-HAS MADE GOOD

REDUCED PRICE- OF TWINE AND MADE PROFIT

Capacity of About Four Million Pounds Each Year.

Jackson, July 6.-The binder twine plant at Jackson prison, which is just completing its first year's work, has made good every promise «made by Governor Warner when he recomto provide for installing the plant. It has made good in three ways: it has reduced the cost of binder twine proclamation: to every farmer in the state; it will yield a profit this first season which shows the future possibilities of the plant to take care of a goodly portion of the expense of maintaining the prison, and it furnishes an income to those prisoners employed in the plant who have families to support, which will go far towards relieving misery in many homes and instill new manhood in the convicts.

Those familiar with the history of the binder twine bill when it was before the legislature, will recall that it was long doubtful whether the governor would have a chance to sign the bill. The boxers were opposed to the bill and there were mysterious moves which retarded the passage of the measure.

A visit to the plant to watch the seventy convicts employed at the machines manufacturing binder twine wilî cause anyone not familiar with the process of making cordage, to consider it wonderful. Warden in the bank. Just prison management at Jackson since his appointment, but in tackling this new thing in prison economics, he has made it a success the first year. It opens the way to the use of the convicts to combat other trusts The legislature appropriated $50,000 to equip the plant and $125,000 for the revolving fund with which to buy raw material. The plan was started last April and has manufactured 1,100,000 pounds or 550 tons this eason so far. The full capacity of the plant, if there was sufficient money in the revolving fund to buy pounds a year. This is about onethird the binding twine required in

TOO MUCH MALT EXTRACT AND FIGHTIN' BLOOD.

Rough House on the Streets Caused Riot Alarm

A fist fight in front of the Mauk uilding late Saturday night cau-ed general riot call to be fulled off at the police station A call was given to the Home 'phone company for a policeman and the police bell alarm signal, "séveral short rings," was given on the electric gong at the engine house. Some one thought the gong meant a fire and then a noisy fire alarm was pulled off on the big was a commotion People ran, dogs barked like mad; boys yelled, telephones jiugled and there was a general scampers for the "fire," until finally every one was told it was a fight instead of a hre, and quiet once more-reigned.

Chief Tafft was soon, on the highting line with-a battalion of police but at the first ring of the alarm bells the fistle gentry commenced to flee and were vanished as he arrived.

OPINIONS FROM THE STATE PRESS

The administration of Governor Warner has exposed a combination in the state that was invincible in their demands under the old system and who have fought the demands of the people for a primary reform law in every way possible. # MANIAC BROTHERS

STIFF BATTLE ON A FARM

Sister of the Two Men, Fled to St. Je seph and Warned Officers That There Would Be Bloodshed-Aged

Mother in Farm House

Making good their vow that they would never be captured alive August Gross, the maniac who shot down an inoffensive-old man, and Fred half-crazed brother, are dead at their farm house home in Pipestone town ship, near St Joseph August was found in the upper room of his house where he had bled to death from the effects of shots fired by Deputy Sheriff Harry Hogue. Fred, shot through the leg while running from the sheriff's posse, sent a-bullet into his own brain as he lay on the ground preferring death_to capture

As soon as the news was received ast night that Gross had shot James Kirk, a meat peddler who visited their home. Sheriff Tennant dispatched a party of seven deputies to with ofder to watch the house all night and make sure that the prothers did not escape Wednesday morning to drove out to the scene of the shocting and directed the arrangements to capture the in sane brothers About & o'clock the deputies lying bidden abou tthe farm house saw the two brothers emerge cautiously from their house and go to the berry patch, where they, began picking berries Both carried revolvers

Both carried revolvers

Sheriff Tennant then divided his posse Two of the deputies were sent to engage the attention of the broth ers while the remainder of the party crept up behind them The two who had been selected for that duty ad vanced from their cover and shouted only reply was a volley of shots.

The party attacking from the rear got very close to the Gross brothers who instantly opened fire on their pursuers. There was, a rapid exchange of their pursuers. shots and then both the brothers began to run Deputy Sheriff Harry Hogue pursued August, firing feur shots at him with a shotgun The hunt ed man slaggered but finally reached his home and disappeared within the door, leaving a trail of blood behind hım

Fred Gross also trief to reach the house, but a bullet from one of the deputies' revolvers striking him in the leg he stumbled and fell in a heap he lay prostrate on the ground, quickly placed his revolver to his head and sent a bullet into his brain before the officers could reach him He died without saving a word

No sound emanating from the house, the deputies advanced cautionaly, their weapons in their hands expecting every moment to be greeted by a volley from the manuac within Enter ing they found the aged mother of the two men weeping and wringing her hands almost framuc with grief Proceeding to an upstairs room, they found August stretched upon the bed in his room dead A single shot from Hogue's gun had pierced his heart in flicting a small but fatal wound whose slow bleeding enabled him to reach the house.

Not a word was spoken all through the combat Both sides seemed to un derstand that it was a battle to the death. Although the Gross brothers fired many shots=their aim was very had One bullet went through Deputy Glovers hat but that was the nearest any of the attacking party came to being injured

The crime for which the officers sought to arrest August Gross was the shooting of 70 year old James Kirk vesterday Kirk drove about the country pedding meat Tuesday afternoon he drove into the Gross yard where upon August Gross came out with a revolver in his hand and man through the head but the attending physician said this afternoon that they thought he had a chance to recover

farm house with their mother who is 60 years old, and their sister, Ann, aged 30 After August had shot Kirk, Anna hurried to the jail here and begged Sheriff Tennant not to attempt to capture her brothers, saying that they had vowed that they would shoot the first man who set foot on the premises

Both of the Gross brothers had been violent for over a year.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

Sally B. sped away to the kitchen. Stella detained Uncle Billy a second in the hall, her hand on his coat lapel She had intended to speak with him about schools, where to go, how to set about the new life; but these questions must wait His trip and its success were the only things that mat-

"Aren"t you going to rest?" "There are plenty others to Go to bed early, won't you, Uncle Billy?

He crosed his warm, strong hand over hers with fond pressure. sweet to have her womanly solicitude. to feel her near him, her soft hand pulsing under his own. "Afteh the fight is time enough to rest, little girl. I must see that my wagon and stock are all right for the first hard drive. I'll have to trust to luck afteh that, or to the hostlehs-that's about the same thing'

Well, rest as much as you can, then. I'll have a luck flower for your button-hole when you start" She smiled into his eyes, her own shining with excitement "You'll win, Uncle Billy! I know it'"

She watched him down the street to the stage barn, where she knew no item of preparation would escape his vigilant eye. Yet there was time to spare. Would-he take advantage of it? Perhaps not. She knew he was master of that perfect relaxation that prepares for stress as well as sleep

Alvın had dropped his study, Viola Sally B. was in the kitchen. Stella, left with no pressing duty, wandered into the dark parlor. Lighting it was Viola's task, but she had forgotten tonight, to Stella's satisfaction.

She drew a chair to the window that faced the dim mountain across the gorge, closed her senses to the little world about her and was quickly off with the sprites of the night to keep her heart's tryst with Alfred. Not quite alone did they two meet this night in fancy's fair halls. Viola, Alvin, even Sally B's uncompromising black eyes interrupted Stella's dreams.

Minutes ticked by unheeded. Hurrying feet came and went, calls, cries commands, odors of unusual cooking floated past madequate doors: but Stella was oblivious till a draught of air struck her cheek sharply and Cideon's voice called her.

... She started to her feet. "Gideon! Where-you said 'To-morrow' in your message! Who told you I was here?

"No one. I can always find you, Stella. Something tells me The in stant I opened the door I knew you were here. A kind of fragrance.—I could tell it—"

"Don't, Gideon," she interrupted. She was looking for matches, but his alert sense caught the aversion in tone and movement.

Your father once told me that a Pima princess was my great-grandmother. I cannot escape my heritage from her." He took the match she had struck and lighted the hanging lamp. The flame shone full on his upturned face, and Stella gazed at him fas-cinated, while he adjusted wick and shade. He seemed to her excited gaze the concentrated beat and puise of a Tenderness fled. The words flashed forth like the hiss of a snake. He faced her fiercely, the veins in his forehead swelling quickly, undulating-ly. The primordial male was master now, holding in leash every grace of won. 'Listen, Stella Anthony! If that woman-dandy cared for you, if he had been man enough to marry you to put you beyond the insult of railroad-camp gossip and curiosity, I'd hide away in the mountains and live on memories. But he's spoiling you life! And he shall not live to spoil it longer! I'll-"

"No, no, Gideon!" she broke in ex-citedly. "Don't say those words! You shall not harm him!" She stood erect, her eye blaziûg back flame for flame For herself weak, for him she loved she was a lioness at bay. "Do you call that love?" she asked scornfully, "to strike a woman through the man she loves? I could hate you, Gideon Ingram! Leave me! I hope never to see your face again!"

Gideon did not speak. Stella rouse and angry was a new being to him He had not realized that her spirit was as intrepid as his own. Stripped compassion for his love of her wrenched free from the claim of their past, she flung out her stinging words like whip-strokes

"Love! What do you know of that sacred thing? Hide in your mountains? Yes! And stay, till you learn that first of all love is not for self, but to serve the loved one. I could never love you. If Alfred were ten times dead. Î'd not marry vou!'

Red lights were burning in Gideon's passionate eyes, and he turned to her with savage counter threat.

"Whether Vincent lives or not von shall be my wife, Stella Anthony! There's no other woman in the world but you, and I shall be worthy of you. You shall see my face again—you shall pray to see it!" He towered over her, his stormy eyes fixed on hers un flinchingly, yet he did not touch her "Good-bye," he said in a lower voice "I shall find him; and I shall come again!" He stepped backward as he finished

She sprang after him, but he had closed the door and slid into the night

She would go refinement, every saint's virtue he had and see. She opened the door and peered out. The street was deserted Yet bright, unshaded windows gleam ing in all directions; extra lights if the saloon across the way: knots of men at the doors; the rattle of chips, the clink of ice and glass, and an oc casional voice raised above the sub dued murmur that came from Salls B.'s barroom—all told Stella that the fown waited awake for the night's

She stole out, passed the hotel and seeped guiltily into the stage office. Only the clerk on duty was within and he was nodding. Cautiously she approached and looked over the passenger list that lay open on the coun Gideon had not booked.

Though half stunned by dread and fear, she yet could not face Sally B. again and the busy kitchen. She paced restlessly, stopped to reread-her letter and add a penciled word, and wen into the hall to listen for Uncle Billy Silence. No one was stirring in the house outside of the cook's domain.

Bask she turned to her nervous tread, counting her steps mechanically. Her mind was painfully alert supersensitive. The half-hour struck. "The clock is surely wrong!" Stells whispered. But the dining room clock quickly rang a confirming chime; and he doomful tick, tick, went slowly on.

She crept out again to the stage office, where the clerk no longer coquetted with duty in his chair, but lay full length on the counter, frankly seduced by Morpheus. The passenger list still lay open, and Stella looked Gideon's name was not there!

She wondered why, since his looks more than his words told her that he would seek Alfred at once As she walked back new fears beset her. Why was Gideon not going on the stage? Could Alfred be already on his way to Colfax? Near? Coming now and Gideon had learned it? A terrify ing vision of their meeting shook her yet quick comfort came with the recollection of Alfred's promised telegram He would surely keep his word. Ten minutes of two! Ten minutes past-fifteen! A light step came down the stair.

and Stella flew into the hall

"Uncle Billy!" she called softly, and drew him into the parlor. She put her etter in his hand, told him of Gideon breathlessly describing Alfred's dan ger, though concealing its cause She did not dream that Uncle Billy guessed it well

He promised to mount guard over Alfred, though he scoffed at her_fear and declared that Gideon, son of the night, was doubtless alone somewhere fighting out his anger

"Oh, Uncle Billy, you're such a dear, good father to me," she cried impetu ously, and, heedless, did not see the light die in his eyes, recked not of a missed heart-beat.

His back was toward the lamp, his face downcast, yet when he lifted if again, he was calm, his voice steady though Stella caught a vibrant sad-ness in it she could not understand

"Honey, there's something T've been wishing to speak to you about for a month o' Sundays, but I couldn't raise the pluck" 'He stopped, and Stella, so overwrought, grew suddenly ap-prehensive, though she did not speak

"Yo' Uncle Billy's stake in Mam mon's mighty small; but such as it is it is deeded to you, child. I haven't any kin of my own, that is, none that s as neah to me as you are, honey. I fixed the panels in Auburn vestebday

For an instant Stella did not comprehend. She looked questioningly into his face and he smiled back at her, waiting for her to speak. Then it broke suddenly—a will! All a young F heart's dread of death came into her eyes =Uncle Billy dead' And she profiting by it? It could not be. He only one way. The precipient sorrow, the generous deed, broke-down Stella's defenses and tears flowed uncontrolled while she haltingly told her gratitude. Uncle Billy had barely dried her eyes when Sally B.'s step sounded in the hall.

'I'm in heah, Sally B," he called and all ready." Before she could turn back from the stairs and enter he drew Stella to him and kissed her. 'Don't forget my luck posy, honey," he whispered, as Sally B. door. And in that instant Stella's eves were opened.

Ten minutes later the coaches Uncle Billy's leading, lined up beside the thronged sidewalk Some passen gers stood near the second coach, Only a privileged few coming on the train would go with Uncle Billy.

Stella, a rose in her hand, stood with others near the stage office "Is Mr. Ingram going Uncle Billy or in the other coach? she asked the clerk, as he returned to his post from some errand. "Ingram? He left town hours ago

A load of 35 cubic feet-of clay is a-good load to be hauled at one time, and with that size load it would take 200 loads to get the clay onto the land. That looks like a co-lossal task. # CARING FOR

When Thayer's wife died Elains was just seven. Thayer elected to keep up his home and care for Elaine self, instead of passing her over to distant female relatives and existing in a hotel. That poor mar

-and with a child on his hands, too!" was what Mrs. Smith next door said to the others who were acquainted with Her Pretty Niece the Thayers.

"It's so hard for a man to look-after a child," sighed Mrs. Jones, reaching for her embroidery cotton. "We must for her embroidery cotton. keep an eye on Elaine!"

"Andeed we must!" agreed the chorus heartily. And they did. Elaine got cookies at the Smith house and cake at the Joneses', incidentally acquiring an attack of indigestion.

"Of course you know hest, Mr. 'hayer," said Mrs. Smith, pausing in the door of Elaine's room on one of the times she had run in to see the invalid, "but are you sure you require her to eat the proper foods? Maybe that is the trouble!"

"I'm sure I don't know," confessed Elaine's worried father. "I guess she just eats what she wants and lets it go at that. I don't suppose it is the best thing for her. To tell the truth, however, I'm not quite sure that I know what is best in the food line."

That was how good-natured, bustling Mrs. Smith began making out menus for the Thayers' cook. When her pret ty niece from the west came to visit her and developed amazing skill in manufacturing decserts and salads for the Smiths it was only natural "that she should frequently send in portions to the lonely man and the small girl

"I'm not a matchmaker," she said severely in reply to a remark of her husband's, "but it's nearly a year since his wife died, and I don't know a better man, and he has plenty of money. I don't see at all why you are

It was about this time that Mrs. Jones began shaking her head over the careless manner in which Elaine braved bad weather in clothes which

"That child certainly will have pneumonia, Mr. Thayer," she said one day when she had met father and daughter on the front walk

"I thought she'd a better wear heavy coaf," confessed Thayer, "but she didn't seem to want to do so. She said she felt warm enough'

"Do you know why?" asked Mrs Jones in a whisper which excluded Elaine. "Because she likes the bright buttons on this one! You must be firm, Mr. Phayer! Children are up to all sorts of whims and tricks! By the way, I know your sewing girl comes next month-would you like to have me pick out some ginghams for Elaine? I don't want to be officious but--'

"That would be mighty good of you Mrs. Jones," Thayer said heartily. you'd just buy what you think she needs I'd be more than grateful."

Inasmuch as Mrs. Jones' unmarried sister, who was staying with her, was skillful with the needle, perhaps it was not unnatural that the prettiest dress Elaine had, a thin white one with lots of lace, should have been the work of Mrs. Jones' sister's own hands instead of the sewing girl's.

"I don't like to say anything," said would make the mother to that poor child that Abby would, if Abby is my own niece! She's so fond of children! And Elaine seems to like her so much I must have her make an extra custard pie to day and I'll send it over

"It's only for the sake of Elaine," Mrs. Jones said when her husband re proached her for laying snares for the feet of the lonely Thayer. "I really don't care whom he marries, provided it is some one who will look out for that poor, neglected child!

"Mr. Thayer," remarked Mrs. Jones, with dignity, "is a very appreciative man and realizes the spirit in which we do things for the child. A man is so helpless!"

Thayer was polite to both Mrs. Smith's niece and Mrs. Jones' sister. And then just as both families began to flutter with hope he married a 20-year-old girl who lived in the next block, who couldn't boil water without burning it, and who openly boasted that she had never ven mended her Mrs. Jones' Sister. own stockings. Moreover, children made her nervous. Thayer said he felt it was his duty to give Elaine a became friends again.

"After all we've done for that man and Elaine!" mourned Mrs. Jones.

"Of course, all I feel bad about is that poor, neglected child!"

"Of course," said Mrs. Smith. "Anyhow, he deserves all he'll get for his foolishness. It's just like a man!"— Chicago Daily News.

She watched her put it into the bag and then went dreaming home, and for all of the two weeks of waiting she was very happy-dreaming always Poor girl-she had made her life so unhappy that joy seemed divine. She was sure of Seffy. Sometimes she wondered with a blush and a start if he might not come bimself in answer She would not have been surprised to have him steal up behind her-that his way, she remembered-and call out softly her name So she went about almost on tiptoes so that she might hear him if he should. It was a little difficult to keep it from the inquisitive old man, who did not quite understand her sudden happiness. But

And, finally, the two weeks were up She was quite sure Seffy would not waste a moment with his answer And he might use that mysterious instrument, the telegraph, which she under stood would not take more than an hour from Kansas. She supposed his message, even if he used the telegraph, would come to the post-office.

The ceremonial of a letter, with simple people, is as much a matter of concern as a treaty between two nations. and now, as she dressed herself is her best clothes to go to the post office, she felt, somehow, as if she were to be in Seffy's personal presence, and must be as immaculate as always. She wondered how he would address her-forgetting that his answer-must come to the one whose name she had signed. She had beard of various most dear head-lines to letters. I am afraid she blushed at all this. For, as she looked in the glass, she saw a face so radiant that she looked again to identify it

So, all the more she dressed herself with the same care she would have taken were she going to him instead of to the post-office for his letter. She remembered what he had said about her hair, and she ventured to pull it about her face, much as it had been that night in the dark parlor. But at the thought of that the tears came slowly into her eyes. She had been very happy that night. It was all the happiness she had ever known, it seemed now. She dried her eyes and then she sat at the table where Seffy had often sat, and looked again in his biol.en mirror. The radiance was quenched. Her face was pale and thin now. She thought of it quite as if he were soon to see it.

"I wonder if he'll think me hand-some, now?" She shook her head doubtfully at the face she saw in the glass. "No, I have no red cheeks no more—and my eyes are bigger—and my lips thinner-and my hair is paler -and my hands-

She remembered how he had kissed them, and but her head down and sobbed. They did not seem fit to be kissed now-nor worth kissing.

But the post-mistress liked her better that way and so do I. For she had acquired a daintiness that was almost contained quite as if she had seen it. at peace with all the world. And she had watched anxiously for the

"Not yet," she said compassionately. Sally's legs weakened and she clutched at the little shelf before her. It took a moment-to swallow the thing in her throat. Then she murmured: "It's two weeks."

Yes. But he'd have to be pretty prompt to get it here by this time."

Sally had been sure of this prompt ness. It never occurred to her to doubt. She would not have wasted a minute. She turned hopelessly away "Perhaps to-morrow!" said the kind worry, dear. You see the address was very vague and it may be some time before they find him.'

You think-so?"

"You don't think it is too late?"

"I hope not, dear."

She had not thought of that before She had fancied him waiting for some such recall. But, of course, he had formed other tles—he would be glad to forget her. He might be married! Of course he was! Otherwise he could not be à president!

"I guess it's too late," she said again.

"I would not think that. The address was very vague. But, after you vere gone, I took the precaution to put a return address on the envelope, and if he does not get it, it will come back; but that will take some little

There was nething the next day nor the next, nor for the many days after ward that she went to the post-office. She was no longer dressed trip, and she was glad now she had not told his father.

For a while she had to lock herself in her room when the desire came on her to go to the post-office. And then she remained away three days, then a week, and then the post-mistress admitted that the letter had had time to be returned. She must not give up though. Strange things happen, some times, with letters.

The letter had been returned, the post-mistress had it then. But she pityingly thought it best that Sally wait for it still, while she tried to send it back to him.

Otherwise it was very much as Sally had planned and hoped, save that she was a bit=sadder. father's house, as, perhaps, no house

But now her own hands did all-and did it with love. And she did replace Seffymore. For she plowed, and, after a brief apprenticeship, no one did it bet ter. = The bay maie was as kind to Sally as she had been to Seffy. Nothing in his life had ever been so sweet to the old man as those rests when piquant as that eaten under the trees at their nooning.

Sally still went to the post-office, and the post-mistress still had her letter where she could have put her hand hand upon it, though she mercifully concealed this

But there was no hope. Not a word of confidence had passed between Sally and the kind post-mistress, but each knew that the other understood quite as if their confidence was com plete. So that it was as if they spoke of an old matter when Sally said, one

"Yes-I guess it's too late. He's married."

"I wouldn't think so, if I were you, till I heard from him," said the compassionate woman behind the coun-"I thought so once. He went to war. I heard that he was killed. I married another man—just—oh, just because! Then he came back. I have always been sorry.'

Something filled the speaker's eyes and Sally, with the dumb intuition of the primitive nature, stood there a long time and said only, "Thank you."

But after that hope rose and lived again.

That night the post-mistress received, from Washington, the address of the Kansas State League of Farmers' clubs, and put it on the face of the returned letter and sent it forth again.

CRUDE METHODS OF SPINNING.

Which Were Long in Displacing the Spindle and Distaff.

The invention of the art of spinning was ascribed by the ancients to Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, says a writer in The Housekeeper. The date, 1500 B. C. is given as that of the beginning of the art in Greece, under the direction of the king of Arcadia, but pictured inscriptions on Egyptian monuments show that the use of the spindle and distaff was known in that country much earlier. The first distaff was simply a stick, around which the fiber to be spun was loosely coiled, held in the left hand, the spindle was sort of top set in motion by a twirl of the hand the fiber passing between the finger and thumb of the right hand. This invention was improved upon in the course of time by placing the spindle in a frame and making if revolve by mechanical action of the hand or foot in connection with a wheel or treadle—thus giving the true spinning wheel The first recorded this was in the early years of the sixteenth century, but it was probably made and used long before this The first spinning jenny, a machine working eight spindles, was invented

His Wish Came True.

Prof Edgar L. Larkin, the noted astronomer, was discussing marriage at a dinner in San Francisco. Prof. Larkin believes that it is criminal to continue for life marriages that are unhappy "Why condemn," he said, with a grim laugh, "men and women to such misery as afflicts our mutual friends, the Blanks? We have all mutual friends in the Blanks' position.
At the height of their nightly quarrel the other day Mrs. Blank choked back a sob and said reproachfully: 'I was reading one of your old love letters to-day, James, and you said in it that you would rather live in endless torment with me than in bliss by your-self.' 'Well, I got my wish,' Blank growled."

Careless. "Oh, George, dear, our wedding must be postponed." "No, darling, no. It must not be." "But it must, George, dear. Father has lost all his money in the market." "You are right, dear. You are right. The wedding must be postponed. I never thought

IN THE LIMELIGHT

NEW SECRETARY OF WAR

Gen. Luke E. Wright, who has succeeded Taft as secretary of war, was until quite recently a Democrat: He got his military ittle in active service, when he was attorney general of the state of Tennessee for eight years. He cinched-his right to the appellation later, when he became governor-general of the Philippines. In that place, also, he succeeded Mr. Taft, the latter having been called-home to Washington to fol low Secretary Root in the cabinet.

Gen. Wright is much the Roosevelt style of man—outspoken, fearless, energetic and given to doing things. He comes of a family that has long been identified with the important history of Ten nessee, in church, state and military affairs. His father was chief füstice of that state, and the son naturally leaned toward the same profession. He erved as a private in the confederate army, and returning to his own state settled down in the practice of law. He has been associated with some of the eading lawyers of the south, among them United States Senator W. H.

His first accomplishment of importance was the leading of a successful fight for the state against yellow fever in 1878, when Memphis was ravaged the greatest epidemic in her history. His handling of the relief funds brought him a statewide prominence.

hrought him a statewide promifience. =
In 1990 he was appointed a member of the Philippine commission by President McKinley. Three years later he was made president of the commission, and coly laid down that work when he was made civil governor of the islands in 1904. His promotion to governor general came close on the heels of that appointment. Two years later he resigned and was made minister to Japan, being this country's first ambassador to the land of the cherryblossom. He-resigned in 1907. Since that time he has been practicing law in Memphis and giving attention to his newspaper interests, being part owner of the Memphis Commercial Appeal

Wright married a daughter of Admiral Raphael Semmes of the confeder ite army. Three of the sons were in the Spanish-American war.

SEEKS SENATORIAL TOGA

George B. Cox, 'boss' of Cincinnati, who has made his rule in political affairs within his juris diction as absolute as that of Tammany in New York, is within yiew, it is said, of the fulfillment of his life's ambition In other words, he is pre paring to become a candidate for United States senator to succeed Joseph Benson Foraker, and with every reasonable prospect of success. In the Cincinnati neighborhood Cox is hated by the reformers in the political field, feared by the opposition, courted by the personally tious and respected by the practical politicians who know a clever boss when they see one He has made senators, governors, legislators, may ors and aldermen for years with great ease, yet he has never been able to secure an elective office for himself better than that of alderman. =

Besides directing the political destinies of the Queen City, Cox has busi ness and banking interests, and is reputed to be worth a cool million of dollars He did much to make J B. Foraker governor of Ohio and was rewarded with an inspectorship in one of the state-defortments. He saved the late M Hanna's political castles from topping upon one or two occasions, and was on excellent terms with him.

Starting in life as a poor lad, a newsboy, a bootblack, a saloonkeeper Cox has become a rich man without losing any of his democratic instincts or manners. He is as approachable, as regardless of fashion or social standing, as he was in his days of poverty. He is an autocrat now, sought by governors and United States senators, but never-seeking them. He has a few ideas, too, concerning political affairs which one would never expect to find in a real political boss. For instance, he believes in a non-partisan police force for Cincinnati. He believes in never making a promise which he does not expect to fulfill He believes in saying nothing rather than telling ar un He believes in according absolutely fair treatment to even his most bitier enemy and in an open fight

MAY RUN FOR PRESIDENCY

Judge-Samuel R. Artman of Indiana, who is being urged as the logical Prohibition candidate for president by a number of the leaders of that party, is the Republican circuit judge who set his judicial biethien guessing by his decision, formal ly rendered in ending an injunction suit in his court, that the saloon is in and of itself unconstitutional He declared, therefore, that no legal state liquor license law could be passed by any legislature, since no such body could license the doing of an act in violation of the constitution

Judge Artman has always been a Republican in politics and was speaker of the Indiana house of representatives in the state legislature of 1901 In 1904 he was elected judge of the Boone county circuit court. His license decision was decidedly unpopular among many classes, as it made three whole counties of the state go practically dry, and set brewers and distillers by the ears. Nevertheless, he was re-elected at the succeeding election

That the saloon will soon disappear as an American institution, and that will be wiped out by the voluntary act of the people, probably by one of the old political parties, has been the belief of Judge Artman for a number of years He thinks that the great majority of the people only want a reasonable excuse to do away with the houor traffic, and he is fond of arguing that neither courts nor parties are really necessary for such action, but only the stiffening of public opinion without the attendant bitterness that has hereto ore marked the most of the anti-liquor movement

It is declared by Prohibition leaders who are acquainted personally with the Indiana judge that he will accept the presidential nomination at the hands of the Prohibitionists if it is offered him, although he will probably reserve the right to vote any ticket he pleases in state and local elections

FRIEND OF CLEVELAND

E. Cornelius Benedict, who is the head of a ccessful banking house in New York, although his home is in Greenwich, Conn., has several claims to the interest of the readers of newspapers and students of events. One is that he was perhaps the closest personal friend and most intimate confidant of the late ex-President Grover Cleveland, although he never held a public office and could not be induced to accept one.

He was one of the little group of intimates whom the late executive gathered about him at various times during the last quarter century of his life, and whose affections he held, even while he was being attacked and abused in the partisan newspapers and from the radical stump. The late Joseph Jefferson was another member of the little company, and his sweet, lovable character seemed to form a fitting complement to the dogged, driving force of the other. Then there were Daniel Manning, who was his private secretary, and later a member of the cabinet, Wilson S Bissell, who was made postmaster general. But of the lot probably the two dearest, associates of the former president in his rest or play hours, when he loved to turn his back upon all the harrowing affairs of state and take to nature's dooryard with his fishing rod or gun, were these two-Benedict and Jefferson.

Both were ardent fishermen and Mr. Benedict is in addition an enthusiastic achtsman. He frequently took the former president out in his boat and on other occasions the rair would go for a day's fishing, the one man putting behind him all thought of the worries and responsibilities of place and power while the other forgot for the time being the jingling of the guinea and the ow rumile of the according interest

The New Minister

Judith Quimby, spinster, was a thorn in the side of the body-social of Watervale, for Judith Quimby, spinster, owned the only church in that little village—she had inherited-the edifice from her father, who had got it by foreclosure—and being the proprietor of the church-building she had taken it upon herself to dictate the views of the clergy who should hold forth from its pulpit.

Judith Quimby, spinster, was a Baptist, and so also were the divines engaged to wake spiritual thunder in the pulpit of her church. Watervale like-wise was Baptist, but Judith-Quimby's eagle nose was a sensitive spiritual hermometer, which she thrust into the depths of each of her clergyman's wells of faith, and if that thermometer egistered the slightest variation of a degree from the temperature of her own wells of faith, then Judith Quimby' spinster, arose, accused the unappy clergyman of heresy, showed him to the door of her favor, and drove him forth peremptorily. In a year she had dismissed four men of God.

would seem that the good people of Watervale might have taken into their own hands their spiritual peace and welfare, engaged that particular divine who most pleased them, and have set him to preaching from an improvised pulpit in a barn, if need be; but ah! what is an ordained ministêr. what even a religion, without a spired cupolaed church? No! their clergy man must preach from a regular church edifice, and Watervale being too needy to erect a house of worship of its own, needs suffer all the incon venience and vexation visited upoff it by the eccentricities of the owner of the one church in the village-Judith Quimby,=spinster.

The month of August, embracing five Sundays, passed, and during this no inconsiderable period Watervale remained wholly without public religious edification, whereat the villagers began to murmur; but Judith Quimby set her thin lips and stood firm. The Lord, in good time, would send a minister of true orthodoxy, she assured her towns people, and better that He should forget their needs than that the village should be corrupted by heresy. Better no prophet than a false one

The first week in September came and went, and it began to look as if Miss Quimby herself would have to fill her empty pulpit, when her deacon, Timothy Watts, Esq, received a letter bearing the postmark of a city in Michigan.

Breaking the envelope, he perused the following amazing communication:

Mr Timothy Watts, Watervale—Reverend Sir Learning that you are the deacon of the Baptist church of Watervale, we take the liberty of introducing ourselves to you

THE CLERGYMAN, CHURCH & CHOIR SUPPLY COMPANY.

"Well, I swan," exclaimed Deacor Watts, removing his glasses and rubbing the indentation that they had made in the bridge of his nose; "this beats me!"

Again the man of peace perused the typewritten communication, then, folding it carefully, placed it in his pocket and went over to Judith Quimby, spinster, for further light.

Two hours later Deacon Watts posted a letter directed to the Clergyman, Church & Choir Supply Company. Judith Quimby had commanded that unique company to send down an agent to Watervale with samples of Baptist clergymen and the terms for a choir of two male and two female voices: "For while we are about it, deacon," snapped Miss Judith, "we might as well see if we can get a choir that can praise the Lord; without scratching each others' eyes out at the same time!"

The following Tuesday an agent of the C. C. & C. S. Co. arrived and with the aid of her deacon, Judith displacements, inflammation, ulcera- Quimby finally arranged with him for a clergyman and a choir of four voices which she thought would prove quite satisfactory. She then posted a notice to the effect that her church would open on the following Sunday, with clergyman and choir engaged at her own expense, and invited every one to Sunday came, and withat came the congregation to listen to the new clergyman and the new choir. What manner of man would the former be?

And the choir? Really, Judith Quimby must be at ruinous expense to hear the whole cost out of her private means.

At precisely ten o'clock Deacon Watts stepped forward and opened the door leading from the vestibule to the church, and the congregation entered the house of worship. The new clergy man and the choir were there before them, the divine standing in his pulpit, the choir seated on his right.

A murmur of surprise and pleasure erole from the congregation. a noble clergyman! young, handsome, saintly; everything a pastor should be!

The congregation was now seated and; lifting his outstretched hands, the new clorgyman opened the morning's worship with prayer and then immediately chose his text and delivered his sermon. The little flock held breath in admiration; never before had it heard such a sermon as thisa masterly searching out of the vanities of these latter times, delivered in a rich, sonorous voice, and with true Baptist fervency. Verily, a summer of spiritual glory had descended upon the village of Watervale!

"The choir will now sing the forty-seventh hymn," directed the new clergyman, and at once the choir arose with open hymn books and, taking the most graceful attitude, endered the song in consummate style; then, decently, soberly, Christianly, without staring at face or bonnet among the congregation, sat down

Judith Quimby was triumphant— her townspeople elated, amazed, curi-

The new clergyman now arose and speaking in a more familiar tone than heretofore, introduced himself to his flock as the Reverend Richard Bonifield, and trusted that only the highest esteem and affection would exist be tween himself and his congregation Then, lifting his hands, he spoke the benediction, and immediately after wards the congregation arose made its exit to the vocal music of the ated by every one upon her choice of a new clergyman, and thanked for her noble services and, with a questioning inflection, her great expense. Miss Judith bowed condescendingly, but still her townspeople lingered

"Really, dear," burst out little Mrs Pinchin, dying with currosity, "but we cannot go until we have shaken hands with the new minister, and thanked the choir for their beautiful singing

Judith Quimby swept out her arms, making a little open space, the better to address her audience "It is impossible, began: friends, that you meet the new minister or thank the choir. Impossible! I repeat. The Reverend Richard Bonifield, and his charming choir, are not frail flesh and blood, as we are; they see not as we see, hear not as we hear, feel not as we feel; your flatteries cannot touch them, nor your heresies corrupt; they are above the follies and illusions of this little world. In fact, my friends, you have to-day listened to a sermon and to religious singing rendered by servants of a new and incorruptible church. last have Christian souls found the perfect choir and the perfect minister! The Reverend Richard Bonifield and his choir are not men and women, but steel and wax figures-worked by our deacon-and within each of these figures is a phonograph, the records of which have been and will in the future be edited by me, so that hereafter we shall have the true faith delivered in the true way. Friends, I wish you a very good morning this blessed Sabbath day, and I assure you that you will always be welcome to this incor ruptible church which I have estab lished in your midst. A simple method for resuscitation from asphyxia is reported by Dr. W. Freundenthal of Berlin. He introduced the index finger into the mouth and moved it to and fro over the epiglottis; causing an effort to swal ow, which was immediately followed by a return of respiration. This proved successful when the older methods failed, while it makes severe traction on the tongue unnecessary.

Country Schoolmaster of the Earl

Days of America. Apropos of the country schoolmas ter of the early days of America, an old manuscript in the New Jersey Historical society contains the following characteristic anecdote:

"A traveling person coming into a country neighborhood where was a vacant schoolhouse offered himself as a teacher. The neighbors convened to examine into his abilities. asked what branches he could teach. 'Almost any,' was the answer. He could instruct children how to read without first learning to spell, to write without first making marks, and it was indifferent to him in what rule they first commenced arithmetic. Are you acquainted with mathematics, sir? was the next question. Supposing some great literary character was meant, the fellow assumed an air of great importance and quickly re-plied: 'Matthew Mattocks, sir? No. sir, I am not acquainted with Matthew, but I know his brother, Tom, very well!"

Specific Clause Caused Increase In Price of Cloth.

The-Arabs, and, indeed, all Mosems, have the practice of re-enforcing promises by adding to their word of nonor the Arabic phrase, Inshallah-'rlease God." How much meaning it conveys in some lands of the east is told in the pages of "In Moorish Cap-The pious proviso is a very useful formula to the Moors, and is frequenty used in making promises that they have no intention whatever of keepng, as they can then take refuge berand the Almighty when they are taxed with their breach of faith. There is a story told of a man who kept a shop in Gibraltar, and who one day came one of the faithful, who was desirous of buying some cloth. On being informed that the price was two dollars a yard, payment in 60 days, he replied: "All right. I will take so much and will pay you in 60 days, inshallah."

"No," said the vender, "the price is two dollars, payment in 60 days. For 60 days, Inshallah, the price is two dollars and a half."-Youth's Companion.
