ARE ALL READY

HOME COMING EVENTS AND PROGRAMS.

Committees Busy Now With Last Arrangements.

Only a few more days and Home Coming, the long looked for event, will be here. Now is the time for every citizen to think what decorations they can secure for home and store and shop. Flags and bunting should be freely used as an evidence of our welcome.

W. H. Hutton and his decorating committee will be at your service and they have some plans which will help to adorn the old town as never before.

Registration headquarters will be opened in the new Record building where each former resident is expected to come. The name, address and year of residence will be recorded in a fine volume that will be preserved. To each guest a ticket of admission to the driving park events will be issued and also a souvenir button. Any one else desiring these souvenirs can secure them for a small sum of money.

A public meeting will be held either at the Princess Bink or in the school grove, depending on the weather, the afternoon of Sept. 24. Music by home and foreign talent, speeches by old residents and pioneers will make up the spicy program that is being prepared.

A committee has been appointed by President Dubuar to give a fireworks display at the village park on the evening of Sept. 24. Those in charge are A. K. Carpenter, M. A. Porter and A. W. Olde. This is a feature which was not included in former plans for the celebration. It will be an enjoyable event.

The sports program and racing events will be found on another page of this issue and you can see that something exciting and very interesting is in store for guests and others. Good prizes are up for the contestants and our best talent will want to get in the game.

Milford and Northville Juniors will cross bats in one of the fiercest contests ever pulled off on a local diamond.

A program of events will be issued early next week. This will tell where to go to see every amusement provided and the events will be plentiful enough to keep every one busy.

EX-MAROR YOST DEAD.

Prominent Ypsilanti Business Man Stricken with Heart Failure.

Chester L. Yost, since 1855 one of Ypsilanti's leading men, died suddenly of heart failure early last Saturday aged 70. He had been in poor health but was at his business the day previous. Early Saturday morning he complained of illness, dressed and started for his easy chair and fell dead.

Mr. Yost for many years was in the livery, horse and carriage business there and had handled more than 5,000 horses in the county. He was a noted auctioneer and in demand as a starter in amateur racing meets, officiating for the Ypsilanti club this summer. He was for several terms mayor of Ypsilanti. He leaves a widow and two sisters, one of the latter being Mrs. Thomas S. Murdock of Northville. Mr. Yost was well known in this village.

Clean Up for Home Coming.

The Home Coming Decoration Committee suggests that in addition to decorations about the town, that all the residents should see that their lawns, and the streets in front of their homes, are cleaned up in the nicest way possible so that out of town people will carry away a good impression of Northville.

MARTIN REUNION HELD LAST WEEK

At Home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Phelps in Farmington.

A most enjoyable gathering of the descendants of William and Pheobe Martin took place last Thursday, Sept. 10, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Phelps of Farmington, where the guests gathered for their annual reunion. Mr. and Mrs. Martin were among the early pioneers of Michigan, moving from New York state and settling in Troy during the year, 1826.

Their family consisted of 12 children, Wm., Cynthia Cole, Fannie Pearsall, Sarah Parks, Emily Goodrich, Phila Francis, John R., Mary J. Hinman, Pheobe A. Tanner, Amanda Burgees, Josephus F., all of whom lived to rear families, except one, who died in infancy; all living on beyond the allotted time of man, five of whom passed four score.

Of the 50 relatives present nine of the above families were represented—"Aunt Amanda" Burgees, as she is familiarly called, is 84 years of age, enjoying the best of health and as she expresses herself, "I have come to stay." She was the guest of honor and center of attraction as well she might be for to know her is to love her.

Among the relatives present from a distance were Alanson Pearsall and wife of Seattle, Wash., Lucy Bronson, Evert, T. A. Williams, wife and grandson, Jackson, Phila Tuke, Cheboygan, Wm. Goodrich, Jackson, Esther Boyd, Vassar.

After a hearty welcome by the host and hostess and cordial greetings the guests were escorted to the Hotel Owen, where a bountiful repast was served, after which all returned to the place of meeting where the afternoon was spent in relating reminences of the past, listening to letters of regret from absent ones and a general good visit.

The affair proved one of great pleasure and each and every one expressed the hope that other reunions might find all the old faces present.

BRADLEY'S ACTION AROUSES KENT CO.

REPUBLICANS DECLARE HIS DEMAND FOR RECOUNT HARMFUL TO STATE TICKET.

Convention Brands Him as Unpolitical and Un-American; Warner Lauded for His Clean Fight.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 14.—Dr. Bradley's action in demanding a recount of the votes from the recent primaries is not well received by republicans in this vicinity. At a meeting of the republican county candidates for office Saturday, it was stated that his action would have a tendency to harm not only the state and county ticket, but the candidates themselves.

The following letter was ordered sent to Dr. Bradley over the signature of Frank Cook, chairman of the county committee:

Grand Rapids, Sept. 12, 1908.
Dr. James B. Bradley,
Eaton Rapids, Mich.
Dear Sir—The republican county convention for Kent county, in session to elect a county committee, sends you greeting. We congratulate you on your splendid run for governor. We condemn your action in advocating for a recount, as unpolitical, un-American and against the best interests of the state of Michigan. We commend the action of Gov. Warner and Lieut-Gov. Keller, when they supported Mr. Warner was defeated in their statement that they would support you as their nominee. We address this letter to you in all friendliness and aiming only at the best interests of the party.
Yours truly,
FRANK J. COOK,
Chairman County Committee.

THE IRON WAY

A TALE OF THE BUILDERS OF THE WEST

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens during a trip of the "Overland Mail" through the Rocky mountains. "Uncle Bill" Dodge, stage driver, Alfred Vincent, a young man, and Phineas Cadwallader, introduced. They come across the remains of a massacre. Later at Anthony's station they find the road has been "carried" their destructive work there also. Stella, daughter of Anthony, keeper of station, is introduced. Anthony has been killed. Vincent is assigned the work of unloading the plans of railroad being built. He returns to Stella, each showing signs of love for the other. Stella hears from her lover, Gideon, and her phenomenal success. Finds letter of importance involving plans of opposition road. Plot to destroy company. Stella hears of Vincent's death. Cadwallader, evidence against Cadwallader, found Phineas Cadwallader faces prison on charge of wire tapping. A perfect chain of evidence connects him with plot to blow up "Flora." Banquet in railroad town scene of monopolization of Alfred by a Miss Hamilton. Mrs. "Sally" Bernard announces riches. Gideon makes threat against Alfred's life. Quickly leaves town on best possible horse. Search of Vincent's race to beat opposition company's stage at success. Stella falls to hear of Gideon. Stella receives a letter. "Treasure to marry Gideon. He is or Alfred Vincent will die." After conference Stella decides to flee. Years pass. Stella becomes known as Esther. Anthony, becomes a rich woman, indicates herself at Vassar and steps into highest San Francisco society. Kidnaping changes Alfred greatly and when he and Stella meet in "Frisco" society, she passes him without recognition. Stella's love for Alfred and his for her is revived. However, neither shows recognition of the fact to the other. Anthony's romance is unfolded, showing Gideon, who loved Stella, to be her own cousin. Alvin Carter, Viola's lover when the Bernards were poor, visits them and Sally B. consents to their marriage, despite the fact that several sons of Alvin are asking the girls' hand. The Bernards lose their riches and Sally B. again becomes a hotelkeeper, Viola marrying Alvin Carter. Stella visits Sally B. and sees "Uncle Bill."

there. Sufferin' ears! They make a racket at night, they an' the men. Ain't nothin' so bad's you might think 'bout them girls, though. Most of 'em comes from furrin' parts, where their job ain't considered respectable."

All in the town carried arms, and there were occasional brawls; yet no stranger was molested, who did not first molest. Night drew on, and the sleepy town awoke. Wood teams from the mountain chopping camps rattled in. The clatter of animals feeding, human and otherwise, stirred the air. The evening train whistled in from the west, with mail, passengers, a few workmen, much forage and supplies.

"Collis P.'s done the job!" cried the first trainman to enter the hotel. "His little game o' talk with the president won the tin. The bonds are issued!"

"When was it?" asked Sally B., excitedly.

"Oh, weeks ago, probably. It was done 'fore Andy Johnson went out of the White House, an' way."

"How much bonds?"

"Two million four hundred thousand," the man said, rolling out the words slowly and respectfully.

A small sum enough for eyes that read to-day. Yet to a railroad of the present, forty millions could not mean more than that sum meant to the struggling Central Pacific.

The train came in from the Front, a lot of empty cars bumping over unsettled track. To-night came Louis McLane, a distinguished looking gentleman; yet great man as he was, and earnestly as Sally B. tried to make him comfortable, other matters overshadowed him.

"Them U. P. fellers laid seven and a half miles of track the other day." The story ran from lip to lip.

"Fuh! I bet a game rooster George Gregory'll beat that when the iron comes. It's on the way now, they say." Sally B. looked challengingly about.

Waiting at table did not prevent her keeping up with all the railroad news, it rather aided her in doing so; and her comments were a sort of daily oral editorial that most of her patrons believed in, and all enjoyed.

The U. P.'s discharged 12 engineers 'cause they wouldn't run at night," another loquacious diner remarked.

"Don't wonder they refused," a man from the east replied. "The grades are ticklish; the track ain't half finished, to say nothin' o' being settled; and the Injuns are raisin' Cain in triplets."

"That's the way it's been all the time over on the U. P.," a second stranger added. "Workmen never naved had the proper protection. I was on the Denver line, and the chief of construction telegraphed for more force, saying, 'I have to fight while I dig.' But the company didn't help him out. Why, we had ten Injun fights in ten weeks. From one to seven white men killed every time. It wasn't fun, you can bet!"

than herself, would put herself on record to the better side of life. A peace long unknown stole over her, and she slept tranquilly.

CHAPTER XXX.

The Stroke of the Fang.

The days ran happily by for Esther, so far as she remained in her own little world. It was a joy to be with Uncle Billy a short late hour every other night when his train was in and his reports made; a joy to know that her presence comforted Sally B., whose heart, despite her busy life, longed for her only child, and grieved for the older child who dogged her footsteps, did her errands, followed her with meek, trustful eyes. The spell of the desert, and her ever deferred hope of seeing Alfred, still held Esther. Gideon was in the town, though he kept out of Esther's way. Sally B. met him abruptly one day, forced a kind word upon him and asked him of his stay; but he evaded her with a half-coherent reply about seeing the railroad through. She mentally substituted Esther for the railroad, knowing it was for chance glimpses of her he hung around the town.

The grading was finished. Engineers, their occupation gone, had already started for new barrens to measure. Bridge builders followed. Men of the pickax and shovel, drillers, strikers, teamsters, Chinese, cooks, scullions, camp-movers—a long procession faced westward toward "California, God's country."

It was the morning before George Gregory's great day, the day he was to outdo the Union Pacific feat of laying seven and a half miles of track at one stretch. He had chosen the flat space eastward by Kelton, where the grade was easy, culverts and bridges few. Everything was in readiness. The iron was coming—on the road—due at the Front that afternoon. All along the line betting ran high. Interest and excitement pervaded town, camp and home; touched even women and children.

The supply train backed, switched, loaded freight brought in the night before; yet did not pull out for the Front as usual; but side-tracked and waited. The iron was coming! It was due at noon.

Hotel patrons had eaten and gone. Bill Bernard was out on an errand; and the house was deserted save for the cook and scullion, and the two women at their late breakfast. The sun had not yet thawed the frost of the night when a shot rang out from Sally B.'s barroom.

She caught her pistol from some near neighbor and rushed out, Esther flying after her.

"Go back, child!" Sally B. said sternly, from the doorway.

"Not unless you go," Esther returned in a voice as firm.

"Foller 'still, then," the other whispered, seeing opposition useless; and they entered the barroom noiselessly.

A man with beetling brows and fierce, resentful eyes stood with his back to them, holding a big revolver somewhat unsteadily over Shack New-high, whose hands were high in air. The intruder's clothes were soiled, his boots dusty and out from much walking over rock. Notwithstanding his vicious, threatening attitude, his body drooped as from intense fatigue.

"He did not hear the women; and his savage, low-spoken command showed him dangerously sure of himself.

"Give me ten dollars out of that till. Do it quick, and keep still. And don't try shootin' next time when a man asks you for money; you might get your wooden overcoat sooner'n you'd like. Hurry up, there!"

"Drop that gun, pardner!" Sally B. said quietly.

She had waited barely a breath on the threshold, yet Esther had smelled burned powder, seen Shack's pistol on the floor, his dishevelled hair and the bullet hole in the murderer's hat. Shack had had the first shot. How had the other mastered the situation?

The man wheeled with blazing eyes, to meet Sally B.'s pistol barrel aimed at his head. His own weapon, unconsciously lowered left him helpless, though he made a slight motion as if to lift it.

"Drop it, I say! Let go!" Her revolver touched his temple and her black eyes blazed a message that compelled obedience.

He returned her look for an instant, lowered his eyes sullenly, glanced covertly about, and stooping, laid the pistol on the floor.

"Now git me that cheese!"

Again he looked at her resentfully, but only for a breath, when he bent slyly, and dropped heavily down.

"The hum! Shack to the cheer, an' his hands behind him, an' his feet together. How'd he git the drop on ye? I see ye got the first shot."

"Yes! But I reckoned he was only a drunk an' wasn't lookin' for him to fight. I only shot to skeer; but he jumped me like greased lightning!"

"He looks holier, I low grub an' ben plenty. Had anything to eat lately?" she asked her prisoner.

He shook his head sulkily.

"I thought so. Watch him, Shack," she ordered, and after the tying was done to her satisfaction, the two women went out.

They returned shortly, Sally B. with a generous breakfast Esther, who refused to let her come alone, carrying the coffee. They arranged the food on a chair, and Sally B. took up her revolver again.

"Untie his hands Shack."

"You're the beatin' est," Shack began, obeying her order reluctantly. "to go an' feed a man that's tried to rob ye."

"No matter. He's hungry. I wouldn't turn a hungry dog off without a bone. Get to work, now she said gruffly to the bandit. "An' while ye're busy, tell what you wanted of ten dollars. Why didn't ye ask for the hull bill?"

"Because I wanted to be white an' take only enough to get out of the country with." Esther thought—his face softened a trifle.

"Why don't ye work for it? The Boss wants choppers, an' everybody's fyin' west like ole Nick was after 'em."

"That's my business I want to leave the country, not chop wood." The sullen look deepened.

"If ye're that particular, you git that grub out o' sight, an' git! I earn my money workin', an' you can yurn."

He scowled at her; and no one saw the gleam in his wicked eye as he caught the flash from Esther's solitaire.

It was the only ornament of value she wore in this rude place. She had bought it for protection, and it had served its purpose well. Most people supposed it an engagement ring, a supposition she tacitly encouraged.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Too Much Idealized.

"He was at one time the leading photographer, wasn't he?"

"Yes, but after Bella's experience his business dropped off."

"Tell me about it."

"Bella had some pictures taken there and they certainly were swell. A multimillionaire from Pittsburg saw one in the showcase and fell in love at first sight."

"With Bella?"

"With Bella's picture. Of course, he was wild to be introduced. Then he saw the actual Bella."

"Ann then?"

"And then he took the first train back to Pittsburg."

The KITCHEN CABINET

SAL AND THE SAP.

I GH up in a maple tree
I had a robin trilling;
Said he: "I know a bit of news
That is just simply killing."
This morning, while I sat up here
Right on this very limb,
Who should stroll up but
Johnson's girl
With their next neighbor,
Jim.
Jim paused and said
"This maple tree
Will be just right to sap."
This fall—if I had a wife
to help,
I'd boil some maple sap.

For chilly mornings, when a fellow
Wakes up hungry-cold,
I tell you, batter cakes and sirup
Taste as good as gold.

I'll get the sirup, Sal, if you—
But I'll not tell the rest
It wouldn't be polite— and Robin
Flew back to the nest.

Food Preservatives.

The manufacturers' claim—that the preservatives used in the food products are harmless, has suffered a shock in the recent investigations of Dr. Wiley and the bureau of chemistry.

The manufacturers base their claim upon the fact (which is not disputed) that much of the acids used in food preservatives occur in the natural product—notably cranberries, which contain a large amount of benzoic acid. The proof of the pudding is in the eating and we who do not follow the chemical intricacies of the case, are inclined to call it a victory for the bureau, inasmuch as Dr. Wiley's test proved to his satisfaction that the acids were injurious. The manufacturers, however, have little to complain of since the bureau recommends changes which may be easily made. There is not a single article of food preserved by means of benzoic acid or benzoate of soda which cannot be preserved in perfect condition without the aid of chemicals. It means simply a higher quality of raw materials, and greater care and cleanliness in manufacture.

Care of the Meat-Chopper.

Never put it away until perfectly dried. Keep the pieces apart, if possible, and in a dry place. An easy way to clean it is to grind a piece of stale bread after other things, meat vegetables, etc. have been through it.

"AND THE COCK CREW."

THIS day poultry are plentiful in Palestine, and that they were bred in the time of the apostles is generally believed. We have abundant proof of this in the touching lament of Jesus over Jerusalem, and in the allusions to "cock-crowing." That this "cock" was like the familiar barnyard fowl of to-day is the general opinion—as witness the picture of the eminent artist, James Tissot, in his life of Christ. To illustrate the words "and the cock crew" he has right scene, vague and shadowy—a misty background and the figure of a cock in the center of the picture.

But that our common fowl formed part of the old Hebrew diet is doubtful. During the earlier period of Jewish history there is silence on the subject. In Job occurs the question, "Is there any taste in the white of an egg?" But this, and other references to eggs, allude doubtless to wild fowl. The frequent allusions to the bird nesting "in any tree by chance or on the ground," would seem to prove that they were not of the tame variety.

Many think that Solomon introduced domestic poultry into Palestine, because of the "fatted fowl" brought daily to the king's table. But this is only conjecture, the truth seems to be that somewhere, between the old dispensation and the new, the domestic fowl, very much as we have it now, was brought into Palestine, probably by the Romans.

Ice Vs. Paregoric.

In a list of suggestions for the care of babies in summer, is this: "Rub paregoric on the gums if they seem hot and feverish."

With this advice we beg to differ. Paregoric is a dangerous remedy in unskilful hands, and should be used rarely—in this the doctors agree. Do not have it handy so a careless nurse may dose the baby with it and quiet him while she gabs with the nearest policeman. At best paregoric should be sparingly used. With all deference to the advice above quoted we would suggest that a lump of ice on baby's irritated gums would be a relief, followed by no bad effects. Wrap a tiny piece in a linen cloth—and let him nibble on it.

Egg Plant.

This vegetable is not appreciated, and appears only too seldom on the average table. It is excellent when baked. Boil it 20 minutes, in salted water. Halve, and scoop out the centers. Chop and mix the insides with bread crumbs, raw tomato, onion juice, chopped parsley and seasoning. Refill the shells with the mixture and bake half an hour.

Oliver Barton - Streets

Night Sweats & Cough.

E. W. Walton, Confr. S. P. Ry., 717 Van Ness St., San Antonio, Tex., writes: "During the summer and fall of 1902, my annoyance from catarrh reached that stage where it was actual misery and developed alarming symptoms, such as a very deep-seated cough, night sweats, and pains in the head and chest. I experimented with several so-called remedies before I finally decided to take a thorough course of Peruna."

"Two of my friends had gone so far as to inform me that the thing for me to do was to resign my position and seek a higher, more congenial climate. Everyone thought I had consumption and I was not expected to live very long."

"Having procured some Peruna, I decided to give it a thorough test, and applied myself assiduously to the task of taking it, as per instructions, in the meantime."

"The effects were soon apparent, all alarming symptoms disappeared and my general health became fully as good as it had ever been in my life."

"I have resorted to the use of Peruna on two or three occasions since that time to cure myself of bad colds."

Natural Error.

"Halloa, Scudder; what are you building—a motor shed?"

"No; just a hat box for my wife."

Shower of Sulphur.

Charolles, a small town 30 miles from Macon, in France, has recently been visited by a shower of sulphur. The roofs, gardens, fields, vineyards, rivers and ponds were covered with a yellow dust, and for some time the peasants in the fields were troubled by a sulphurous biting odor which made breathing difficult.

It Came Off.

The fair bather was in the greatest danger when the heroic rescuer seized her by the hair. It came off. Puffs and coils and waves and rats it strewn the shuddering sea.

For a moment the rescuer was dazed.

Then he grasped the tiny knob of real hair that remained on the lady's head and drew her into shallow water.

Did she thank him for saving her life?

She didn't—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Two Versions.

At a dinner during the recent Episcopal convention at Richmond a young lady sitting near the bishop of London said to him:

"Bishop, I wish you would set my mind at rest as to the similarity or dissimilarity between your country and ours, on one point. Does the butterfly because the tomato can?"

The bishop laughed heartily at this vivacious query. Not so a young Englishman of his party, who, after an net, sought his host.

I want to know, you know, said he, "about that joke of Miss B.—'s. She asked if the butter flew because tomatoes could. Pray tell me what the point is."—Lippincott's Magazine.

So Much Ailke.

A curious story went the rounds some little time ago about a lovely foreigner, one of whose verbal slips gave King Edward occasion for a hearty laugh. A very lively personage with a delightful accent, she made such a favorable impression upon the king that he asked her to be his partner at bridge. But, sir," she said, "I really don't know how to play." The king would take no denial, however, and she became rather embarrassed. I assure you, sir," she said, "I don't know the difference between a king and a knave." There was an awkward silence, and then she realized what she had said, and was covered with confusion. The king, of course, laughed it off, and now tells the story with gusto.

"THE PALE GIRL."

Did Not Know Coffee Was the Cause.

In cold weather some people think a cup of hot coffee good to help keep warm. So it is—for a short time but the drug—caffeine—acts on the heart to weaken the circulation and the reaction is to cause more chilliness.

There is a hot wholesome drink which a Dak. girl found after a time, makes the blood warm and the heart strong.

She says:

"Having lived for five years in N. Dak., I have used considerable coffee owing to the cold climate. As a result I had a dull headache regularly, suffered from indigestion, and had no life in me.

"I was known as 'the pale girl,' and people thought I was just weakly. After a time I had heart trouble and became very nervous, never knew what it was to be real well. Took medicine but it never seemed to do any good.

"Since being married my husband and I both have thought coffee was harming us and we would quit, only to begin again, although we felt it was the same as poison to us.

"Then we got some Postum. Well, the effect was really wonderful. My complexion is clear now, headache gone, and I have a great deal of energy I had never known while drinking coffee.

"I haven't been troubled with indigestion since using Postum, am not nervous, and need no medicine. We have a little girl and boy who both love Postum and thrive on it and Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

Look Out for Fires!

The fall of 1871 will never be forgotten by those who were old enough to fully appreciate the conditions that prevailed. It was warm, remarkably warm for that time of year.

From the small settlements in the timber country came barrowing tales of forest fires, closing in on all sides, and only a few survivors who could take refuge in wells or dugways would be left to tell the tale.

By this time the fire situation had got on the public nerves. A small blaze would throw a community into a panic. Every village, in addition to its regular police protection, had a volunteer fire patrol of citizens to see that combustibles were properly stored and that careless use of fire was prevented.

By this time the fire situation had got on the public nerves. A small blaze would throw a community into a panic. Every village, in addition to its regular police protection, had a volunteer fire patrol of citizens to see that combustibles were properly stored and that careless use of fire was prevented.

Might Be Disastrous.

Dr. Bradley's action now in trying to mix up matters in the state by asking for a recount is thought to be for no other purpose than through technicalities to keep Governor Warner's name off the ticket entirely.

WHAT LOCAL PAPERS SAY

About Forbes Robertson for County Auditor.

Editorial Detroit Journal, Sept. 9th: THE COUNTY AUDITOR CONTEST.

In this campaign the issue in the matter of County Auditor is defined, with unusual clarity for the Republican voter. There are but two candidates whose chances are worthy of serious consideration. They are Forbes Robertson and T. Hawley Christian.

It is infrequent that actual public service offers information so available and accurate upon which the voters may base their judgment as to the relative fitness and capacity of two candidates. Any citizen who boasts the slightest interest in or knowledge of public events in this community must be sufficiently familiar with Mr. Robertson's administration of the county treasurer's office to form an intelligent opinion of his eminent fitness for the office of County Auditor and act at the polls accordingly.

Also, the present Auditor needs none. He has held the office of Auditor of Wayne county for three terms, twelve years. He is now a candidate for his fourth term. These twelve years should have served intimately and thoroughly to instruct the people of Wayne County as to his personality, political methods and political ambitions.

Detroit Times, Sept. 10th: Fearlessness and ability are the two characteristics which stand out in the record of Forbes Robertson, now County Treasurer and aspirant for the Republican nomination for County Auditor. He has never lacked the courage to stand up for what he considered right, and his position has always been sustained by the press and the public.

Robertson is 46 years of age and has lived in Detroit all his life, except during the time that he was a student at Albion college. He has been prominent in business, social and athletic circles and has won a large quota of strong and staunch personal friends by his downright bluntness and honesty.

During his four years of administration of the office of County Treasurer, there has been no complaint of the conduct of that important office. Instead, his management of the office has called forth commendation from all who had dealings with it. Auditor General Bradley particularly commending his competence.

His familiarity with business affairs and his training in county matters particularly fit him for the office of County Auditor. Detroit News, Sept. 13th: ROBERTSON WELL FITTED.

Conduct of County Treasurer's Office Assures Election as Auditor. In the County Treasurer's office he has by his competence and by the excellent conduct of its affairs, called forth praise from all officials, state and county, having dealings with the office, among them being Auditor-General Bradley, and has made a host of friends among the taxpayers, and his career as County Treasurer has been the occasion of many laudatory notices in the press of all parties.

Michigan Union Advocate, Sept. 11th: FORBES ROBERTSON FOR COUNTY AUDITOR. In his campaign Forbes Robertson, who aspires to succeed T. Hawley Christian as County Auditor, is not mincing words as to where he stands. He declares that if he is elected he will be Auditor and not attempt to meddle with the affairs of all the other county officers.

NORRIS D. HOLLISTER, Republican Candidate for Sheriff, is Making a Whirlwind Campaign.

Mr. Hollister was born on a farm in Oakland county, Mich., and coming to Detroit with his parents, he attended the Cass School and Detroit Business-University. After he was graduated he determined to do something for himself. Engaging in the real estate business, he made several large Western land deals and has been successful from the start.

His friends believe a majority of the voters will regard him as the best fitted candidate for Sheriff, and place an X in front of his name at the primaries.
