SYNOPSIS.

"Mad" Dan Maitland, on reaching his New York bachelor club, met an attractive young woman at the door. Janitor O'Hagan assured him no one had been within that day. Dan discovered a woman's finger prints in dust on his desk, along with a letter from his attorney. Maitland dineil with Bannerman, his attorney. Dan set out for Greenfields, to get his family jewels. During his walk to the country seat; he met the young woman in gray, whom he had seen leaving his bachelors' club. Her auto had broken down. He fixed it By a ruse she "lost" him. Maitland, on reaching home, surprised lady in gray, cracking the safe containing his gems She, apparently, took him for a well-known crook. Daniel Anisty. Haif-hypnotized, Maitland opened his safe, took therefrom the jewels, and gave them to her, first forming a partnership in crime. The real Dan Anisty; sought by police of the world, appeared on the same mission. Maitland-overcame him He met the girl outside the house and they sped on to New York in her auto. He had the jewels and she promised to meet him-that day. Maitland received a "Mr. Snaith"

"I am just out of bed"

Mr Snaith knitted his brows, evi dently at a loss whether to ascribe Maitland's exclamation as due to sur-prise, regret, or relief Which pleased Maitland, who had been at pains to make his tone noncommittal In point of fact he was neither surprised nor Higgins became alarmed and re moved the gag. Anisty lay quiet until his face resumed its normal color and then began to abuse Higgins for a thick-headed idiot."

Mr. Snath interrupted himself to chuckle lightly.

"You noticed a resemblance?" he resumed.

Maitland, too, was smiling. Some thing of the sort."

"It is really remarkable, if you will permit me to say so" Snaith was studying his host's face intently "Higgins, coor fellow, had his faith shaken to the foundations. This Anisty must be a clever actor as well as a master burglar. Having cursed Higgins root and branch, he got his second wind and explained that he was—Mr. Maithand! Conceive Higgins' position What could he do?"

"What he did, I gather."

"Why," crisply, "didn't you send the constables from Greenfields, ac-

"This is getting tiresome," Maitland

Snaith's eyes were keen upon him "Stranger things have been known And yet—the motive is lacking. You are not financially embarrassed—so fur as we can determine, at least,"

Maitland politely interposed his fin gers between his yawn and the detective's intent regard. "You have ten minutes more, I'm sorry to say,

"Ah?" "Yes." Snaith bent forward, elbows on knees, hat and cane swinging, eyer implacable, hard, relentless. "Anisty." he said, slowly, 'left a tolerably com plete burglar's kit in your library."

stractedly with his cane while the young man plucked at the drawstring. "Denced tight knot, this," commented Maitland, annoyed. "No matter. Don't trouble, please. I'm quite satisfied, believe me."

"Oh, you are!" Maitland turned, and in the act of turning, the loaded head of the cane landed with crushing force upon his temple. For an instant he stood swaving eyes closed, face robbed of every ves-tige of color, deep lines. of agony graven in his forehead and about his mouth; then fell like a lifeless thing, limp and inveriebrate.

The soi-disant Mr. Snaith caught him and let him gently and without sound to the floor.

"Poor fool!" he commented, kneeling to make a hasty examination. 'Hope I haven't done for him. . . . It would be the first time.

Bad precedent! . . . So: He's all right—conscious within an hour. . . Too soon!" he added, standing and looking down. "Well, turn about's fair

He swung on his heel and entered the hallway, pausing at the door long enough to shoot the bolt; then passed hastily through the other chambers, searching, to judge by his manner.

In the end a closed door attracted him; he jerked it open, with an exclamation of resief. It gave upon a large bare room, used by Maitland as a trunk closet. Here were stout leather straps and cords in ample measure. quickly but with care, choosing the strongesz

In two more minutes, Mattland, trussed, gagged, still uncon breathing heavily, occupied a divan in his smoking-room, while his assailant, in the bedroom, ears keen to catch the least sound from without was rapidly and cheerfully arraving himself in the Maitland gray-striped flarmels and accessories, even to the gray socks which had been specified. "The less chances one takes, the better," sulloquized "Mr. Snaith."

He stood erect, in another man's shoes, squaring back his shoulders, discarding the disguising stoop, and confronted his image in a pier-glass. "Good enough Maitland," he com-merted, with a little satisfied nod to his, counterfest presentment. we'll make it better still." A single quick jerk denuded his uper lip; he stewed the mustache care fully away in his breast pocket. The moistened corner of a towel make quick work of the crow's feet about his eyes, and, simultaneously, robbed him of a dozen apparent years. A pair of yellow chamois gloves, placed conveniently on a dressing table, covered hands that no art could make resemble Maitland's. And it was Daniel Matt land, who studied himself in the pierglass

Contented, the criminal returned to the smoking-room. A single glance assured him that his victim was still dead to the world. He sat down at the deak, drew off the gloves, and opened the bag; a peep within which was enough. With a deep and slow intake of breath he knotted the drawstring and dropped the bag into his pocket. A jeweled cigarette case of unique design shared the same fate:

Quick eyes roaming the desk ob-served tha telegram form upon which Maitland had written Cressy's name and address. Momentarily perplexed, the thief pondered this; then, with a laughing oath, seized the pen and scribbled, with no attempt to imitate the other's handwriting; a message: "Regret unavoidable detention." Letter of explanation follows." To this Maitland's name was signed.

That ought to clear him neatly, if I inderstand the emergency.

The third rose, folding the telegraph biank, and returned to the bedroom, taking up his hat and the murderous cane as he went. Here he gathered together all the articles of clothing that he had discarded, conveying the mass to the trunkroom, where an empty and unlocked kit-bag received it all.

"That, I think, is about all." He was very methodical, this criminal, this Anisty. Nothing essential escaped him. He rejoiced in the minutiae of detail that went to cover up his tracks so thoroughly that his campaigns were as remarkable for the clues be did leave with malicious design, as for those that he didn't One final thing held his attention: bowl of hammered brass, inverted beneath a ponderous book, upon the Why? In a twinkling he had removed both and was studying the nupression of a woman's hand in the dust, and nodding over it.

"That girl," deduced Anisty. "Nov ice, poor little fool?-or she wouldn't have wasted time searching here for the jewels Good looker, thoughfrom what little he"-with a glance at Maitland—"gave me a chance to see of her. Seems to have snared him, all right, if she did miss the haul, 🔩 Little idiot! What right has a woman in this business, anyway? Well, here's one thing that will never land me in the pen." As, with nice care, he replaced both bowl and book, a door slammed below stairs fook him to the hall in an in-Maitland's Fanama was hanging on the hatrack. Maitland's collect.on of walking sticks bristled in a stand beneath it. Anisty appropriated the former and chose one of the latter 'Fair exchange" he considered, with a harsh laugh. "After all, he loses nothing . . . but the jewels."

He was out and at the foot of the stairs just as O'Hagan reached the ground floor from the basement.

"Ah, O'Hagan!" The assumption of Maitland's ironic drawl was impec-cable. O'Hagan no more questioned it than he questioned his own sanity. Here, send this wire at once, please; and," pressing a coin into the ready palm, "keep the change. I was hur-ried and didn't bother to call you. And, I say, O'Hagan!" from the outer door:

"If that fellow Snaith ever calls again, I'm not at home.'

"Very good, sor."
Anisty permitted himself the slightest of smiles, pausing on the stoop to draw on the chame's gloves. As he did so his eye flickered disinterestedly over the personality of a man standing on the opposite walk and staring at the apartment house. He was a short man, of stoutish habit, sloppily dressed, with a derby pulled down over one eye, cigar butt protruding arregardly from beneath a heavy black niustache, beefy cheeks, and thick soled boots dully polished.

Costly Necklaces.

The most costly necklace in the world belongs to the Counters Henckel, a lady well known in London to the Countess and Paris society, the value of which is said to be $250,000. It is really composed of three necklaces, each of historic interest. One was the property of the ex-queen of Naples, sister of the late Austrian empress; the second, once the property of a Spanish gran-dee, while the third was formerly owned by the Empress Engenie. Not long ago a necklace composed of 412 pearls, in eight rows, the property of the late duchess of Montrose, was sold for $60,000. The Empress Frederick of Germany is said to have possessed a necklace of 35 pearls, worth at least 'Mr. Snaith" selected one from them $200,090. while Lady Ilchester's necklace of biack pearls is valued at about $125,000.

CHAPTER I

Carrington folded the document and thoughtfully balanced it on his palm. What an ironical old world it was! There was a perpendicular wrinkle about his nose, and his lips had thinned into a mere line which drooped at the corners. The dione of a typeat the corners. The drone of a type-writer in the adjoining room sounded above the rattle tattle of the street Through the open windows came à vague breath of summer redo lent of flowers and grasses; for it was but eleven o'clock of the morning and the smell of sun-baked brick and asphalt had not yet risen through the air. Far beyond the smoking, ragged sky-line Carringfor could see the shift-ing, glittering river and the great ships going down to the sea. Presently the ashes from his dead cigar fell in a gray cascade down his coat and tumbled across his kness, but he gave Ironical old world, indeed! Here, suddenly and unexpectedly, he found himself upon the battlefield of love and duty, where all honest men find themselves, sooner or later. To pit the heart against the conscience, impulse against calculation! Heigh ho! Duty is an implacable goddess, and those who serve her most loyally are ruthlessly driven. She buffets us into this corner and into that, digs pitfalls for the hesitant foot, and crushes the vacillating.

As all men will, Carrington set about to argue down his conscience, the heart is so insistent a counselor. Why should he give up the woman he loved, simply because duty demanded he should? After all, was not duty merely social obligation? What was it to him that the sheep were sheared? Was it right that he, or all men, should divide the house, throw the black pall of dishonesty over it, de-stroy his own happiness and hers, when so simple a thing as a match would crumble into nothingness this monument to one man's greed and selfishness? The survival of the fittest; if he put aside Self, who-would thank him" Few, and many would thank him" Few, and many would call him a fool or a meddler. So many voices spoke that he seemed to hear none distinctly.

He alone had made these astonishing discoveries; he alone had fol lowed the cunningly hidden trail of the serpent He could stop where he was and none would be the wiser. To be sure, it was only a question of time when the scandal would become public through other channels, but in that event he would not be held responsible for biinging about the catastrophe. Resides, the ways of the sepent are devious and many, and other investigators might not come so close to the trail.

He had gone about his investigations without the least idea where ould lead him. beginning he had believed that the guilty ones were none higher than petty offi cials; but presently he found himself going over their heads, higher and higher, until, behold! he was at the lair of the old serpent himself A client had carelessly dropped a bit of information, and it had taken seed with this surprising result. Henry Cavenaugh, millionaire promoter, financier, trust magnate, director in a hundred money-gathering concerns, Henry Cavenaugh, the father of the girl he loved and who loved him! Could it be he, indeed? It seemed in-

It was not a case of misappropriation of funds, such as a man may be guilty of when temporarily hard pressed. It was a bold and fraudulent passing of dividends that rightfully belonged to the investors; of wrongfully issuing statements of bolstered expenses, lack of markets, long strikes (promoted by Cavenaugh and his associates!), insufficient means of trans portation. An annual dividend of. seven per cent. of many millions that had been dishonestly passed over. The reports that there would be no dividends encouraged a slump in the listed price of the stock, and many had sold under par value, thereby netting to Cavenaugh and others several millions. And the proof of all this lay in his hand!

It had been a keen hunt. Many and many a blind trail had he followed, to come back to the start again. All that now remained for him to was to pass this document on to the hands of the intrepid district attorney, and justice would be meted out to the keen blue eyes, an aggressive chin, a bis whole heart went out unreserved repellent mouth, Henry Cavenaugh was ly to the girl. the personification of the modern Croesus. Immutable in purpose, dozged in perseverance, a relentless enemy, a Jesuit in that the end always justified the means, he stood a pillar in the world of finance, where there is sometimes justice, but never any mercy. Thirty-five years before he had been a messenger in a stock-broker's office. Of his antecedents nothing was known uptil he broke one of the famous gold corners in the seventies, when a handsome, ruddycheeked little Irishman bobbed un se enely from nowhere in particular and laimed to be the great Cavenaugh's father. But his proofs were not conyincing, and when the son showed a decided contempt for him, he gently subsided into cultivion and was heard of no more. From time to time Carrington gathered a small crumb of informátion regarding his sweetheart's grandfather; but whenever he broached the subject, however tactfully, everybody concerned headed the onversation for a different port.

Carrington had never laid eyes on the old gentleman, and, for all he knew to the contrary, he might be a myth. He reasoned that in all probability the grandfather was illiterate, uncouth, and rather an awkward piece of family furniture to handle, when the family were ingratiating themselves into the Chippendales of society. Unfortunately, Mother Cavenaugh, good hearted and amiable in her way; had been stung by the bee of the climbers. and her one ambition was to establish herself and daughters in society; and had not he, Carrington, come of an aristocratic family (poor, it is true), the doors of the Cavenaugh manor would never have opened to his knock Even as it was, he was persona non grata to the millionaire, who was mad for a duke in the family. Besides Cave naugh had his suspicions of any law yer who grubbed outside the breast

Some doves circled above a church spire a few streets over the way, breaking the sunbeams against their polished wings. Finally they settled on the slate roof and fell to strutting waddling and swelling their breasts pompously. Carrington opened and refolded the document, but he did not take his eyes from the doves.

Resolutely He Thrust the Document Into His Pocket.

What should he do? What ill wind had blown this thing into his doorway? Nothing had warned him of the impending tangle. Until two days ago Cavenaugh was at the other end of the world, so far as his investigations at that time were concerned - charred, to the floor He shragged his shoulders. Chivalry of this sort was bush the winter money. not the order of the day. There was something stronger than the voice of something voice of the heart; it was the voice of pity, which urged its appeal for the hundreds of men and women who had invested their all in the Cavenaugh concerns. The thought of their ulti-mate run, should Cavenaugh be permitted to pursue his course unchecked, bore beavily upon him. Not be could not do it. He must fight, even if he lost his all in the battle. It is a fine thing to right a wrong. All the great victories in the world have been won for others than the victors. That Cavenaugh was the father of the girl he loved must have no weight on the scales of justice.

Resolutely he thrust the document into his coat pocket, closed his desk and relighted his cigar. In that mo-ment he had mapped out his plan of That very night he would lay the whole thing very clearly before the girl herself, and whatever decision she made, he would stand or fall by it, for he knew her to be the soul of honor. Poor girl! It was a heart-breaking business. How in the world should he begin, and where should he stop? Ah, that was it! He would lay the matter before her in a manner that would conceal the vital nearness of the case, as if it were some client of his who was unknown to her. And when she judged the case, he would speak the bald truth. It would be a cruel blow, but nevertheless he must deal it. She loved her father, and after his own peculiar fashion her fa ther loved her. She was the only one in the family who could wheedle him out of a purpose; to the rest of the family his word was law immutable. It was very bard, sighed Carrington. For the father he had neither pity nor

"Marry my daughter?" Cavenaugh roared, emphasizing his wrath and disapproval with a bang of fist upon palm. "My daughter shall marry only among her equals, not among her in feriors. A king is not good enough There was another bang of the fist, decided and final. "A Not if I know myself. wouldn't trust a lawyer out of sight: bluntly, "Kate shall marry a duke or a prince, if I can find one suitable. Carrington would have smiled had the moment been less serious.-"No man can possibly appreciate her worth more readily than I, sir," he replied, "or love her more dearly "Love?" with a snort. "Twaddle out of story-books!"

"But you yourself love her." "I'm her father," Cavenaugh returned complacently, adding a gesture which had the effect of describing the fact that it was perfectly logical for a father to love his daughter, but that it wasn't logical at all for any other male biped to love-her.

"I am-sorry," said the disheartened suitor, rising. "I suppose that after this unpleasant interview-

"Oh, you're a decent sort," interrupt ed Cavenaugh generously; "and if you are of a mind to behave yourself hereafter, you will always find a chair at my table. But my daughter is not for you, sir, emphatically not. That is all, sir;" and Cavenauch picked " and Cavenaugh picked up his évening paper.

After such a rebuff, most young men would have given up; but Carrington never gave up till there was no possiof winning. Immediately after the interview he went to the higher court with his appeal.

"Let us have patience," the girl "I'll undertake to bring whispered. him to reason."

But Carrington went home night without his love for the father increasing any.

And so the matter stood at the presentstime. The affair had gone neither forward nor backward.

An, were he less honest, how easily he could bring the old curmudgeon to There was that in his pocket which would open the way to the altar quickly enough. But Carrington was manly and honest to the core, and to him blackmail stood among the basest of crimes. Many times during the past 48 hours the tempter had whispered in his ear that here was a way out of his difficuities; but the young man had listened unmoved.

During the summer and autumn months of the year the Cavenaughs lived at their country place over in New Jersey, and there Carrington spent the week-ends. There were horses to ride, golf and tenuis, and a Saturday night dance at the Country club. To be with the girl you love, even if you can't have her, is some compensation Cavenaugh never joined the fetes and sports of the summer colonists, but he offered no objections to the feminine members of his household for selecting Carrington as their escort for the week-ends. Indeed, by now he began to consider Carrington as a harmless, sensible, well-groomed young man, who relieved him of all the painful duties to the frivolous, If the colonists insisted on coupling his daughter's name with Carrington's, let them do so, when the proper moment came he would distillusionize them

For himself, he always had some good old crony down to while away the dull Sundays; and together they consum mated plans that gave the county of the plans that gave the coup de grace to many a noble business gal-This particular summer there He struck a match. The Spirit of Work

The amount of work which each man accomplishes during the day depends upon other factors than the mere hours of labor, and the most important of these factors is the spirit in which the work is done. The spirit of the day's work will depend upon the personal relation which exists between the office and the workshop. the employer is known to be interested in the welfare of his men, they will be, more truly than otherwise his retainers, more zealous for the prosperity of his business; but if his relation to them is that of a taskmas they will be his slaves, merely, and quite capable of any treachery. effort of the employer who would gain the loyal service of his men must be to preserve in every possible way the individuality of the employe, to emphasize his manhood, and thus to increase his self-respect.-J. Keeps Heat "Just Right" Both Day and Night is the only device that aulomatically provides for a higher temperature in the morning without losing thermostatic control through the night.

For example:

Suppose you want to reduce the temperature of the house to 60 degrees during the night, but would like to have it at 70 degrees by the time the family arises.

Before retiring, you set back the controller to 60 degrees. Then you set the time clock attachment to bring the temperature up to 70 at seven o'clock.

In spite of any sudden changes out-doors during the night, the Controller will maintain the temperature you wish, and the faithful clock will open the drafts in time to give you the desired warmth in the morning.

And then all day the Controller goes right on keeping your house warmed "just right."

It is adapted for use with steam, not water or hot air.

Why not unload your heating worries on the "Jewell" and save money too?

Believe in Wisdom of - People's Judgment.

Names of possible candidates for governor are already being heard. Some of them are actively receptive others passively so, while still others are regarded as having qualities which make them eligible. Thus far the state has neard most of the present lieutenant-governor, Patrick H. Kelley, and it has always been Kelley's fortune to have a wave of genial regard follow the mention of his name. He is not as widely been attending college. known personally as he might be, although his famous automobile tour in Warner's behalf helped introduce him to a goodly portion of the voters in the lower peninsula, but he is widely and favorably known for his characteristics, which are stanchness of conviction, cleanliness of reputation and ability which was shown in his handling the senate better than it has been bandl ed_in thirty years. Moreover, he is old-fashioned enough to retain his belief in the wisdom of the people's judgment and this has served to make him a valuable fighter on the side of popular measures. He enters the campaign with a favorable record, but it will be necessary for him to make himself more intimately known to the individual voter if he would duplicate for the governor ship the tremendous vote piled up for him for the lieutenant-governor ship.—Detroit News June 12

Guides led the force to the vicin ity of the Tagalog village Night fell and the Tagalogs were all unsus picious of the approach of the white enemy At three o'clock in the morn ing, when sleep always hangs heavy on the eyes. Bell led his men loward the The Tagalogs had sentinels posted along an outlyingsline After the manner of the people of the plains the soldiers crept silently between the pickets, only one of whom was vigi lant enough to detect the presence tne enemy He was silenced before he had a chance to startle the air with a cry or a Straight into the village went Beil at the head of his men Dawn streaks were beginning to show in the sky, but the warriors were asleep past the ordinary waking, for were not the sentinels posted, and were they not bound by every tradition of tribal honor to be awake and watch-

Lieut. Bell had given his men orders The village was cordoned with troops and there wasn't a mousehole of escape Bell has a whimsical humor. In the very heart of the Tagalog village was an old muzzle-loading brass cannon, a trophy taken by the Tagalogs from the Spaniards of another day, and which the natives were hoping to use against the equally hated Americans. Bell detailed a loading party of three men. The three became boys again, and they rammed the piece full of powder and grass wadding, after the manner of loading a Fourth of July cannon on the village green in the home land

The light of coming day was strong enough for the conducting of operations. A lanyard was pulled and the brazen piece roased out its reveille. The sound of it shook the foundations of the Tagalog huts; it roused the warrior sleepers as would the cracking of doomsday. They came armed, but naked to the fray The Tagalogs looked on bayonet points and down gun barrels and surrender came instanter.

Gen. J. Franklin Bell is the youngest officer who ever held the position of chief of staff. He is a genial general and he is willing to talk when he properly may on the subjects touching his profession. As the joker put it, he is a Bell who knows when to ring off. He avoids the sins of silence and of speech, wherein he shows that he is wiser in his generation than some of his predecessors were in their generation.

When his promotion came the chief of staff jumped from a captaincy to a brigadier generalship, and his tremendous rank stride did not bring forth one word of criticism from soldier or civilian. Since then he has become a major general. army officers who were jumped said that Bell carned his promotion, and that if other promotions were, like his, based solely on service quality, there would be no heart burnings under

When the Seventh cavalry, in which Gen. Bell was then a lieutenant, reached the Philippines, the Spanish troops were still in possession, for Dewey had reduced the fleet, but not Manila city and its immediate defenses. Information was wanted concerning the Spanish earthworks. Lieut Bell volunteered to get it. He didn't tell any one powerful swimmer On that night he swam the entire distance around the bay, landing now and then to get a closer look at the enemy's waterfront fortifications He did this unseen of any If discovery had come it meant almost certain death to the swimmer. He came back to his starting point with full knowledge of the strength of the Spaniards in heavy guns, and when the time for the assault came, the information was of priceless service.

Gen Bell was called on while in the Philippines to end the war in Batangas He ended it, and in ending it he took the only course possible -a course that the civilians at a distance from the fighting denounced as altogether too severe Bell was=called a second Weyler, and a second duke of Alva, but when full knowledge came of his operations and of the craft and horrid cruelty, of the natives whom he was fighting, criticism died. Of his experience and of the criticism he said in a letter to a friend:

"Knowing my disposition and kindly feeling toward the natives full well, you will have no difficulty in understanding that the necessity for severe measures has been a source of distress to The only consolation I can derive is by keeping my thoughts on the end and object in new -When one has worked faithfully, conscientiously, and unseifishly for his country four years, without relaxation or rest, it is some discouraging, not to say distressing, to find that even some of his own countrymen appear to no confidence in his motives, judgment or integ-

He wears a medal of honor for charging "single-handed and alone." a body of armed Filipinos. He was shot at repeatedly from every quarter, but in army parlance: "They didn't get him," but he got seven of them, not dead, but alive, and he led back to the American lines, his septet of prisoners, all cowering under his pointed pistol, though every man jack of them was armed.

If war were to come there is no army doubt, although he is far from being the ranking officer of the service, that Gen. Bell would be given the chief command of the field forces.

It needs neither the bearing nor the uniform of Lieut. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee (retired), to show that he is a soldier. You can see it in his face. His expression is at once mild and aggressive, and the eye is purposeful. Gen. Chaffee's name comes most readily to the lips when one is asked to name a typical American soldier

The former chief of staff of the army was an enlisted man, serving in the regulars. He joined in 1861, choosing the cavalry arm of the service, and to it he remained faithful through all the years of his duty. He is one of the finest riders that the army claims.

There have been many stories of Japanese spies who have been found taking notes of American army operations and equipment. The Japs got their first object lesson in the way American soldiers do things from Gen. Chaffee. That ob-lect lesson doubtless has had some influence in modifying the thought which the orientals held that they could whip the Americans out of hand Gen. Chaffee was in command of the expedition which went to the relief of the beleaguered embassies at Peking. Japanese officers and men saw him there. The general won a fame in China which is not confined to the American continent.

The generals of Europe have given testimony that Adna R. Chaffee is a great soldier Orders to take command of the Chinese expedition reached Gen. Chaffee while he was at Nagasaki on board a steamer which was to take him to the Phil ippines The order was unexpected, and the general had practically no chance for campaign preparations. He was to go into a strange land, to lead an expedition against a strange people, and not only was it expected of him that he be successful, but that success be won quickly, for the lives of many Americans were in danger within sight of the walls of the "Forbidden City." The general arrived at Tien-tsin too late to take part in the battle in which the brave Maj Liscum of the Ninth infantry lost-his life only was the American soldier spurred to quick marching action by the knowledge of the imminent peril of the Americans at Peking, but he was spurred by the knowledge that the soldiers of other nations were to take part in the relief expedition, and he wished the men of his own coun try to show themselves worthy in the sight of the men of other countries.

They did show themselves worthy, and they re sponded to the call of their commander with an alacrity that made the American leaders instead of followers in that march beset with difficulties and dangers almost unparalleled · fare.

There are men in the army to-day who firmly believe that Gen Chaffee did not sleep an hour during the march to Peking. The soldiers who made the march declare that the nights in China are black; that it is impossible to see anything at all without the aid of artificial light, and these in the bivouacs of the soldiers were forbidden for precautionary reasons There was no definite knowledge of the forces that might be in the path of the expedition, and no one knew what surprises the night might cover Gen. Chaffee, his soldiers say, constituted himself a sentinel who refused to be relieved from guard, and through the nights he was alert and watching, and through the days he was alert and marching.

There are stories by the scores of men who are supposed to bear charmed lives. The hero of the book of fiction sheds bullets as a slate roof sheds rain, and in the reading of it one finds it hard to believe that any truth could be stranger than this fiction. If Gen. Chaffee doesn't bear a charmed ife he has the largest allowance of luck that has fallen to any one man.

Gen. Chaffee has been four times brevetted for bravery. Two of the brevet commissions came te him for gallantry in the civil war service, and two for gallantry in battles with the Indians. He once d a cavalry charge over rough and precipitous bluffs, where a cavalry charge was thought to be a feat well-nigh impossible.

He rode at the head of his men straight into a body of armed Indians, scattering them, but not until they had poured volley after volley into Chaffee's oncoming command. That charge gave the soldier his brevet commission as a lieutenant colonel.

When the Spanish-American war broke out Chaffee was made a brigadier general of volunteers. He was in the very thick of the fighting in front of Santiago. Capt. Arthur Lee, a British army officer detailed by his government to watch the field operations in Cuba, attached himself to the headquarters of Gen. Chaffee. Capt Lee wrote a story about the campaign in which he paid to Gen. Chaffee the highest tribute that it is possible for one seldier to pay to another

PRESSED HARD Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in one of the southern states says:

"My mother, since her early childhood, was on inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach. "Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavour of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family were so well pleased with it, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times arxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with heheart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

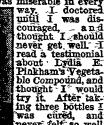

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Read, "The Road to Wellville," pkgs. "There's a Reason."

"I was not told the whole truth"-William Jennings Bryan

In a speech made in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas in December last, Hon. William Jennings Bryan said-

"The trip through your fertile valley has been a succession of surprises to me and the only fault I can find is that I was not told the whole truth. The development surpasses the reports which I had heard. I am pleased with the soil and the climate, and besides having natural advantages you havethe advantage of irrigation.

"You are creating wealth and what you make you are entitled to. You are earning legitimate fortunes."

Yes and liberal fortunes too, for money is made quickly and easily in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas. Profits of from $300 to $1000 an acre are the rule, not the exception. Why don't you do the same-you don't need much capital. You can buy the few acres you need on easy terms and the first crop, if properly, cared for, should more than pay for the land. O. Riggs, Mercedes, Texas, bought ten acres last fall. Including clearing, plowing, etc., it cost $2040. He has shipped enough beans from the land to pay for it in less than six-months and can raise another crop before the year is out. Very low excursion fares via Rock Island-Frisco Lines twice month. It will pay you to see for yourself.

Write teday for full information about big profits growers are making in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas, and a set of colored post cards of Texas Gulf Coast Scenes.
