COMPLIMENT FOR THE PASTOR.

Remark Not So Intended Really Amounted to as Much.

Aaron Bancroft, the father of the historian, was a Massachusetts clergyman who revolted against the Calvinism of the day. The young minister found himself held at arm's length by the surrounding clergy. In "The Life and Letters of George-Bancroft" Mr. M. A. DeW Howe quotes the following item from the old minister's

'Memoranda:" "An honest but very intelligent farmer of my parish, some ten years ago, accosted me in this manner:

-Well, Mr Bancroft, what do you think the people of the old parish say of me now?"

"I answered, I hope something good.' They say, "If we find fault with him he does not mend it at all, and if we praise him he does not mind it, but keeps steadily on his own way. we therefore have concluded that it is best to let him alone." "The farmer mentioned the fact as a subject of laughter, but I thought, and still think that, taking the declaration in its bearings, it was the pret-tiest compliment I have received through my whole life."-Youth's Companion.

THE WONDERSERRY OR SUMBERRY

Has Proved a Great Success-Thousands Say, it's the Best Thing They Ever Grew.

The Wonderberry or Sunberry, the marvelous garden fruit originated by Luther Burbank, and introduced by John Levis Childs, the well-known Seedsman of Floral Park, N. Y. has preved a great success all over the country. Thousands of people say it is the best thing they ever grew.

Mr. John-Hurroughs, the well-known author, Naturalist and bosom-friend of Theodore Roosevelt, says it is the most delicious ple berry he ever tasted, and a marvelous cropper.

A Director of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station says it fruits abundantly even in pure sand. In the short sesson of North-western Canada it is a godsend, and fruits long after frost has killed most garden truck.

D. S Hall, Wichita, Kan., says thirty people grew it there last season with perfect satisfaction. K. S. Enoche, Hammond, La., says it yields $250 worth of fruit per acre with him. Mrs. J. H. Powers, 4732 Kenwood avenue, Chicago, raised enough berries on a space 4x10 feet to supply herself and friends. J. P. Swallow, Kenton, Chio, says its equal for all purposes does not exist. Rev. H. B. Sheldon, Pacific Grove, Cal. says he likes the berries served in any and every way.

conspicuous part of the national capital is a plain little frame building which is perhaps richer in mem-ories of Abraham Lincoln than any other structure at the seat of government, with the cossible exception of the White House To the great majority of the thousands of tourists who every-year visit Washington, the very existence of this structure, to say nothing of its sig-nificance, is unknown, and yet its history sheds a new and illuminating ilde light on the simplicity and kindliness of Lincoln's private life.

This hidden tribute to the big-heartedness of the venerated chief magis-frate is nothing less than a toy shop-to which the busy man, bowed down by the weight of a devastating war, stole away time and again to buy wooden soldlers and other playthings for the mischievous Tad who consti tuted during this stormy period the one ray of sunlight in his father's one ray of summent in an area of much older than bimself,—to anount commercial progress, this quaint toy guard around the executive mansion, shop stands to-day just as it did half. Residents of Northville Cannot Doubt What has been Twice Proved,

In gratitude for complete reliet from aches and pains of had backsfrom distressing kidney little-thouse and backsfrom distressing kidney little-thouse and backsfrom distressing kidney recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Northville, who so, testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Northville kidney sufferers. Mrs. George Brown of Northville, Mich., says: "I cannot say too much is praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. For almost a year I suffered from kidney complaint. I had acute pains across my back and bips and the kidney secretions passed far too frequently showing that my kidneys were disordered. Often at night the muscles if my back would contract and the pain was so terrible that I was oblized to get up and walk the floor. I had often heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and finalis I had my hu-band procure a supply at Murices Bros' drug store. They soon brought relief and I contined taking them until my cond too had improved in every was. I heartily taking them intil my condition bud improved in every was. I heartily recommend Down's Kidnes Fills to Everybody is cordially invited to attend the Martha Washington supper to be given in Ambler's hall February 21, by the First division of the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church.

The Country Magazine, a highclass publication, has on its first page a fine picture of F. D Eatherly's suburban home, Northville. The picture was made from a snap shot taken by N. A. Clapp of this place. Some of the articles of the month are also from his pen

Bert Phillips has resigned his place as fish culturist at the Northville U.S. fish station to accept a more lucrative one with a big real estate firm in Flint Northville lore Mr and Mrs Philips as residents of the place but will be glad to know of his good fortune at Fliet where he will have not only a better salary but much more pleasant work.

Mr. Turner's Sunday school dass of the Methodist church, was treated to delightful sleigh rite Wednesday evening to the home of ME and Mrs Idward Soustons at Vaterford where the regular business meeting and social was held. The entertain ment committees for January and Kebruary gave an oyster supper which was hugely enjoyed. Mr Sessions and James Clark conveyed the crowd of fifty down to the Scasions' home in big sleighs. Mr. and Mis Sessions proved to be roya hosts and everybody had a dandy good time Previous to leaving the pargonage the class presented Turner with a very pretty eight day e¹uck.

The Primitive Norm:

Whether-she had fainted or fallen iskep, she did not know, but this one thing she was sure, it had been dark when consciousness left ner, and it was now broad day, although the light seemed to come to her with a greenish tinge which was quite unfamiliar. The transition between her state of yesterday and that of today was as great as if she had been born into morning from the womb of midnight and like t young animal she drank it in blindly ith closed eyes. She could hear the thunderous roaring of the breakers crashing upon the barrier reef Alone -her boat had been wrecked in the darkness of the hight-before sound softened and mellowed by distance came to her in a deep, low accompaniment to the sharper and nearer sounds of the birds singing and the breeze rustling sently through fine long leaves of the trees

The div sand on which she loy was soft and yfelding and made a comfortable bed for her tired body racked fell prostrate on the beach, retaining nave been into obligon tastic girdle of paim leaves about his waist. She stared at him puzzled, amazed, affrighted He returned her look with an intent carroate in which there was no suggestion of evil pur pose rather of great incomprehension an amazing wonderment nothing about him, save the fact that was there, which should have ed any alarm in her heart for with a woman's swift mastery of the rossibilities of the other sex, she no ticed in her vague terror and wonder ment that he was remarkably good to look at. - Indeed, she thought that she had never seen so splendid a specimen of physical mannood as that before her. In color he was white Save that he was bronzed by the tropic sun he was perhaps whiter than she was His hair, which bung about his bead in a wild, matted tangle, not unpicturesque, was golden; his eyes bright blue Beneath his beard, unkempt but short and curly, she could see his firm clean cut lips His proportions were superb He was limbed and chested like the Apollo Belvedere In him grace and strength strove for predom fnance . He was totally unlike all that she had read of the aborigmes of the South seas

It was the man who broke the silence, as it had been the man who had broken the spell-of her slumber He made that queer little cauckling noise in his throat which sounded familiar enough and vet she had heard it from the hips of no man Lefore It meant nothing to her except that he who stood before her at least was not dumb, although the noise be made was certalfily no articulate speech as she knew speech or could imagine it.

At any rate it was a stimulus to her She opened her own parched hips and strove to make reply, but her thirst, with a rising terror and nervousness made her dumb and no sound came forth. The man might be preparing to kill her. He could do so, if he will ed, she thought, but she must drink or die. If she could not speak, she could make signs She leaned forward raised her arm, hollowed her hand and dipped as if from a well and made as if to pour it into her lips. Then she stretched out octh her hands to him in the attitude of petition. The man stared hard at her His brow wrinkled. It was such a simple sign that any savage would bave comprehenced it be thought, and yet it appeared to

"Water," she gasped in a hoarse whisper. 'Water, or I die!".
The man had started violently at her speech. Giving him no time to re-cover, she went through the motion again, this time with greater effect for the man turned and vanished. She sank down on the sand too exhausted to follow him even with her eyes. If he brought the water she would drink it and live; if he did not, she would lie where she was and die She did not care much, she thought, which would happen 'She had so sickened of life before she essayed that open boat that she believed it was simply an animal craving in her which would make her take the water in case it should be brought her And yet when he did appear with a coccanut shell brimming with clear, sparkling liquid, she felt as though the elixir of life

had been proffered her

She seized the shell with both hands which yet so trembled that most of the precious water spilled on her dress as she carried it to her parched lips This was good in the end, for if that vessel had been the famed Jotuneheim it dry ere she set it down. As it was, she got but little; yet that little was enough to set her heart bearing once with weary days in the constraint and more Emptying the shell of the last narrowness of a small boat - it was drog - and with that keepness of perwarm, too - She had been drenched ception which her long training had when she scrambled on the shore and intensified and developed, marking the while that it had not been cut clean strength enough and purpose by any knile or saw or human umplewhere the tall palme gross before she lapsed in vnat.over way it might sand and looked again toward the man He held in his hand fruit of Incoherent thoughts raced turough some kind, she did not know what it was it might have been polson mattered it? Back of her stretched a grove of palms and back of that rose a hill; its crest bare and crag like towered above a sea of verdure Through a chance vista she saw the mass of rock as a mountain peak. On one side high precipitous chiffs ran down close to the shore and shut out the view. Over them water fell to the beach -

Save in the person of the man be side her there was not an evidence of humanity anywhere. No curl of smoke rose above the trees. No distant-call of human voices smote the fearful hollow of her car. The breeze made music dure fartner up the hill side, birds sang softly here and there, but there was a tropical stillness to which the great-heaving diapason on the distant parriers was a foundation of sound upon which to build a lonely quiet Ruman beings there might be, there must be, on that island, if island it were; but if so, they must be abiding on the farther side. She and the man

Standing on her feet, with a slight enewal of her strength from what she had eaten and drunk, the woman now felt less fear of the man. He had treated her kindly. His aspect was gentle, even amiable. He looked at her wistfully, bending his brows from time to time and ever and again shaking his head, as a great dog looks at the master with whom he would fain whitehing in despair that if took speak, whose language he would fain knelt down and took long draughts of she endured hardship as the realization of this small misfortune purst upon her, she sank down She turned and surveyed the shore on the sands and put her head in her The beach curved sharply to the right lands and sobbed Tears did her good. She had her cry out, utlerly unhindered, for the man stood by, shaking his head and staring at her and mak ing those strange little sounds, but of fering in no way to molest her.

The water was beautifully clear and she could see on the other side of the barrier the remains of her boat Per haps some time, if there were need she could get to that boat, but for the present all the flotsam and letsam of her wild and fearful toyage lay in-z water-soaked bag full of broken glass and battered silver from which she had rescued a pair of scissors a mirror, two combs, a housewife full of rusty needles and some hairpins. O capitas tanitatum!

She was wearing a sersiceable dress of blue serge with a sailor's bloase and a short skat Putting her precious treasure trove within the loose blouse and carrying the battered bag which sne meant to examine more carefully later, she furned and made for the shade of the trees again For one thing the sun rising rapidly was gaining power and beating down with great force upon her bare head. She had enjoyed the protection of a wenderful ly plaited straw hat on her long voy age else she could not have borne the heat, but that, too, was gone.

As she walked inland, she noticed again off to her right that stream of water which dropped over the tail 'cliff in a slender waterfall a sweet in viting pool at the base before it ran through the sands toward the sea. She made her way thither and at the brink

it. Eating and drinking evidently went together in the mind of the man, for when she raised her head, she found him standings before her with both hands filled with some of the fruit she had partaken of before and other fruit She thought she recognized the breadfruit and a species of banana. At any rate, she ate again and having by this time recovered to some extent her mental poise, she are sparingly and

Then having satisfied her mate needs, she knelt down by the stream and washed her face and hands. How sweet was the freshness or that water to her face burned by the sun and the the hard spray of the briny seas. She would have been glad to have taken off her clothing and plunged into the pool to have washed the sait of days from her tired body, to have had the stimulus and refreshment of its sparkling coolness over her weary limbs. But in the presence of her doglike attendant this was not yet possi-

Still she could and must arrange her hair Of all the articles in her dressing bag, she was more ferrently thankful at that moment for the combs than anything else, the combs and the lutle mirror and the halrpins-small things indeed, but human happiness as rule turns on things so small that the investigator and promotor thereof generally overlook them. And know not the significance of the little until upon some desert island we are left with only those.

it was still early, about eight How was she to pass the o'eleek day? She must do something. She felt she could not sit idly staring from sea to shore. She must be moving No business called her, she must invent some. The compelling necessity of a soul not born for idleness was upon her She would-explore the land That was logically the first thing to be done any way and this was a highly trained woman who thought to live by rule and law albeit her rules were poor ones?

She started inland, the man following after. She had gained confidence in herself with every passing moment. The man who looked at her as a dog would treat as one. She must entirely ways have him trailing at her heels. She turned by a great boulder, pointed hand on the man's shoulder and gently forced him to sitting position by it. Then she walkedaway. He stared wistfully after her departing figure, and as she turned around to look at him, he sprang to

"No, no!" she cried imperatively making backward threatening motions with her hands, whereat he resumed his sitting position, staring at her unil he lost her among the trees

Presently she turned and came back to him. It was so deathly lonely with-out him. He leaped to his feet as he saw her coming and clapped his hands as a child might have done, his face breaking out the while into a smile that was both trustful and touching. She felt better since she had him under this control, and together they walked on under the trees.

CHAPTER II.

Conscious of His Mannood.
High noon and they were back at the landing place and she at least was very three. Accompanied by the man, who made not the slightest attempt to guide her, after some difficulty she had succeeded in forcing her way through the trees to the top of the hill. Part of the time she had followed course of the rivulet from which she had drank at the foot of the cliff. She was determined to set to the top, for side Humanity's supreme desire when facing the hills has always been to see what was on the other side The stimcius of the unknown was upon her, but it was coupled with a very lively desire begot of stern necessity to know what there was to be krown of the land upon which she had been cest

Her ven from the hilltop-she did not essay the unclothed and jagged neak, the could make beroway around its hase and see all that there was to detect on the other side of the island hitherto vague, floating, incoherent, inno more evidence of life than were presented by that she had first touched In every direction lay the unvexed sea - The day was brilliantly clear, there was not a cloud in the purity of the warm air. Nothing broke the far horizon. The island, Isir and beautiful, was set alone in a norbity ocean. In so far as she could tell, the and the man were alone upon it. The thought oppressed her Sho store to throw it off. The allence of the man oppressed her as well. Shot edge their was through the crick turnest to him at last and filed onk, the words wrung from her by the hor for of the situation.

ing echoes from the jagged crug beand her, but when these distanway The Silence of the Man Oppressed there was stienes unbroken save by the queer bubbling, chuckling noises of the man

She looked at him with a sudden sinking of the heart. Had this godlike creature roaming the wools, this faun of the Island been denied a brain. articulate speech' Was she doomed in spend the rest of her life alone in this paradise of the Pacific with a harmless madman forever by her side? What a situation was that in which she lound herself? She was a highly specialized product of the greatest of universities. In master and a doctor. She should have had resources within herself which would enable her to be independent of the cutside world, a world in which wind and subjected for a long time to her experience, self-brought, had been bitter, in which the last few weeks had been one long distillusionment. And yet she was now overwhelmed with craving for companionship, for articulate speech, as if she had never looked into a book or given a thought to the deep things of life man beside her would only do something, say something be something rather than a silent satellite forever staring in wonder. If she could only solve the mystery of his presence, an swer the interrogation that his very existence there alone presented.

Her future, her present, indeed, should have engrossed her mind. What she was to do, how she was to live the terrible problems in which his presence on the island involved her snould have been the objects of her attention: they should have afforded food for thought to the keenest of women. She simply forgot them in her pazzled wonder at him. It would have been much simpler from one point of view if she had found the island uninhabited, and yet since the man was human and alive in spite her judgment, her heart was glad that he ⇔as there.

She motioned to him to sit down and then she sat in front of him and studied him. He looked as little like a fool as like a knave. She could indeed, detect no evidence of any intellectual capacity, but she thought, as she studied him keenly, that he possessed unlimited intellectual possibilities There was a mind back of those bright blue eyes, that broad noble brow, but it seemed to her a mind undeveloped, mind utterly

Here was a soul, the thought half in fancy, half in earnest, that was virgin to the world. How wice, how deeply learned she might be she face to face with this primeral norm Could she teach this man anything?

He scemed tractable, reverential, def-Would it he nower with him? Could she open those sealed doors of his mind, what floods would outpour therefrom, of power, of passion? Would she be swept away? It mat-tered not. She must try. The impulse seized her to begin now .- Fixing her dark eyes upon him, she pointed directly at him with her finger.

"Man," she said clearly and emphatically.

He was always looking at her. He pad scarcely taken his eyes from her since she had seen him in the tall grass by the shore, but at her gesture and word his eyes brightened. There was that little wrinkling of the hrow again which she had noticed, outward and visible sign of an inward attempt at comprehension.

she said passionately. 'Man'" Mán," she repeated over and over aşaiñ.

And then the unexpected happened. After innumerable guttural attempts, her unwitting pupil managed to articulate something that hore a distinct resemblance to the clearly cut

'Man!" he said at last.

It was a tremendous step in evolution, almost too great for any unintored human brain, for at once the man Before her received a name and the idea of name as well In that instant, on the heaven kessed bill, he was differentiated Irom all the rest definite, was localized, given a habita tion and a name. He knew himself in some way to be.

Man!" he cried, growing more and more confident with every renetition and more and more accurate in catching the very intonation with which she spoke.

'Man'" he cried laying his hand upon his breast "Man!

He leaped to his feet and stretched out his arms. The doors were open a little way. Ideas were beginning to

'Man' Men' Man'" he cried again and again, looking eagerly at her

She ruse in turn and putted him an he shoulder sacdurazingly us sho might a dog. And again the touch, the second touch that she had given The sound of deer own voice gave her him, affected nim strangely, so coming. Walting for no enswer, and strangely that for a moment she felt indeed the realized that none bould the soul within her shrink, but realized. ome, while stepped to the brow of the ling metantly that her domination over hill where the trees happened not to him was spiritual and immaterial and be and causing her voice called and that the slightest evidence of timidity ailed and called There were answer- would be translated into universal language which even the lowest creation understands and that her dominion would go on the instant, she mastered herself and mastered him. Although she was but a woman whom be might have broken in his hands, she dominated him as the conscious soul over dominates the unconscious soul.

She essayed no more lessons, but urned and retraced her way to the shore where she had landed, which because she had landed there, she called home. On the way she attempted an experiment. She plucked from a low, bush a bright colored fruit of whose qualify and characteristics she was ignorant and slowly made as if to onvey it to her libs. "Man!" cried the voice behind her uttering its only word.

She turned to find her companion looking fixedly at her and proffering other fruit which he had quickly gath ered. She handed him that she had plucied in exchange. He shook his head, not in negation but rather in bewilderment and threw it from him, and then she understood in some way that the fruit was not good for food. How he had divined it, she could not tell Some compensating instinct, sharpened by use into a protecting quality, had taught him. She had no such instinct. She had learned to depend upon reason and observation, and these failed her in the presence of this unknown. She was humbled a little in this thought.

She craved meat and salt having been trained to these things, the artificial diet and stimulant to which she had become accustomed, and her cravner was the more insistent because she had been without them all that time mathe hoat. And 'vet when she had eaten the fruit that nature had provided in that tropic island, her craving was abated and she was satisfied. She felt that she could soon grow accustomed to such a diet if it were necessary. So musing she passed on under the trees and sat down on the sand again. F

If you had positive proof that a certain remedy for female ills had made many remarkable cures, would you not feel like trying it?

If during the last thirty years we have not succeeded in convincing every fair-minded woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee = to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary rollof, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound! I did so, and wrote to you for exister. I may a faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial."—Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y.—"Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to there weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydis E. Plakham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to cay that I am oursid, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the youd of others."—Mrs. J. H. Brenzes, St. Regis Palls, N. Y.

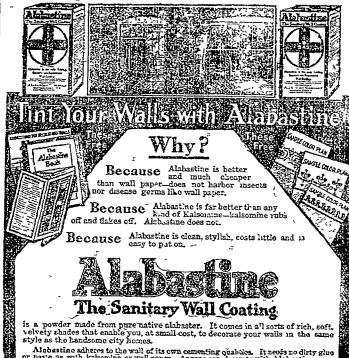

There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from Ithe roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

The Cause of Colds

tion of Coughs and Colds.

If people would only fortify and trangther the system, the majority oi easea oi cougns, colds and yneu monia might be avoided. These troubles are frequently due to weak ness, which produces a catarrial condition of the muchus membrane which as an internal skin of the body When this rakin is weakened it is easily injected with germs which cause many of the diseases to which flesh is heir. Healthy mucous-membranes are essential sufequerds of the body's general bealth.

An excellent ald in the prevention of coughs, colds, pneumonia, and such like infectious diseases, is a remedy that will prevent or cure catarrh.

We have a remedy which we honeatly believe to be unsurpassed in excellence-for the prevention of coughs, colds and all catarrhal con ditions It is the prescription of a Chet Shoebridge returned home famous physician, who has an from South Lyon Saturday where he enviable reputation of thirty years of cures gained through the use of this formula. We promise to make no charge for the medicine should it fall to do as we claim. We orge everybody who has need of such a medicine to try Rexall Maca-Cone.

It stands to reason that we could not afford to make such statements and give our own personal gnarantee to this remedy if we were not proposed to prove the reasonableness of our claim in every particular, and we see no reason why anyone should besitate to accept our offer and try it We have two sizes of Reval Mucu-Tone, prices 50 cents and $1.00 Sometimes a 50 cent bottle is sufficient to give marked relief. As a general thing the most chronic was is relieved with an average of three large hattles. You can abtain Rexall remedies in Northville only at our store, The Rexull Store. A E Stanley & Co. 9

PARMINGTON NEWS.

The High school boys will give a banquet in the town hall tomofrow waturday) evening. John Power will act as toust master, and prominent speakers are expected from different parts of the state, among them Jas Schemmerhorn, editor of the Detroit Times and Andrew L Moore of Pontiac. This is to be one of the swell events of the season.

The citizens of Farmington were delighted by the splendio mesical entertainment recently given in the Methodist church under the auspices of the choir, by the Dunham Bros trio of Detroit, assisted by Clyde Nichols and Miss Leona Troy, also of Detroit. The concert was truly of a very high order. The tries by Dunham Bros., were excellent, the voices blending perfectly. James Dunham, tenor and Herbert Dunham, basso, each gave solos which were rendered with good taste and were well received Miss Troy's instrumental selections showed her to be a very taleated plaufst. Mr. Nichols' solos were even good enough for Mr. Nichols and that is high praise indeed as every one can testify who has had the great pleasure of hearing him sing. The audience was large and showed its bearty appreciation by encoring every selection.
