QUIET ELECTION HELD MONDAY

NORTHROP ELECTED SUPERVISOR BY USUAL MAJORITY.

Will Tinkham the Lone Democrat Winner.

Monday was rather of a quiet election day. The rain in the forenoon did not tend to bring in the farmer vote that was expected. Just 322 votes were cast.

The Democrats centered their efforts on the clerkship and Will Tinkham in consequence won out. Floyd Northrop won out for supervisor by the usual majority.

Following is the vote:

To Our Friends and Patrons.

Having closed out our business to Mr. C. A. Ponsford, who comes to us very highly recommended, we wish to thank you all for the many courtesies shown us during our business term here and can assure you that you will receive the best of treatment from our successor whose aim will be to carry only the best quality of goods at living prices. We personally invite you to call at the old place of business for your wants. We retire with best wishes to you and our successor.

T. J. PERKINS & CO.

Olm—VanValkenburg.

Miss Jessie J. VanValkenburg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emory VanValkenburg of this village, was united in marriage in Detroit at the home of the bride's sister on Wednesday of this week, to Mr. Charles H. Olm. Mr. Olm formerly lived in Northville but went to Seattle some five years ago, where he has been engaged in business until recently. The young couple will make Northville their home for the present and they are now receiving congratulations from their many friends. The wedding was a quiet affair, only the near relatives being present.

School Notes.

(By a Pupil.)

Pete Moshermere has entered school.

Lin Taylor is a new pupil in the Second grade.

The Second grade has an umbrella calendar for April.

The doctors seem to be losing their grip on the school.

The Second grade has a bunch of cherry blossoms in the room.

The B Fourth pupils are studying the life of Alexander the Great.

The First grade is studying the wild flowers which are in bloom.

The Fourth grade pupils are watching the germination of seeds.

Mrs. Madam's Parmenter and Taylor visited the Kindergarten this week.

Marion Power drew the Seventh grade calendar on the blackboard.

The First grade is planting seeds in the new window box for Nature Study.

The Fourth grade spelling contest between the A and B classes is now on.

The Sixth and Seventh grades will hold a spelling contest this afternoon.

The Third grade pupils are learning bible exercises for the morning exercises.

The Seventh grade pupils took a field trip with Mr. Larkin Tuesday afternoon.

The Fifth grade pupils painted stained glass windows in drawing class this week.

A new flag has been presented to the school by the Board and will soon be raised on high.

The Agriculture class is testing seeds for vitality and are preparing experiments by budding.

The First grade children are interested in watching the fish which have been brought to school.

Gertrude Kinvon and Iris Merritt have re-entered the Kindergarten after long absences on account of sickness.

Miss Cole has painted some very beautiful spring scenes on the blackboards of the Fourth, Fifth and Seventh grades.

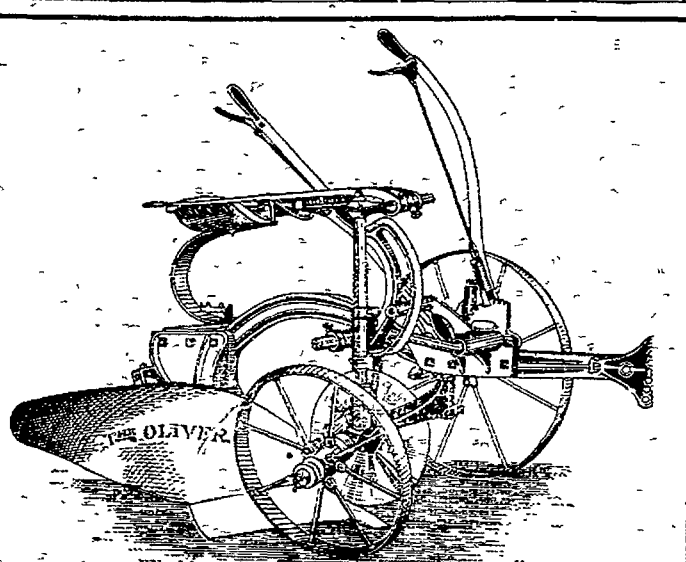

Practising still goes on for the Field Meet. The time and place will be determined by a meeting at Wayne next Saturday morning.

Leo Isham, Linden Pullen, Clifford Shrier, Gwendyng Taylor, Clifton Parmenter, Angeline Bowles and Blanch Meyers are new Kindergarten pupils.

Base ball games have been scheduled for May 7, Ann Arbor High in Northville; May 17, Eastern High in town and arrangements are being made for a game with the M. A. C. Freshman at both places.

All the outside members of the Athletic association, who wish to attain the benefits of the tennis grounds and rackets, will please see Clyde Schoultz and pay an assessment of ten cents or their membership will not be retained. There are only two spring assessments.

Supt. LaRue says: "In a great many cases it has been the customary thing for some parents to add a little bit of time to the regular vacation, that is, if the vacation is to begin Wednesday morning they take it for granted that it might just as well begin Tuesday morning. Now our vacations are as long as is consistent with the amount of work to be done. School begins the first of the year and runs right up to the last minute before vacation. If you have this habit of allowing your boy or girl to stay out before the beginning of the vacation I wish to ask you to consider the matter carefully and see if we can't keep together on this issue."

NORTHVILLE, MICH., APR. 8 '10

Congressman Townsend a Candidate for U. S. Senator Only.

Congressman Townsend, in confering with some of his friends at Detroit, Saturday, announced that he would not again be a candidate for re-election in the Second District. Mr. Townsend's ability and experience would certainly enable him to give Michigan splendid service in the Senate of the United States, and his decision not to allow the question of his re-election to the House in any way to embarrass him in his fight for the Senate is certainly a very commendable one. There is no question that he could be re-elected to the House from the Second District. He has voluntarily sacrificed that certainty in order to place himself in a better position for election to an office where he will be able to render a higher degree of service to the people of the state. Mr. Townsend is widely known as a progressive of the conservative type. He believes in making progress, but in using judgment and common sense in making it. His consistent and dignified course at Washington has commended itself to many thousands of voters in the state and there is no question that when he takes the field in person, he will win to support a great majority of the electors of the state.

Happy Women

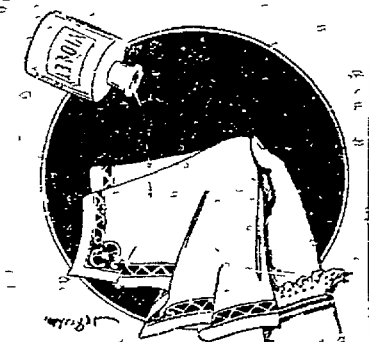

Plenty of them in Northville, and Good Reason for it.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, after years of backache suffering, days of misery, nights of unrest, the distress of urinary troubles, the finds relief and cure? No reason why any Northville reader should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. J. H. Taylor, Center St., Northville, Mich., says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. Some years ago I suffered from backache and pains across my kidneys and at that time I took Doan's Kidney Pills, procuring them from Murdock Bros., Drug Store. They lived up to the claims made for them, relieving the backache and other annoyances, and helping me in every way. Another member of the family who took Doan's Kidney Pills also received great benefit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Patricia Holbrook and Miss Helen Holbrook, the daughters, were entrusted to the care of Laurence Donovan, a writer, summering near Port Annapolis. Miss Patricia confided to Donovan that she had a father, but that he had been ruined by a bank failure, had constantly threatened her. Donovan, discovered and captured an intruder, who proved to be the band of Helen. Donovan saw Miss Holbrook and her father thought as friends. He met the girl, who supposed was Holbrook, but who said he was, Haurdree, a canoe-maker. Miss Pat announced her father's name, and Helen Holbrook and Mr. Haurdree, and another blind page. Donovan was Helen's guardian at night. Dupuy of the police was confessed by the girl. Helen stole from the house. She met Reginald Gillespie, who told her his love. Helen was confined to her room. She met Donovan, slipped a draft for her father into the hand of the Italian sailor. Helen Holbrook said she was alone in a canoe. Helen was thought to have been in the Gillespie admitted that he had $1000 for her. Helen told him she had then left to spend it. Miss Helen and Donovan met in the night. She told him Gillespie was in the night. He told her she loved for her. Donovan found Gillespie kissed and bound in a cabin, inhabited by the villainous Italian and Holbrook. Helen admitted love for Helen. Calling herself Rosalind, a "voice" appealed to Donovan for help. She told him she was a canoe-maker, and see that no injury befall him. He went to Test. Donovan found the Italian sailor and Helen Holbrook—who had fought each other, consultation. "Rosalind" appeared. She averted a murder. Helen returned. On investigation he found Helen Holbrook, the sailor, and Miss Helen engaged in an arranged marriage. He revealed Rosalind, who by night he supposed to be Miss Helen. He revealed the father, Mr. Haurdree, who was the canoe-maker, and Helen's brother. The girl Helen was as much alike as twin. Thus Helen's supposed duplicity was explained. Helen visited Donovan and his assistants, and Helen Holbrook together for settlement of their money affairs. Helen had kept them in the night. Gillespie planned a way. He made Gillespie give a number of papers to Rosalind, who was supposed to be a girl of the same name. The other Donovan shared the way for settlement of the Holbrook could be settled. The Holbrook's daughter

"The hour of enchantment is almost past. I must have the sun before the princess goes back to her castle," and Rosalind took my arm.

"Meet me at the landing in two minutes, Gillespie! As a special favor—as a particular inducement—I shall direct you to take the prince's home!" And I hurried Rosalind away, beyond the blue clock and flung, I thought her.

"Well," she said, drawing the hood over her head, "who am I now, my boy?"

"Don't ask me such questions! I'm afraid to say."

"I like you all of old times. You are undoubtedly a man of action!"

"I thank you for the word. I'm breathing hard. I have some ghosts and communicated with diabolos. She's here!" Your attention is on this very veranda more anxiously than it is well for a woman to be."

"Oh," she faltered, she took out and followed."

"She did, she undoubtedly did!"

As we paused under one of the veranda lamps she looked down at the clock and laughed.

"So this is hers!" I thought it didn't feel quite right. But that pair of gloves!"

"It's in my pocket. I have stolen it!" I led the way to the lower veranda of the casino, which was now deserted. "Stay right here and appear deeply interested in the heavens above and the waters under the earth until I get back."

I ran on the stairs again and found Helen where I had left her.

"And now," I said, "giving her my arm, you will not forget the rules of the game! Your fortunes and your father's are brighter to night than they have ever been. You hate me to the point of desperation, but remember I am your friend after all!"

"You are contemptible and wicked," she flared. "Let us go!"

Gillespie's launch was ready when we reached the pier and after he had handed her into it he plucked my sleeve and held me for an instant.

"Don't you see how wrong you are. She is superb! She is not only the most beautiful girl in the world, but the dearest, the sweetest, the kindest and best. You have served me better than you know, old man, and I'm grateful!"

In a moment they were well under way and I ran back to the clubhouse and found Rosalind where I had left her.

"We must go at once," she said. "Father will be very anxious to know how it all came out."

"But what did you think of Buttons?"

"He's very nice," she said.

"Is that all? It doesn't seem conclusive, some way!"

"Oh, he's very kind and gentle and anxious to please. But I felt like a criminal all the time."

"You seemed to be a very cheerful criminal. I suppose it was only the excitement that kept you going."

"Of course that was it! I was wondering what to call it. I'm afraid the sisters at the convent would have a less pleasant word for it."

"Well, you are not in school now."

and I think we have done a good night's work for everybody concerned. But tell me, did he make love acceptably?"

"I suppose that was what he was doing, sir," she replied demurely, averting his head.

"Suppose," I finished.

"Yes, you see, it was my first experience. And he is really very nice, and so honest and kind and gentle that I feel sorry for him."

"All you were sorry for him? Then it is all over. You are out of it? Then a woman is lucky for a man. I feel that tell me how did his advances compare with mine on those occasions when we met at the bar at St. Agatha's? I did my best to be enterprising."

"Oh, he is much more honest to me than you ever could be. I never had any illusions about you. Mr. Donovan you just must vex yourself with the nearest girl, and besides for a long, that you thought I was Helen. Mr. Gillespie is terribly in earnest. When he was talking to me last time in the corner I didn't recognize at all that it was he who drove a goat-team in Central park to sabotage the policeman."

"No, I suppose with the stage properly set—with the music and the stars and the wale,—one might forget Mr. Gillespie's mild idiosyncrasies."

"But you haven't told me about Helen. Of course she saw through the trick at once."

"She did," I answered, in a tone that caused Rosalind to laugh.

"Well, you wouldn't hurt poor little me if she scolded you?"

We were on the pier, and I whistled to Luma to bring up the launch. In a moment we were shuffling over the wake toward the Tippecanoe.

Arthur Holbrook was waiting for us in the creek.

"It is all right," I said. "I shall keep the papers for the present, if you don't mind, but your troubles are nearly over." And I left Rosalind laughing explaining to her father how it came about that she had gone to the casino in a scarlet cloak but had returned in a blue one.

CHAPTER XXII.

Mr. Gillespie's Diversions.

In my own room I drew the blinds for greater security, lighted the desk-lamp and sat down to open the packet Gillespie had given Rosalind. It was a brown commercial envelope, thrice sealed, and addressed R. Gillespie; Personal. In a corner was written Holbrook Papers. I turned the packet over and over in my hands, reflecting upon my responsibility and duty in regard to it. Henry Holbrook, in his anxiety to secure the notes, had taken advantage of Gillespie's infatuation for Helen to make her his agent for procuring them, and now it was for me to use the forged notes as a means of restoring Arthur Holbrook to his sister's confidence. The way seemed clear enough, and I went to bed resolving that in the morning, I should go to Henry Holbrook, tell him that I had the evidence of his guilt in my possession and threaten him with exposure if he did not cease his mad efforts to blackmail his sister.

I rose early and perfected my plans for the day as I breakfasted. A storm had passed round us in the night and it was bright and cool, with a sharp and betting the lake into the white ups it was 'not yet eight o'clock when I left the house for my journey search of Henry Holbrook." The velope containing the forged notes was safely locked in the vault in which the Glenarm silver was stored.

I stepped down into the park I sought sight of Miss Pat walking in a garden beyond the wall, and as I saw her cap she came toward the gate. She was lately abroad and I understood that she had been telling me.

"You are abroad, entirely, my bird,"
she said, with the delicious quiet chuck with which she sometimes addressed me. And she repeated the fact then, a ghost. First then, I did not tell her.

And the whole thing in all this time
was a lion in the secret of the sea,
and the twilight would be over it.

No such pleasant things have happened to me, Miss Holbrook.

This is my birthday. I have known myself, observe the cap!"

"We must celebrate! I create the privilege of dining you to-night!"

"You were starting for somewhere with an air of determination. Don't let me interfere with your plans."

"I was going to the bathhouse," I answered, truthfully.

Let me come along. I am turned 65, and I think I am entitled to do as please, don't you?"

"I do, indeed, but that is no reason
You are no more 65 than I am. The problem, if you will pardon me, only proclains your immunity from the blasts of Time."

"I wish I had known you at 20," she said brightly, as we went on together.

My suggestion could not have been more complete."

"Do you make speeches like that to Helen?"

"If I do it is with less inspiration!"

"You must stop chaffing me. I am not 65 for nothing and I don't think you are naturally disrespectful."

When we reached the bathhouse she took a chair on the little veranda and smiled as though something greatly amused her.

"Mr. Dorocean—I am 65, as I have said before—may I call you—"

"I pry, and gladden me forever!"

"Then, Larry, what a lot of freudwe all are!"

"I suppose we are." I admitted
doubtfully, not sure where the joke lay.

"You have been trying to be very kind to me, haven't you?"

"I have accomplished nothing."

"You have tried to make my way easy here; and you have had no end of trouble. I am not as dull as I look, Larry."

"If I have deceived you it has been with an honest purpose."

"I don't question that. But Helen has been giving you a great deal of trouble, hasn't she? You don't quite make her out; isn't that true?"

"I understand her perfectly," I answered, cheerlessly.

"You are a darling young man, Larry,
to make that statement of a woman Helen has not always de-honestly with her—or me!"

"She is the noblest girl in the world; she is splendid beyond all words of mine. I don't understand what you mean, Miss Holbrook."

"Larry, you dear boy, I am no more blind or deaf than I am dumb! Helhas been seeing her father and Reginald Gillespie. She has run off at night, thinking I wouldn't know it. She is an extremely clever young woman, but when she has made a habit of retiring early, only to creep out and drop down from the dining room balcony and dodge your guards, I have known it. She was away last night and came creeping in like a thief. It has amused me, Larry; it has furnished me real diversion. The only thing that puzzles me is that I don't quite see where you stand."

"I haven't always been sure myself, to be frank about it!"

"Why not tell me just how it is? Whether Helen has been amusing herself with you, or you with Helen."

"Oh!" I laughed. "When you came here, you told me she was the finest girl in the world, and I accepted your word for it. I have every confidence in your judgment, and you have known your niece for a long time."

"I have, indeed."

"And I'm sure you wouldn't have deceived me!"

"But I did! I wanted to interest you in her. Something in your eyes told me that you might do great things for her."

"Thank you!"

"But instead of that you have played into her hands. Why did you let her steal out at night to meet her father, when you knew that could only do her and me a grave injury? And you have aided her in seeing Gillespie, when I particularly warned you that he was most repugnant to me."

I laughed in spite of myself as I remembered the night's adventure; and Miss Pat stopped short in the path and faced me with the least glint of anger in her eyes.

"I really didn't think you capable of it! She will marry him for his money!"

"Take my word for it she will do nothing of the kind."

"You are under her spell and you don't know it! I think—sometimes—I think the girl has no soul!" she said at last.

The dear voice faltered, and the tears flashed into Miss Pat's eyes as she confronted me in the woodland path.

"Oh no! It's not so bad as that!" I pleaded.

"I tell you she has no soul! You will find it put to your test. She is made of nothing but mischief in this world!"

"I am your humble servant, Miss Holbrook."

"Then," she began, doubtfully, and meeting my eyes with careful scrutiny, "I am going to ask you to do one thing more for me, that we may settle this disagreeable affair. I am going to pay Henry his money, but before I do so I must find my brother Arthur. He is still alive. That may have some difficulties."

She looked at me as though for approval, then went on:

"I have been thinking of all this. Her grave lay across the twinkling lake, and her voice was tremulous. She spoke softly as though to herself, and I caught phrases of the paragraph of her father's will that Gillespie had read to me: "Dis honor as it is known, accounted and reckoned among men—and she bowed her head and on the veranda rail a moment, then she rose suddenly and smiled bravely through her tears."

"Why can't you find Arthur for me? Ah, if you could only find him, the might be peace between us all; for am very old, Larry. Age with peace is like life without hope. I cannot believe that Arthur is dead. I must see him again, Larry, if he is alive find him and tell him to come to me."

"Yes," I said; "I know where he is."

She started in amazement and, coming close, her hands closed upon my arm eagerly.

"It can't be possible! You know where he is and you will bring him to me?"

She was pitifully eager and the tears were bright in her eyes.

"Be assured of it, Miss Holbrook. I am near by and well; but you must trouble about him or about anything. And now I am going to take you home. Come! There is much to do, and I must be off. But you will keep a heart, you are near the end of your difficulties."

She was quite herself again when we reached St. Agatha's, but as the steamer detained me a moment.

"I like you, Larry!" she said, taking my hand; and my own mother had given me, sweeter benediction, never intended that Helen should with you. She may serve me as you likes, but I don't want her to serve your wings, Larry."

For Catarrh

Medicine Free in Every Case Where it Fails to Relieve.

Neglect or pessimism, we believe, is the greatest enemy the public has to contend with when applied to the loss or recovery of health. Practically every case of consumption might have been cured if hope had been maintained and proper treatment had been resorted to at the first symptom of disease. Until the advanced stage is reached, consumption is curable. Catarrh is responsible, we believe, for many cases of consumption. It is about catarrh we want to talk to you today, incidentally consumption, since the two are so closely allied.

We have a medicine made from a prescription of one of the most successful catarrh specialists known. We believe it is positively without an equal. We are so satisfied that we are right, that we will supply the medicine free in every instance where it is used according to directions for a reasonable length of time, should it fail to give satisfaction in every particular. We want every one to try this medicine at our risk. There are no conditions attached to our offer. We put the user under no obligation to us whatever.

The medicine we want you to try is Rexall Muc-Tone. It is a catarrh remedy that goes direct to the seat of trouble. It is carried by the blood to every part of the system. It purifies and enriches the blood, tones up the mucous cells, and brings about a condition of health and strength that tends to prevent the germs of consumption from getting a start. Besides this, Rexall Muc-Tone is a wonderful appetizer, digestive aid, and flesh builder. Its good effects are often felt from the very first dose. It is one of the largest and most satisfactory selling medicines that we have ever had anything to do with.

We know so much of the great good that it has done that we personally back it up with our reputation and money, which fact should be ample guarantee to satisfy anybody. Rexall Muc-Tone comes in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. We urge you to try it. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Northville only at our store, the Rexall Store, A. E. Stanley & Co.

SALEM NEWS.

The Woman's Missionary Circle will meet next Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. C. H. Callahan. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Mrs. Geo. Whipple, Mrs. Roy Larkins and Miss Carrie Angell gave a "miscellaneous" shower at the home of the former Monday afternoon in honor of Miss Hilda Merritt. A dainty lunch was served and all reported a good time.

A very pretty home wedding occurred at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Merritt on Wednesday evening of this week when their daughter, Hilda, was united in marriage to Mr. Guy C. Rorabacher by Rev. Callahan in the presence of relatives and a few of their most intimate friends. The bride was tastefully gowned in cream silk and carried pink roses. The house decorations were sweet peas and smilax. After congratulations, a dainty two-course luncheon was served. The young couple received a large number of useful and costly gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Rorabacher will be at home to their many friends after May 20 at the Rorabacher farm in West Salem.
