DEDICATED NEW BELL

GERMAN LUTHERAN PEOPLE CELEBRATED EVENT SUNDAY.

Large Congregation of People Enjoyed Special Program.

The German Lutheran people had a large congregation out Sunday to celebrate the event of the dedication of their new church bell.

The weather was bad but the occasion was none the less enjoyable. Mr. Miller of Clarencville, pastor of the church, was present and preached an able discourse and there was a special program of music and speaking for the event.

A fine dinner was prepared by the ladies of the church and served in the Opera House block vacant store at noon.

The services in the afternoon were in English.

The bell was made by the American Bell & Foundry Co. of Northville. It is one of their best steel alloy makes and measures forty inches across and weighs 1250 pounds.

WHAT IS A CURFEW?

By Mrs. P. J. Howard, District President W. C. T. U.

The Curfew is an ordinance formed by a city or town government requiring all children under a certain age, usually all under sixteen, to go off the streets at the ringing of a bell at a certain hour, usually 9:00 p. m. in the summer and 8:00 p. m. in the winter, unless accompanied by the parent or other adult guardian, or bearing a written statement, dated that day and signed by parent or guardian that said child is on an emergency errand.

Roaming around the streets at night, will injure the morals of any child. Children are better off at home than on the street after 9:00 p. m., for on the street late at night they will form bad acquaintances and evil habits. At night boys are more apt to be thrown with evil companions than in the day time. Oftimes boys will get together at night, under cover of darkness, on the street or in some alley and tell vile stories which poison their minds and soon lead to acts of immorality. Many of Northville's neighboring towns have adopted Curfew and many people here believe Northville should adopt it.

RAILROADS WANT NAME R. R. COM'N

CARE NOT WHO IS GOVERNOR IF CAN DO THAT.

May Control Next Convention for That Purpose.

From the side walk and the trees it looks as if the railroad companies and other corporations who come under the supervision of the new railroad commission, are repeating over and over to themselves something like this: "We don't care who makes the laws if we can appoint the railroad commission." The terms of the present commission expire with Governor Warner's present term of office and if the railroads can succeed in nominating one of their friends for governor next year they will have accomplished their purpose and will virtually name the next railroad commission. There is every indication that their efforts will be of no small variety along that line. To make a further safety link to shut off Governor Warner for a third term and the re-appointment of the present commission, they now announce the constitution should be amended so that no governor can serve more than two terms. If that don't work then they want to have it fixed so the commission should be made elective, but of course to be nominated in a state convention which the corporation believe they can control and dictate.

FINE RECEPTION FOR REV. STEPHENS

[From Fowlerville Review.]

"In response to a general invitation given over 300 people, young and old, gathered in the Methodist church on Friday evening of last week, to greet the new pastor, Rev. W. G. Stephens and family. They were given a cordial greeting and a hearty hand clasp by all present and were made to feel at home in their new field.

"The church was very tastefully trimmed with plants, flowers and autumn leaves and over the pulpit was a neatly arranged 'Welcome.'

"After the introduction ceremonies were through with, ice cream and cake were served the company which were partaken of amid pleasant social converse and the evening was heartily enjoyed by all present."

GOV. TALKS TO SENATORS

TELLS WHAT HE THINKS OF BLOCKING LEGISLATION.

Sixteen Men Prevented Passage of Satisfactory Primary Bill.

Before the legislature finally adjourned last Friday, Governor Warner sent in another special message in which he called attention in a very emphatic manner to the measures in the people's interest which they left unpassed. In conclusion the governor said:

"During this special session, as well as during the regular session which preceded it, the charge has been repeatedly made that my attitude in support of many measures of importance demanded by and in the interests of a very great majority of all classes of our people was due to a desire to advance my political fortunes.

"NOT ALL FOR POLITICS.

"This charge was persistently made when I advocated the two-cent passenger fare bill, a better primary law, the establishment of a prison binder twine plant, a good workable railroad commission law, bills prohibiting over-capitalization and the watering of stock by corporations, providing for the registration and regulation of lobbyists and other commendable legislation.

"In my judgment, these charges originated with persons who represent interests that are not inclined to favor the political fortunes of anyone who does not do their bidding, or who is controlled by his own individual judgment of what is right or wrong and acts accordingly. A man who submits to having these matters decided for him by those who permit themselves and their judgments to be controlled by others would undoubtedly not be subjected to that criticism.

TROUBLE AHEAD FOR LEGISLATORS.

"To those members of the legislature who have so much to say about my personal future, I simply desire to remark that the nature of that future will not be for them to decide. I would respectfully remind them that their own political future as well as mine will be decided by the people of Michigan, to whom I am perfectly willing to state the reasons for my actions in connection with the legislation and reveal the motives which prompted such actions. Those who have opposed my recommendations may find it necessary to make a similar disclosure.

"When a man does the right thing, whether as a member of the legislature or chief executive of the state, he will not be embarrassed at any time by anyone raising a question of motive."

The governor's message was enthusiastically received in the House of Representatives but the sixteen "boxer" Senators didn't take kindly to it, naturally and they resolved that it was simply awful for the governor to want to pass so many bills the people wanted. My, oh, my, yes.

ST. LOUIS BALLOON

Passed Over Northville Tuesday at 12:30.

This usually quiet little town was thrown into a state of excitement Tuesday at about 12:30 p. m. when a large balloon was discovered majestically sailing through the air. It was one of the St. Louis balloons the "United States," and was going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour in an easterly direction. It appeared to be up about five hundred feet when passing over here.

The airship was observed by many of our residents and was the special topic of conversation during the rest of the day.

The balloon landed safely near Caldonia, Ont., at 6:15 Tuesday evening after going a distance of 620 miles in about twenty-five hours.

SYNOPSIS.

A detachment of the Eighteenth Infantry from Fort Bethune trapped by Indians in a narrow gorge. Among them is a stranger who introduces himself by the name of Hampton, also Gillis, the spot trader, and his daughter, Gillis, and a majority of the soldiers are killed during a three days' siege.

CHAPTER II. Old Gillis' Girl.

Guided by the unerring instinct of an old Indian fighter, Gillis, during that first mad retreat, had discovered temporary shelter behind one of the largest boulders. It was a trifle in advance of those later rolled into position by the soldiers, but was of a size and shape which should have afforded ample protection for two, and doubtless would have done so had it not been for the firing from the cliff opposite. Even then it was a deflected bullet, glancing from off the polished surface of the rock, which found lodgment in the sturdy old fighter's brain. The girl had caught him as he fell, had wasted all her treasured store of water in a vain effort to cleanse the blood from his features, and now sat there, allowing his head upon her knee, although the old man was stone dead with the first touch of the ball. That had occurred fully an hour before, but she continued in the same posture, a grave, pathetic figure, her face sphered and careworn beyond her years, her eyes dry and staring, one brown hand grasping unconsciously the old man's useless rifle. She would scarcely have been esteemed attractive even under much happier circumstances and assisted by dress, yet there was something in the independent poise of her head, the steady fixedness of her posture, which served to interest Hampton as he now watched her curiously.

"Fighting blood," he muttered admiringly to himself. "Might fail to develop into very much of a society bell, but likely to prove valuable out here."

She was rather a slender slip of a thing, a trifle too tall for her years, perhaps, yet with no lack of development apparent in the slim, rounded figure. Her coarse home-made dress of dark calico fitted her sadly, while her rumpled hair, from which the broad-brimmed hat had fallen, possessed a reddish copper tinge where it was touched by the sun. Mr. Hampton's survey did not increase his desire for more intimate acquaintance, yet he recognized anew her undoubted claim upon him.

"Suppose I might just as well drop out that way as any other," he reflected, thoughtfully. "It's all in the game."

Lying flat upon his stomach, both arms extended, he slowly forced himself beyond his bowlder into the open. There was no great distance to be traversed, and a considerable portion of the way was somewhat protected by low bushes. Hampton took few chances of those spying eyes above, never uplifting his head the smallest fraction of an inch, but reaching forward with blindly groping hands, caught hold upon any projecting root or stone which enabled him to drag his body an inch farther. Twice they fired directly down at him from the opposite summit, and once a fleck of sharp rock, chipped by a glancing bullet, embedded itself in his cheek, dyeing the whole side of his face crimson. But not once did he pause or glance aside; nor did the girl look up from the imploring face of her dead. As he crept silently in, sheltering himself next to the body of the dead man, she perceived his presence for the first time, and shrank back as if in dread.

"What are you doing? Why—why did you come here?" she questioned, a falter in her voice; and he noticed that her eyes were dark and large, yielding a marked impress of beauty to her face.

"I was unwilling to leave you here alone," he answered, quietly, "and hope to discover some means for getting you safely back beside the others."

"But I didn't want you," and there was a look of positive dislike in her widely opened eyes.

"Didn't want me?" He echoed these unexpected words in a tone of complete surprise. "Surely you could not desire to be left here alone? Why didn't you want me?"

"Because I know who you are!" Her voice seemed to catch in her throat.

"He told me. You're the man who shot Jim Eberly."

Mr. Hampton was never of a pronounced emotional nature, nor was he a person easily disconcerted, yet he flushed at the sound of these impulsive words, and the confident smile deserted his lips. For a moment they sat thus, the dead body lying between, and looked at each other. When the girl finally broke the constrained silence a deeper intonation had crept into his voice.

"My girl," he said gravely, and not without a suspicion of pleading, "this is no place for me to attempt any defense of a shooting affair in a gambling house, although I might plead with some justice that Eberly enjoyed the honor of shooting first. I was not aware of your personal feeling in the matter, or I might have permitted some one else to come here in my stead. Now it is too late. I have never spoken to you before, and do so at this time merely from a sincere desire to be of some assistance."

There was that in his manner of grave courtesy which served to steady the girl. Probably never before in all her rough frontier experience had she been addressed thus formally. Her closely compressed lips twitched nervously, but her questioning eyes remained unwavering.

"You may stay," she asserted, soberly. "Only don't touch me."

No one could ever realize how much those words hurt him. Not until he had completely conquered his first unwelcome impulse to retort angrily, did he venture again to speak.

"I hope to aid you in getting back beside the others, where you will be less exposed."

"Will you take him?"

"He is dead," Hampton said, soberly, "and I can do nothing to aid him. But there remains a chance for you to escape."

"Then I won't go," she declared, positively.

Hampton's gray eyes looked for a long moment fixedly into her darker ones, while the two took mental stock of each other. He realized the utter futility of any further argument, while she felt instinctively the cool, dominating strength of the man. Neither was composed of that poor fiber which bends.

"Very well, my young lady," he said, easily, stretching himself out more comfortably in the rock shadow. "Then I will remain here with you; it makes small odds."

Excepting for one hasty, puzzled glance, she did not deign to look again toward him, and the man rested motionless upon his back, staring up at the sky. Finally, curiosity overmastered the actor in him, and he turned partially upon one side, so as to bring her profile within his range of vision.

Her dark, glowing eyes were lowered upon the white face of the dead man, yet Hampton noted how clear, in spite of sun-tan, were those tints of health upon the rounded cheek, and how soft and glossy shone her wealth of rumpled hair. Even the tinge of color, so distasteful in the full glare of the sun, appeared to have darkened under the shadow, its shade framing the downcast face into a pensive fairness. Then he observed how dry and parched her lips were.

"Take a drink of this," he insisted heartily, holding out toward her as he spoke his partially filled canteen.

She started at the unexpected sound of his voice, yet uplifted the welcome water to her mouth, while Hampton, observing it all closely, could but remark the delicate shapeliness of her hand.

"If that old fellow was her father," he reflected soberly, "I should like to have seen her mother."

"Thank you," she said simply, handing back the canteen, but without lifting her eyes again to his face. "I was so thirsty."

"Was Gillis your father?" the man questioned, determined to make her recognize his presence.

"I suppose so; I don't know."

"You don't know? Am I to understand you are actually uncertain, whether this man was your father or not?"

"That is about what I said, wasn't it? Not that it is any of your business, so far as I know, Mr. Bob Hampton, but I answered you all right. He brought me up, and I called him 'dad' about as far back as I can remember, but I don't reckon as he ever told me he was my father. So you can understand just what you please."

"His name was Gillis, wasn't it?" The girl nodded wearily.

"Post-trader at Fort Bethune?" Again the rumpled head silently acquiesced.

"What is your name?"

"He always called me 'kid,'" she admitted unwillingly, "but I reckon if you have any further occasion for addressing me, you'd better say 'Miss Gillis.'"

"Heaven preserve me!" he exclaimed good naturedly, "but you are certainly laying it on thick, young lady! However, I believe, we might become good friends if we ever have sufficient luck to get out from this hole alive. Darn if I don't sort of cotton to you, little girl—you've got some sand."

For a brief space her truthful, angry eyes rested scornfully upon his face, her lips parted as though trembling with a sharp retort. Then she deliberately turned her back upon him without uttering a word.

For what may have been the first and only occasion in Mr. Hampton's audacious career, he realized his utter helplessness. This mere slip of a red-headed girl, this little, nameless wail of the frontier, condemned him so completely, and without waste of words, as to leave him weaponless.

Mr. Hampton was a thorough-going sport, and no quality was quite so apt to appeal to him as dead gameness. He glanced surreptitiously aside at her once more, but there was no sign of relenting in the averted face. He rested lower against the rock, his face upturned toward the sky, and thought.

It was no spirit of bravado that gave rise to his reckless speech of an hour previous. It was simply a spontaneous outpouring of his real nature, an unpremeditated expression of that supreme carelessness with which he re-ing her eyes again to his face. "I was so thirsty." Her low tone, endeavoring to be polite enough, contained no note of encouragement.

"Was Gillis your father?" the man questioned, determined to make her recognize his presence.

"I suppose so; I don't know."

"You don't know? Am I to understand you are actually uncertain, whether this man was your father or not?"

Hampton crept closer in beside the girl while the shadows deepened, and ventured to touch her hand. Perhaps the severe strain of their situation, the intense loneliness of that Indian-haunted twilight, had somewhat softened her resentment, for she made no effort now to repulse him.

"Kid," he said at last, "are you game for a try at getting out of this?"

She appeared to hesitate over her answer, and he could feel her tumultuous breathing. Some portion of her aversion had vanished.

"Come, Kid," he ventured, finally, yet with new assurance vibrating in his low voice, "this is surely a poor time and place for any indulgence in tantrums, and you've got more sense. I'm going to try to climb up the face of that cliff yonder—it's the only possible way out from here—and I propose to take you along with me."

She snatched her hand roughly away, yet remained facing him. "Who gave you any right to decide what I should do?"

The man clasped his fingers tightly about her slender arm, advancing his face until he could look squarely into hers. She read in the lines of that determined countenance a inflexible resolve which overmastered her.

"The right given by Almighty God to protect any one of your sex in peril," he replied. "Before dawn those savage fiends will be upon us. We are utterly helpless. There remains only one possible path for escape, and I believe I have discovered it. Now, my girl, you either climb those rocks with me, or I shall kill you where you are. It is that, or the Sioux torture. I have two shots left in this gun—one for you, the other for myself. The time has come for deciding which of these alternatives you prefer."

"If I select your bullet rather than the rocks, what then?"

"You will get it, but in that case you will die like a fool."

"You have believed me to be one, all this afternoon."

"Possibly," he admitted; "your words and actions certainly justified some such conclusion, but the opportunity has arrived for causing me to revise that suspicion."

"I don't care to have you revise it. Never Once Did the Man Loosen His Grasping Grip of His Companion. Mr. Bob Hampton. If I go, I shall hate you just the same."

Hampton's teeth clicked like those of an angry dog. "Hate—and be damned," he exclaimed roughly. "All I care about now is to drag you out of here alive."

"Well, if you put it that way," she said, "I'll go."

"Come on, then," he whispered, his fingers grasping her sleeve. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—A bill placing telephone and telegraph companies under the ad valorem system of taxation was made the subject of a sharp debate in the house Wednesday afternoon and the supporters of the measure lacked but five votes of the necessary two-thirds to secure a suspension of the rules, which would have insured its passage. Wednesday morning the house judiciary committee decided by a vote of 4 to 3, to indefinitely postpone further consideration of the anti-lobbying bill on the ground that the bill was not well drafted; that there was no need of it at this time and that it could be passed by the next legislature, if deemed advisable. A little later the committee on general taxation voted, 4 to 2, to postpone further consideration of the telephone and telegraph bill. Hearing of this action, the attorney general hastily found a copy of a bill introduced last session taxing car loading companies and fast freight lines and fixed-up a new bill to amend the title of the old one, so as to include telephone and telegraph companies. It was introduced by Representative Jerome, who immediately moved a suspension of the rules in order to send the bill to the committee of the whole. This served to open up the fireworks and an hour was spent in debating the merits of the proposition. Representatives Galbraith, Campbell and Simpson contended that the operations of the bill would be unfair to the small telephone companies throughout the state and also work to the disadvantage of the Postal Telegraph company, as against the Western Union. Representatives Jerome, Dust, Miller and Walters talked in favor of the bill, arguing that a principle was involved and that responsibility of taxing the various companies rested with the state tax commission and not with the legislature. As 90 members had answered roll call it required 60 to suspend the rules, the motion being defeated, 55 to 33.

Potato Crop is Large.

The continued wet weather held the frost back late enough in the season for the tubers, with the exception of the very latest ones planted, to ripen sufficiently to assure the farmers of a good quality. Farmers report the crop to be the best for several years back, not only in quality, but in quantity, due, they claim, to the wet weather in July and August. One farmer claims to have filled a half bushel measure from four ordinary hills in his field and feels confident the field will yield on the average from 250 to 300 bushels per acre. The heavy rains of the last few weeks instead of damaging the crop by rotting as is reported in other sections of the country and other states, seems to have been what was most-needed for the crop in northern Michigan, as the old farmer would say, "It has spoiled all my little potatoes—made them big." This year promises to be the best in many seasons for the tubers in this section of the country, both in quantity and quality.

Beet Sugar Making Begins.

Sugar making in the Saginaw valley factories has begun. The season promises well. Within the past few days weighing stations were opened at Brent Creek, Montrose, Arthur, Freeland, Lawndale, Graham, Birch Run and Hemlock, and all of the 16 stations in the vicinity of Saginaw are now in operation. Beets are coming in freely and indications point to about the same tonnage of beets as last year. Tests show the beets will run close to the coveted 16 per cent.

Celery Crop is Good.

The celery crop in the vicinity of Holland, Zeeland, Vriesland and Hudsonville is nearly double the yield of last year, while the quality is excellent. The daily shipments are so large that the express company is being pressed to the limit of its carrying capacity, and old baggage cars are being used to transport it to the Chicago market. The celery is grown largely by Hollanders, who seem to be adepts at the business.

Many Die by Violence.

The monthly report shows 2,382 deaths and 4,151 accidents in the state during September. Of the deaths, 751 were those of elderly people and 723 were children under one year. Violence caused the deaths of 224, consumption 141, and 158 died of cancer. Four deaths were from tetanus and one by lightning. The births increased 357 over last September.

To Talk Trust Curbing.

Gov. Warner has named the following delegates to attend the conference on combinations and trusts to be held at Chicago October 22-25, under the auspices of the National Civic Federation: George H. Barbour, W. D. McPherson, Ryerson Ritchie, Hal H. Smith, J. B. Howarth, John F. Hogan, F. B. Smith, Detroit; J. Dallas Dort, Flint; D. W. Tower, H. S. Jordan, William Judson, Grand Rapids; H. A. Frambach, Cheboygan; Carman N. Smith, Bay City; F. B. Woodward, Owosso; J. N. Burroughs, Marshall.

Exposes Chicago Sausage.

"Thank God, the time has come when a firm like Armour & Co. cannot continue to shove down the throats of the people of Michigan something that is in violation of the law." So said Deputy Attorney General Charles W. McGill in a fiery address before Judge Coolidge at St. Joseph. He was asking that the injunction imposed by this court against the state dairy and food department of the state restraining it from interfering with the business of Armour & Co. in Michigan be removed. "We object," said McGill, "to Chicago firms shipping Chicago water in here and selling it as sausage. That is what they are doing, and we are prepared to prove it. Our chemists have been at work on this matter for some time and I don't think that there are very many things about sausage which they cannot inform us about. They don't mention water in their complaint. They simply state that they are using cereals, rice, clean cereals, but they forget to admit that they are using the cereals for a sponge which holds up as high as 50 per cent. water in the sausage." The Chicago corporation replied, alleging that it is well within the law and asking that the injunction be made permanent. The case was taken under advisement by the court.

New Primary Bill.

The new primary bill prepared by the attorney general's department was discussed in caucus by the senate boxers and introduced by Senator Peck. Under the attorney general's bill the first Tuesday in September is fixed as general primary day except in cities which do not elect municipal officers in November, when the date is fixed for the second Tuesday prior to the municipal election. All county conventions must be held within 15 days after the primary on a day to be fixed by the state central committee. The state convention is to be held within 40 days after the primary. It is expressly provided that unless candidates for governor and lieutenant governor receive 40 per cent. of the enrolled vote at the primary election the nominations shall be made by the state convention. All voters are compelled to enroll under some party designation to be entitled to vote and various enrollment days are provided for. Where the part of any district has adopted the primary system it is not made compulsory to submit the proposition to the whole district, but it may be done on petition of 20 per cent. of the enrolled voters. Nominations of candidates for United States senator are to be made by primary vote under the terms of the bill.

Will Test the Auto Act.

The state law regulating the speed of automobiles is to be tested from Kalamazoo county. William Dutton, who was arrested several weeks ago charged with violating the law by driving his machine 23 miles an hour within the city limits, the law placing the limit at 15 miles, took an appeal from the recorder's court. Judge Mills, in the circuit court, contended that the law was unconstitutional in that the state has no right to legislate as to speed within the city limits. If the decision is against Dutton in the circuit court the case will go to the supreme court.

Why U. of M. is Famous.

In reply to the suit of the regents of the University of Michigan, who asked to have them restrained from selling copies of lectures delivered to the students of the law department, Edward Bros., stenographers, allege that they have permission of the professors who delivered them to circulate the lectures. They also say that their sale of the lectures has given the university a "world-wide reputation."

All Want Michigan Men.

One of the greatest demonstrations of the wisdom in the selection of university professors for Michigan is apparent. C. L. de Murat was no sooner appointed professor than he received the commission of consulting engineer to the state railways of Austria in connection with the electrification of the Arberg tunnel under the Tyrolean Alps.

Legislature Adjourns.

The Michigan legislature adjourned, leaving much important business unfinished. The telephone and telegraph taxation bill and the bill to prevent stock watering were both snowed under, but the primary election bill was passed.

Michigan Day at Jamestown.

Michigan day at the Jamestown exposition, October 29, promises to attract many prominent men. Gov. Warner has received many inquiries regarding the trip from mayors of cities, county officials and others, and it now seems likely that the excursion from Detroit on Saturday, October 26 will carry a large crowd of Michiganders to the fair. The fare from Detroit to Jamestown and return is $18.60 and the sleeper fare each way six dollars for each person. Tickets are good for 15 days.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., OCT. 25, '07.

Nother Argument for Examination of Private Banks.

It may not be amiss for the public to bear in mind the fact that at the last two regular sessions of the legislature the administration made a determined effort to have enacted a law providing for the supervision of so-called private banks by the State banking department. Just now this matter is of special interest for the reason that the banks at Richmond and Kalamazoo, both of which were practically owned and dominated by the interested party who was said to be active in the movement to defeat the proposed legislation mentioned have failed, leaving a long list of innocent victims in their wake. Is it now apparent to everyone why the heads of some institutions have been opposed to opening the books of their banks to representatives of the State? As a rule it is always a safe gamble that the man or the institution who most strenuously opposes supervision is the one who most needs it. The day is not far distant when every institution which receives deposits of the people's money will be subjected to rigid and constant supervision by representatives of the people. The last two failures noted above ought to hasten the day.

Railroad Commission Should Supervise.

Railroad Commissioner Glasgow is correct in his conclusion that the legislature made a mistake at its last regular session in eliminating from the railroad commission bill the provision for the supervision by the commission of all issues of stocks, bonds and notes by railroad companies. His argument is reasonable. It is perfectly apparent that if these issued were so supervised and controlled the confidence of the public in the securities issued would be greatly strengthened. Not only would the public be protected, but the confidence thus inspired would be of great advantage to the companies both in the readiness with which they could dispose of the securities and the price they could secure therefor.

Governor's Message Was Emphatic.

When Gov. Warner told certain legislators a few things in the special message which he sent to the legislature at the close of its special session last week, those obstructionists who had banded together and successfully defeated the will of the people, sought to get even by formally resolving that the message was scurrilous, mendacious and undignified. Most of the people of Michigan are able to read and not a few of them think for themselves. They will read that message with unprejudiced minds and their verdict will doubtless be in accordance with the facts as they find them. Gov. Warner has announced his entire willingness to abide by this verdict and we imagine he is wholly undisturbed by the yelling of the boxer element whose studied hostility to the people's interests he so emphatically referred.

Why not be honest about it and try to fix the new constitution to read like this: "The railroad commission shall be appointed by the Michigan railroad."

Presbyterian Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]

The Union Thanksgiving service this year will be held in the Methodist church on Thursday evening, Nov. 28. Rev. S. F. Dimmock will preach the sermon.

The pastor is obliged to be absent next Sunday and Chaplain Jones who so pleased our people when he preached to them a short ago, will preach in the morning.

Baptist Church Notes.

[By a Member.]

The pastor will preach Sunday morning on the subject "Temptation of Jesus." In the evening we will join in the union service in the Presbyterian church.

The "Martha Section" please be at Chadwick's hall tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon. Bring your work aprons and also contest money and receive credit for same.

Methodist Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]

The congregations were excellent last Sunday, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather of the morning. Rainy day church-goers have the right spirit.

M. J. Carley will speak next Sunday morning in this church on Temperance work. In the evening we will join in the union services in the Presbyterian church.

The weekly prayer meeting is proving to be one of the most attractive and helpful of all the services. The room was well filled last Thursday evening. "And yet There is Room."

Miss Lee's Sunday school class, "Willing Workers" will give a Halloween social at the home of Mrs. James Clark next Thursday evening, Oct. 31. A good time is expected.

We are cheered by the presence of so many young people at church. We do not believe that a true interpretation of the gospel has lost, or even will lose, its hold upon the life of our youth.

Do you keep on the lookout for the stranger or the occasional worshiper who appears at the services? Without forgetting our duty of greeting the regular attendants, let us not fail to make the stranger feel at home among us. Every member of the church should feel a share of this responsibility.

The number of our people who attend church twice on the Sabbath is apparently increasing. This is altogether right. Excepting the aged and infirm, there is, as a rule, no reason why people could not attend the two services as well as one, only. The demand of duty and the call of privilege both emphasize this.

PE-RU-NA RECEIVES PRAISE

For Relieving Such Symptoms as Debility, Backache and Headache.

THERE are a great many phases of women's ailments that require the assistance of the surgeon.

But by far the greater number of such cases are amenable to correct medicinal treatment.

No surgeon in the world has relieved so many women from the different phases of ailments peculiar to woman-kind as Dr. Hartman through the use of Peruna.

Here receive many letters from all parts of the country relating to subjects of vital interest to woman-kind.

Of the vast multitude of women Dr. Hartman cures annually, only a small per cent. of them consider it necessary to write to the Doctor at all.

Not one in a thousand of these fortunate women report their success. Of those who do write testimonials, only a very small per cent. are ever used in public print.

While it is not affirmed that Peruna will cure every case of this kind, it is certainly the part of wisdom for every woman so afflicted to give Peruna a fair trial. Her chances of relief are so many that any woman would be doing herself an injustice to neglect such an opportunity of relief.

Mrs. EMMA E. GILDNER.

Mrs. Emma E. Gildner, 729 Santate Ave., Denver, Col., Financial Secretary Germania Order der Haragari, writes:

"Peruna has been a great blessing to me. I suffered agonies with severe headaches and a weak back and could hardly drag myself around."

"A friend who was visiting me was taking Peruna for the same trouble and induced me to try it. I soon found that I was being helped and in less than three weeks I felt like a different woman and in four months I was well. Peruna certainly gave me strength."

"I consider it an ideal woman's remedy."

Very Precarious Condition.

Mrs. Lotie Ward, 617 Tracy Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "A few years ago my health was in a very precarious condition, the result of womb trouble and general debility. I suffered a great deal and was glad to try Peruna when it was recommended to me so highly. I found it very beneficial. In a short time the pains greatly decreased and in two months I was completely restored. I am pleased to endorse Peruna."

SYNOPSIS.

Burton H. Barnes, a wealthy American touring Corsica, rescues the young English Lieutenant, Edward Gerard Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Paolis, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves. Edna Anstruther, sister of the English lieutenant, the four fly from Ajaccio to Marseilles on board the French steamer Constantine. The vendetta pursues and as the quarter-are about to board the train for London at Marseilles, Marina is handed a mysterious note which causes her to collapse and necessitates a postponement of the journey. Barnes gets part of the mysterious note and receives letters which inform him that he is marked by the vendetta. He employs an American detective and plans to beat the vendetta at their own game.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

"How dare you send my child away when I had ordered her to bed?" remarks her mother, angrily.

"Bed? Oh, Maud is too young to be sent to bed."

"You think she is too young?" Lady Chartris' tone is appeased.

Two minutes after, Miss Chartris, eating bonbons in the seclusion of a magnificent confectioner's shop on the Cours Bezuance, remarks, suspiciously: "What are you doing all this for, Mr. Barnes of New York?"

"I've got a little information to get from you, Maud," says the American. "What kind of a looking man was he who gave you the communication for Mrs. Anstruther?"

"He was an Italian or foreigner or something of that kind with the manners of a waiter or a gentleman. He had a long, thin scar over his left eye-brow. I noticed that because his sleeve buttons had the same crest as Musso Danella's—by the by, how's dear Musso?"

"The deuce! Do you think Marina knew him?" The American's voice is hoarse with concern.

"How can I tell? Bridie didn't see him. I simply gave her the note. It knocked her stupid, and she almost fainted."

Then Maud's eyes opened bigger than ever, for Mr. Barnes says sternly: "Give me that note!"

"What makes you think I've got it?" Maud mutters, frightened.

"Give me the note you picked up from the floor of the depot when it fell from Marina's fainting hand, and tucked in that left glove of yours."

"Not unless you buy 'em for two boxes of marrons glacés!" asserted the infant, commercially.

"Done!" says the American, sharply.

Miss Chartris unbuttons her left glove and carefully extracts from it and passes him three pieces of paper.

"Now pay up!" she exclaims.

But after matching the three fragments of a letter and glancing hastily over them the face of the gentleman in front of her has grown so distressed and horrified that the candy she is eating slips from Maud's fingers and falls upon the floor of the shop.

CHAPTER II.

The Document in Barnes' Pocketbook.

"You have read this?" Barnes is speaking while he is deciphering as well as he can the mutilated note.

"How could I—in the carriage with you and after that under mamma's awful eyes?"

"Where's the fourth—the other piece?" asked Burton, savagely.

"I—I couldn't get the other—the people were stamping about so," stammers Maud. "She was tearing it up when she keeled over."

"Did Marina say anything?"

"Yes, she sort of gasped: 'Don't tell him! Then Edna grabbed her. But what's in it?' asks Maud, as Barnes utters again to gain the full meaning of the three-quarter epistle.

"Nothing that would interest a little girl."

"But it would interest me. Let me tell you. Then she'll let me up on me."

"Not a word to anyone!" says Burton, sternly.

"Two more boxes of marrons glacés."

"Here, buy them!" The American passed to Maud's eagerly outstretched hand a couple of 20-franc gold pieces.

"But—" Barnes' demeanor has become terrifying. "If you blab of this to Edna Anstruther, I'll tell your mother that you kept this note from her."

"Great Jones!" mutters Maud, shivering. Then she implores: "But if I keep dark, you'll beg me off for running away with you?"

"Yes, avoid your mother's eyes for two hours and I'll probably put something in Lady Chartris' head that will make her so happy she'll think you the nicest little chick out of its shell!"

The American courteously leads the Chartris infant to her hotel, but even as he bids the child adieu at the door, the clerk coming out, says: "Monsieur Barnes, a note for you at the office."

Burton has been compelled to register himself and party. He steps in, tearing open an envelope addressed in an unknown hand, reads what, stable-minded as he is, gives him a shock.

"This compels me to tell Edna. I must post him a little bit," he thinks rapidly, and acting with equal promptness, steps into the cafe. Not finding Anstruther there, Barnes walks up the stairs.

At the door of his wife's chamber, the English naval officer is pacing the corridor.

"Marina is much better. She has recovered her senses," says Edwin, elatedly. "But Edna believes it best for me not to see her immediately, and the French physician declares it is madness at present to think of the fatigue of a long railway journey for my wife."

"I had feared that," remarks Barnes.

"The important thing is now to guard her."

"Guard her?"

"Yes. It is now imperative that I tell you, Anstruther, something I would have kept from you."

Two minutes hurried conversation and the English sailor says in quarter-deck directness: "I understand. No one goes into that door except the doctor and Edna. If anyone prowls around here—lend me your revolver, Barnes. You always carry one."

"Yes, and you must now on do the same," answers the American as he passes the weapon to the Englishman. He steps to his own room, and gets another pistol from his valise, muttering grimly: "If I have to shoot, it will be to kill. Now, this makes it necessary to see Edna's Emory at once. Luckily I carried him."

Making his way hurriedly to the busy-Cours Bezuance, Barnes steps into the Hotel des Deux-Mondes, a well-known house of commercial entertainment. A moment's inquiry of the polite clerk and he steps into the correspondence room of the hotel.

After looking about a moment, he places his hand on the shoulder of a man engaged in writing.

"I saw you come in the door, Barnes," says the man, continuing his labor. "Glad to behold you. Your wire from Ajaccio came last night. I've got all the information for you. I missed you at the gare, and reckoned you'd gone on to Paris. Here's what you wanted, finished." He passes him the paper.

Barnes glances carefully about the room—which is deserted.

"There's no living thing here except flies," remarks Emory. "I took care of that before I began to write my

"I can't tell, but I'll find out for you," answers Edna, then his eyes begin to roll, as he mutters: "Where? Judging from the part of it I can read, that's a nasty document."

"Yes, though I don't think we've got the worst of it, it is as crafty as it is cruel. It was given to the bride not entirely recovered from the agitation of that horrible wedding night to so shock her delicate and already overtaxed nerves that we cannot move away from here. Some devil in Marseilles is trying to hold us here till these bloodhounds arrive from Corsica and have time to act. Here's another note in the same handwriting that puts me in," remarks Burton, moodily. "I received it at my hotel half an hour ago. It's the Corsican custom to give a delicate hint to the doomed." He reads:

"Have a care of yourself! This is thy warning. Remember death is on you and your spouse and your offspring, born and unborn."

"Pleasant reading for a man with his wedding day just ahead of him," snarls the New Yorker. "That's what makes me as vindictive as they are."

"Do you think with this in your hand," whispers Emory, impressively, "you should have a wedding day. I've heard such monstrous reports about them from Perrier, the French detective, who went over these once—"

"Not until this is finished," interrupts Burton, with a moan of disappointment.

The detective's comment makes even Barnes' regular pulse beat slower. "Well, what are your plans to meet this?" asks the American criminologist.

"My plans are very simple," says Barnes, tersely. "I'm going to get our women in a safe place and then—the hunted becomes the hunter!"

"But how are ye to get the women safe? Someone may be potting 'em while you're rounding up the others! How are ye going to fix that?"

STUCK TO HAM AND EGGS.

Why Drummer Made Breakfast Dish His Great Standby.

"It's funny how a man will get into the habit of eating something that he doesn't really like," remarked a drummer. "I have been traveling mostly through small towns for the last two months and have had to put up at some pretty sad hotels. The result is that I have fallen into the habit of eating ham and eggs and not much else, about twice a day and sometimes three times a day. I never used to eat eggs at home and I never cared much for any salt meats, but I've got the habit now and I order ham and eggs, even when I have an elaborate menu in front of me at a big hotel. The reason is simply that in small towns ham and eggs are about the only things you can afford to take a chance on. It is seldom that you get packed eggs, because fresh eggs are cheap enough in small places, and then, no matter how inexperienced the cook is, he can fry or boil you some eggs. Then they nearly always have good ham. Occasionally I add boiled potatoes to my small hotel menu, because they can hardly give you the worst of it on them, either. But ham and eggs are the standby."

Easy Shaving?

HOW TO COOK VEAL

SEVERAL Dainty Dishes Prepared for Two People.

Braised Cutlets—a la Creole That Will Prove Appetizing—A Chafing Dish to Dispose of Left-Overs.

Copyright, 1907, The Delicatore, New York.

Braised Cutlets—a la Creole—Melt a tablespoonful of lard in a frying-pan. Chop four small onions fine and let them fry for a moment in the hot lard. Then season four chops, or cutlets, with salt and pepper, dredge them with flour, and place them on top of the frying onions. When they have simmered for a few minutes, turn them; and, at the expiration of another two or three minutes, add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, a little chopped parsley, a threaded clove of garlic, a bay-leaf and some thyme. Turn the veal from time to time, until it has browned on both sides; then add a coffee-cupful of hot water, cover the pan, and let the water come to a boil quickly. At this point, remove it to the back of the stove, where it can be no more than simmer, and leave it for two hours. Remove the garlic and bay-leaf, garnish with freshly chopped parsley, and serve.

Perfection Stew—Much as many people object to the stew, or any fish that savors of it, the cook who is willing to take some pains in preparing the hands for her table can serve a veal stew in such a manner that the fact that it is a "stew" will never be suspected. To do this: she must first make a rich white sauce by using a heaping tablespoonful of butter to a cupful of good milk, or cream. When this sauce has come to a boil, she must take some thin slices of cold veal and lay them in it, adding half a dozen mushrooms, chopped, and a little minced parsley. Simmer until the meat has become heated through, when it is ready for the table.

Veal in Chafing Dish—The appearance of a chafing dish at supper, or even at luncheon, often adds materially to the delights of the repast, so if you have a chafing dish that can be called into service, try it some day when you want to dispose of some left-overs from the roast of veal. To do this, melt some butter in the pan, and fry some chopped onions in it until they have browned nicely; then add a cupful of veal gravy, or white stock, and lay the slices of veal in it. Season with salt, pepper, and mushroom catsup, and, at the end of two or three minutes, add a well-beaten egg, and serve immediately.

English Veal Cake—When so much of the roast has been used that it is no longer possible to get slices, there are still several methods by which it can be prepared most appetizingly. Purchase a few slices of boiled ham and two eggs, and you can serve one of the famous English veal cakes. Here is the recipe: Take about a pound of cold roast veal, remove all fat, etc., and chop it into small pieces. Grease a plain mold and put into it alternate layers of chopped veal, hard-boiled eggs, and boiled ham in slices, with chopped parsley and salt and pepper between each layer, until the mold is nearly full. Next, take some good stock and flavor it with tarragon, mace and pepper to taste. Pour this over the other ingredients until the mold is filled almost to the brim. Bake it for half an hour, but do not serve it until it has become so cold that it can be sliced neatly. Served with a garnish of crisp watercress, these slices of veal-cake make a most acceptable hot-weather luncheon dish.

Russian Croquettes—Another minced-veal dish that will appeal attractively to lovers of nice eating is known as "Russian croquettes." To make them, mince a pound of cold veal, and season it with pepper, salt, a little nutmeg and half a teaspoonful of grated lemon peel, and moisten with a sauce made as follows: Heat a coffee-cupful of milk to the boiling point; then, add a slice of onion, a stalk of celery, chopped, a bay-leaf, half a dozen peppercorns, and parsley, thyme and mace. Do not let the mixture actually boil, but keep it simmering steadily for fully 15 minutes. Then strain, season to taste with salt and pepper, and thicken with a blend of flour and butter. While this sauce is being prepared, roll some puff paste very thin, and, when the sauce and meat have been combined, shape a tablespoonful of the mixture into the shape of a croquette, and roll it up in a strip of the puff paste, pressing the ends together closely. Have some lard fat ready and fry the croquettes brown. Drain carefully, and serve with mustard, cress, or sorrel and bits of lemon. They must not be put on a cold platter nor kept standing, because, to be really delectable, croquettes should be served very hot.

Quaintest of Wraps.

The quaintest of wraps to be introduced this season is the shawl or chiffon, thin silk or crepe de chine edged with tiny flounces headed with baby velvet ribbon and draped with the same ribbon. They are drawn down the middle of the back with the ribbon.

For Embroidery Edges.

Many garments are spoiled by having the embroidered edge split and frayed by a careless laundress. The garment can be made to last twice as long and many dollars saved by stitching around the scallops twice. This makes a strong, firm edge and does not detract from its appearance.

FIVE MONTHS IN HOSPITAL.

Discharged Because Doctors Could Not Cure.

Levi P. Brockway, 8, Second Ave., Anoka, Minn., says: "After lying for five months in a hospital I was discharged as incurable, and given only six months to live. My heart was affected, I had smothering spells, and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

A GOLDEN BALL.

British Soldiers Played the National Game With It.

Probably no game of ball, by professional or college team, was ever watched with such inner interest but with such outward indifference as one described in Gertrude Vanderbilt's "Social History of Flatbush." It happened in revolutionary times, when the British soldiers were stationed on Long Island. The inhabitants had hidden their valuables in all possible places. One lady concealed some gold coins in a ball-shaped cushion of the kind worn by the Dutch housewife, suspended at her side.

She was sitting sewing one day when a party of British soldiers entered the room. A young officer, spying what to him was a novelty, cut with his sword the ribbon by which the cushion was hung and began a game of ball.

Soon the rest of the company joined the sport. Boisterously, from hand to hand, the ball was batted to and fro. It was roughly snatched and tossed, and sometimes it fell into the ashes of the fireplace, and barely escaped conflagration. Now and again a soldier would catch it on the tip of his sword and send it spinning on with a rent in its side.

Every moment threatened to reveal the precious contents. To show the least anxiety was to betray the secret, and the owner was forced to sit unmoved, apparently intent on her work, and to see her fortune flying through the air, at the mercy of the enemy. At last the cushion, torn and battered, but still guarding its treasure, was returned to its mistress, and the intruders, tired of their play, left the house.

—Youth's Companion.

A Whistler Criticism.

The late James McNeil Whistler was standing bareheaded in a hat shop, the clerk having taken his hat to another part of the shop for companion. A man rushed in with his hat in his hand and supposing Whistler to be a clerk angrily confronted him.

"See here," he said, "This hat doesn't fit."

Whistler eyed the stranger from head to foot and then drawled out: "Well, neither does your coat. What's more, if you'll pardon my saying so, I'll be hanged if I care much for the color of your trousers."

WHEN MILESTONES CHEER.

They Always Gladden the Heart of the Pedestrian.

In a walking trip a milestone along the way is the most companionable fellow in the world; your spirits rise as you near him as though you were about to greet a human friend, and they keep, almost consistently on his high level till his brother a mile distant advances to meet you.

And when you overlook one of these friendly company because of an encroaching bank or screening boughs, says the Travel Magazine, his neighbor further on comes to you doubly welcome. At the latter end of this passage in the journey your spirits flag a trifle as though oppressed by a sense of desertion. You may even scowl at the overhanging bank which is more than a party to this concealment.

Those worthy persons who attend to the roads should see to it that every milestone within their province stands out frankly from its leafy background. Observance of this, however, would rob the wayfarer of that leap of the heart which is his when the stone tells the story of two miles done rather than one. For however much the landscape and the minute world at his feet may claim the footfarer's admiration he is still keenly alive to the virtue of decent distances covered in his day's journey.

IN LIFE'S BRIEF SPAN.

Experiences, Joys and Sorrows of the Human Existence.

The loves and friendships of individuals partake of the frail character of human life, and are brief and uncertain. The experience of a human life may be shortly summed up: A little loving and a good deal of sorrow; some bright hopes and many bitter disappointments; some gorgeous Thursdays when the skies are bright and the heavens blue, when Providence, bending over us in blessings, glads the heart almost to madness; some dismal Fridays, when the smoke of torment clouds the mind and undying sorrows gnaw upon the heart; some high ambitions and many Waterloo defeats, until the heart becomes like a charnel house filled with dead affections, embalmed in holy but sorrowful memories; and then the chord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the individual life—a cloud, a vapor, passes away.—Matthew Hale Carpenter.

Acting Like a Client.

Young Lawyer—Is it a creditor or a client who is waiting to see me? Clerk—It must be a client, sir, I think, as he was just putting your silver inkstand in his pocket as I came in. —Simplicissimus.

Example Not Alluring.

Dolly—No, I won't wash my face. I just hate to wash my face! Grandma—Naughty, naughty! When I was a little girl I always washed my face. Dolly—Yes, sir, now look at it! —Cleveland Leader.

For Old Love Letters.

Heart-shaped sofa cushions have been stuffed with old love letters. The best way to preserve these fond epistles is to light them one by one with a candle and hold fast to them in your memory.

Turn from Grace to Rage.

Many French vineyards are likely to be turned into rose gardens. The perfume factories pay $600 per kilogramme for pure essence of roses and the demand is greater than the supply.

Why?

"Papa," said little Jamie, "why does birdies go lookin' for worms to eat when they can lay themselves an egg and eat that? Eggs is nicerer than worms."

Lightning Not Zigzag.

Instantaneous photography has revealed the fact that the former method of representing lightning as a fiery zigzag was entirely false.

The Sinful Human Heart.

A clergyman was addressing a youthful class in Sunday school. To illustrate the idea of regulating the sinful human heart he took out his watch and held it up that all might see it.

"See this watch," he said. "Just imagine that it does not keep good time—that it goes all ways but the right way. What ought I to do with it?"

Instantly a little boy held up his hand. "I know," he shouted. "Sell it to a friend."

Ugly Appendages.

"Hasn't Woldy got his coat-of-arms yet? Why, he told me he was going to look up his ancestry the first chance he got and—"

"Well, I believe he got a chance to look up his family tree, but he saw some things hanging to the branches that discouraged further research." —Catholic Standard and Times.

ODD GERMAN LAWS

SOME THINGS YOU CAN'T DO IN THE FATHERLAND.

Fine of Five Dollars for Rebuking a Telephone Girl—A Kiss in the Streets of Russia Costs Three Dollars.

There are places in Germany where you must be very careful what you wear. In Saxony you are liable to get run in as a socialist if you don a red tie, and at Etschendorf a visitor received a visit and reprimand from the local police because he wrote them a letter in red ink.

Emis has put its foot down about long trains. Ladies are forbidden to wear them while taking the waters or attending the promenade concerts. The notice points out the danger of causing dust to fly where there are so many invalids. There is a grain of comfort for the smart woman visitor at the end of the notice, in the shape of an order that men shall not smoke during the hours when the invalids are taking their walks.

The town council of Herrnskreichen goes further than that of Ebs. Its law runs: "The dragging of ladies' dresses is forbidden on pain of a fine of 20 crowns." A similar enactment has recently come into force at Nordhausen. A fine of two dollars is the penalty for the first offense, $2.50 for the second, and a day's imprisonment for the third.

Germany, take it all around, is more full of ridiculous and tiresome rules and regulations than any other country on earth. Paragraph 63 of the municipal regulations governing butchery at Glessen, in Hesse, was as follows: "Interments are only permitted after death has taken place. In all other cases a certificate signed by the mayor is required." Moral: Don't incur the enmity of the mayor of Glessen or you may find yourself underground before you are ready.

Seriously speaking, there is one thing which the visitor to Germany should be most careful about; not to insult any government official. The German idea of insult is different from ours. A tourist who, after long delay at a Karlsruhe telephone, cried: "Are you asleep, miss?" was arrested and fined five dollars for "an unjustifiable insult."

In Hamburg the street car regulations are no dead letter. When the car is full a sign "Bessetzt" is hung out, meaning "occupied." Supposing a lady, then, gets in and a man gets up and offers her his seat, he, unfortunately, is promptly ejected by the conductor.

In Russia kisses given in public, whether in the street or a restaurant, or even at the open window of a private house, are actionable. A kiss in the open streets costs the offender three dollars. It is a sober fact that in Russia a man may not kiss his wife in public.

France has a number of laws which strikes the stranger as odd. It is, for instance, illegal to take water from the sea. You see, you might be going to make salt, which is a government monopoly. Another enactment, not a bad one in its way, but which would be very likely to be infringed by American families traveling with children, is to the effect that no solid food may be given to babies under one year old. Also nurses may not use for their charges any sort of feeding bottle with a rubber tube. The idea is that rubber tubes harbor poisonous impurities.

Nothing is more apt to raise the suspicion of the foreign official than the ordinary camera. In many places, such as Metz and Strasburg, it is as much as your liberty is worth to be seen snapping at least anywhere near the fortifications. In Pompeii you must pay for each photo you take; in Morocco the camera is a source of danger to its owner, and at Constantinople it is forbidden to carry any photographic apparatus anywhere near the sultan's palace. —Baltimore News.

Cattle Industry in Mexico.

The cattle industry of the state of Tamiapas is coming to the front. One stockman and commission man alone, Bartolo Rodriguez, shipped 48,000 head last year to Cuba and Yucatan, which amounted to $1,500,000. He has a fine ranch near the City of Tampico called Monte Alto, with 300 head of cows and bulls, costing about $500 a head, imported from the United States and Switzerland. Careful estimate made by the shippers to the north of Tampico places the total number of cattle and horses in that area at 2,000,000. —Mexican Herald.

Not an Ad.

Enrico Toselli, the Italian pianist, who was married in London to Countess Montignoso, the divorced wife of the crown prince of Saxony, now King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, has refused an offer made him by a Hamburg impresario to give five concerts for $2,400, saying he had not married his wife to use her as an advertisement.

Wagner as a Curative Agent.

Vernon-Lee has told somewhere the story of the marvelous effects of Wagner on a headache; it may be proved any night at the Queen's Hall. One does, after a time, succumb to what is a kind of hypnotism; the sounds seem almost to clear the air, or at least to fill one into a kind of dream in which only the sense of hearing exists.

MIX THIS YOURSELF

RECIPE FOR SIMPLE HOME-MADE KIDNEY CURE.

Inexpensive Mixture of Harmless Vegetable Ingredients Said to Overcome Kidney and Bladder Trouble Promptly.

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on kidney diseases, who makes the statement in a New York daily newspaper, that it will relieve almost any case of kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the recipe; try it: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

A well-known physician is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire kidney and urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure the Rheumatism by forcing the kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid and foul, decomposed waste matter, which cause the afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

NO STAIN ON HIS RECORD.

That's Where the Driver Had the Best of the Preacher.

A New York clergyman, who often spends his vacation in fishing the streams of the Adirondacks, was on one trip adopted by a handsome setter dog, which insisted on following him from camp to camp, as he moved along the stream.

One day he met a party of men working upstream with a native guide. The guide immediately recognized the dog as his own property.

"Trying to steal my setter, are you?" he shouted at the clergyman. "I'll have you to jail for this! There's a law in the woods just as big as you have in the city."

The clergyman endeavored to explain that he was an unwilling companion of the dog, which had refused to be driven away, but to little effect until he added a two-dollar bill to his arguments.

"It's queer what strange things happen to a man up here," he said to the stage-driver who later carried him away from the woods. "That is the first time I was ever accused of stealing a dog."

"Yes, sir," replied the driver, sympathetically, and added, after a moment's pause, "For myself, sir, I have never been accused of stealing anything." —Youth's Companion.

Saw It Come Out of a Cow.

A little city boy and his sister Dorothy were taken to the country for the first time.

The two children were happy as the day was long. In the late afternoon they watched the cows come home, heard with delight the tinkling cowbells, and the little boy even went to the barns to see the milking done.

At supper, just as Dorothy was lifting her glass to her rosy lips, the boy cried out: "Oh, Dotty, don't! You mustn't drink that milk. It's not fit to drink. It came out of a cow; I saw it."

Not to Be Wasted.

Ben Cary had near his house a swamp, which was a breeding place for herds of man-eating mosquitoes. Some enterprising neighbors, who learned of the crude oil treatment, went to Ben and tried to persuade him to exterminate 'em.

"Exterminate 'em?" said Ben. "Not much. Not much. Why, Miss Cary, I just paid $32 for screening the side piazza that she's been pestering me about for years. How we goin' to get any good of it, if we kill off the skeeters?" —Youth's Companion.

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated with Caffeine.

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not it has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years has had severe stomach trouble. "I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to give relief. Was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured on my stomach."

"I finally concluded that coffee was the cause of my trouble and stopped using it. I tried tea in its place and then milk, but neither agreed with me; then I commenced using Postum, and it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste."

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia. I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it, I appreciate Postum. 'There's a Reason.' Read 'The Road to Wellville' in pkgs.

DID NOT WANT TO BUY.

The Great Musician Had No Use for His Production.

A great tenor had been singing for some hours into a phonograph. "The phonograph," he said, "is a wonderful thing. It almost realizes the wish of the Scottish poet, the wish that we might see ourselves as others see us. We can now, at least, hear ourselves, a thing impossible before. The phonograph teaches us many valuable lessons. When I was in the army, before I realized the capabilities of my voice, I played the flute. A phonograph salesman brought a phonograph to my quarters and tried to sell it to me on the installment plan. I was undecided. Finally the man took out a blank cylinder.

"See," he said, rather reluctantly. "There is a blank cylinder. You may make a record on it, then we will run it off and you shall hear yourself. It's a costly favor I am doing you, but it will show you what a fine instrument this is."

"I was delighted."

"I'll get my flute," I said. "I'll play a flute solo."

"Well, I played my best into the machine. It seemed to me that I had never combined before such feeling with such accuracy. I was more than pleased with myself. Then the man put in the cylinder, and the music began to issue forth. I frowned.

"Is that me?" I said.

"Yes, sir," said the man.

"Really me, just as I played?"

"Precisely, sir, precisely. And now," said he, "do you want to buy the phonograph?"

"No," said I; "I want to sell the flute."

SKIN SORE EIGHT YEARS.

Spent $300 on Doctors and Remedies but Got No Relief—Cuticura Cures in a Week.

"Upon the limbs and between the toes my skin was rough and sore, and also sore under the arms, and I had to stay at home several times because of this affliction. Up to a week or so ago I had tried many other remedies and several doctors, and spent about three hundred dollars, without any success, but this is to-day the seventh day that I have been using the Cuticura Remedies (costing a dollar and a half), which have cured me completely, so that I can again attend to my business. I went to work again to-night. I had been suffering for eight years and have now been cured by the Cuticura Remedies within a week. Fritz Hirschclaff, 24 Columbus Ave., New York, N. Y., March 29 and April 6, 1906."

Something New in Tablecloths.

She had come into the store to buy tablecloths and she stated in the beginning that she wanted something "new."

The salesman was patient and showed her everything in stock, but nothing suited.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, fustily, "haven't you anything different?"

The clerk brought out one of the discarded tablecloths that he had put back on the shelf, and said with an air of interest:

"Here is one of the very newest designs, madam. You see, the center is in the middle and the border runs right around the edge."

"Why, yes! Let me have that one," she said eagerly.

Hospital Story-Telling.

It is curious that philanthropists in search of a novel means of doing good do not engage rewriters and story-tellers to visit hospitals and amuse the patients. A rich man in New York engaged Marshall P. Wilder, the diminutive entertainer, who has given pleasure in nearly every city, to visit regularly certain hospitals in New York. Mr. Wilder was welcomed enthusiastically by the convalescent patients, and his merry stories did them good.

NEW YORK—So agreeable is the sense of being a real live New York clubman that when he sits down to his bird and bottle in any first-class restaurant he feels that he is enhancing the reputation of the house, quietly but effectively, by his presence.

And if, above all other persons, the waiter who serves him were to take the opposite seat and open a general conversation as one clubman to another, it is fair to assume that the clubman would repel the other's advances with the terse but forcible sentence: "Get the manager."

Yet nearly all the "big" waiters in New York are enrolled clubmen, and the proof of it is the new Waiters' Club house that is being fitted out on West forty-fourth street. The new foundation is right in the heart of the city's most exclusive club district.

Outwardly it is a four-story brownstone house, without any marks to distinguish it from the home of any ordinary affluent citizen. Inwardly it is being fitted with thick carpets, chandeliers, pictures, leather lounges, brass beds and a bar and a grill, and actually it is costing the New York branch of the International Geneva Association $5,000 a year for the single item of rent.

One of the special things the club does is to afford first-class New York hotels and restaurants an opportunity of securing house help trained and grained in the best Geneva traditions.

GOING TO NIGHT COLLEGE ON THE PART of New York men and women is one of the latest developments of this nocturnal city, which wants night to be just like day, and therefore has its all-night banks, all-night stores, and restaurants, all-night dentists and barber shops, and practically everything but an all-night sleep. The lecturer on "seeing-things-at-night" wagon can point to a rather novel sight in Washington square—a massive college building with the windows of its class room brilliantly lighted. But this night college is not to be classed with the other night features of New York. Its students are not butterflies so fond of pleasure that they have no time to sleep before 11 o'clock.

The night college is called the Washington square division of the collegiate division of the New York University. The majority of the students are school teachers and professional men who desire to complete a college education, but are unable to go by day. School teachers are in the majority in the college, but there are lawyers and men in many lines of business who wish to get the benefit of a college training, even men in factories and motorhomes or engineers who wish to rise, and as a preliminary seek to gain the many rungs in the ladder which education will give.

A large group of students is composed of well-to-do married women who live in the neighborhood of Washington square, Stuyvesant square or Gramercy Park, who come to study in the literature or language courses. There is a small contingent of Japanese in the night college, including a young woman, a graduate of the normal school at Nagasaki, Japan, who last year took courses in English philosophy and sociology.

One of the special things the club does is to afford first-class New York hotels and restaurants an opportunity of securing house help trained and grained in the best Geneva traditions.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Northville Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lame ness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy, or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Northville testimony:

L. W. Hutton, living on Main street, Northville, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and can give them my hearty endorsement. A year or two ago I was troubled with pains across my back and loins, sometimes severe and causing me great annoyance. I was told it was caused by the kidneys being disordered but none of the remedies I used helped or cured me. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and got them at Muddock Bros. drug store. They relieved me almost immediately. I was soon entirely well and have not been bothered in the same way since. Mrs. Hutton also used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and the result was just as satisfactory as in my case. I can heartily endorse the claims made for your reliable remedy."

Land Only Counted.

Land was the only species of property which, in the old time, carried any respectability with it. Money alone, apart from some tenure of land, not only did not make the possessor great and respectable, but actually made him at once the object of plunder and hatred. A Singular Case.

A very singular case has been made by an ingenious 35-year-old workman. It consists of a man who leaves hinged like an accordion. The number of the leaves is 12. The man is 12 feet long. The fan times out starts at six o'clock and closes up for 12 hours, when it starts all over again. The half-hour is indicated by the leaf of the fan being only half closed. Montreal Standard.

PISO'S

Conquer That Cough

Don't go around with a mortgage on your chest. Every day that you let it remain, the tighter its grip becomes. The cough becomes more violent and exhausting. The delicate bronchial passages get inflamed under the continual backing; the lungs become lacerated under the constantly recurring paroxysms.

With PISO'S Cure

there is a soothing and healing effect upon the entire respiratory mucous membrane. It has stood the test for nearly half a century as the one reliable remedy for consumption, colds and all chest affections. It goes right to the origin of the trouble, removes the cause and aids nature in restoring beautiful conditions. PISO'S Cure is absolutely free from objectionable ingredients. Its perfect safety, pleasant taste and unequalled efficacy make it the ideal remedy for man, woman and child. If you have a cough drive it out today.
