Vol. XXXIX. No. 40.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, MAY 7, 1909.

$1.00 Per Year in Advance

WILL SHUT OFF LIGHTS

COUNCIL WILL GO AFTER DELINQUENTS HEREAFTER.

Must Pay Before July 1 or 'Twill Be Dark.

The council did a commendable thing at the meeting Monday night. Supt. Wilkinson reported about seven hundred dollars of old accounts outstanding and he was ordered to collect half by June 1 and balance by July 1 or shut off the lights.

Supt. Wilkinson says this order of the council will be carried out to the letter.

At their next meeting the council will take up the matter of water works delinquents which are said to be fully as great as the electric light users.

The council believes that the village should be put on a business basis and run on the cash system. In these actions the council is to be congratulated and is receiving commendation from every citizen.

HIGH SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT.

Give One in the Opera House Next Friday.

The Senior class of the High school with the assistance of local talent will give an entertainment in the Opera House next week Friday night, May 14. The playlet will be "Diamonds and Hearts." The High school chorus will give several musical selections and it will be an enjoyable affair all around.

Turn out and help the class along.

WILL CALL CARS.

Detroit United Conductors Doing So Now.

All conductors on the D. U. R., both on the Plymouth and Farmington lines, go to the Waiting Room at Gardner's and call out the departure of each car. Passengers can now wait there in comfort and assurance.

CARLETON OPENS NEW BALL PARK

NORTHVILLE BALL CLUB GOES DOWN TO HELP.

Harry German's Team Will Be the Victims.

Carleton anticipates a big day at the opening of their new base ball park on Tuesday, May 11.

County Judge of Probate Carle Franke will deliver an address and pitch the first ball over the plate, while Supervisor Jacob Gelerman will attempt to catch it.

Our Northville boys, headed by Fred Moffit, will go down to Carleton and stack up against Harry German's team that day. A number of the local fans will accompany the club.

Card of Thanks.

For the kindly expressions and thoughtful tokens of sympathy in our recent affliction we desire to return our heartfelt appreciation.

Mrs. MINA SMITH,

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the friends who so kindly assisted me during my last illness; also to those who sent flowers, desserts and fruit.

Mrs. JOHN HIRSCH.

NOVI NEWS.

George Biery is very sick with grip.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Collins May 1, a girl.

Miss Brewer of Leonard is the guest of Mrs. Jud Richardson.

Mrs. Ed. Morse of Wixom attended the "roll call" in the Baptist church Tuesday.

Mrs. Jennie Goodell of Salem is the guest of friends and relatives here this week.

Mrs. Andrew Harmon of Northville was in town Tuesday to attend the "roll call" in the Baptist church.

This place was visited by a severe electrical storm Wednesday evening, accompanied by a heavy rain and hail. The wind blew quite hard for a short time doing about $50 worth of damage to Dr. Holcomb's place.

The "Roll Call" in the Baptist church Tuesday was well attended and very enjoyable. "We are so glad we came" was heard on all sides. Letters were received from Oklahoma, Northville, Salem, South Lyon and other places. In one was a check and another contained cash to help the work. Rev. N. E. Mueser of Northville delivered a hopeful address. This was the second roll call and it was still better than last year. Miss Richardson, for fifty-nine years a member of the church, was present and two other ladies present were members of the choir sixty years ago.

House Cleaning.

I have just bought a brand new Vacuum cleaner and am prepared to do house cleaning at reasonable rates. Call Harold Turner. Bell 'phone 134 2R; Home 'phone 83.

"My child was burned terribly about the face, neck and chest. I applied Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. The pain ceased and the child sank into a restful sleep."—Mrs. Nancy M. Hanson, Hamburg, N. Y.

Allen, the Stove Man.

Am located in Northville and am prepared to do all kinds of repairing: Stoves, lawn mowers, clothes wringers and sewing machines. Castings for all stoves 12c per lb. in stove. Second hand gasoline stoves for sale. Phone residence, 128 x.

SALEM NEWS.

Steven Angell of Adrian visited his brother, C. P. Angell, last week. Misses Hilda and Carrie Merritt spent Saturday and Sunday with Detroit relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown are entertaining an eight pound lady who arrived April 28.

Mrs. May Jacobs of Plainfield returned Saturday from a short visit with her parents.

Alfred Canfield of Detroit visited his son, John Canfield, at the home of Elmer DeKay Sunday.

The Missionary society will meet with Rev. Betts at the parsonage next Wednesday afternoon. All are cordially invited to be present.

A "shower" of postals will reach Montana today for Miss Laura Roberts of this place who went there a year ago and has been very sick and unable to return to this place.

A meeting will be held in the Thayer school house Saturday afternoon at two o'clock for the purpose of organizing a cemetery association under the state law. T. D. Walker will be there and all interested are urged to be present.

Wednesday last the children and grandchildren of Mrs. Jane Whipple assembled at her home and celebrated her birthday. She received many presents and the beautiful weather helped to make the affair enjoyable and one long to be remembered.

Arber and Community Day was pleasantly and profitably observed last week. A short and interesting program was given by the school, followed by papers. The Salem orchestra, Mr. and Mrs. Will Stanbro and Mrs. Foreman, furnished excellent music for the occasion. Two dozen Carolina poplars, ordered by the school board, have arrived to beautify the school yard. Much praise should be given the teachers for preparing such a fine program.

WIXOM NEWS.

Does Not Stimulate

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. It is not a strong drink. No reaction after you stop using it. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic and alterative. We wish you would ask your doctor about this. He knows. Trust him. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

What are Ayer's Pills? Liver Pills. How long have they been sold? Nearly sixty years. Do doctors recommend them? Ask your own doctor and find out.

SYNOPSIS.

"Mad" Dan Maitland, on reaching his New York bachelor club, met an attractive young woman at the door. Janitor O'Hagan assured him no one had been within that day. Dan discovered a woman's finger prints in dust on his desk, along with a letter from his attorney Maitland dated with Bannerman, his attorney. Dan set out for Greenfields, to get his family jewels.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

An errant caddy, cruising aimlessly but hopefully, sighted Maitland's tall figure and white shirt from a distance, and bore down upon him with a salient clatter of hoofs.

"Kebsh!" he demanded, breathlessly, pulling in at the corner.

Maitland came out of his reverie and looked up slowly. "Why, yes, thank you," he assented, amiably.

"Where to, sir?"

Maitland paused on the forward deck of the craft and faced about, looking the caddy trustfully in the eye. "I leave it to you," he replied, politely. "Just as you please."

The driver gasped.

"You see," Maitland continued with a courteous smile. "I have two engagements—once at Sherry's, the other with the 10:20 train from Long Island City. What would you, as man to man, advise me to do, caddy?"

"Well, sir, seem' as you put it to me straight," returned the caddy with engaging candor, "I'd go home, sir, if I was you, afore I got any worse."

"Thank you," gravely. "Long Island City depot, then, caddy."

Maitland extended himself languidly upon the cushions. "Surely," he told the night. "The driver knows best—he and Bannerman."

The cab started off jogging so sedately up Madison avenue that Maitland glanced at his watch and elevated his brows dubiously; then with his stick poked open the trap in the roof.

"If you really think it best for me to go home, caddy, you'll have to drive like hell," he suggested, mildly.

"Yessir!"

A whip-lash cracked loudly over the horse's back, and the hansom, lurching into Thirty-fourth street on one wheel, was presently jouncing eastward over rough cobbles, at a regardless pace which roused the gongs of the surface cars to a clangor of hysterical expostulation. In a trice the "L" extension was roaring overhead; and a little later the ferry gates were yawning before them. Again Maitland consulted his watch, commenting briefly: "In time."

Yet he reckoned without the ferry, one of whose employees deliberately and implacably swung to the gates in the very face of the astonished cab horse, which promptly rose upon its hind legs and pawed the air with gestures of pardonable exasperation. To no avail, however; the gates remained closed, the caddy (with language) reined his steed back a yard or two, and Maitland, lighting a cigarette, composed himself to simulate patience.

Followed a wait of ten minutes or so, in which a number of vehicles joined company with the cab; the passenger was vaguely aware of the jarring purr of a motor car, like that of some huge cat, in the immediate rear. A circumstance which he had occasion to recall ere long.

In the course of time the gates were again opened. The bridge cleared of incoming traffic. As the caddy drove aboard the boat, with nice consideration selecting the choicest stand of all, well out upon the forward deck, a motor car slid in, humming, on the right of the hansom.

Maitland sat forward, resting his forearms on the apron, and jerked his cigarette out over the gates; the glowing stub described a fiery arc and took the water with a hiss. Warm whiffs of the river's sweet and salty breath fanned his face gratefully; and he became aware that there was a moon. His gaze roving at will, he nodded an even-tempered approbation of the night's splendor—in the city a thing unsuspected.

Never, he thought, had he known moonlight so pure, so silvery and strong. Shadows of gates and posts lay upon the forward deck like stencils of lamplight upon white marble. Beyond the boat's bluntly rounded nose the East river stretched its restless, dark reaches, glossy black, woven with gorgeous ribbons of reflected light streaming from pier head lamps on the further shore. Overhead, the sky, a pallid and luminous blue around the low-sung moon, was shaded to profound depths of bluish-black toward the horizon. Above Brooklyn rested a tenuous haze. A revenue cutter, a slim, pale shape, cut across the bows like a hunted ghost. Farther out a homeward-bound excursion steamer, tier upon tier of glittering lights, drifted slowly toward its pier beneath the new bridge, the glare of its band, swelling and dying upon the night breeze, mercifully tempered by distance.

Presently Maitland's attention was distracted and drawn, by the abrupt cessation of its motor's pulsing, to the automobile on his right. He lifted his chin sharply, narrowing his eyes, whistled low; and thereafter had eyes for nothing else.

The car, he saw with the experienced eye of a connoisseur, was a recent model of one of the most expensive and popular foreign makes; built on lines that promised a deal in the way of speed, and furnished with engines that were pregnant with multiplied horse power. All in all not the style of car one would expect to find controlled by a solitary woman, especially after ten of a summer's night.

Nevertheless the lone occupant of this car was a woman. And there was that in her bearing, an indefinable something—whether it lay in the carriage of her head, which impressed one as both spirited and independent, or in an equally certain but less tangible air of self-confidence and reliance—to set Mad Maitland's pulses drumming with excitement. For, unless indeed he labored gravely under a misapprehension, he was observing her for the second time within the past few hours.

Could he be mistaken, or was this in truth the same woman who had (as he believed) made herself free of his rooms that evening?

In confirmation of such suspicion he remarked her costume, which was altogether worked out in soft shades of gray. Gray was the misty veil, drawn in and faintly knotted beneath her chin, which lent her head and face such thorough protection against prying glances; of gray suede were the light gauntlets that hid all save the slender fingers of her small hands; and the wrap that, cut upon full and flowing lines, crinkled her figure beyond suggestion, was gray. Yet even its ample drapery could not dissemble the fact that she was quite small, girlishly slight, like the woman in the doorway; nor did it augur temper her impersonal and detached composure, which had also been an attribute of the woman in the doorway. And again she was alone, unchaperoned, unprotected.

Yes? Or no? And, if yes, what to do? Was he to alight and accost her, accuse her of forcing an entrance to his rooms for the sole purpose (as far as ascertainable) of presenting him with the outline of her hand in the dust of his desk's top? Oh, hardly! It was all very well to be daringly eccentric and careless of the world's censure; but one scarcely cared to lay one's self open either to an unknown girl's derision or to a sound pummeling at the hands of fellow passengers, enraged by the insult offered to an unescorted woman.

The young man was still pondering ways and means when a dull bump apprised him that the ferry boat was entering the Long Island City slip. "The devil!" he exclaimed in mingled disgust and dismay, realizing that his distraction had been so thorough as to permit the voyage to take place almost without his realizing it. So that now—worse luck!—it was too late to take any one of the hundred fantastic steps he had contemplated half seriously. In another two minutes his charming mystery, so bewitchingly incarnated, would have slipped out of his life, finally and beyond recall. And he could do naught to hinder such a finale to the adventure.

Sulkily he resigned himself to the inevitable, waiting and watching, while the boat slid and blundered clumsily, paddle wheels churning the filthy waters over side, to the floating bridge; while the winches rattled, and the woman, sitting up briskly in the driver's seat of the motor car, bent forward and advanced the spark, while the chain fell clanking and the car shot out, over the bridge, through the gates, and away, at a very considerable, even if lawful, rate of speed.

Whereupon, writing fits to the final chapter of Romance, voting the world a dull place and life a treadmill, anathematizing in no uncertain terms his lack of resource and address, Maitland paid off his caddy, alighted, and to that worthy's boundless wonder, walked into the waiting room of the railway terminus without deviating a hair's breadth from the straight and circumscribed path of the sober in mind and body.

The 10:20 had departed by a bare two minutes. The next and last train for Greenfields was to leave at 10:59. Maitland with assumed nonchalance composed himself upon a bench in the waiting room to endure the 37 minute interval. Five minutes later an abled-bodied washerwoman with six children in quarter sizes descended upon the same bench; and the young man in desperation allowed himself to be dispossessed. The news stand next attracted him, he garnered a fugitive amusement and two dozen copper cents by the simple process of purchasing six "night extras," which he did not want, and paying for each with a five-cent piece. Comprehending, at length, that he had irritated the news dealer, he meandered off, jingling his copper fortune in one hand, lugging his newspaper in the other, and made a determined onslaught upon a slot machine. The latter having reluctantly disgorged 24 assorted samples of chewing gum and stale sweetmeats, Maitland returned to the washerwoman, and sowed dissension in her brood by presenting the treasure horde to the eldest girl with instructions to share it with her brothers and sisters.

It is difficult to imagine what folly might next have been recorded against him had not, at that moment, a ferocious and inarticulate howl from the train starter announced the fact that the 10:59 was in waiting.

Boarding the train in a thankful spurt, Maitland settled himself as comfortably as he might in the smoker and endeavored to find succor of ennui in his collection of extras. In vain, even a two-column portrait of Mr. Dan Anlisty, crackman, accompanied by a vivacious catalogue of that notoriety's achievements in the field of "rotary" hardly stirred his interest.

An elusive resemblance which he traced in the features of Mr. Anlisty, as presented by the sketch-artist-on-the-spot, to some one whom he, Maitland, had known in the dark backwards and abyss of time, merely drew from him the comment: "Homely brute!" And he laid the papers aside, cradling his chin in the palm of one hand and staring for a weary while out of the car window at a reeling and moonstritten landscape. He yawned exhaustively, his thoughts astray between a girl garbed all in gray, Bannerman's earnest and thoughtful face, and the pernicious activities of Mr. Daniel Anlisty, at whose door Maitland laid the responsibility for this most fatiguing errand.

The brakeman's wolf-like yelp—

"Greenfields!"—was ringing in his ears when he awoke and stumbled down-aisle and car steps just in the nick of time. The train, whisking round a curve cloaked by a belt of somber pines, left him quite alone in the world, cast ruthlessly upon his own resources.

An hour had elapsed; it was now midnight; the moon rode high, a cold white disk against a background of sapphire velvet; its pellucid rays revealing with disheartening distinctness the inanimate and lightless roadside hamlet called Greenfields; its general store and postoffice, its dilapidated hotel, its straggling line of dilapidated habitations, all wrapped in silence, profound and impenetrable. Not even a dog howled; not a belated villager was in sight; and it was a moral certainty that the local livery service had closed down for the night.

Nevertheless, Maitland, with a desperation bred of the prospective five-mile tramp, spent some ten valuable minutes hammering upon the door of the house infested by the proprietor of the livery stable. He succeeded only in waking the dog, and inasmuch as he was not on friendly terms with that animal, presently withdrew at discretion and set his face northwards upon the open road.

It stretched before him invitingly enough, a ribbon winding silver-white between dark patches of pine and scrub-oak or fields lush with rustling corn and wheat. And, having overcome his primary disgust, as the blood began to circulate more briskly in his veins, Maitland became aware that he was actually enjoying the enforced exercise. It could have been hardly otherwise, with a night so sweet, with airs so bland and fragrant of the woods and fresh-turned earth, with so clear a light to show him his way.

He stepped out briskly at first, swinging his stick and watching his shadow, a squat, incredibly agitated silhouette in the golden dust. But gradually and insensibly the peaceful influence of that still and lovely hour tempered his heart's impatience; and he found himself walking at a pace more leisurely. After all, there was no hurry; he was unwearied, and Maitland Manor lay less than five miles distant.

Thirty minutes passed; he had not covered a third of the way, yet remained content. By well-remembered landmarks, he knew he must be nearing the little stream called, by courtesy, Mayannis river; and, in due course, he stepped out upon the long wooden structure that spans that water. He was close upon the farther end when—upon a haphazard impulse—he glanced over the nearest guard rail, down at the bed of the creek. And stopped incontinently, gaping.

Stationary in the middle of the depression, hub-deep in the shallow waters, was a motor car; and it, beyond dispute, was identical with that which had occupied his thoughts on the ferry boat. Less wonderful, perhaps, but to him amazing enough, it was to discover upon the driver's seat the girl in gray.

His brain benumbed beyond further capacity for astonishment, he accepted without demur this latest and most astounding of the chain of amazing coincidences which had thus far enlivened the night's earlier hours, and stood rapt in silent contemplation, sensible that the girl had been un- aware of his approach, deadened as his footsteps must have been by the blotk of dust that carpeted both road and bridge deep and thick.

On her part she sat motionless, evidently lost in reverie, and momentarily, at least, unconscious of the embarrassing predicament which was hers. So complete, indeed, seemed her abstraction that Maitland caught himself questioning the reality of her.

And well might she have seemed to him a pale little wraith of the night, the shimmer of gray that she made against the shimmer of light on the water—a shape almost transparent, slight, and unsubstantial—seeming to contemplate, and as still as any mouse.

Looking more attentively, it became evident that her veil was now raised. This was the first time that he had seen her so. But her countenance remained so deeply shadowed by the visor of a mannish motoring cap that the most searching scrutiny gained no more than a dim and scantily satisfactory impression of alluring loveliness.

Maitland turned noiselessly, rested elbows on the rail, and, staring, framed a theory to account for her position, if not for her patience.

On either hand the road, dividing, struck off at a tangent, down the banks and into the river bed. It was credible to presume that the girl had lost control of the machine temporarily and that it, taking the bit between its teeth, had swung gayly down the incline to its bath.

Why she lingered there, however, was less patent. The water, as has been indicated, was some inches below the trolley; it did not seem reasonable to assume that it should have interferred with either running gear or motor.

At this point in Maitland's meditations the gray girl appeared to have arrived at a decision. She straightened up suddenly, with a little resolute nod of her head, lifting one small foot to her knee, and fumbled with the laces of her shoe.

Maitland grasped her intention to abandon the machine, with her determination to wade! Clearly this had seemed to demonstrate that there had been a breakdown, irreparable so far as feminine hands were concerned.

One shoe removed, its fellow would follow, and then—

Out of sheer chivalry, the involuntary witness was moved to earnest protest.

"Don't!" he cried, hastily. "I say, don't wade!"

The Court Room Was a Scene of Wild West Effects That Made Spectators Duck.

Haroot H. Gastanian, aged 23, a Detroit medical student, was shot down by his uncle, Dr. G. K. Boyajian, at 11 o'clock Friday morning, just as Gastanian arose in the prisoner's box in Justice Jeffries' police court room No. 2, to be arraigned on a charge preferred by the doctor against the young man and against his own wife, Mrs. Ethel Boyajian. The doctor fired six shots, three of which struck the young man, one of which went through his wife's hat, one imbedded itself in the wall while the other went through the window of the jury room.

Haroot Gastanian died at St. Mary's hospital at 10:45 p. m., about 12 hours after the tragedy. In his dying breath he maintained that he and his aunt, the wife of Dr. Boyajian, were innocent of the charge made against them by the doctor.

Chief of Detectives McDonnell, however, says that both Gastanian and the doctor's wife confessed their guilt to him and the doctor after their arrest Thursday afternoon. Yet, Mrs. Boyajian, like Gastanian, protested her innocence when questioned at the county jail immediately after the shooting.

Standing on the blood-stained spot where Gastanian was murdered in the police court Friday morning, Dr. Boyajian, the murderer, was arraigned before Justice Stein Saturday morning. He was brought into court by Detectives Palmer and Bodinus, who made the charge of murder against him.

"Do you know the nature of the charge against you?" asked the court.

"No, I don't know the nature of it," the prisoner replied.

"Well, it is in connection with the shooting of your nephew yesterday," the court explained.

"Do I have to answer any questions here?" the doctor asked.

"No, you may stand mute if you want to," the court told him.

"Very well, then," the doctor said. "I will not say anything."

"All right, I shall set your hearing for next Friday and remand you to the custody of the sheriff without bail," the court declared.

"Make it Tuesday," suggested the prisoner.

The court did as requested and then the doctor was taken over to the county jail.

At the jail he broke down and wept bitterly. He volunteered the information that in Armenia radical measures are taken against a person who commits the offense charged to his wife. He is not strict enough.

"In Armenia," said the doctor, "a person guilty of this crime is taken by a mob about a mile and a half beyond a town and stoned. The laws of America are not sufficient, they are not strict enough."

The doctor showed some surprise when informed that his wife was out on bail. He also apologized to Detective Robert Palmer because the bullet fired at his wife narrowly missed Detective Palmer's head.

License Medicine Vendors.

The bill of the state druggists' association providing a license for itinerant medicine vendors and peddlers and against hundreds of petitions have been filed, failed to pass the committee of the whole, although there was a decided sentiment in the house in favor of the measure. What killed the bill was the adoption of an amendment by Representative Baker taking the whole matter out of the hands of the state board of pharmacy, and giving it to county clerks.

There was a warm fight over this amendment on which the fate of the bill practically hung, and it was carried only by a very close vote. In his remarks upon the merits of the bill, Representative Curtis predicted that the introduction of this bill is but the preliminary skirmish of the big struggle that is to ensue in this state to determine whether the peddler system should be allowed to overrun the state to the extent that the country and village stores will be practically wiped out. He stated that stringent laws with prohibitive licenses have been or are being passed in surrounding states, and that the peddlers are swarming into Michigan, where they are being welcomed with open arms.

There is at present no way of securing any taxes or supervision of any kind over these itinerant dealers, and the public is being constantly imposed upon by fakes of the most pronounced type. Mr. Curtis contended that failure to take some action on this situation would in the near future compel the legislature to pass a measure much more prohibitive than the one proposed.

Dr. George Ehle, 65, formerly a well known physician in Grand Rapids, is dying from a complication of diseases in the Kent county poorhouse.

Michigan and Indiana officers are hunting for John Schneek, who disappeared mysteriously several days ago. Schneek, a Stevensville merchant, made a trip to St. Joseph, purchased some goods for his store and then dropped out of sight. During his absence his aged father died, and the body is now being held pending the location, if possible, of the son.

Wilmet Cooper, 43, was found dead in his home in Cassopolis by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Forest Cooper, of Pennsylvania, who came to town to bring him some things. He lived alone and the indications are that he had been dead for several days.

PAINT EVERY YEAR.

No One Wants to Do It, But Some Paint Will Wear No Longer.

When you have a job of painting done you don't expect to have it done over again very soon. But to make a lasting job, several things must be taken into consideration—the proper time to paint—the condition of the surface—the kind of materials to use, etc. All these matters are fully covered in the specifications which can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit also includes a book of color schemes for both interior and exterior painting, and a simple instrument for detecting adulteration in the paint materials. This outfit will solve many painting problems for every houseowner.

Meantime while buying paint see that every white lead keg bears the famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark, which is an absolute guarantee of purity and quality. If your paint dealer cannot supply you National Lead Company will see that some one else will.

THE TWO SIDES OF HISTORY.

Some Pertinent Observations Made by Writer Evidently Not Fond of Subject.

History is a running account of how King Somebody-or-other either did or did not get to a certain place, which nobody ever heard of, before King Somebody-else got there, from which we are usually supposed to conclude that it would have made quite a difference whether he did not.

Like nearly everything else, history has two sides. The history of the Garden of Eden depends upon whether it is related by a man or a woman. The history of the American revolution reads quite different in English books from the way it reads in our own books. The history of the civil war depends upon which side of the Mason and Dixon line you happen to be sitting when you write it.

History is a bore, not only because you are unacquainted with the people who figure in it, but because it repeats itself—Life.

COMFORTING.

Doctor—Most—er—fortunate, you consulted me. I'm just the very man to—er—cure you.

Patient—Ah, that's lucky! You are quite familiar with my complaint, then?

Doctor—Familiar? My dear sir, I've had it myself—er—this 20 years!

Judge Will Wait and See.

An earnest plea was made by Attorney Charles Pettijohn to Judge Pritchard of the criminal court for leniency to a client who had entered a plea of guilty to larceny. The burden of the attorney's argument was that his client was the father of twins and was tempted to theft in order to feed the mouths of the infants.

"Your honor, I will say frankly," said Mr. Pettijohn in closing, "that if I were the father of twins and needed food for my family, I would not hesitate to go out and steal it."

"Mr. Pettijohn, when you are the father of twins I will consider your proposition," said Judge Pritchard.—Indianapolis News

Playgrounds in Boston.

Boston women established the first playground in 1902. Last year there were eight, and nearly $2,000 was expended, or about $1 for each child, a very cheap price for the amount of good obtained. The Playground League is the name of the society of the playground boys themselves, who wear buttons and discipline all bad boys, thus making the government easy enough for those in charge. Not the least important result of the playgrounds in that city is said to be that involved in the self-government.

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated with Caffeine.

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not that has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years was troubled with stomach trouble.

"I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to perfect a cure. I was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured my stomach."

"I finally concluded coffee was the cause of my troubles and stopped using it. I tried tea and milk in its place, but neither agreed with me, then I commenced using Postum. I had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste."

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia."

"I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it I appreciate Postum."

"There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Help the State Fair.

The Michigan State Fair has become the pride of Michigan's exhibits. Under the present management it has proved a great success and the good it has done the state, outside of educational and entertaining features, cannot be estimated. The investment now represents nearly half a million dollars. The bonded indebtedness is $100,000 and outstanding notes are $80,000. This is certainly a good showing with $320,000 of valuation in grounds and buildings on the right side of the ledger.

The society has this year asked the State Legislature to appropriate $10,000 as usual for prizes for Michigan exhibits. It is a small amount to ask for and the favorable action of the Legislature in this regard will never be open to anything but commendation by every taxpayer who has the least interest in the welfare of the state.

The council is to be congratulated upon their start to get the village finances on a business basis. If they do nothing more than to get the water works and electric light collections straightened out and placed on a basis of cash every month, a fine after thirty days and then shut off after sixty days delinquency and then stick to it, they will have performed service that will commend that body for years to come. The council is starting in right.

And at that for twenty-eight days April was good as could be and to think she would cut up so like the jickens on the twenty-eighth and after dark at that.

A Northville man also claims lawns should be mowed crosswise instead of lengthwise.

Flattery in Lieu of Tip.

How to avoid tipping the waiter at a restaurant: When the bill comes, pay it exactly. A certain involuntary expression of astonishment will be visible on the waiter's face, well trained though it may be. You should then rise, saying to him: "I have made an excellent dinner, you manage the establishment much better than the preceding proprietor did." During his rapture at being mistaken for the owner of the restaurant you escape.

NATURE'S WARNING

Northville People Must Recognize and Heed it.

Kidney pills come quietly—mysteriously. But nature always warns you. Notice the kidney secretions. See if the color is unhealthy. If there are settlements and sediment. Passage frequent, scanty, painful. It's time then to use Doan's Kidney Pills.

To ward off Bright's disease or diabetes. Doan's have done great work in Northville.

Mrs. J. R. Cranston, 28 Center street, Northville, Mich., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in our household and have given entire satisfaction. A member of my family was troubled by a lame back and pains in the loins and when Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended, we decided to give them a trial. A supply was procured from Murdoch Bros. drug store and they soon brought relief. There has been no return of the trouble since. I have been convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills are an effective kidney remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

A Witty Revivalist.

A revivalist in Carverville enlivens his addresses with such anecdotes as this: "An old woman shouted in the revival. Her husband said: 'I felt like going through the floor.' She replied: 'And I felt like going through the roof.' Each was attracted home."—Kansas City Star.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A very interesting game of ball will be played here Saturday between the Northville Juniors and the Detroit College of Law team. The game will be called at 3 o'clock. Gents, fifteen cents and ladies ten. Everybody turn out and enjoy the fun.

"A gallon of gasoline will run an automobile twenty miles in thirty minutes on a level road," says an exchange. That's nothing. "A gallon of the same stuff has been known to run a man forty feet through a kitchen window in a quarter of a second.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. M. Brock next Monday afternoon. A musicale will be given and Temperance green tea served at 4 o'clock until all are served for ten cents. Mesdames Addie Coldren and Emma Johnson have the meeting in charge and promise any amount of good music.

Prof. John D. LaRue, for several years superintendent of the South Lyon schools, and who the past year has been taking a post graduate course at the U. of M., has accepted the position of superintendent of the Northville schools. Mr. LaRue is a progressive instructor and will no doubt keep the Northville schools up to the standard. His many friends here extend best wishes.—South Lyon Herald.

The township unit school system bill, which passed the house recently, is looked upon as a good thing. It will enable a township, if a majority of the electors so decide, to build a high school near the center of the township above the eighth grade, along the lines of cities, with their central high school. Now students in the country have to go to villages and cities and pay tuition when they pass the eighth grade.

Misery from an Upset Stomach goes in five minutes.

Take some Diapiesin now and forever end all distress from a Disordered Stomach.

Every family here ought to keep some Diapiesin in the house, as any one of you may have an attack of Indigestion or Stomach trouble at any time, day or night.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour stomach five minutes afterwards. If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin and take one triangle after supper tonight. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapiesin is a certain cure for all stomach misery, because it will take hold of your food and digest it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Actual, prompt relief for all your stomach misery is at your Pharmacist, waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to cure a case of Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Dyspepsia or Indigestion. 37-49

"Hello, is this you Nellie?"

"Yes, this is me."

"What are you going to do this afternoon?"

"No, I can't come over, but mama is going down to Schrader's again to get another Rug and wants you and your mama to go along."

"Yes, she did buy a 'Winton' a few weeks ago, but she says the price was so low that she can buy another now."

"I know, but mama says even if your father does prefer a Carpet that Schrader has a 'cracker jack' line of them too and awfully cheap. Don't tell mama I said 'cracker jack' will you and 'gee' but I hope none of the 'central' girls were listening."

"I don't know but mama says she and papa priced a lot of Couches in Detroit last week and that Schrader's prices are from two to five dollars less on exactly the same Couch."

"Oh my, yes, mama says they have simply an elegant line of them and chairs too. Those lovely Upholstered kind with jouncing springs. Mama says we will meet you at the Northville Post-Office and Schrader's is just right across the street."

"Say! Wait a minute: mama says to tell your mother that Schrader's have just got on a lot of new Leather Chairs. Gee! but they are easy to sit in."

SYNOPSIS.

Senator Morley Vernon's visit with his fiancée was interrupted by a call from his political boss at the state capital. Both regretted it, the girl more than he. Because she had arranged to attend a dinner that evening with him. She said the yearning for a national office for him. On Vernon's desk in the senate he found a red rose, accompanied by a plea for suffrage for women. He met the author, Mrs. Mary Greene, of Chicago, who proposed to convert him into voting for house resolution No. 19. Miss Greene secured Vernon's promise to vote for the suffrage resolution. He also aided her by convincing others. He took a liking to the fair suffragette. Miss Greene consulted with the lieutenant-governor. Vernon admitted to himself that the suffragette had stirred a strange feeling within him. He forgot to read his fiancée's letter. Vernon made a great speech in favor of suffrage, aided by glances from Miss Greene. The resolution was made a special order. Vernon was enthusiastic on the prospects for the resolution. He was much in Miss Greene's company. Vernon neglected the thought of Amelia. He took Miss Greene driving and laid out plans for the success of the resolution.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

"I did not care to lead a useless life," he said. "I wanted to do something—to have some part in the world's work. The law seemed to be a respectable profession and I felt that maybe I could do some good in politics. I don't think the men of my class take as much interest in politics as they should. And then, I'd like to make my own living."

"I have to make mine," said Maria Greene.

"But you never thought of teaching, or nursing, or well—painting or music, or that sort of thing, did you?"

"No," she replied; "did you?"

Vernon laughed at an absurdity that needed no answering comment, and then he hastened on:

"Of course, you know I think it fine that you should have done as you have. You must have met with discouragements."

She laughed, and Vernon did not note the bitterness there was concealed in the laugh, to him it seemed intended to express only that polite deprecation demanded in the treatment of a personal situation.

"I can sympathize with you there," said Vernon, though Miss Greene had not admitted the need of sympathy. Perhaps it was Vernon's own need of sympathy, or his feeling of the need of it, that made him confess that his own family and friends had never sympathized with him, especially with what he called his work in politics, he felt, at any rate, that he had struck the right note at last, and he went on to assure her how unusual it was to meet a woman who understood public questions as well as she understood them. And it may have been his curiosity that led him to inquire:

"How did your people feel about your taking up the law?"

Miss Greene said that she did not know how her people felt, and Vernon again had that baffled sense of her evading him.

"I've felt pretty much alone in my work," he said. "The women I know won't talk with me about it, they won't even read the newspapers. And I've tried so hard to interest them in it!"

Vernon sighed, and he waited for Miss Greene to sigh with him. He did not look at her, but he could feel her presence there close beside him. Her gloved hands lay quietly in her lap, she was gazing out over the prairies. The light winds were faintly stirring her hair, and the beauty of it, its warm red tones brought out by the burning sun, suddenly overwhelmed him. He stirred and his breath came hard.

"Do you know," he said, in a new confidence, "that this has been a great day for me? To meet you, and to know you as I think I do know you now! This morning, when I was speaking, I felt that with you to help me, I could do great things."

Miss Greene drew in her lips, as if to compress their fullness; she moved away on the seat, and raised her hand uneasily and thrust it under her veil to put back a tress of hair that had strayed from its fastening. Vernon saw the flush of her white cheeks come and go. Her eyebrows were drawn together wistfully, and in her blue eyes, that looked far away through the meshes of her dotted veil, there was a little cloud of trouble. She caught her lip delicately between the edges of her teeth. Vernon leaned slightly forward as if he would peer into her face. For him the day had grown suddenly hot, the spring had developed on the instant the oppressive heat of summer. He felt its fire; he could see its intensely vibrating in the air all about him, and he had a sense as of all the summer's voices droning in unison. The reins dropped from his listless fingers; the horse moped along as it pleased.

"I have always felt it, vaguely," Vernon went on, his voice dropping to a low tone, "and this morning it was suddenly revealed to me."

"Miss Greene raised her hand as if to draw it across her brow; her veil stopped her.

"Let's not talk about that now," she pleaded. "Let's enjoy the air and the country. I don't have them often."

Her hand fell to her lap. The color had gone out of her cheeks. And Vernon suddenly felt that the summer had gone out of the air; a cold wind was blowing as over soiled patches of snow left in shaded depressions of the fields; the earth was brown and bare; the birds were silent. He jerked the horse smartly, and it gave an angry toss of its head, as it broke into its tentative trot.

"I do wish you could know the women I know," said Vernon, obviously breaking a silence. He spoke in an entirely different voice. "I meant to put it the other way. I meant that I wish they could know you, and I mean that they shall. You would be a revelation to them."

Miss Greene smiled, though her face was now careworn, almost old.

"Right along the line of our constitutional amendment, now," he said, with a briskness, "do you think the women will become interested?"

"The women of your acquaintance, or of mine?" asked Miss Greene.

"You're guessing," said Vernon, and when Miss Greene seriously protested, Vernon said he meant all the women, as politicians pretend to mean all the people, when they mean only the party.

"I'm afraid not," she said. "They could have the ballot to-morrow if they'd only ask for it. The trouble is they don't want it."

"Well, we must educate them," said Vernon. "I have great hopes that the women whom I know will be aroused by what we are doing."

"I have no doubt they will," said Miss Greene. There was something enigmatical in her words, and Vernon glanced uneasily at her again.

"How do you mean?" he asked.

"You'll learn when you see the newspapers to-morrow," said Miss Greene.

"Do you think they'll have it in full?" asked Vernon. He was all alert, and his eyes sparkled in a new interest.

"On the first page," she replied, with conviction. "Have they your picture?"

"I don't know," Vernon replied. "They can get it, though," he added, thoughtfully.

"They keep the portraits of all distinguished public men on hand," Miss Greene said, with a certain reassurance in her tone.

"Oh, well, I hope they'll not print it," said Vernon, as if just then recalling what was expected of a distinguished public man under such circumstances.

"That's one of the penalties of being in public life," she answered with a curious smile.

"A penalty the ladies will be glad to pay when our reform is accomplished; isn't that so?" said Vernon, seeking relief in a light bantering tone.

"I thought we were not going to talk politics," she said, turning and looking at him. She adjusted her hat and held herself resolutely erect.

The sun was going down behind the prairies, the afternoon was almost gone; as they watched the sunset, Miss Greene broke the silence.

"It's a familiar sight," she said, and Vernon thought that he had a clue at last. She must know the prairies.

"It is just like a sunset at sea," she added.

When they had driven back to the town and Vernon had left her at the hotel, he turned to drive to the ivory stable.

"By George!" he said, suddenly,

speaking to himself. "I haven't read Amelia's letter!"

He fumbled in his coat pocket.

CHAPTER VIII.

Miss Greene's predictions were all realized in the sensation. Vernon's speech created. The newspapers gave whole columns to it and illustrated their accounts with portraits of Vernon, and of Maria Greene. Vernon thought of the pleasure Amelia must find in his new fame, and when he wrote to her he referred briefly but with the proper modesty to his remarkable personal triumph, and then waited for her congratulations.

The legislative session was drawing to a close; the customary Friday adjournment was not taken, but sessions were held that day and on Saturday, for the work was piling up, the procrastinating legislators having left it all for the last minute.

The week following would see house and senate sweltering in shirt sleeves and night-sessions, and now, if a bill were to become law it was necessary that its sponsor stay, as it were, close beside it, lest in the mighty rush of the last few days it be lost.

Vernon, by virtue of his speech, had assumed the championship of the woman-suffrage resolution, and he felt it necessary to forego his customary visit to Chicago that week and remain over Sunday in Springfield. He devoted the day to composing a long letter to Miss Greene, in which he described the situation in detail, and suggested that it would be well for her, if possible, to come down to Springfield on Monday and stay until the resolution had been adopted. He gave her, in closing, such pledges of his devotion to the cause of womanhood that she could hardly resist any appeal he might make for her presence and assistance.

On Monday he wired, urging the necessity of her presence. Tuesday morning brought him a reply, thanking him, in behalf of women, for his disinterested devotion to their cause, assuring him of her own appreciation of his services, and saying that she would reach Springfield Wednesday morning.

Meanwhile he had had no letter from Amelia, and he began to wonder at her silence. He was not only disappointed, but piqued. He felt that his achievement deserved the prompt recognition from her, but he found a consolation, that grew in spite of him, in the thought that Maria Greene would soon be in Springfield, and to his heart he permitted Amelia's silence to justify him in a freer indulgence of attention to this fascinating woman lawyer.

Tuesday evening the crowd, that grows larger as the session nears its close, filled the lobby of the Leland. The night was warm, and to the heat of politics was suddenly added the heat of summer. Doors and windows were flung wide to the night, and the tall Egyptians, used as they were to the sultry atmosphere of southern Illinois, strode lazily about under their wide slouch hats with waistcoats open and cravats loosened, delighting in a new cause for chaffing the Chicago men, who had resumed their customary complaints of the Springfield weather.

Sets Law of Kitcher.

A law of the kitchen has been set forth in England in an opinion by a county judge. He holds that where the mistress of a house goes to the kitchen to aid the maid of all work the two are brought on terms of equality such as would not be tolerated in larger establishments. The case was that of a cook and general maid who sought to recover a month's wages from her former mistress in lieu of notice. The mistress asserted that the servant always "answered her back," but the judge held that under the circumstances this was not sufficient to justify dismissal.

Live and Let Live.

A neatly attired but somewhat wretched middle-aged Italian woman, dressed in black, leading a little boy with each hand, called at a lawyer's office in the Land Title building recently and arranged with him to apply for a divorce. After going over the history of her case the lawyer said: "Well, I suppose you want to get alimony?"

In slightly accented, though nearly perfect English, the client replied: "I would just like to get part of his money that's all."—Philadelphia Record.

Chinamen at Communion.

An interesting visitor to St. Paul's chapel was amazed to see three Chinamen go up to the communion rail one recent Sunday, come back to their seats, and sit very quietly and intently throughout the partaking of the communion by the others.

"It is not at all strange," said the clergyman in charge. "There are very few nationalities that are not represented here in St. Paul's chapel."

JACKSON PRISON GRAFTERS NAMED

TEN ARE ON THE LIST HEADED BY ARMSTRONG AND WENGER.

ARRAIGNED MEN MUTE.

The Prison Board Begin a Regime of Accountability With Prison Officials.

The Jackson county grand jury, which for nearly five weeks had been investigating the state prison and its administration, taking an eleven-hour look into some Jackson city matters, made its report to the circuit court, Judge James Parkinson presiding, Saturday, and with that report returned 20 indictments for 19 men. Ten of these men are, or have been, connected with the prison, directly as warden or acting warden or as contractors or purveyors of prison supplies.

Of the remaining nine, eight are Jackson plumbers and not concerned in the prison matter at all. The nineteenth man is a former resident of Jackson, now living elsewhere in the United States, and whose name all the newspaper men on the job agreed to withhold, to the end that the officers may lay hands on him. He is accused of a certain Jackson city deal of no great public interest. The list of men indicted and made public follows:

ALLEN N. ARMSTRONG, ex-prison warden.

JOHN C. WENGER, acting warden, Jackson prison.

MILTON DAILY, agent for boiler twine machinery, 115 Dearborn street, Chicago.

J. A. EMMINGER, president Hoover & Gamble Co., twine machinery manufacturers, Miamisburg, Ohio.

CLYDE B. ELWOOD, agent for a brick company, Jackson, two indictments.

CHARLES A. ELLIOTT, well digger, Jackson.

FRED SNYDER, swill dealer, Jackson.

GEO. J. MAINO, boilermaker, Jackson.

M. J. NORRIS, grocer, Jackson.

CARL G. TRUMBLE, druggist, Jackson.

"Not guilty," was the plea of the eight members of the alleged "plumbers' trust," when they appeared in court late Monday to answer to the charge of entering into a conspiracy in restraint of trade. They are W. J. Dowsett, secretary of the Master Plumbers' association; John E. Murray, Jerry H. Mahoney, William J. Bell, Luther Nowlin, Wilbur H. Newhy, William Wirtz and Sebastian Wirtz.

The men were then dismissed, having been notified that they would be notified when wanted.

John C. Wenger, the acting prison warden, was arraigned on a perjury charge Tuesday. He stood mute, a plea of not guilty was entered for him and he was released on $1,000 bail, furnished by Frank B. Tiffin, hotel keeper, and Jed Blake, a farmer.

Clyde B. Elwood was then arraigned on a charge of giving bribes. There are two indictments against him, on information from Armstrong Elwood also stood mute. Bail was fixed at $500 on each indictment.

Col. S. H. Avery was among those for whom the 19 bench warrants were issued late Monday. Avery once was quartermaster of the Michigan National Guard and was head of the plumbing firm of Avery & Son. His firm had the contract for installing a plumbing in the Jackson postoffice building. It is charged that he drew more money than he was entitled to and skipped town, leaving his bondsmen to settle in the sum of $3,000. It was on their complaint that the indictment was based. Avery now lives in Idaho.

Prosecutor Reece says he does not know when he will send for Armstrong, but thinks it will be during the week.

Requisitions will be made in the cases of Agent Daly, Emminger and Avery, as they reside outside the state.

The prison board of control, with the governor, met in regular session at the prison Monday evening. The only time the appointing of a new warden was referred to at all during the meeting was when a small delegation arrived from Calhoun to support the candidacy of Ray Hart, the present county clerk of that county. The party consisted of Judge North, prosecuting Attorney Kavanaugh, C. B. Halliday and Postmaster Miles S. Curtis, of Battle Creek, each of whom addressed the governor and board and spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Hart.

No determination was reached as to whom the appointment would be given. The governor said there were about 25 applications on file and all were inclosed in a sealed package. The package was not even broken open during the time the board was in session.

The board voted to ask the state legislature for an appropriation to buy a farm. A vast amount of money is paid out by the state for supplies to run the prison which could be raised at a far less expense if a farm were connected with the institution.

The fact that a grand jury had been in session and returned a criticizing report of the management of the prison in several of its departments did not go by unnoticed by the board. Mr. Navin had more reference to make to this fact than did the governor or other members. Mr. Navin offered a number of resolutions tending toward reform.

A resolution providing that the storekeeper and superintendent of the binder twine plant check all the goods received by them in their departments and that they send invoices in to the clerk's office to be compared with the original invoices, so that a better and more complete record may be had of what is received, was offered by Mr. Navin and adopted.

Judge Adams moved that a new rule be made whereby the warden should be deprived of the right to discharge any employee of the institution without the permission of the board, and that each employee should report all irregularities to the board. This rule provides that the warden may temporarily suspend an employee, but gives the latter opportunity to have a hearing and present his side of the case before the board before he is discharged.

John C. Wenger, acting warden of the state prison, who succeeded Allen N. Armstrong, resigned, just before noon Tuesday presented his resignation to the prison board of control. He asked that the board give it speedy effect.

The board accepted the resignation, to become effective when the new warden should be appointed. When this will be is not yet known.

One thing is certain—Wenger was not asked to resign. The governor says so. Wenger probably will be prevailed upon to retain office until his successor is ready to assume the duties.

Shoots Another Lion.

Theodore Roosevelt bagged one more lion at Wami, near Kapiti. This gives him a total of four lions on the present expedition. Kermit Roosevelt succeeded in bringing down a cheetah. The hunting was exciting, and both marksmen did excellent work.

Kermit, during the greater part of the day, did more effective work with his camera than he did with his gun, he and the other members of the party, following Mr. Roosevelt, the much-prized shots.

It is rumored in native sources, but the report lacks confirmation, that the Roosevelt party will arrive at Nairobi May 15, before proceeding to Sofik.

The lion killed by Roosevelt was brought down at close range. His quick work with the rifle saved the lives of some of his mounted escort, who had narrow escapes from the infuriated beast. The accuracy of Roosevelt's marksmanship is a matter of astonishment.

To Save Missionaries.

Two battalions of Turkish troops arrived in Mersina, Thursday. It is understood that a strong detachment will at once be sent up country to Hadjin to effect the relief of the American women missionaries there who for nearly a fortnight have been besieged in their mission house by a horde of fanatical Mohammedan tribesmen from the surrounding country.

The third and last debate between Mayor Rose, of Milwaukee, and President Samuel Dickie, of Albion college, will be held in New Orleans at a date to be determined by the mayor and Chairman W. D. Cox, of the prohibition party.

ENEMIES OF WAR HOLD A CONGRESS

SECOND NATIONAL PEACE CONFERENCE IN CHICAGO.

EMINENT MEN ARE PRESENT

Statesmen, Diplomats and Political Economists Assemble and Discuss the Final Elimination of Armed Conflicts.

Chicago.—The sessions of the second National Peace Congress, which opened in Orchestra hall Monday afternoon, attracted to Chicago many thousands earnest enemies of war, among them being many distinguished statesmen, diplomats and political economists. President Taft is the honorary president of the congress, and Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson is its active president, but neither of these gentlemen are able to be present, owing to their official duties. However, there was no lack of eminent men to preside over the sessions.

As a preliminary to the congress, special peace services were held in many Chicago churches Sunday morning, peace meetings arranged by labor and socialist organizations were held in the afternoon, and in the evening there was a big mass meeting, at which addresses were delivered by Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones and Rev. Emil G. Hirsch, both of Chicago, and President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell university.

Welcome to the Congress.

Orchestra hall was filled to the limit Monday when the first session was called to order by Robert Treat Paine of Boston, the presiding officer, for governors, mayors and hundreds of clubs had been asked to appoint delegates, and most of them had responded. President Dickinson's address, the same he delivered several weeks ago before the Hamilton club, was read, and the congress was then formally welcomed by Gov. Charles S. Deneen for the state, Mayor Fred A. Busse for the city and Rev. A. Eugene Bartlett, chairman of the reception committee. The secretary then read a brief letter from President Taft, in which the chief executive heartily commended the aims of the congress. Miss Anna B. Eckstein of Boston next was introduced to the meeting and read a "World Petition" to the Third Hague Conference. This was followed by an address by Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace society, on "The Present Position of the Peace Movement."

What Has Been Accomplished.

Dr. Trueblood said in part: "Let me sketch in the barest outlines what has already been accomplished. The interpretation will take care of itself."

"The men and women, now a great host, who believe that the day is past when blind brute force should direct the policies of nations and preside at the settlement of their differences, are now thoroughly organized. A hundred years ago there was not a society in existence organized to promote appeal to the forum of reason and right in the adjustment of international controversies. To day there are more than 500, nearly every important nation—having its group of peace organizations. Their constituents are numbered by tens of thousands, from every rank and class in society—philanthropists, men of trade and commerce, educators and jurists, workmen, statesmen, rulers and even."

Triumph of Arbitration.

"The position which the peace movement has reached is no less distinctly determined by the practical attainments of arbitration. We are this year celebrating what is really the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of our movement, for it was in 1809 that David L. Dodge, a Christian merchant of New York city, wrote the pamphlet which brought the movement into being, and led six years later to the organization in his parlor in New York of the first Peace society in the world. There had then been no arbitrations between nations. In the 100 years since 1809 more than 250 important controversies have been settled by this means, not to mention an even greater number of less important cases, the settlement of which involved the principle of arbitration. Within the past 20 years so rapid has been the triumph of arbitration that more than 100 international differences have been disposed of by this means, or between five and six a year for the whole 20 years. Arbitration is no longer an experiment. It is the settled practice of the nations. A score of disputes to-day go naturally to arbitration where one gives rise even to talk of war."

The Hague Conferences.

"In order to determine further the advanced position which the peace movement has attained on its practical side, the two Hague conferences and what they have accomplished must be taken into account. It is still the habit of some persons to speak disparagingly of these great gatherings and their results. Some do it because they are satisfied with nothing short of immediate perfection; others because they wish the whole movement for the abolition of war to fail. Others do it purely from ignorance."

"What have the two Hague conferences really done toward bringing about that state of world organization and co-operation, the result of which will, as is universally conceded, bring the general peace of the world and final relief from the ruinous burdens of bloated armaments, because it will establish the reign of law among the nations as it now prevails among individuals throughout the civilized world?"

What They Have Done.

"The first Hague conference gave us the permanent international court of arbitration, to which 24 powers finally became parties by ratification of the convention. This court has now for eight years been in successful operation, and not less than four controversies have been referred to it during the past year. The second Hague conference enlarged and strengthened the convention under which this court was set up, and made the court the tribunal, not of 25 powers, but of all the nations of the world."

"Another step of still greater moment was taken by the second Hague conference in the direction of providing a perfect substitute for force in the settlement of international differences. It voted without a dissenting vote the principle of an international court of arbitral justice, holding regular sessions."

"The high water mark of the work of the second Hague conference was reached in its action in regard to future meetings of the conference. The principle of periodic meetings of the conference hereafter was approved without a dissenting voice. The date even of the third conference was fixed and the governments agreed to appoint at least two years in advance an international commission to prepare the program of the meeting."

Dean W. P. Rogers of the Cincinnati Law school brought this session to a close with an eloquent talk on "The Dawn of Universal Peace."

Addresses Monday Evening.

Monday evening's meeting was devoted to "The drawing together of the Nations," and was presided over by Dr. Hirsch. The addresses were on "Independence Versus Interdependence of Nations," by Prof. Paul S. Reusch of the University of Wisconsin; "Racial Progress Towards Universal Peace," by Rev. H. T. Keeling of Nashville, Tenn.; and "The Biology of War," by President David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford, Jr. university. At the same time another meeting was in session in Music hall, with Miss Jane Addams in the chair. The speakers there were Joseph B. Burt of Chicago, on "Fraternal Orders and Peace," Prof. Graham Taylor of Chicago Commons, on "Victims of War and Industry," Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, on "Organized Labor and Peace," and John Spargo of Yonkers, N. Y., on "International Socialism as a Peace Factor."

Commercial and Legal Views.

Two big meetings were held Tuesday morning, one on commerce and industry, presided over by George E. Roberts, president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago, and the other on "Women and Peace," with Mrs. Ellen M. Henriotin of Chicago as chairman. The former session was addressed by Belton Gilreath of Birmingham, Ala.; W. A. Mahoney of Columbus, O.; James Arbuckle, consul of Spain and Colombia, St. Louis, and Marcus M. Marks, president of the National Association of Clothiers, New York city. The women heard interesting speeches by Mrs. Philip M. Moore, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. Lucia Ames Deane of Boston.

"Some Legal Aspects of the Peace Movement" was the general topic of the Orchestra hall meeting Tuesday afternoon, and the chairman was William J. Calhoun of Chicago. Prof. William I. Hull of Swarthmore college, discussed the advances registered by the two Hague conferences, and James Brown Scott, solicitor of the state department, talked about some questions which the third Hague conference probably will consider. "Legal Problems Capable of Settlement by Arbitration," was the subject of a learned paper by Prof. Charles Cheney Hyde of Chicago.

Special Collegiate Session.

In Mandel hall, at the University of Chicago, a special session was held for universities and colleges, a feature of which was an oratorical contest participated in by students. Louis P. Lochner of Madison, Wis., spoke on "The Cosmopolitan Clubs."

The general session of Tuesday evening was perhaps the most interesting of the congress. "Next Steps in Peacemaking" was the topic. The audience was aroused to great enthusiasm by an eloquent and spirited address by Congressman Richard Bartholdt of Missouri, president of the American Group, Interparliamentary union. Another paper that met with deserved applause was that of Edwin D. Mead of Boston on "The Arrest in Competitive Armament in Fidelity to The Hague Movement."

The special collegiate session was continued Tuesday evening in Music hall, with President Nollen of Lake Forest university in the chair. President S. P. Brooks of Baylor university, Texas, spoke, and a stereoscopic lecture on the "Federation of the World" was given by Hamilton Holt of the Independent.

Among the diplomats who came to Chicago to attend the Peace congress were: Ambassador Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff of Germany; Herman de Lagercrantz, envoy from Sweden; Wu Ting Fang, envoy from China; Alfred Mitchell Innes, counselor of the British embassy, and Dr. Halvdan Kont of the University of Norway. The Japanese, Turkish and French embassies also were represented.

DOLLAR WHEAT HAS COME TO STAY

IN LESS THAN FIVE YEARS CENTRAL CANADA WILL BE CALLED UPON TO SUPPLY THE UNITED STATES.

A couple of years ago, when the announcement was made in these columns that "dollar wheat" had come to stay, and that the time was not far distant when the central provinces of Canada—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—would be called upon to supply a large part of the wheat consumption in the United States, there were many who laughed at the predictions and ridiculed the idea of wheat reaching the dollar point and staying there. "Both of these predictions have come to pass," dollar wheat is here—and it is not only here, but is here to stay; and at the same time, whatever unpleasant sensations it may arouse in the super-sensitive American, Central Canada is already being called upon to help keep up the bread supply, and within the next five years will, as James J. Hill says, literally "become the bread-basket of our increasing millions."

There are few men in the United States better acquainted with the wheat situation than Mr. Hill, and there are few men, if any, who are inclined to be more conservative in their expressed views. Yet it was this greatest of the world's railroad men who said a few days ago that "the price of wheat will never be substantially lower than it is today"—and when it is taken into consideration that at that time wheat had soared to $1.20, well above the dollar mark, the statement is peculiarly significant, and doubly significant is the fact that in this country the population is increased at the rate of 65 per cent., while the yield of wheat and other products is increasing at the rate of only 25 per cent. For several years past the cost of living has been steadily increasing in the United States, and this wide difference in production and consumption is the reason.

This difference must be supplied by the vast and fertile grain regions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. There is now absolutely no doubt of this. Even the press of the country concedes the fact. Results have shown that no other country in the world can ever hope to equal those provinces as wheat producers, and that no other country can produce as hard or as good wheat. Said a great grain man recently, "If United States wheat maintains the dollar mark, Canada wheat will be well above a dollar a bushel, for in every way it is superior to our home grown grain."

With these facts steadily impinging their truth upon our rapidly growing population, it is interesting to note just what possibilities as a "wheat grower" our Northern neighbor possesses. While the United States will never surrender her prestige in any manufacturing or commercial line, she must very soon acknowledge, and with as much grace as she can, that she is bound to be beaten as a grain producer. It must be conceded that a great deal of the actual truth about the richness of Canada's grain producing area has been "kept out of sight," as Mr. Hill says, by the strenuous efforts of our newspapers and magazines to stem the exodus of our best American farmers into those regions. It is a fact that up to the present time, although Canada has already achieved the front rank in the world's grain producers, the fertile prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have as yet scarcely been scratched. Millions of acres, free for the taking, still await our American farmers; and when these millions are gone there are other millions in regions not yet opened up to immigration. A few years ago the writer, who has been through those wheat provinces several times, laughed with others of our people at the broad statement that Canada was bound to become "John Bull's Bread Basket." Now, after a last trip (and though he is a staunch American) he frankly believes that not only will Canada be within the next decade at least become THE BREAD-BASKET OF THE UNITED STATES. Perhaps this may be a hard truth for Americans to swallow, but it is a truth, nevertheless, and it is at least a partial compensation to know that hundreds of thousands of our farmers are profiting by the fact by becoming producers in this new country.

The papers of this country have naturally made the most of the brief period of depression which swept over Canada, but now there is not a sign of it left from Winnipeg to the coast. Never have the three great wheat raising provinces been more prosperous. Capital is coming into the country from all quarters, taking the form of cash for investment, industrial concerns seeking locations, and, best of all, substantial and sturdy immigrants come to help populate the prairies. Towns are booming; scores of new elevators are springing up; railroads are sending out their branch lines in all directions; thousands of prosperous farmers are leaving their prairie shelters for new and modern homes—"built by wheat;" everywhere is a growing happiness and contentment built by wheat—the "dollar wheat," which has come to stay. Notwithstanding this, the Canadian Government is still giving away its homesteads and selling pre-emptions at $3.00 an acre, and the Railway and Land Companies are disposing of their lands at what may be considered nominal figures.

NEW STRENGTH FOR OLD BACKS.

No Need to Suffer Every Day from Backache.

Mrs. Joannah Straw, 526 North Broadway, Canton, S. D., says: "For three years I suffered everything with rheumatism in my limbs and a dull, ceaseless aching in my back. I was weak, languid, broken with headaches and dizzy spells, and the kidney secretions were thick with solids. I was really in a critical condition when I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, and they certainly did wonders for me. Though I am 51 years old, I am as well as the average woman of 50. I work well, eat well and sleep well."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a humming sound or in some cases you have a ringing sound or in some cases you have a roaring sound. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammation of the mucous membrane. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH CURE. Send for circular, free.

The Small Brother Again.

It was the first warm night of springtime, and they sat out in the park under the stars. Suddenly there was the sound of a snapping twig in the tree near them. "Dear me, George," she whispered. "What kind of a tree is that?" George looked up and discovered a pair of juvenile eyes peering through the branches. "H'm," he muttered, sheepishly. "Looks to me like a rubber tree."

Bad Breath

"For months I had great trouble with my stomach and all kinds of medicines. My tongue has been actually as green as grass, my breath having a bad odor. Two weeks ago a friend recommended Castoria and after using them I can willingly and cheerfully say that they have entirely cured me. I therefore let you know that I shall recommend them to any one suffering from such troubles."—Chas. H. Halpern, 114 E. 7th St., New York, N.Y.
