KILLED BY CARS

AFTERNOON PERE MARQUETTE
TRAIN STRUCK CARRIAGE

Of Arizona Visitors at the Home of Clyde VanAtta.

The carriage containing Mrs. David Love and son, DeWight, aged eleven, were struck by the fast south-bound Pere Marquette train at the Leadbeater crossing just north of town yesterday afternoon. The son was instantly killed and the mother was considerably bruised.

Mrs. Love was thrown upon the plot of the engine and the carriage top tossed over her and standing there in that position was carried to the condenser before the train was brought to a standstill.

The train stopped and brought the boy's remains on to the depot here, and Mrs. Love was taken on to Plymouth for medical treatment.

Mrs. Love and her son live in Mesa, Arizona. They were visiting at the home of Clyde VanAtta. They were returning from a drive to Novi when the accident occurred.

Besides the buggy being demolished the horse was killed.

The crossing is a dangerous one from the fact of so much underbrush and small trees growing along the railroad fence, obstructing the view from the north to quite an extent.

LEASED BELL 'PHONE PLANT

FOUR NORTHVILLE BUSINESS MEN WILL RUN IT.

Frank Thompson will be Local Manager.

C. C. Yerkes, L. A. Babbitt, T. E. Murdock and R. C. Yerkes have leased for a term of years the Bell Telephone plant here and will operate it beginning August 1st.

Frank Thompson has resigned his position with the D. U. R. electric line as conductor and will move here to take the local management for the new firm which will shortly incorporate under the state laws.

Mr. Ryan will remain with the new company for a while to break in the new hands.

DEATH OF WM. KNOWLTON

After Long Illness of Cancer of the Stomach.

William Knowlton, an old and respected citizen of this place, died Wednesday noon after several months' illness of cancer of the stomach.

He was a well known painter by trade having followed that occupation many years, one of his specialties being sign painting.

He leaves one son, who lives in Chicago.

The funeral will be held this (Friday) afternoon at two o'clock from his late home near the P. M. railroad bridge, under the auspices of Northville Lodge, No. 136, F. & A. M., Rev. J. W. Turner of the Methodist church officiating. Interment in Rural Hill cemetery.

MRS. LUCY GRANT

Former Northville Lady Died at Salem.

Mrs. Lucy Mosher-Grant, a former Northville resident, died at the home of her son-in-law, Asa Gelgier, of Salem, Monday and the funeral was held yesterday the remains being taken to Wixom for burial.

The deceased was born on a farm two miles west of this place and was well known here.

UNION S. S. PICNIC

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, TO BELLE ISLE

Business Suspended. Everybody
Takes Day Off.

The Annual excursion and picnic of the Northville Sunday schools will occur Wednesday, Aug. 12, to Belle Isle. The committee of arrangements ask the co-operation of the business men in closing their stores on that day and joining with them in making the event a successful one.

Several D. U. R. cars will be secured for transportation and there will be plenty of room for everyone who wishes to go.

Time and rates will be announced from the pulpits Sunday and in the Record next week.

W. R. C. PICNIC GREAT SUCCESS

HELD TUESDAY ON C. M. JOSLIN'S LAWN.

There were About Fifty Members Present.

There never was, nor ever will be, a society, composed strictly of ladies, that can have more enjoyable times at their social gatherings than can the Northville Woman's Relief Corps, and that fact was well demonstrated Tuesday at their annual picnic which was held on C. M. Joslin's lawn.

The afternoon was pleasantly spent in visiting and playing flinch and pedro until about five o'clock when tables were placed on the lawn which were made to groan under the weight of good things to eat.

After partaking of such a bountiful repast the ladies departed declaring it was the "best time ever."

STARTS OFF IN FINE SHAPE

Does J. H. Ford's New Pool Room in Hinkley's Stand.

James H. Ford, who last week purchased the tobacco store and pool room of E. C. Hinkley, is very well pleased with his investment and says everything is opening up in fine shape, and Mr. Ford expects to do a "land office" business every day.

OPINIONS FROM THE STATE PRESS

Hill-Atwood Combination or Warner.
Which?

This chief reason of all is, that Warner's renomination and reelection would be the most complete repudiation and most humiliating defeat which could be administered by the people of Michigan to the Hill-Atwood-Boxer combination. Far deeper and more steadfast than the desire to further honor Fred M. Warner, even more prevalent and potent than the popular demand for the reforms Warner advocates, is a settled, firm determination of the people of Michigan to have done for good with state government administered for and in the interest of certain corporations and selfish private interests.—Soo News.

Railroad Lobbyists Against Warner.

The Grand Rapids Herald is authority for the report that J. Simpson, Pere Marquette railroad lobbyist, has bet $10 worth of hats that Gov. Warner, at the coming primaries, will not get a plurality of votes in either Tip Atwood's county of Tuscola or Lincoln Avery, Joe Walsh and Geo. W. Moore's county of St. Clair.

Reason Old Machine is Against Him.

Opinion from the democratic Lansing Journal "If Governor Warner had remained steadfast to the old machine, if he had used his office and power to elect Arthur Hill senator and had remained obedient to Tip Atwood and his associates, the opposition to his candidacy would not have arisen, and the objection to third termism would not have emanated from the present sources.

Scheme Didn't Work.

The forces against Warner are scattered. There is a powerful element in the party which does not take kindly to Dr. Bradley. That element has been moving heaven and earth to get some other candidate into the running. It tried Bird, then Homer Warren, and later Mr. Musselman. Neither of these gentlemen cared to enter into a canvass which appeared to be hopeless, and the scheme fell through. So far as learned the determination now is to accept the nomination of Gov. Warner and the "Boxers" will try to elect another "immortal nineteen senate."—National Farmer.

NO ONE DEFENDS KEYES.

"Boxer" Senator, Whose Record Warner
Attacked, is Without a Defender.

The utter defenselessness of the "boxer" senators in a primary campaign was never better illustrated than by the recent attack made by Governor Warner upon "Boxer" Senator Keyes of the Barry Eaton district for his misrepresentation of his constituents on every important issue, before the last legislature. To date not a single voice in defense of "Boxer" Keyes has been heard, not even that of Dr. J. B. Bradley, who lives in Keyes' district and whose personal friend and supporter Keyes is. This is especially noteworthy, since Governor Warner concluded his arraignment of Senator Keyes with a challenge directed at Bradley to come out in defense of Keyes' course in the senate if he dared.

The attack upon Keyes and the challenge to the opposition to defend him if it dares, constitutes the greatest coup de etat of the campaign. It puts Warner's principal opponent, Bradley, in a most uncomfortable and trying position. The latter dare not go to his friend's support and defense, since that involves a defense of Keyes' course in the legislature, where he worked and voted against policies which have the well nigh universal support of public opinion in Michigan. On the other hand, he cannot join Warner in denouncing Keyes' record without laying himself open to the charge of political ingratitude, since Bradley was chiefly responsible for Keyes' election to the senate. Such a course would also still further alienate from him practically the only organized support he is receiving, that of the "boxer" element in Michigan. Warner certainly has put Bradley in a bad hole, from which escape seems impossible.

As the campaign progresses Warner is demonstrating more and more his skill and astuteness as a political leader. He not only champions policies which are popular with the masses, but he has so managed his campaign as to emphasize the weakness and vulnerability of his opponent. So successful has he been in this feature of his campaign and so so unpopular have the "boxer" element become that even the single newspaper of influence in the state actively opposing Warner's renomination has been compelled to turn its back upon the "boxers" and join the governor in denouncing them.

EFFECT OF PRIMARY REFORM.

Brings Candidate in Close Touch With the Voter.

Not the least important result of primary reform in Michigan is the necessity under which candidates are put to get into close touch with the common people. Any system of making nominations which makes necessary such a tour of the state as that now being made by Governor Warner cannot help but bring fruit in the form of better legislation, more representative public service and a higher standard of duty. Villages and hamlets which never before entertained a state official of high or low degree are now visited by the governor, who thus has an opportunity of meeting the people, of presenting his views and of getting into close touch with the thought and sentiment of the state as a whole.

This practice not only helps the public servant to better perform his duties, but helps in a large and useful way the citizen and voter to perform his. Instead of delegating all of his powers in the selection of his candidates to a few delegates, the voter is required under the new system, if he would exercise his franchise intelligently, to familiarize himself with the candidates and the policies for which they stand, and effort which cannot help but result in an improved and more enlightened citizenship. Whereas hitherto a few leaders selected not only his candidates but his platform as well, this year the voter has a final voice in the selection of both. Evidence is not lacking that the people of Michigan fully realize this added responsibility which has been put upon them, an indication of this being the eagerness and interest shown in the campaign now in progress for the Republican nomination and the wide discussion of the principles involved.

It is because Governor Warner stands forth as the principal champion for a comprehensive and adequate primary election law that he today is practically the conceded victor in the race. It is because the people of Michigan at large naturally would intrust their cause to the hands of the man who has already valiantly fought for their interests, rather than to a set of men who have persistently opposed the popular will, that Fred M. Warner is today the people's candidate and a certain winner on September 1.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens during a trip of the "Olive Hand" mail through the Rocky mountains. "Uncle Billy" Dodge, stage driver, Alfred Vincent, a young man, and Phineas Cadwallader, introduced. They catch sight of the ruins of a massacre. Later at Anthony's station they find the redskins have carried their destructive work there also. Stella, Anthony's daughter, is Anthony's keeper of station, is introduced. Anthony has been killed, Vincent is assigned his work in unloading the mail. Vincent visits town where railroad men are working on the road and receives token of esteem from Stella. The old stage driver decides to work close to town in order that he may be able to keep fatherly watch over the young woman. She is engaged as a tutor for Viola Bernard, daughter of hotel-keeper. Vincent visits society circles of enemies of the Central Pacific railroad and learns their secrets. He turns to Stella each showing signs of love for the other. Phineas Cadwallader, pushing a railroad opposing Central Pacific, reaches mining town. He writes to Alfred Vincent, boasting. Plying his attentions Cadwallader insults her and she is rescued by Gideon, her father's servant. In return he proposes marriage, is rejected, leaves her declaring he will return the sort of a man she will love. Stella hears from her lover, Gideon, and of his present success. Finds letters of importance involving plans of opposition road. Plot to destroy company's ship Flora is unearthed and increasing evidence against Cadwallader on charge of wire tapping is also found. Impending disaster to Central Pacific is averted by protecting the Flora. Phineas Cadwallader, in search of money on charge of wire tapping. A perfect chain of evidence connects him with plot to blow up Flora and Cadwallader shows love for each other despite hostility of Gideon. Alfred and Stella pledge their troth and former is compelled to leave on crucial business. Bernard leaves for scene of husband's recent "strike" leaving Stella in charge. Again the girl repulses Gideon's advances. In showing her Hamilton's place of a railroad, he flirts about the camp. Alfred somewhat neglects Stella, who shows pain at treatment. Banquet in railroad town is scene of bitter monopolization of Alfred by Miss Hamilton, with determination on Stella's part to change her temperament. Alfred gives Hamilton Mrs. "Sally" Bernard announces riches. Viola's love for Alvin, a telegraph operator, is cooled. Gideon returns to Stella and finding offers of love rejected makes a threat against Alfred's life. Quickly leaves town on best procurable horse in search of Vincent. When Stella discovers this she makes a desperate effort and books passage on stage which is attempting to beat that of rival company. Ann will scenes the coach dashes out of town. Race to beat opposition company's stage a success, but Stella fails to hear of Gideon.

CHAPTER XXII.

A HEART FOR A LIFE.

In the depressing loneliness of a strange hotel Stella's fears returned, multiplied by the hours they had rested impatiently she paced the small room. She had no watch to count the minutes. But that the sun still shone on the mountain above her, she would have declared it already night.

Where was Uncle Billy? Why hadn't he come to take her to dinner?

Innocent Stella! She knew nothing of Mrs. Grandy's code, suspected no hint of the reason for Uncle Billy's aloofness. In Colfax, under Sally B's powerful wing, where Uncle Billy was known and approved, no one would have dared a breath against her. But it was very different in this feverish city. Good women were few. Honest men, toiling for loved ones away, jostled the blackleg, the gambler, the man of many aliases, and petticoated vice preyed upon its authors, and sorely beset clean hearts as well. A beautiful friendless girl must indeed be hedged by angels if she were to run safely the gantlet of this "wickedest city in the world."

She left her room and wandered about in search of the parlor, came upon it at last—small, stuffy and possessed by several overdressed, bediamonded women, who stared at her brazenly and openly commented on her. As from a pestilence, she fled to her own corridor again, hesitating before her door. But vanquished by thought of the desolation within, she dropped the key in her pocket and began walking the narrow hall, darker, emptier than her room, but open at either end to human approach. Here the hall boy found her, bringing a message from Uncle Billy to meet him in the parlor.

Stella thought of it a little resentfully as she hurried on, recalling the inhospitable occupants. But they were gone, and at sight of Uncle Billy's cheery face she forgot they had ever been.

He came to her with outstretched hands. "As I told you, honey, Vincent's O. K. He's—"

"Here?" she interrupted impulsively.

"No; he didn't come through, honey. Blodgett, the driver, said he got off at Carson Cadwallader met him; they seemed to have business together."

"Oh!" The long-drawn exclamation was all of Stella's reply; and she hoped she would ask no questions.

"You must shut those sweet peepers of yo's sharp atfeh suppeh; get right smart of sleep to-night, fo' you trust start home early in the mawning."

"Gideon—where do you suppose he is, Uncle Billy?"

He had dreaded the words. "Honey, why do you pesteh yo'self about Gideon? If Vincent's doing business with another man, both of them C. P. fellows, how can Gideon get in any deviltry?"

Stella was not reassured. "But, Uncle Billy, Phineas Cadwallader's no protection; he hates Alfred. And why didn't we see Gideon on the way? He must have come in ahead of us—must be here now, and— If I could only get word from Alfred!"

"Shall I telegraph for you?"

She shrank back. "Oh, no. He wouldn't wish me to send him messages over the wires."

"I'll fix that. He won't know yo're beah."

"That will be good; thank you. I'm such a trouble to you, Uncle Billy! And my trip has been quite useless," she added wearily.

"Not useless, honey. You brought me luck—won the race for us."

She smiled. "I hope I'll bring you more luck. I'll go home with you to-morrow."

"That's right, child. Good-bye till mawning. Have sweet dreams."

"Good-bye?" she echoed wonderingly. "Aren't you going to stay here to-night? Take me in to supper?"

He winced before her steady eyes, and lied heroically. "I have a heap to do befo' I'll be ready for the trip home; and I won't have time to see you again. Eat a good suppeh, child, won't you? Have you money to pay for it?"

"Not a two-bit piece, Uncle Billy. You pay for me, won't you? And book me, too? I'll have it for you when we get home."

She was surprised by his silence and nervousness. He opened his purse quickly, and forced some money upon her, his embarrassment increasing as he looked furtively through each open door while pressing her hand shut over the coin. "Take that," he whispered. "You must pay yo' own bills, and book yo'self, honey. Don't ask me why!" he added as she opened her lips to speak.

The Message Was Cruel.

Instantly he was gone, leaving her to puzzle out the matter for herself. But the need for dissembling her relations with Uncle Billy, whom she had known longer than any one living save Gideon, did not dawn upon her.

Supper alone was less an ordeal than she had expected. On her return to her room she met the hall boy and ordered pen and paper. She had barely seated herself to write when a dispatch interrupted her; it was addressed to William Dodge, and was from Alfred at Carson City. "Am detained here. Will be in Colfax on the thirtieth."

In the reaction of relief she wrote a short, almost happy letter to Alfred, sending it to post by the hall boy. The next day they faced homeward. No other passenger shared the box seat with Stella; and, leisurely, a little shyly, she told Uncle Billy of her plans for school, and received his advice, heartily, if not always wise.

At Dutch Flat she stopped to visit an acquaintance, timing her home-going for Uncle Billy's next trip, hoping vainly that Alfred would be with him. It was indeed a home-coming! Days only she had been away; they seemed weeks. Sally B., Viola, Yeh Wah, even the dog, greeted her overpoweringly. Suddenly she realized with a heart-wrench her leaving it would be.

"Here's a letter for you," Sally B. said, when Stella was at last free. "It came yesterday."

She took it, but paled with quick fear when she saw the strange handwriting. She hastened to her room. There was neither date, address, nor signature; but the message was cruel.

"Stella Anthony: Alfred Vincent's life is in your hands. Send to the address below within one week after October 30 your written word that you will marry Gideon Ingram, and Vincent shall go free. Refuse to do this and he shall die. Return this letter with your answer, or it will not avail."

In the postscript were directions for address; but Stella did not read them. She thrust the sinister sheet out of sight in her pocket; yet the words burned in her brain, written there forever. Motionless, she gazed at the wall in a useless endeavor to think.

Darkness fell. Still she stood there, leaning against the wall now, though she had no memory of moving. A step caught her ear. She started up, intent on defending herself against interruption. The Chinese boy's harsh voice came through the door telling her that Alvin waited in the parlor to say good-bye.

She went into the parlor. Alvin, a man in years, yet ever the buoyant boy, sprang forward with outstretched hands to greet her.

"Oh, Miss Stella, the 50 miles are done! Done 'pon honor, too. The commissioners have examined and accepted the work. They say it's O. K. and the government's bound to receive it. And the blamed strike that broke out yesterday won't hinder the C. P. a mite; they've got more men coming on the sly. I'm going to my Sacramento office in the morning. I came to say good-bye. What's the matter?"

His exuberance was a tonic. Stella's numb heart began to beat a little color to her lips, hope to her soul. Yet she did not speak, though she smiled.

"What is it, Miss Stella?" Alvin repeated. "You look as if you'd died and come back, though not all of you. There's awful things in—your face!"

Gideon's face. "I'm sure it—I'm sure Gideon knows of it."

"Oh, pshaw, Miss Stella! Gid Ingram wouldn't do such a scurvy trick."

"Alvin, you don't know. He has tried to make me marry him."

Alvin reflected again. Suddenly his face was illumined. "There's a way, and it's sure—marry me!"

"What? Alvin?" She half rose, angry that he could jest at such a moment. But, no, his face was serious. Yet it was too absurd, impossible!

"Not really, of course, but so far as any one else knows. Elope with me to-night!"

His daring idea was suggestive of another. "No, Alvin, not even to save Alfred Vincent could I do that. Suicide is cowardly, yet I'd rather kill myself than seem to be so feeble, to betray dear little Viola."

"Miss Stella, don't speak of suicide! And Viola'd know how it was, of course. But there's other ways, if you won't accept my offer." He smiled boyishly in spite of the tragic moment.

"Yes, there's another way; I shall disappear, just drop out of sight. And you'll help me, won't you? This very night?"

"Yes, indeed. This night is the only time I could do it, too. I'm to work nights after this."

"Can you get me away secretly, Alvin? Have you any plan?"

"Yes, I can fix it. I know a man—he's a friend of mine, and as close-mouthed as a dumb one. I'll get him to team and start you on your way to Sacramento, or to the Bay, as you think best. I'd say San Francisco; it's bigger, you can hide safer there."

"Yes, that will be better. But you, Alvin—"

"Oh, don't worry about me. I'll be back here before daylight, and take the train to-morrow. Every one knows I'm to go to Sacramento."

Stella was silent.

"Got any money?"

"Not much. My trip to Virginia took most of it."

"Well, don't fidget over that. I've a couple of hundred I can lend you as well as not; and you can take your time to pay. No matter if it's never. And maybe Sally B. can think up a better trick for you."

"O, Alvin, you're so good! Thank—"

She could not trust her voice, yet after a struggle went on. "I'm sure, Alvin, we've thought of the only way. But we will tell— What time must we start?"

"Not later than midnight. You better get everything fixed before ten, and let the house get plumb dark an hour or so before."

"Very well. I'll have my letter written in a half hour. Will you come for it and mail it at once?"

He nodded.

"And Alvin, will you stay here while I talk it all over with Sally B.? I want no misunderstanding of what we are to do."

Alvin assented and she left him. There was no hesitation now. A strange calmness pervaded her. Without hesitancy or revising she wrote the words that were to separate her from her past, that were to bind her to a life of lonely hiding.

"Not to save any man's life, or even my own," she wrote, "will I marry Gideon Ingram. This much I promise, however I will leave this place and all who know me. I will hide so securely that it will be useless for any one to seek me. And I will never meet Alfred Vincent, communicate with him, or receive communication from him until Gideon Ingram himself gives permission."

She signed the letter, directed and sealed the envelope and went downstairs.

"You pore little critter!" Sally B. cried, flying to her with open arms as she entered. "Al's told me the hull blamed layout! Blast that durned Injun!" She felt Stella tremble in her arms. "Don't be afeard, honey! You've got friends. Men'll stand by ye. You've struck the only thing to do, I reckon."

Stella stood erect and was silent. The others watched her without speaking, waiting on her mood. At last she faced them.

"This step changes all my life. Please tell Uncle Billy—the best thing you can think of, Mrs. Sally."

Stella's face grew slowly, as if she were thinking out her plan as she went. "From this time I shall be Esther Anthony. Only you, Mrs. Sally, shall know where I am, or what I'm doing. Uncle Billy and Alvin—you're so good, Alvin—they can know of me through you. Will you keep my secret, Sally Bernard, sacredly?"

"It's thunders'n' noble, this thing that yo're goin' to do, Stella: an' I'll promise, an' keep my mouth shut O. K. if you likewise promise to always let me know where yo're a-hanging out. Do you?"

"Yes," Stella said, and walked to the window, speechless. No sound escaped her, but Sally B. saw her shoulders lift and tremble, and flew to her, comforting her with a love that Stella knew would never fail. When Alvin came at midnight the hotel was dark and silent. Not a glimmer of light came from behind the curtains where Sally B. watched with wet eyes while Stella drove away, her head turned toward that window as long as she could see it.

The next morning Sally B. joined her excited conjectures with the most eager of the questioning gossips. And none who listened to her lurid remarks upon Stella's flight dreamed that her aching heart was following the solitary, fleeing girl.

Campaign of Personality and Abuse Inaugurated.

Both the petty attack made by Arthur Hill upon Warner in connection with the Farmington bank and the innuendoes in a recent editorial in the principal boxer organ indicate that the primary campaign for the nomination of a governor has reached the point where Warner's personal enemies in the Hill-Atwood boxer outfit are reduced to vilification and abuse of Warner. The friends of Governor Warner have long understood that the last few weeks of the campaign would be marked by a continual assault upon Warner's character both in his private and public capacity. For months the agents of the boxer combine have been searching diligently for some flaw in Warner's record. How fruitless this search has been is best demonstrated by the trivial and petty character of the charges put forth as their best card in the opening attack upon Warner's character.

President Selects McLeod

M. J. McLeod, State Labor Commissioner, has been appointed Internal Revenue collector for Detroit, by the president. The appointment is a most excellent selection and is very pleasing to Mr. McLeod's many friends. The Record believes Mr. McLeod has made the best labor commissioner Michigan has ever had and it is a mighty fine compliment to Governor Warner that his appointee in the state department should be taken up by President Roosevelt and given one of the best and one of the most important Federal places in the state. Mr. McLeod is a labor union man and some years ago was driver on one of the Detroit street car lines. Later he was at the head of the street car men's union, later a member of the state legislature, then deputy labor commissioner.

Victory for Popular Rule.

Any man who would set himself up for a "Boos" in Michigan, the people would unseat him as effectively as they have already unseated Tip Atwood, who for years wielded the party whip in Michigan. The support which is going in such large measure to Warner springs from the conviction that his election on the platform on which he stands, and opposed by the interests that he is, would comprise the greatest victory for real popular rule ever achieved in Michigan. It is because of Warner's administration, the laws he has advocated, and particularly, the enemies he has made, that he has become the popular champion, and as such will be victorious on primary day, when his renomination will serve to usher in a new era in state affairs.—Soo News.

Marked copies of the Free Press, containing Lawyer Wattz Humphrey's dirty attack on the Farmington bank, are being sent over the state by Dr. Bradley's headquarters managers in Detroit. Evidently no ends are too small for the Atwood-Hill boxer combination to take in their effort to nominate Dr. Bradley governor.

Dr. Bradley has thus far been conducting his campaign principally by "knocking" on Governor Warner and his latest move is to hire a Detroit attorney to go along with him and help knock.

"BUFFALO BILL" IS COMING.

He Will Exhibit at Detroit on August 3rd.

Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders of the World has returned from its four years' tour of Great Britain, and Continental Europe where, during the time it was abroad, it exhibited in eight different countries. Opening at Madison Square Garden, New York City, this Spring it began its homecoming tour amid scenes of enthusiastic appreciation, and on the road is presenting the same programme without alteration or diminution. DURING his Continental triumphs Col. Wm. F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") gave his unique exhibition before all casts and classes and unfolded before the gaze of wondering Europeans historic scenes in the development of American history; scenes which have become a part of our Nation's past as well as a part of our Nation's glory.

There is no chapter in American history fraught with such interest as are the days when the Western wilds were being redeemed from the red man by the shot and sword of our soldiery. Throughout a warfare unique in almost every feature, American history was written in deeds of valor and with the triumph of the victor came the liberty and advancement of the vanquished. The barbaric lords of the prairie have become wards of their conqueror and their vast hunting-grounds been reclaimed for the beneficial use of civilization. Detroit, August 3.

Preventing Electrolysis.

Electrolysis of pipes is now prevented by insulating from the ground. The pipes are covered with a specially prepared asbestos paper, coated with a waterproof insulating compound, and joints are made tight by strips and insulating cement. The protection is claimed to be permanently durable.

Age of the Legal Wig.

The use of wigs by judges and barristers is not very ancient. It was introduced, I imagine, toward the end of the seventeenth or at the beginning of the eighteenth century, when it had become the fashion at court. Bishops continued to use wigs longer than their clergy, but they have discarded them to their great advantage, for many years now.—London Morning Post.

THE STANDARD OIL DECISION ROUSES THE PRESIDENT'S JUST IRE.

MAKES HOT STATEMENT

A Retrial Will Be Made and the Case Vigorously Pressed to a Conclusion, That's Sure.

President Roosevelt is determined that the case against the Standard Oil Co. will not be dropped, but the retrial ordered by the United States Court of Appeals will be made. Secretary Loeb gives out this statement:

The president has directed the attorney general to immediately take steps for the retrial of the Standard Oil case. The reversal of the decision of the lower court does not in any shape or way touch the merits of the case, excepting so far as the size of the fine is concerned.

There is absolutely no question of the guilt of the defendants or of the exceptionally grave character of the offense. The president would regard it as a gross miscarriage of justice if through any technicalities of any kind the defendant escaped the punishment which would have unquestionably been meted out to any weaker defendant who had been guilty of such offense.

The president will do everything in his power to avert or prevent such miscarriage of justice. With this purpose in view the president has directed the attorney general to bring into consultation Frank B. Kellogg in the matter and to do everything possible to bring the offenders to justice.

Coming like a bolt out of the blue sky, the president's pronouncement caused a sensation when it was received. It showed clearly, it was declared, that the president is determined that the Republic nominee for the presidency shall not suffer because of the reversal of the big fine, and that he wants the country to know that the administration has not changed in its feeling toward the Standard Oil Co.

His statement makes it doubly clear, it is pointed out, to those who had thought that temporarily at least, the president had passed into a quiescent state so far as the corporations are concerned, that President Roosevelt has experienced no change of heart. The pronouncement breathed the same spirit as that which emanated from the White House in the days when the executive chamber echoed with denunciations of Standard Oil and other corporations and "Malefactors of great wealth."

The Americans Win.

A total of 15 gold medals, first prize awards for Olympic contests, were handed to American athletes in London by Queen Alexandra late Saturday afternoon. Bronze medals and certificates of merit, bestowed by noblemen on Americans, who finished second and third in their events, made a heaping trophy.

When the distribution was over it was possible at last to make an accurate account of points won in track and field events and show definitely how badly the Americans defeated the pick of the athletic world.

The Americans' total points were 1141.2. Great Britain's total was 851.3, but of these the English, Scotch and Irish societies only got 661.3 points, the Canadians taking 11 and South Africans 8. The British, however, counted colonial athletes with themselves in their attempt to make a showing against the Americans.

The Independence Nominees.

The first national convention of the Independence party finished its labors in Chicago Wednesday after nominating Thos. L. Hissen, of Massachusetts, to president, and John Temple Graves of Georgia, for vice president, and adopting a platform of principles. The nomination of Hissen was reached on the third ballot, with a vote of 351 out of 948 ballots cast. Graves was named for second place on the ticket by acclamation.

John I. Sheppard, who attempted to put W. J. Bryan's name in nomination, had to be given the protection of the entire force of Independence party officials to save him from infuriated delegates. Sheppard was escorted from the hall by a crowd of sergeants-at-arms, while the crowd of delegates surged behind, denouncing him as a traitor.

The national committee elected Wm. R. Hearst as chairman, C. F. Neal, of Indiana, and M. W. Howard, of Alabama, vice-chairman and Chas. A. Walsh, of Iowa, secretary.

The Quebec Celebration.

In spite of the fact that the prince of Wales flitted with no other Canadian cities and declined pressing invitations to go further west, his highness has accomplished little if any thing in stirring enthusiasm or promoting heartier patriotic spirit in conservative Quebec. In this respect, one of the chief objects of his visit to the tercentenary celebration has been a failure. Quebec people live in the history of the past. Nothing but the old French regime appeals to them. Emulating the example of the cautious little, they extend their heads and take a telescopic view of the celebration and then retire to the innermost recesses of their shells.

The Prohibition state central committee chose Lansing for the state convention with the tentative date of September 30. County conventions will be held September 14. Candidates for governor are F. E. Day, Albion, Joseph P. Tracy, Detroit, and Joseph Leighton, Bay City.

Suit for $20,000 against the estate of the late Gov. A. T. Bliss is being heard in circuit court. The case grows out of Gov. Bliss' interest in the T. F. Thompson & Co. lumber firm in which Gov. Bliss assumed some obligations after his failure, but failed to pay them.

What Women Have Done.

Mrs. M. F. Johnston of Richmond, Ind., gave an interesting account at the Boston biennial of the G. F. W. C. of the Art association of that city, which is ten years old. Five hundred dollars is appropriated each year for the purchase of a picture, and the council gives $100 for the annual exhibition. The standard in pictures and crafts has changed, she says, and in the next few years much is expected that will give the children the opportunity of greater culture and knowledge of art.

DeCollate.

"Did you see Mrs. Locutte at the hop last night?" asked Mrs. Gaddie. "Yes," replied her husband. "This morning's paper says she was dressed entirely in black. Is that so?" "Well—er—no I wouldn't say that she was dressed entirely."—Philadelphia Press.

A Sample?

"I found a hardwood splinter in this jam." "Hum. I've often heard of these forest preserves."—

Regular Burial Place.

A well-known English Bishop some time since lost his third wife. A clergyman who had known the first wife returned from Africa and wanted to see the grave. He called at the cathedral and saw the verger. "Can you tell me where the bishop's wife is buried?" "Well, sir," replied the verger, "I don't know for certain, but he mostly buries 'em at Brompton."

The fear of death is never strong in him who has learned how to live.

Pigeon Joins Recessional.

A little fellow who sings in the choir of a Long Island village church is the happy possessor of tame pigeons. One of them follows him to the pretty vine covered place of worship and during the sermon coos, and flutters among the crimson ramblers at the open window. One recent Sunday when the recessional began the bird flew in and circled about the little fellow's head until he reached the choir room door. It then flew out and waited to escort its small owner home.

The Spoiled Child.

"No," growled little Willie, "I don't want that big pink necktie on." "It doesn't matter what you want," replied his mother, "you must have it on."

"Well, if you put it on me I'll cry all over it and that'll spoil it!"—Philadelphia Press.

No Waits.

"I suppose you wait for the divine spark?" inquired the lady visitor. "Heavens, no!" replied the bard. "If I did I would be waiting yet!"

Didn't See the Joke.

A certain curate, was of a painfully nervous temperament, and in consequence was constantly making awkward remarks—intended as compliments—to the bishop and others.

Having distinguished himself in an unusual degree during a gathering of clergy to an afternoon tea—in the bishop's palace, he was taken to task for his failings by a senior curate, who was one of his companions on the way home.

"Look here," said Bruce, the senior decidedly, "You are a donkey. Why can't you keep quiet instead of making your asinine remarks? I am speaking to you now as a brother."

Loud laughter interrupted him at this point, and for the moment he did not see the joke.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

THE PERFECT WAY.

Scores of Northville Citizens Have Learned It.

If you suffer from backache, There is only one way to cure it. The perfect way is to cure the kidneys.

A bad back means sick kidneys. Neglect it, urinary troubles follow. Doan's Kidney Pills are made for kidneys only.

Are endorsed by Northville people. Henry Priest—living on Mill street, Northville, Mich., says: "Mrs. Priest and I have as great confidence in the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills today as we had five years ago, when Mrs. Priest allowed a statement telling her experience with this remedy to be published in our local papers. I have also used them and obtained the most gratifying results. I was annoyed by a severe backache which made my work burdensome. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Murdock Bros' drug store, and after a short use my backache vanished and I now have no trouble of the kind. Mrs. Priest suffered from a severe aching across her back, accompanied with rheumatic pains so intense at times that she could hardly get around. After using Doan's Kidney Pills all her aches and pains disappeared. We both can heartily endorse the claims made for your remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co. Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Improves c

An English proverb tells a somewhat fairytale about a new rouge that has been used that will last for years and is as pure as the bloom of youth that it is pale when the lady is sick and when she is well again gets rosier and rosier. This would certainly be an improvement on nature, which has a way of turning blue or yellow upon inopportune occasions.

Felt for Poor "Horsie."

Do You Love This Old Town?

ADVERTISE

If you do, of course you want to see the town grow. You want to see the storekeepers prosper, and the banks bulge with deposits, and the townspeople wearing glad clothes, and the farmers falling over each other to come in and buy new hay rakes and patent plows. Of course you do. Because, likewise of course, when things are that way you get your share of the general prosperity.

But what are you doing to contribute to the general prosperity? Are you patronizing home industries in preference to outside industries? Do you buy your clothes and groceries and garden tools and so forth here at home?

Well, you admit, you do send away for a good many things you happen to see advertised. Ah! And are they advertised in this paper? No, indeed—in the mail order journals and catalogues. Quite true. And you would just as soon buy them here if they were advertised by the local merchants, wouldn't you? Why, yes.

Well, now, there's a neat hint to some of our local storekeepers and dealers who perhaps haven't discovered why they are losing a lot of home trade which they ought to keep.

It's a wise business man that knows his own opportunities.
