WOULD RUN THIRD TIME

GOVERNOR WARNER WILL GO
BEFORE PEOPLE AGAIN.

Will Leave it to Them, Not to Political Machine.

After careful and systematic canvass of Michigan, Governor Warner has found that a very large majority of the people favor his making the run for the nomination for the third term as governor.

Just before leaving for the Jamestown exposition Saturday, Gov. Fred M. Warner, in an interview with the Associated Press, announced positively for the first time that he will be a candidate for a third term as governor of Michigan. His platform, he said, would be the several messages he sent to the legislature during the recent special session.

"It is months too early to begin the campaign for next year's primary nomination," said the governor. "At the proper time, however, I will be a candidate. Nothing has entered into this decision more than the position taken by the sixteen senators in opposition to legislation demanded by the people.

"I want the people of Michigan to have an opportunity to pass upon the differences between the opposition senators and myself in all the matters at issue. I have no doubt of the verdict of the people, notwithstanding the fact that I am reliably informed that the sixteen senators and their two outside leaders are making a determined effort to induce two or more new candidates to enter the race in the hope of so dividing the vote as to throw the nomination into a delegate convention. It is known that their advances have been rejected by some gentlemen and it is my opinion that even if they succeed in luring others into the race they will not succeed in accomplishing their object.

"While I may call attention to other matters and issues later, I think my several messages to the legislature during the recent special session constitute all the platform necessary. I stand firmly by every statement in those messages."

"Instead of not giving my last message to the legislature full publicity, which seems to have been the desire of the sixteen senators when they expressed the hope that after mature reflection I would withdraw I would very much prefer to have every voter in Michigan have before him for careful consideration copies of both the message and of the resolution which the sixteen senators adopted after hearing the message read. In these resolutions they dodge all reference to the contents of the message and simply indulge in vituperation, thus admitting the soundness of the fit of the coat which they promptly proceeded to put on. They did not even feebly attempt to deny the truthfulness of any statement I made."

Buckley--Dickerson.

Married, Saturday afternoon, Oct. 26, in Detroit, Miss May Dickerson of Northville and Mr. Byron Buckley of Detroit. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Dickerson of this. Mr. and Mrs. Buckley will reside in Detroit.

Hit Grand Rapids.

"It is intolerable that obstinate legislative obstructionists, in the face of the united protest of the Grand Rapids delegation, should be thus permitted to force upon the city the old discredited caucus convention system."—Grand Rapids Herald.

Methodist Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]

The Epworth League will meet Sunday evening at 8:00 o'clock. Let us have a large attendance.

Owing to the Sunday school institute, prayer meeting was not held this week. Don't miss the prayer meeting next week.

The usual services will be held next Sunday, morning and evening. The pastor will preach at both services. Morning subject, "Life's Music;" evening, "Why go to church?" You are cordially invited to these services.

The pastor extends a hearty invitation to the young people to join his class in the Sunday school. Interest and enthusiasm promises to mark the work of this class, and we invite all who are eligible to share this with us.

The Ladies' Aid society will serve a chicken pie supper Friday of next week at the church. An excellent menu will be provided. Come and bring the family. Supper 25 cents. No tips expected. Remember the date, Friday, Nov. 8.

Many of our people have been prompt in returning their subscription cards. It is requested that all try to report their subscriptions not later than next Sunday. This can be done by handing the cards to the treasurer at church, or, better still, by mailing them to him before Sunday.

The Berean Bible class will conduct a sale of baked goods Saturday at Stanley's drug store. You will be likely to find what you want in the choice line of goods the class will have on sale. This class with commendable enterprise proposes to raise funds for certain additions to the equipment of the church, and we bespeak for them the sort of sympathy that will tell.

GEORGE B. YERKES

A well known and popular Detroit attorney and a former Northville boy, who has just been elected prosecuting attorney for Wayne county, to fill the unexpired term caused by the death of Prosecutor Robinson.

The circuit judges are to be congratulated upon their wise selection of a prosecutor and the people are to be congratulated upon the wisdom shown by the circuit judges. In all probability no other selection could have given such universal satisfaction.

Seeley--Engles.

The marriage of Mr. Edward Seeley of Walled Lake and Miss Marie Engles of Wayne took place Tuesday at the home of and by the Rev. Mr. Rider of Pontiac. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Seeley of Walled Lake and is well known throughout Oakland and Wayne counties. After a short wedding trip they will reside with the groom's parents until spring. A reception will be tendered the bridal couple at the home of the groom's parents next Wednesday evening.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

[By the Pastor.]

Services as usual Sunday morning and evening.

Baptist Church Notes.

[By a Member.]

The B. Y. P. U. will meet with Mrs. McClellan next Wednesday evening. All members are requested to be present.

The chicken pie supper given by the Marthas Saturday evening was quite well patronized notwithstanding the inclement weather.

Services Sunday morning and evening as usual. Morning subject, "Christ's Message of Preparation to the Disciples." In the evening a continuation of the morning subject.

The ladies of the church will hold a business meeting in the church parlors Saturday at 2:00 p. m. and at 3:00 o'clock the Marthas and Marys will make the final reports of their contest.

The Home Missionary society will meet in the church next Thursday, Nov. 7. Miss Skoleto, missionary among the French in Detroit, and Mrs. Dorrañce, field worker, will be present. In the evening Mrs. Dorrañce will give a very interesting talk about her work. Ladies will be sure to bring tasted work for Miss Skoleto's school and also cup of jellys. Everybody invited.

MUST FILE CERTIFICATE

PERSONS DOING BUSINESS UN-DER ASSUMED NAME.

Applies Where Firm is not Incorporated.

A law passed by the last legislature makes it compulsory for people doing business under any name otherwise than the names of individuals, like Johnson & Clark or Peter Smith, must file a certificate with the county clerk giving names of all individuals constituting the firm. In the opinion of City Attorney Yerkes it would apply for instance to John Smith & Co., The Record Printery, Eureka Meat Market, United Tea Co., Johnson Bros. and the like, but would not apply to Clark & Baldwin or John Jones or any incorporated firm.

The blanks are furnished by the county clerk and the fee for filing is 25 cents. The law goes into effect this week and a $25 fine is provided.

School Notes.

[By a Pupil.]

The First grade is studying about Halloween.

The Seventh grade is starting an Honor Roll.

The Third grade is learning a Brownie song.

RULES OF AUTOGRAPH SHARKS.

Ingenious Methods Used to Elicit Letters from Noted Men.

No one is better posted in rules to which collectors resort in order to secure autographs from living celebrities than a certain London dealer. There is not enough profit in their sale to encourage any number of people in this country to secure autographs for the purpose of disposing of them to the dealer, but writing to celebrities and selling their replies to the dealer in question is a means of livelihood to no small number.

No one perhaps has outwitted in cleverness the methods of Gen. Cist, whose collection, sold after his death, brought one of the highest prices of any sale in the world. Cist was a skillful penman and a born letter writer. He wrote in such a way that he rarely failed to elicit lengthy and interesting replies. He would write to a statesman saying that a party had applied to him for employment and given the statesman as reference "Was So and So ever in your employ as private secretary?" he would write, "Cist was a recluse, a hermit. He was estranged from his family. His last days were passed in America in a room littered with books and papers of rarest value, secured through the most ingenious ruses."

The cleverest modern autograph collector whose methods became known to dealers was the late Benjamin Austin, a resident of the United States. He organized a literary society in his imagination, to which he elected as honorary members all the distinguished men and women of Europe and America. When notified of their election they naturally replied, thanking him for the honor conferred. In this way he secured much excellent material. Doubtless he made the collection with a view to its subsequent monetary value. After his death his widow sold it, but values had decreased and it did not bring anything near the price that might reasonably have been expected.

BEARS EXPECT HARD WINTER.

Besides, Trees Are Putting on Extra Thick Bark.

Jim Tompkins, the Mt. Hood woodsman whose prediction last fall of a hard winter was verified, is again out with a pronouncement to the effect that the coming winter will discount that of last year and will in effect be a "peeler."

Mr. Tompkins again bases his prediction on the habits of the bears, which he states are more numerous in the lower valley than last year and are foraging almost in the dooryards of ranchers to fatten up for a "powerful spell of killing" weather.

"Them snowstorms we had last winter," says Mr. Tompkins, "won't be a marker to what we'll fetch this winter. Every sign known to nature is hollerin' it out loud, and the bears comin' in close to town is a sure sign. 'Another is the bark on the trees. Whenever it gets as thick as it is now look out. Git plenty of wood, friends,' concluded the woodsman, 'and git it quick, fer you'll have use for it mighty sudden.'—Portland Oregonian.

Humanity.

It is certain that humanity is the particular characteristic of a great mind; little vicious minds are full of anger and revenge and are incapable of feeling the exalted pleasure of forgiving their enemies and of bestowing marks of favor and generosity upon those of whom they have gotten the better.—Lord Chesterfield.

NEWS OF A WEEK TOLD IN BRIEF

MOST IMPORTANT EVENTS GATHERED FROM ALL POINTS OF THE GLOBE.

GIVEN IN ITEMIZED FORM

Notable Happenings Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man—Summary of the Latest Home and Foreign Notes.

The financial crisis in New York was declared to be safely passed. An association of trust companies analogous to a clearing house was formed; secretary of the treasury directed the deposit in New York banks of $25,000,000 of government fund; and John D. Rockefeller said he would lend the banks large sums.

Three minor banks closed in New York but the general financial situation was vastly improved. A pool headed by J. P. Morgan lent millions of dollars in the stock exchange, thereby preventing a ruinous sacrifice of securities. The Trust Company of America successfully withstood an all day run.

Six minor banking institutions in New York closed their doors, but all were believed to be solvent and the general financial condition was improved. The Morgan pool lent $15,000,000 in the stock exchange and stocks moved up. The Union Trust company of Providence, R. I., suspended and there was a run on all the banks of Pawtucket, R. I.

In order to prevent the draining of their supplies of currency the banks of many cities followed the example of New York and Chicago and adopted the clearing house loan certificate system and made the withdrawal of savings deposits subject to the legal notice.

The principal events in the financial district of New York indicated that the worst of the crisis was over and that conditions were settling down to normal. There were no further bank suspensions and reports were favorable for the resumption of most of the banks which closed temporarily. The engagement of $18,750,000 in gold from Europe for importation to New York was followed by the sensational announcement of sales of American copper abroad, which will further increase the tide of foreign money to this country to an aggregate of over $25,000,000.

City Marshal George Adams, of Boston, Ill., shot and killed John Malone, former city marshal and well known as a gun fighter, after Malone had threatened the marshal's life.

The president issued an executive order creating four new bird and animal reserves on the Pacific coast, one the Three-Arch Rock reservation in Oregon; and the other three in Washington.

John Barrett, news editor of the San Francisco Examiner, died of apoplexy on the street.

William Loeb, private secretary of President Roosevelt, who with Senator Carter and others went hunting near Cooke City, Mont., ended his trip after having killed a bear, two mountain sheep and a deer.

Attorney General Ellis, of Ohio, sent notices to 36 steam and street railway companies in Ohio, whose franchises are now being exercised by holding companies, claiming for the state $1,000,000 back taxes.

Gen. Maximoffsky, director of the department of prisons of the ministry of the interior of Russia, was shot and killed by a woman who admitted she was an emissary of the social revolutionists.

Cannibalism has been resorted to by the starving Eskimos in the Ungava district and on the shores of Hudson strait, according to Rev. Mr. Stewart, an Anglican missionary to the Ungava bay Eskimos.

M. Michelsen, the Norwegian premier, resigned on account of ill health, which led to the resignation of the ministers of public worship and justice. King Haakon reorganized the cabinet.

Henry Huntington, son of the late Maj. Henry Alonzo Huntington, an American who had lived for many years in Paris, was pronounced at Versailles by medical experts to be totally irresponsible.

The Red Star liner Finland was badly disabled by crashing into the breakwater at Dover, England.

It is feared that many persons have been slowly suffocated beneath the earthquake ruins at Ferruzano, Italy. Some of the dead recovered were not even scratched.

Morris Paul, a Chicago store keeper, confessed that he set fire to his place so that he could have a "fire sale."

Ute Indians on the Cheyenne river reservation threatened an outbreak and troops were called for, but the Indian police quieted the uneasy Redskins.

Four hundred Chinese who had just landed near Santa Cruz, Mexico, made an attack on the English ship Woolwich and fatally injured several sailors. The Chinese were incensed because 200 of their number were being held on board the ship by the sanitary inspector.

THE STATE IN GENERAL

GOVERNOR WARNER MAKES THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF HIS CANDIDACY.

WILL ASK A THIRD TERM.

Says He Is Driven to It by Senate Opposition to the People's Will and Is Assured of the Verdict.

His Platform.

Gov. Fred M. Warner announced positively for the first time, that he will be a candidate for a third term as governor of Michigan. His platform, he said, would be the several messages he sent to the legislature during the recent special session.

"It is months too early to begin a campaign for next year's primary nomination," said the governor. "At the proper time, however, I will be a candidate. Nothing has entered into this decision more than the position taken by the 16 members in opposition to the legislation demanded by the people. I want the people of Michigan to have an opportunity to pass upon the differences between the opposition senators and myself in all matters at issue."

"I have no doubt of the verdict of the people, notwithstanding the fact that I am reliably informed that the sixteen senators and their two outside leaders are making a determined effort to induce two or more new candidates to enter the race, in the hope of so dividing the vote as to throw the nomination into a delegate convention. It is known that their advances have been rejected by some gentlemen, and it is my opinion that even if they succeed in luring others into the race they will not succeed in accomplishing their object."

"While I may call attention to other matters and issues later, I think that my several messages to the legislature during the recent special session constitute all the platform necessary. I stand firmly by every statement in those messages."

Gov. Warner continued: "Instead of not giving my last message to the legislature full publicity, which seems to have been the desire of the 16 senators when they expressed the hope that after mature reflection I would withdraw it, I would very much prefer to have every voter of Michigan have before him for careful consideration copies of both of the messages and the resolution which the 16 senators adopted after hearing the message read."

"In these resolutions they dodge all reference to the contents of the message and simply indulge in vituperation, thus admitting the swiftness of the fit of the coat which they promptly proceeded to put on. They did not even feebly attempt to deny the truthfulness of any statement I made."

Sent Her a Garter Snake.

A box addressed to Miss Anna Hornstra, an employee of the Leonard Crocker Co., Grand Rapids, was opened for official examination in the postoffice and a garter snake darted out, creating a commotion among those who did not know it was of a harmless species. The snake was captured and turned over to an inspector, who may bar it from further delivery by mail. It is believed the reptile was intended to scare Miss Hornstra either as a joke or by an enemy.

Corey Guarded.

Completely surrounded by a guard of detectives, William E. Corey, president of the steel trust, with his wife, Mabelle Gilman Corey, and a party of friends, is hunting and fishing about Watersmeet, in a remote corner of Gogebic county. The party are living in Corey's magnificent private car, which is guarded night and day by Corey's private lieutenants.

What Townsend Would Do.

"What would you do if you were governor?" was asked of Hon. Charles E. Townsend. He replied:

"I would advocate the concentration of state institutions. We do not need four normal schools. Two schools for the blind are as unnecessary as they are expensive. The M. A. C. would be well consolidated with the state university. This would be an annual saving to taxpayers of hundreds of thousands of dollars. And this is not all that might be done."

Rathbone Again.

Most unusual conditions in the postal department may come to light as the result of a demand which Maj. Estes J. Rathbone, formerly fourth assistant postmaster general, will make of the next congress for an investigation of his administration while director of Cuban posts. He was charged with gross carelessness, incompetency and extravagance while in charge of Cuban affairs. He was relieved in 1902.

James Pendill, of Marquette, has completed a cement clock factory, built almost wholly of felt covered doors, bought from an abandoned saw-mill.

George Dudoveaz is in a serious condition following an attack upon him, 150 feet underground in the Shawassaw coal-mine, and Arthur Taylor, aged 19, whom he accused, is held pending the outcome of his injuries.

Arthur J. Oldfield, of Detroit, has begun suit for $20,000 against George Cotharin in Flint for damages alleged to have been sustained as a result of being struck by Cotharin's touring car. The declaration is made that the machine was running at a speed not slower than 15 to 20 miles an hour at the time of the accident, which occurred a year ago.

William Dorosch, aged 4, was badly burned while playing about a bonfire in Bay City and his life was saved by his mother. She heard the child's screams and flung a rug about his burning clothes, smothering the flames. The boy is expected to recover.

Coroner Investigating.

One portion of the mystery surrounding the death of Peter A. Ralston, of Lansing, who was found lying in the gutter on Washtenaw street, east, having been killed in an automobile accident, early Friday morning, has been cleared up. That is, the name of the party with whom Ralston was riding at the time. He is Fred B. Platt, a local capitalist.

Platt, however, declares he remembers nothing of the tragedy, and did not know Ralston had been killed until told so Friday morning. He told the police he had only a vague recollection of having seen Ralston the night of the accident, and of having had trouble with his automobile. A coroner's jury has been impaneled, and a thorough investigation is being made.

It has been learned through attaches of the Downey house that Platt and Ralston were there until 12:30, when they entered Platt's car and drove off. Apparently Platt's automobile became unmanageable at the start, as its course is traceable by zigzag tracks over lawns, curbs and sidewalks on various streets. The first clue the police had that Platt was in the affair was when his hat, bearing the initials, F. B. P., was picked up near where the dead man lay. Then his machine was found to be jammed up, presumably where it had collided with a telephone pole at the point where the fatality occurred.

Ralston came to Lansing from Bay City, where a son, Philip, is a pharmacist.

Majority Rule.

The committee on rules of the constitutional convention have completed their work. A majority of the members elect will rule in the proceedings. A majority can take away from a committee or refer back to a committee. To suspend the rules, however, a two-thirds majority is required, as in most parliamentary bodies. The rules in general follow the house rules, though they are much briefer, not having relation to the senate or to the official character of state officers. Delegates will introduce their suggestions in the form of "proposals," and these will go to committee, to committee of the whole or to third reading, as "bills." In the house there will also be room on the order of business for motions and resolutions and communications from state officers and departments.

The prevailing sentiment in the convention just now seems to be for a session ending at Christmas. To effect this it is proposed that the convention take up first the vast sections of the old constitution, which will be re-nacted without alteration, then the sections less in need of amendment, then the sections of necessary attention, and finally the sections on which there is controversy.

Is An Inference Law?

City Attorney Taggart has devised a plan to remedy the mistake which wiped out the Grand Rapids primary law and which the special session refused to correct in the new bill. Chas. Holden and E. L. Montgomery, chairman of the Republican and Democratic committees, have asked the council for primaries on the regular day and petitions will be circulated in the usual way and presented to the city clerk, who will refuse them. The matter will then be taken to the supreme court on mandamus and it will be argued that the city's law was wiped out by mistake and should therefore remain in effect by inference.

Seriously Injured.

Farmers coming into Battle Creek early Monday morning found a young girl sitting on the road about two miles from the city, and beside her was the body of her aged father, which she had managed to cover with a blanket. The two had been thrown from a carriage when the horse took fright at a cow. The man was Thos. Gale, a prominent stock man. The girl was his daughter Lulu. He had struck his head against a telephone pole when thrown out. He is now in Nichols hospital in a critical condition. The daughter was hurt so that she was only able to sit by and wait until help arrived.

SYNOPSIS.

A detachment of the Eleventh Infantry from Fort Belknap, trapped by Indians in a narrow gorge. Among them is a stranger who introduces himself by the name of Hampton, also Gillie, the son of a trader, and his daughter, Gillie, during a three days' siege. Hampton offers assistance to the girl and she accepts.

She shook off the restraining touch of his hand as if it were contamination and sank down upon her knees beside the inert body. He could barely perceive the dim outlines of her bowed figure, yet never moved, his breath perceptibly quickening, while he watched and waited. Without word or moan she bent yet lower and pressed her lips upon the cold, white face. The man caught no more than the faintest echo of a murmured "Good-by, old dad; I wish I could take you with me." Then she stood stiffly upright, facing him. "I'm ready now," she announced calmly. "You can go on ahead."

They crept among low shrubs and around the bowlders, carefully guarding every slightest movement lest some rustle of disturbed foliage, or sound of loosened stone, might draw the fire of those keen watchers. Every inch of their progress was attained through tedious groping, yet the distance to be traversed was short, and Hampton soon found himself pressing against the uprising precipice. Against that background of dark cliff they might venture to stand erect, the faint glimmer of reflected light barely sufficient to reveal to each the shadowy outline of the other.

"Don't move an inch from this spot," he whispered. "It wouldn't be a square deal, kid, to leave those poor fellows to their death without even telling them there's a chance to get out."

She attempted no reply, as he glided noiselessly away, but her face, could he have seen it, was not devoid of expression. This was an act of generosity and deliberate courage of the very kind most apt to appeal to her nature, and within her secret heart there was rapidly developing a respect for this man, who with such calm assurance won his own way. Then, suddenly, that black curtain was rent by jagged spurts of red and yellow flame. Dazed for an instant, her heart throbbing wildly to the sharp reports of the rifles, she shrank cowering back, her fascinated gaze fixed on those imp-like figures leaping forward from rock to rock. Almost with the flash and sound Hampton sprang hastily back and gathered her in his arms.

"Catch hold, kid, anywhere, only go up, and quick!"

She retained no longer any memory of Hampton; her brain was completely terrorized. Inch by inch, foot by foot, clinging to a fragment of rock here, grasping a slippery branch there, occasionally helped by encountering a deeper gash in the face of the precipice, her movements concealed by the scattered cedars, she toiled feverishly up. The first time she became aware that Hampton was closely following was when her feet slipped along a naked rock, and she would have plunged headlong into unknown depths had she not come in sudden contact with his supporting shoulder. Faint and dizzy, and trembling like a leaf of an aspen, she crept forward onto a somewhat wider ledge of thin rock, and lay there quivering painfully from head to foot. A moment of suspense, and he was outstretched beside her, resting at full length along the very outer edge, his hand closing tightly over her own.

"Remain perfectly quiet," he whispered, panting heavily. "We can be no safer anywhere else."

Shots and yells, the dull crash of blows, the shouts of men engaged in a death grapple, the sharp crackling of innumerable rifles, the inarticulate moans of pain, the piercing scream of sudden torture, were borne upward to them from out the blackness. All at once the hideous uproar ceased with a final yelping of triumph, seemingly reechoed the entire length of the chasm, in the midst of which one single voice pleaded pitifully, only to die away in a shriek. The two agonized fugitives lay listening, their ears strained to catch the slightest sound from below. Hampton's ears could discern evidences of movement, and he heard guttural voices calling at a distance, but to the vision all was black.

These uncertain sounds ceased, the strained ears of the fugitives heard the crashing of bodies through the thick shrubbery, and then even this noise died away in the distance. Yet neither ventured to stir or speak. It may be that the girl slept fitfully, worn out by long vigil and intense strain; but the man proved less fortunate, his eyes staring out continually into the black void, his thoughts upon other days. His features were drawn and haggard when the first gray dawn found ghostly reflection along the opposite rock summit, and with blurred eyes he watched the faint tinge of returning light steal downward into the canyon. At last it swept aside those lower clinging mists, as though some invisible hand had drawn back the night curtains, and he peered over the edge of his narrow resting place, gazing directly down upon the scene of massacre. With a quick gasp of unspeakable horror he shrank so sharply back as to cause the suddenly awakened girl to start and glance into his face.

"What is it?" she questioned, with quick catching of breath, reading that which she could not clearly interpret in his shocked expression.

"Nothing of consequence," and he faintly endeavored to smile. "I suppose I must have been dreaming also, and most unpleasantly. No, please do not look down; it would only cause your head to reel, and our upward climb is not yet completed. Do you feel strong enough now to make another attempt to reach the top?"

"Can we?" she questioned helplessly. "We can, simply because we must," and his white teeth shut together firmly. "There is no possibility of retracing our steps downward, but with the help of this daylight we surely ought to be able to discover some path leading up."

He rose cautiously to his feet, pressing her more closely against the face of the cliff, thus holding her in comparative safety while preventing her from glancing back into the dizzy chasm. The most difficult portion of their journey was apparently just before them. More than once they tottered on the very brink, held to safety lifting his tired body, and his reeling head, until he could sit partially upright and gaze unsteadily about. The girl yet remained motionless at his feet, her thick hair, a mass of red gold in the sunshine, completely concealing her face, her slender figure quivering to sobs of utter exhaustion. Before them stretched the barren plain, brown, desolate, drear, offering in all its wide expanse no hopeful promise of rescue. With hand partially shading his aching eyes from the blinding glare, the man studied its every exposed feature, his face hardening again into lines of stern determination. The girl stirred from her position, flinging back her heavy hair with one hand, and looking up into his face with eyes that read at once his disappointment.

"Have—have you any water left?" she asked at last, her lips parched and burning as if from fever.

"He shook the canteen dangling forgotten at his side. "There may be a few drops," he said, handing it to her, although scarcely removing his fixed gaze from off that dreary plain. "We shall be obliged to make those trees yonder; there ought to be water there in plenty, and possibly we may strike a trail."

There was nothing more said between them. Like two automatons, they started off across the parched grass, the heat waves rising and falling as they stumbled forward. Neither realized until then how thoroughly that hard climb up the rocks, the strain of continued peril, and the long abstinence from food had sapped their strength, yet to remain where they were meant certain death; all hope found its center amid those distant beckoning trees.

No one can explain later how such deeds are ever accomplished; how the tortured soul controls physical weakness, and compels strained sinews to perform the miracle of action when all ambition has died. Hampton surely must have both seen and known, for he kept his direction, yet never afterwards did he regain any clear memory of it.

CHAPTER IV.

On the Naked Plain.

It was 218 miles, as the crow flies, between old Fort Belknap and the rock ford crossing the Bear Water, every foot of that dreary, treeless distance Indian-haunted, the favorite morely by desperate cluttings at rock or shrub, yet never once did the man loosen his guarding grasp of his companion. Pressed tightly against the smooth rock, feeling for every crevice, every slightest irregularity of surface, making use of creeping tendrils or dead branches, daring death along every inch of the way, these two creepers at last attained the opening to a little gulley, and sank down, faint and trembling. The girl glanced furtively at him, the long lashes shadowing the expression of her lowered eyes. In spite of deep prejudice she felt impelled to like this man; he accomplished things, and he didn't talk.

It was nothing more serious than a hard and toilsome climb after that, a continuous struggle testing every muscle, straining every sinew, causing both to sink down again and again, panting and exhausted, no longer stimulated by imminent peril. The narrow cleft they followed led somewhere away from the exposed front of the precipice, yet arose steep and jagged before them. It was bridged finally by a cedar trunk, which Hampton wrenched from out its rocky foothold, and the two crept cautiously forward, to emerge where the sunlight rested golden at the summit. They sank face downward in the short grass, barely conscious that they had finally won their desperate passage.

Slowly Hampton succeeded in up-skulking place and hunting ground of the restless Sioux. Winter and summer this wide expanse had to be suspiciously patrolled by numerous military scouting parties, anxious to learn more regarding the uncertain whereabouts of wandering bands and the purposes of malcontents.

One such company, composed of a dozen mounted infantrymen, accompanied by three Cree trailers, rode slowly and wearily across the brown exposed uplands down into the longer, greener grass of the wide valley bottom, until they emerged upon a barely perceptible trail which wound away in snake-like twistings, toward those high, barren hills whose blue masses were darkly silhouetted against the western sky. The animals moved steadily forward, reluctant and weary, their heads drooping dejectedly, their distended nostrils red and quivering, the oily perspiration streaking their dusted sides. The tired men, half blinded by the glare, lolled heavily in their deep cavalry saddles, with encrusted eyes staring moodily ahead.

Riding alone, and slightly in advance of the main body, his mount a rangy, broad-chested roan, streaked with alkali dust, the drooping head telling plainly of wearied muscles, was the officer in command. He was a pleasant-faced, stalwart young fellow, with the trim figure of a trained athlete, possessing a square chin smoothly shaven, his intelligent blue eyes half concealed beneath his hat brim, which had been drawn low to shade them from the glare, one hand pressing upon his saddle holster, as he leaned over to rest. No insignia of rank served to distinguish him from those equally dusty fellows plodding gloomily behind, but a broad stripe of yellow running down the seams of his trousers, together with his high boots, bespoke the cavalry service, while the front of his battered campaign hat bore the decorations of two crossed sabers, with a gilded "7" prominent between. His attire was completed by a coarse blue shirt, unbuttoned at the throat, about which had been loosely knotted a darker colored silk handkerchief, and across the back of the saddle was fastened a uniform jacket, the single shoulder strap revealed presenting the plain yellow of a second lieutenant.

Attaining to the summit of a slight knoll, whence a somewhat wider vista lay outspread, he partially turned his face toward the men straggling along in the rear, while his hand swept across the dreary scene.

"If that line of trees over yonder indicates the course of the Bear Water, Carson," he questioned quietly, "where are we expected to hit the trail leading down to the ford?"

The sergeant, thus addressed, a little stocky fellow wearing a closely clipped gray moustache, spurred his exhausted horse into a brief trot, and drew up short by the officer's side, his heavy eyes scanning the vague distance, even while his right hand was uplifted in perfunctory salute.

"There's no trail I know about along this bank, sir," he replied respectfully, "but the big cottonwood with the dead branch forking out at the top is the ford guide."

They rode down in moody silence into the next depression, and began wearily climbing the long hill opposite, apparently the last before coming directly down the banks of the stream. As his barely moving horse topped the uneven summit, the lieutenant suddenly drew in his rein, and uttering an exclamation of surprise, bent forward, staring intently down in his immediate front. For a single instant he appeared to doubt the evidence of his own eyes, then he swung hastily from out the saddle, all weariness forgotten. "My God!" he cried, sharply, his eyes suspiciously sweeping the bare slope. "There are two bodies lying here—white people!"

They lay all doubled up in the coarse grass, exactly as they had fallen, the man resting face downward, the slender figure of the girl clasped vice-like in his arms, with her tightly closed eyes upturned toward the glaring sun. Never once questioning, but that he was confronting the closing scene of a gruesome tragedy, the thoroughly aroused lieutenant dropped upon his knees beside them, his eyes already moist with sympathy, his anxious fingers feeling for a possible heart-beat. A moment of hushed, breathless suspense followed, and then he began flinging terse, eager commands across his shoulder to where his men were clustered.

"Here! Carson, Perry, Ronk, lay hold quick, and break this fellow's clasp," he cried, briefly. "The girl retains a spark of life yet, but the man's arms fairly crush her."

With all the rigidity of actual death those clutching hands held their tenacious grip, but the aroused soldiers wrenched the interlaced fingers apart with every tenderness possible in such emergency, shocked at noting the expression of intense agony stamped upon the man's face when thus exposed to view. The whole terrible story was engraven there—how he had toiled, agonized, suffered, before finally yielding to the inevitable and plunging forward in unconsciousness, written as legibly as though by a pen. Carson, who in his long service had witnessed much of death and suffering, bent tenderly above him, seeking for some faint evidence of lingering life. The anxious lieutenant, bareheaded under the hot sun-glare, strode hastily across from beside the unconscious and breathing girl, and stood gazing doubtfully down upon them.

"Any life, sergeant?" he demanded, his voice rendered husky by sympathy. "He doesn't seem entirely gone, sir," and Carson glanced up into the officer's face, his own eyes filled with feeling. "I can distinguish just a wee bit of breathing, but it's so weak the pulse hardly stirs."

"What do you make of it?" "Starving at the bottom, sir. The only thing I see now is to get them down to water and food."

The young officer glanced swiftly about him across that dreary picture of sun-burnt, desolate prairie stretching in every direction, his eyes pausing slightly as they surveyed the tops of the distant cottonwoods.

"Slung blankets between your horses," he commanded, decisively. "Move quickly, lads, and we may save one of these lives yet."

Campfire Trees.

Says Secretary James Wilson, of the department of agriculture: "For years the department has been distributing campfire tree seed and thousands of trees are now growing throughout the south and Pacific coast states. Two years ago a serious effort was made to develop the manufacture of campfire trees from these trees. Satisfactory results have been secured and a large manufacturing concern is now building up a campfire tree grove of 2,000 acres in Florida, from which it hopes to make campfire. This firm uses more than $500,000 worth of campfire every year."

Speech and Silence.

I have often regretted my speech, never my silence.—Publius Syrus.

Jap Emigration Limit.

A delegate from the Japanese residents of San Francisco called on Foreign Minister Hayashi and after stating that the feeling against exclusion is directed against undesirable alone, and that honest Jap laborers are welcomed, he suggested that the government permit the emigration of 900 a month to San Francisco and Seattle.

The minister replied that at present it is desirable to limit the emigration to half that number, and he emphasized the importance of stopping anything likely to injure the traditional friendship of both countries. The government would, hereafter, he said, supervise the kind of emigrants allowed to go out.

The Divorce Mill.

An aggregate of 1,300,000 divorce cases and 1,733,332 persons passed by legal decree during the past 20 years will be shown by a report being prepared at the census bureau. There are about 40,000 cases to be investigated out of the number stated before the field work is finished, and the work of compilation proper can begin. It is estimated that two-thirds of the persons seeking divorce, or 866,666, have been successful in their suits. The report in detail will not be made public until early next spring.

A total of 2,900 clerks and special agents have been at work for months gathering this data and 140 are still engaged in the task.

Change of Government.

King Menelik has taken an important step in the direction of giving Abyssinia a constitutional form of government in issuing a decree providing for the formation of a cabinet on European lines. Simultaneously with the publication of the decree his majesty announced the appointment of five ministers, who will preside respectively over the departments of foreign affairs, justice, finance, commerce and war.

A Vice Admiral.

The great battleship fleet which is to make its way from the Atlantic to the Pacific will probably be commanded by a vice admiral, and that officer is now Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans.

Of course this is conditional upon congress giving its sanction to the proposal that will be made by the executive to establish this new rank in the navy. Conditions are believed to be more favorable than ever before for this project.

After working her way through high school and the Kalamazoo Normal and obtaining a lucrative position as teacher, Miss Ada Bennett, of Bedford township, felt from a horse and will be bedridden for several months.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., NOV. 1, 1907.

Expected Opposition.

It is passing strange, of course, that the several "boxer" sympathizers and allies who have steadfastly opposed the enactment of a genuine primary law, were appealed to by Detroit newspapers for their opinion of Governor Warner's announcement that he will be a candidate for a third term, should express their opposition to that program. And it is positively startling to learn that several professional lobbyists are really opposed to the Governor's plan to have enacted a law designed to regulate lobbyists and lobbying. The average man would have supposed that all of these individuals would be rapturously in favor of the candidacy of the man whom they have been persistently fighting for the past year or two, and as enthusiastically in favor of the proposed legislation which they have thus far aided in defeating, had the newspaper in question not obtained expressions to the contrary. Any writer on the newspaper's staff could have accurately stated the views of these individuals without going to the trouble of even mentioning the matter to them. No effort was made to get the opinions of even a few of the people whose demands and rights the persons interviewed have uncompromisingly opposed for years. It so happens that Governor Warner is not looking to the particular school of politicians who have expressed their opinions as above noted for aid and comfort in the pending contest. He has elected to rest his case with the common people whose rights and interests he has so ably and persistently defended and advanced.

Let the People Decide

In this announcement of his candidacy for renomination, Gov. Warner makes the main statement that his candidacy is up to the people. His opponents—the old machine operators—will leave their candidacy up to a convention. That's the difference. Under the primary system third terms are not uncommon. Every congressman in Michigan with two exceptions (they bring first terms) is a third term or more and will ask for a fourth, fifth, sixth, or more, term next year. Under the primary system a number of Wayne county officers are third terms. This Second Congressional district under a convention system was always a two term affair, but under the primary system Congressman Townsend broke that precedent and is now serving his third term and will be nominated again next year for a fourth term. Senator Burrows is seeking a third term and will, without doubt, be nominated and re-elected in 1910. More than two thirds the men in congress and the U. S. senate are third terms or better; many of the states have had or are having third term governors, where emergencies similar to those in Michigan have arose; many members of the present legislature are third terms and there is but little question now but what President Roosevelt will be re-nominated for a third term. So the third term idea is nothing new at all. The emergency seems to have arisen in Michigan and all that Governor Warner asks is to let the people have their say. "It is always safe to let the people decide."

Dig at Forefathers.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, who had decidedly advanced views about heredity, was once called to treat a mentally afflicted child. After he had examined the patient he said a consultation should have been held some time before. When the mother replied that such had already taken place Dr. Holmes said: "Ah, the consultation should have been held some 50 years ago!"

The Oldest Tunnel.

Glendon tunnel, on the Leicester and Swanton railway, is the oldest tunnel in the world. It is about a mile long, and is the oldest section of the Midland company's system. Only four passenger trains pass through the tunnel each week day, and from Saturday night until Monday morning the tunnel is closed by a padlock door at either end.

Famous Flags.

The famous union jack which flew from Nelson's flagship, the Victory, and covered the admiral's body on the journey by water to Greenwich hospital, was sold at auction at Stevens' rooms in London, recently, for $630. The white ensign which hung at the rear of Nelson's funeral car on its way to St. Paul's was sold for $125.

To Restore Old Paintings.

The blackened lights of old pictures may be frequently restored to their original color by touching them up with dentoxide of hydrogen diluted with six or eight times its weight of water. The part touched up must be afterward washed with a clean sponge.

Clothing of Trees.

Mr. David Garrick Longworth, who has been traveling in Africa, spent several months in Nairobi. "I found the natives making good use of the bark of the trees they cut down," he states. "After drying it they hammered it into shape and made decent clothing for themselves."

BUY HOLIDAY PRESENTS NOW.

Get First Selections and Avoid the Rush—Books Are Best.

There are many advantages in buying your holiday presents early. You get the first choice of goods, you are afforded room and leisure to make selections, and often you save money as prices are sometimes advanced during the holiday season. Our advice is to buy now and save further worry. As to gifts, there is nothing more acceptable to young or old than a suitable book. It lasts longer than almost anything else you can offer and is a constant reminder of the donor. There is no finer stock of books of every description and style of binding than is displayed at the store of J. V. Sheehan & Co., 1 Woodward avenue, Detroit, the leading book store in Michigan. Here you will see all the latest books printed; books to suit all tastes and pursuits and at all prices. There is also everything in fancy cards and stationery, with many useful and ornamental novelties for the desk, etc. Prices will be found reasonable, and experienced salesmen are ready to offer valuable assistance in advising purchasers.

Irish Kings.

There were plenty of Irish kings in early history and they were good fighters. Some historians have traced the line of native sovereigns of Ireland back as far as the time of the flood. Heber and Heremon in 1500, B. C., are the first of whom there is any absolute certainty. Following them were 169 kings all of whom except fifteen died in battle or otherwise by violence. Home rule was in existence until 1172.

Honesty.

There is no man, but for his own interest, hath an obligation to be honest: there may be sometimes temptations to be otherwise, but all cards cast up, he shall find it the greatest ease, the highest profit, the best pleasure, the most safety, and the noblest fame, to lay hold of the horns of this altar, which, in all assays, can in himself protect him.

A Temperance Prescription.

A British temperance journal recommended a substitute for brandy which could be used in cases of fainting or severe pains. The temperance remedy was composed of equal parts of the strongest tincture of ginger, sal volatile and chloric ether. This mixture contains 33 per cent. of alcohol as compared with brandy, which contains only 50 per cent. of alcohol.

Catarrah Fifteen Years.

Mrs. S. A. Rogers, LeMoore, Cal., writes:

"I had chronic catarrah of fifteen years standing, and death seemed to stare me in the face. I tried several 'so-called' catarrah remedies, and without avail. I took fifteen bottles of Peruna and five bottles of Manalin, and I am completely cured. All the catarrah symptoms are gone, my digestion is good, my appetite is good, and I rest well at night. I am seventy years of age and I hope to live many more years to praise Peruna to all my friends who suffer from catarrah as I did."

Rheumatism of Old Age.

Mrs. Caroline Trunk, 1705 Jefferson Ave., Peoria, Ill., writes:

"I had a very painful trouble for six years, consisting of rheumatism in the back and in the thigh. I used a great deal of medicine, but it did not help me. Then I used Dr. Hartman's Peruna and two bottles of this entirely freed me of the rheumatism. I wish to keep both Peruna and Manalin always in the house. This is the best medicine that I can recommend any one to take for rheumatism."

Catarrah All Through My System.

Mr. Robert Metters, Murdock, Cass Co., Neb., Box 45, writes:

"I commenced to take Peruna the first of last February. I took it as nearly as possible according to directions. I also got a Peruna almanac and for the first time learned that my trouble was systemic catarrah. I had catarrah from my head all through my system. I took Peruna until I was entirely cured."

Cough and Indigestion.

Thos. Beckwith, 11 Kitchell St., Auburn, N. Y., writes:

"I was troubled with a cough and indigestion. Thanks to your advice and Peruna I am in good health now. I was talking with an old friend last week. He told me he took Peruna last winter, and he is in the best of health, working every day and speaks highly of your medicine. I shall feel it my duty to recommend Peruna to all my friends."

A great many testimonials from people of high rank and people in the ordinary walks of life, are received every month. Catarrah in all its phases, catarrah of the different organs of the body; acute catarrah, chronic catarrah, catarrah that has baffled other remedies—all these are giving to Peruna unqualified and unsolicited endorsement.

I am eighty-three and a half years old, and feel as young as I did ten years ago. "I visited recently among some old friends, who said I looked as young as I did twenty years ago. I thank you for your kindness to me, and hope you may live long to benefit suffering humanity."

"I believe Peruna is the best medicine in the world for all catarrah diseases." —Mr. J. W. Palmer, 1116 Tower Ave., Superior, Wis.

Cattermole & Dart sold their black driving horse to Horatio Hovey last week. Mr. Hovey was a former resident of Northville attending school here about forty years ago. Mrs. T. G. Richardson, Miss Eva Bovee, and Chas. Sessions are the only ones left of his classmates. He made each of them a short call.

The Home Telephone company is doing some nice work in laying conduits about the village for their new cables. Not only is the work being tamped down nicely and the streets leveled up, but in addition only one portion of the streets are torn up at a time and that is all filled up before the next section is begun.

Mrs. Frank N. Clark recently had a startling experience. Making a visit to the guest chamber which had not lately been occupied, she was rather surprised to find a big owl perched, like the raven in Poe's famous poem, on top of the head board of the bed. To get his owlship out it took the united efforts of two of the U. S. fish station employees.

Samuel Wilkinson met with an accident one day last week, that has caused him considerable pain and inconvenience. He was unloading a chicken coop from a wagon when it fell and landed on his foot bruising and spalling it quite badly. He is getting around by the use of crutches but is unable to place his foot on the ground.

About thirty of the relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yerkes from Detroit, Walled Lake, and Northville, responded to an urgent call from them for help to devour a 14 pound turkey and something less than a ton of other good things, Saturday, Oct. 26. The task was successfully accomplished and all expressed themselves willing to assist in the future should another such emergency arise.

The Pere Marquette excursion train going to Detroit Sunday morning ran into the rear end of a freight train at Delray, smashing the car into kindling wood. The freight was making the siding but the passenger train coming around the curve at a good rate of speed did not see it in time to avoid the accident. The passengers were obliged to get out and walk through the rain and mud some distance but fortunately no one was hurt. There were about twenty-five from here on the train, and some of them returned home by way of the electric cars.

Gathering Bird-nests.

SERIAL STORY

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Gunter
A Sequel to
Mr. Barnes of New York

Author of "Mr. Barnes of New York,"
"Mr. Potter of Texas,"
"That Frenchman," Etc.

Copyright, 1907, Dodd Mead & Co., N. Y.

SYNOPSIS.

Burton H. Barnes, a wealthy American touring Corsica, rescues the young English lieutenant, Edward Gerard Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Exiles, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves, Enid Anstruther, sister of the English lieutenant. The four fly from Ajaccio to Marseilles on board the French steamer Constantine. The vendetta pursues and as the quarter are about to board the train for London at Marseilles, Marina is handed a mysterious note which causes her to collapse and necessitates a postponement of the journey. Barnes gets part of the mysterious note and receives letters which inform him that he is marked by the vendetta. He employs an American detective and plans to beat the vendetta at their own game. For the purpose of securing the safety of the women Barnes arranges to have Lady Chartris leave a secluded villa at Nice to which the party is to be taken in a yacht.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

The American's plan, as he whispers to Emory, is so adroit that the detective emits a triumphant whistle and says "Gee whiz, just the idea!" "Everything must be ready for to-night," directs Barnes. "No other Corsican steamer than the one on which we arrived will come to day. By tomorrow I hope to have the ladies reasonably beyond pursuit."

"All right. I think I can fix it for you."

"Meantime," says Barnes, "see if you can find what cables bearing on this matter have been received from Ajaccio and to whom addressed."

"That will be difficult."

"Not if you give the telegraph clerks enough money."

"Yes, most anything can be done the way you spend money, Mr. Barnes."

This last issue from Emory's smiling lips as the American is writing a check. "I'll report progress to you not later than one p. m., that'll give you time for your arrangements."

Coming from this to the Grand hotel, Barnes shortly strolls into Lady Chartris' parlor and has an interview with that matron which places her in the seventh heaven of delight.

"You think of going to Nice?" he suggests, he would have proposed some little Italian watering place, but knows that the widow will only consider the spot where Van Bulow, the young German diplomatist, is located.

Yes, I've concluded to remain there a few weeks until the season absolutely ends," responds Lady Chartris, "only the good hotels are so cruelly expensive."

"Well, there are some lovely and retired villas on the little Bay of Villefranche, a 20 minutes' carriage drive from the Promenade des Anglais. Supposing you engage one?"

"Do you think I'm a Croesus?" screams the widow in horror. "Do you want to ruin me?" Do you suppose I have your pocketbook, Mr. Barnes of New York?"

"That's exactly what I want you to suppose, my dear Lady Chartris. I'll pay for the villa; you occupy it. In about a week from now, Mrs. Anstruther and probably Enid will be your guests; perhaps Edwin and I also for a little while. But you are to say nothing about that. You'll keep Tompkins, Enid's maid, and take her on with you. The villa is to be rented by you and entirely in your name."

"And you pay the running expenses?"

"With pleasure."

"Oh, Mr. Barnes, how magnificently generous."

"Don't leave here earlier than the day after to-morrow. In fact, that is the day you must leave, but make your arrangements quickly after you reach Nice. You'll have no trouble in finding an unoccupied villa at Villefranche; it's so near the end of the season. Be sure its grounds run to the water and have a landing place. You will say nothing of our going to Nice to anyone—especially your child," he remarks, commandingly, tempering his words, however, by adding: "Maud is too young to keep a secret."

"Yes, childish tongues will babble," smiles the widow as Burton goes moodily away.

Mr. Barnes' features are still very solemn, as early in the afternoon, after another interview with Emory, he says to Enid, who is in consultation with him: "You think Marina is well enough to be conveyed in a carriage a mile or two?"

"Why, certainly, she is out of bed now. Don't fear for her courage as regards herself, Burton. It is my brother the dear girl is alarmed for."

"This morning," remarks the American, under his breath, "I had hoped, with Edwin's aid, to get you, Enid and Marina to England, where three or four London bulldog detectives and the fear of the British hangman would have probably kept Mrs. Anstruther safely from murderous pursuit until I had settled the affair. But now this devilish letter has given her such a shock that we dare not immediately subject her to the fatigue of the long railway journey to London."

As he shows it to them and they try to decipher it, Barnes hastily explains how he had purchased the mutilated letter from Maud Chartris with maroon glances.

"And that awful child concealed it from us!" cries Enid. "Her mother should be told immediately."

"What, and have Lady Chartris rush tremblingly back to London when, without danger to herself, she can do as a grand turn in Nice?"

"In Nice? How?" Enid asks, astonished.

"Tell you in a minute," replies her fiancé. "The fourth quarter probably contains the infernal portion that caused the bride's alarm for you, Edwin, for her fears I know are not so much for herself, as for you. Now I, with your assistance, am going first to make Enid and Marina safe."

"How?" demands the English girl, whose face has grown pallid.

"By Lady Chartris. She's going to take a secluded, water-washed villa at Villefranche in her own name. House rentals have to be reported to the municipal officials. With the name of Lady Chartris attached to it, no one will guess that we will occupy it."

"But Prunella Chartris would fly from a vendetta as she would from the smallest fox," says Edwin.

"Quicker!" cries Enid.

"Quite right, but Prunella Chartris shan't hear of a vendetta. We'll turn up at Villefranche, Edwin, in about four days, leave the ladies there, amply guarded, and then you and I, my jolly seadogs, will turn out attention to our Corsican friends. We will be foot-loose, and can do the hunting and killing, if necessary, and settle the affair in some way definitely and forever."

Barnes' manner is lighter than his heart.

"You'll find me with you," answers the English lieutenant. "This is the second time, because she loved me, that my bride has been driven to despair. But how do you expect to get Enid and Marina from Marseilles unnoticed by the people that are already hunting us, to the villa near Nice?"

"What do wild animals do when they are hunted? Take to the water!" remarks Burton. "That leaves no trail. Do you think, Anstruther, that you can navigate a yacht?"

"Do you think that you can shoot a pistol straight?" growls the British naval officer.

"Very well. A yacht will be waiting for us, engaged by Emory. There will be nothing but English seamen on board, not over many of them. We'll put the girls on board to-night. We're both armed and our party will not be noticed diving on the Prado, where everybody drives. In a little bay, as I have arranged it off the Corniche road, near the Bains du Roucas Blanc, a boat will be waiting. There will be the ladies on board and sail away. Then you'll be able to tell where we go to."

Edwin rises, but at the door, which had been left open so that the gentlemen could keep their eye on the pas-age to Marina's room, he turns, and noting Barnes' longing eyes directed toward his sister, says with sailor bluntness: "Old man, you seem to think of everybody but yourself in this matter. Are you aware that this projected cruise won't permit you and Enid to be spliced in London in three days from now?"

"I had not forgotten that," replies Burton. "How could I?" His eyes still on his beautiful fiancée, who, notwithstanding her anxiety and trouble, looks lovely as a goddess and tempting as a nymph.

"Well," says the sailor, "we jack-tars have a custom of getting married before we start on a cruise. There are ministers in Marseilles as well as London." Then Edwin Anstruther walks off, leaving Mr. Barnes confronted with a young lady whose lilies have changed to roses and—the greatest temptation of his life—

Barnes and unaffectedly tenders him her lips.

"Don't think me forward," she whispers sweetly, "but if you think you can take better care of me as your wife—if you feel very much disappointed at the delay." Her words are faltered out bashfully.

The accursed warning—threatening death to her he marries—rustles in his pocketbook as he crushes her to his breast. It stays the mad rush of his passion. He forces himself to calmness and whispers, his face pale, his lips contorted: "For God's sake, don't misunderstand me. I love you more dearly than ever, but until this affair is settled, it would be an infamy if I married you."

"Good heavens! You fear they are going to kill you?"

"No, if there is any killing to be done, I propose to do it." For an instant he is about to show her the infernal document. His hand is already on his breast pocket, when it stops, palsied. Barnes remembers the impulsive courage of his betrothed.

"My Lord, if she saw this," he thinks, "Enid would insist on marrying me off-hand. She'd think it her duty to stand as my wife in the front of the skirmish and defy them." He says slowly, almost brokenly: "You must trust me in this matter, dear one. Only never doubt my love."

"Oh, that would be too horrible," she falters, "Burton, that would break my heart. You know more about the affair than I. You are the best judge."

Her lips are tendered to him again, but Barnes notes with a sigh their salute is colder, and that tears are very near the divine eyes of Enid Anstruther.

Away from him, she wrings her white hands, and in the solitude of her chamber, wails: "Oh, everything seems to be changed since yesterday." Then the natural pride of the maiden coming to her, she says laughingly to herself: "The next proposition as to the naming of the wedding day shall come from you, Mr. Barnes of New York."

CHAPTER III.

Playing the Enemies' Game.

Mr. Barnes attempts to forget his postponed nuptials in arranging the details of his darling's safety. Emory shortly brings to him an old canceled check upon a branch of the Credit Lyonnais bearing the signature of Corregio Cipriano Danella, but comparing it with Marina's mutilated note and also the warning sent to him, the American cannot be certain of the handwriting.

"Perhaps it has been disguised in both the epistles," suggests the detective and continues his report: "As far as I can find from a clerk in the telegraph office, Rue de la Republic, that I have sometimes lived before in such matters, there was a long cable came from Bernardo Salceci at Ajaccio to Corregio Danella late yesterday evening. It stated that you and your party were to arrive on the Constantine, that you by your arts had murdered his brother, and that Madame Anstruther to the defense of her husband against the just vengeance of Tommaso Mondali, had produced his shooting by De Belloc's cavalrymen. This is only as the operator remembered it. My emissary didn't dare to try and get a duplicate of the dispatch which was already on file. The French government keeps a sharp eye upon its telegraph offices."

"Isn't it curious," asks Burton, "that there is no account of the Corsican tragedy in the French journals here?"

"Politics," answers the detective. "There is an election here shortly, and they fear some complication with the English government. I doubt if you will hear of the affair in an official way—at all events not till after the election for deputies. Perhaps that's what makes young Salceci so eager to do you up. If he stood as a representative of the time-honored vendetta every rustic commune in his island would give him its vote."

"That being the case," says Barnes, "we have only ourselves to rely upon. Have you made all arrangements about the yacht?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

SHOULD HAVE SLEEP OUT.

Writer Objects to Custom of Arousing Children Early.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, writing of Sleep in the American Magazine, criticizes boarding schools sharply for getting young people up too early in the morning. He says: "A baby or young child should have absolutely every minute of sleep that it can be induced to take, and sleeplessness is even more emphatically a sign of disease in children than in adults. The necessity and capacity for large amounts of refreshing sleep persists up to adult life and the amount required seldom falls below ten hours before the eighteenth or twentieth year. To make children or rapidly growing young adults get up before they have had their sleep out, and feel thoroughly rested, is not merely irrational but cruel, and when it is done as a routine practice at boarding schools, or other institutions, by those who pretend to be fitted to have the care of children it is little short of criminal."

Name Sounded Familiar.

I was turning over the leaves of a magazine one afternoon and my little brother, three years old, happened to be standing near. As I turned one page I gazed on a lovely painting of Joan of Arc. "To you know who this is, Ralph?" I asked. He looked at it for a second and then he said, "Oh, yes, I know; that's—that's—oh, you know," he stammered, "she's the one who swallowed the whale." He had confounded the two names of Jonah and Joan.—Exchange.

STEAK AND PIGEON PIE.

Two Birds with Meat Will Make Plentiful Dish.

Cut a pound of beefsteak up into small pieces, which should be nearly square; season each with pepper and salt, roll up and dust lightly with flour. Rub a deep dish well with a freshly cut onion and place the rolls of meat in it; sprinkle over them some chopped parsley and a little finely minced pork; pour in sufficient weak stock or water to cover the meat, cover closely, and cook in a moderate oven one hour. Take two pigeons which have been prepared for cooking in the usual way and well washed and dried, and cut up into neat pieces; remove the skin and flour them and put them into a frying pan with some melted drippings, a teaspoon of minced onion, the same quantity of minced parsley, and let them fry nicely browned, turning them frequently; then place them on paper to drain. When the steak is ready, arrange it and the pieces of pigeon in layers in a deep dish with some slices of hard boiled egg. Strain the gravy in which the steak was cooked into a saucepan and add a small quantity of soaked gelatin to it (in the proportion of a quarter of an ounce to a pint of liquid); stir until the gelatin is dissolved, then add a little grated nutmeg, cayenne, and salt; pour the gravy over the meat in the dish and leave it until cold; then cover with rich paste, brush it over with beaten egg, and bake in a moderately hot oven.

WHEN CALLERS DROP IN.

Almond Wafers Are Delicious to Have in Readiness.

Beat to a cream a quarter cup butter, then rub in one-half cupful powdered sugar. Add drop by drop a quarter cupful milk, then, gradually, seven-eighths cup sifted flour. Flavor with a half teaspoonful vanilla or pistachio, and spread very thinly over the bottom of an inverted dripping pan and cut in three-inch squares. Sprinkle with chopped blanched almonds and brown delicately in a very slow oven. Take from the oven, turn the squares over one by one with a knife, and roll loosely. Take up and spread on a waxed paper to cool and dry. If the squares harden before you get them all rolled, place over the fire a minute to soften. Serve with cocoa, afternoon tea, ice cream or preserves.

The Attic Room.

In cities the attic room is given as much attention as any part of the house. A clever arrangement of such a room is to paper it all in white and make a fancy border near the ceiling outlined with a fancy wide paper. The hunting scene is pretty if matched with some red rug on the floor. Have the furniture all white, the bed and dresser trimmed in white and dotted white curtains at the windows. It can be made very attractive with neat furnishings and decidedly unattractive if not nicely papered or fitted with refuse furniture from other rooms.

Olive Oil on Bruises.

In the treatment of bruises, where there is extensive discoloration of the skin, if olive oil be applied freely without rubbing, the discoloration quickly will disappear. Absorbent cotton may be soaked in the oil and applied. If the skin is broken a little boracic acid should be applied over the abrasion. A black eye thus treated can be rendered normal in a few hours, especially if the oil be applied warm.

To Sew on Buttons.

When buttonholes on a shirt waist are finished, sew on upper and lower button. Then button and see that the buttonhole hem evenly overlaps the button hem. Lay waist on table; insert a strip of cardboard the length of the waist underneath both hems, and with a tracing wheel gently press into each buttonhole. Unbutton waist and you have a faint mark where each button is to be sewed without measuring for each one separately.

Grated Corn Fritters.

Use one pint of grated sweet corn and half cup of milk, one-half cup of flour, one tablespoonful of melted butter, two eggs, a little salt and pepper, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix the milk and well beaten eggs together, add the melted butter and seasoning, then the flour and baking powder sifted together. Lastly stir in the grated corn. Drop by the tablespoonful in hot fat. Drain on brown paper and serve hot.

Darn Carpet with Ravelings.

For mending thin places in rugs and carpets, use some of the ravelings from the carpet, which should be saved for the purpose. Darn the thin places and three-cornered tears where they cannot be detected. The fringe and tassels of rugs and portieres can be darned and fastened in the same way.

Tin Coffee Pots.

A new tin coffee pot, if never washed on the inside with soap, may be kept much sweeter. Wash the outside and rinse the inside thoroughly with clear scalding water. Turn up on the stove to dry. When dry rub well with a clean dry cloth. Never put a soapy cloth inside the coffee pot.

Braid Your Wraps.

Coats and wraps will nearly all be braided this winter, and the binding of braids will be particularly in favor. Very satiny finished cloths are the favorite background for the braid, which in itself will be of the silkiest kind and of many new thick bold designs.

THE CANADIAN CROPS

THREE-QUARTERS OF THE AVERAGE YIELD IS REPORTED.

THE FARMERS DO NOT LOSE

Increased Prices for Grain More Than Compensates Them for the Decrease in Quantity—Reports from Crop Experts.

Most of the states of the union felt the unusually severe winter of 1906-7, and the effects of the succeeding late spring were everywhere apparent. Corn was planted two and sometimes three times, the winter wheat suffered and generally there was a nervous feeling as the retarded growth was in evidence. From the Dakotas to Texas the feeling of dread existed, and the fears were entertained that the crop of corn, wheat, oats and barley would be a distinct failure. How far this was the case is best left to those who passed through the experience. Naturally the same conditions were prevalent throughout the province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, in western Canada, and with from 250,000 to 300,000 farmers there from the United States a large degree of interest was manifest in almost every state of the union, for every state has some closed yesterday at $1.14 1/2 per bushel. Fort William delivery. The cost of freight and handling for wheat strikes an average of 10c per bushel for the wheat to the elevator for country wheat all over the prairie country is exactly 1c per bushel. The farmers have been looking for the day when dollar wheat would rule and they have it now. Some old wheat is still coming forward from the elevators and the hands of the farmers. This nearly all grades up to the contract, and it means a great gain for those who hold it. The new wheat is still grading very high, when one considers the conditions under which it was produced. Out of 63 cars, which in two days contained wheat which would answer for delivery on contracts. In other words over 300,000 bushels of wheat which would bring the farmers an average of about $1 per bushel, reached Winnipeg in two days. The significance of $300,000 worth of wheat being passed by the inspectors in two days at the close of an admittedly unfavorable season should not be allowed to sink out of sight at a time when returns from agricultural activity in the west are being anxiously awaited. These figures do not take account of the lower grades, of which there were many. More than one-third of these contained milting wheat, which would remunerate the farmer at the rate of 80c per bushel on the basis of to-day's closing figures. The balance consisted of low grade stuff which would vary greatly in quality and would show great "spread" in price.

"The approximate value of the two days' receipts of wheat, however, would be more than $400,000, calculating the capacity of a car at 1,000 bushels and eliminating the cost of freight and handling. As many of the modern cars contain more than 1,000 bushels and as the freight rate to Fort William is less than 15c per cwt. on most of the wheat which is now coming forward, the estimate of $400,000 is low. The circulation of $300,000 per day among the farmers will not continue for the whole year, of course, but that figure is likely to be

Mrs. Schofield's Dream

By J. F. Cowan

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"I never expect to fill Katy's place," sighed Mrs. E. Schofield, over the magazine she was cutting. "Here it is the fifteenth and I haven't had a chance before to glance at the monthly."

"There's nothing lost, I assure you," replied her husband from the depths of his Review. "The New Woman doesn't spoil in half a moon, does she?"

"I'm more anxious to know something about the 'new' servant. I hope she won't marry and leave just as soon as she becomes invaluable. I was boasting so of Katy only last week."

"Oh, no; she'll not be the marrying kind, I can assure you."

"Indeed?"

"Pon my word, I believe the most bird's-nest-like affairs in the world are household matters. Some slavish, slow methods of work. I'd get you anything in the world if you'd only turn over a new leaf and show some interest in labor-saving appliances. I don't blame a domestic for marrying or escaping the serfdom of the kitchen in any way possible. It's little better than a treadmill. If I had to get along in the office as you do in the house, my help would desert me, too. How long would my stenographer submit to do all my work with a goose-quill pen?"

"There you go off on your usual tangent again, Reuben," she sighed. "How often have I told you that most of the household machinery advertised is so disappointing?"

Mrs. Schofield shook her head incredulously. She was used to her husband's vagaries, as she considered them. Hadn't she tried a patent washing machine, and didn't it wear out her clothes? Hadn't an agent induced her to put in a self-turning meat broiler, and hadn't it burned up her husband's breakfast and nearly set the house on fire? Hadn't she been swindled again and again by oily-tongued agents with button-hole machines, rug machines, stocking-darners, carpet-cleaners, bread-cutters, porch-scrubbers, silver-burnishers—everything which a gullible creature could be blarneyed into buying—except a dish-washer? She drew the line at destruction of her precious china. Not one piece of it should ever be sacrificed to this Moloch of modern invention.

So intent did she become in her reflections upon these experiences that she lost consciousness of her skeptical husband's presence, and, indeed, of everything except the hired girl question which had been uppermost in her mind for a fortnight.

Suddenly the bell rang. She arose and went to the front hall door. No one was there. Then muttering impatiently over the steps her mistake had cost her, she made her way to the kitchen door.

"Who's there?"

"Good evening, Mrs. Schofield. Don't you think, ma'am, that an electric bell outfit with an annunciator would soon pay for itself in the steps it saved?"

The voice was pleasantly modulated, yet it spoke with a briskness and assurance which indicated an aggressive owner.

"Oh, dear, another canvasser! she felt sure, instead of an applicant for Katy's vacant place."

"I've heard the batteries freeze and leak and are so much trouble," she politely answered the caller, as she seated her, dreading another combat with an agent.

"If neglected," admitted the other, "but the real trouble is infinitesimal if made a part of a well-regulated system."

"But servants are so apt to be neglectful, and one can't think of everything one's self."

"You speak of the old servant. She was a creature of muscle alone, and untrained for thinking. But now it is different."

"Then," went on the caller, "the electric doors are the thing between dining room and kitchen. They open automatically when you step on the mat, and avoid all the rattle and bang of opening with the elbow when a tray of dishes is in the hand, or kicking with the foot."

"How persistent she is?" thought Mrs. Schofield. "She really means to fit out the house, I guess."

"And the dumb waiters are run in the same way now," went on the talker, as if unconscious of causing any annoyance. "Really the thing now is the disappearing refrigerator. Modeled after the vanishing gun carriage, I suppose. No reason that the appliances of war should surpass those of peace and domestic happiness. It saves both space and labor. You press the button and electricity does the rest. Intelligence supplants brute force."

She paused an instant for breath, and Mrs. Schofield shook her head negatively, intimating that all this dilaution upon the subject was of no use. She was about to urge an engagement and seek to free herself of her loquacious caller, when again the stream of her volubility began:

"Then the electric irons. Did you ever happen to see the computation of how many tons of unnecessary lifting one did in a lifetime, transferring the old-fashioned laundry iron from the table to the range and back again? It is astounding what handicaps female labor has submitted to. But now brains are enjoying your long-talked-of triumph over brawn. You have the electric lights and a day current, so the electric irons are a settled fact, I suppose, and for that matter the electric coffee heater and chafing dish."

"Really, I must—" feebly attempted Mrs. Schofield, wondering if the woman would be satisfied with less than a sale of the entire electric establishment. She began to think she would need summon Mr. Schofield; but disliked to, since he prided himself on his brusque dismissal of agents, and laughed at her want of self-assertion.

"Yes," resumed the genteelly modulated tones, "and the laundry is such an important part of the house. But with an inexpensive gas engine to run washer, wringer and mangle, or an electric motor if you prefer, superheated steam for drying and a dumb waiter service, the dreaded 'wash-day' of our foremothers becomes a playground for the intellect. Both mistress and servant are saved from barbarous sacrifices by inventive genius, and raised somewhere near the level of those who work in offices, stores, etc."

"Barbarous sacrifices!" The level of those who work in offices! echoed Mrs. Schofield, almost unconsciously. She was almost startled by the similarity of these ideas with those Mr. Schofield had been advancing.

"To be sure," broke in the glib-tongued agent. "That's just what it was. Domestic ladies were sacrificed—allowed themselves to be—by a score of forms of drudgery made necessary only by their conservatism. In regard to labor-saving inventions. It was cracking nuts with one's teeth to save the cost of nut-crackers. While the husbands and brothers and their fortunate assistants were relieved of all drudgery by labor-saving inventions, the wife and mother and sister struggled on in the old crude, barbarous ways, sacrificing complexion, back, nerves, health, everything. No wonder it was so much harder to keep domestic help than office help, when a woman had to get down on her knees and rub the skin off her knuckles scrubbing porches, while men sat on cushioned spring seats and simply thought, and obedient machines did the rest."

"How Persistent She Is," Thought Mrs. Schofield.

"Pardon me, I will call—"

"A moment, pray—but now you can use the same gas and electric motor which propels the laundry machinery, dish-washer, etc., to run the patent scrubber and sweeper, while all woman needs do is give it a directing thought."

"I must call Mr. Schofield. I can't quite understand. You mention such a bewildering variety of appliances."

"To be sure; modern science has come to the aid of the housekeeper in such a beneficent way. And we are familiar with all of them, you know, from the egg-beater, mincer and hasher, to the automatic wall-cleaner and bed-maker."

"Do you really sell all these? How can one mind master so much machinery?"

"Sell? I sell nothing, madam. I fear I do not understand you. But why should not a woman's mind be mistress of machinery, as well as a man's, master?"

"Pray explain, then, the object of your call."

"Is it possible I have been talking in the dark? And you mistake me for an agent? Madam, I read your advertisement for domestic help. I am, I may say, the 'new hired girl,' the first graduate of the school of domestic service."

Mrs. Schofield gave such a start that her elbow came sharply in contact with her chair arm. She heard something like a snicker. She looked quickly up. There sat Mr. Schofield regarding her with intense amusement. She understood it all like a flash. She had been asleep. It was all a dream. Would it ever become true?

ADVICE TO VICTIMS

TELLS READERS HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM AT HOME.

Directions to Mix a Simple Preparation and the Dose to Take—Overcomes Kidney and Bladder Trouble Promptly.

There is so much Rheumatism everywhere that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after while.

A Wonderful Thing.

Mr. Brown had just had a telephone connection between his office and house and was very much pleased with it, says the Home Magazine.

"I tell you, Smith," he was saying, "this telephone business is a wonderful thing. I want you to dine with me this evening, and I will notify Mrs. Brown to expect you."

Brown (speaking through the telephone)—My friend Smith will dine with us this evening.

"Now listen and hear how plain her reply comes back."

Mrs. Brown's reply came back with startling distinctness:

"Ask your friend Smith if he thinks we keep a hotel."

Not Discharged.

An old Antebellum negro in a small southern town was arrested and brought before the village magistrate for drunkenness. He asked for a lawyer who had helped him out of scrapes before, and the magistrate sent for the attorney.

The young man came into the little office, where the usual crowd of spectators had gathered, and asked the old negro: "Well, William, what are you charged with this time?"

Sadly the ancient darky replied: "Boss, I's charged wid whisky!"—Harper's Weekly.

Had Tried It.

"You ought to wear glasses. They'll save your eyes," said his friend.

"Nuttin' in it," contemptuously answered Bill de Bruiser. "I tought dey would inesself wunst, an' I pit on a pair when I heard a big chap wuz layin' fur me. It's agin de law, ye know, to hit a man wid glasses on 'im. Well, sir, de big chap happened along. He reached over, lifted dem glasses off me face, an' den he bunged me eyes up, good an' proper."

Turned Down.

Gobso Golde spoke anxiously. "I understand," he said, "that my name was brought up last evening at the Knickerbocker club."

"Yes, that is true," said L'Oignon. "And would you mind telling me—what action was taken in the matter?"

"Not at all. The secretary was instructed to purchase six quarts of blackballs for the use of the members."

TAKE THEM OUT Or Feed Them Food They Can Study On.

When a student begins to break down from lack of the right kind of food, there are only two things to do; either take him out of school or feed him properly on food that will rebuild the brain and nerve cells. That food is Grape-Nuts.

A boy writes from Jamestown, N. Y., saying: "A short time ago I got into a bad condition from overstudy, but Mother having heard about Grape-Nuts food began to feed me on it. It satisfied my hunger better than any other food, and the results were marvelous. I got fleshy like a good fellow. My usual morning headaches disappeared, and I found I could study for a long period without feeling the effects of it."

"My face was pale and thin, but is now round and has considerable color. After I had been using Grape-Nuts for about two months I felt like a new boy altogether. I have gained greatly in strength as well as flesh, and it is a pleasure to study now that I am not bothered with my head. I passed all of my examinations with a reasonably good percentage, extra good in some of them; and it is Grape-Nuts that has saved me from a year's delay in entering college."

"Father and mother have both been improved by the use of Grape-Nuts. Mother was troubled with sleepless nights and got very thin, and looked care worn. She has gained her normal strength and looks, and sleeps well nights." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs

BACK GAVE OUT.

A Typical Case of Kidney Trouble and a Typical Cure.

Mrs. Chloe Page of 510 S. Pitt Street, Alexandria, Va., says: "My back hurt me ver-ribly, I had sharp, shooting pains, changing to a dull, dragging ache. I could not stand for any length of time and my back hurt me when I sat down. My feet and ankles were badly swollen every evening, and my stomach was out of order. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of these troubles in 1902, and for five years I have had no return."

THE NUMBER OF ANIMALS.

Recent Attempts to Tabulate the Beasts That Perish.

Every now and then some naturalist endeavors to make an approximate numerical count of known animal species. This kind of attempt is surely not without interest, but it must be acknowledged that its results are very uncertain. We are far from knowing all species, and there is yet a delightful prospect ahead for those who love systematic zoology and for zoologists who bestow mutual honors by giving each other's names to some animal hitherto unknown.

As Nurnann remarked to a recent meeting of naturalists at the museum, to which he presented his "Catalogues Mammalia," the species of rodents known in 1880 were only 970 in number; now they are 1,900. The number has thus, at least, doubled in 27 years. The number of living species of this creature now known is about 1,500, divided among 160 genera. This family is the most numerous of the class of mammalia.—Wissen fur Alle.

BABY IN TERRIBLE STATE.

Awful Humor Eating Away Face—Body a Mass of Sores—Cure in Two Weeks.

"My little daughter broke out all over her body with a humor, and we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, but she continued to grow worse. Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away. Her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of Ointment the sores had all healed, and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe's. I would not be without it again if it cost five dollars instead of seventy-five cents. Mrs. George J. Steese, 701 Coburn St., Akron, O., Aug. 30, 1905."

Everything Bad.

A prominent planter recently had occasion to visit some of his holdings in southern Arkansas. The land was situated several miles from a railroad, and it was necessary to finish the journey in a buggy. So he took a friend with him and started out.

After traversing several miles of sparsely settled country, they came upon a farmer plowing corn on the side of a hill. The planter, wishing to appear civil to his neighbors, stopped his horse and yelled at the man, who came to the fence, mopping his face with a red bandana.

"Good morning."

"Mornin', mister."

"You live here, I suppose?"

"Yep."

"How's crops?"

"Fair to middlin'."

"That's a bad bill you're plowing."

"I know it. Bad hoss, pullin' th' plow, bad plow, bad everything."

"Why, you talk like you were the poorest man in Arkansas," laughed the planter.

"I ain't, though," was the response, as the young fellow smiled good-naturedly. "Another feller owns half o' this crop."

"I wish," a lady recently said to her husband with what Punch discreetly terms "considerable emphasis," "I wish you wouldn't always sit on the piano-stool when we have company. Everybody knows you can't play a note."

A lady famed for her skill in cooking was entertaining a number of her friends at tea. Everything on the table was much admired, but the excellence of the sponge cake was especially the subject of remark.

"Oh!" exclaimed one of the guests, "it is so beautifully soft and light! Do tell me where you got the recipe."

"I am very glad," replied the hostess, "that you find it so soft and light. I made it out of my own head."—Illustrated Bits.

Terrible Fate.

There is something which will appeal to every American in the horror of a fate invoked upon Henry James, Sr., by his son, the novelist, and recorded in the letters of E. L. Godkin.

The young man had been worsted in argument, and exclaimed: "Then may your mashed potatoes always have lumps in them!"—Youth's Companion.

The man who thinks he is weighty because he is wordy usually is short weight when it comes to works.

An Ambition.

"So you want to become an ambassador," exclaimed the man of power. "Yes," replied the opulent person. "I thought you were devoted to your automobile. When did you become interested in diplomacy?"

"I'm not especially interested in diplomacy. What I want is to get some position where I'll have government protection against arrest for violating the speed regulation."

GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

ELLEN M. OLSON CLARA E. DARMSTADTER

The responsibility for a daughter's future largely rests with the mother. The right influence and the information which is of vital interest to the daughter imparted at the proper time has not only saved the life but insured the success of many a beautiful girl.

When a girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, her mother should come to her aid, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, will at this time prepare the system for the coming change, and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities. It has been thus depended upon for two generations.

Hundreds of letters from young girls and their mothers, expressing gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for them, are constantly being received.

Miss Ellen M. Olson, of 417 N. East St., Kewanee, Ill. writes:—

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have had the best doctors in our town for my sickness and they all thought that an operation was necessary. I had headache, sideache, and my feet were so sore I could hardly stand. I took two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when my periods were established and now I am perfectly well. My mother says she would not have without your medicine in the house. I have told one girl what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me and she is taking it now."

Miss Clara E. Darmstadter, of 453 Breckenridge St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:—

"For about a year, except during the past few months, I suffered with severe pains every month, with backaches and headaches. I had the blues so bad that I was in despair. It is a pleasure to tell you that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me. The change in my appearance is wonderful and I desire that this good may come to every sufferer. Any one desiring to know further details may write to me and I shall be glad to give them."

If you know of any young girl who is sick and needs motherly advice, ask her to address Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and tell her every detail of her symptoms, and to keep nothing back. She will receive advice absolutely free, from a source that has no rival in the experience of woman's ills, and it will, if followed, put her on the right road to a strong, healthy and happy womanhood.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs cures where others fail.

No other remedy has such a record of actual cures of female ills. Thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it has done for them.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a gentle laxative, and it is the only one that does not injure the system.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, The Hall's Family Pills are the best.

NIGHTS OF UNREST.

No Sleep, No Rest, No Peace for the Sufferer From Kidney Trouble.

No peace for the kidney sufferer—Pain and distress from morn to night.

Get up with a lame back, Twinges of backache bother you all day.

Dull aching breaks your rest at night, Urinary disorders add to your misery.

Get at the cause—cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills will work the cure.

There're for the kidneys only—Have made great cures in Northville.

Mrs. H. L. Lockwood, living on Center St. North, Northville, Mich., says "Just about a year ago my husband began having kidney trouble. At first he suffered from pains across the small of his back, which he thought were brought on by lifting and hard work. His kidneys became irregular in their action causing him to get up several times during the night. They also contained a brick colored sediment. A relative had used Doan's Kidney Pills with the best of success and a box was procured at Murdoch Bros. drug store. He used them, and they relieved him in a short time. His trouble gradually became better. I can heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as a valuable remedy for backache and kidney disease."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Cordite Walking Stick.

In a discussion in the house of parliament relative to the danger of cordite Mr. Haldane said that he had a walking stick made of this explosive which he had often carried into the cloakroom of parliament.

Itching, bleeding, protruding or blind piles yield to Doan's Ointment. Chronic cases soon relieved, finally cured. Druggists all sell it.

New Nobility.

Four peers, 11 baronets and 33 knights were created by the king of Great Britain on his last birthday. Nominally the king did it, in reality the liberal ministry did it, the "birthday honors" being one of the perquisites of office.

The Best Laxative for Children. Parents should see to it that their children have no natural, easy movement of the bowels each day. Do not dose the child with salts or gripping pills, as they are too powerful in effect, and usually tear their little insides to pieces, leaving the bowels weakened and less able to act naturally than before.

Laxative Iron—ex Tablets tone and strengthen the bowels, and stimulate all the little organs to healthy activity. Chocolate coated tablets, easy to take, never grip or nauseate. 10c, 25c and $1.00. For sale and recommended by Murdoch Bros., Druggists.
