST NEWS OF MICHIGAN

SHOOTING OF MISS CADENHEAD BY A SOLDIER AT THE SAULT.

Matters of Fact and Fancy Gathered Here and There About the Two Peninsulas.

THE ACTS ARE NO GOOD.

The coroner's jury in the inquest into the death of Miss Elizabeth Cadenhead, which occurred at Sault Ste. Marie, reached a verdict declaring that she came to her death by a bullet from the rifle of Private Cyrus Gillette, who is charged with involuntary manslaughter. Prosecuting Attorney George B. Holden at once issued a warrant for the arrest of Gillette, but it is not thought the authorities at Fort Brady will give him up, as he is to be tried by court martial. Speaking of the case, Holden says: "We will endeavor to secure Gillette from the military authorities, and if necessary will take the case to the secretary of war and the supreme court, unless he is punished by the military authorities."

"The decision of Justice Harlan, which is cited as proving that a man acquitted in court martial cannot be tried under civil laws, does not apply here. That was a Philippine case where the civil and military governments are under one head. Here they are separate and trial under one does not make a man immune from the other. The shooting of a person in the streets of the city is too serious to go unnoticed."

More Defective Laws.

Other acts of the last legislature beside the Mt. Pleasant Normal college appropriation bill, the binder twine plant bill and the juvenile court act, which have been declared unconstitutional, have been submitted to the attorney general for his opinion as to their legality, and it is not unlikely that several will be found fatally defective.

A class of bills making appropriations of state money for purposes not directly connected with state government are under scrutiny and there is a strong feeling that some of these will fall under the attorney general's objections.

One bill makes an appropriation of $500 to the "corn association." So far as can be learned no such association exists. It was intended to provide money to conduct excursions.

Sweetheart Was Loyal.

Herman Myers, the Montague boy horse thief, who was captured after a thousand mile chase across the continent, was sentenced to the Michigan reformatory at Ionia for five years. Just before Myers decided to plead guilty Sheriff Clinger received a letter from the warden of the Hutchinson, Ks., prison stating that Myers had broken a parole in that state and was sentenced to a prison term that would not have expired until 1910. His parents deserted him when he asked for help, but a sweetheart in Kansas remains loyal.

For Mrs. Custer.

Fr Crowley, of Monroe, received from Gov. Warner the pen with which he signed the $25,000 Custer memorial bill. It is an ordinary steel pen instead of gold which might be used for a purpose of this kind, and the governor intimates that Custer had more use for steel than gold. Fr Crowley will present the pen to the widow of Gen. Custer, who is expected back from abroad soon.

No Watered Stock.

Upon entirely new lines, an electric railway is being projected between Detroit and Adrian. There are to be no bonds, the money paid for the stock to be used to build and equip the road, and the construction is not to start until the cash to pay for it has been secured. Thus there will be no water to squeeze out through foreclosure for default of interest on the bonds.

Reserves' New Ship.

The old Spanish cruiser, now the United States training ship San Juan de Austria, sailed from Portsmouth Sunday for Boston, where she will take on ammunition before starting on her long voyage through the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes to Detroit.

The ship was formally turned over by the navy department early last week to Commander F. D. Standish, who accepted it in behalf of the state of Michigan. The Michigan Naval brigade arrived in Portsmouth Friday night and spent Saturday and Sunday in getting acquainted with the unfamiliar vessel. The Austria has been repaired at a cost of over $10,000, and is now in such first class shape that for a time it was thought that Canada might be unwilling to allow such a first-class vessel of war on the lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Larned, of Lansing, jumped from a coach while riding near Twin Falls, Ida., just before the horses and rig went over an 800 foot precipice.

Detroit now boasts an electric sign on a church, a feature which caused comment when introduced at the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, in New York, by Rev. Charles Aked. It is on Central Methodist Episcopal church, and stretches clear across the center door, the letters being nearly a foot high.

Mrs. Frances O. Lewis, married at 72 to a husband of 69, has been granted a divorce in the Ingham county circuit court. She asserted that her husband compelled her to keep a boarding house to provide for the family support, after having made a pre-nuptial agreement that he would attend to the supporting business.

Reports from the different Detroit hospitals say that the people injured in the wreck near Salem are making good progress toward recovery and will soon be able to go home.

Pauline Raymond, of Cincinnati, 5 years old, jumped off a dock into Gull lake and rescued her 18 months old brother, who had fallen off, holding him above water till help came.

The equipment for constructing the proposed Lansing-Jackson electric railway has been shipped. The road to Mason is to be completed this fall and extended to Jackson next year.

By nearly all the upper peninsula roads, the new passenger rule will go into effect promptly on their lines. Lower peninsula railway officials have not responded promptly, but many of the managers are said to be absent from the state.

John Carroll, a bridge worker, dropped dead on the street in Jackson Wednesday. Carroll had recently returned from an extended trip in Ireland. His death was caused by heart disease brought on by the excessive heat.

Joseph Cain died in the Petoskey hospital from injuries received at Pellston. A Grand Rapids & Indian train cut his leg off, his body was bruised and he sustained internal injuries. He was 45 years old and leaves a widow and son.

Ray Winebreeme, a Sturgis blacksmith, aged 24, struck Fred Betcher, an aged man, in the face with brass knuckles, inflicting serious wounds. He was arrested, fined $50 and 60 days in the house of correction and on the way to Detroit inside of three hours.

Samuel L. Stephenson, former congressman from Menominee, and brother of United States Senator Isaac Stephenson, of Marquette, Wis., is in a critical condition as the result of an accident Saturday in which he fell and broke his hip bone. He is 70 years old.

James Cannon, of Port Huron, at different times in his life, made David Cannon, William Cannon, Mrs. Catherine Allan and Abigail Smiley beneficiaries in his $100,000 policy in the Knights of the Modern Maccabees. The courts have been asked to solve the riddle.

Howard L. Clark, son of County Treasurer Clark and one of the prominent young men of Charlotte, died at the University hospital in Ann Arbor, following an operation. Clark was a Spanish war veteran, being a member of Co. E, of Lansing. He leaves a widow, a daughter of Editor F. A. Ellis, of the Charlotte Leader.

Despondent because of ill success in business life, Henry C. Leighton, aged 35, clerk of a Battle Creek hotel, shot himself in front of a mirror yesterday morning. He was found dead by his wife, who rushed into the room. A hastily scrawled note told where his insurance papers could be found. Besides his widow Leighton leaves two young children.

Another college romance culminated Wednesday when Miss Violet McLaren became the bride of Howard F. Withey, of Reed City. Miss McLaren was graduated with the '07 literary class. The groom was graduated in the law department at the same time and entered partnership with his father, a prominent lawyer at Reed City. Withey was a pole vaulter and sub on the football team.

Four fires broke out in houses in the village of Whitehall, four miles from Muskegon, between midnight and 8 o'clock Sunday morning, and the residents are greatly excited. Burglars are believed to have started the fires, hoping to burglarize others during the excitement.

A man, representing himself as a Chicago toilet dealer, has been swindling women merchants of Sturgis in a wholesale way. He offered to put in a stock of toilet goods in a handsome show case, without advance charges except for the shipping. In this way he obtained nearly $100, but the merchandise never came.

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—Gov. Warner assured members of the state board of education at their monthly meeting in Detroit that a special session of the legislature will be called early in the fall and perhaps in the latter part of September. Ever since the last regular session wound up speculation has been rife as to the probability of this action. The manner in which the announcement came about was unusual and lends added weight to the governor's assertion, although he usually means what he says. Through an error at Lansing, the cause of which seems to be a matter of conjecture, no appropriation was made for the maintenance of the Mount Pleasant Normal school. Inasmuch as it costs $5,000 a month to run the institution, the state board of education got on its thinking. Gov. Warner and Attorney General Bird met D. M. Ferry, Jr., L. L. Wright and W. J. McKone, of the board of education, and went over the whole situation. C. D. Grown, principal of the Mount Pleasant school, also was on hand. After long deliberation it was decided to have the members of the board of education and Gov. Warner borrow money on their individual notes to meet the expense. It is estimated that $12,000, at least, will have to be put forth before the special session of the legislature can make an appropriation.

Michigan Patents.

Michigan patents have been issued as follows: Mary E. Chamberlain, Muskegon, cuspidor; Charles Chamberlain, Detroit, curtain fastener; Howard E. Coffin, Lansing, crank case and bearing for explosive engines; Arthur J. Farmer, Detroit, multiple station telephone system; Dora Harrison, Lansing, combined bust form and arm pad; James Heddon, Dowagiac, fish bait, or lure; William Langrill, Bay City, voting machine; Ernest F. Loyd, Detroit, gas scrubber; Julian P. Lyon, Detroit, metal jar cover; William Norton, Detroit, mold; Carl U. E. Norum, Hubbell, knockdown flower pot; August W. Shank, Detroit, dustpan; Frank A. Simonds, Grand Rapids, heating; Frederick Sober, Detroit, bottle case; Jno. L. Taylor, Benton Harbor, clasp for loose leaf ledgers; Maximilian J. L. Lower, Detroit, automatic holding device for power transmission, mechanism; Emil Tyden, Hastings, pedestal table lock.

Change in National Guard Plans.

Company B, infantry, and Battery A, artillery, will leave Lansing on the evening of Tuesday, August 13, instead of the next day, as at first planned. Both will make the trip, together with the Mason section, on the same train. The change is made for various reasons. In the first place, the heat of the day makes very uncomfortable for horses and men a trip such as theirs will be to Ludington. Then, too, if they travel in the day time they are more apt to be detained and not reach the camp grounds until late Wednesday morning. This would inconvenience the battery in unloading and preparing for the night. According to the new plans, the infantry and artillery men will leave Lansing about 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening and reach Epworth Heights about six o'clock in the morning. This will give both the artillery and infantry plenty of opportunity to get into shape before night.

Go to Jackson Next Year.

The sixth annual convention of the Michigan Rural Letter Carriers' association, held at Flint, adjourned after electing officers and selecting Jackson as the place of meeting next year. The following officers were elected: R. T. Walker of Plymouth, president; W. E. Johnson, of Rodney, vice president; H. E. Crum, of Hillsdale, secretary; J. H. Ramsey, of Eaton Rapids, treasurer. J. H. Sykes, of Bellevue, and L. A. Clark, of Climax, were chosen to represent the state association at the national convention of rural letter carriers at Atlanta, Ga. At a banquet C. J. Wilcox, of Allegan, the retiring president, was presented with a gold ring, and Secretary Crum was given a silver tea set by the membership of the association, the presentation addresses being made by Congressman Charles E. Townsend, of Jackson.

Monroe Grants a Site.

The Monroe common council passed a resolution granting the Custer Memorial association the right to erect their monument, for which the legislature appropriated $25,000, on the public square in the heart of the city.

Must Go to Supreme Court.

The constitutionality of the juvenile court law is questioned by the superintendent of the state school at Coldwater, and the matter will be taken to the supreme court. He points out numerous defects and points out that the constitution provides for only three courts, while this law establishes the fourth; that a trial by jury, prohibited in courts of record, is provided, and that the title prohibits sending juvenile offenders to the state school while the body of the act permits it.

Head of Knights of Maccabees.

D. P. Markey, who has been re-elected supreme commander of the Knights of the Maccabees of the World, already has held the office six terms, indicating his popularity in the order. He was born at Bunker Hill, Mich., 50 years ago, was educated for the law, and at the age of 27 was elected to the legislature and subsequently became speaker of the lower house. Mr. Markey has been commander of the Maccabees in this state two terms, and he also has held the office of supreme chaplain. For nearly a dozen years he has been chairman of the committee on statistics and good of the order. He forced through the rearing plan at the convention of the Maccabees three years ago.

Express Doubt on Law.

Attorney General Bird gave an opinion to the auditor general that in view of the defects in the law making an appropriation for the erection of a binding twine plant at the state prison in Jackson, Mich., the auditor general should not draw his warrant on the fund established until the supreme court has passed on the law. The binder twine plant was one of the measures which Gov. Warner urged most persistently upon the law legislature and the attorney general's decision will furnish an additional reason for the special session which the governor has announced he will call in the fall.

Charge Freight Discrimination.

Charges of discrimination in freight rates have been filed with the railroad commissioner by W. C. Sterling & Son, of Monroe, who say they pay a rate of 21 cents for railroad ties from a point in Northern Michigan and that a Toledo firm pays only 9¢. The commissioner has laid the matter before ten roads. Another complaint has been received from the Ajax Co., of Bay City, which says that the firm is charged an excess rate by the Grand Trunk for transportation of explosives, while a Chicago firm pays only for the exact weight.

Eight More File Petitions.

The following aspirants to the position of delegate to the constitutional convention have filed petitions with the secretary of state: Charles H. Thomas, Hastings; Orzo M. Cramer, Ludington; John W. Holmes, Alma; John F. Murphy, Harbor Beach; James Harrison, Maple Rapids; Frank R. Monford, Ithaca; Clayton L. Bailey, Manassah; Herbert E. Powell, Ionia.

Better Schoolhouses.

County School Commissioner Wilson, in his report, states that there are but five school buildings in Ingham county that are properly heated and ventilated. Figures on this subject are being obtained by the department of public instruction as a basis for legislation to provide for the construction of proper school buildings.

Bids Considered Too Low.

Bids were received on the large Bement plant by the Detroit Trust Co. receiver. The highest bid was that of Jacob Stahl and James J. Baird, who bid a total of $93,000 for the remaining assets of the company. This is so much lower than the amount expected that it is doubtful if the sale will be confirmed by the court.

New Rural Mail Carriers.

Michigan rural mail carriers appointed: Harbor Springs, George C. Clark, regular, Frank G. Marsh, sub.; Ossineke, Albert F. Lecuyer, regular; Eli Lecuyer, sub.

Former Messenger a Candidate.

Gov. Warner has instructed Secretary of State Prescott to give notice of a special election on September 17 in this legislative district to select a successor to Representative Stanley D. Montgomery, who has resigned. Alex. Cohen, who came to Lansing from Detroit about 12 years ago as a messenger in the legislature, is the only candidate in the field for the Republican nomination. Probably the nomination will be made at the August primary.

WARD'S TRIAL.

Much Sensational Testimony Expected on Charge of Manslaughter.

Representative Charles E. Ward, the state legislator, whom a jury in Coroner Parker's court last week implicated with the death by a criminal operation, of Miss Edith Presley, the state senate proof-reader, will be arrested on a charge of manslaughter early this week if he comes back.

If he does not return to Detroit officers, armed with requisition papers, will go after him and bring him back. It is thought unlikely that he will not come back willingly. Both Mr. Ward and his counsel, Senator Arthur Tuttle, promised Prosecuting Attorney Robison that the state representative would appear in Detroit whenever the authorities desired it.

It is expected that the trial of the accused legislator, which will be held early in the September term of the recorder's court, will develop even more of a sensation than was provided at the recent inquest in the coroner's court.

No warrant has as yet been issued for Ward. Both Dr. Frith and Dr. Horton-Barr express dissatisfaction because they were not given an opportunity to testify before the coroner's jury.

Ward registered at the Downey house, Lansing, Saturday, and while newspaper men were around kept to his room, denying himself to callers. During the afternoon he left the hotel and, it was stated later, was gone about two hours, nobody knew where. Then he left town again, and it was said at the hotel that he had gone to Bancroft.

Stopped the Train.

A train was held up near Owosso by John DeBraw, an escaped patient from the Pontiac asylum. Standing in the middle of the tracks, he pointed a pitchfork at the locomotive and steadily stood his ground. The engineer had to stop for kill DeBraw and he put on the brakes in time to save the latter's life. DeBraw was placed on the train and taken to Corunna. He told the passengers that he owned the railroad and presumed it was his right to stop the train if he desired. DeBraw is in jail pending the arrival of officers from the asylum to take him back.

Burned while lighting a gasoline stove Mrs. Rosina Waters, of Ionia, died without being able to tell how it happened. The body was buried immediately after her death.

Valentine Bayer, who died in St. Mary's hospital, Detroit, while a federal prisoner, accused of obtaining mail under false pretenses and thereby cheating a widow out of $100, is said to have died of grief over the wrong he did.

Dr. Wm. Loughby Dayton Miller, reputed to be the most eminent dental authority in the world, who had been engaged as dean of the U. of M. dental college, is dead in Newark, O., his birthplace and former home. His death will be a serious blow to the plans for giving the highest possible standard to the Ann Arbor dental college.

The Castle of Lies

BY ARTHUR HENRY VESSEY
(Copyright, 1906, by DAPPLETON & COMPANY)

"Bah! don't mention that word to me again. I am sick of your hypocrisy. You don't deceive me, let me tell you. Your plea of cowardice is a convenient subterfuge. Every fact points to your being in league with these adventurers. A coward wouldn't have taken the risks you have taken. You saw the man hiding in the stairway, you saw him about to fire on a helpless girl, and you raised no hand. Am I talking plainly enough?"

I looked into Locke's eyes, glaring with rage and contempt, and I laughed aloud. It was actually a relief to have my weakness exalted to the plane of deliberate villainy.

"Laugh, my friend, but I am not to be deceived by a laugh."

"And now that I stand abased in my naked devilry?"

"I give you five minutes to make a full and complete confession. If at the end of five minutes you still refuse, I shall have you promptly arrested for being a partner in the intrigues of the Countess Sarakoff, for masquerading as Sir Mortimer Brett, and for being an accomplice in the murder of Miss Brett."

Five minutes! The time was not long. I knew Locke would keep his word; but more than ever I was stubbornly resolved to refuse taking him into my confidence.

"Could I tell him my reasons for acting as I had done? Could I tell him that I had set out on the romantic quest of saving a life for the life that had been lost? Would he believe that? At least without appealing to the woman who had set me that task? To drag in her name was impossible."

The minutes passed swiftly. So this was the end of my task! Disgrace and imprisonment! I had warned Helena that might be the case, I looked across the valley at the pinnacles of the Castle of Happiness. What a fool I have been!

"You time is almost up," said Locke grimly, looking at the watch he had placed on his knee. "And Miss Brett is waiting in the garden over there. Do you wish her to see you marched off to prison?"

On the contrary, it was she, who must set me free! I would put her to the supreme test. Now if she trusted me as she had promised, I might yet escape from the awful dilemma.

I rose to my feet. I called to her, "Miss Brett!"

She came to us. My maneuver so completely astonished Locke that he stared at me speechless.

"Miss Brett," I said quietly, "Mr. Locke has taken upon himself the task of bringing me to justice. He finds me guilty of complicity in the intrigues of Madame de Varnier. He refuses to believe that I am acting in your behalf. I cannot blame him for his suspicions. The facts are almost wholly against me—the surface facts. I do not even deny most of them. But he has woefully misconstrued my motives in every case. I refuse absolutely to tell him what those motives are. He has threatened me with arrest unless I make to him a full and complete confession without delay. Mr. Locke, as I have said, is acting on the behalf of your mother and yourself. Personally he has no right whatever to make any complaint against me."

"Miss Brett will be the last person to shield you from punishment when she knows the truth," interrupted Locke, bewildered at my audacity in appealing to her.

"Among other things, Miss Brett," I continued eagerly, "he accuses me of being an accomplice in your attempted murder in the stairway."

"There are facts more tangible than that," said Locke significantly.

"But I refuse to listen to them," said Helena, reassuring me with a quiet glance. "I am not so ignorant of these facts, perhaps, as you imagine, Mr. Locke. I have every confidence in you, Mr. Haddon. As to accusing your arrest, that is absurd."

"Thank you," I returned, with a passion of gratitude in my heart. "You will hear from me before midnight. If at the end of that time you do not, I think it would be well for you to consult Mr. Locke. He knows a great deal of which you are ignorant."

"Be sure of this, sir, I shall not wait until midnight to enlighten Miss Brett," cried Locke, his face purple with anger and chagrin.

"Mr. Locke, let us understand each other," said Helena, and even Locke felt that her decision was irrevocable. "Mr. Haddon is my friend. I refuse to believe him guilty of dishonor, much less of deliberate crime. I refuse, and my mother will refuse, to press any charge against him. More than that, we trust him to help us in our difficulties."

Locke closed the face of his watch with a snap.

"If you have come to that decision," he said with assumed carelessness, "there is nothing more to be said. If I can be of service to you, you will find me at the hotel at midnight, as the chivalrous Mr. Haddon has suggested."

We were alone. But Helena was of no mind to receive my thanks or my assurances that I had been absolutely ignorant that Locke or any other had been in the stairway.

"Until 12 to-night," she said. "Until 12 to-night," I repeated. I lifted my hat and walked swiftly toward the chateau.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Secret Staircase.

"We trust him to help us in our difficulties."

Those were the words Helena had spoken; she trusted me, who had been called coward, to accomplish what the cleverest and bravest man must have hesitated at promising. For one cannot promise with reason to attempt successfully the unknown. It was the vagueness of my mission—that made it so perplexing.

One cannot tear apart lover from lover as one tears a piece of paper. And yet, if Sir Mortimer were living and still enamored of his mistress, I had promised to attempt even that. If, on the other hand, Sir Mortimer were dead, I was to essay a duty even more difficult: to rescue his great name from dishonor.

Before midnight, then, there were two things to be accomplished. I must know the truth from Madame de Varnier concerning Sir Mortimer Brett, whether he were living or dead; I must rescue Captain Forbes.

It was to be a double duel. The first out there was much to be done before then. And if she persisted in not seeing me, I wondered how I was to force my presence on her. In the meanwhile I must attempt to learn something of Captain Forbes's detention.

I lunched alone, and well. The absence of Dr. Starva was only to be expected. Even so brazen a villain as he would hesitate to meet me with unconcern. During the struggle in the porter's lodge no word had been spoken by either of us, but certainly he could not have been ignorant of my identity any more than was I of his. When we again met, therefore, it would be as avowed enemies.

Frankly, I did not look forward to that meeting with pleasure. The fate of Captain Forbes pointed too obvious a moral. I had put myself deliberately in Starva's power by my return to the chateau. If I were unmoored it would be because my services were indispensable.

I had lighted my cigarette. Jacques was noisily gathering up the things. I had determined to take him into my confidence. I believed it was he who had brought me the note. I suspected that he was not ignorant of my leaving the chateau. He had accepted my excuse too readily. At any rate, I believed the fellow could be bribed. I demanded carelessly.

"And Dr. Starva? Is he, too, confined to his room?"

The man shrugged his shoulders. Evidently he held Dr. Starva in no great consideration.

"One knows nothing of him. He is mysterious, this Dr. Starva."

I looked at the man keenly. The adjective was significant.

"Everything about this chateau is mysterious, it seems to me," I remarked cheerfully. "Last night, for instance, I could have sworn I heard the shout of one in distress."

"Is it possible, monsieur?"

"And when I found a note on my pillow. I would give a hundred francs to the man who placed it there if I could find him."

"Until Twelve To-night," She Said.

to be fought was Madame de Varnier, the weapons to be of her choosing, cunning and wit; the second, Dr. Starva; and he had already shown me what weapons he preferred.

To arm myself for my fight with him I supposed would be a simple matter. But when I made inquiries for a gunsmith's shop I learned to my dismay that there was none in Alterhoffen. I was compelled to return to the chateau empty handed.

The terrace was deserted. I crossed it, close to the castle walls. I intended, if possible, to enter the hall unobserved by the little door under the winding staircase through which I had followed Dr. Starva. I looked cautiously into the great room through one of the multioned windows. No one was about. Once within the chateau, and the door locked, I gained my room, and rang the bell for the servant. Jacques, the lackey who had shown me to my room the night before, answered the call.

"It is half past one," I cried impatiently. "Is Madame de Varnier not ready for luncheon?"

The man looked his surprise. "Luncheon has been waiting for your Excellency. I came to your room some time ago, but there was no answer when I knocked."

"I had been wandering about the chateau," I replied carelessly. "So luncheon is ready. I hope I have not kept Madame de Varnier waiting too long?"

"Madam begs to be excused. Luncheon is served for Dr. Starva and yourself."

I followed the man to the room where we had dined, not at all pleased at the conclusion that she affected. I was impatient for action. Nearly 12 hours were to elapse before midnight,

Jacques shook his head. "Monsieur has said that the chateau is immense. One might find it difficult without a guide."

"And you will be that guide," I said with assurance.

He shook his head still more vigorously. "Impossible! Madam would object. Besides, there is Alphonse."

"Alphonse? Who is he?"

"He is madam's confidential servant."

"At least you can tell me the way to the towers."

"I have never been to the towers," the man persisted.

"Then the staircase is concealed?" I asked sharply, irritated at his hypocrisy.

"I have seen the tapestry near the gallery move very strangely," he blurted out.

Captain Forbes, then, was imprisoned in one of the towers. The staircase leading thither was concealed behind a secret door hidden by a tapestry. This door was near the gallery. So far so well. But I remembered that there was one central tower, flanked by three smaller towers. In which of them was Captain Forbes held a prisoner? I came to the point directly. To fence with the fellow was wasting time.

"The rooms in the towers themselves must be interesting. In medieval times they were no doubt used as dungeons, if there can be dungeons in the air. In which of these towers does Dr. Starva usually lodge his friends?"

I asked the question not without trepidation. I was tolerably sure of my man, but for the moment I feared that I had overshot the mark. He poised a tray on his palm and shuffled hastily to the door, as if he were frightened at the information he had already given.

"You have forgotten something," I said carelessly, and tapped the notes on the table. He hesitated; then, returning, snatched at them.

"When one has ascended the secret stairway," he said in a low voice, "one finds oneself in a bare room. That is the central tower. It is a triangle in shape. At the corners of the triangle there are three doors opening on three smaller rooms, the dungeons, as monsieur calls them. One of these rooms is the oratory of madam. Monsieur knows that madam is very religious. When madam is not to be seen she is at her prayers."

Again he seized his tray, but I had still another question to ask.

"Which of these rooms is the oratory? And in which does Dr. Starva lodge his friends?"

"But, monsieur, I do not know," he stammered, and again seized his tray. "You know very well, if you think," I commanded.

He rubbed his nose, a gesture curiously reflective and agitated. He turned himself about like a top as he tried, or pretended to try, to remember toward which points of the compass the various rooms faced.

"Monsieur knows that the chateau itself does not face either south, north, east, or west. The oratory is to the south. No, it points to the west. The locked room, Dr. Starva's, that is to the east. But no—truly, your Excellency, it is impossible for me to remember."

He fled from the room, the dishes on his tray rattling in his perturbation.

But he had told me much. I knew that if I could find the secret staircase to the towers, I could force open the door behind the tapestry, I might bag both my birds with one shot.

Captain Forbes in his prison, or Madame de Varnier at her prayers—it was all one to me.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Terrifying Apparition.

"I did not hesitate. There was no time like the present. This servant had been false to Madame de Varnier, false to Dr. Starva. He would betray me with as little compunction if it were made worth his while."

I walked slowly up the grand stairway leading from the hall. I gained the gallery that ran about the hall, meeting no one. I pretended to be interested in examining the designs of the tapestry. I tapped the wall as I moved deliberately along. It seemed to me quite solid in every direction. I began to think that Jacques had been playing with me.

As I stood there hesitating, Alphonse, the confidential servant of Madame de Varnier, appeared suddenly before me. Either his tread had been catlike or the secret staircase was very near.

I thought I read consternation on his face. I leaned over the carved railing of the gallery, gazing down into the hall.

"Am I not to see Madame de Varnier before long?"

"I shall tell madam that your Excellency is waiting."

"If you please."

I walked carelessly down the long corridor that led to my room. I closed the door, but I was careful to hold the handle in my hand, and in an instant my eye was at the keyhole.

He had paused irresolutely, looking down the corridor toward my room. Evidently he was dismayed at having been surprised by me. He was hesitating whether he should return to warn Madame de Varnier. Luckily he did not hesitate long.

He vanished round the corner of the corridor. In an instant I had followed him. As he lifted the tapestry he touched a spring. A door opened noiselessly.

"One moment, Alphonse," I cried. (TO BE CONTINUED)

INNOCENT SAYS JURY

THE TRIAL OF HAYWOOD ENDS WITH A VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY.

JUDGE'S CHARGE FAIR.

Jury Came in With Verdict Sunday Morning and the Long, Wearisome and Remarkable Case Ended.

Features of the Trial.

The 12 men who for many weeks have listened to the mass of testimony offered against and for William D. Haywood, secretary and treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners, on trial in Boise City, Idaho, on the charge that he conspired to kill ex-Gov. Frank Steunenberg, who was assassinated with a bomb in Caldwell on December 3, 1905, were sent to the jury room to formulate a verdict at four minutes past eleven on Saturday forenoon.

The charge to the jury was satisfactory to both sides and was considered strictly fair to both prosecution and defense. Some consider that the defendant was favored, if at all, only on the point of what might be a reasonable doubt. Under the indictment in the case, said the judge, "the defendant may, if the evidence warrants it, be convicted of murder of the first degree, murder of the second degree, or manslaughter."

The general opinion when the jury retired was favorable to an acquittal and that result was generally expected. Under the law of Idaho a jury can bring in a legal verdict on Sunday so that when they came in at 3:30 o'clock, in the morning and announced that they were agreed and that their verdict was "Not guilty," the case was at an end and Haywood out of jeopardy.

The data of the trial is especially interesting and follows:

Ex-Gov. Frank Steunenberg was killed Dec. 30, 1905, by the explosion of a bomb at the front gate of his home in Caldwell.

Pinkerton detectives charged the crime to the Western Federation of Miners, whom Steunenberg had antagonized during strike troubles.

William D. Haywood, Charles H. Moyer and George A. Pettibone were arrested on the charge of conspiring to kill Steunenberg. Harry Orchard declared they employed him to do the deed and to perpetrate a number of other deeds, such as blowing up mines, etc., causing many fatalities.

The trial began May 9, 1907. The jury was completed June 3 and the case was given to the jury July 27. Over 175 witnesses were examined.

The cost of the trial to the state is estimated at $90,000, to Canyon county $25,000 and to the Western Federation of Miners $150,000, a total of $265,000.

Lower Rates.

The state of North Carolina has won in its fight to have its passenger rate law of 2 1/4 cents observed by all the railroads pending an appeal to the courts by the roads of the state which propose to fight the law. The promise of obedience to the law by Aug. 8 by the Southern and the Atlantic Coast Line railways which since July, the date set for the rate law to go into effect, have been violating the law, was given at a conference which the railroads sought with Gov. Glenn, who had stated that as a precedent to any agreement he might make the 2 1/4 cent rate must first be put into effect.

The only trouble in the conference was a selection of the date at which the 2 1/4 cent rate should become effective. The railroads wanted a longer time than the state was willing to grant, but finally Aug. 8 was agreed on, as the railroad representatives stated that it would be impossible sooner to make the proper arrangements at their various ticket offices to supply tickets and to fix rates.

Politico-Temperance Crusade.

The politico-temperance crusade in the south, with its new life and energy, constitutes the most startling development in southern politics today. Politicians have come to a realization that the prohibition movement in their region must be taken with the utmost seriousness. Kentucky is now a "no license" state. The whole state of Tennessee is "dry," save for the cities of Memphis, Nashville and Chattanooga. In the "dry" districts no alcoholic beverage may be bought—not even a glass of beer or claret with dinner. The state of Texas is said to contain 90 counties that have abolished saloons. North Carolina, Mississippi and other states of the south tell the same story. Anybody may have spirituous beverages sent to him in any of the "dry" districts; but throughout these regions every saloon has been extirpated. One may travel up and down the rural parts of Kentucky and Tennessee without finding one bar or cross-roads saloon such as may be found in profusion throughout, say, New York, New Jersey or Pennsylvania.

Statistics have led the voters to see that the prohibition issue is not alone moral, but economic. It is declared, and that prosperity has appeared wherever the saloon disappeared. Gradually the towns, counties and states are joining the anti-saloon forces.

Chaplain Thomas Dickson, Twenty-sixth infantry, shot and seriously wounded Private Clyde Blakely, Ninth infantry, at San Antonio, Tex. Dickson says that Blakely was dragging away a brass cannon from his front yard.

The department of justice at Washington has ordered a vigorous prosecution of the men who kidnaped Manuel Sarabina, a Mexican, from the jail at Douglas, Ariz., and took him across the line into Mexico while he was awaiting extradition proceedings. He has been returned to the Arizona prison by Mexican authorities.

The Late Senator Pettus.

Senator Pettus, of Alabama, who went there when congress adjourned in quest of health, died Saturday night in Hot Springs, Ark., of apoplexy. He was stricken at the breakfast table Friday morning and did not regain consciousness. For ten years Edmund Winston Pettus was one of the most interesting figures in the senate. Whenever he arose to speak it was like the sudden opening of a forgotten page in American history.

His career and that of the late Senator Morgan were so closely linked that at Washington it would have been easier to conceive Castor without Pollux, Damon without Pythias or David without Jonathan than Pettus without Morgan. Both were hard workers, the hardest perhaps in the senate, despite their great age.

Senator Pettus was born in Limestone Co., Alabama, on July 6, 1821. He was graduated from Clinton college in Tennessee and was admitted to the Alabama bar in 1842, settling down in Gainsville to practice. On June 27, 1844, he was married to Mary S. Chapman.

Nine Were Drowned.

The steamer Frontenac was burned and beached opposite Farley's Point, Lake Cayuga, N. Y., Saturday, and nine lives were lost. The victims were all women and children passengers and all were drowned. Several passengers were severely burned before the boat could be beached. She lies burned and blackened in seven feet of water. The bodies of the drowned women and children have been recovered and the injured are being cared for at the homes of persons near the scene of the wreck. The Frontenac left Cayuga in the morning on its daily trip to Sheldrake and returned. At that place a large number of excursionists from the town of Cayuga and young women students from the Prang school of art at Glenwood went on board, making the total number of passengers about 100. On the return trip the steamer was traveling along between Lavanna and Farley's Point when one of the passengers noticed smoke coming from the neighborhood of the smokestack.

To Kill the Czar.

Russian authorities expect to indict a number of plotters against the czar soon. Women took the leading part in the latest conspiracy. The principals are Mme. Fedosovsk, wife of a well known St. Petersburg lawyer; "Comrade Nina," alias Petrova, who escaped to a foreign country; Boris Nikitenko, a retired naval lieutenant, Naumoff, a mail clerk, Emme, an instructor in the imperial lyceum, and three lawyers, Brusoff, Chabroff and Zavadsky.

The man chosen to kill the emperor is named Klossovsky. The plan of the conspirators was to have Klossovsky make his way to the emperor while clad in the uniform of a sergeant of the imperial convoy. The stratagem employed by the plotters to obtain the desired information of the habits and movements of the emperor show that espionage was conducted in part through waiters who supplied the royal kitchen.

Oh! What a Night!

E. R. Bucklev, a hotel clerk, and George Elliott, an actor of New York city, were taken from the top of the Twentieth Century Limited when it arrived in Cleveland early Friday, unconscious from flight and exposure. They climbed to the top of one of the sleepers as the train was pulling out of Buffalo, not realizing the terrific exposure and perilous nature of the trip. A few miles out of Buffalo the speed of the train increased and the noise rose to a roar. The men clung desperately to one of the little guard rails for dear life and finally fainted.

A Lake Shore employe found them when the train pulled into Cleveland. He dashed water into their faces, and finally poured restoratives down their throats to bring them back to consciousness. The men were arrested. They said they were "broke" and were trying to beat their way to Chicago. Both were well dressed.

Castro is Scheming.

The Venezuelan government persists in its refusal to arbitrate the claims in question. The reply is a lengthy document and answers in detail the arguments advanced by Mr. Ro. It is believed that in rejecting for the second time the United States proposition to arbitrate these claims, the Venezuelan government is seeking to take advantage of the fact that the Hague conference is just about to embark upon the consideration of the famous Drago doctrine, involving the right of a state to forcibly collect debts due by another to it. President Castro is probably presuming that the United States as an ardent advocate of that doctrine would scarcely care to weaken its argument at the Hague by threatening a display of force now to collect these pending claims.

WIRELETS.

"Silent" Smith's estate is worth less than $25,000,000, which is about half as much as was supposed.

Phineas M. Spencer, a Cleveland banker, who died a few days ago, left $25,000 to his housekeeper and $10,000 to another servant.

Susan Bullett Dixon, Kentucky authoress who wrote the "Repeal of the Missouri Compromise," "Slavery in American Politics," and other works, is dead in New York, aged 78.

One hundred and twenty horses dropped dead on the streets of Kansas City Tuesday from the effects of heat. The thermometer registered 96 degrees in the city and temperatures of 100 degrees were reported through Kansas.

Wm. J. Semmon, former county clerk in Louisville, Ky., has been arrested on a charge of embezzling $45,000 from the city. He was one of the officials whose office was declared vacant when the court of appeals ousted every officer in the city on the charge that they had secured their election by fraud.

Smith Talks Like the Parrot.

Inspector F. C. Smith of the U. S. Interstate Commerce commission was here long enough last week to talk to the newspapers a la Hobson and tell what a blamed fool of a railroad official Supt. W. D. Trump of the P. M. is. It is a case where the "big stick" at Washington ought to put a gag in somebody's mouth. Smith talks more like a dry goods box sitter than he does like a United States official and if we are to judge of the man by his interview in the Detroit papers, the quicker he gets back to the quiet town of Washington the better for his country.

A boy, like "Billy" Trump was 25 years ago, when he pounded brass nights at $30.00 a month at Milford, who can rise step by step by his own merits until he is Wm. D. Trump, general superintendent of the largest railroad system in Michigan, is not the man to be criticized by a man holding a $1,500, more or less political job.

It is safe to say there isn't a better railroad official in the country than W. D. Trump and when Inspector Smith attempts to attack him in the newspapers he shows himself to be lacking in the spot covered by his hat. Smith might next investigate the recent accident on one of Uncle Sam's battleships, when nearly as many men were accidentally killed as at Salem. Possibly the general superintendent of the navy is a blamed fool also.

Lots of Automobiles.

That there were twenty-two thousand automobiles made in Michigan last year with a list value of more than thirty million dollars, is interesting for several reasons. It contributes to Michigan pride to know that our state is at the very forefront of the automobile industry and that its leadership is expected to be increased rather than disputed. But another suggestion is contained in the surprising figures representing Michigan's automobile output, and that is that the demand at present prices will soon be caught up with and overtaken and that a natural reduction in automobile prices can then be expected. There are many practical purposes to which the whizz wagon can usefully be applied, but which present prices prevent. Michigan's energy and enterprise in this instance as in many others will contribute largely to the general good in several directions.

No Place for Fanatics.

"Keep fanatics out of the state constitutional convention." That is the urgent advice that comes from Detroit through the newspapers of that city. The advice is evidently based on observations of the movements of an element there that will seek to make the sessions of the constitutional convention resemble a populist camp meeting. An attempt on the part of representatives of these "advanced thinkers" to agree on candidates and on some line of practical action, a few days ago, resulted in an open rupture and the departure from the gathering of some thinkers more advanced than the others. It will be unfortunate to have the entire work of the convention repudiated by the voters of Michigan. And that will be the result if the proposed constitution is made to resemble a reform crazy-quilt.

WORKINGMEN EVERYWHERE USE PE-RU-NA.

The Average Household Finds Pe-ru-na Not Only a Friend in Time of Need, But a Saving of Doctor Bills.

Pe-ru-na is to Be Found in Thousands of Homes of the Working Men.

Mr. Victor Patneade, 28 Madison street, Topeka, Kas., a well-known carpenter and member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes: "Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength, but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work. "Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again."

A workingman's home is usually one with a large family. Children of all ages and both sexes are being reared. They are subject to slight ailments, winter and summer. A doctor is sent for every time a petty sickness occurs. The expense will keep the family poor.

In such a household Peruna becomes a real blessing. It promptly meets the most common ailments due to the cold of winter or the heat of summer. A stitch in time saves nine. A dose or two of Peruna prevents serious and extended illness many a time.

The workingmen everywhere have come to realize that Peruna is the workingman's friend and saves him not only sickness, but a great many dollars every year.

Rev. J. G. Dukes, Pastor of the Unitarian Church of Pinetown, N. C., writes:

"My wife has been in a very bad state of health for several years, and nothing seemed to do her any good until she began to use Peruna. Since then the color has returned to her face, and she is gaining in flesh every day, and I believe she is a well woman to-day. We always keep a bottle in the house, and Mrs. Dukes thinks it has done her more good than anything she has ever taken.

"My little boy ten years old, was pale and had but little life. He began to use Peruna the day his mother began. To-day his face is rosy, and he is out in the yard running and jumping with the rest of the children."

brother, Robt. Holmington, was also here for a few days the first of the week.

Mrs. Moulton and daughter, Anfia, who have been spending a couple of weeks with Dr. and Mrs. T. S. Ball, left Tuesday for their home in Syracuse, N. Y.

Michigan's Greatest Store

Please accept this as a personal invitation to visit "Michigan's Greatest Store." We are proud of our new home, as it is conceded to be the finest retail establishment between New York and Chicago and one that has few equals in the entire country.

"Michigan's Greatest Store" comprises many departments which supply everything in the way of personal and household needs. The building extends an entire block, from Gratiot to Monroe-ave., on Farmer-st., just a step from the City Hall, and familiarly designated as the "Heart of Detroit."

For the convenience of visitors and patrons we have free check rooms for parcels and baggage. Ladies' parlor on second floor, postoffice-service, bureau of information, etc. In the basement is an elegant, roomy and cool restaurant, where you can get a substantial meal or light lunch as you choose, at small cost. Soda fountain in connection.

Come to visit us at any time. Bring your friends or family with you. The women always enjoy shopping in a big Metropolitan store and there's plenty here to interest the men, too.

Ask anybody who is familiar with retail trade conditions in Detroit or Michigan and they will tell you that Partridge & Blackwell have the reputation of selling better goods for the money than any other store. We consider our great success due principally to the exceptional values offered at all times.

The City in Brief.

Nothing doing these days
C. M. Joslin is giving his house a new coat of paint.

The farmers are busy these days harvesting their grain
Born to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kohler Friday, July 26, a son.

Frank Macomber is giving his laundry building a nice coat of paint.

The First House at Holly was somewhat damaged by fire recently.

The annual picnic of the W. R. C. was held Wednesday in Eatherly's grove.

Corn and potatoes are looking fairly good considering the late planting.

A goodly number of our citizens attended the Blue Ribbon races in Detroit last week.

Miss Inza Lee and her Sunday school class enjoyed a picnic in Yerles' grove Tuesday.

The cool pleasant weather of the past week has given the farmers a fine chance to harvest their grain.

The Stimpson Scale & Mfg. Co., closed their plant from Wednesday until Monday to take their annual inventory.

Marvin Bovee has been in Detroit the past week taking treatment for nervous trouble.

Don't forget we have an item box in the post office and also have both phones in our office and we will be very glad to have all the news you can give us.

F. H. Woodworth of Flint has leased the O. N. Barnhart house on North Center street and moved his family here. Mr. Woodworth travels for a big spice and extract house.

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Power entertained Will Holcomb and family of Detroit Sunday in honor of Ray Holcomb's twenty-third birthday. The occasion was a very enjoyable one.

Farmers, mechanics, railroaders, laborers rely on Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Takes the sting out of cuts, burns or bruises at once. Pain cannot stay where it is used.

Mrs. Charles Seesions is reported better.

Mrs. R. Neelands has been very poorly of late.

Christian Science service Sunday morning at ten o'clock and Wednesday at seven p. m. at 59 Center street.

Primaries to nominate Constitutional delegates Aug. 13. Election Sept. 17.

Mr. Barnhart is grading off his lot on the corner of Cady and Wing streets and laying a new cement walk on both sides.

City Attorney C. C. Yerkes of this place and Deputy Probate Register Harry Hulbert of Detroit were at Union lake a couple days this week looking fish.

J. H. Steers, the corner hardware merchant, has purchased the Cooney building, now occupied by L. E. Stuart, baker, but will not move into it for some time.

A little brown worm has recently been discovered working among and destroying the plants, and the peculiar feature about it is, it does its work after dark. In the daylight no trace of the little pest can be found.

The ice cream social, which was held on the Methodist parsonage lawn Saturday evening, was well attended and the class cleared $5 00. The proceeds will be used to buy base ball supplies for the boys in the class.

Ten of the employees of the Home Telephone Co. of Detroit were royally entertained by M. A. Porter here Saturday night. A feature of the affair was a frog leg supper at the Park hotel. Everybody had a jolly good time.

Governor Warner has announced the appointment of F. S. Neal of this place as State Oil Inspector to take effect September 1. Salaries and expenses of the office are paid by the various oil companies doing business in Michigan.

Robert Thomas was mowing away hay Saturday in the E. M. Stark weather barn when he fell from a beam, striking the end of his spine.

He was brought home and has been confined to his bed most of the time since, suffering much pain.

A recent letter from Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Peterson announces their safe arrival at Manette, Wash., and that Mrs. Peterson stood the journey first rate. The change in climate seems to be a great benefit to her and she says "no more Michigan for her."

The ball game between the Northville team and the "White Sox" at Pontiac Friday afternoon was won in a score of ten to three in favor of Pontiac. The grounds were more like a freshly plowed field than anything else and our boys not being used to it had a poor show.

About a dozen ladies gave Mrs. W. S. Jerome a pleasant surprise Monday evening. They enjoyed several games of finch after which Mr. Jerome and daughter, Anne, surprised the "surprisers" by serving them with lemonade and waters. The evening was a very enjoyable one.

Frank Perry was arrested Sunday near Birmingham with a horse and rig in his possession which belonged to Rochester. Perry is about seventeen years of age and claims Northville as his home. No such person lives here. The young man is in the county jail at Pontiac awaiting trial.

Little Donald McLean met with another serious accident Tuesday. He was riding his velocipede and fell off breaking his wrist just above where it was broken about six or eight weeks ago, but fortunately only one bone was broken this time.

Dr. Henry was called and reduced the fracture and the little fellow is getting along very nicely.

Letters for the following persons are advertised at the postoffice this week:

Mr. O. S. Parker

J. M. Simmons has greatly improved the looks of his lot in Rural Hill cemetery by nicely grading up along the entire front.

M. N. Johnson and C. A. Gardner and their wives broke camp Saturday and returned to Northville. They report a jolly good time.

In the death of his father A. W. Olde of this place will fall heir to one-fifth of the estate which is valued at something like one hundred thousand dollars.

After Mrs. Minnie Lee admitted that she had kissed another man out of spite in the presence of her husband, Judge Robbert refused her a divorce from her husband, John S. Lee, Tuesday.—Detroit News

L. L. Ball, the photographer, was in town Monday and Tuesday with a number of photographic views of the Salem wreck. Mr. Ball said the people seemed very anxious to purchase them.

Arthur Nichols' little boy and a chum chased a rainbow trout out of the creek at the south end of the village and caught him in the shallow water with their hands. The shining beauty weighed two and three fourths pounds.

Now that the D. U. R. has taken over the D. P. & N. it is to be hoped some arrangement will be made to make some kind of connections at Northville. Heretofore the D. P. & N. has kept as far away from the connection idea as time would allow.

Mrs. Angie Hueston entertained the following friends at a luncheon Tuesday. Mrs. John Dohany and daughter, Flora, Mrs. Will Dohany, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Miss Edith Stevens of Detroit and Mrs. Elmer Dohany of Clarenceville.

Uncle Sam is after people who are in the habit of writing huckle of parcels and packages and mailing them as third or fourth class matter.

Hundreds of packages have lately been opened in Detroit and complaints made before the U. S. inspectors. The penalty is $10 fine or imprisonment.

A new scheme for putting up hay has been discovered by Rep. Cass Benton which has proved to be a great labor saving device, especially to Cass. A great many politicians have visited Mr. Benton the past two weeks for advice in political matters and he lets the visitors load and draw in the hay while he does the talking. His entire crop has been secured that way.

The new school house is fast nearing completion and the contractors are confident they will have it all finished in time as they have thirty days yet before school begins. The men were handicapped by the rain in the beginning and were fearful of having the building ready by the time specified in the contract, but the fine weather of the past two weeks has been greatly to their advantage.

George Mead, a Kensington farmer, has discovered he is the possessor of a new milking machine, but by no means as profitable as the one owned by the governor. He found his cows were giving a less quantity of milk than usual each morning and investigated the matter and found the pigs were enjoying an early breakfast of nice rich milk warm from the cows. The cows made no objection.

"Tut! They don't all marry the sons of brewers," I retorted. "You assured me once, while your affair with that Irish girl was on, that the short upper lip made Heaven seem possible, but unnecessary, then the next thing I knew she had shaken you for the bigoted malfeasant. Take that for your impertinence. But perhaps it was Bates?"

I did not wait for an answer. "I was not in a mood for reflection or nice distinctions. The man came in just then with a fresh plate of toast."

Bates, Mr. Pickering has learned that I was away from the house on the night of the attack and I'm ordered off for having broken my agreement to stay here. How do you suppose he heard of it so promptly?"

"From Morgan, quite possibly. I have a letter from Mr. Pickering myself this morning. Just a moment, sir."

He placed before me a note bearing the same date as my own. It was a sharp rebuke of Bates for his failure to report my absence promptly by wire, and he was ordered to prepare to leave on the first of February. "Close your accounts at the shopkeepers' and I will audit your bills on my arrival."

The tone was peremptory and contemptuous. Bates had failed to satisfy Pickering and was flung off like a smoked-out cigar.

How much had he allowed you for expenses, Bates?"

He met my gaze imperturbably. "He pays me $50 a month as wages, sir, and I am allowed $75 for other expenses."

"But you didn't buy English pheasants and champagne on that allowance?"

He was carrying away the coffee tray and his eyes wandered to the window.

"Not quite, sir. You see—"

"But I don't see!"

"It had occurred to me that as Mr. Pickering's allowance wasn't what you might call generous it was better to augment it—Well, sir, I took the liberty of advancing a trifle, as you might say to the estate. Your grandfather would not have had you starve, sir."

He left hurriedly, as though to escape from the consequences of his words, and when I came to myself Larry was gloomily invoking his strange Irish gods.

Larry Donovan I've been tempted to kill that fellow a dozen times! This thing is too damned complicated for me. I wish my lamented grandfather had left me something easy. To think of it—that all the time I've been cursing and abusing Bates since I came here I've been enjoying his bounty—and he's been giving me the fat of the land just because of his devotion to my grandfather's memory. Lord, I can't face the fellow again!"

As I have said before, you're rather lacking at times in perspicacity. Your intelligence is marred by large opaque spots. Now that there seems to be a woman in the case you're less sane than ever. Bah, these women! And now we've got to go to work.

Bah, these women! My own heart caught the words. I was enraged and bitter. No wonder she had been anxious for me to avoid Pickering in Cincinnati, after daring me to follow her there!

We called a council of war for that night that we might view matters in the light of Pickering's letter. His assuredness in ordering me to leave made prompt and decisive action necessary on my part. I summoned Stoddard to our conference, feeling confident of his friendliness.

"Of course," said the broad shouldered chaplain, "if you could show that your absence was on business of very grave importance, the courts might construe in your favor."

Larry looked at the ceiling and blew rings of smoke languidly. I had not disclosed to either of them the cause of my absence. On such a matter I knew I should get precious little sympathy from Larry and I had moreover, a feeling that I could not discuss Marian Devereux with any one. I even shrank from mentioning her name, though it rang like the call of bugles in my blood.

She was always before me—the charmed spirit of youth linked to every foot of the earth, every gleam of the sun upon the ice-bound lake, every glory of the winter sunset. All the good impulses I had ever stifled were quickened to life by the thought of her. Amid the days' perplexities I started sometimes, thinking I heard her voice, her girlish laughter, or saw her again coming toward me down the stairs, or holding against the light her fan with its golden butterflies. I really knew so little of her, I could associate her with no home only with that last fling of the autumn upon the lake, the snow-driven woodland at twilight hour at the organ in the chapel, those stolen moments at the Armstrongs'. I resented the pressure of the hour's affairs, and chafed at the necessity for good friends who were there to help. I wished to be alone, to yield to the sweet mood that the thought of her brought me. The doubt that crept through my mind as to any possibility of connivance between her and Pickering was as vague and fleeting as the shadow of a swallow's wing on a sunny meadow.

"You don't intend fighting the fact of your absence, do you?" demanded Larry, after a long silence.

"Of course not!" I replied fiercely. "Pickering was right on my heels, and my absence was known to his men here. And it would not be square to my grandfather, who never harmed a flea, may his blessed soul rest in peace!—to lie about it. They might nail me for perjury besides."

"Then the quicker we get ready for a siege the better. As I understand your attitude, you don't intend to move out until you've found where the sinner's hidden. Being a gallant gentleman and of a forgiving nature, you want to be sure that the lady who is now entitled to it gets all there is coming to her, and as you don't trust the executor any further than a true Irishman trusts a British prime minister's promise, you're going to stand by to watch the bullock counted. Is that a correct analysis of your intentions?"

"That's as near one of my ideas as you're likely to get."

"Spoken like a man of spirit. And now we'd better stock up on once, in case we should be shut off from our source of supplies. This is a lonely place here; even the school is a remote neighbor. Better let Bates raid the village shops to-morrow. I've tried being hungry, and I don't care to repeat the experience."

"You seem full of information," I re-

But there was substance enough in our dangers without pursuing shadows. Certain things were planned that night. We determined to exercise every precaution to prevent a surprise from without, and we resolved upon a new and systematic sounding of walls and floors, taking our clue from the efforts made by Morgan and his ally to find hiding places by this process. Pickering would undoubtedly arrive shortly, and we wished to anticipate his movements as far as possible.

CHAPTER XX.

The Return of Marian Devereux.

"Sister Theresa has left, sir."

Bates had been into Annandale to mail some letters, and I was staring out upon the park from the library window when he entered. Stoddard, having kept watch the night before, was at home asleep, and Larry was off somewhere in the house treasure-hunting. I was feeling decidedly discouraged over our failure to make any progress with our investigations, and Bates' news did not interest me.

"Well, what of it?" I demanded, without turning round.

"Nothing, sir; but Miss Devereux has come back!"

"The devil!"

I turned and took a step toward the door.

"I said Miss Devereux," he repeated in dignified rebuke. "She came up this morning, and the Sister left at once for Chicago. Sister Theresa depends particularly upon Miss Devereux, so I've heard, sir. Miss Devereux quite takes charge when the Sister goes away."

"You seem full of information," I re-

I Took the Liberty of Advancing a Trifle to the Estate.

"I can't imagine I really can't believe," began the chaplain, "that Miss Devereux will want to be brought into this estate matter in any way. In fact, I have heard Sister Theresa say as much. I suppose there's no way of preventing a man from leaving his property to a young woman who has no claim on him, who doesn't want anything from him."

"Bah, these women! People don't throw legacies to the birds these days. Of course she'll take it," observed Larry.

Then his eyes widened and met mine in a gaze that reflected the mystification and wonder that struck both of us. Stoddard turned suddenly from the fire, into which he had been gazing, exclaiming:

"What's that? There's some one up stairs!"

Larry was already running toward the hall and I heard him springing up the steps like a cat, while Stoddard and I followed.

"Where's Bates?" demanded the chaplain.

"I thank you for the answer," I replied.

Larry stood at the top of the staircase, holding a candle at arm's length in front of him, staring about.

We could hear quite distinctly some one walking down a stairway, the sounds were unmistakable, just as I had heard them on two previous occasions, without ever being able to trace their source.

The noise ceased suddenly, leaving us with no hint of its whereabouts.

I went directly to the rear of the house and found Bates putting the dishes away in the pantry.

"Where have you been?" I demanded.

"Here, sir; I have been clearing up the dinner things, Mr. Glenarm. Is there anything the matter, sir?"

"Nothing."

I joined the others in the library.

"Why didn't you tell me this feudal imitation was haunted?" asked Larry in a groined tone. "I'm increasingly glad I came. How often does it walk?"

"This is the third time," I admitted.

"It's the wind in the tower probably; the wind plays queer pranks sometimes."

"You'll have to do better than that, Glenarm," laughed Stoddard. "It's as still outside as a country graveyard."

"Only the slaughter, the people of the fairy hills, the cheeriest ghosts in the world," said Larry. "You literal Saxons can't grasp the idea, of course."

marked, taking another step toward my hat and coat.

"And I've learned something else, sir."

"Well?"

"They all came together, sir."

"Who came, will you tell me that?"

"Why, the people who've been traveling with Mr. Pickering came back with him, and Miss Devereux came with them from Cincinnati. That's what I learned in the village. And Mr. Pickering is going to stay."

"At a cottage across the lake, for a while. The reason is that he's worn out with his work, and wishes quiet. The other people went back to New York in the car."

"He's opened his summer cottage for January, has he?"

"It does seem the least bit odd, sir," replied Bates, moving away.

I had been blue enough without this news. Marian Devereux had come back to Annandale with Arthur Pickering; my faith in her snapped like a reed at this astounding news. Being now entitled to my grandfather's property she was losing no time in returning. She and Pickering had discussed together at the Armstrongs' my flight from Annandale, and her return could have no other meaning than that there was a strong tie between them, and that he was now to stay on the ground until I should be dispossessed and her rights established. She had dared me to follow her, and my forfeiture had been sealed by that stolen interview at the Armstrongs'. It was a black record, and the thought of it angered me against myself and the world.

"Tell Mr. Donovan that I've gone to St. Agatha's," I said, and I was soon striding toward the school.

A Sister admitted me. Somewhere in the building a music lesson was in progress, and I consigned the inventor of pianos to hideous torment as scales were pursued endlessly up and down the keys. Two girls passing through the hall made a pretext of looking for a book and came in and exclaimed over their inability to find it with much suppressed giggling that added further to my rage.

A BRIEF ROMANCE

By ELLA RODMAN CHURCH

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles)

Miss Dilkes and Saidie Porter's mother were cousins, which seemed to Miss Dilkes quite a near relation, as the most distant ramifications of her family were precious to her, inasmuch as no other family, in her opinion, quite equaled it in importance.

Left now with a very small income, and a very inferior house to that in which her childhood and youth were passed, Miss Rebecca received as inmate a cousin of the same type as herself, and Saidie Porter whose 22 years of life found very little congeniality in these somber surroundings.

Cousin Rebecca, frequently complained to her that "it was almost impossible to get along with Phil's peculiarities," while Cousin Phil was mysterious and confidential over "poor Rebecca's strange ways." Thus these two elderly maidens were constant thorns in each other's sides, and likewise in Saidie Porter's.

There was a delightful house a few miles out of town, "an Italian villa," it was called; and to this villa went Miss Saidie daily, in the morning train, and spent four hours teaching the English branches to two lovely little girls—favored frequently with the company of their very charming mamma. It was just enough employment, and it was generously paid, while the young teacher was treated in all respects as became her birth and breeding.

This was just the kind of life that Saidie enjoyed. A visit from Mrs. Osbrook's brother did not lessen the pleasure of it. He was very elegant, and had such grand ways and had traveled everywhere, and his name was Otho, and she overheard him telling his sister that the young governess reminded him of a wild rose (Saidie thought this quite original), and many other such things were tumbled together in her memory, and caused a blush of pleasure at the very thought of them.

It was just after this that Dr. Empir had so coolly said, "It will be safer perhaps not to go into any house nor to admit any one here for a few weeks."

A few weeks' when life had just begun to be so beautiful to her—what might not happen in a few weeks? She had never been particularly fond of "Cousin Phil," but she felt that she loved her less than ever that morning. For "Cousin Phil" had not been at all well and unmistakable symptoms of varioloid were now developed. It was the slightest possible type of the disease, the doctor said, and scarcely worth calling by any name at all, but nevertheless, he recommended prudence, and meanwhile, as a necessary precaution, every member of the family were vaccinated.

Not long before this untoward illness of Cousin Phil's, there had arrived at the house a distant cousin of the family—a single gentleman cousin whom Saidie pronounced disagreeable before she had seen much of him. Herman Dilkes was a bachelor of 35, a very quiet, self-contained man, who seemed to understand every subject in the world, and who gave the young lady the unpleasant impression that he was continually reading her thoughts. He certainly did not find them very complimentary to himself.

The next day she sat down and wrote Mrs. Osbrook a letter instead of an orthodox note, as she intended, setting forth in detail her trouble and loneliness, and "pining after little Laura and Annie."

Perhaps that lady's sharp eyes detected another sort of "pining," but that as it may no answer was ever received to this epistle. Not even an inquiry was made at the door; and it would have been so easy to send that lazy Thomas when going his city rounds. Once only did Saidie get a glimpse of the familiar faces during that tedious period of quarantine Mrs. Osbrook and the children were in the carriage, Mr. Lathrop was on horseback beside them; and the party were drawn up in front of one of the shops, while an obsequious clerk brought out boxes of goods for the lady's inspection.

A very graceful bow and smile from Mrs. Osbrook, a sudden demonstration from the children, that was evidently repressed at the outset; while Otho Lathrop lifted his hat with a gleam of white teeth under his dark mustache; and somehow poor little Saidie felt empty-handed and empty-hearted as she pursued her way on the aimless walk she was taking.

So strange, she thought, that Mrs. Osbrook did not beckon her to the carriage door, and ask when there was a chance of having her with them again—there could surely be no danger of contamination in the open air. The children, too, were strange; and there was an inexplicable something about the whole party that was far from satisfactory. It was very disagreeable to be shunned as a dangerous object, condemned for days and weeks to the society of Cousin Rebecca. There was Mr. Dilkes, to be sure (he had never asked her to call him cousin), but he was rather settled and steady.

The invalid had been malingering with other people for some time before information was received from Mrs. Osbrook that the young governess' existence was remembered. It came at last in the shape of a very polished note, inclosing a handsome check, banking "Miss Porter" for "her most acceptable services," and "expressing kindness to the children," and begging leave in the nicest manner imaginable to have nothing more to do with her, as her place was supplied by a lady of mature years, the list of whose accomplishments was quite appalling.

Mr. Dilkes saw the letter opened and read—the saw the tell-tale color, and the eyes full of tears; and with his knowledge of girl nature in general and Saidie's in particular, he had a vision of the outraged damsel, after she had gazed her own apartment, in a passionate fit of crying and the hateful letter torn to pieces, and trampled beneath her feet.

After a suitable pause for these enjoyments, Herman Dilkes invited the young lady to a concert to be given that very evening, at which all who went might reasonably expect a musical treat. At first Saidie sadly declined—she had a headache; and the noise would make it worse; then, she looked in the glass and considered a little, and finally she resolved to revenge herself by wearing her most becoming things, and looking her very prettiest. If Mrs. Osbrook, and—somebody else were there, she thought she should make much of "Cousin Herman."

It was a very lovely, bright face that Mr. Dilkes glanced down upon that evening (it was only about on a level with his shoulder), the excitement of crying had left no traces but a heightened color and sparkling eyes; and the coquettish little hat, with its white plume and scarlet berries, was perfectly bewitching.

So thought more than one; for Otho Lathrop, who had been gazing admiringly at the vision, (although the vision persisted in not seeing him), said quite audibly to his sister as they were waiting for a chance to get out, and did not know of two interested listeners near them.

"What a starry softness of beauty there is about that little governess of yours, Lulu! I'm really thankful she was put in quarantine for a while, or I don't know where I should have been by this time."

"In a cottage draped with vines, probably," laughed his sister, "and nothing to eat. She is bewitchingly pretty, I admit—but you must leave such luxuries to those who can afford them. Did you notice the gentleman with her?"

"Yes, a fine-looking fellow—who is he?"

"One of the wealthiest men in N—, if she marries him, she'll do well."

Her companion speedily cleared a way and got Saidie out into the fresh night air without loss of time. When there, however, he conducted himself in a most unexpected manner, persisted in walking round and round the square, while he poured out his love and indignation in the same breath; and pleaded humbly for some encouragement, or hope of a return in the future.

The poor child was quite bewildered with all the events of the evening, and in a state of undisguised amazement at the proceedings of Mr. Dilkes. She could not understand his "having loved her from the first," because she—well, she was afraid she had been rather rude to him; for she was quite sure that she didn't like him a bit, then.

He assured her that this had been quite an attraction to him; he was accustomed to so much interested attention from ladies of all kinds that he found her "rudeness" really refreshing. He scarcely knew whether to take Saidie's undisguised look of astonishment as personal or not.

Then Saidie stammeringly declared that—that she had once thought she loved some one else, this momentous secret was very unwillingly laid bare, as though it had not been palpable to the eyes of her companion all along; but he was very tender with her, and frankly admitted that he had fancied himself in love with two or three before he met her.

Cousin Rebecca and others thought that Saidie Porter fared a great deal better than she deserved; and perhaps she did. She had just the kind of house and life that she had yearned for in the days when imagination threw such a glamor over Otho Lathrop; but the real master of her home and heart was one whose attractions did not vanish with the mist of romance.

NEW IDEA IN SALAD.

Always Popular Dish Put Up in Novel Manner.

This salad is arranged on individual plates. Take six small lettuce leaves, and arrange them around the plate; in the center of these leaves put about one tablespoonful of salad dressing; this makes the center of the daisy points, which have been made by cutting into narrow strips the whites of hard-boiled eggs. Take the yolks of the hard-boiled eggs, and by mashing them through a strainer and scattering them over the tablespoonful of salad dressing, it will give it a rough appearance, and will give the finishing touch to quite a good counterfeit of a real daisy. The dressing for this salad is made by beating together three eggs, adding to this one cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, half a teaspoonful of salt, the same of white pepper, two teaspoonfuls of mustard, butter the size of an egg, made into a smooth paste by mixing with two teaspoonfuls of water. Boil for about 20 minutes, or until it thickens; when cool arrange on the lettuce leaves.

CARE OF TABLE LINEN.

Here Is Truly Where a "Stitch in Time" Does Wonders.

Too little attention is paid to the wear and tear on tablecloths and napkins as a rule. They are washed and ironed and put away, regardless of the places that are becoming thin and worn until these spots become holes and it suddenly dawns on the dismayed housekeeper that her table linen is "going all to pieces."

If tiny holes are found in table linen the first thing to do is to darn them neatly, selecting the numbers of thread or cotton best suited to the material to be darned, using as fine a needle as possible. If the material is much worn it is best to lay a piece of the same under the thin place and darn down upon it. This gives strength, though it does not look quite as neat as it would without the extra piece of material beneath. A ragged tear always must have an extra piece beneath.

Chicken Cheese.

Vogue says that to make chicken cheese boil two chickens in water to cover until the meat will fall from the bones. Then remove all the bones, mince the meat very fine, season with salt and pepper, and return to the water in which they were boiled, adding a tablespoonful of butter, one of minced celery, and half an onion sliced. Cook until the liquor is nearly gone, skim out the onion, and pour into a deep dish. Put a plate over it with a weight on top, and set away in a cold place until firm. When ready to be eaten cut in neat slices, and serve with a little red currant jelly or some aspic mayonnaise.

Old-Fashioned "Sprinkles."

Beat to a cream one cup of butter and two cups sugar. Add three tablespoonfuls sweet milk and two tablespoonfuls caraway or anise seed. Sift two cupfuls flour and two even teaspoonfuls baking powder together three times, then beat into the butter, sugar and milk mixture. If the batter is not as stiff as you can beat it, add a little more flour and turn out on a floured board. Dredge lightly with flour, and roll out until almost as thin as a wafer. Cut into round or oblong cakes, sprinkle with seeds and bake.

Carolyn Custard Pie.

Line a deep crockery plate with lady fingers or any stale cake. Pour over this a few tablespoons of cognac or any good wine and cover with a custard made of one pint of milk, the yolks of two eggs, one-half cup white sugar, and thicken with corn starch till quite thick. Upon this place pecan nut meats—these are preferred, as they are less likely to have an oily taste. Make a meringue of the whites, stiffly beaten, and sweetened. Brown in oven and serve cold with whipped cream.

Fourth of July Gingerbread.

A good, old-fashioned Fourth of July gingerbread is made in this way: Rub to a cream one-half cup molasses, one-half cup milk, with one-quarter teaspoonful soda dissolved in it, a salt spoonful salt, one beaten egg and flour to mix stiff, with two teaspoonfuls baking powder sifted with it. Divide the dough in portions, pat into a sheet, place on a floured and buttered baking tin, run a fluted roller over it, if you have one, otherwise mark in parallel rows and bake.

Mending Gloves.

Mending the finger tips of long gloves with court plaster is the trick one young woman makes use of to lengthen the life of this dress accessory which is such a luxury. She pastes the court plaster, white on white and black on black, on the inside of the finger tip, with the result that the gloves will last immeasurably longer.

Doing Up Ruffled Curtains.

To do up ruffled net curtains, stretch out on a sheet after starching. Pin just to the ruffles and leave until dry. Take up and iron only the ruffles dampening as you go along. This will leave the curtain perfectly straight.

Pressed Meat.

Cold boiled beef chopped; cold boiled eggs sliced, moisten beef well with stock in which it was cooked; season with salt and pepper. Put layer of beef in jar, then eggs, alternately, until all is used. Press.

TOLL TAKEN OF HUMAN LIFE BY THE INDUSTRIES

GREATER THAN DEATHS ON BATTLEFIELD

Over Half a Million Men and Women Annually Are Killed or Injured in the United States While Engaged in Productive Labor--Enormous Sum Needed to Support Those Incapacitated.

A Familiar Peril in Building Operations.

New York.—More than 500,000 men and women are injured or killed in the industries annually in the United States, or one person every minute.

This industrial carnage costs the people of the country, directly and indirectly, over two and a half billions of dollars—a sum larger than the national debt.

Such are the death tolls of industrial progress, which shows such a smiling face to those whose occupations involve no danger, but turns a ghastly countenance on those who work in peril of their lives.

Whoever doubts these figures need only read the grim statistics to be convinced that modern industry is more fateful than war.

In the Japanese-Russian war a total of 332,786 men were killed and wounded on both sides, not counting the losses in naval battles.

In the same period in the United States alone the great army of American laborers engaged in manufacturing and building operations suffered a loss of 425,000 killed and injured; 92,000 more lives were sacrificed to industrial progress in one year than during the greatest conflict of recent times.

Statistics of the interstate commerce commission show that 34,115 people were injured and 10,046 killed on the railroads during the year ending June 30, 1934. Sufficient data has been accumulated by the United States government and other responsible authorities to show that at least 5,100 men are annually killed or injured in anthracite mining alone, and 425,000 in factory and building operations, making the grand total approximately 525,000.

Total Death Toll Greater. These estimates are conservative. If the exact number of accidents was known this total would be greatly increased.

In converting facts into figures Mr. Clarence Marx, who, with other responsible investigators, has given several years of study to the relation of crippled and unemployed persons to industry, presents a startling array.

Of the 525,000 workers mentioned 15 per cent., or 445,000, to struggle per cent. only are killed, leaving 85 against their handicaps. Estimating that at least 50 per cent. or 222,000 of these are able to earn $225 each annually, which is 50 per cent. of the annual average earnings of able-bodied artisans, we have a total of $49,950,000. This is the loss in earning power.

Safely assuming that these persons would create twice as much wealth as they earn we would have a loss in production of approximately $100,000,000 annually.

But this is only half the truth. If these 222,000 wage earners are not reestablished they must sooner or later be supported by the state. It is also evident that the other 222,000 who are totally disabled will also become a burden on the taxpayers.

Poor relief statistics show that it costs $10,000 to support a pauper during his natural life time. To be conservative again, let us estimate this cost at $6,000, to make allowance for those who may be supported by relatives and friends, or who may become partially self-supporting. Since under our present system the partially disabled are not reestablished, the total number minus a small percentage, must be supported at public expense. To do this costs approximately two and one-half billion dollars. In other words, we contract each year to meet a debt of two and a half billion dollars within the lifetime of the persons thus injured.

Figures That Stagger. These are staggering figures, but they are only a forecast of what we may expect if this wasteful destruction of life and limb continues.

In New York state, according to the estimate of the state labor commissioner in 1935, 14 workers in every 1,000 are incapacitated in the course of the year's work. That means, for instance, that at least 40,000 purely industrial accidents occur in New York city alone every year. The ratio of injured and uninjured is not as high in some other parts of the country, or the total number of accidents in the United States would be over 800,000 annually.

In one section of New York city, the Borough of Manhattan, there were last year 2,160 deaths by violence; astonishing as it may seem nearly one-third of these deaths, or 684, were caused by falls, explosions, caving in of earth, premature blasts and falling rock. The river tunnels were constructed at the cost of 68 lives, 43 in the Pennsylvania terminal works, 20 in the Belmont tunnel, two in the sub-war borings and three in the Hudson companies' terminal.

In the huge, smoky workshop called Pittsburgh, one human life is sacrificed for every 50,000 tons of coal that are shipped out of the city. For each 7,600 tons of steel products one of the manipulators, somewhere in the process of manufacture, lays down his life; and for each 70,000 tons of steel rails another laborer makes the last sacrifice.

Of the 2,660 deaths reported in Pittsburgh in 1936, 919 were due to accidents in mills, mines and on railroads. The number of accidents was not computed, but it was undoubtedly in the thousands.

Causes of Fatalities.

How does it all happen, you ask? If a huge ladle of white hot steel is upset, the molten stream burns alive its wretched victim. It may be that a man or woman is whirled to a horrible death in mill machinery; or a miner is blown to eternity in an explosion of damp in a mine.

Publicity is given to accidents on railroads, but little is heard of the thousands annually killed and maimed in manufacturing and building and some of the more obscure trades. It has been shown that 425,000 are annually disabled in factories and construction work. But we have no means of knowing how many are industrially displaced by inhaling the poisonous fumes in working over batteries, or the large numbers that are afflicted with mercurial poisoning and other ailments in the hat industry and allied trades. Neither do we know how many succumb to painters' colic, or blood poison by working with brass and copper.

The victims of tuberculosis among sweatshop workers, grain trimmers, longshoremen, coal hands and others are shown to be numerous by the board of health reports, but the exact numbers have never been gathered into statistical form.

Tributary Evils. This loss of life and limb in times of peace would be sufficiently appalling in itself were there no tributary evils. But the situation is rendered even more serious by the fact that only about 15 per cent. of the industrial accidents result in the death of the victims, while 85 per cent., or 445,000, are doomed to a one-sided battle for existence.

When a man loses a limb or the use of it, is rendered partially blind by an accident, or in countless ways is incapacitated for his regular work, the first great question confronting him is to fit himself for some other form of in our reckless haste to make money we forget that in so doing, the unnatural wear and tear of industry, and the fierce struggle for existence are producing an increasing host of dependent citizens, who have been worn out as a part of a machine and are then thrown on the industrial scrap heap.

The hours of labor are being slightly reduced and wages slightly increased, but the wear and tear on man and machine has been nearly doubled.

Many men, each one a unit of labor, valuable to the employer and to society, drop out crippled by accident or with their health undermined. Unless the employees are speedily able to readjust themselves in gainful occupations, they become public charges. Each man added to the list of the state's dependents makes an added burden of taxes on the wealth producing citizens.

The employer, who is the exponent of the industrial system is accountable for this waste of productive power, though not the originator of it, is himself one of the first victims to feel the extra burden of taxation. Doubtless he is also appealed to, and subscribes liberally for private charitable schemes, which are themselves largely necessary evils. Hence the wasteful system of industry, in which the waste of labor is lost sight of in the mad attempt to save cost of produclabor. What are his chances to regain a foothold?

Some few corporations retain on the payroll those employees who may have been injured in their service, but the number of such is small. A few provide pensions, and even fewer have instituted some form of benefit that will be a real help in case of disablement.

But the great mass of injured persons must readjust themselves as best they can.

Prejudiced Employers.

The chief reason why they fail to do this and start on the long tortuous road to semi-pauperism and finally the almshouse is the open prejudice of employers against hiring a cripple, or a failure on their part to recognize the fact that he still possesses an economic value, as he usually does. This remorseless prejudice against which many an honest and capable man has been forced to contend has driven valuable material to the waste heap of humanity, if not to a self-made grave.

There are many positions filled by boys and girls who should be in school which could be better filled by older men and women unable to command higher wages because of physical disability. To supplant the incumbents of such positions would be to raise the standards of education and of living, for if the children were not available their disabled seniors would take their places at a higher rate of wages than at less than current standards.

This would do much to remove the stigma of a present national disgrace by which 1,267,324 boys and girls between the ages of 14 and 16 years are allowed to dwarf their young lives in our shops, factories and mills. The handicapped man would supplant children only where a distinct economic tion, reacts on itself, and the hard-pressed employer becomes a victim to the very system that is slowly but certainly adding to the cost of maintenance and production by increasing the value of labor, which he has tried to maintain, if not to cheapen.

Remedy Pointed Out.

Where is the remedy? If the present industrial system cannot be abolished, it may be controlled. If the wear and tear must continue, it may proceed with less friction and waste. Legislation on this point is becoming more stringent, and employers themselves are aiding in the effort to avoid needless loss of life and limb.

This problem can be solved only by sorting out the injured and readjusting them to other forms of labor. As employers more fully appreciate the great financial loss of life and limb, as they now so carefully guard the waste of raw material and so assiduously convert by products into profit, the half million now annually forced into idleness and nonproductivity will be reestablished on a self-supporting basis.

Centuries Paralleled.

In former times vassals, serfs and slaves gave up their lives blindly to their feudal chiefs; fighting their battles, tilling their soil, selling their own birth rights for a pot of miserable porridge.

As the fourteenth century vassal sold his service and life for food and shelter so the twentieth century artisan sells his labor and life for money with which to buy the necessities of life. If his wages are greater than his living expenses and he is fortunate enough to escape bodily harm, he may, under extremely favorable conditions, be able to provide for an independent old age. But if shifting economic con-and educational advantage is to be gained. He is fully competent to compete with the able bodied for many positions. It is not favoritism that he needs or asks; only an opportunity to demonstrate his fitness. The trouble is, he is rarely given that opportunity.

Great Need of the Day.

A crying need of the day is an awakening of the national conscience regarding the needless loss of human life and the resulting economic waste.

ditions condemn him to only a precarious living and if he is disabled by the machinery of industry, only one fate can be his—the acceptance of alms sooner or later from friends or the state. He has not shed his blood as the vassals of old in the service of a master. He has sacrificed himself on the altar of industrial progress, whose masters are practically unconcerned for his future.—From the N. Y. Journal and American.

TRAIN THE EYEBROW

MOST IMPORTANT FEATURE OF THE COUNTENANCE.

How Excessive Thickness May Be Corrected—"Wild Hairs" Can Be Removed With the Aid of the Tweezers.

It has long been a vexed question whether it is the eyes or the mouth that gives character to the face. Various arguments have been advanced on both sides, and beauty "experts" have given their professional—and conflicting—opinions. Meanwhile, every one has neglected an extremely important factor in the problem. The eyebrows are really the most important feature of the countenance. They give to the eyes their expression, to the remainder of the face its distinction and character. They serve as indicators and pointers, calling the attention to any special beauty or unusual feature of the eye itself. They may, however, play an even more important part in the general ensemble. It is, for instance, a little-known fact that the slanting Mongolian eyes are really perfectly straight. It is only the formation of the skin surrounding the eye, accentuated by the extremely slanting eyebrow, that gives this deceptive appearance.

It is easy to see, therefore, why the beauty of the eyebrows is of importance to her who would aspire to good looks in any form. It is necessary that she keep them in good condition, fostering any good feature they may possess and correcting whatever faults they have. She should first of all consider just what shape, thickness, etc., of the eyebrows would constitute beauty, and then devote herself to the reaching of that point.

The perfect eyebrow is in form an arch, not too high, yet distinctly curved. It should be rather thick than thin, yet excessive thickness is the worst defect it could show. The two eyebrows should be perfectly distinct, with not even one hair between them, and yet not so far apart as to show poor mental caliber. They should be of a shade slightly darker than the hair, but not noticeably so. Finally, they should match the color of the lashes exactly.

Perhaps the most common fault is excessive thickness of the brows, accompanied by a number of wild hairs. There is but one cure for this condition—removal with a pair of tweezers. The operation causes no more pain than when a hair is pulled from the head, and may be performed by one's self. Use ordinary small tweezers, such as physicians employ to pick up surgical cotton, and pull out one hair at a time, taking care that each really comes out, and is not simply broken off.

Of course, this treatment will not destroy the hair follicles but with perseverance these, too, will go, and the hairs will appear no more. If any itching or smarting is felt after the pulling, apply a little cold cream, but remove as soon as the pain ceases, as otherwise you defeat your own object, cold cream having a tendency to raise hair.

Announcing a Marriage.

Will Madame Merri please give a correct form of announcing a marriage when the bride is an orphan?

Invitations to Those in Mourning. Should invitations be sent for luncheons and teas to people who are in mourning? B. P. E.

Yes, although it is known that they will not accept during the period of deep mourning, yet every one likes to feel that he or she is not forgotten and upon again entering society it is well to know just to whom one is indebted.

Kindly tell me in your department if it is proper for a widow to continue to have her visiting cards engraved with her husband's name or should she use her own first name or initials? MEC.

Custom sanctions both ways, so it is largely a matter of personal feeling. Formerly, taking the maiden name was more in vogue.

The following questions come from a correspondent who signs herself Jeanne G.:

What is the proper way to acknowledge an invitation to a piano recital given by a girl friend? If gifts are sent to her what would be suitable and how should they be given?

At an informal reception who suggests going to the dining-room, the lady or her escort? Should a man always keep to the right in being seated at table when the places are not marked?

In introducing a young professional man should a lady be presented to him or visa versa? And does the age of a lady make any difference in the above question?

Is it proper to ask a man in when he takes a girl home and should she ask him to call?

In reply to the first question, 33-knowledge the invitation to a recital in the same manner and form as it was received. I do not believe it is customary to give gifts except flowers, they are always permissible and acceptable and should be sent the day of the recital or presented to the artist during the performance.

At all receptions there should be some friend in charge to see that all persons are asked to the dining room. This necessary individual not being present, it is immaterial who makes the suggestion, but perhaps the lady should take the lead. It is always more convenient for a man to be seated on the right hand side.

It is proper to introduce a man to a woman always, no matter what the age of the latter, and if it is two men or two women to be introduced, it is always the younger to the older.

It all depends on the hour and intimacy of the friendship whether a young man goes into the house. If it is late the escort usually knows what is best to do and takes his departure at once.

While many authorities say that a man must ask for the privilege of calling, which, of course, is correct, I think it is not at all out of the way if a girl like a man to say, "We are at home on such an evening and would be glad to have you call."

DROPS

A PROMPT, EFFECTIVE REMEDY FOR ALL FORMS OF RHEUMATISM

Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Kidney and Kindred Diseases.

GIVES QUICK RELIEF

Applied externally it affords almost instant relief of from pain. While permanent results are being effected by taking it internally, purifying the blood dissolving the poisonous substance and removing it from the system.

DR. S. D. BLAND
Of Brenton, Ga., writes:
"I had been a sufferer for a number of years with Lumbago and Rheumatism in my arms and legs, and tried all the remedies that I could gather from medical works and also consulted with a number of the best physicians. I found nothing that gave the relief obtained from 'S-DROPS.' I shall prescribe it in my practice for rheumatism and kindred diseases."

DR. C. L. GATES
Hancock, Minn., writes:
"A little girl here had a weak back caused by Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble that she could not stand on her feet. The moment they put her down on the floor she would scream with pain. I treated her with 'S-DROPS' and today she runs around as well and happy as can be. I prescribe 'S-DROPS' for my patients and use it in my practice."
