After an illness of four months, George Clark passed quietly away at his home in Northside Tuesday night. He had been a sufferer from Bright's disease a number of years but did not give up until July and since then has been confined to his bed a greater part of the time. Sunday afternoon he suffered a stroke of apoplexy, and though conscious, he could not speak. In the year of 1872 he moved to Ypsilanti and in March of that year was married to Miss Emma Taylor of that place. After living in Ypsilanti three years he, with his family, moved to Milford and in 1896 came to Northville where they have since resided and where his wife passed away, June 27, 1902. Three children, Mrs. Nina Beal of Los Angeles, Cal., Ida M. and Roy G. Clark of this place are the children.

ANTI-LOTTERY STATUTE.

From the U. S. Official Postal Guide of January, 1907.

The attention of Postmasters and railway postal clerks is directed to Section 499 of the Postal Laws and Regulations, by the provisions of which newspapers or other publications of any kind, containing advertisements of lotteries, gift concerts or similar enterprises for the distribution of prizes by lot or chance, or lists of prizes awarded in pursuance of such schemes, and all other matter relating to them, are declared to be unmailable.

The terms "lottery, so called gift concert, or similar enterprise offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance," as used in that section include "guessing" or "estimating" contests for prizes, as well as drawings and raffles of every kind, whether general or local, whether for private gain or in the aid of charitable, educational or religious objects, and whether the consideration for chance be money or otherwise.

Publications, circulars, etc., containing advertisements of such enterprises, or notices or other information of any kind relating to them, should be withdrawn from the mails and treated in accordance with Sections, 573, 602, 624 of The Postal Laws and regulations.

The Postoffice Department is endeavoring to enforce the anti-lottery statutes strictly and with thoroughness. Postmasters, railway mail clerks, and all other officers and employees charged with the handling of mail matter are therefore expected to examine such matter, especially publications, with the greatest care consistent with prompt transmission and delivery, and to withdraw or exclude all such as is ascertained to relate to lotteries or like enterprises.

OPINIONS FROM THE STATE PRESS

INSTRUMENTS USED BY "BLACK HAND" SOCIETIES.

It was commendable of the Free Press to make an endeavor to obtain an expression on the proposition of a third term, in view of its own inability to decide just what position it perchance wished to assume. But after a patient wait of several days, during which time no constant reader showed his hand, the paper opened its columns to a flood of expressions from "Taxpayers," "Citizens," and other veiled individuals.

The Free Press may be an exception but most reputable newspapers have long ago discontinued the practice of allowing themselves to be made the medium for anonymous communications. They are usually the instruments of Black Hand societies.—Pontiac Press Gazette.

DIRECT VOTE IN OAKLAND.

The Republican county committee of Oakland county has adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas the primary law recently passed in the special session of the legislature will take effect on or about the 20th day of January 1908 therefore,

"Resolved that the committee earnestly recommend the adoption and enforcement of the law providing for direct nomination, and that it be made applicable to candidates for the office of state senator and representatives and county officers in Oakland county.

The committee will ask Wash-tenaw county which is a part of the senatorial district, to co-operate with Oakland county in the primary movement.

BARRY RAN FOR GOVERNOR FOUR TIMES.

There is a precedent in Michigan for electing a man three times governor, so Fred M. Warner won't have done anything revolutionary if he wins out in his contest next year for governor. John S. Barry was elected governor in 1841 by a plurality of 5,544. He was in 1843 elected a second time by a plurality 6,498. In 1849 he was elected for a third term by a plurality of 4,297. In 1854 he was beaten for a fourth term by a plurality of 4,977 in a total vote of 12,227. Gov. Barry was a democrat, and his defeat for a fourth term was attributable to the rising anti-slavery wave more than anything else. Three years ago in our neighboring state of Wisconsin, both republicans and democrats nominated for governor men who had already been twice elected to that office Robert M. La Follette was the republican, Geo. W. Peck the democrat. The voters made it three consecutive terms for La Follette.—Detroit News.

BREAK A LITTLE PRECEDENT.

"For the sake of 'this great state' we will break a little precedent and show the sixteen little Boxers, what Michigan can do. The Republican party has no better leader for the task than Fred M. Warner, who in the face of defeat has scored the greatest political coup since the days of Plingree, and has proved himself a dauntless champion of the rights of the people."—Menominee Daily Herald-Leader.

HIGH TRIBUTE PAID BY GOV. WARNER.

"I consider Michigan has lost one of her strongest citizens in the death of D. M. Ferry. He contributed more than his share to the material advancement of Detroit, built up a great industry that will live, and ever had the best interests of the city at heart. To the state at large he was a great help in many ways, and his sudden and untimely end will be keenly felt by thousands of friends and acquaintances scattered in every portion of Michigan."—Gov. Warner.

English a Puzzling Language.

A Frenchman in conversation with a friend said: "I am going to leave my hotel. I paid my bill yesterday and asked the landlord 'Do I owe you anything?' He said 'You are square.' That's strange, said I, 'I have lived long and never knew I was square before.' Then, as I was going away, he shook my hand saying 'I hope you'll be round again soon.' I said 'I thought you said I was square.' He laughed and replied 'When I said I hoped you'd be round again soon I meant I hoped you wouldn't be long. English is a difficult language.'

Accurating Man.

"I don't see how you can have any fault to find with him. 'Why not?' 'Because he appears to be a man who is absolutely without faults of any sort.' 'That's just it. That's his worst fault.'

The Appraiser.

Owner — My house is burning down. Incendary — I know it, my friend, but if it awakens the approval of a few more men, I shall count the cost small.

Work Is Essential.

It is a grain of corn to know that work, from a hygienic standpoint, is essential to the welfare of the human race. It trains the mind and it trains the hand. The fatigue attendant on it produces sound and refreshing sleep. It is one of the remedies for crime. It is uplifting, if earnestly and faithfully performed. It is a safe outlet for the too animal spirits and the best of all medicine to temper sorrow.

Degenerate Golf Caddies.

There are far too many degenerates among the class of people who make a precarious livelihood by doing the work which the golfer does not care about doing for himself. It certainly seems high time that golf clubs in general should do something toward improving the moral status of the caddies employed on their links. — Golfing.

Wasps Routed Huntsmen.

A curious incident happened during a stag hunt on "Esmoyn," England. After a fine gallop the stag was taken, and in his struggles he upset several deerhounds and field were routed, and it was some time before the stag's body could be recovered by men swathed in ruslin.

A Sable Veteran.

An old Georgia negro having told the judge that he had been in three wars, was asked to name them, when he replied "I wuz a cook in de confedit war, and after freedom broke out I was married two times!" — Atlanta Constitution.

Primitive Irrigation.

One primitive method of getting water for irrigating vegetable gardens in China, is to dig a hole in a shallow river bed and carry the water to fields in American oil cans. The well, of course, is lost the next time the river rises.

More Important Part.

A French chemist is said to have discovered the secret of making diamonds. If he has also discovered the secret of making other people think they are diamonds his fortune is made. — N. Y. American.

Egyptian "Soul Houses."

The "soul houses" lately found at the cemetery of Rifeh, Upper Egypt, are tiny structures of clay, in which the souls of the dead were supposed to take refuge. They date from about 3000 B. C.

Equivocal Excuse.

A Hindoo barrister thus excused an absent client whom sickness had prevented from coming to court: "The man has fallen ill, your honor, and he has sent a man here to say that he is lying and cannot come."

HAS NO REGRET FOR ACT.

New Legislative Scheme by Delegate Hall, of Huron County, Would Abolish the Senate.

Without showing the slightest signs of regret and, in fact, displaying the attitude of a hardened criminal, Lester Wycoff, the 12-year-old lad who is a prisoner in the county jail at St. Joseph, remained cool and collected when informed that his boy companion, Victor Alden, could not survive the day. Wycoff is charged with the intentional shooting of Alden, who is 11 years old, while out hunting rabbits Sunday afternoon. If Alden dies Wycoff may be charged with murder.

Alden is dying in his parents' home in Pipestone township with a bullet lodged above the right eye at the base of the brain. Alden says that Wycoff pointed his gun at him and he said, "Don't do that. It might go off." "I don't give a d— if it does," Alden says Wycoff replied, and the next instant the weapon was discharged.

Wycoff, however, declares that a rabbit ran between them and that in shooting at it he accidentally hit Victor. After the shooting young Wycoff ran home and told the story and a party was sent to bring the Alden boy to his home.

Officers went to the scene of the shooting, but say they could not find the tracks of a rabbit in the snow covered ground. No motive is known to bear out Alden's story.

New Legislative Scheme.

Delegate Hall, of Huron, introduced a proposal at the Constitutional convention to abolish the senate and vest the legislative department in the house of representatives, to be made up of one representative from each county having 25,000 population or less, with additional representation from the larger counties based on one for each 25,000 population or major fraction thereof.

Delegate Pratt amplified his former proposal relative to establishing a uniform system of accounting by providing for a board to credit the accounts of all state institutions.

Want Franchise Revoked.

Saginaw held a "complaint fest" against the service of the Saginaw Valley Traction Co. and all walks of life were represented at a mass meeting. S. E. Wolf, general manager of the railway, received the complaints. Workmen said they could not reach their work in time and their employers backed up their charge. The City Federation of Labor recommended that the franchise be revoked. Wolf did his best to stem the anger, but his success was poor. A council committee of three was appointed to investigate and report some definite plan of action.

Awful Story of Wife.

In his opening statement to the jury at Grand Rapids Attorney A. A. Ellis, who is defending Clara Connolly who shot and killed her husband, James Connolly, said there would be no "white slave" plea, but one of self-defense. Connolly, he charged, tried to force his wife to receive a man whom he sent to her rooms and when she refused, attacked her. She then shot him down asserted the lawyer in relating the story of her life he pictured her as happily married in Alma but unfortunately separated from her husband and divorced and then fell into the downward path, by Connolly's plan of action.

Capture Boat and Crew.

Deputy Game Warden J. B. Eddy and C. N. Smith ran down and captured the "Sea Gull" of Charlevoix, last night in a steam launch and confiscated 4,000 pounds of Mackinaw trout, alleged to be undersized. The owners, William and Warren Harris, and the crew, Albert Arnold, Herman Tyner and Frank Shores all pleaded guilty and paid an aggregate of $164 in fines.

Traveled 3,000 Miles for Prisoner.

Deputy Sheriff Nelson, of Muskegon, traveled 3,000 miles in the trail of Harry Neal, for whom a warrant was issued on a charge of wife desertion, and located him in St. Louis. Nelson first went to Montana where Neal had been living, but Neal fled before he arrived. He traced him about the west until he found him in St. Louis. Mrs. Neal, when informed of her husband's arrest, said she did not want to prosecute him.

The time of the visit of Secretary Taft drawing night, prominent business men of Grand Rapids have taken up in earnest the matter of building a hall large enough, to accommodate the statesman and the big crowd that he will draw upon the occasion of the Lincoln club banquet. It has been practically decided to build a huge wigwam. At the same time the Grand Rapids battalion of the M. N. G. will be heartily supported in their ambition to build a permanent armory and convention hall.

It is given out at Grand Rapids that Adele Ritchie, the actress, placed an order with furniture houses in that city for $25,000 worth of furnishings for her New York mansion. The various rooms are to be furnished in renaissance, Louis XV, Louis XVI and colonial styles.

The Dow Chemical Co.'s plant at Mt. Pleasant laid off its employees for an indefinite period. It has a large stock of chemicals unmarketed. The manager, Lee Shepherd, and a couple of engineers are all of the staff retained. The engine fires are not to be extinguished. The dismissal affects 25 or 30 workmen.

Train Hits Open Switch.

Incoming Lake Shore passenger train No. 47, due at Hillsdale at 9:05 ran into an open switch about three blocks from the depot and crashed into the engine of the second section of freight No. 94 Thursday night, wrecking the engine and injuring six, one perhaps fatally.

The passenger train was running at the rate of about 10 or 12 miles an hour and the switch signal showed a clear track. There are two versions as to the cause of the accident. One is that the switch was left open by mistake or thrown to wreck the train, and another is that the freight engine was switching on the main line and opened the switch to avoid the possibility of a greater wreck. There is a steep embankment on the main line at this point and freight cars on the track would have caused a probable fatal collision, whereas less chance could be taken on the even grading at either side of the siding.

Wants Mixers as Pastors.

Mayor William Thompson, of Kalamazoo, somewhat shocked members of the Michigan Sunday School Association in welcoming them to the city for their annual convention, by saying that "ministers were not the jolly good fellows they should be," and that they ought to be good mixers and make people feel more comfortable in their company.

He also declared that every church in the country should have a bowling alley and billiard rooms for boys and young men. These, he said, would keep them away from bad influences.

MICHIGAN BREVITIES.

George Roberts, of Kalamazoo, aged 17, was shot below the heart by Cecil Coleman, aged 13, who "didn't know the gun was loaded." He may die.

The right hand of a man which apparently had been torn from the arm was flung out of the river at Pontiac by Harry Curtis, who was playing on the bank.

Calvin Knapp, of Port Huron, Grand Trunk brakeman, became violent and his friends bound him with ropes, in the caboose to prevent him from jumping from the train.

William Barnes, a Bedford farmer and former protégé of Indian weather prophets, says that the muskrats are building their nests high, indicating the approach of a severe winter.

George W. Tubs, of Lansing, who claimed self-defense in his trial for murder and was sent to Jackson for life made the same plea in asking a pardon, but the board refused to overrule the courts.

As a result of the visit of Congressman Samuel W. Smith to Flint active steps have been taken toward the erection of a new postoffice building which has been under discussion for the past two years.

The articles of incorporation for which the American Express Co. applied to the secretary of state, have been held up pending the decision as to the amount of franchise fees the company should pay.

A posse of police or Grand Rapids, led by Sergeant Howell, raided a gambling den and confiscated the outfit, besides making several arrests. This is the first raid on gambling houses the police have pulled off in some years.

So many documents will have to be introduced in the litigation which has arisen out of the foreclosure of the $100,000 mortgage against the Portland Cement Co., that a dry had to be hired to carry the papers to the court house at Flint.

SYNOPSIS.

A detachment of the Eighteenth infantry from Fort Belknap, trapped by Indians in a narrow gorge. Among them is a stranger who introduces himself by the name of Hampton, also Gillis, the post trader, and his daughter. Gillis and a majority of the soldiers are killed during a three days' siege. Hampton and the girl only escape from the Indians. They fall exhausted on the plains. The company of the Seventh cavalry, Lieut. Brant in command, find them. Hampton and the girl stop at the miners' home in Glencald. Mrs. Duffy, proprietress. Hampton talks the future over with Miss Gillis—the girl. She shows him her mother's picture and tells him what she can of her parentage and life. They decide she shall live with Mrs. Herndon.

"I reckon I'd rather try it alone," she announced stubbornly. "Maybe I might have stood it with you, Bob Hampton, but a woman is the limit."

"I expect it will go rather hard at first, Kid," he admitted craftily, "but I think you might try it a while just to sort of please me."

"Who—what is she?" doubtfully.

Mrs. Herndon, wife of the superintendent of the "Golden Rule" mine, and he waved his hand toward the distant houses. "They tell me she's a mighty fine woman."

"Oh, they do? Then somebody's been stirring you up about me, have they? I thought that was about the way of it. Somebody wants to reform me, I reckon. Well, maybe I won't be reformed. Who was it, Bob?"

"The Presbyterian missionary," he confessed reluctantly, "a nifty little chap named Wynkoop, he came in to see me last night while you were asleep. He faced her open scorn unshrinkingly, his mind fully decided, and clinging to one thought with all the tenacity of his nature."

"A preacher!" her voice vibrant with derision, "a preacher? Well, of all things, Bob Hampton! You led around by the nose in that way! Did he want you to bring me to Sunday school? A preacher! And I suppose the fellow expects to turn me over to one of his flock for religious instruction. He'll have you studying theology inside of a year. A preacher! Oh Lord, and you agreed! Well, I won't go, so there!"

"As I understand the affair, Hampton continued as she paused for breath, "it was Lieut. Brant who suggested the idea of his coming to me. Brant knew Gillis, and remembered you, and realizing your unpleasant situation, thought such an arrangement would be for your benefit."

"Brant!" she burst forth in renewed anger; "he did, did he? The putty-faced dandy! I used to see him at Belknap, and you can bet he never bothered his head about me then. No, and he didn't even know me out-yonder, until after the sergeant spoke up. What business has that fellow got planning what I shall do?"

Hampton made no attempt to answer. It was better to let her indignation die out naturally, and so he asked a question. "What is this Brant doing at Belknap? There is no cavalry stationed there."

She glanced up quickly interested by the sudden change in his voice. "I heard dad say he was kept there on some special detail. His regiment is stationed at Fort Lincoln, somewhere farther north. He used to come down and talk with dad evenings, because daddy saw service in the Seventh when it was last organized after the war."

"Did you—did you ever hear either of them say anything about Maj. Alfred Brant? He must have been this lad's father."

"No, I never heard much they said. Did you know him?"

"The father, yes, but that was years ago. Come, Kid, all this is only ancient history, and just as well forgotten. Now, you are a sensible girl, when your temper don't get away with you, and I am simply going to leave this matter to your better judgment. Will you go to Mrs. Herndon's, and find out how you like it? You needn't stop there an hour if she isn't good to you, but you ought not to want to remain with me, and grow up like a rough boy."

"You—you really want me to go, don't you?"

"Yes, I want you to go. It's a chance for you, Kid, and there isn't a bit of a show in the kind of a life I lead. I never have been in love with myself, and only took to it in the first place because the devil happened to drive me that way. The Lord knows I don't want to lead any one else through such a muck. So it is a try?"

The look of defiance faded slowly out of her face as she stood gravely regarding him. The man was in deadly earnest, and she felt the quiet insistence of his manner.

"You bet, if you put it that way," she consented simply "but I reckon that Mrs. Herndon is likely to wish I hadn't."

Together, yet scarcely exchanging another word, the two retraced their steps slowly down the steep trail leading toward the little town in the valley.

CHAPTER VII.

"I've Come Here to Live."

Widely as these two companions differed in temperament and experience, it would be impossible to decide which felt the greater uneasiness at the prospect immediately before them. The girl openly rebellious, the man extremely doubtful, with reluctant steps they approached that tall, homely, yellow house—outwardly the most pretentious in Glencald.

They were so completely opposite: these two, that more than one chance passer-by glanced curiously toward them as they picked their way onward through the red dust. Hampton, slender yet firmly built, his body held erect as though trained to the profession of arms, his features finely chiselled, with threads of gray hair beginning to show conspicuously about the temples. His attire of fashionable cut, black cloth, and his immaculate linen, while neat and unobtrusive, yet appeared extremely unusual in that careless land of clay-baked overalls and dingy woollens. Beside him, in vivid contrast, the girl, rugged in her heavy shoes and bedraggled skirts, her sullen eyes fastened doggedly on the road, her hair showing ragged and disreputable in the brilliant sunshine. Hampton himself could not remain altogether indifferent to the contrast.

"You look a little rough, Kid, for a society call," he said. "If there was any shebang in this mud-hole of a town that kept any women's things on sale fit to look at, I'd be tempted to fix you up a bit."

"Well, I'm glad of it," she responded edgily. "I hope I look so blame tough that woman won't say a civil word to us. You can bet I ain't going to strain myself to please the likes of her."

"You certainly exhibit no symptoms of doing so," he admitted, frankly.

ing windows, and devoid of a front porch, or slightest attempt at shade to render its uncomely front less unattractive. Had the matter been left at that moment to his own decision, this glimpse of the house would have turned them both back, but the girl unhesitatingly pressed forward and turned defiantly in through the gateless opening. He followed in silence along the narrow foot-path bordered by weeds, and stood back while she stepped boldly up on the rude stone slab and rapped sharply against the warped and sagging door. A moment they stood thus waiting with no response from within. Once she glanced suspiciously around at him, only to wheel back instantly and once more apply her knuckles to the wood. Before he had conjured up something worth saying the door was partially opened, and a rounded dumpling of a woman, having rosy cheeks, her hair iron-gray, her blue eyes half-smiling in uncertain welcome, looked out upon them questioningly.

"I've come to live here," announced the girl, sullenly. "That is, if I like it."

The woman continued to gaze at her as if tempted to laugh outright, then the pleasant blue eyes hardened as their vision swept beyond toward Hampton.

"It is extremely kind of you, I'm sure," she said at last. "Why is it I am to be thus honored?"

The girl backed partially off the doorstep, her hair flapping in the wind, her cheeks flushed.

"Oh, you needn't put on so much style about it," she blurted out. "You're Mrs. Herndon, ain't you? Well, then, this is the place where I was sent, but I reckon you ain't no more particular about it than I am. There's others."

"Who sent you to me?" and Mrs. Herndon came forth into the sunshine.

"The preacher."

"Oh, Mr. Wynkoop; then you must be the homeless girl whom Lieut. Brant brought in the other day. Why did you not say so at first? You may come in, my child."

There was a sympathetic tenderness apparent now in the tones of her voice, which the girl was swift to perceive and respond to, yet she held back, her independence unshaken. With the quick intuition of a woman, Mrs. Herndon bent down placing one hand on the defiant shoulder.

"I did not understand, at first, my dear," she said, soothingly, "I should never have spoken as I did. Some very strange callers come here. But you are truly welcome. I had a daughter once, she must have been nearly your age when God took her. Won't you come in?"

While thus speaking she never once

The man smiled slightly, not in the least disconcerted by her plain speech. "Probably we departed from the hotel somewhat earlier than the minister anticipated," he explained, quietly, his old ease of manner returning in face of such open opposition. "I greatly regret your evident prejudice, madam, and can only say that I have more confidence in you than you appear to have in me. I shall certainly discover some means by which I may do my part in shaping this girl's future, but in the meanwhile will relieve you of my undesired presence."

He stepped without into the glare of the sunlight, feeling utterly careless as to the woman who had affronted him, yet somewhat hurt on seeing that the girl had not once lifted her downcast eyes to his face. Yet he had scarcely taken three steps toward the road before she was beside him, her hand upon his sleeve.

"I won't stay!" she exclaimed, fiercely. "I won't, Bob Hampton. I'd rather go with you than be good."

His sensitive face flushed with delight, but he looked gravely down into her malignant eyes. "Oh, yes, you will, Kid," and his hand touched her roughened hair caressingly. "She's a good, kind woman, all right, and I don't blame her for not liking my style."

"Do—do you really want me to stick it out here, Bob?"

"It was no small struggle for him to say so for he was beginning to comprehend just what this separation meant. She was more to him than he had ever supposed, more to him than she had even been an hour before and how he understood clearly that from this moment they must ever run farther apart—her life tending upward, his down. Yet there was but one decision possible. Then he answered, "This is your best chance, little girl, and I want you to stay and fight it out."

Then they met, each dimly realizing, though in a totally different way, that there was a moment of important decision. Mrs. Herndon darkened the doorway and stood looking out.

"Well, Mr. Bob Hampton," she questioned, plainly, "what is this going to be?"

He glanced toward her, slightly lifting his hat, and promptly releasing the girl's clinging hand.

"Miss Gillis consents to remain," he announced shortly, and, denying him self so much as another glance at his companion, strode down the narrow path to the road. A moment the girl's eyes followed him through the dust cloud, a single tear stealing down her cheek. Only a short week ago she had utterly despised this man, now he had become truly dear to her than any one else in the wide, wide world. Then Mrs. Herndon came forth quietly and led the girl, now sobbing bitterly, within the cool shadows of the house.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Last Revolt.

It proved a restless day, and a sufficiently unpleasant one, for Mr. Hampton. For a number of years he had been diligently training himself in the school of cynicism endeavoring to persuade himself that he did not in the least care what others thought nor how his own career ended, impelling himself to constant recklessness in life and thought. He had thus successfully built up a wall between the present and that past which long haunted his lonely moments, and had finally decided that it was hermetically sealed. Yet now, this odd child of a girl this wif whom he had plucked from the jaws of death, had overturned this "aerially constructed barrier as if it had been originally built of mere cardboard, and he was compelled again to see himself, loathe himself just as he had in those past years.

One thing he grasped clearly, the girl should be given her chance nothing in his life must ever again soil her or lower her ideals. Mrs. Herndon was right and he realized it; neither his presence nor his money were fit to influence her future. He swore between his clenched teeth his face grown haggard. The sun's rays bridged the slowly darkening valley with cords of red gold, and the man pulled himself to his feet by gripping the root of a tree. He realized that he had been sitting there for hours, and that he was hungry.

Down beneath, amid the fast awakening noise and bustle of early evening, the long discipline of the gambler reasserted itself—he got back his nerve. It was Bob Hampton, cool, resourceful, sarcastic of speech, quick of temper, who greeted the loungers about the hotel, and who sat with his back to the wall in the little dining room, watchful of all others present. And it was Bob Hampton who strolled carelessly out upon the darkened porch in hour later leaving a roar of laughter behind him, and an enemy as well. Little he cared for that, however, in his present mood, and he stood there, amid the black shadows, looking contemptuously down upon the stream of countless humanity trooping past on pleasure bent, the blue smoke circling his head, his gray eyes glowing half angrily. Suddenly he leaned forward, clutching the rail in quick surprise.

"Kid," he exclaimed, harshly, "what does this mean? What are you doing alone here?"

She stopped instantly and glanced up, her face flushing in the light streaming forth from the open door of the Occidental.

"I reckon I'm alone here because I want to be," she returned, defiantly. "I ain't no slave. How do you get up there?"

AMPLE CASH IF RELEASED

Cortelyou Says If Hoarding Stopped Conditions Would Be Normal in a Day.

"I believe," said Secretary Cortelyou to the Merchants' association in New York, "that if the money of the country, wherever hoarded, were at once put back to fulfill its functions in the channels of trade, there would be within 24 hours an almost complete resumption of business operations."

It is upon the situation thus referred to that attention converged in the financial world during all of the past week.

The premium on currency is increasingly understood to be in reality, a discount on bank checks, caused by the dislocation of exchange operations growing out of the widening effects of the shock of the upset in banking affairs following the runs on trust companies in New York. It is acutely observed, however, that the payments for the currency and for the premiums in these transactions have been made in certified checks on banks and that the proceeds of the transactions have found their way into bank deposits, notwithstanding that the holding of the currency was supposed to involve a distrust for the banks.

Increase in Circulation.

The monthly statement of the treasury department showed the amount of all kinds of money in circulation on November 1 to be $2,876,368,000, which was an increase compared with October 1 of upward of $5,000,000, represented largely by the deposits of government funds which were made with the banks after the crisis developed in October.

Since that time receipts from abroad of upward of $33,000,000 of gold and a rapid expansion of bank note issues has liberally replenished the November 1 supply. With the stream of incoming gold running still at full tide, early relief is looked for from the present condition.

Moreover, with this evidence of distinct relief it is expected that all barriers will quickly fall which are at present withholding cash from the channels of activity and the return flood will come with a rush. The time when this will happen depends on a state of mind of the whole people rather than on events in the material world.

May Build Concrete City.

Henry Phipps, the wealthy steel manufacturer, who, in 1905 gave $1,000,000 for the erection of model tenements in New York city, is greatly interested in the possibilities of the two-family concrete houses planned by Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, and which, it is claimed, can be built within twelve hours at a cost of $1,000 to $1,200. He has recently visited East Orange and examined Mr. Edison's models and talked with the inventor regarding his plans.

Mr. Edison will have the mold for a full sized double residence cast this winter, and, as soon as the frost is out of the ground next spring he will build one of the houses near his laboratory. If it proves satisfactory Mr. Phipps probably in co-operation with other wealthy men will take hold of the project and erect a large number of these houses near New York city. They will, in fact, create a city of concrete.

Warrants will be issued for the arrest of five saloonists at Lathrup on a charge of selling liquor to minors.

Costliest Dairy Closes.
Investing fully $1,000,000 to show the world just how a dairy ought to be conducted, Howard Willets, famous sportsman and White Plains millionaire, has decided to quit fancy farming and dairying.

One of Mr. Willets' employees roughly figures that, counting in the value of the dairy buildings, which cost a half million dollars, the cows which cost from $300 to $500 each, and all the labor and other expenses, the milk he has sold cost him about $10 a gal.

An Inspired Thanksgiving Proclamation.

"Make a joyful noise unto the Lord all ye lands. Serve the Lord with gladness, come before his presence with singing. Know ye that the Lord he is God: It is he who hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people and the sheep of his pasture. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him and bless his name. For the Lord is good, his mercy is everlasting, and his truth endureth to all generations."—Psalm 100.

THE SPIRIT AND FEAST OF THANKSGIVING

Side by side with the "long, unbroken custom handed down to us by our forefathers" of setting apart annually a special day for Thanksgiving has also dwelt with us the idea that we must have as nearly as practicable the same kind of a feast as that enjoyed by the first settlers upon these shores. From a sentimental viewpoint this theory is undoubtedly correct, and would really work out beautifully were it not for certain changed conditions affecting our supply of seasonable provisions. A regulation plan of directions for getting up a proper Thanksgiving dinner even this year would suggest the providing of oysters, turkeys, chicken for chicken pie, with vegetables, fruits, rich pastries, and delicacies in abundance. The idea is to arrange a composite meal which shall comprise as nearly as may be the various fruits and products of the earth. And a good and praiseworthy idea it is, too, if only everybody had the wherewithal to purchase these fruits, but unfortunately this must be an oysterless and a turkeyless Thanksgiving for many persons. The chances contributing to this state of things cannot be discussed here; nor does it much matter to the man who enters a meat market and sees a turkey which he longs to purchase for his family, but which he knows he cannot afford, just why the commodity, with many others, is so far beyond his means. The thing is he knows it is beyond his means, and therefore he will have to do without it. He must to some extent give up the idea of trying to imitate that first Thanksgiving dinner in the forest.

In some respects the preparation of that feast, or the obtaining the articles comprised in it, must have been a comparatively simple matter. The settlers had but to take down the fowling piece, go into the woods, and bring home the wild game. Well filled oyster beds lay quite near the shore. The harvest was fruitful, grain, wild fruits, such vegetables as they knew how to raise were abundant, nuts of various kinds were plentiful—what, then, was to hinder the making ready a feast that should fully supplement the public Thanksgiving rendered unto the Lord? There is the point. The feast is but the outward sign or token of that which underlies the whole Thanksgiving idea. It is the feeling in the heart, the sentiment of gratitude for good received, that, after all, constitutes the real Thanksgiving. With this feeling present the absence of the turkey, even though he is everywhere acknowledged to be the king of the feast, need not be counted a misfortune.

We are too apt to forget just how things were with the settlers. We take the idea of that great historical feast into our minds, and we overlook the dark shadows that must have been in that first Thanksgiving picture. It would be a good thing if we would try to remember the "little graveyard by the water's edge," and make an effort to recall what the record says, that not one household in the New Massachusetts colony but had recently been visited by death or severe and protracted illness. But still the preparations for the feast went on, and at a convenient time they "solemnized a day of thanksgiving unto the Lord." Surely we can learn a lesson from the simple faith of these pious souls. We are not called upon to-day to suffer the privations which were the lot of our forefathers, but any year may bring changed conditions which may necessitate more or less self-denial on our part. If the man who finds himself unable to buy material for an expensive dinner knows that his family circle is complete and unbroken, and everybody in health and fully able to enjoy the dinner when it is prepared, he surely has good and sufficient cause for thankfulness.

Seek to Divide the Vote.

Opponents of the boxer program of denying the people the right to make their own nomination, to make telegraph and telephone companies pay taxes on the same basis as the farmer, and to keep the professional lobbyist in check will do well to be vigilant lest by being inveigled into supporting "favorite sons" for nominations they play into the hands of their enemies. It is clearly the purpose of the boxers to induce as many candidates as possible from various sections of the State to stand for the nomination for Governor, their hope being that this plan will so divide the vote that no candidate will receive the necessary 40 per cent, thus leaving the nomination to be made by a delegate convention. All sorts of specious arguments will be used to secure support for a multiplicity of candidates. Great stress will be laid on the plaintive cry that there are many citizens of Michigan who will make acceptable chief executives and all that, but let it be borne in mind that the real purpose is to divide the vote. Friends of the well known measures demanded by the people which the boxers defeated at the recent special session of the legislature should be constantly on the alert. They should pull together in this matter. If they do not do so, they will go down to defeat. Attention cannot be too frequently directed to this phase of the contest.

Wm. Jennings Is Discovered

Talk about startling discoveries! The announcement of a foreign astronomer that he discovered a few days ago that the sun was shooting out a ball of fire that traveled at the rate of 365,000 miles a minute, is positively not in it as a starter with the discovery of Wm. Jennings Bryan that he is willing to take another democratic nomination for president of the United States. There never has been a second during the past twenty years at least when "the peerless one" was not only willing, but eager to accept a nomination for president. During all this time he has done mighty little else during his waking moments but bid for the nomination and during his sleeping hours but dream of it. William J. will never be able to feally and truly startle the country until he discovers that he is not willing to accept the nomination as a discovery that will be actually worth while. At that, Wm Jennings will make almost any Republican candidate "step some."

Let Go of the Money Is the Relief.

All the people of the United States will do well to note the statement of Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou that there is sufficient currency in the United States to restore business conditions to their normal state within twenty-four hours if those in whose possession it is will cease to hoard it and restore it to business channels. The bankers are included in the expression "all the people," be it known, for it goes without saying that the money of the country will stand no better show of getting back into the channels of business if hoarded by the bankers than it will if hoarded by that larger portion of the population who are not bankers. It behooves bankers as well as depositors to act sensibly in this connection.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment promoted its incurability. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. MAYOR OF SUNBURY Says Peru-na Is a Good Medicine.

Hon. C. C. Brooks, Mayor of Sunbury, Ohio, also Attorney for Farmers' Bank and Sunbury Building and Loan Co., writes:

"I have the utmost confidence in the virtue of Peru-na. It is a great medicine. I have used it and I have known many of my friends who have obtained beneficial results from its use. I cannot praise Peru-na too highly."

HON. C. C. BROOKS.

There are a host of petty ailments which are the direct result of the weather.

This is more true of the excessive heat of summer and the intense cold of winter, but is partly true of all seasons of the year.

Whether it be a cold or a cough, catarrh of the head or bowel complaint, whether the liver be affected or the kidneys, the cause is very liable to be the same.

The weather slightly deranges the mucous membranes of the organs and the result is some functional disease.

Peru-na has become a standby in thousands of homes for minor ailments of this sort.

CONFIRMED PROOF.

Residents of Northville Cannot Doubt what Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad back—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Northville, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Northville kidney sufferers.

Henry Priest, retired molder, living on Mill street, Northville, Mich., says: "Mrs. Priest and I have as great confidence in the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills today as we had five years ago when Mrs. Priest allowed a statement telling her experience with this remedy to be published in our local papers. I have also used the pills with gratifying results. I was annoyed by a severe backache which made my work more than ordinarily difficult to perform. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Murdoch Bros' Drugstore. In a short time the backache vanished and I now have no trouble of the kind. Mrs. Priest suffered severely aching across her back accompanied with rheumatic pains so bad at times that she could hardly get around. After using Doan's Kidney Pills all her aches and pains disappeared. We both heartily endorse the claims made for your remedy."

SYNOPSIS.

Porton H. Barnes, a wealthy American touring Corsica, rescues the young English lieutenant, Edward Graham Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Paoli, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves. Ed Anstruther, sister of the English lieutenant, the four fly from Ajaccio to Marseilles on board the French steamer Constantine. The vendetta pursues and as the quartet are about to board the train for London at Marseilles, Marina is handed a mysterious note which causes her to collapse and necessitates a postponement of the journey. Barnes gets part of the mysterious note and receives letters which inform him that he is marked by the vendetta. He employs an American detective and plans to beat the vendetta at their own game. For the purpose of securing the safety of the woman Barnes arranges to have Lady Clarine, a secluded villa at Nice to which the party is to be taken in a yacht. Suspicion is created that Marina is in league with the Corsicans. A man believed to be Corregio Dancella is seen pursuing the house and Marina is thought to have given him a sign. Marina refuses to explain to Barnes, which adds to his distrust. Barnes, however, adds to the safety of the party, as planned by the Corsicans. The carriage carrying their party to the local station is followed by two men, one of the horses out of control and the carriage overturned. The party is rescued.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

Then carriage soon stopped near the two small bays upon which are situated the bathhouses. At a little landing place Barnes can just discern in the mist of the water, which adds to the gloom of the evening, a boat with two seamen.

To be certain, he hails and is answered by Emory's voice.

"It's all right, he whispers to the ladies and springs out of the carriage. The next moment Emory has run up from the landing and is standing before him. Emory whispers suspiciously to Barnes. You get the ladies into the boat quick. I told my men not to come near you unless there was danger. I hear their steps coming down. I'll see what they want. Barnes and Edwin are careful, except they change their plan, the plan down the hill steps is to be to the boat. Their hand catches being placed beside them a carriage, which is carefully looked by Barnes, about Miss Anstruther.

Performing a last service for his wife, Edwin seizes the tiller, seats himself at the helm and remarks comfortably: "Now all's shipshape." As soon as your sleight is on board we'll pull out to the yacht. Then he asks one of the two seamen: "Have you the Seagull's bearings?"

"Aye, aye, sir. She is lying off about a quarter of a mile high due south of here."

All right, says Edwin, examining a pocket compass he produces. "She might have been difficult to find in the darkness without her bearings. She's a light up of course."

A mast head anchor's gun, sir, replies the man.

Suddenly Edwin whispers to Barnes: "We've boarded!" and springing up seizes a boathook and pushes the cutter away from the dock. "Pull quick, my men," he commands, for the voice of the American detective rings out in the night air. Look out for yourselves, and they hear the patter of feet in the darkness running down the walk mingled with a couple of foreign oaths.

Next there is a splash in the water, and Barnes says coolly: "Hold up for a minute, Edwin," and calls: "Is that you, Emory?"

"Yes, thank God," answers the detective who is swimming after them. "Well, if anybody jumps overboard in the darkness, The American is lost in his hand."

Twenty seconds after they drag the dripping skunk into the cutter.

You're a swimming rat for me, says Emory, splashing out some salt water. Get me to the yacht where I can find dry clothes of some kind."

At this, Edwin orders the men to give way which the Scotch sailors do with alacrity.

"If the blessed God, you all had a mighty narrow escape," remarks Emory, his voice quivering. "Though how the deuce the men was at attempting you to get the place of the once I tried to guard you, is more than I can tell. When I heard the approaching steps, I reckoned there must be danger. I went straight to 'em and by gum, they jumped me. Half a second and I was a dead man."

"At my cry of terror," continues Emory, "the danger that was laid over my breast was stayed, and one of them snarls 'Diavolo, this is the accursed murderer, Barnes of New York.' Then they whispered some words to me that I don't care about repeating before the ladies and one of them told the knife was in the hand of the man who had been with you."

other sneaked down towards you, but was too late. You had already got the girls into the boat, I reckon. He came back. They cursed me and let me go. But when they saw I was scotching down the wharf, they started after me, so I jumped into the water and made the boat. They are cursing themselves now, I guess, for letting me get away to warn you."

"Well, they'll hardly dare to follow us on board the yacht," smiles Barnes, for Edwin has hailed: "Sagull, ahoy!"

"Aye, aye," comes the reply, and a moment later the naval officer has laid the boat alongside of the yacht, from which a side ladder has been put over.

"This is Andrew Graham, the mate," says Emory, as an alert young Scotchman assists the ladies to the deck.

"You want to get into dry clothes," remarks Burton. "We'll discuss this affair a little further after we have had dinner, which I imagine is prepared."

Five minutes later, Emory, having gone forward and procured a change of tugs from the mate, they all sit down in the little cabin, which is brilliantly lighted and its table beautifully set with crystal and china, even some fresh flowers adorning it.

"You've done everything mighty nice, Emory," says Barnes, genially, to the detective, "and I hope your wetting hasn't destroyed your appetite."

"Not a bit," answers the American representative of Pinkerton.

"Why doesn't Edwin come down?" whispers Marina, nervously.

"Oh, he's skipper now," replies Burton. "He's making all shipshape with Mr. Graham and getting under way."

After giving the mate his directions as to the course and bidding him keep a good lookout for steamers coming up from Naples, Nice and other ports to the eastward, Edwin joins the party at table.

Lieut. Anstruther, after a glance at his bride, remarks: "Now, with a deck under my feet, I feel shipshape and ready for either pirates or land sharks," and devotes himself with a sailor's appetite to his meal. Delicate little confections and ices as well as some magnificent fruit are put upon the table afterwards by the steward, whose first duty and decided Scotch twang indicate he comes from the north of the Tay.

Altogether, Ed contentedly remarks: "It is about as good a dinner as I ever had."

"Suspect Everybody," Lingers in His Mind.

A few minutes later the gentlemen go on deck to smoke their cigars. Edwin takes his stand beside his Scotch mate, saying: "Well, take it watch and watch, Graham, until the morning," and sends the young fellow helter to turn in.

The two ladies are busily making the arrangements in the cabin. The schooner has a main salon which is used as a dining room, and two little private state-rooms, one of which is assigned to Edwin and his bride, the other to Miss Anstruther.

Under these circumstances, the detective and Barnes have a chance for private conversation. They stroll amidships and seat themselves beside one of the boats.

"How shall I put you on shore?" says Barnes.

"Well, in an hour more we'll be off Brando, I reckon, and if you tell Edwin to drop in to the shore a little, you can put me off in one of the boats."

"All right," replies Parton, and speaking to Anstruther, the yacht's course is changed.

"When you are ashore, you'll get the railway, I suppose, to Marseilles. Pay my hotel bill at the Grand Hotel and I'll remember to meet you at Nice at the time appointed."

Here the detective dismisses his American employer, he draws slowly away. "Yes, but I'd like to give up the matter."

"Give up the matter?"

"Yes, when that Corsican had his knife over my heart he said a few words of warning, telling me to look out for I got into a blood feud, that this matter was to the death, and if I wanted to live I had better leave it alone."

"You're frightened of the man?" asks Barnes.

"No, not exactly frightened, but mighty cautious of him," replies the Yankee, "for a fellow who can fit it so that my two French slugs were shown off the track and he and his pal took their very places and told him your carriage unsuspected and only by God's mercy were preserved from jumping you and doing you up, as you placed the ladies in the boat, is a man whose brains make him mighty dangerous."

Evidently a Belle.

Parton turns up her nose at offers of marriage. "Why so?" The only thing she considers as subject pleas-

Net dangerous enough to cause you to desert these ladies in their extremity. You, an American—I have been told you have a very good nerve."

"Yes, but this kind of an assassinating in the gloom is mighty ticklish—however, I'll go you again," returns the detective, after a few more whiffs of his cigar. "I'll risk it once more for the sake of the ladies. With such a crafty devil again you, what you want to do is to suspect everybody," continues the detective. "You see you cannot be sure where such a snakey fellow will strike you. If it hadn't been for me fortunately walking up that path wondering why my men came down to you, they would have been upon you while you were putting the ladies in your boat, and would have had some of you sure. I know you can shoot quick and straight, but knives at close quarters are better than revolvers, especially in the darkness. You can bless God for having saved you to night. Sure as death."

"I expect everyone," Barnes mutters to himself and turns his eyes about upon the deck as he speaks.

"Oh, they're all safe here—those Scotch sailor laddies. You saw the mate, he is Scotch also—and can be trusted. If you'll put me on shore, I'll be at that villa at Nice ready to tell you everything when you make it. Don't you think the lady—Lillian Anstruther's wife—could stand a voyage to England through the Bay of Biscay?" The detective's voice shows now anxious he is that his suggestion be taken.

"As a physician, I don't think she could," remarks Barnes. "You see her neurotic state has been added to by the attack upon us at the landing. It is not her fears for herself, but her fears for her husband."

"They are now interrupted by Edwin. The lights over there are those of Bandoi. We're in ten fathoms of water. I don't want to venture in any further at night." Then the voice of the young English officer rings out, ordering the cutter to be lowered and manned.

"I go with you as far as the shore," says Barnes.

"No, you stay with the ladies, while I look after you. You're the point of danger now. I'll only suffer if I get too high to you." As the Pinkerton man goes over the side, he whispers to Barnes: "Suspect everybody—even our own emotions and dangers, and especially those of the women with that crafty cuss who had his dagger so cursed near my heart, working on them."

"Could you recognize the man?" asks Burton eagerly.

Hardly, but in the struggle my hand caught his face, and I felt a scar over his left eye."

Great Scott!" ejaculates the American. "He is now certain it is Corregio Dancella who is bent upon revenge for the blood of his dead brother."

As the Yankee detective is rowed away, Barnes paces the deck.

"The night is very fine though extremely dark, and they being near the shore, somewhat misty. The yacht's lights however, burn brightly and a good lookout is kept. Barnes thinks he has little fear from the sea while he is in command of Edwin Anstruther. Still the detective's last warning, 'Suspect everybody,' lingers in his mind."

Some remarks from the ladies in the cabin indicate that they are not coming on deck this evening.

NOT SOLID ENOUGH FOOD.

Nuts Seem to Fail to Satisfy the Human Animal.

Next as the darlings of the world be food reformer come nuts of all sorts, says a writer in McClure's. These are urged upon us with special fervor and enthusiasm by those who regard all foods of animal origin as tainted money, hatched by the foul crime of murder. Here, we are told, are foodstuffs—walnuts, hickory nuts, Brazil nuts, pecans, peanuts—of a high degree of toothsome and attractiveness, not excessive in percentage of both protein and fat. Analysis made in the laboratory absolutely confirm the truth of the statement. Fats and proteins are both present in large amounts and in readily digestible form; and yet practically no unaccompanied specimen of the human race—except the Shawnee Indian in hickory nut time—will attempt to make a meal on nuts, regarding them simply as a bonus larder, to be taken after the serious business of the meal is over, mealy as a dessert. The tact phrase of the walnuts and the wine expresses precisely where they are in the scale of the normal diet list.

India's Sacred Trees.

There are many sacred trees of India which enter largely into the religious life of the Hindoos. Chief among these is the same tree and the trembling peepul. Nearly all the higher hills and rocks in the plains are crowned each by a temple, shrine or sacred tree. The peepul is known as the king of trees. It is the most holy, and the three great spirits of the Hindoos dwell therein. The worship of the tree is the worship of the triad Brahma, Siva and Vishnu. Almost every Indian village has its peepul tree, with a raised platform or altar around it. The devout remove their shoes before it and make obeisance before proceeding on their way.

Couldn't Discharge Him.

When the jury had filed in for at least the fourth time, with no sign of coming to an agreement in the bribery case, the disgusted judge rose up and said: "I discharge this jury."

At this, one sensitive townsman, stung to the quick by this abrupt and ill-sounding decision, obstinately faced the judge.

"You can't discharge me, judge," he retorted.

"Because," announced the townsman, pointing to the defendant's lawyer, "I'm being paid by that man there!" Lippincott's.

SCHOOL TEACHERS

Also Have Things to Learn.

"For many years I have used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher.

"Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poisoning."

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head, and, at times after exertion, a general 'gone' feeling with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years."

"A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years ago I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all."

"This time, however, my friend made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Suddenly I found myself improving in a most decided fashion."

"The odor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts which I am glad to make known."

A RUSE THAT FAILED

MR. PENNYWINKLE BROUGHT HOME A GAME FOWL.

Mr. Pennywinkle entered his front door like a cautious man who wishes to make no noise. In his right hand he carried a heavy paper bag which, from the inscription upon it had evidently once served the purpose of holding 25 pounds of flour; and Mr. Pennywinkle held this bag securely by the neck as though his soul's salvation hinged thereon.

"John!" cried a voice.

With a great sigh and a fearsome look at the paper bag John answered back:

"My love?"

"Is that you?"

And John walked through to the kitchen holding his hat in one hand and the paper-bag in the other and, standing in the doorway with his head meekly bent forward, he blinked his eyes in all humility.

"Why, John!" cried Mary, "whatever have you got there in that bag?"

And as she said the words the bag moved. John, standing as still as stone, his gaze fixed on the floor in front of him and giving no sign.

"Good grief!" cried Mary, gasping for breath and turning slightly pale. "What on earth ails you, John?"

"Nothing," said John.

"Then what is it in that bag?"

"A hen," said John.

"A hen?"

"A dead one."

"No," said John.

"A live one."

"Yes," said John, and he gazed at Mary at last in such a pleading, wistful way that she turned her head to hide her look of pride.

"Now, they had a raffle at the office," said John, growing bolder at Mary's silence, "and I won it."

He placed his hat on a chair.

It is a game fowl," he eagerly added.

He drew a jackknife from his pocket placed the bag on the floor and opened the knife to cut the string that encircled the neck of the bag.

"They are very rare," he added, again, flushing with pleasure at the thought of his proprietorship in the fowl and Mary's kindness to him.

"Well," said Mary, speaking with indulgence, "put it down in the cellar for the present, John, and we will see."

And if even a happy man first hung his hat up in that hall and then carried a paper bag down into the cellar, humming a hymn under his breath and walking softly as a true gentleman should it was our John the night he brought the game fowl home.

"Won't you have to build a coop for it?" asked Mary after dinner.

"Yes, shall I go now?" asked John, rising from the table. The poor thing will have to have a coop, shall I go now, Mary?"

She nodded a gracious assent and John tipped down the cellar steps like a bride who is late to be wedding and when Mary went down a little later and sat on the steps to watch him work John's cup of happiness was full and the chicken coop grew beneath his hands like a thing of magic.

There, said John, after the coop had been finished and set outside, a nest and a perch placed in it and the game fowl balanced on the perch.

Now, if she is only a good layer."

But it seemed as if that was the very thing in which the game fowl was most deficient.

"Did the chicken lay an egg?" was John's first question every night.

And every night Mary made sympathetic answer:

"No, John, it didn't."

John's spirits drooped.

"Perhaps," he said another night, she needs a bigger nest."

They enlarged her nest.

"Perhaps," he said the third night, she needs a few oyster shells well cracked up."

They provided her with that delicacy.

"Perhaps," said John the fourth night, she needs a run."

They tied a string to her leg and let her run.

The fifth night John had no suggestion to offer, but his manner was so disconsolate when Mary told him the news of the chicken's continued inaction that she could hardly restrain herself from going right out and boxing the game fowl's ears. Simultaneously an inspiration struck her, and the next morning she made a special visit to the chicken coop and slyly slipped an egg into the nest.

"I don't suppose the chicken laid an egg," sighed John as he hung up his hat that night.

"I don't know," said Mary, bustling around. "I've been so busy to day I've hardly had time to turn around. Come to think about it, though, she was cackling like anything this afternoon."

"John rushed out and almost simultaneously rushed in again, triumphant, carrying the egg."

"Well, well!" cried Mary.

"Isn't it a large one!" cried John.

"Of all things!" cried Mary.

"And how heavy it is!" cried John, weighing it in his palm. "I never felt such a heavy—"

It slipped—fell—broke—and, O, but it was an ancient egg!

"I wouldn't want to eat it," said Mary, turning fery red.

O, they're not for eating!" cried John, "they're for getting!"

"Gamy enough," said Mary.

"Yes," said John simply, "she's a game fowl."

COULD USE THE ROAD.

Irish Soldier's Great Idea When Cover Was Daily Needed.

The following colloquy is said to have actually occurred during one of the earlier battles in the Philippines:

A detachment of American infantry, under orders to support a section of Capt. Reilly's battery, were halted for quite a while on a perfectly flat military road in full view and fine range of the Filipino trenches. Of course, to lie flat on the road was the only available "use of cover."

In this detachment was an Irishman who had served his time with the colors in the British army before he enlisted with Uncle Sam. As a recruit he had been very prone to tell how the British soldiers did everything. As a result he was incessantly plied with questions as to his experiences. While the bullets were "popping" down the road and kicking up the gravel, a young Yankee suddenly asked:

"Say, Mike, what do the British soldiers do with their heads in a place like this?"

"Quick as a flash came the retort: "A British soldier has no head, sir!"

After a full two-minute pause, Mike continued:

"However, be that as it may, I wish I could pick up this d— road and stan' it on edge fermin' me!"

FOUND OUT JUST IN TIME.

Or Finger Bowl Would Have Been Put to Novel Use.

The late William Cassidy, one-time editor of the Albany Argus, possessed the traditional Irish wit. On one occasion, a number of years ago, he was a guest at a political banquet in Albany. At that time finger bowls were seldom used, and their correct usage (a passing fad) meant to dip a corner of the napkin in the water and there-with daintily cleanse the finger tips. Most of the men present eyed the innovation, when introduced at dessert, narrowly and uncertainly. One after another ended by plunging the hand into the crystal dish. But Mr. Robert Pruyn, a well known Albany gentleman, correctly moistened a bit of his napkin and laved his fingers. Mr. Cassidy watched him admiringly, not having as yet touched his own glass.

"That's good," he whispered to a neighbor. "That's good. If Pruyn hadn't done that I should have put my foot in it."—Harper's Weekly.

An Acute Observer.

A one-armed man sat down to his noonday luncheon in a little restaurant the other day, and seated on the right of him was a big, sympathetic individual from the rural district.

The big fellow noticed his neighbor's left sleeve hanging loose and kept eyeing him in a sort of horrified fashion way. The one-armed man failed to break the ice, but continued to keep busy with his one hand supplying the inner man.

At last the inquisitive one on the right could stand it no longer. He changed his position a little, cleared his throat and said: "I see, sir, you have lost an arm."

"Whereupon the unfortunate man picked up the empty sleeve with his right hand, peered into it, looked up with a surprised expression, and said: "By George, sir, you're right."

TAKING OUT STAINS ENCOURAGING FACTS

PAINT MARKS SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO DRY.

Easily Be Removed When Fresh. Made—Turpentine, Soap and Water All That Is Necessary for Operation.

The ease or difficulty with which paint stains are removed depends on the length of time they have been in the fabric. If removed when the paint is wet, their removal is more easily accomplished than when left until dry.

To remove wet paint from white material, wash the stain with soap and water and boil it with kerosene in the water, as for kerosene washing, and again rub between the hands, using soap and very hot water. Rinse in several waters to get rid of the smell of the oil.

While fresh it may be removed by repeated applications of spirits of turpentine, or spirits of wine rubbed on with a rag.

Dry paint on white material can be easily removed by soaking the stain in turpentine to soften the medium which hardens the fabric. It should then be rubbed well in the turpentine and washed in soap and water and finished by ordinary washing.

Paint consists mainly of oils and some colored earth. Spots of paint then must be treated with something that will take out the oil, leaving the insoluble coloring matter to be brushed off.

Paint can be removed from silk by first saturating it in equal parts of turpentine and ammonia, then washing in soap suds and letting it dry between blotting paper under a heavy weight.

To remove paint from colored material, dip the stain in turpentine and rub, then place it in a little ammonia and again rub, to sapify the oil of the paint and wash in warm soapy water, rinse thoroughly, dry, and iron when it is slightly damp.

There is a risk, when washing paint stains from colored material, of making the material faded. If this is likely to happen, it is advisable to place the stain over a towel and to rub it with a rag moistened with turpentine, then with ammonia, concentrating the rubbing as much as possible on the stain.

Water color paint stains can be removed by simply washing. To remove paint from a light tan coat use turpentine, then sponge with benzine.

To remove paint from a dress, spread some dry starch around the part stained, then wet the stain with turpentine. Let it rest for awhile and wet again, and then with the dull edge of a knife scrape off the paint; then sponge again with turpentine. Rub dry with a clean cloth. The starch is used to prevent the spreading of the paint and turpentine. If the color has been affected sponge with chloroform.

Nut Roast.

Shell nuts and grind enough to make two cups, or they may be chopped fine. Take a five-cent loaf of bread or its equivalent of home-made bread, two days old, and break the crumbs fine, discarding the crust. Mix the crumbs and nuts, together with a level teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of pepper and a half teaspoonful of mixed herbs. Melt one-third cup of butter, add one cup of milk and stir into the mixture, then stir into a loaf on a buttered pan that is not much larger than the loaf. Bake one hour and taste often with butter melted in water. Make a rich tomato sauce while it is baking. With a broad knife lift the nut roast to a warm platter or a serving dish and pour the sauce around it.

Papier Mache Trays.

Papier mache trays should never be allowed to remain wet from tea water or milk spilt on them. Wash them with a sponge, not too wet, and cold water. While still damp sprinkle a little flour over, then rub with a soft flannel and polish with a chamous leather.

White heat marks may be partially removed from papier mache trays by rubbing with a flannel dipped in sweet oil and afterwards lightly in spirits of wine.

Velvet Sherbet.

Scald one quart of milk in a double boiler. Add two cups of sugar and stir until dissolved and the milk looks blue, then set away to cool. Pack the freezer, pour into the can the cold milk, and let stand five minutes. Then add the strained juice of two lemons or oranges and the whites of two eggs (beaten), with two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Freeze, repack, and set away for two hours to ripen. Serve with this a delicate white cake.

Sauce for Winter Salad.

One gallon vinegar, one-half pound mustard, one-half ounce celery seed, one-half ounce tumeric, one and one-half pounds brown sugar, one cup flour. Mix celery seed, mustard, tumeric, and flour in a little cold vinegar and stir into the sugar and gallon of vinegar when at the boiling point. Strain and pour over salad.

Dry Shoes Carefully.

If shoes have been thoroughly wet don't attempt to dry them near the stove. Rub in plenty of vaseline or lanolin and let stand in a cool place several days and much of the original oil will be restored.

Tea Stains on the Cloth.

If the tea stains do not come out of tablecloths easily by rubbing in cold water, then pouring on boiling water, soak the stain in glycerine and then wash thoroughly.

THOSE CONTEMPLATING CHANGE OF RESIDENCE SHOULD READ THEM.

The other day the writer was in the Office of the Canadian Government at St. Paul, Minnesota. On the windows of the building were signs to the effect that homesteads of 160 acres were given free to actual settlers, and in the windows were displays of wheat, oats, barley, other grains and vegetables, which he was told were grown in Western Canada. This could be readily believed for in no other country on the Continent would it be possible to grow such splendid specimens. The world is now pretty well advised that in the growing of such cereals as have been named and vegetables as well the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have no competitor. For several years past specimens have been exhibited at State and County Fairs throughout the State, and these exhibits are looked upon as one of the chief attractions. They have demonstrated what can be done in the climate of a country possessing a soil that will grow things. But that it was possible to grow vegetables such as were seen there seemed to create some doubt. But it was the case. And applies too. Not of course the splendid fruit grown in countries more congenial to such culture, but they were in evidence. Throughout Indiana, the hoosier farmers were forced to stop and think. When a similar exhibit was placed before them during the past few weeks, many of them were forced to stop and remark: "That is much ahead of anything we can do. The quality of the grain we have conceded, for has not sound-so sent us samples grown on his own farm the like of which we had never seen before. But to think of the vegetables and such vegetables. Why, we thought everything was frozen up there, and there—turnips, cabbages, cauliflower, beets, man-golds, pumpkins, and squashes—were away ahead of anything we ever saw grow." That is the story everywhere. Thousands of Western Canada homesteaders, formerly United States citizens, are growing just such grain just such vegetables which yield them a splendid profit with little outlay on the farms that they have secured from the Government of the Dominion of Canada at the nominal cost of $10 for 200 acres. If adjoining land is wanted it can be secured from the railway companies or from private individuals at moderate prices and reasonable terms. By placing your name and address on a postal card and addressing it to the Canadian Government Agent, whose name appears elsewhere, a copy of "Last Best West" will be sent you free.

FOUR SHAFTS OF HUMOR.

Pithy Remarks from One of the Foremost Jokesmiths.

With the truly artistic temperament the bird in the bush has scant notion of doubling its value by changing to the hand.

A has-been is a man who has spent his time with hair-vigors, electric brushes and newspaper recipes, when he should have been winning a laurel wreath to cover his ignominy with.

When you enter a shop state just what you want. For then the merchant can go intelligently to work to sell you something else. The great law of commerce is to sell people that they don't want. What they do want will sell itself.

ITCHING RASH 18 YEARS.

Girl's Rash Spread and Grew Worsened Under Specialist's Care—Perfect Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"When my daughter was a baby she had a breaking out behind the ears. The doctor said that she would outgrow it, and it did get somewhat better until she was about fifteen years old, and after that she could get nothing that would drive it away. She was always applying something in the way of salves. It troubled her behind the knees, opposite the elbows, back of the neck and ears, under the chin, and then it got on the face. That was about three years ago. She took treatment with a specialist and seemed to get worse all the time. We were then advised to try the Cuticura Remedies, and now I don't see any breaking out. M. Curley, 11-19 Sixteenth St., Day City, Mich., May 20, 1906."

"Come to think of it, she did. Wanted to know if I loved her as much as ever—or something of the sort."

DOCTORS ORGANIZE UNION.

Toronto Physicians Fix Higher Scale of Prices.

Toronto, Ont.—The doctors of this city west of Yonge street have formed a union under the name "No. 11 Territorial Division of the College of Physicians and Surgeons." The objects of the organization are to improve the condition of the profession against quacks, establish minimum fees and amend lodge terms. The lowest fee for medical examination for fraternal societies has been fixed at $2, while the minimum fee for minor operations has been fixed at $10, and that for major operations at $50. For a first visit to a patient $2 hereafter will be charged, and $1 for each subsequent visit, while the fee for night visits will be doubled, being fixed at $3. The charge for an office visit has been made $1, including prescription, while to give anesthetics $5 will be charged.

REXALL

A. E. Stanley & Co.

REMEDIES HAVE ARRIVED IN TOWN.

No doubt you have heard of them. They are used by several millions of people throughout the United States, and we sell them to you with a guarantee that if they are not what we claim we will gladly refund your money. One remedy for each human ill.

Some three years ago a number of prominent retail druggists—realizing that a big change was to be made in the proprietary medicine business, that the public demanded to know what the ingredients were of the preparations they were advertising, and that a general reform was about to take place in proprietary medicine manufacturing and advertising, formed a co-operative company to meet the public's demand. This company was called The United Drug Co., of which the undersigned has become one of the two thousand members.

Our object was, first, to manufacture a line of prescriptions such as we had tried out in our stores and found to give the very best of results, and second, by owning our own co-operative manufacturing company we would be able to know the exact formula of every preparation we were selling, thus enabling us to give to the public the very best remedies we could find at actual manufacturing cost, plus a single retail profit.

This enabled The United Drug Company to escape the heavy charges for advertising and other expenses such as have to be paid by proprietary remedies. What was most important, it insured safety and satisfaction to our customers, because we druggists know just what we are selling.

A committee of experts was appointed who spent a long time in testing the merits of more than two thousand formulas and prescriptions recommended by the various druggists constituting the company.

From these, about two hundred were selected as being the best remedies known to medical science for the cure, each of its particular ailment.

The exclusive rights to these remedies were then transferred to The United Drug Company, which has since manufactured them in its superbly equipped laboratories in Boston under the now famous name of "The Rexall Remedies."

Note then, first of all, these facts:

1st. "Rexall" refers, not to one remedy but to about two hundred—each for some one particular purpose. Nobody knows better than The United Drug Company druggists the absurdity of the "cure-all."

2d. Each "Rexall" Remedy is a tested and proved success, selected for its conspicuous merit from many of its class. All had established reputations through their continued use by physicians before they became members of the "Rexall" family.

3rd. "Rexall" Remedies are sold at low prices because they are free from heavy manufacturing charges, jobbing profits, and the heavy expense of being advertised separately, as formerly.

The United Drug Company, which manufactures the Rexall Remedies, has already scored the greatest success ever known in the history of the drug business.

Three of the 200 "Rexall" Remedies, one for each human ill, are:

FOR CATARRH—MUCU-TONE

The chief ingredients of Mucu-Tone are Gentian, Cubebs, Cascara Sagrada, Glycerine, and Sarsaparilla.

Gentian is recognized in medicine as one of the greatest tonics ever discovered. It is the foundation on which Mucu-Tone is built. Gentian combines in high degree the tonic powers of all the known "bitters," with none of the disadvantages applying to them.

Cubebs have long been recognized as a specific in the treatment of all catarrhal conditions. Its action is prompt and its benefit almost invariable. In whatever part of the body the inflamed or diseased condition of the mucous membrane exists, the use of Cubebs has been recommended by the best physicians for many generations.

Cascara Sagrada is especially introduced for its necessary laxative properties.

The combination of these with Glycerine and Sarsaparilla makes Mucu-Tone a remedy that attacks catarrh from every point, gradually restores and rebuilds the diseased tissues to their former health and strength, promotes digestion and creates a normal appetite. Bottle, 50c.

"Rexall" Remedies are found only in the stores of druggists affiliated with The United Drug Company—only one in each town and each backs up this "Rexall" guarantee printed on every package: "This preparation is guaranteed to give satisfaction. If it does not, come back and get your money. It belongs to you, and we want you to have it."
