PRETTY WEDDING OVER IN CANADA.

Account of Stephens-Harris Nuptials from Goderich Paper.

The residence of Mrs. George Harris, Elgin avenue, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Wednesday at high noon, when Harriet Lillian, daughter of the late George Harris and Mrs. Harris, was married to Frank Wesley Stephens, son of Rev. W. G. and Mrs. Stephens, of Northville, Mich. The drawing-room was decorated with palms, ferns and asters, and a large arch of greens and white asters was arranged for the occasion, under which the bridal party stood. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. N. Hazen, pastor of the North St. Methodist church, assisted by Rev. W. G. Stephens, father of the groom. The wedding march was played by A. Roy Adams.

The bride, who was given away by her mother, wore ivory duchesse-satin, en train, with trimmings of heavy silk embroidered chiffon all over with insertion to match and seed pearl applique duchesse baby ribbon. Her silk net veil, with hand embroidered designs worked in each corner of the hem, which gave a very pretty effect over the long flowing train, was arranged about a chaplet of orange blossoms. She held a large bouquet of cream bridal roses tied with cream duchesse ribbon. Her mother wore a black silk gown with trimmings of lace and chiffon, and carried a handsome bouquet of mauve asters, tied with mauve satin streamers.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Emma Bertha Harris, who wore a dainty frock of white silk elaborately trimmed with silk lace and insertions and carried a large bouquet of pink roses tied with pink streamers. Edgar Jolliffe, law student of Ann Arbor University, was best man. After congratulations were extended to the bride and groom the guests adjourned to the dining-room, where luncheon was served. The bride has been an active member of North street Methodist church, being a member of the choir and a faithful worker in the primary department of the Sabbath school, and she will be missed by her many friends.

The groom is an accomplished musician and is well known in musical society in and around Detroit, being a graduate of the Conservatory of Music of that city last year and at present on the teaching staff of the same institution.

Among the handsome gifts received was one from the members of North street choir, and another from the teachers of the primary department of the Sabbath school. Mr. and Mrs. Stephens left on the 2:30 train for Detroit, and thence will proceed by steamer up the lakes, to spend their honeymoon. The bride went away in a suit of cream, serge with trimmings of pale blue fancy braid and narrow blue silk soutache braid and blue buttons. Her hat was of rich blue chenille with large pale blue and cream plumes and cream silk American Beauty roses, which with blue gloves and shoes completed the travelling outfit. Beside the immediate families present at the wedding there were a few relatives from Hamilton, Sparta, Detroit, Northville, and Pinckney, Mich.—Goderich Signal.

EIGHTY-EIGHT YEARS

Mrs. B. P. Smith, formerly of Novi, Traveled Life's Road.

The eighty-eighth birthday of Mrs. B. P. Smith, formerly of Novi, was celebrated last Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lucy Hughes, of Durand. Twelve relatives and friends were present, among the number being Mrs. Mabel Smith of Novi.

The aged lady is quite feeble physically but her mental faculties are as good as a woman of fifty. She was the recipient of a number of presents. A bountiful dinner was served to which all did ample justice. The guests left at an early hour wishing the venerable lady many returns of the day.

FAMILY REUNION AT THE EATHERLY HOME

Pleasant Occasion at Their Summer Residence at Braeside.

There was a family reunion Sept 1st at Braeside, the summer home of F. D. Eatherly, near Northville. Albert Moss is Mrs. Eatherly's father and formerly lived in New Milford, Pa. He had all his children and grandchildren with him at this reunion and all had a most delightful time. The table was spread for sixteen and a sumptuous course dinner was served to which old and young did justice. Pretty hand painted place cards with an inscription appropriate for the occasion were used.

Following are the names of those present: Albert Moss, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Sutton and daughter, Kate, and son, Hugh, of Fairbury, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Moss and son, Lloyd, of Minneapolis, Minn., Mr. and Mrs. Lee B. Moss and son, Albert, of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. D. Knap of Maplehurst, John F. Eatherly and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Eatherly.

TRUE TO HIS PROMISE.

Husband Bravely Went Through Ordeal to Keep Plighted Word.

He stood gazing down at the water. "It must be cold," he thought, "very cold." He shrank back and shuddered involuntarily. "My courage is failing," he soliloquized. "I can never do it." For a moment he reflected. Then, clenching his teeth he cried wildly: "But I must! She laughed at me and said I would not dare. I must prove to her I am no poltroon." Again he gazed steadfastly into the water. So peaceful, so placid, it lay before him that had he been on some other mission he would have felt a sense of calm serenity at sight of it instead of being inspired with dread and terror. After awhile he continued: "She will only be sorry if I do. . . . And yet," he added fiercely, "if I don't she will taunt me with my cowardice." This thought thrilled him with a savage determination and with a mighty effort he gathered himself for the leap. A moment only he stood poised on the brink, then plunged into the cold, cold waters. He uttered a sharp cry, but it was drowned in the splash. Then he struggled with the waves, striking out wildly with his arms, and a moment later leaped out and seized a towel. "There!" he exclaimed, triumphantly. "Next time I tell my wife I am going to take a cold bath before breakfast she'll know it's no bluff!"

HATS IMPROVE WITH AGE.

Economy in the Purchase of First-Class Silk Headgear.

"A silk hat, like wine, improves with age," said a clubman. "The oftener you have it ironed the sleeker and more brilliant it becomes. It costs a good deal at the outset, but in the end it is the cheapest hat to wear. It lasts, you see, so long, and to iron it costs so little—a dime or so. Some folks think the topper very perishable if it gets soaked with rain, if some one sits on it and crushes it into an accordion; they think it must be thrown away, the same as if it were a Derby. But not at all. A silk hat can be taken apart and put together again like a watch, and if it gets crushed, nothing is easier than to melt off the silk, straighten out the frame and then put on the silk again. In England, the home of this hat, I have known men to wear the same topper for 10 or 12 years. And the oftener the old hat is ironed the brighter and finer it shines. Its luster increases with time and friction like the luster of good antique furniture."

Witness Neatly Tricked.

The chief witness against John Connor for the murder of a man in Cork was the accused's hat, which was found beside the corpse. The policeman who found the hat was cross-examined thus by Daniel O'Connell: "You swear the hat now in my hand is the identical hat you found beside the body of the murdered man?" he asked the policeman. "I do." "You know it to be the prisoner's hat?" "I do." "You knew it from the name inside," said O'Connell, looking into the hat and proceeding to spell slowly "J-o-h-n C-o-n-n-o-r." "I did," replied the policeman. "Now, my lord and gentlemen of the jury, just see for yourselves how much this man's oath is worth," said O'Connell handing up the hat to the judge. "There's no name at all inside the hat." The prisoner won.

Whites in Natal.

Statistics prove that to every white in Natal there are two Indians and from ten to 11 Kaffirs. The whites are the ruling class, but they hold that position by prestige, and should the natives once realize their huge superiority they might easily ruin the colony.

THE STATE IN GENERAL

SPANKING, AN EXPLOSION AND SEVERE INJURIES ARE RESULTS.

WAS FOUND ALMOST DEAD

Gale Causes Death and Damage at Wenona Beach—Brief Notes of Happenings.

May Not Recover.

"Oh, ma, please don't whip me, I won't do it again." Hardly had the little 7-year-old son of Fred Williams, who lives at Bear Point, uttered those words when a terrific explosion occurred and the shingle with which Mrs. Williams was paddling the child, was blown to bits, and the mother's right hand was a torn and bleeding mass with two fingers gone while blood streamed from many cuts in her face. The boy fell from his mother's knee to the ground writhing in agony, with a large hole in his hip.

The lad had been out in the fields with his father who was blowing up stumps with dynamite and had gotten hold of one of the percussion caps and put it in his hip pocket. The mother went to punish him for some minor offense when the unexpected explosion occurred. The lad's recovery is doubtful, but if he does survive he will be a cripple for life.

Suspect Foul Play.

Under circumstances so mysterious that the local detectives and members of the Fenton police department have started a searching investigation, Leola S. Algeo, a wealthy wholesale produce dealer of Fenton, was found, almost dead in a gas filled room in the Hotel Winkler, Detroit, early Saturday morning. He was apparently dead when found by the proprietor, Charles Winkler, and it was thought that the unconscious man had blown out the gas with suicidal intent. Algeo had drawn $1,300 from a Detroit bank and his money was missing when he was discovered to be in a state of coma. Nearby the bed was a note book, in which, under date of August 30, was the following significant entry:

"Made good strike yesterday."

The police who are assigned to the case are of the opinion that Algeo had taken some deadly poison or that it had been given to him during his sight-seeing trips through the city.

Algeo came to Detroit several days ago, and has been registered at the Winkler every night, with the exception of two. He seemed prosperous, as he exhibited considerable money about the hotel.

One Man Killed.

One man was killed, and four concession buildings blown down, at Wenona Beach, six miles north of Muskegon during a terrific thunderstorm, while considerable damage was done by lightning and wind throughout the lower portion of the Saginaw valley.

Bert Woodruff, proprietor of a cane throwing and novelty concession at the beach, was the man killed. He had gone to the rear of his light frame building, shortly after the storm began, and was standing in the doorway when a terrific gust of wind leveled the four buildings, all in a row. It was not until Woodruff's absence was noted that a search was begun. His body was found crushed beneath heavy cross timbers. He evidently had been instantly killed.

Expresses No Sorrow.

Possessed of a religious mania, which made him believe that it was necessary to make a flesh offering in atonement for his sins, Albert Stemmel, aged 30, a Detroit bookkeeper, threw his 7-year-old daughter Helen into the Detroit river from the Belle Isle bridge Tuesday evening just at dusk. Then he gave himself up to the police, telling his story without a trace of agitation or regret, declaring:

"I threw my child from the Belle Isle bridge I gave her to God to atone for my sins. I want to give myself up to the police."

Stemmel was married seven years ago. There were two children besides little Helen; Owen, aged 5, and Joseph, aged 3. So far as known there has never been a particle of domestic trouble and he idolized his children.

The first real intimation of the breaking of Stemmel's mind was given to his office associates Tuesday, according to Col. William S. Greene, managing trustee of the W. A. Vesson estate, in the office of whom Stemmel was employed.

Stemmel was very ambitious, and anxious to get ahead in the world. He worked incessantly. He never rested from morning till night he slaved his life away. He never even took the time to read the papers. This overwork finally unbalanced his mind. For the past three months he became a pronounced neurotic. It developed religious mania. The last three weeks he was badly frightened and excited by dreams of murder, violence, of big disasters. He would get up at night trembling with excitement and pray to find rest. Then he has been suffering with severe headaches, "drawing headaches," as he described them, and all this time a strange feeling of personal shortcomings took possession of him. He considered himself a hypocrite. The culmination came when he threw the child into the river.

Want $75,000.

Proceedings to compel the Western Union Telegraph Co. to pay the state of Michigan $75,000 for its failure to comply with the laws of Michigan was commenced by Attorney General Bird in the Ingham county circuit court Thursday. The suit is commenced in the name of the people and is by declaration. The charge is that the telegraph company, ignoring the statutes of 1901, requiring foreign corporations doing business in Michigan to file their articles of incorporation with the secretary of state and pay a franchise fee, has transacted business in Michigan for a period of six years or more without complying with the law, and the court is asked to impose the penalty provided by the statute for such failure of $1,000 per month. Attorney General Bird has also asked Gov. Warner to bring to the attention of the legislature in special session the question of the taxation of the telegraph and telephone companies of the state, which, he asserts, are escaping their just share of taxation while paying dividends on large amounts of watered stock.

Third Place Vacant.

Finding itself still deadlocked, the ninth senatorial district convention to choose a third Republican nominee for delegate to the constitutional convention decided to let the third place go by default.

The first and last ballot stood fifteen for A. S. Frost, of Kalamazoo, and fifteen for DeLoes Fall, of Albion, Calhoun county. Seeing no show for changing the complexion of the convention, and after holding an executive session with reporters barred, the convention adjourned indefinitely.

Kalamazoo trusts in its ability to force the senatorial district committee to appoint the third nominee, and Calhoun is trusting in its ability to prevent this and elect a Democrat, W. H. Porter, of Marshall. The delegates have been in deadlock all told seven days and three nights. Nominations of Edwin C. Nichols, Calhoun, and W. R. Taylor, Kalamazoo were filed.

Taxing Telephone and Telegraph Companies.

Some state newspapers have taken notice of Attorney General Bird's open newspaper letter to Governor Warner asking the governor to include in his special session call, measures to tax express, telegraph and telephone companies on the ad valorem system.

If some of the newspapers who devoted columns of type and much gray matter to the letter in question will take the trouble to look over Governor Warner's inaugural message which he sent to the Legislature at the beginning of the year they will find that the subject is not a new one just at this time. The governor showed eight months ago where he stood on the question. He has always been in favor of taxing these corporations in the same manner as other people are taxed. The Record does not remember that any of the newspapers at that time went into any extraordinary enthusiasm over the question. A bill was introduced in the last legislature to tax those companies on the ad valorem basis but the lobby of the little and big independent telephone companies were forceful enough to keep the bill in the committee. The attorney general asserts that a "free distribution of frank" and a "powerful lobby" were the things that kept the bill in the committee room and wants the legislature "choked into submission" on the question.

Governor Warner may or may not put the measure in the call for the special session but if he does he will only have to reiterate what he said at the beginning of the regular session in his inaugural message.

The independent telephone companies complained that to put them on that base of taxation while they were in their infancy and fighting the big Bell phone monopoly would cripple their business and the committee on taxation said they could not put the telegraph companies on that basis without also adding the independent telephone companies and the bill in consequence died in the committee room. There is no question but what the telegraph, the express and the telephone companies and every other old company, should be made to pay their just share of the taxes of this state. There is no argument on that question at all. The question is how to bring it about. Governor Warner has solved some pretty difficult problems thus far and it is more than likely he will properly solve this one when the time comes.

Queer, Indeed!

"The face of the returns," said the chairman of the meeting, "shows 67 ayes and no noes." "What a queer looking face that must be!" remarked an old lady in the back row.

Chronic Hoarseness.

Mrs. Delia C. Cameron, Healdsburg, Cal., member Daughters of America, writes:

"Having tried many remedies for chronic catarrh of the bronchial tubes, and not receiving any benefit, I began to think there was no help for me until I began to use Peruna.

"In a short time the bronchial tubes began to clear, I did not have that 'frog in my throat' continually, my voice was not nearly so husky, and the wheezing noise disappeared.

"I was soon able to believe that I was entirely free from catarrh, and as this was several months ago, I do not believe that it will return."

The above group of women could be multiplied by ten thousand without reaching the number that have been helped by taking Peruna.

A Wasting Disease.

Mrs. Roxa Tyler, 6210 Madison Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Vice President of the Illinois Woman's Alliance, writes:

"During the past year I gradually lost flesh and strength until I was unable to perform my work properly. I tried different remedies, and finally Peruna was suggested to me.

"It gave me new life and restored my strength. I cannot speak too highly of it."

SERIAL STORY

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Author of "THE MAIN CHANCE," "ZELDA DAMERON," Etc.

"Try it again," I heard Larry admonish him, "try that once more, and The Sod, God bless it! will never feel the delicate imprint of your web-feet again."

He turned the man about and rushed him toward the house, the revolver still serving as a prod. His flight gave heart to the wary invaders immediately behind him and two fellows, urged and led by Morgan, charged our line at a smart pace.

"Bolt for the front door," I called to Larry and Stoddard and I closed in after him to guard his retreat.

"They're not shooting," called Stoddard. "You may be sure they've had their orders to capture the house with as little row as possible."

We were now nearing the edge of the wood, with the open meadow and water tower at our backs, while Larry was making good time toward the house.

"Let's not wait for them here," shouted Stoddard.

Morgan was advancing with a club in his hand, making directly for me, two men at his heels, and the rest veering off toward the wall of St. Agatha's.

"Watch the house," I yelled to the chaplain, and then, on the edge of the wood Morgan came at me furiously, swinging his club over his head, and in a moment we were fencing away at a merry rate. We both had revolvers strapped to our waists, but I had no intention of drawing mine unless in extremity. At my right Stoddard was busy keeping off Morgan's personal guard, who seemed reluctant to close with the clergyman.

I have been, in my day, something of a fencer, and my knowledge of the foils stood me in good stead now. With a tremendous thwack I knocked Morgan's club flying over the snow, and, as we grappled, Bates yelled from the house. I quickly found that Morgan's wounded arm was still tender. He flinched at the first grapple, and his anger got the better of his judgment. We kicked up the snow at a great rate as we fenced and dragged each other about. He caught hold of my belt with one hand and with a great wrench nearly dragged me from my feet, but I pinioned his arms and bent him backward then, by a trick Larry had taught me, flung him upon his side.

Meanwhile Bates continued to call lustily from the house.

"Come on at any cost," shouted Stoddard, putting himself between me and the men who were flying to Morgan's aid.

"Shoot, you fools, shoot!" howled Morgan, and as we started across the open meadow and ran toward the house a shotgun roared back of us and backshot snapped and rattled on the stone of the water tower.

"There's the sheriff," called Stoddard behind me.

The officer and his deputy ran into the park from the gate of St. Agatha's, while the rest of Morgan's party were skirting the wall to join them.

"Stop or I'll shoot," yelled Morgan, and I felt Stoddard pause in his gait, ready to throw himself between me and the pursuers.

"Sprint for it hot," he called very coolly, as though he were coaching me in a contest of the most amiable sort imaginable.

"Get away from those guns," I panted, angered by the very generosity of his defense.

"Faint for the front door and then run for the terrace and the library door," he commanded as we crossed the little ravine bridge. "They've got us headed off."

Twice the guns boomed behind us, and twice I saw shot cut into the snow about me.

"I'm all right," called Stoddard, reassuringly, still at my back. "They're not a bit anxious to kill me."

I was at the top of my speed now, the clergyman kept close at my heels. I was blowing hard but he made equal time with perfect ease.

"Now for the sheriff—h-e-e-e we go!" cried Stoddard—beside me—when we were close to the fringe of trees that shielded the entrance. They off we veered suddenly to the left, close upon the terrace, where one of the French windows was thrown open and Larry and Bates stepped out, urging us on with lusty cries.

They caught us by the arms and dragged us over where the balustrade was lowest, and we crowded through the door and slammed it. As Bates snapped the bolts Morgan's party discharged their combined artillery and withdrew across the ravine toward the lake.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Fight in the Library.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the attacking party returned after a parley on the ice behind the boat house. The four of us were on the terrace ready for them. They came smartly through the wood, the sheriff and Morgan slightly in advance of the others. I expected them to slacken their pace when they came to the open meadow, but they broke into a quick trot at the water tower and came toward the house as steady as veteran campaigners.

"Looks like business this time," exclaimed Larry. "Spread out now and the first head that looms over the balustrade gets a dose of hickory."

The attacking party now divided, half halting between us and the bridge and the remainder swinging around the house toward the front entrance.

"Ah, look at that!" yelled Larry. "It's a battering ram they have. O'ra! in of peace! have I your Majesty's consent to try the elephant guns now?"

Morgan and the sheriff carried between them a stick of timber from which the branches had been cut, and, with a third man to help, they ran it up the steps and against the door with a crash that came booming and echoing back through the great halls of the house.

A gun roared again at the side of the house, and I ran to the library, where Larry had pushed furniture against all the long windows save one, which he held open. He stepped out upon the terrace and emptied a revolver at the men who were now creeping along the edge of the ravine beneath us. One of them stopped and discharged a rifle at us with deliberate aim. The ball snapped snow from the balustrade and screamed away harmlessly.

"Bah, such monkeys!" he muttered. "I believe I've hit that chap!" One man had fallen and lay howling in the ravine, his hand to his thigh, while his comrades paused, demoralized.

"Serves you right, you blackguard!" Larry muttered.

I pulled him in and we jammed a lar and gave him a tremendous swing jerking him high in the air and driving him against another invader with a blow that knocked both fellows spinning into a corner.

"Come on to the library!" shouted Larry, and Bates, who had got me to my feet, pushed me down the hall toward the open library door.

We were now between two fires. The sheriff's party had fought valiantly to keep us out of the library, and now that we were within, Stoddard's big shoulders held the door half closed against the combined strength of the men in the hall. This pause was fortunate, for it gave us an opportunity to deal singly with the fellows who were climbing in from the terrace.

Bates laid one of them low with a club and Larry disposed of another who had made a murderous effort to stick a knife into him. I was with Stoddard against the door, where the sheriff's men were slowly gaining upon me.

"Let go on the jump when I say three," said Stoddard, and at his word we sprang away from the door and into the room. Larry yelled with joy as the sheriff and his men pitched forward and sprawled upon the floor; then we were at it again in a hand-to-hand conflict to clear the room.

"Hold that position, sir," yelled Bates.

Morgan had directed the attack against me and I was driven upon the hearth before the great fireplace. The sheriff, Morgan and Ferguson hemmed me in. It was evident that I was the chief culprit, and they wished to eliminate me from the contest. Across the room, Larry, Stoddard and Bates were engaged in a lively rough and tumble with the rest of the besiegers, and Stoddard, seeing my plight, leaped the overturned table, broke past the trio and stood by my side, swinging a chair.

At that moment my eyes, sweeping

By a Trick Larry Had Taught Me I Threw Him.

cabinet against the door and returned to the hall.

Meanwhile the blows at the front door continued with increasing violence. Stoddard still stood where I had left him. Bates was not in sight, but the barking of a revolver above showed that he had returned to the window to wreak vengeance on his enemies.

Stoddard shook his head in deprecation.

"They fired first—we can't do less than get back at them," I said, between the blows of the battering ram.

A panel of the great oaken door now splintered, but in their fear that we might use the broken panel as a loophole they scampered out into range of Bates' revolver. In return we heard a rain of small shot on the upper windows, and a few seconds later Larry shouted that the flanking party was again at the terrace.

This movement evidently heartened the sheriff, for, under a fire from Bates, his men charged again and the log crashed into the door, shaking it free from the upper hinges. The lower fastenings were wrenched loose an instant later, and the men came tumbling into the hall—the sheriff Morgan and four others I had never seen before. Simultaneously the flanking party began smashing the small panes of the library windows. We could hear the glass crack and tinkle above the confusion at the door.

In the hall he was certainly a tricky man who held to his weapon a moment after the door tumbled in. I blazed at the sheriff with my revolver, but he stumbled and half fell at the threshold, so that the ball passed over him, and he promptly gripped me by the legs and had me prone and half dazed by the rap of my head on the floor.

I suppose I was two or three minutes at least getting my wits. I was first conscious of Bates grappling with the sheriff who sat upon me, and as they struggled with each other I got the full benefit of their combined, swerving, tossing weight. Morgan and Larry were trying for a chance at each other with revolvers, while Morgan backed the Irishman slowly toward the library. Stoddard had seized one of the unknown deputies by the collar and gave him a tremendous swing jerking him high in the air and driving him against another invader with a blow that knocked both fellows spinning into a corner.

Then the trio pressed upon me. As I threw down my club and drew my revolver, some one across the room fired several shots, whose roar through the room seemed to arrest the fight for an instant, and then, while Stoddard stood at my side swinging his chair defensively, the great chandelier, loosened or broken by the shots, fell with a mighty crash of its crystal pendants. The sheriff, leaping away from Stoddard's chair, was struck on the head and borne down by the heavy glass.

We were all getting our second wind for a renewal of the fight, with Morgan in command of the enemy. One or two of his men, who had gone down early in the struggle, were now crawling back for revenge. I think I must have raised my hand and pointed at Pickering, for Bates wheeled like a flash and before I realized what happened he had dragged the elevator into the room.

"You scoundrel—you ingrate!" howled the servant.

The blood on his face and bare chest and the hatred in his eyes made him a hideous object, but in that full of the storm while we waited, watching for an advantage, I heard, somewhere in the wall, that same sound of footsteps that I had remarked before. Larry and Stoddard heard it; Bates heard it, and his eyes fixed upon Pickering with a glare of malicious delight.

"There comes our old friend, the ghost," yelled Larry.

Out of the Vision. "In the olden times it is said that it was possible for a man to render himself invisible."

"Pshaw! That's not at all remarkable! Men in this country are doing it every day."

"You don't say so! How do they manage it?" "By marrying famous women!"—Smith's Weekly

Manager Saw the Possibilities in the Situation.

Jim Johnston, the famous baseball umpire, said recently in New York that baseball crowds were far under to umpires than they used to be.

"This is true of theater crowds, too," said Mr. Johnston. "Why, with provincial touring companies in the past, maltreatment was regularly expected. In fact, the companies profited by it in more ways than one."

"I know of a company that was playing 'The Broken Vow' in Paint Rock, a one night stand. The audience didn't like 'The Broken Vow,' and eggs, cabbages and potatoes rained upon the stage."

"Still the play went on. The hero raved through his endless speeches, dodging an onion or a baseball every other minute, and pretty soon from those missiles that he hadn't been able to dodge."

"But finally a gallery auditor in a paroxysm of rage and scorn hurled a heavy boot, and the actor, thoroughly alarmed, started to retreat."

"Keep on playing, you fool," hissed the manager from the wings, as he hooked in the boot with an umbrella. "Keep on till we get the other one."

PRESCRIPTIONS IN LATIN.

The Public Should Have Them Translated by the Druggists.

What virtue is there in the secrecy with which the doctor hedges about his profession?

"Professional etiquette" occupies a prominent place in the curriculum of every medical school, and when strictly analyzed "professional etiquette" seems to mean "doing what is best for the doctor, individually and collectively."

Among the things that "is best for the doctor" is the writing of his prescriptions in Latin, and thus keeping the public in ignorance not only of what it is taking for its ills, but forcing a call upon the doctor each time a prescription is needed.

In plain and unmistakable English the writing of prescriptions in Latin makes business for the doctors.

Let us say that you have the ague. You had it last year and the year before. Each time you have visited the doctor and he has prescribed for you—in Latin. You have never known what he has given you for the disease, and so each time you are forced to go to him again and give him an opportunity to repeat his prescription—in Latin, and his fee—in dollars.

If you ask the doctor why he uses Latin in writing his prescriptions, why he writes "aqua" when he means water, he will give you a technical dissertation on the purity of the Latin language, and the fact that all words are derived from it, etc. It will be a dissertation that you may not be able to answer, but it will hardly convince you.

It would be a good thing for the public to devise a little code of ethics of its own, ethics that will be "a good thing for the public individually and collectively."

Let us apply one of the rules of this code of ethics to you, the individual.

You call in the physician when you have the ague, the gripe, or any of the other ills to which human flesh is heir, and which you may have again some day. The doctor prescribes—in Latin, and you take this, to you, meaningless scribble to the druggist to have it compounded. Right here is where you come in, if you are wise. Say to the druggist that you want a translation of that prescription. It is your privilege to know what you are taking. While the doctor's code of ethics may not recognize this right it is yours just the same.

With the translated prescription in your possession you have two distinct advantages. You know what you are taking, and should you wish to call some other doctor at some time you will be able to tell him what drugs you have been putting into your system, and also if you should have the same disease again you can save yourself a visit to the doctor, and his fee, by taking this translated prescription to the druggist once more and having it refilled.

Jerome on Colored Evidence.

District Attorney Jerome, of New York, said one day of a piece of suspicious evidence:

"It is evidence that has been tampered with, colored. It is like the lady's report of her physician's prescription."

"A lady one day in July visited her physician. The man examined her and said:

"Madam, you are only a little run down. You need frequent baths and plenty of fresh air, and I advise you to dress in the coolest, most comfortable clothes—nothing stiff or formal."

"When she got home her husband asked her what the physician had said. The lady replied:

"He said I must go to the seashore, do plenty of automobiling, and get some new summer gowns."

Great Discovery Announced.

Sir William Crookes, as a result of his own researches and the experiments of Professors Krowalski and Mosicki, of Freiburg university, has discovered a process of extracting nitric acid from the atmosphere. The process is available for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes, and is expected to revolutionize the nitrate industry and the world's food problem.

COW ATE DYNAMITE

AND FOR A TIME THERE WAS CHAOS ON THE FARM.

Peculiar Diet of Bovine Simply Unsettled Everything—Caused Labor Complication Among Other Things.

Queer demands are coming from the farmers on the line of the new aqueduct, says the New York Times.

A claim for "one dynamited cow" was settled the other day. When the claim reached the controller it called for $425. The controller turned it over to the board of water supply, which in turn sent Engineer Charles E. Davis to investigate. The claimant was John McCauley, of Brown's station, Uster county. The engineering force had been at work near his place. The claim, he said, included the tramping down of growing grain.

"Was the cow blown up?" asked the engineer.

"Not exactly," said the claimant, "but she scared us all to death. You see, one of the engineers had left a stick of dynamite in a field and the cow ate it. She probably thought it was an ear of corn or something. You know how hard it is to get any hired men in this section. Why, the department of agriculture has sent out circulars, telling the farmer how to get over the labor difficulty. I've got one of them up to the house."

"Well, some of the help I have had read that circular that was lying about the house, and then they kicked for more pay. There was Ed and John—"

"What's that got to do with the cow?" asked the investigator.

"Well, I was telling my story in my own way. You see, labor is scarce, and I had got that darned circular locked up in a closet, and I was hoping to keep Bill with me for a little, when Bill and I was walking through that field toward the cow. We saw her eating something and we didn't mistrust anything until we got up close to her just as the end of the stick was sticking out of her mouth, and I saw what it was."

"What's she eating?" asked Bill. "I didn't feed her anything."

"Bill," says I, "if there's one thing of which I wouldn't suspect you it's work. I know darn well you didn't feed that cow anything. But she's fed herself," says I, "and it's darned hot stuff," says I.

"Bill he looked a little queer."

"What is it?" says he.

"Dynamite," says I.

"My God," says he.

"He stood still for so long a time that I thought he wasn't afraid. All of a sudden the cow turned and walked toward him."

"Drive her off; we'll both be killed," says Bill, picking up a big stone.

"Don't you do it," says I; "she'll explode. She's full of dynamite, and the slightest jolt'll set her off."

"Bill began to laugh—half laugh and half cry. You know, like a lady summer boarder I once had who found a toad under her bed when she was looking for a man. Then I says:

"Bill, it's up to you to do something."

"Why is it up to me?" says he. "You own the cow."

"That's just it," says I. "I own the cow and you are working for the man that owns her."

"Bill gave me a look. Then he says:

"Well, I ain't working for him no longer," says he, and with that he cut across the fields without waiting for his wages."

"Well, my family and I stayed that night at the home of my brother, five miles away, to make sure of being safe. In the morning I went back to the farm and found that the cow was dead. The dynamite had poisoned her. John Wilkey, the dare devil of the neighborhood, carried off the body for $10."

The engineer found upon questioning the forces in the neighborhood that a stick of dynamite had disappeared. So he settled for $150. The farmer took the money.

"Say," he said, "you know I have a telephone in my house. Day before yesterday Bill called me up."

"Say," says he, "is that cow dead? If she is I'm coming back for my wages."

"You'll get no wages," says I."

Sermon in a Few Words.

We are very much impressed by something we saw and heard while passing along the street a few evenings since. A young girl was standing in front of a store, and near her, with a hand-dog expression on his face, was a young stripling of a boy. As we passed the two, the girl said to the boy: "Any one who speaks of my father as the 'old man' is not worthy of my respect." From the tone of her voice, we knew that the girl spoke from the impulse of a moment, but there was a whole sermon in her utterance. We don't know the girl, but if she lives she will develop into a noble womanhood, and the world will be the better for her having lived in it. And the boy, if he has any redeeming qualities in him, will profit by the lesson given him in that one sentence.—Burlington Chronicle.

"That city is as notorious for its rottenness as the town of Pebbles is notorious for another characteristic."

"Here is an incident that will give you an idea of the reputation of Pebbles."

"On a train one day a man rushed into a car, held up his hand for attention, and shouted excitedly:

"Anybody here who belongs to Pebbles?"

"Aye, I do," said a small, dry old fellow calmly.

"Then," said the other, "lend us yer corkscrew."

She, Experimented.

A little girl of five was taken to church one Sunday, and listened with unexpected attention to the sermon, which graphically told the story of the stilling of the tempest on the Sea of Galilee, and how Christ walked on the waves. In the afternoon her mother missed her and began an anxious search of the house. As she feared the bathroom she heard sounds of splashing, and hurried to the door to behold a small, excited face peering over the rim of the big white tub, and to hear a small, excited voice exclaim: "Say, mamma, this walking on the water is quite a trick."

Time to Fly.

The trust magnate leaped up from the banquet table and made a dive for his 100-mile-an-hour automobile.

"Hold on!" cried the astonished toastmaster. "Won't you wait for us to serve the dessert?"

"No," replied the nervous magnate; "I just saw a suspicious face loom up at the window. The next thing served will be a process."

"Something to say to me, little wife?"

"Yes, something to say to you. Don't send me any poker stories in lieu of the weekly remittance. That'll be about all."

Evil of Tipping System.

Although there is a great effort made to keep secret the thefts in hotels and restaurants in New York, it is quite evident they are on a rapid increase. The manager of a large restaurant says the system of having servants depend almost entirely upon patrons for their pay lowers their moral standard and causes them to look on those they are supposed to serve as their legitimate prey.

FEET OUT.

She Had Curious Habits.

When a person has to keep the feet out from under cover during the coldest nights in winter because of the heat and prickly sensation, it is time that coffee, which causes the trouble, be left off.

There is no end to the nervous conditions that coffee will produce. It shows in one way in one person and in another way in another. In this case the lady lived in S. Dak. She says:

"I have had to be awake half the night with my feet and limbs out of the bed on the coldest nights, and felt afraid to sleep for fear of catching cold. I had been troubled for years with twitching and jerking of the lower limbs, and for most of the time I have been unable to go to church or to lectures because of that awful feeling that I must keep on the move."

"When it was brought to my attention that coffee caused so many nervous diseases, I concluded to drop coffee and take Postum Food Coffee to see if my trouble was caused by coffee drinking."

"I only drank one cup of coffee for breakfast but that was enough to do the business for me. When I quit it my troubles disappeared in an almost miraculous way. Now I have no more of the jerking and twitching and can sleep with any amount of bedding over me and sleep all night, in sound, peaceful rest."

"Postum Food Coffee is absolutely worth its weight in gold to me." "There's a Reason." Read the little health classic, "The Road to Wellville," in 1 kg.

How She Managed

By M. Vaughn

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The Hopkinses were holding an indignation meeting.

"All the family," Mother Hopkins said, but all the "family" were not present.

There was Tom and his wife Jerusha and Melindy and Sophia and their husbands. But John and John's wife Claribel were they? Ah, there, on my story hinges.

This indignation meeting was all on account of John's wife and John's extravagance.

"I knowed it," wailed Mother Hopkins, "I knowed it all the time, just as well as I do now. Jerusha always said so an' I told John so afore he was married."

"Upland farms don't yield such big profits that a man can afford hangin' lamps and chiny dishes and the like," suggested Sophia.

"John's wife signed $30 to the minister's salary for next year," said Jerusha.

"Well, now," remarked Father Hopkins, "it's my private opinion, publicly expressed, that you're all a-meddlin' with what don't consarn ye."

"Ain't we, as a family, consarned in actions that's threatenin' rewinatin' to one of its members?" demanded mother.

"I don't see no rewinatin' a-threatenin' of anybody," replied father.

"Well, if it keeps on, John'll be bankrupt or suthin', and we'd jest better take the matter in hand and give 'em a warnin' word afore it's forever too late. Maybe he's a-borrowin' money fer all this," suggested Jerusha.

And then they discussed the matter, as to who John had probably borrowed money of, and how much, and whether he would be likely to give a "mortgage" or not.

But as all things must come to an end, so did this indignation meeting.

"Nothing New!" Shouted Jerusha.

and the "children" departed one by one, until father and mother were left alone.

"Father," said mother, "if John comes over here to-morrow, you jest ask him if he's been a-borrowin' of any money, and where, and how much, and how and when he ever expects to pay it back, at the rate they've-been a-carryin' on. If you don't, I'll do it myself the very first time I see him, and I shan't be 'mealy-mouthed' about it, neither; you know that."

Yes, father knew that. And if John really was elected to be questioned, he felt that the better way was to question him himself.

Accordingly, when John came by the next day on his way to town, Father Hopkins went out and asked to be taken as a "passenger."

John gave a most willing assent, and they drove off together.

All the way the old man was haunted by the thought of the unpleasant task set before him. And John, on his part, wondered what made his father so fidgety and absent-minded.

On the way home John said:

"I have some oysters in that paper pail, father; be careful not to upset it. They are for poor old Granny Phelps, and those oranges you saw me buying are for little hunch-back Sandy. Claribel was down there yesterday, and she was so struck by their poverty that she charged me to 'get something good for those poor people.'"

Father Hopkins felt that now was the time to broach the hated subject, and while inwardly he writhed under the task, yet putting on a brave face, he said in a meek tone:

"And I heard down to town that Claribel had clothed them two young-uns of Wilder Nelson's, and started 'em to school, 'sides buyin' their books for 'em."

John admitted that such was the case.

"John," said the old man, a little nervous quaver in his voice, "John, ye be'n a-goin' in a trifle too deep, be ye? Ye're doin' a powerful sight of good, but it must cost a heap of money fer plain farmers. I s'pose, John, ye know yer own bizness, of course, but mother's a-gittin' a mite anxious, and wonders—" Here the old man made a dash at the oyster bucket, which in his nervousness he had nearly kicked over. "She wonders if ye're a-havin' to borrow money."

"No, father, I've borrowed no money, for, to tell the truth, I've not paid for what I've got," answered John, while he looked away to hide the merriment that danced in his eyes.

"I wouldn't a-b'lieved it!" cried the old man again. "I b'lieve in charity, but 'charity' begins to home, as the sayin' is, and if you ain't a-payin' fer 'em, John, why, somebody has got to lose 'em."

"No, nobody shall lose," Claribel pays for them herself. "Don't worry, father, it's all right," and the young man's honest blue eyes smiled down into the old man's dim ones in such a straightforward way, that his heart was set at rest.

"I told mother I was sure it was. But—well—some of the rest had got her skeered, and she was bound ter know."

"Yes, Jerusha goes about agitating the matter more than anyone else. She don't want to do Claribel any injury, but she can't keep her tongue still. She'd be a pretty good woman if she didn't talk so much, and do so much looking after other people's affairs."

"Claribel pays for 'em," exclaimed Jerusha, "jest a poor minister's darter; she hadn't no money of her own. How does she make it? Hiram her work done?" with a scornful laugh.

"It's like I've heard o' folks a-livin' off the interest of their debts."

During the next six weeks Jerusha "found out" and reported to the rest of the "family" how Claribel had declared that something must be done to bring in the many children of the village, who claimed Sunday as a legal holiday, and never dreamed of entering the dull Sunday school that the one little church in the village afforded.

Acting on this, she had purchased a juvenile library of 50 books, furnished Scripture text cards, and papers, besides, on several occasions, meeting the excuses of some of the most unwilling ones by furnishing hat, shoes or mittens (as the case might require), amongst those she found in her searchings amongst the "highways and hedges" John had kept his own counsel, but a sharp lookout since his conversation with his father.

Until the last Sunday, Claribel, absorbed in her work, had not marked the averted looks and ominous glances in her direction, although they had been apparent to her husband.

But on that day, the little woman went home filled with dismay and sorely wounded in heart.

At church Sophia and Melindy had passed her by with a cool nod. Jerusha had been blind, so to speak, since "none are so blind as those who will not see."

"Now, little woman," said John, as they drove homeward, "your secret is bound to come out. I will have them all come to our house Tuesday evening, and you shall tell it yourself."

So Tuesday night found the "family" on their way to "John's."

Although hospitably received when they arrived at "John's," conversation seemed bound to lag. John suggested that if Claribel would "say her say," they might all "feel better."

So in a few words Claribel explained how it was. That she had once been a correspondent to several magazines, but had expected when she took charge of her own home, to lay aside her literary work. But loving the work, and being impressed by the poverty in and about the village, also the lack of interest on the part of the children in school, Sunday school, or, in fact, anything good, she had resolved to again take up her pen, and by careful management she could put out a part of her work, and make much more than she could save by trying to do it all herself.

"I have bought some good books and a few pretty things for my house," said she, "although I have gotten nothing new to wear."

"Nothing new!" shouted Jerusha. "What did you have on in town last week? And what did you wear last Sunday?"

"In town I wore my lavender wedding dress, colored a dark blue; and on Sunday, a white Flemish tricot (the dress I graduated in), colored black," was the quiet answer. "I flatter myself that I have two very respectable suits from them. What I have given away cost me not over a hundred dollars, and I have saved as much more for ourselves; I—"

"I knowed it," yelled Father Hopkins, "unable to restrain himself longer. 'I knowed it all the time, and I told you all so. But,' turning to Claribel, "what made you so still about it?"

"Because I thought you would think me silly to suppose I could write anything worth publishing; what I wrote seemed so insignificant to me that I did not want anyone I knew to read the wretched 'yarns' I spun."

Then arose a babel of expostulations, explanations, apologies and congratulations.

And Claribel's guests left that night believing that through Claribel the name of Hopkins was certain to be immortalized.

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Profit by the Experience of One Who Has Found Relief.

James R. Keeler, retired farmer, of Fenner St., Cazenovia, N. Y., says: "About fifteen years ago I suffered with my back and kidneys. I doctored and used many remedies without getting relief. Beginning with Doan's Kidney Pills, I found relief from the first box, and two boxes restored me to good, sound condition. My wife and many of my friends have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results and I can earnestly recommend them."

GIFT NOT A GIFT.

Generosity That Was Purely the Result of Accident.

A missionary bishop told this story about F. Marion Crawford, the famous novelist:

"Mr. Crawford went to school," he said, "in Concord, and one day he was taken to call at a Concord clergyman's."

"The clergyman had a missionary box on his drawing room table, and, time hanging heavily on the boy's hands, he amused himself with trying whether a silver dollar—it was all the money he had in the world, and he had converted it into that gigantic coin for safety—would go into the slit in the box's top."

"It was a close fit, but, unfortunately, it did go, and the coin slipped out of the missionary box's fingers. There was a terrible crash of silver falling among the coppers—and then the boy, as the novelists say, 'knew no more.'"

"When he came to himself he found the clergyman and his family in raptures over his generosity."

CHILDREN TORTURED.

Girl Had Running Sores from Eczema—Boy Tortured by Poison Oak—Both Cured by Cuticura.

"Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased, with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills. When we commenced with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

"In July of this year a little boy in our family poisoned his hands and arms with poison oak, and in twenty-four hours his hands and arms were a mass of torturing sores. We used only the Cuticura Remedies, and in about three weeks his hands and arms healed up. Mrs. Lizzie Vincent Thomas, Fairmont, Walden's Ridge Tenn., Oct. 13, 1905."

Born, Not Worn.

Little Margaret's grandmother had written for a photograph of her namesake, the "baby." For material reasons it was advisable that the little girl should appear as well dressed as possible, and a cousin's new open-work dress was borrowed for the occasion. On being arrayed for the picture Margaret rushed to her father, crying:

"Oh, father, just look! These ain't worn holes; they is born holes."—Harper's.

A Knock.

"Jimmy," said the father, "there's a rip in your bathing suit. Go and sew it up."

"But papa," growled the boy, "mother will sew it for me."

"Never mind. I want you to learn to sew yourself. For," said the father, "some day you will get married, and then you won't have any mother—you will only have a wife."

Burglar's Pathetic Wail.

A burglar arrested in London the other night remarked regretfully: "I knew the time when I could do 20 houses in two hours. But I am getting old."

MOTHERHOOD

The first requisite of a good mother is good health, and the experience of maternity should not be approached without careful physical preparation, as a woman who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from native roots and herbs, more successfully than by any other medicine because it gives tone and strength to the entire feminine organism, curing displacements, ulceration and inflammation, and the result is less suffering and more children healthy at birth. For more than thirty years has been the standby of American mothers in preparing for childbirth. Noteworth Mrs. James Chester, of 427 W. 35th St., New York says in this letter:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"I wish every expectant mother knew about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A neighbor who had learned of its great value at this trying period of a woman's life urged me to try it and I did so, and I cannot say enough in regard to the good it did me. I recovered quickly and am in the best of health now."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is certainly a successful remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women. It has cured almost every form of Female Complaints, Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation, Ulcerations and Organic Diseases of Women and is invaluable in preparing for Childbirth and during the Change of Life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free.

A Base Insinuation.

"I hear the Neweds have had a dreadful quarrel and that the bride is talking of going home to her mother."

"What's the matter?" "I believe one evening she got the supper from her cooking school recipes, and when the boys in the neighborhood lost their ball in a hole under the fence, Mr. Newed gave them one of her biscuits to finish the game."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by E. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by E. J. Cheney & Co., Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price, 50c. per bottle. Take Hall's Family Cure for constipation.

FATHER KNICKERBOCKER BROKE; CREDIT ALSO BAD.

WITH a small army of unpaid contractors clamoring for their money and many of them threatening to suspend work unless they are paid, and with the comptroller's office refusing to register any more new contracts except for work absolutely necessary, it is admitted that the city has been brought face to face with a serious problem as a result of its failure to sell bonds. Numbers of the bonds have been given to contractors in payment for work, and some of these men have put them up as collateral for loans. One of the contractors complained to-day that such is the pressure for money that he had been able to borrow only 85 per cent. of the value of the bonds. Another contractor took his bonds of small denominations and announced that he was using them to pay off his creditors. Money for the pay roll is provided by the sale of revenue bonds, which are issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes and are retired on Oct. 1. It was declared that such is the demand for money in Wall street that the city has been able to dispose of only a modest quantity of these desirable investments. That the city may have to increase the rate of interest in order to provide the money for its running expenses is said to be not unlikely. A serious phase of the situation is acknowledged to be the tremendous demands to be made upon the city treasury to pay for the $161,000,000 water system. Bills for this improvement have scarcely begun to come in yet. Authority to spend $25,000,000 has been given the water supply board and contracts for $6,400,000 have been let. The contract for the Ashokan reservoir, amounting to $11,000,000 more, will be let next week. This will make $17,000,000 for which bonds will have to be sold. City officials certainly have a good time ahead.

NOT content with furnishing summer playgrounds and outdoor gymnasiums for the needs of school children, who otherwise would have to resort to the streets for their pastimes, the New York board of education has established kindergartens for mothers. This is the very latest and newest wrinkle in the educational line. The board of education has come to the conclusion that the training of children must begin with the mothers, and part of its summer work is directed to the training of the women of the east side and other crowded portions of the greater city. Of all the progressive steps taken by the school authorities in this city the new form of kindergarten is one of the most remarkable and interesting. That it will be fruitful there is already every reason to believe. Primarily it is just a summer kindergarten with a maternal annex. No boys older than six years are admitted. They are sent to the other playgrounds conducted by the board of education. No girls above the kindergarten age are permitted to attend unless they bring babies with them. Thus it can be seen that a baby is a regular ticket of admission. The purpose of this kindergarten course is to Ruskin's Bitter Criticism.

"We are always in these days endeavoring to separate intellect and manual labor; we want one man to be always thinking, and another to be always working, and we call one a gentleman and the other an operative; whereas the workman ought often to be thinking and the thinker often to be working, and both should be gentlemen in the best sense. As it is, we make both ungentle, the one envying, the other despising his brother; and the mass of society is made up of morbid thinkers and miserable workers!"—John Ruskin.

Following Precedent.

Word has been received here that Miss Belle Smith rallied nicely after the operation for appendicitis which was performed at Dr. Riker's office in Pontiac Monday, and is as well as could be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Austin entered their daughters and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. Haab of Northville and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Devereaux, and John Austin and friend from Pontiac on Sunday.

Rev. L. H. Stevens received the following persons into the M. E. church in full connection: Harle, Clarence, Glenn and Bessie Chaff, Edward Erwin, Erle and Lee Welch, Mrs. John Ryel, Ruth and Esther McCoy. Mrs. Ryel was baptized. The sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered at the close of the service.

The Epworth League Rally service was greatly enjoyed by all who attended. M. L. Bradley is an enthusiastic leader and presented many helpful thoughts. Other interesting talks were made by H. R. Russell, Rev. and Mrs. Stevens and Charles Merrithew. Mrs. Rex Angell sang a solo and the meeting closed with a consecration service.

Sunday evening during the severe thunder storm, while John Bentley sat in his stable milking, there came a blinding flash of lightning and John was thrown to the stable floor. As soon as he could collect his senses, he began to look around to see what damage had been done, and discovered that the cupola was on fire. He climbed up with a pail of water and succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

GIVES QUICK RELIEF

Applied externally it affords almost instant relief from pain, while permanent results are being effected by taking it internally, purifying the blood, dissolving the poisonous substance and removing it from the system.

DR. S. D. BLAND

Of Brewton, Ga., writes: "I had been a sufferer for a number of years with lumbago and rheumatism in my arms and legs, and tried all the remedies that I could get, but with no success. I also consulted with a number of the best physicians but found nothing that gave the relief I desired. I then procured a bottle of 'S-DROPS' and used it in my practice for rheumatism and kindred diseases."

DR. C. L. GATES

Hancock, Minn., writes: "A little girl here had such a weak back caused by Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble that she could not stand on her feet. The moment she put her down on the floor she would scream with pain. I treated her with 'S-DROPS' and today she runs around as well and happy as can be. I prescribe 'S-DROPS' for my patients and use it in my practice."
