I knew him at Mt. Pleasant and Pat Kelley 1s a good man and will make a good governor. As I see it there is really nothing to it but Kelley. Two years ago the opposition to Gov. Warner was unit ed for Dr. Bradley, and this time with the vote hopelessly divided, Kelley will have an easy time. Thousands of republicans were opposed to Guy. Warner on the third term issue alone; now these same voters are not goingto hold this prejudice against Kelley, and if Martindale or Musselman. or both of them, come in why it's fust that much easier for Kelley."-Charlotte Republican.

HE headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution are situated in Washington. These women, who are engaged in the work of keeping alive patriotic memories. have in a nearly completed form, one of the most beautiful buildings in the capital city. If the forming of the many societies in which membership is based on the having of an ancestor who fought or did something else for his country a century or so ago serves no other purpose, it at least is the means of bringing to light some more than half hidden bits of American history too interesting to be lost to sight or memory. For the last few years the genealogy departments of the Congressional library and of the reference libraries all over the country have been more popular with the masses than any other rooms in the buildings. There are gathered daily throngs composed to the five-sixths part of women studying away for dear life in the endeavor to find trace of some ancestor_who saw the whites of the British eyes at Bunker hill or at the Cowpens in the Carolinas. The discoveries made by these delv-ers into family histories, if put into a volume, would form a valuable addition to the graver records of a government. Some matters touch ing Benedict Arnold, which were perhaps well enough known a century ago, but which have lapsed into forgetfulness, were found not long ago, by a "revolutionary daughter" who for certain reasons was trying to find something to lighten Benedicr's black history.

When it is once said with truth that a man is traitor to his country the damnation is deep enough to keep his contemporaries and a following generation or two from any attempt to find anything that might redeem the traitor's soul from utter blackness. Benedict Arnold's name is blotted out of the revolutionary roll of honor on the walls of the chapel at West Point. On some monuments and on many a page of history Arnold's name appears, but nowhere may it be seen separated from the title "traitor. The English, who were to have profited by Arnold's treason, hated the traitor after he had poined their ranks. British-officers would hold no fellowship with him and his memory is execrated in England to-day. The British loyalists who left the colonies at the outbreak of the revolutionary war and went their way into New Brunswick showed Arnold when he afterward went to dwell among them that they held him in nothing short of loathing. Arnold has been likened unto Nero and Nero has gained by the com-parison. Nero merely fiddled as Rome went up in flames, while Arnold is pictured as smiling exultantly at the builing under his orders of his birthplace and at the subsequent putting of many of the surrendered Americans to the sword.

It is told that when New London and Groton were attacked and burned Arnold, commanding the attacking forces, had no word of reproof for the officer who, upon receiving the sword of Col. William Ledyard, the American commander, in token of surrender, murdered the colonial soldier with the weapon which he had presented hilt on to his conqueror. This is the midnight scroll and that upon it may ap pear a small tracing in letters of light is a matter of interest, though it may do nothing toward the redeeming of a name.

It was a Daughten of the Revolu-tion, Mrs. Gilbert W. Warren of Ilion, N. Y., who brought attention to a well-nigh forgotten fragment of Arnold's history. Mrs Warren, who died recently, was a descendant of Col. William Ledyard, who was killed with his own sword after he had surrendered it to an officer serving un-der Arnold. Naturally Mrs. Warren would not be moved by any hereditary love for Arnold to start her digging up nice things about him. It happens, however, that Mrs. Warren's husband, who survives her, is collaterally descended from Gen Joseph Warren, who fell at Bunker hill. This fact led to the discovery of something which was used as a sort offset"to Arnold's treatment of the unlucky Americans who met his forces along the banks the Connecticut Thames.

Gen. Arnold had met Gen. Warren in the early spring of 1775 and had formed a strong personal liking for him. When Warren was killed it was found that he had left no means for the support and education of his four children. Arnold became deeply interested in the matter and brought the children's condition to the attention of the continental congress, which promised to'do something for the little ones, but dilly-dallied over the matter. Arnold had an idea that the congress might not act quickly and so he wrote a letter tender solicitude to Mercy Schollay, who was caring for the Warren children, their mother having died some time before. In this letter Arnold, nearly impoverished himself, sent an order for with instructions that he should be drawn upon for more as soon as it was needed. This contribution of the traitor saved Elizabeth, Joseph. Mary and Richard Warren from destitution. Arnold was not satisfied with this, but-he wrote spurring letters to Sam Adams and John Transcock, of the committee which had the proposed congressional appropriation in hand. Then he sent home some money and said: "Send Richard, who is now old enough to the best school that can be found, clothe him handsomely, give him all that he needs and call upon me for any future expense.'

How much food for thought may be found in one of the letters of Benedict Arnold, traitor, written to Miss Schollay just before his treason He had sent more money and had congratulated the children on the prospect that the money from congress would be speedily forthcoming. "A country," said Arnold, "should be ever grateful to the patriot who lays down his life in its defense. 'Greater love hath no man than this.'"

What surging thought must have whelmed this man's brain as he wrote these words. That letter was received just at the time that Arnold began negotiations with Clinton. School histories say that after the revolution Arnold passed all his time in England. He lived, however, for a long period in St. John, New Brunswick. There he engaged in commer-cial pursuits, sending out trading vessels to the West Indies. His neighbors, though, as has been said, were largely refugees; had stood by king and crown. They gave Arnold to un derstand that they did not like his company. They hanged him in efficy once or twice, taking care that the effigy bore the word "Traitor" in effigy bore the word "Traitor" in place of business burned. It was heavily insured. The companies refused to pay, openly charging that either Arnold or his son had acted the incendiary. The case went into the courts and the insurance course and t panies finally paid. Arnold pocketed the money and left the town, the occasion of his leaving being made one of tremendous rejoicing by the inhabitants throughout all the land.

It will be interesting to note whether in the new chapel which is being erected at West Point the name of Gen. William Hull will appear on the wall with the names of other officers who served in the land forces of the United States during the second war with Great Britain Gen. Hull surren dered Detroit to the English and afterward was court-martialed for do

The Society of=the War of 1812, it is understood, will have charge of the work of placing the tablets in West Point's new chapel The offi-cers' names, like the names of those officers who served in the revolutionary war and which have a place on the walls of the old chapel, probably will appear in letters of gold upon a black basis

School histories as a rule, in giving an account of the Detroit surrender, state simply that Gen Hull's action was considered cowardly. The fact that he was tried and sentenced to be shot for cowardice is generally omitted. Hull-was ordered to go to his Massachusetts home and there await the execution of his sentence. Old age "executed" him many years afterwards. It is probable that the commemorating society will content itself with simply omitting Hull's name from its list, by which Hull's conduct, characterized as cowardly by a competent court, could be made to stand as a warning to all the generations of young soldiers.

Occupying a considerable part of the wall space the beautiful old West Point there are already many black marbie memorials bearing the names of all the general officers of the revolutionary war from Artemus Ward of Connecticut to George Washington of Virginia. Room one of these tablets the cadets as they file in on Sunday see something which tells better than the words of trumpet-tongued eloquence of the black ignominy which attaches to the name of a traitor. On one of the slabs occupying a place two honored names there appears a black blot Above and below it show the tips of gold letters Enough of the lettering is visible to let the observer know after a moment's study that which ilis intended in the main to conceal. A black block of marble set in transversely across the golden capitals blots out forever from the roll of honor the name of Benedict Arnold, traitor

Touching on the treason of Benedict Arnold, there is a little-known story which had for the scene of its action the four years of the war of secession. In response to the first call of Abraham Lincoln for troops a young man appeared at a Detroit recruiting office and enlisted. to the front and in the course of six months was made a commissioned officer. He was of a retiring disposition, always courteous to his fellow officers and just to his men, but he sought no close friendships. He was noted throughout the command as a man whose devotion to duty amounted to a pas sion. He once sought and secured a change in command in order to have a more frequent hand in the heavy fighting.

was offered at one time a colonelcy. He declined. He fought in every battle of the later Richmond campaign and was in at the end at Appomatics.

The major headed his battallion in the great parade of the returning victors up Pennsylvania avenue. Then there came the final mustering out of the troops. Less than a month afterward the colonel of a fighting regiment received a letter bearing a Toronto postmark: "I served all through the war under an assumed name. I trust that did my full duty. I wish you to know that I did what I did in order that I might in some way make atonement for the deed of one of my family.

Sir, I am a Canadian by birth and my name is John Benedict Arnold."

This soldier rose to the rank of a major. He

A NEW TOWN

NEW SCHOOL EVERY AND A ECHOOL DAY.

The above caption about represents the growth of Central Canada. The statement was made not long since by a railroad man who claimed to have made the remarkable discovery that such was the case. There is not a district of a fair amount of settlement in any of the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, but has its school and the railways have stations every seven or eight miles apart, around which group the towns, some large and some small, but each important to its own district. Schools are largely maintained by public funds and the expense of tuition is but a nominal sum.

The final returns of the grain production for Central Canada for 1909-is now in, and the figures show that the value of the crops to the farmers of that country is about 195 million dol-lars, as compared with 120 million last year. American farmers or those who have gone from the United States, will participate largely in these splendid returns, and these comprise those who have gone from nearly every State in

One of the many proofs that might be put forward showing the immense wealth that comes to the farmers of Central Canada is seen in the sum that has been spent during the past two or three months by the farmers who have for the time being ceased worrying over the reaper and the thresher, and are taking to enjoying themselves for two or three months. It is said that fifty thousand people of these Western Provinces spent the holiday season visiting their old homes. Most of these passengers paid forty and some forty-five dollars for the round trip. Some went to Great Britain. some to the Continent, others to their old homes in Eastern Canada, and many thousands went to visit their friends in the States. The amount paid alone in transportation would be upward of two million dollars. Some make the trip every years. It need not be asked, "Can they afford it?" With crops yielding them a profit of $20 to $25 per acre, and some having as much as twelve hundred or more acres, the question is answered. The Canadian Government Agents at different points in the States report that they have interviewed a great many of those who are now visiting friends in the different states, and they all express themselves as well satisfied. and promise to take some of their friends back with them. There is still a lot of free homestead land in splendid districts, and other lands can be purchased at a reasonable price from railway and land companies

EPIDEMIC OF ITCH IN WELSH VILLAGE

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years 2go, families were strick-en wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. knew a dozen families that were so affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail what-eyer. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse, as a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to teil you that after a few days' treat-ment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure ir all cases.

"I may add that my three brothers, three sisters, myself and all our families have been users of the Cuticura Remedies for fifteen years. Thomas Hugh, 1650 West Huron St., Chicago. III., June 29, 1909.

Whiskers.
A Roman poet told of the pride one of the late Caesars took in his great whiskers. On some of the wildwood Hill Billies I have seen beards some feet long, a switch of the loose ends hanging out from under the waistcoat Others braided the growth and tied it around the neck, while still others braided it around the waist, tying it behind like apron strings. One told me he combed and plaited his every night, and put it away into a long linen bag or nightgown, so as to keep it from getting all tangled up with his wife and his feet.—New York Press.

"I, myself," he continued taking a chair near me and placing his feet in an open window, "am cursed with rugged health, I have quite recovered from those unking cuts at the nunnery—thanks to your ministrations—and am willing to put on the gloves with you at any time."

You certainly are the only blot on the landscape!"

Quite so. And if I would only go hence the pretty little idyl that is being enacted in the delightful garden, under the eye of a friendly chaperon would go forward without interrup-

He spoke soberly, and I had observed that when he dropped his chaff a note of melancholy crept into his talk. He folded his arms and went on: "She's a wonderful girk, Donovan. There's no other girl like her in all the wide world. "They are indeed; and I have studied the whole business until my near mind is mussed up, like scrambled eggs. Your own pretty idyl of the numery garden adds the note pi-quante. after a pause. "He's the skipper of the Stiletto," Gillespie replied, readily.

"He's a long way from tide-water," I remarked. -"A blackguard of just his sort once sailed me around the Italian peninsula in a felucca, and saved me from drowning on the way. His heroism was not, however, wholly disinterested. When we got back to Naples he robbed me of my watch and moneybelt and I profited by the transaction, having intended to give him double their value. But there are plenty of farm boys around the lake who could handle the Stiletto. Henry didn't need

"You told me that Henry Holbrook found his way here ahead of you. How lo you account for that?"

He looked at me quickly, and rose again pacing the narrow room.

"I don't! I wish I could!" "It's about the last place in the world to attract him. Port Annandale is a quiet resort frequented by western people only. There's neither hunting nor fishing worth mentioning; and a man doesn't come from New York to Indiana to sail a boat on a thimbleful of water like this lake."

"You are quite right."

"If Helen Holbrook gave him warning that they were coming here-

"Don't you dare say it! She couldn't have done! She wouldn't have done it! I tell you I know, independently of her, that he was here before Father Stoddard ever suggested this place to Miss Pat."

"Oh, just to enjoy your society. get lonesome sometimes. I tell you a man does get lonesome in this world when he has nothing to lean on but a blooming button factory and a step mother who flits among the world's expensive sanatoria. I know you have never had 'Button, button, who's the button?'-chanted in your ears, but may I ask whether you have ever known the joy of a stepmother? can see that your answer will be an unregretful negative."

He was quite the fool again, and stared at me vacuously.

"My stepmother is not the common type of juvenile fiction. She has never attempted during her widowhood to rob the orphan or to poison him. Bless your Irish heart, ho! She's a good woman, and rich in her own right, but I couldn't stand her dietary. She's afraid I'm going to die, Donovan! She thinks everybody's going to die. Father died of pneumonia and she said ice-water in the finger-bowl did it, and she wanted to have the butler arrested for murder. She had a new disease for me every morning. It was worse, than being left with a buttonworks to draw a stepmother like that She ate nothing but hot water and zweibach herself, and shuddered when

I demanded sausage and buckwheat cakes every day. She caught me one day clearing up a couple of chickens and a mug of Bass with the gardener, and it was all-over. She had noticed, she said, that I had been coughing of late—I was doing a few cigarettes many, that was all-and wired to New York for doctors. She had all sorts Donovan—alienists and pneumogastric specialists and lung experts. "The people on Strawberry Hill thought there was a medical convenin town. I was kidnaped on the golf course, where I was about to win the eastern Connecticut Song-drive cup, and locked up in a dark room at for two days while they tested me. They made all the known tests Donovan. They tested me for diseases that haven't been discovered vet, and for some that have been ex tinct since the days of Noah. You can see where that put me. I was afraid to fight or sulk for fear the alienists would send me to the madhouse. was afraid to eat for fear they would think that was a symptom, and every time I asked for food the tane-worm man looked intelligent and began prescribing, while the rest of them were terribly chagrined because they hadn't scored first. The only joy. I got out of the rumpus was in hitting one of those alienists a damned hard clip in the ribs, and I'm glad I did it. He was feeling my medulla oblongata at the moment, and as I resent being manhandled I pasted him one—he was a young chap, and fair game—I pasted him one, and then grabbed a suit-case and slid. I stole away in a clamboat for New Haven, and kept right on up into northern Maine, where I stayed with the Indians until my father's re lict went off broken hearted to Bad connecting canal to Amsterdam the

"You have undoubtedly been sorely tried." I said as-he broke of mournfully. In spite of myself I had been en-tertained. He was undentably a fellow of curious humor and with unusual experience of life. He-followed me to the street, and as I rode away he called me back as though to impart omething of moment.

"Did you ever meet Charles Dar-

"I wish I might have had one word with him. It's on my mind that he put the monkeys back too far. I should be happier if he had brought them-a-little nearer up to date. should feel less lonesome, Irishman. He stopped me again.

"Once I had an ambition to find an honest man, Donovan, but I gave it up —4t's easier to be an honest man than to find one. Ligive you peace!"

I had learned some things from the young button'king, but much was still opaque in the affairs of the Holbrooks The Italian's presence assumed a new significance from Gillespie's story. He-had been party to a conspiracy to kill Holbrook, alias Hartridge, on the night of my adventure at the houseboat, and I fell to wondering who had been the shadowy director of that enterprise—the cow-ard who had hing off in the creek and waited for the evil deed to be done.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Gate of Dreams. In my heart I was anxious to do justice to Gillespie Sad it is that we are all so given to passing solemn judgment on trifling testimony! I myself am not impeccable. I should at any time give to the lions a man who uses his thumb as a paper-cutter; for such a one is clearly marked for brutality. My prejudices rally as to a trumpet-call at the sight of a girl wearing overshoes or nibbling bon-bons—the one suggestive of predatory habits and weak lungs, the other of nervous dyspepsia.

The night was fine, and after returning my horse to the stable I continued on to the Glenarm boathouse I was strolling along, pipe in mouth, was half-way up the beathouse steps when a woman shrank away from the veranda rail, where she had been standing, gazing out upon the There was no mistaking her She was not even disguised to-night, and as I advanced across the little veranda she turned toward me tern over the boathouse door suffused us both as I greated her.

"Paidon me, Miss Holbrook; I'm afraid I have disturbed your meditations," I said. "But a if your don't mind-"

"You have the advantage of being on your own ground," she replied. "I waive all my rights as tenant if you will remain. "It is much nicer here than on St

Agatha's pier: you can see the lake and the stars better she laughed. "I think I shall stay a moment longer, if you will tolerate

I brought out some chairs and we sat down by the rail, where we could look out upon the star-sown heavens and the dark floor of stars beneath Helen bent forward with her elbows resting on the rail, her hands clasped under her chip. The lamplight fell full upon ber slightly lifted head, and upon her shoulders, over which lay a filmy veil. She hummed dreamily for a moment while I watched her. Had she one mood for the day and another for the night? I had last seen her that afternoon after an hour of tennis, at which she was expert, and she had run away through Glenarm gate with a taunt for my defeat; but now the spirit of stars and of all earth's silent things was upon her. I looked twice and thrice at her clearly outlined profile, at the brow with its point of dark hair, at the hand whereon the emerald was clearly distinguishable, and satisfied myself that there could be no mistake about her.

"You grow bold," I said, anxious to ear her voice "You don't mind the hear her voice pickets a bit."

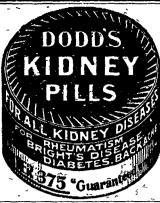

"No. I'm quite superior to walls and fences. You have heard of those East Indians who appear and disappear through closed doors; well, we'll assume that I had one of those fellows for an ancestor! It will save the trouble of trying to account for my exits and entrances I will tell you in confidence, Mr. Donovan, that I don't like to be obliged to account for myself!"

Certain Ingredients if Properly Combined, Stimulate Ruman Hair Growth.

Resorcine is one of the most effective germ destroyers sver discovered. Beta naphthol is a most powerful, vet absolutely safez germicide and antiseptic, which prevents development of germ matter, and creates a clean, healthy condition.

Pilocaroine, although not a coloring matter or dye, is an ingredient well established for its power to restor natural color to buman hair.

-Rorax, because of its well destined. softening and cleansing properties; is most useful in the treatment of scalp and hair diseases. Glycerine acts as a stimulant to the hair bulbs, and has soothing, healing and nourishing influence. Alcohol is indispensable in medicine because of its antiseptic, stimulating and preser

While the Johnsons were laughing, Smith walked into the Blackbird. He had lost 30 minutes, and in losing them had lost his quarry. Sinclair had disappeared, and Whispering Smith made a virtue of necessity by taking the upsetting of his plans with an unruffled face. There was but one thing more, indeed, to do, and that was to eat his supper and ride away. The street encounter had made so much talk in Oroville that Smith delined Gene Johnson's invitation to go back to the house It seemed a conrenient time to let any other ambitious rustiers make good if they were disposed to try, and Whispering Smith went for his supper to the hotel where the Williams Cache men made their headquarters

When he rode away in the dusk his face was careworn John Rebstock had told him why Sinciair dodged; there were others whom Sinclair wanted to meet first; and Whispering Smith was again heading on a long, hard ride, and after a man on a better horse, back to the Crawling Stone and Medicine Bend. "There's others he Medicine Bend. wants to see first or you'd have no trouble in talking business to-day You nor no other man will ever get him alive" But Whispering Smith knew that.

"See that he doesn't get you-alive, Rebstock," was his parting retort. "If he finds out Kennedy has got the Tower W money, the first thing he does will be to put the Doxology all

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Sympathetic Ear.

-When Whispering Smith rode after Sinclair, Crawling Stone ranch, in common with the whole countryside had but one interest in life, and that was to hear of the meeting. Riders across the mountain valleys met with but one question; mail-carriers brought nothing in their pouches of interest equal to the last word con-cerning Sinclair or his pursuer. It was commonly agreed through the mountains that it would be a difficult matter to overhaul any good man riding Sinclair's steel-dust horses, but with Sinclair himself in the saddle, unless it pleased him to pull up, the chase was sure to be a stern one. Against this to feed speculation stood who had ridden alone across Deep creek and brought Chuck Williams out on a buckboard.

Business in Medicine Bend, meantime, was practically suspended. As the center of all telephone lines the big railroad town was likewise the center of all rumors. Officers and soldiers to and from the fort, stage drivers and cowmen, homesteaders and rustlers, discussed the apprehension of Sinclair. Moreover, behind this efort to arrest one man who had savly defied the law were ranged all ne prejudices, sympathies, and is of the high country, and prac-the whole population tributary exicine Bend and the Crawling ticai!] Stone valle, were friends either to Sinclair or to his pursuer. Behind Sinwere friends either to clair were nearly all the cattlemen, not alone because he was on good terms with the rustlers and protected is friends, but because he warrod enly on the sheepmen. The big range interests, as a rule, were openly or covertly friendly to Sinclair, while against him were the homesteaders, the railroad men, the common people and the men who everywhere hate cruelty and outrage and the making of a lie.

Lance Dunning-had never concealed his friendliness for Sinclair, even after hard stories about him were known to be true, and it was this confidence of fellowship that made Sinclair, 24 hours after he had left Oroville, ride down the hill trail to Crawling Stone

The morning had been cold, with a heavy wind and a dull sky. In the afternoon the clouds lowered over the valley and a misting rain set in. Dicksie had gone into Medicine Bend on the stage in the morning, and, after a stolen half-hour - with - McCloud: at Marion's, had ridden home to escape the storm. Not less, but much more, than those about her she was alive-to the situation in which Sinclair stood and its danger to those closest to her. In the morning her one prayer to Mc-Cloud had been to have a care of himself, and to Marion to have a care of herself, but even when Dicksie left them it seemed as if neither quite felt the peril as she felt it." - the afternoon the rain, failing steadily, kept herein the house, and the sat in her room sewing until the light failed. She went downstairs Puss had lighted the grate in the living room, and Dicksie threw herself into a chair. The sounds of hoofs aroused her and she went to a win To her horror, she saw-Sinclain walking with her cousin up to the front door. She ran into the dining room, and the two men entered the hall and walked into the office. Choking with excitement, Dicksie ran through the kitchen and upstairs to master her agitation.

In the office Sinclair was sitting down before the hot stove with a tumbler of whisky. "Lance,"—he shook his head as he spoke hoarsely 'I want to say my friends have stood by me to a man, but there's none of them treated me squarer through thick and thin than you have. Well, I've had some bad luck. It can't fie helped. = Regards'". * He drank, and shock his wet hair want to say another thing, Lance. I had no more intention than a child of hurting Ed Banks. I warned Ed months ago to keep out of this fight, and I never knew he was in it till it was too late. But I'm hoping he will pull through set, if they don't kill him in the hospital to spite me never recognized the man at all till it was too late. Why, one of them used to work for me' A man with the whole railroad gang in these moun tains after him has got to look out fo himself or his life ain't worth a glass of beer. Thank you, Lance, not any I saw two men, with then rifles in their hands, looking for me hollered at them, but, Lance, I'm rough and ready, as all my friends know me-that I will never do. Ed. before I ever recognized him, raised his rifle; that's the only reason I fired Not so full, Lance, not so full, if you please Well," he shook his black hair as he threw back his head, "here's to better luck in worse countries" He paused as he swallowed, and set the tumbler down "Lance, I'm saying good-by to the mountains."

"You're not going away for good

Murray? "I'm going away for good What's the use? For two years these railroad cutthroats have been trying to put something on me; you know that. They've been trying to mix me up with that bridge-burning at Smoky creek; Sugar Buttes, they had me there; Tower W-nothing would do but I was there, and they've got one of the men in sail down there now Lance, trying to sweat enough perjury out of him to send me up. show has a poor man got against all the money there is in the country? wouldn't be afraid of a jury of my own neighbors—the men that know me, Lance—any time. What show would I have with a packed fury in Medicine Bend? I could explain anything I've done to the satisfaction of any reasonable man. I'm human, Lance; that's all I say. I've been mistreated and I don't forget it. They've even turned my wife against me-as fine a woman as ever lived." swore sympathetically.

"There's good stuff in you yet, Mur-

the rain beating her burning face and a hand, on her bridle rein

No man could have kept the trail to the pass that night. The horse took it as if the path flashed in sunshine and swung into the familiar stride that had carried her so many times over the 20 miles ahead of them. The storm driving Into Dicksie's face cooled her. Every moment she recollected herself better, and before her mind all the aspects of her venture ranged themselves. She had set herself to a race, and against her rode the fiardest rider in the mountains. She had set herself to what tew men ground, and, struggling through the on the range would have dared and wind as she held tast to the bridle and on the range would have dared and what no other woman on the range could do. A gust drove into her They were already at the nead of the pass, and the horse, with level ground underfoot, was falling into the long each; but the wind was colder.

Jim the rein. She realized how wet she way, her feet and her knees were wet, She had no protection but her skirt, though the meanest rider on Jim's neck, she moaned and cried to all her countless acres would not have him. When again she could hold her braved a mile on such a night without leather and fur. The great lapels of her riding jacket, reversed, were but-toned-tight across her shoulders, and the double fold of fur lay warm and dry against her beart and lungs; but ther hands were cold, and her skirt dragged leaden and cold from her waist, and water souked in upon her chilled feet.

she became conscious of how fast she was going. Instinct, made keen by thousands of saddle miles, told Dicksie of her terrific pace. She was riding faster than she would have dared go at noonday and without thought or fear of accident. In spite of the sliding and the plunging down the long hill, the storm and the darkness brought no thought of fear for herself; her only fear was for those ahead. In supreme moments a horse, like a man when human efforts become superhuman, puts the lesser dangers out of reckoning, and the faculties, set on a single purpose, though strained to the breaking-point, neve break. Low in her saddle, Dicksie tried to reckon how far they had come and how much lay ahead. She could feel her skirt stiffening about her knees, and the rain beating at her face was sharper; she knew the sleet as it stung her cheeks, and knew what next was coming—the srow. There was no need to urge Jim. He had the rem and Dicksie bent down to speak to him, as she often spoke when they were alone on the road, when Jim, bolting, almost threw her. Recovering instantly, she knew they were no longer alone. She rose alert in her seat. Her straining eyes could Was-there a sound in see nothing the wind? She held her breath to listen, but before she could apprehend Jim Teaped violently ahead. Dicksie screamed in an agony of terros. She knew then that she had passed another rider, and so close she might have touched him.

Fear froze her to the saddle; it lent wings to her horse. The speed be-came wild. Dicksie knit herself to her dumb companion and a prayer choked in her throat. She crouched lest a bullet tear her from her horse; but through the darkness no bullet came, the sleet, stinging her face, chilling her limbs, and weighting her ike lead on her struggling She knew not even Sinclair could overtake her now-that no living man could lay to go.

Across the flat the wind drove in fury. Reflection, thought and reason were beginning to leave her. She was crying to herself quietly as she used to cry when she lost herself, a mere child, riding among the hills. She was praying meaningless words. Snow purred softly on her cheeks. The cold was soothing her senses. Unable at last to keep her seat on the horse, she stopped him, slipped stimly to the the horn, half walked and half ran to start the blood through her benumbed veins. She struggled until she could drag her mired feet no farther, and tried-to draw herself back into the saddle. It was almost beyond her: Dicksie lowered her head and gave. She sobbed and screamed at her helplessness. At last she managed to climb flounderingly back into her seat. and, bending her stiffened arms to seat no longer, she fell to the horse's side, dragged herself along in the frozen slush, and, screaming with the pain of her freezing hands drew herself up into the saddle.

She knew that she dare not venture this again—that if she did so she could never remount. She felt now that she should never live to reach Medicine Bend. She rode on and on and on—would it never end? Then came a sound like the beating of great drums in her ears. It was the crash of Jim's hoofs on the river bridge. and she was in Medicine Bend.

A horse, galloping low and heavily, slaed through the snow from Fort street into Boney, and, where it had so often stopped before, dashed up on the sidewalk in front of the little shob. The shock was too much for its uncônscious rider, and, shot headlong from her saddle, Dicksie was flung bruised and senseless against Marion's door.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

At the Door.

She woke in a dream of hoofs beat ing at her brain. Distracted words fell from her lips, and when she opened her swollen eyes and saw those about her she could only scream.

Marion had called up the stable, but the stablemen could only tell her that Dicksie's horse, in terrible condition, had come in riderless. While Barnhardt, the railway surgeon, at the bedside- administered restoratives, Marion-talked with him of Dicksie's súdden and mysterious coming. Dicksie, lying in pain and quite conscious. heard all. but, unable to explain, moaned in her helplessness. She heard Marion at length tell the doctor that McCloud was out of town, and the news seemed to bring back her senses. Then, rising in the bed, while the surgeon and Marion coaxed her to lie down, she clutched at their arms and, looking from one to the other, told her story. When it was done she swooned, but she woke to hear voices at the door of the shop. She heard as if she dreamed, but at the door the words were dread reality. Sinclair had made good his word, and stiffening her gloves, freezing her hair, had come out of the storm with a summons upon Marion and it was the surgeon who threw onen saw Sinclair standing in the snow.

could hear only the sweep of the rain and the harsh crackle of the wind. Sometimes praying, sometimes fainting and sometimes despairing, she stood clinging to the instrument, ringing and pounding upon it like one frenzied. Lance looked at her in amaze ment. "Why, God a'mighty, Dicksie what's the matter?"

He called twice to her before she turned, and her words almost stunned him: "Why did you not detain Sinclair here to-night? Why did you not arrest him?"

Lance's sombrero raked heavily to one side of his face, and one end of his musiache running un much higher on the other, did not begin to express his astonishment "Arrest him? Arrest Sinclair? Dicksie, are you crazy Why the devil should I arrest Sin clair? Do you suppose I am going to mix up in a fight like this? Do you think I want to get killed? The levelheaded man in this country, just at present, is the man who can keep out of trouble, and the man who succeeds let me tell you, has got more than plenty to do.'

Lance, getting no answer but flerce, searching gaze from Dicksie's wild eyes, laid his hand on a chair lighted a cigar, and sat down before the fire. Dicksie aropped the tele phone receiver, put her hand to her girdle, and looked at him. When she spoke her tone was stinging. "You know that man is going to Medicine Bend to kill his wife!'

"Dicksie Dunning, you won't stir out of this house to-night.

Her face hardened. "How dare you speak in that way to me? Who are ou, that you order me what to do, where to stay? Am I your cowboy, to be defiled with your curses?"

He looked at her in amazement. She was only 18; he would still face her down. "I'll tell you who I am. I am master here, and you will do as I tell you. You will ride to Medicine Bend to-night, will you?" He struck the table with his clinched fist. "Do you hear me? I say, by God, not a horse shall leave this ranch in this storm to-right to go anywhere for anybody or with anybody!

"Then I say to you this ranch is my ranch, and these horses are my horses! From this hour forth I will order them to go and come when and where I please!" She stepped toward "Henceforward I am mistress hím. here. Do you hear me? Henceforward I give orders in Crawling Stone bouse and every one under this roof takes orders from me!"

Delight to Weary Traveler

Green Gardens of Damascus Rest the Eye After Long Journey Through the Desert.

The chief attractions at Damascus are the world-famed gardens which surround the city, the glimpse we get of oriental life as found in the bazars, fine streets, the shops, and last, but by no means of less interest, the famous mosque of Omciades;

One hundred and fifty square miles of green lie in compact order round about Damascus, spread out with all the profusion of a virgin forest. Orchards and flower gardens, parks, plantations of corn and of other produce pass before the eye in rapid-and changeable succession. The claim that there are more than 3.000 miles of shady lanes in the gardens of Damascus through which it is possible to ride. On such a ride the visitor passes orchards of figs and orchards of apricots. For hedges there is the briar rose and for a canopy the walnut., Pomegranate blossoms glow through the shade; the vine boughs trail across the briars; a little water-and all this water and leafage are so lavish that the broken mud walls and slovenly houses have no power to vex the eye. These long gardens of Da-mascus form the paradise of the Arab world. Making a pilgrimage to the city after weeks and months of dreary and desolate desert life, the running water is a joy to his sight and music to his ears, and it is something to walk through shady lanes, to admire the variety of landscape and the beauty of scenery in a land where the sun beats down all day with unremitting force until the earth is like a furnace of iron beneath a sky of molten brass. Certainly it seems like carrying coals to Newcastle to speak of exporting oatmeal to Scotland and yet, every year the Quaker-Oats Company sends hundreds of thousands of Quaker Oats to Great Britain and Europe.

The reason is simple; while the English and Scotch have for centuries eaten oatmeal in quantities and with a regularity that has made them the most rugged physically, and active mentally of all people, the American has been eating oatmeal and trying all the time to improve the methods of manufacture so that he might get that desirable foreign trade.

A Real Catastropne. Philip, aged four, is in the habit of going across the street to a neighbor's house for milk. One day in December he returned home with an empty bucket and a grave face "We can't get any more milk," he announced in a tone weighty with the importance of his message. "The cow's dried up." And, as we started in surprise at him, he suddenly clinched the marter with an observation, evidently of his own: "They don't think that she'll thaw out till spring."—Deline-
