WARNER SAYS ITS ROOSEVELT

THINKS HE CANNOT REFUSE IF NOMINATED.

Michigan's Governor Confident the President Will Be.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 7.—Governor Warner, who has returned from his trip to Jamestown and Washington, is confident that Roosevelt will be renominated.

"I think the president is perfectly sincere in what he has said," declared the governor, but if the republican party goes right ahead and nominates him, he cannot refuse, and everything goes to show that they will do just that. The conditions are such that the whole party will turn to him. In Michigan 50,000 democrats voted for Roosevelt in 1904, and every local candidate will be for Roosevelt at the head of the ticket."

ROY R. DARWIN BEEN SELECTED

POSITION OF RATE EXPERT WITH R. R. COMMISSION.

One of Best Rate Men in the State of Michigan.

For the important position of rate expert to the state railway commission R. R. Darwin, in charge of Pere Marquette tariff schedules, has been selected. Mr. Darwin has been with Michigan railroads for a number of years, including twelve years with the Pere Marquette, employed most of the time on the rate work which he will look after for the commission.

Mr. Darwin's selection was the result of a civil service examination and from a dozen or more applications he was the unanimous choice of the commission. He takes his new position December 1, but as yet he does not know whether it will necessitate his moving to Lansing. Mr. Darwin is recognized as one of the best posted rate men in the state and the commission has made a wise selection.

OPINIONS FROM THE STATE PRESS

"WILL NOT BE A BOXER"
The republican Petoskey Record opines that "whoever shall be the republican nominee for governor next year he is not going to be a Boxer, and he is going to stand upon the planks of Gov. Warner's platform, and is going to be elected."

"NOTHER KNOCK AT PINGREE."
"Warner is one of the biggest demagogues since Pingree," editorially shouts the Central Michigan Times, Mt. Pleasant. Then immediately following the shout is printed a fine picture of the ever genial doctor, labelled: "Auditor-General Bradley, the leading candidate for governor on the republican ticket."

METHODS IN THEIR MADNESS.
"Here is a bit of editorial thought on a live subject that the republican Mancelona Herald throws out: 'Occasionally a paper is found that is supporting Bradley for governor and making sarcastic remarks about Gov. Warner's special session of the legislature and thus upholding the Boxers. On looking a little further it will also be found that such a paper has been named to publish the tax sales for its county. Such editorial utterances are virtually bought and weigh very little.'"

"Largest Retail Dr. Store."
The greatest drug store in the world is said to be found in Russia. It exists in Moscow and is 203 years old. Its title is the Old Nikola Pharmacy, and since 1833 it has been in the family of the present proprietor. It is a building of imposing dimensions, with many departments, including one of professional education for the staff, which numbers 700 persons. About 2,000 prescriptions are said to be dispensed daily.

The Phrenometer.
A curious electric machine is the phrenometer. The sensitive part of the instrument is a huge metal cap, which is brought slowly down upon the head, and clasping the skull gently but firmly, indicates the size of the "bumps" at 28 different points. The turning of a handle not only registers the size of each "bump," but prints and delivers the record.

Our Greatest Land Thieves.
Eighteen thousand acres of farmlands are now washed downstream each year by the Missouri and Mississippi rivers. This amounts to about the area of a small county or 30 miles square of fertile land.

For a Biography.
Mrs. Michael Davitt is soliciting from friends of her husband in this country such documents and other material as may be useful in preparing an authentic life of the well-known Irishman.

Degeneracy.
When genius begins to get rich it becomes mere talent.

SCHOOL CHILDREN

MUST NOT REMAIN IN PUBLIC PLACES

Where Billiards, Dice, Cards, Etc.,
Are Played.

Superintendent of schools, Hornberger asks the Record to publish the following law passed by the last legislature:

"No minor child under seventeen years of age, nor any minor who is a student in any public, private or parochial school in the state of Michigan, shall be permitted to remain in any saloon, barroom or other place where any spirituous or intoxicating liquor is sold, given away or furnished for a beverage, or in any place of amusement known as dance houses, concert saloons, variety theaters, or in any room or hall occupied or used for fire, gain, or reward, for the purpose of playing billiards, pool, ninepins, bowling, cards, dice or any other unlawful game, or in any room or hall used or occupied for gaming, pool-selling, or betting in any manner whatever. Any proprietor, keeper or manager of any such place, who shall permit such child to remain in any such place, and any person who shall encourage or induce in any way such child, to enter such place or to remain therein, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than thirty days or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court."

Baptist Church Notes.

(By a Member.)

Subject for morning service "Christ the Fulfillment of the Law." In the evening, "The Law of Christian Perfection in Contrast with the Law of Retaliation."

Mrs. Arthur Scott thanks the "Marys" for their loyalty in standing by her in the contest, and feels that much credit is due them as over $50 was earned by "the sweat of their faces." The whole sum raised was $93.55. The "Marys" feel especially gratified to Mrs. Kurth for her suggestions of the goblin social and opening her house for the same, which netted the neat little sum of $20.

The "Martha" and "Mary" contest closed Saturday afternoon when they met with Mrs. S. F. Dimmock. After counting up their hard earned pennies it was found that the "Marthas" had won the race and added $128.81 to the treasury. The "Marthas" were so sure they were beaten that they brought along the lunch which the defeated side was to serve, and all greatly enjoyed it. A jolly good time was had.

Methodist Church Notes.

(By the Pastor.)

All services as usual Sunday.

Don't forget the chicken pie supper this (Friday) evening in the Methodist church parlors. Supper will be served from 5:00 o'clock until all are supplied. Everybody invited.

Wishes.

Wishes are held to be ominous; according to which belief the order of the world is so arranged that if you have an implausible objection to a squire, your offspring is more likely to be born with one; also that if you happen to desire a squire, you would not get it. This desponding view of probability the hopeful entirely reject, taking their wishes as good and sufficient security for all kinds of fulfillment.

"Garlands"

Grocery Qualities

The higher the quality, the lower the price!

We mean that on really superexcellent groceries our prices are considerably lower than what you will find in other stores. In fact, the majority of the groceries we carry are not to be found in any other store in town at any price—they're too fine to find ready sale in ordinary stores. That's why we make a specialty of them at even lower prices than other groceries are offered for elsewhere.

How the Rattles Are Worn.

The rattles lie edgewise. It is evident that they must do so, inasmuch as they are but continuations of the backbone. The snake carries the rattles on the ground except when he raises them to sound his warning. This will be evidenced by the fact that in every snake of any size that is killed the rattles are worn through on the under side.—Forest and Stream.

To Gauge Flow of Well.

To calculate the rate of flow of an artesian well a simple plan is to lower a bottle of anil ne fluid to a depth of, say 500 feet, and then electrically explode a cap to burst the bottle. The time required for the fluid to appear at the surface gives an accurate gauge as to the velocity of flow.

Beware of Procrastination.

Remember that the present is the time to act, don't wait on the future. The present is yours, but the future is not, it may never knock at your door. What may be done at any time will be done at no time. If a thing is worth doing, don't stand shivering on the brink, but jump in and do it.

Limitations of Money

The farmer used to think that money could buy everything worth having. That was years ago, and he is heartily glad that the illusion has been dispelled. The best things of life are not on the market, and never will be, and money has no power over them. It can buy neither happiness nor content, nor can it buy a home.

Girls to Be Pitied.

I know of many well-to-do middle class families where the daughters, having received the education of canary birds, are launched on a sea of gaiety with a cargo of pretty smiles and frocks to captivate husbands—Madame.

He the Tide and She the Shore.

One of the precise facts that young women should be taught, as they are taught physical geography, is that men, all men, have their high and low emotional tides, and a good wife is the immovable shore to her husband's restless life—Atlantic Monthly.

Training Divers.

The British Admiralty divers and every British warship carries at least one representative of the craft and frequently more. There are training schools at Portsmouth, Devonport and Sheerness.

Decent Humility.

"You can't allus gib a man credit fch a clear conscience," said Uncle Eben, "because he looks cheerful. Dar is some people dat smiles de hardest after dey has put through de crookedes' deals."

No Consumption There.

Practically all you need to be safe from consumption is to live in a semi-tropical country, where the yearly rainfall does not exceed 12 or 15 inches.

Making of Poor Citizens.

The selfish, poorly trained, overfed and overdrilled boy is apt to develop into a poor citizen unless he has the benefit of unusual experience in his young manhood.

Easy to Hold India.

Over 70 per cent. of the natives of India till the land; hence the population is scattered and their power of co-operation is greatly lessened.

Are Acclimated.

The native women of Ecuador are so used to strong heat and light that they even do their spinning out of doors in the blazing sun.

Give a starving sinner a square meal

NEWS OF A WEEK TOLD IN BRIEF

GIVEN IN ITEMIZED FORM

Notable Happenings Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man—Summary of the Latest Home and Foreign Notes.

Financial conditions in New York and the east generally were nearly normal again. The need of currency to move the cotton crop developed in the south and a committee from New Orleans conferred with Secretary Cortelyou. The California Safe Deposit & Trust company's bank in San Francisco closed but was believed to be solvent. Bankers in the state of Washington ignored the holiday proclaimed by the governor.

Indications that the available supply of cash would be materially increased within a short time, both by imports of gold and the increase of the bank note circulation, and that the movement of cotton and grain crops would be facilitated in every way possible with the result of increasing our credits abroad, were the salient features of the financial situation.

Relief from monetary stringency can only be secured by a system of credit currency which shall meet the requirements of trade and be redeemable in gold, according to Congressman Charles Fowler of New Jersey, chairman of the banking and currency committee of the house.

THE STATE IN GENERAL

THE LOCATION OF THE STATE CAPITAL TO COME UP AGAIN.

DETROIT'S CLAIM FOR IT

Michigan Banks Are All Right—Watered Stock Becomes Expensive to Holders.

The State Capital.

The ancient claim of Detroit that it is the legal capital of the state is to be passed upon by the constitutional convention, and organizations are already reported as forming in various sections of the state to remedy what Gov. Pingree called the "crime of 1847," when the state legislature moved the capital from Detroit, and ordered that it be located in the "township of Lansing," in the county of Ingham, at that time in the midst of a forest and 20 miles distant from any railroad.

In the convention of 1835 a clause was included which provided that the capital should be located at Detroit until 1847, when the legislature should locate a permanent capital. There were many claimants, Grand Branch in Genesee county; Byron, in Shawansee county; Lyons, in Tonia county; Dexter, in Washtenaw county, besides such cities as Jackson, Ann Arbor, Marshall, Corunna, Eaton Rapids and Battle Creek. Finally the committee of the whole, which had risen several times in agreement, always to be rejected by the house, located the capital in the wilderness.

Since that time, at intervals, and especially since Gov. Pingree's message, there have been many attempts to pass an amendment through the legislature to return the capital to Detroit.

Sane People in Asylums.

C. W. Mason, editor of the Northwest Farmer, published in Menominee, charges that heartless relatives who wish to become rid of infirm old people, send them to asylums on the pretext of insanity, and that the state asylums are full of instances of his charges. He says that there are at least fifty patients of this sort in the Newberry asylum.

In an editorial Mason directs his attacks not on the superintendents of the asylum, but on the public and the county officials, who permit the alleged conditions to exist either through ignorance or neglect of duty.

"It is for the humanity of the public to know to what extent this practice is carried on and to put a summary stop to it," he says. "It is for the authorities in each county to investigate conditions at home and to carefully scan each case of insanity to see that absolute justice is done."

Cowardly Hunters.

Floyd Osborn, a young man of Sherman township, was accidentally shot and perhaps disfigured for life by a hunter in the woods near his home. He received the entire charge in his face and chest, one shot going through his nose and others tearing his cheeks and shoulders. The hunters had started a partridge and fired, and Osborn was in line of the charge. When the hunters heard Osborn's cry and saw him fall they fled into the thicket and disappeared. Osborn became unconscious, but recovered sufficiently to drag himself home. He thinks he recognized one of the hunters.

Watered Stock Held.

A jury in the circuit court decided in favor of the Athens Savings bank in the suit against the stockholders of the defunct Star Manufacturing Co. for $3,000, holding that the stockholders were liable for the unpaid 66.23 per cent, or "watered" stock of the company.

The suit was the first under the limited corporation law, and if upheld by the supreme court, will have a state wide influence. Hundreds of Michigan investors have lost their investments in stock companies, and if compelled to pay for the "watering," many will lose their entire fortunes.

A School Bank.

The school savings bank, which went into effect Friday in Ann Arbor, was a success from the start and at night the same day a total of $49.97 had been deposited by 227 pupils. The individual deposits ranged from one cent to $5.05. The deposits are made by the children of the fourth to eighth grades. The system used embodies many of the principles used in other schools, but has one distinctive feature, that of the accounting, which is carried on entirely in the commercial department of the high school under the direction of Prof. D. W. Springer.

Goes to Austria.

James O'Donnell, former congressman, Jackson editor, and mentioned frequently as Republican candidate for governor, has gone to Vienna, Austria, where he expects to make his permanent home. The family likes the Austrian city and with the good sized fortune O'Donnell has accumulated, will be able to live there in a comfortable fashion, O'Donnell says he will retain his American citizenship.

I voted for Fremont in 1856, and have voted the Republican ticket ever since, but if I live another year I will vote the Democratic ticket."

As he spoke these words, Samuel Smith, 75, pioneer farmer of Davitt township, dropped dead.

The usual price for rabbits in Coldwater is 15 cents apiece or two for 25 cents. But Isaac Clair has just whacked up $30 for 17. Two weeks ago Mrs. Urban, hearing a commotion in her rabbit pen early one morning, hurried out and found Clair's dog surveying 17 dead rabbits. A jury assessed Clair $30.

NICE BOY.

Allice Marsh As a Grocer Boy Just Fell Right Into Her Work.

When "Victor Mars," a "boy" of about 16, applied to George H. Johnson, a Detroit grocer, he was struck with the pleasing personality of the applicant, and immediately gave "him" work. Victor's first duty was to go to the stable, feed and hitch up the horse. The lad obeyed with great willingness, frequently washing his white hands and handling some things about the stable with a gingerly air. The grocer became suspicious, and when Mrs. John Campbell, the lady of the house where "Victor" roomed, came and told of how Victor was sleeping in a lady's night dress and wearing other articles of feminine apparel, the story of the disappearance of Allice Marsh, of Jackson, was cleared up.

When confronted with the facts, the little girl admitted to the landlady that she was not a "real boy," but that she was masquerading because she didn't want to stay home. She said her mother abused her. Being discovered, Allice hunted up a brother who lives in the city and is now at his home none the worse for her masquerade.

Farmer Robbed.

O. W. Brissitt, farmer and former postmaster of Ossinike, was held up by two men near Ossinike while driving home from Alpena. The robbers relieved him of 97 cents, but missed some bills and valuable papers in an inside pocket. One man flourished a revolver and the other man held the horse. It is believed the men are the same who robbed two saloons in Millersburg last Wednesday night.

School Money.

According to the apportionment of the primary school money there are 747,091 school children in Michigan and $2,989,321 to be apportioned among them, or about $4 per child. Wayne county has 110,217 school children and gets $440,860, and Rosconm county, which has the fewer children of any, has 579 pupils attending its schools, and gets $2,316.

MICHIGAN ITEMS.

Owing to a clause in the franchise of the Michigan United Railway Co. will not move its general offices to Jackson.

Frank Jackson, the Kinde farmer who systematically robbed his neighbors for years, has been sentenced to Jackson prison to serve a term of from 3 to 15 years.

Charles Siegles, of Williamstown, is probably fatally injured as the result of an encounter with Steve Lawler, while working in a gravel pit, and the latter is under arrest.

Insane over the death of his son, who was killed for his money in Norfolk, Va., a year ago, Rev. N. H. Dolson, a retired Cedarville clergyman, was sent to the Newberry asylum.

Of the $2,989,321 to be apportioned among the primary schools, Wayne county will receive $440,868. The apportionment is about $4 for each of the 747,091 school children in the state.

Freddie Matthews, aged 6, was run down by a car in Grand Rapids and both legs cut off. His mother had no money for street car fare to go to the hospital, and the physicians paid for a carriage.

Ernest W. Angell, aged 25, who is accused of embezzling something like $11,000 from the Ann Arbor railroad, while acting as its agent at Manistique, was arrested in Detroit and taken back to that place.

The tenth annual reunion of the Hoadley family was held at Cedar Springs and Mr. and Mrs. John Hoadley, aged 77 and 75 respectively, celebrated their 58th wedding anniversary at

SYNOPSIS.

A detachment of the Eighteenth Infantry from Fort Bethune trapped by Indians in a narrow gorge. Among them a stranger who introduces himself by the name of Hampton, also Gillis, the scout trader, and his daughter. Gillis and a majority of the soldiers are killed during a three days' siege. Hampton and the girl only escape from the Indians. They fall exhausted on the plains. A company of the Seventh Cavalry, Lieut. Brant in command, find them.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

As if by some magic discipline the rude, effective litters were rapidly made ready, and the two seemingly lifeless bodies gently lifted from off the ground and deposited carefully within. Down the long, brown slope they advanced slowly, a soldier grasping the rein and walking at each horse's head, the supporting blankets, securely fastened about the saddle pommels, swaying gently to the measured tread of the trained animals. Beneath the protecting shadows of the first group of cottonwoods, almost on the banks of the muddy Bear Water, the little party let down their senseless burdens, and began once more their seemingly hopeless efforts at resuscitation. A fire was hastily kindled from dried and broken branches, and broth was made, which was forced through teeth that had to be pried open. Water was used unsparingly, the soldiers working with feverish eagerness, inspired by the constant admonitions of their officer, as well as their own curiosity to learn the facts hidden behind this tragedy.

It was the dark eyes of the girl which opened first, instantly closing again as the glaring light swept into them. Then slowly, and with wonderment, she gazed up into those strange, rough faces surrounding her, pausing in her first survey to rest her glance on the sympathetic countenance of the young lieutenant, who held her half reclining upon his arm.

"Here," he exclaimed, kindly, interpreting her glance as one of fear, "you are all right and perfectly safe now, with friends to care for you. Peters, bring another cup of that broth. Now, miss, just take a sup or two of this, and your strength will come back in a jiffy. What was the trouble? Starving?"

She did exactly as he bade her, every movement mechanical, her eyes fastened upon his face.

"I reckon that was partly it," she responded at last, her voice faint and husky. Then her glance wandered away, and finally rested upon another little kneeling group a few yards farther down stream. A look of fresh intelligence swept into her face.

"Is that him?" she questioned, tremblingly. "Is—Is he dead?"

"He wasn't when we first got here, but mightily near gone, I'm afraid. I've been working over you ever since."

She shook herself free and sat weakly up, her lips tight compressed, her eyes apparently blind to all save that motionless body she could barely distinguish. "Let me tell you, that fellow's a man, just the same, the gamest, nerviest man I ever saw. I reckon he got hit, too, though he never said nothing about it. That's his style."

The deeply interested lieutenant removed his watchful eyes from off his charge just long enough to glance inquiringly across his shoulder. "Has the man any signs of a wound, sergeant?" he asked, loudly.

"A mighty ugly slug in the shoulder, sir, has bled scandalous, but I guess it's the very luck that's goin' to save him; seems now to be comin' out all right."

The officer's brows knitted savagely. "It begins to look as if this might be some of our business. What happened? Indians?"

"Yes."

"How far away?"

"I don't know. They caught us in a canyon somewhere out yonder, maybe be three or four days ago; there was a lot killed, some of them soldiers. My dad was shot, and then that night he got me out up the rocks, and he—he was carrying me in his arms when I—I fainted. I saw there was blood on his shirt, and it was dripping down on the grass as he walked. That's about all I know."

"Who is the man? What's his name?"

The girl looked squarely into the lieutenant's eyes, and, for some reason, which she could never clearly explain even to herself, lied calmly. "I don't know; I never asked."

Sergeant Carson rose stiffly from his knees beside the extended figure and strode heavily across toward where they were sitting, lifting his hand in soldierly salute, his heels clicking as he brought them sharply together in military precision.

"The fellow is getting his eyes open, sir," he reported, "and is breathing more regular. Purty weak yet, but he'll come round in time." He stared curiously down at the girl now sitting up unsupported, while a sudden look of surprised recognition swept across his face.

"Great guns!" he exclaimed, eagerly, "but I know you. You're old man Gillis' gal from Bethune, ain't ye?"

"Yes," she acknowledged simply, "but he's dead."

"Never mind, little girl," the lieutenant said, with boyish sympathy. "I knew Gillis, and, now the sergeant has spoken, I remember you quite well. Thought all the time your face was familiar, but couldn't quite decide where I had seen you before. So poor old Gillis has gone, and you are left all alone in the world! Well, he was an old soldier, could not have hoped to live much longer anyway, and would rather go fighting at the end. We'll take you back with us to Bethune, and the ladies of the garrison will look after you."

The recumbent figure lying a few yards away half lifted itself upon one elbow, and Hampton's face, white and haggard, stared uncertainly across the open space. For an instant his gaze dwelt upon the crossed sabers shielding the gilded "7" on the front of the lieutenant's scouting hat, then settled upon the face of the girl. With one hand pressed against the grass he pushed himself slowly up until he sat facing them, his teeth clinched tight, his gray eyes gleaming feverishly in their sunken sockets.

"I'll be damned if you will!" he said, hoarsely. "She's my girl now."

CHAPTER V. A New Proposition.

To one in the least inclined toward fastidiousness, the Miners' Home at

"Now Miss, Just Take a Sip of This."

Glencaid would scarcely appeal as a desirable place for long-continued residence. But such a one would have had small choice in the matter, as it chanced to be the only hotel there. The Miners' Home was unquestionably unique as regards architectural details, having been constructed by sections, in accordance with the rapid development of the camp, and enjoyed the further distinction—there being only two others equally stylish in town—of being built of sawn plank, although, greatly to the regret of its unfortunate occupants, lack of seasoning had resulted in wide cracks in both walls and stairway, while strict privacy within the chambers was long ago a mere reminiscence. Without the Miners' Home put up a good front, and was in reality the most pretentious structure gracing the single cluttered street of Glencaid. Directly across the street, its front a perfect blaze of glass, stood invitingly the Occidental saloon, but the Widow Guffy, who operated the Miners' Home with a strong hand, possessed an antipathy to strong liquor, which successfully kept all suspicion of intoxicating drink absent from those sacredly guarded precincts, except as her transient guests imported it internally.

Mr. Hampton during the course of his somewhat erratic career had previously passed several eventful weeks in Glencaid. He was neither unknown nor unappreciated at the Miners' Home, and having on previous occasions established his reputation as a spender, experienced little difficulty now in procuring promptly the very best accommodation which the house afforded. That this arrangement was accomplished somewhat to the present discomfort of two vociferous eastern tourists did not greatly interfere with his pleasurable interest in the situation.

"Send those two fellows in here to argue it out," he said, languidly, after listening disgustedly to their loud lamentations in the hallway, and addressing his remarks to Mrs. Guffy, who had glanced into the room to be again assured regarding his comfort, and to express her deep regret over the unseemly racket. "The girl has fallen asleep, and I'm getting tired of hearing so much noise."

"No, be hiviags, an ye don't do nuthin' of that sort, Bob," returned the widow, good-naturedly, busying herself with a dust-rag. "This is me own house, an' Ol've tended ter the loikes of them sort er fellers afore. There'll be no more bother this time. Be'sides, it's a peaceful house Ol'v runnin', an' Ol'v know-ye'r way of sittin' them things. It's too strenuous ye are, Misther Hampton. And what did ye do wid the young lady, Ol'v make bould to ask?"

Hampton carelessly waved his hand toward the rear room, the door of which stood ajar, and blew a thick cloud of smoke into the air, his eyes continuing to gaze dreamily through the open window toward the distant hills.

"Who's running the game over at the Occidental?" he asked, professionally.

"Red Starlin, bad cess to him!" and her eyes regarded her questioner with renewed anxiety. "But sure now, Bob, ye mustn't think of playin' git awhile. Yer nerves are in no fit shape, an' won't be fer a wake yet."

He made no direct reply, and she hung about, flapping the dust-rag uneasily.

"An' what did ye mane ter be doin' wid the young gurl?" she questioned at last, in womanly curiosity.

Hampton wheeled about on the hard chair, and regarded her quizzically. "Mrs. Guffy," he said, slowly, "you've been a mother to me, and it would certainly be unkind not to give you a straight tip. Do? Why, take care of her, of course. What else would you expect of one possessing my kindly disposition and well-known motives of philanthropy? Can it be that I have resided with you, off and on, for ten years past without your ever realizing the fond yearnings of er sun was pouring a perfect flood of gold across the rag carpet, but he remained utterly unconscious as to what saved the gloomy trend of his own awakened memories. Some one rapped upon the outer door.

"Come in," he exclaimed, carelessly, and barely glancing up. "Well, what is it this time, Mrs. Guffy?"

The landlady had never before seen this usually happy guest in his present mood, and she watched him curiously.

"A man wants ter see ye," she announced, shortly, her hand on the knob.

"Oh, I'm in no shape for play tonight; go back and tell him so."

"Sure, an' it's aisy nough ter see thet wid half an eye. But this un isn't thet kind of a man, an' he's so moighty perlit about it. Ol'v can't find the loikes of him away. It's Missus Guffy, me dear madam, wud ye be kind enough to convey me compliments to Misther Robert Hampton, and request him to grant me a few minutes of his time on an important matter?" Sure, an' what do ye think of thet?"

"Huh! One of those fellows who had these rooms?" and Hampton rose to his feet with animation.

The landlady lowered her voice to an almost inaudible whisper.

"It's the Rev. Howard Wynkoop," she announced, impressively, dwelling upon the name. "The Rev. Howard Wynkoop, the Prashytarian-missionary—wouldn't thet cork ye?"

It evidently did, for Mr. Hampton stared at her for fully a minute in an amazement too profound for fit expression in words. Then he swallowed something in his throat.

"Show the gentleman up," he said, shortly, and sat down to wait.

The Rev. Howard Wynkoop was neither giant nor dwarf, but the very fortunate possessor of a countenance which at once awakened confidence in his character. He entered the room quietly, rather dreading this interview with one of Mr. Hampton's well-known proclivities, yet in this case feeling abundantly fortified in the righteousness of his cause. His brown eyes met the inquisitive gray ones frankly, and Hampton waved him silently toward a vacant chair.

"Our lines of labor in this vineyard being so entirely opposite," the latter said, coldly, but with intended politeness, "the honor of your unexpected call quite overwhelms me. I shall have to trouble you to speak somewhat softly in explanation of your present mission, so as not to disturb a young girl who chances to be sleeping in the room beyond."

"It was principally upon her account I ventured to call," Wynkoop explained in sudden confidence. "Might I see her?"

Hampton's watchful eyes swept the other's face suspiciously and his hands clinched.

"Relative?" he asked gravely.

The preacher shook his head.

"Friend of the family, perhaps?"

"No, Mr. Hampton. My purpose in coming here is perfectly proper, yet the request was not advanced as a right, but merely as a special privilege."

A moment Hampton hesitated; then he arose and quietly crossed the room, holding open the door. Without a word being spoken the minister followed, and stood beside him. For several minutes the eyes of both men rested upon the girl's sleeping form and upturned face. Then Wynkoop drew silently back, and Hampton closed the door noiselessly.

"Well," he said, inquiringly, "what does all this mean?"

"Let us sit down again," said the minister, "and I will try to make my purpose sufficiently clear. I am not here to mince words, nor do I believe you to be the kind of a man who would respect me if I did. I may say something that will not sound pleasant, but in the cause of my Master I cannot hesitate. You are an older man than I, Mr. Hampton; your experience in life has doubtless been much broader than mine, and it may even be that in point of education you are likewise my superior. Nevertheless, as the only minister of the gospel residing in this community it is beyond question my plain duty to speak a few words to you in behalf of this young lady, and her probable future. I trust not to be offensive, yet cannot shirk the requirements of my sacred office."

The speaker paused, somewhat disconcerted perhaps by the hardening of the lines in Hampton's face.

"Go on," commanded Hampton, tersely, "only let the preacher part slide, and say just what you have to say as man to man."

"I prefer to do so," he continued. "It will render my unpleasant task much easier, and yield us both a more direct road to travel. I have been laboring on this field for nearly three years. When I first came here you were pointed out to me as a most dangerous man, and ever since then I have constantly been regaled by the stories of your exploits. I have known you merely through such unfriendly reports, and came here strongly prejudiced against you as a representative of every evil I was against. We have never met before, because there seemed to be nothing in common between us; because I had been led to suppose you to be an entirely different man from what I now believe you are."

Hampton stared unasily in his chair.

"Shall I paint in exceedingly plain words the picture given me of you?"

TO JAPAN.

Admiral Evans Wants to Go to Yokohama With the Battleships.

Rear Admiral Evans was given a dinner by the Lotus club in New York Saturday night and in response to a toast to his health said: "This fleet of 16 battleships and other vessels will sail from Hampton Roads on December 15. I do not think anybody wants to stop it. I don't think anybody will stop it, for I know the men and I know the ships. You won't be disappointed in the fleet, whether it proves to be a feast, a frolic or a fight. It would please me very much to take the fleet to Yokohama. I know the Japanese and I know that we would get a welcome there. I know it would not be the welcome we would get from a certain gang in San Francisco. I do not fear the flower shows and the dog shows, but I do fear the hospitality of the western people. When I took charge of the fleet two and a half years ago we had some target practice out there which I thought was good, and it was good. But during the last target practice in Massachusetts Bay we did better than was ever done in the world before."

Evans described the target practice when a 30x30 feet target was shot at a range of 5.14 miles, just as would be done in battle. He said, proudly, that the target was practically destroyed in two minutes and 15 seconds.

Former Secretary of the Treasury Shaw said that it was a good thing to have a navy, especially one that "hits," which was, after all, the only real navy.

After Fishermen.

It has transpired that the gasoline yacht, Kitchell, supposed to have been bound to the Gulf with a party of New Yorkers, has been in the commission of the state fish and game department on a trip of inspection of fishermen's nets. In order to keep the news from the fishermen it was announced that a rich New York man was taking some of his friends on a lakes-to-the-gulf trip.

Cattle Buyer Missing

James Purdy, a well-known cattle buyer, who makes Standsish his headquarters, is missing, and no trace of him can be found. Purdy left the "So" about a week ago in a rig and went into the country. The rig was returned without Purdy. He had a considerable sum of money with him when he disappeared and his family, who live in Columbiaville, fear he may have been robbed and killed.

A total of 2,900 clerks and special agents have been at work for months gathering this data and 140 are still engaged in the task.

A Righteous Protest.

Mrs. Brown—I see that over 1,000 unmarried girls from Europe have just landed at New York.

Miss Green (aged 45, estimated)—The very idea. One would think it wasn't hard enough now to capture a man without importing a lot of foreigners to interfere with the chances of our own girls.—Detroit Free Press.

Strong Indication.

"That boy of ours is certainly going to be at the head of a big trust some day," said Farmer Kornkob with pride, as he laid down the Weekly Screech.

"What makes you think so, Hiram?" asked his wife.

"His teacher at school says he refuses to answer questions."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Like Meeting Like.

"That," she murmured ruefully, as the patrol wagon drove off with its battered freight, "was the clashing of two hard wills."

"In what way, my girl?" asked the sympathetic bystander.

"The contact of my Williams head with the policeman's billy."—Baltimore American.

Thoughtful.

"Say, pa, won't you buy me a drum?"

"No, I'm afraid you'd disturb me with the noise."

"No I won't, pa; I'll only drum when you're asleep."—Life.

Two Ciphers.

He—They say his income runs into five figures.

She—Yes, counting the decimal places.—Puck.

The Natural Result.

It Is Up to the People.

The opposition of the "boxers" and their sympathizers to the "pre-posterous third term for governor scheme" will not deceive anyone. Every one of these horrified politicians is and has been for years a firm supporter of candidates for a third, and, in many instances, a fourth and fifth term for congressman. It is not the third term that bothers them at all. It is the man who occupies the governor's chair. They well know that they cannot stir up any opposition to him because of his advocacy of reforms demanded by the people, so they seek to beloud the issue by attempting to take a virtuous stand against a third term in this particular instance. These same men would favor a third or a sixth term for a governor who would do their bidding. They have no use, however, for one who opposes them and stands firmly for the people's interests. The people can be depended upon to size up the situation correctly.

Appealing for Opposition.

After devoting a column of space to an argument against a third term for Governor Warner, a Detroit newspaper made an appeal for expressions of opinion on this subject, well knowing, of course, that its own announced opposition would naturally draw responses only from those persons and newspapers entertaining like views. This first appeal was followed by others for several days. The net result has been lengthy communications from less than half a dozen individuals, some from sources which have always opposed any and every republican candidate, whether a first term or otherwise, and at least two of whom are so firm in his convictions that he is ashamed of them and so declines to sign their names to the communications. These individuals may be interested in the fact that thus far Governor Warner has received from Michigan voters many more than one hundred commendatory letters to each hostile one that other activities have produced.

Better Feeling Towards the Con-Con.

It is a pleasure to note evidences of a better feeling on the part of the people of the State toward the constitutional convention, and its work. There is a growing disposition not to discredit the work of the convention in advance, but wait until it is completed and then give the document submitted careful consideration before arriving at a conclusion as to its merits. This is right. The convention embodies in its membership some of the most able and patriotic men in the state. They can be depended upon to do their very best to formulate an organic law that will be dependable in every way.

New R. R. Commission to be Commended.

The State railroad commission is to be commended for the efforts it is putting forth to secure the co-operation of the railroad companies operating in Michigan. The conference between the members of the commission and officials of the companies held last week should be followed by others in the hope that the two interests may work together in securing the enforcement and observance of the law.

His Job.

Barred Monopolists.

On a recent occasion "down south" three little negroes, Moses, Jackson and Timmy, were called into "the house" by "Marse" John, who had owned their grandfather. He informed them that he would give ten bright new cents to the one of them who would tell him what were the three best things in the world. The coins were placed on a table and the white man held out three straws of different lengths, the boy who should draw the longest straw to have the first say. Timmy, the happy winner of this straw, was asked:

"Well, what are the three best things in the world?"

Without a moment's hesitation he answered unctuously:

"I knows. The three bestest things in de worl' am possum 'n' sweet 'tatoes 'n' gravy."

Moses and Jackson made a simultaneous grab for the money and made off with it, one of them shouting back in a belligerent tone:

"He ain't gwine to hab de money, too, for dem's all de bestest things in de worl'."

The Butterflies Know.

"Young men whose incomes are small should realize that social butterflies are not for them," says a New York minister. Unless they behave as if the income limit didn't exist, the social butterflies will soon make them realize that they are not for them very strong. The aid of the pulpit is not required.

Improved Gutta Serena.

Green gutta serena is now obtained from the leaves of the caoutchouc tree, and is said to be more durable than that produced by cutting into the stem of the tree. Unlike the ordinary product, it does not require an expensive process of purification, so that its cost is cheaper. In France green gutta serena is now being employed for the construction of submarine cables.

Catarrh of the Bladder.

Mr. James M. Powell, 431 Kensington street, Kansas City, Mo., writes:

"About four years ago I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable, and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain."

"I began taking Peru-na and it greatly relieved me, and in eleven weeks I was completely cured, and felt like a new man."

Kidneys and Liver Affected.

Mrs. Carrie King, 730 North Cascade, Colorado Springs, Col., writes:

"Peru-na has been my favorite and only household remedy for nearly five years. I have suffered for years with biliousness, and kidney and liver trouble. If I caught a little cold, the pains were increased, and backache and headache were of frequent occurrence."

"However, Peru-na cured me—twelve bottles made me a new and healthy woman. For three years I have enjoyed the best of health. I keep Peru-na constantly in my home, if my husband or I catch cold or feel indisposed, a few doses of Peru-na never fail to restore us."

M. M. T. Gaffney, Corpus Christi, Texas, writes:

"I can certify to the truthfulness of Peru-na as a catarrh cure, and am recommending it to every one. I am practically well of the catarrh in my nose, throat and head."

Dig at Forefathers.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, who had decidedly advanced views about heredity, was once called to treat a mentally afflicted child. The early closing movement in Northville has gone glimmering. Some merchant broke over the rules a few nights ago and sold some goods after hours and that settled it. Now everybody does as he pleases.

S. D. Meseraull who has conducted a barber shop in Rochester for several years, has sold out to go to Northville in a similar business. S. D. is a first class barber and the people of Northville will find him a good citizen.—Rochester Era.

T. J. Perkins & Co. will have their annual "special priced" Sale beginning Saturday, Nov. 9, and closing Saturday, Nov. 16. To thoroughly announce this fact they have just had a lot of large and very neat up-to-date bills printed at the Record office. A clean, well printed bill will attract more attention and do more to advertise business than any number of the little cheap affairs. The Record prophesies a big sale for Perkins & Co.

Hallowe'en has come and gone and notwithstanding the fact that several attractions in the way of socials etc., were going on, the usual number of one story buildings were overturned, porches and steps were carried away, and an extra sized "lawn mower" left in Rev. W. S. Jerome's yard, and a number of other "tricks" played on innocent people. Jokes are all right, but when it comes to overturning buildings and destroying property, it should be prohibited.

Levi Allen, while loading logs in the woods recently, knocked his hat off, and as he stooped to pick it up, a big, fat fox squirrel, attempting to jump from one tree to another, slipped a cog, missed his footing and landed fairly and squarely on Levi's devoted and unprotected head, with all four feet, and every claw extended for business. Did Levi faint? No sir-ee. He grabbed up his trusty whip-stick, slew the unfortunate squirrel, and it made a Sunday pot pie for the Allen family.—Birmingham Eccentric.

Last week we called the attention of our readers to the law passed by the last legislature, compelling all firms doing business under the head of any name except that of the full name or names, must register the names of all the individuals composing the firm, with the county clerk. This will affect nearly every business house in Northville. Certificates may be obtained of the county clerk on application. The registering fee is 25 cents. The fine for not doing it is $25.00. This will apply to such firms as Johnson & Wheeler, Burdock Bros., John Perkins & Co., Golding Milling Co., etc., unless such firms are incorporated under the state law.

Clever Move.

The British navy is to use subtlety in promoting the cause of temperance. Hitherto the names of teetotalers have been marked with a distinguishing letter in the ships' books; to separate them like white blackbirds. Hereafter it is to be the users of grog who are to be marked, and the abstinence that is to be taken for the normal thing.

Flying 3,000 Miles.

The most wonderful bird flight noted is the migratory achievement of the Virginia plover, which leaves its haunts in North America and, taking a course down the Atlantic, reaches the coast of Brazil in one unbroken flight of 15 hours, covering a distance of over 3,000 miles at the rate of four miles a minute.

A Vast Sum.

The amount of money which the government is called upon to redeem in the course of the year reaches an almost fabulous amount. In 1904, for instance, it totaled $912,000,000. This redemption is either for the purpose of securing clean, fresh notes or to get change of some other denomination.

SYNOPSIS.

Burton H. Barnes, a wealthy American touring Corsica, rescues the young English lieutenant, Edward Gerard Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Paolis, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves. Enid Anstruther, sister of the English lieutenant, the fourth of her journey, comes to Marseilles on board the French steamer Constantine. The vendetta pursues and as the quartet are about to board the train for London at Marseilles, Marina is handed a mysterious note which causes her to collapse and necessitates a postponement of her journey. Barnes gets part of the mysterious note and receives letters which inform him that he is marked by the vendetta. He employs an American detective and plans to beat the vendetta at their own game. For the purpose of securing the safety of the women Barnes arranges to have Lady Chartist lease a secluded villa at Nice to which the party is to be taken in a yacht. Suspicion is created that Marina is in league with the Corsicans. A man, believed to be Correggio Danella, is seen passing the house and Marina is thought to have given him a sign.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

"Yes, I've got the schooner Seagull, Mr. William Jameson, Glasgow, chartered for three weeks. Jameson is returning to Scotland and is very willing to lease the boat. We have cleared her for Naples. Crew of six men and mate, all Scotch. The captain, as I told you before, has gone to England, so your naval lieutenant must act as your navigator. She is found as to stores for crew, but as you have suggested, I have put ice and cabin supplies on board, according to the memorandum you gave me."

"Then I think we'll be able to live very comfortably for a couple of weeks," observes Barnes, meditatively, lighting a cigar.

"The Seagull has already dropped out of the Vieux port, where she was laying and she will be off the Corniche road as you directed. I'll have a boat on shore at the Roucas Blanc."

"Then the next thing is to get the ladies on board, and that, of course, we cannot do until after dark," remarks Burton. "You had best not be seen about here any more, Emory, but you had better be on board the Seagull when we arrive there, so as to turn the vessel over to me. See you arrive on the next steamer from either Bastia or Ajaccio, and if this Bernardo Saliceti turns up, notify me if there is any meeting between him and Danella."

"Yes, I'll shadow everything, even you," chuckles the sleuth, grimly. "By the by, here's Pernier's address in Nice. He is quite often there. You will find him, for a French mouchard, perfectly reliable."

"Engage two trustworthy men," said Barnes, "to follow our carriage on horseback this evening. I must take no chances with the ladies in our company." Then Barnes goes off to Lady Chartist's parlor to make some necessary financial arrangements with that lady.

Mr. Barnes has scarcely finished these and Lady Chartist has carried away his cheek delighted, when Maud bounces in upon him, her eyes big with excitement and mystery. "Gee, Marina is a case!" she whispers.

"Why?" asks Burton, glancing sharply at her.

"Why, getting a note from a man the second day she was married and crazy with fear her 48 hours' bridegroom will drop onto her little game."

Barnes gazes upon the infant prodigy and emits a low whistle. "You are certainly a hummer, Maudie," he remarks, solemnly.

"You bet!" assents Miss Chartist, who has just stepped in from an exciting interview with Marina that has run about in this way:

The beautiful Corsican bride, apparently having recovered from the first shock of the letter in the Marseilles depot, being dressed, at Enid's request, for her carriage excursion, seems now full of an excited yet morbid anxiety. Obtaining opportunity when Miss Chartist has entered her bedroom to give her a kiss, tender her condolences and get into the affair "with both feet," as the adolescent, intriguing expresses it to herself, Marina whispers, a strange pathos in her eyes: "Maud, dear, you have come to give me that letter you picked up—the one I dropped on the floor of the railroad depot when I was overcome with the heat this morning."

"Jinks, that's a nice way of putting it—overcome with the heat? It was the letter knocked you," returns the Chartist infant, with a knowing wink.

"No matter what it was affected me," whispers the young Corsican lady, intensely. "The letter—I must have it at once! He—he must not see it!"

"I didn't pick it up!" mutters Maud, doggedly.

"I saw you! Even when my eyes were closing, I saw you! Give me the letter, child, or I shall have to ask your mother to get it from you for me!"

The horrible possibilities of such a demand impress themselves on Maud with distressing effect; she snivels: "Don't tell ma, she'd skin me."

"Then, the letter!" ejaculates Marina, wildly.

"Well, if you must know, I sold it to Barnes for two boxes of marrons glacés."

"Sold that letter? Ay de mi, if he shows it to my husband!" And Marina paces the floor in agitated dread.

"Don't torture me, miserable! I have brought too much misfortune on him already." Tears dim the orbs of the Corsican girl. "Tell dear Mr. Barnes that I must see him; that it is very important."

"Why, sure I'll do it, though I don't think he'll help you put up any job on your—"

"Put up any job? Another base insinuation from your childish lips and I'll tell your mother you had that letter concealed! Away!" Looking like a frenzied goddess, Marina opens her door and Maud speeds from it.

"Gee," remarks the young lady to herself, as she flits along the hotel passageway and notes Anstruther keeping watch outside his wife's door.

Her eyes are still big with suspected intrigue as she continues her conversation with Mr. Barnes by suddenly interjecting: "She wants to see you!"

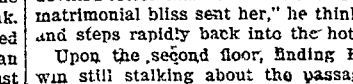

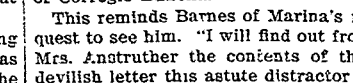

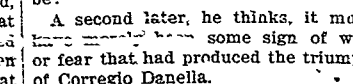

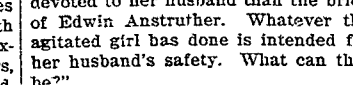

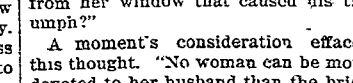

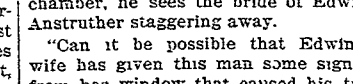

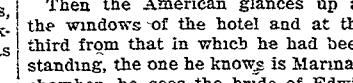

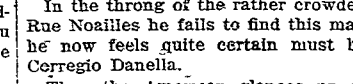

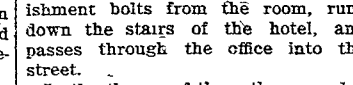

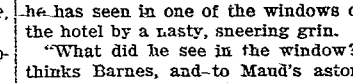

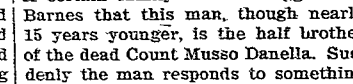

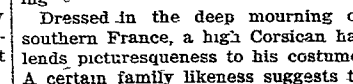

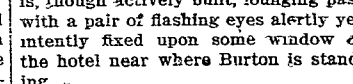

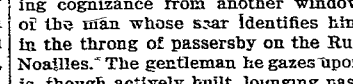

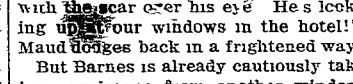

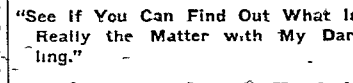

"Who?"

"Marina; the bride, of course. She wants to give you a hint not to let the cat out of the bag to Edwin about the man whose letter made her faint."

Here, Miss Chartist, who has suddenly looked out of the window, trying to hide a telltale face from the piercing glance of her companion, ejaculates almost tremblingly: "Holy poker!"

"What's the matter?"

"Why, there's the man walking up the street who gave me the note that knocked Marina out of time—the one with the fear over his eye. He is looking up at four windows in the hotel! Maud doggedly back in a frightened way.

"See if you can find out what is really the matter with my darling."

But Barnes is already cautiously taking cognizance from another window of the man whose scar identifies him in the throng of passersby on the Rue Noailles. The gentleman he gazes upon is, though actively built, lounging past with a pair of flashing eyes alertly yet intently fixed upon some window of the hotel near where Burton is standing.

Dressed in the deep mourning of southern France, a high Corsican hat lends picturesqueness to his costume. A certain family likeness suggests to Barnes that this man, though nearly 15 years younger, is the half brother of the dead Count Musso Danella. Suddenly the man responds to something he has seen in one of the windows of the hotel by a nasty, sneering grin.

"What did he see in the window?" thinks Barnes, and to Maud's astonishment bolts from the room, runs down the stairs of the hotel, and passes through the office into the street.

In the throng of the rather crowded Rue Noailles he fails to find this man he now feels quite certain must be Correggio Danella.

Then the American glances up at the windows of the hotel and at the third from that in which he had been standing, the one he knows is Marina's chamber, he sees the bride of Edwin Anstruther staggering away.

"Can it be possible that Edwin's wife has given this man some signal from her window that caused his triumph?"

A moment's consideration effaces this thought. "No woman can be more devoted to her husband than the bride of Edwin Anstruther. Whatever the agitated girl has done is intended for her husband's safety. What can that be?"

A second later, he thinks, it must have been some sign of woe or fear that had produced the triumph of Correggio Danella.

This reminds Barnes of Marina's request to see him. "I will find out from Mrs. Anstruther the contents of that devilish letter this astute distractor of matrimonial bliss sent her," he thinks, and steps rapidly back into the hotel!

Upon the second floor, finding Edwin still stalking about the passage-way and keeping his watch upon his wife's chamber, Burton quite shortly states he has a suggestion or two as regards their yachting trip to make to Marina.

The consequence is that her husband soon after brings her into the parlor the party has secured for their general use. As he does so, Barnes notices something in the bride's manner to her husband that increases his alarm for her. In the morning, though Marina's eyes showed traces of the sufferings their owner had undergone, they were full of hope as they rested on her bridegroom. Now despair appears to have taken its place as her beautiful orbs linger lovingly yet sadly on the man she adores, and then seem to turn from him agitated by some hidden determination.

A moment after Anstruther says, in a loud tone intended for his bride's ears: "Take care of her while I do my packing," adding in a cautious whisper to Barnes: "See if you can find out what is really the matter with my darling. Some devilish thing must have happened to her at the railroad depot. She won't tell me. You discover."

Under these circumstances, Barnes is very eager to learn the balance of the note which had shattered the bride's nerves.

"Glad you're looking so fit, Marina," he remarks, lightly, for they have grown into the habit of addressing each other with the familiarity of coming relatives. "Maud told me you wished to speak to me."

"Why, certainly, Burton, I—you have read the letter that struck me down in the railroad station. I must beg you not to be cruel enough to even hint to my husband its contents."

"Why, of course. 'Tis best for Edwin, at present, at all events, to be in the dark," returns Barnes, groping darkly himself; adding assuringly: "You must pick up courage, my dear girl. You faced a greater trial only two days ago."

Her answer confuses and astounds her interrogator. "Faced a greater trial?" she says piteously. "Perhaps in one way." After this she gasps for a moment and suddenly cries: "Then you haven't read the letter?"

"Read it—most of it. A portion of it hasn't come into my hands yet. Maud said you tore it up."

"Ah, thank God, you missed the last part. Then you might have told my husband and I could never have done it!"

"Never have done what?"

"What you tell not know till it is done!"

"You'd better tell it to me so that I may advise you," he suggests.

But the beautiful bride pacing the chamber, her hands pressed to her brow, suddenly pauses in front of him and says: "No, I'll be my own counselor in this matter. I'll fight the dread fight out with myself. I'll try and—"

Her distracted manner adds to Barnes' fear, not of her love and devotion to Edwin, but of her judgment in some project she keeps concealed. He says, imperatively: "You must tell me."

"No, tis between my conscience, my God and my husband. Only tell Edwin, tell him, in case—"

"In case what?"

"Oh, you know the cruel things that may happen in such a blood feud which is again revived, now worse than ever. In case I pass from my husband's sight, tell him that I always loved him; that—that I didn't believe. Should I do something he regrets, he condemns, ask him to forgive me; it was because I loved him better than—than my own soul!"

62,000 TONS OF CURRANTS.

Britons Seem to Be Exceptionally Fond of This Fruit.

Our great grandmothers, although they had to pay a very high price for dried currants, considered them quite indispensable to the compounding of those pies, fruitmies and florentines which were the pride of every housewife. Domestic catering must have been an arduous undertaking in those days, for currants and other dried fruits were not to be procured out of London except once a year, at the annual fair of the local market town. The royal dish of plum porridge, which it was the privilege of the archbishop of Canterbury to serve to a newly crowned sovereign, was composed largely of currants, the fruit being stewed in strong beef soup enriched with red wine and red sack. Now that the order has changed and simplicity is the keynote of the highest class cookery, we Britons have trebled our appreciation of the homely and wholesome currant; and although florentines and plum porridge are dishes of the past, no less than 62,000 tons of currants go every year to the making of bread cakes, pastries and puddings to tempt the British appetite.—Ladies' Pictorial.

Early Proof.

The head of a printing establishment in Richmond, Va., was called upon not long ago by a clergyman, bearing the manuscript of a sermon. "I would like to have the proofs of this by to-morrow," said the divine. The printer answered that the time allowed was insufficient. "You must give us a few days longer," he said. "No; I must have it to-morrow," insisted the minister. "I must deliver this sermon to-morrow—not the day after, or the next day—but to-morrow. It's a special sermon, suitable only for to-morrow. I wrote it ten years ago, and now I can't make out a word of it."

A Million on February 30

By A. Walter Uting

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When Robert Fayton's wealth reached the two million mark, he lay all unto death. But, though the scythe-bearer was advancing, to meet him, still gleamed in his eye the look of cunning so well known to his associates.

Two days after he was stricken his nephew called to see him—Tommy Fayton, upon whom he had lavished a wealth of care, tried to pilot on that particular financial sea on which he had made his millions, but who have proved such a great disappointment to him.

The elder man had, so to speak, chartered one boat and continued sailing in it until it reached the chosen port; the nephew engaged an entire fleet, seeing one after another founder, but—hoping always to have one arrive safely at the wished-for destination. And when he visited his uncle, Tommy usually went to report that there had been a wreck—and that he wanted to start all over with stronger, more up-to-date craft.

Robert Fayton groaned, even above the groans provoked by his ailment, when Tommy was announced. Tommy had certainly been indiscreet. He had sold eggs, goats, horses, and he had run a bucket shop, superintended a meat market, published a newspaper, and done a dozen and one other things.

"Well, what now?" the sick man asked wearily.

Tommy tendered solicitations as to his relative's health; he was pained to see his uncle under the weather. "But you're a stickler," he added; "you'll live 50 more years." Then, glibly he went on to tell how, because of the treachery of a partner, he had failed to make good a sideshow proprietor. "The fellow just ran away with the fat woman and the funds at the same time. But I've cut out the things that people are used to, and which need partners. I've got something brand new," he rattled enthusiastically. "There's a field for it, and when there's a field for anything there's money in it."

The dying man looked at him pityingly. "Malberry Sellers," he groaned, "tell me about it."

And Tommy did. He wanted to launch out into an information bureau business, to furnish every one needful with an idea. He would tell one man how to advertise so that he could bring prosperity to his business, another how to write a book, another the cost and means of hauling timber from Siberia to Patagonia, another how to reach a girl's heart. And so on ad infinitum. "Besides which," he added, "I'm dead in love, and the girl wants to see me in business before we get married. If I get started she'll say 'Yes' in a hurry."

Uncle Robert said: "If you can tell other people how to do things, why in the world can't you tell yourself how to get on without my aid? That would be proof of your ability."

"I could," Tommy replied, "if I had the capital to start the business with."

"Well, call to-morrow, and we'll see what is to be done," said Robert Fayton.

He died overnight. But before he died he summoned his lawyer and made a new will, which contained a clause that staggered everybody. In brief, it was that if Tommy married the choice of his heart on February 30, he would get $1,000,000 of his wealth; if he failed to do this, then he must be satisfied with a paltry $500, and the rest would go to charity.

"February 30!" exclaimed Tommy, listening. "Why, there is no such date in the year."

"Mr. Fayton believed there is," said the lawyer, "and thinks that you, with your latest scheme, should be able to pick it out from the other days on the calendar."

The month of February, as every one knows, consists of 28 days. Once every four years, with a few exceptions, it takes an extra day. But 30! Whoever heard of there being 30 days in February?

In woman's wit lies the solution of many apparently unfathomable problems. Tommy went to the home of Alice Detwar, "the girl."

"Your uncle wanted to turn you down gracefully," she suggested.

"If he thought there was a February 30, I guess I can find it," said Tommy. "And when I do we'll get married, eh?"

During the month of September, 1903, Tommy Fayton spent his every waking hour pouring over calendars, almanacs and rare works in the public libraries and reporting his failures to his sweetheart.

In October he tried a different campaign. He procured books on puzzles, charades, rebuses, and everything that dealt with mind tangles propositions. Furrows appeared on his brow, lines creased his cheeks, his eyes retreated in their wells, and he grew nervous.

His uncle's doctor advised him healthfully. "Stop looking in books, you're wearing your life away. Take a sea trip; get health restoring balm from ocean air; put yourself where you can't see a book."

And on the heels of this advice came word from Alice Detwar that her father wanted to take her for a trip to Hawaii, "just for the sea voyage, and to get experience she would never have if she married Tommy Fayton." She was departing so soon he would have no opportunity of seeing her before she left.

Tommy hunted up the doctor. "I follow your advice," he said, "but I haven't the money. To travel costs money."

"Why not take the five hundred," the physician suggested, "and by using it help gain the larger sum? Pay where you have to, and work your passage where you can."

Soon Tommy was on the way to the Pacific coast. Alice had left by boat when he reached there, so he was quick to charter passage on the next steamer to put forth. Like a will of the wisp she flitted just ahead of him wherever he went, but he continued. In January he found her in Japan.

"But before February is ended," she told him, "father says I will be on the ocean on the way home."

"I'll return with you," he informed her.

And that is how they came to sail from Yokohama on February some thing or other, a fact which recalled to his mind that he was no nearer discovering a February 30 than he had ever been.

The passengers on the vessel watched the two lovers curiously. It chanced there was a clergyman on board, and it was not long before many were saying it would be a splendid idea for him to perform the ceremony of marriage on board the ship. But Tommy shook his head.

"I have no more chance of marrying her," he said to one man, "than I have of finding a February 30."

But hope was buoyed finally. The captain requested him to call in his parlor. He did so. There he found Alice, her father, the minister and four passengers, besides the captain.

"I understand," said the captain, "that you wish this reverend gentleman to marry you to Miss Detwar."

"It has been said so in a joking way, I think," stammered Tommy.

"We may as well have the ceremony now, then," said Alice quickly. "We're all here, and there are witnesses enough."

"February 30," groaned Tommy.

"Take hold of hands," commanded the minister, and before Tommy Fayton recovered his wits he found himself married to the girl of his choice.

"I am unhappily happy," he said. But consolingly looking into his wife's eyes, "I guess now I have you I'll make the best of it. I've lost a million dollars, but I think we can trudge along on nothing at all, if necessary."

"How have you lost a million?" asked the captain. And Tommy told him, although in the listening there was a hint of humor in the captain's eyes.

"I must then, be the first one to make you acquainted with a fact that will be of interest to you. You must know that, in traveling eastward, from Yokohama to San Francisco, a day's time is gained. There must be a day apart from those we see mapped on the calendar. Now let me tell you, this is leap year—1904. Yesterday was February 29, but to-day is not March 1. When the sun shines to-morrow morning it will usher in the first day of the month of March. What, then, is to-day?"

Tommy gasped. "February 30!" he cried.

And even the minister, acknowledged that the hornpipe roughly executed by the young married man was permissible.

"And the best of it was," said Tommy, writing to the lawyer when he received the bequest, "that Alice thought out the whole thing, and urged her father to take her to the other side of the Pacific, knowing I would follow her and so win the day. How's that for a girl?"

A One-Legged Athlete.

When Harry Haskins Smith of this city entered the Scranton athletic carnival the other day he was not regarded as a very formidable competitor by the other boys, because he has but one leg. When the carnival was over he had all the honors that were distributed. Ground-gaining rolls, hand-springs, headsprings, horizontal bar work, all were performed by the one-legged youth.

When Smith was seven years old he climbed under a freight train for a baseball, and the train amputated one leg.

He did not cry or faint, but said: "Don't tell mother. She would worry." He rides a bicycle well, and when he uses his crutches which he disdains except when in a hurry, he can run or walk as fast as the average individual.

Smith has a sunny disposition and has never been known to "pick" a fight. When another boy is the aggressor he can give a good account of himself without using crutches or any support. He is a clever boxer and can sidestep and keep his balance on one foot.—Wilkesbarre (Pa.) Dispatch.

GEORGE KEPT HIM BUSY.

Matrimonial Engagements Seemed Always in Order.

A well-known Virginia clergyman, sometime president of William and Mary college, was married three times and on each occasion the ceremony was performed by his brother, an even more renowned bishop. When the first marriage took place, the bishop had to refuse a tempting invitation from an old friend, because—so the letter ran—"I am going up to Williamsburg on that date to marry my brother George."

The same friend happened to be on the train with him, years afterward, when he was traveling to the second ceremony. "I am going to marry my brother George," the bishop explained, benignly, after the business of greeting was over. "Again many years passed, and the same journey was taken once more for the same purpose. By a strange coincidence, the identical friend ran into the bishop as they hurried through the depot to their respective trains. 'Where going bishop?' the former sang out as they grasped hands and dashed by each other."

"I am going where I am always going," the answer came back, ponderously, "to marry my brother George!" —Harper's Weekly.

People are now demanding more powerful lights, using 30 candlepower electric lamps where a few years back they would have been content with eight. ## A WAIST-BUTTON "WRANGLE"

"I'll be ready, John, just as quick as you come and button my waist for me."
"Yes, dear."
"Don't begin at the bottom, John. You can't button a waist from the bottom. Begin at the top—in the collar there."
"All right," said John, cheerfully.
Pause.
"What's the matter, John? Can't you find the buttonholes?"
"There, I've got the first one," said John, triumphantly. "By Jingo, I haven't, either. I've got it buttoned into a hole in the lace. I'll have to unfasten it. There—now we're getting along."
"You're awfully clumsy, John. How many buttons have you got fastened?"
"Two got one, all right," he declared. "This lace collar is the hardest part of it. I guess it'll be plain sailing as soon as I get that done."
"Well, let us see if I can do that," she said a little impatiently, twisting around before the mirror and putting both hands back of her neck.
"You've got the second one buttoned into the third hole," said John, watching her manipulations. "Maybe I can fix it now; my fingers are rested."
"Well, for goodness sake, hurry, or we'll be late. I'm getting all tired out standing up here, and my hair's coming out of curl. Can't you hurry a little?"
"I'm hurrying as fast as I can," he suggested, amiably. "It's new work for me, you know. I don't see what they make waist button up the back for anyway."
"Have you got all four buttons of the collar fastened?"
"Are there four of them? By gracious, I thought there were only three! I missed the third one—the collar's folded down so. I'll have to unfasten the last one and button the third."
"Well, John Dixon, you are smart! Didn't I tell you there were four buttons on the collar?"
"I didn't hear you dear," he said, meekly. "Don't twist around so. You'll have the second one out next. There—I thought you would. Now I've got to begin all over."
"My face is getting so red I'm ashamed to go anywhere," she began, dabbing some powder on her nose. "How far down are you now?"
"Don't raise your arms up that way," he cautioned her. "You make it gape in the back, and I can't button it at all. There—the collar's all done now, dearie. Just a few minutes more. One—two—three—four—five—six—seven—eight—" he counted slowly. "Only seven or eight more. Now! What's all but the hook and eye."
"What makes that little bulge up there near the top?" she inquired, looking sideways into the mirror.
"Well, I declare, John Dixon, if you haven't missed one of the top buttons, and got it all buttoned crooked! Well, you are a smart one!"
"That don't make any difference," said John, soothingly. "Nobody will ever notice that."
"Now, John Dixon, if you think I'm going downtown with a hump on my back like a camel and my waist buttoned crooked, you're mistaken! Besides, I'm so warm and tired I don't care whether I go now or not—so there! I can unbutton the whole thing, and I'll take it off and stay at home."
Tears.
"For goodness sake don't cry over a little thing like that," said John in distress. "I'll button it up again in a jiffy."
"I'm not crying over the waist. I'm crying because you're so cross and mean and hateful. Don't start to button it up again. I don't want it buttoned."
"I wouldn't act like that, dear," he protested. "There isn't any use quarreling about a little thing like buttoning a waist."
"I'm not quarreling," she declared tearfully. "I've stood up here for half an hour, until I'm all tired out, and I've been just as patient as I can be, and you say I am quarreling."
More tears.
"Haven't you got another waist that buttons easier?" he suggested. "Maybe I could button another one in a minute."
"No, I haven't," she said. "They all button down the back."
"Then I guess we'll have to give it up," he admitted. "I'll telephone down and tell them not to hold the tickets."
"John Dixon, do you mean to say you're going to miss that performance because you're so stupid you can't button my waist for me?"
"I don't see how I can button it, if you won't let me try," said John meekly.
"Who said anything about not letting you try?" she retorted, tartly. "The trouble is you didn't want to be bothered about it in the first place and you didn't try."
Two or three minutes later it was all done. John bent over and kissed her.
"If you had tried in the first place, dear," she said, "instead of being impatient with me and not caring, we would have been spared all this bother."
"I know, I know," he agreed, humbly. "But it's all right now, isn't it?"
"I do hope my eyes won't be red, she murmured. "And John, tell me, is my hat on straight?"—Success Magazine.

BEST EVER WRITTEN

PRESCRIPTION WHICH ANYONE CAN EASILY MIX.

Said to Promptly Overcome Kidney and Bladder Afflictions—Shake Simple Ingredients Well in Bottle.

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime:
Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. A prominent physician is the authority that these simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from any druggist even in the smaller towns.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive kidneys, overcoming Backache, Bladder weakness and Urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man or woman here who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

The Scranton (Pa.) Times was first to print this remarkable prescription, in October, of 1906, since when all the leading newspapers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other cities have made many announcements of it to their readers.

WILD TRIBES OF POETS.

Picturesque People That Are Found in the Philippines.

Among the wild tribes to be found in the Philippines are the Bogobos, the most picturesque people in the tropics. Their origin is unknown, and all sorts of opinions have been expressed concerning them. One tale told of them is that their first ancestors were all poets and musicians, and that the dislike for the practical which is always noticeable among them has come down through the generations.

Those that have taught among the Bogobos say that given a song or a poem to learn and they will study and dream over it for hours; but give the Bogobo a problem in arithmetic and he immediately becomes ill and wants to go home.

Living at Santa Cruz, in the Dayao district, is Miss Benedict, a Chicago university woman, who is collecting everything peculiar to the Bogobo. It has been found that the beadwork done by them is quite like that of the American Indian, but there is no other likeness in the races beyond that.

FAMILY'S SKIN TROUBLES.

Eczema, Heat Rash, and Scalp Affections Afflict Different Members, But Cuticura Cures Them.

"My wife had eczema for five or six years. It was on her face and would come and go. We thought we would give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. We did so and she has never had a sign of eczema for four years. I myself used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment some time ago for falling hair. I now have a very heavy head of hair. We used Cuticura Remedies for our baby, who was nearly bald when young. She has very nice hair now. She is very fleshy, and we had so much trouble with heat that we would bathe her with Cuticura Soap and then apply Cuticura Ointment, it would dry the heat up so much quicker than anything else. Mr. H. B. Springmire, 323 So. Capital Street, Iowa City, Ia., July 16, 1905, and Sept. 16, 1906."

No Decoration Required.

It was Mr. Hobart's first experience with waffles, and he liked the taste of them. When he had been served twice, he called the waiter to him and spoke confidentially.
"I'm from Pokeville," he said, "and we're plain folks there; don't care much for style, but we know good food when we get it. I want another plateful of those cakes, but you tell the cook she needn't stop to put that fancy printing on 'em; just send 'em along plain."—Youth's Companion.

Much the Same.

His Wife—I see by the paper that at a wedding in Oklahoma last week the man promised to obey instead of the woman. I wonder how the marriage will turn out?
Her Husband—Oh, about like any other marriage, I suppose. He probably didn't mean it any more than a woman does when she says it.—Chicago Daily News.

"Yes," answered young Mrs. Torkins. "He knows all about what they have done and what they ought to do. But he can't find out what they are going to do."

TESTED BY TIME.

A Cure That Has Held Good for Four Years.

Mrs. Mary Crumlish of 1130 West Third Street, Wilmington, Del., says: "Some years ago I began to feel weak and miserable and one day awoke from a nap with a piercing pain in my back that made me scream. For two days I could not move and after that I had backache and dizzy spells all the time. My ankles swelled and I ran down dreadfully. I was nervous and had awful headaches. I wonder that any medicine could do what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. They cured me four years ago and I have been well ever since." Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. ## JUST WHAT HE WANTED.

Surely Here Were Musical Tastes Enough to Suit Anybody.

A gentleman of the most cultivated musical tastes, wishing to change his residence, advertised for rooms in a private family "fond of music." The next mail brought him the following reply:

"Dear Sir: I think we could accommodate you with rooms; and as for music one of my daughters plays the parlor organ and guitar; another one plays the accordion and banjo; I play the cornet and fiddle; by wife plays the harmonica and my son the flute. We all sing and if you are good at tenor singing you would fit right in when we get to singing gospel hymns evenings, for none of us sings tender. Or if you plays the base viol we have one right here in the house. If you want music as well as rooms and board we could accommodate you and there would be no extra charge for it. Lippincott's."

She Did Not Fear Death.

An old lady on her seventy-third birthday once said, "I do not mind getting old, and I do not fear death, but I live in constant fear of paralysis."

"For some time I have been wanting to tell you of the great good your wonderful Sloan's Liniment is doing here," writes Mr. James F. Abernethy, of Rutherford College, N. C. "In fact, all your remedies are doing noble work, but your Liniment beats all. In my eight years' experience with medicine I find none to go ahead of it, having tried it in very many cases. I know of one young man, a brick-mason, who suffered from a partial, yes, almost complete, paralysis of one arm. I got him to use your Liniment, and now he can do as much work as ever, and he sings your praise every day. I get all to use it I possibly can and know there is great virtue in it. I have helped the sale of your noble remedies about here greatly, and expect to cause many more to buy them, as I know they can't be beat."

Mansfield's Rebuke.

A group of theatrical men were talking in New York about the late Richard Mansfield.

"Mr. Mansfield," said one, was a delightful humorist, a splendid raconteur in society, but at the same time he had a certain proper and becoming sense of his own dignity, and it never failed to be unduly familiar with him.

"He was, as we all know, rather bald. He resented, from barbers, or friends, any allusion to his baldness. 'Well, one night at a party, a man came up behind this great artist, staggered him with a violent slap on the back, and exclaimed in a loud, jovial, familiar voice:

"Hello, Dick. How are you? Every time I see you, you get balder and balder."

Mansfield drew himself up. He sneered at the other.

"Hello," he said. "I don't know who you are, but every time I see you you get ruder and ruder."

"Bacon took a deep interest in longevity and its earmarks," said a physician, "and Bacon's signs of long life and of short life are as true to-day as they ever were."

"Your life, barring accidents, will be very lengthy if you have slow growth, coarse hair, a rough skin, deep wrinkles in the forehead, firm flesh, a large mouth, wide nostrils, strong teeth set close together, and a hard, gristly ear."—Minneapolis Journal.

To Err Is Human.

Robert Browning once found himself at a dinner, at a great English house, sitting next to a lady who was connected with the highest aristocracy. She was very graciously inclined, and did her utmost to make conversation.

"Are you not a poet?" she finally asked.

"Well," said Browning, "people are sometimes kind enough to say that I am."

"Oh, please don't mind my having mentioned it," the duchess hastened to say, with the kindest of smiles. "You know Byron and Tennyson and others were poets."

FREE LANDS

Practically the last of the Government lands are located in New Mexico, Eastern Colorado and Southwestern Kansas, along the Rock Island Line. The soil is fertile, well watered and the climate healthful.

Read the letter below. The success of Mr. Kerr is typical of the success of many others.

EDDIE W. KERR'S TRAIL: I came to the Santa-Via Country Aug. 5, 1905, and made a homestead entry on a quarter section of free government land in January, 1906. I located on my claim and commenced to break and get ready for a crop. I planted milo maize, early corn and Indian corn, all of these crops doing well. My Indian corn made 30 bushels to the acre on soil land. The fodder did not get so good a stand, but made two tons to the acre.

I experimented with melons, cantaloupes and pumpkins and they all made a success. I had half an acre of turnips and gathered 125 bushels. The turnips sold readily for 10 cents a bushel.

I put in fifteen acres of Indian corn the 17th of April, at this date, June 2, it is about knee high and doing good and I am well pleased with the Santa-Via Country. All any man has to do is to go to work with the same energy as he would back east and he will have no trouble about crops.

Yours, E. W. KERR.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. ## The Best Laxative for Children.

Parents should see to it that their children have one natural, easy movement of the bowels each day. Do not dose the child with salts or gripping pills, as they are too powerful in effect, and literally tear their little insides to pieces, leaving the bowels weakened and less able to act naturally than before. Laxative Iron-Ox Tablets tone and strengthen the bowels, and stimulate all the little organs to healthy activity. Chocolate coated tablets, easy to take, never gripe or nauseate. 10c, 25c and $1.00.

For sale and recommended by Murdoch Bros., Druggists.
