ANOTHER MATINEE

AT ATHLETIC PARK, NORTHVILLE,
JULY 30.

Horse Races, Ball Games and Fun
Galore.

The Northville Driving club have decided to hold another of their popular matinees at Athletic Park on Saturday, July 30. There will be horse races, ball games and fun galore. Take a half a day off and enjoy the sport.

THEY WON TWO GAMES LAST WEEK

"Circle N" Beat "the Carleton and P. M. Teams

In two exciting contests the "Circle N" boys won two ball games last week.

On Friday they went down to Carleton and ate up the sphere smashers there by a score of 4 to 3. It was a good fast game and while there was no sensational playing at the same time the game was of more than ordinary interest.

Saturday's game here with the P. M.'s of Detroit was a thriller. At the beginning of the seventh the score stood 2 and 2. Then an old time rally took place and the Circle fellows pounded out five runs making them the final winners by a score of 7 to 2. The seventh inning alone was worth two admissions.

The joys of the Umpire.

Arguing with the Umpire when he called a Carleton batter safe on a pop fly to Dabuar. After catching it Jamie did a double circus tumbling act but still held the ball. The umpire however wouldn't have it an out though it was plain enough to everyone else.

THE CALL OF THE FIELDS.

Political Notes.

The Independent Voter.

Mr. Graybill of the Greenville Independent, who for more than forty years has been gauging political conditions in Michigan, says: "It has been thought by many that the vote of the upper peninsula in the governor's primary, on any question which seemingly affects the mining interests, would be cast solid for the candidates best sustaining their interests, and doubtless this is true. Yet it has already been found that there is not unanimity of sentiment even on mining interests. Doubtless a majority will vote for Osborn as representing those interests. But it is reported by persons more or less familiar with political sentiment in that section that there is quite a minority of voters which will not be cast for Osborn, not that they have anything against him personally, but that they will not vote with the mining interests which some consider as a sort of outgroup ruling all things simply to secure their personal interests. It is this independent vote, not controlled by the mining interests, that will make it quite difficult to predict with certainty how large or small will be the Osborn majority in the mining region."

From N. P. Hull, Master of State Grange.

"So much has been said about Mr. Hull's position on the governorship matter that the Journal feels in-pelled to contribute something. During Mr. Hull's visit to Delta county last week on the occasion of the County Grange meeting, he was asked who the grangers should support. Mr. Hull's reply was, in substance, as follows:

"As Master of the State Grange I am supporting no candidate. For reasons of personal friendship I personally am supporting Mr. Kelley. Mr. Musselman is a splendid citizen and would make a good governor. I believe that both he and Mr. Kelley are friendly to the interests of the farmers. Under no consideration should grangers support Mr. Osborn. He has taken a position in direct opposition to the position the Grange has taken, and grangers cannot consistently do anything else but vote against him. And there you have Mr. Hull's position." The Journal would much prefer to quote him as being in favor of Mr. Musselman alone, but the editor is giving it to you straight. "Vote for any candidate but Osborn."—Escanaba Journal.

Democratic Campaign.

The Grand Traverse Daily Eagle cynically observes that, "From some of the remarks made by Hon. Chase S. Osborn in his gubernatorial campaign many people are led to the belief that he is in the employ of the state democratic campaign committee. His chief talk is along the lines that every person engaged with the administrations of the past few years has been 'wrong'."

Open-Air Barbers in Spain.

Fingers that smell of garlic, soap that gives no lather, a razor that may have been used for cutting a raw ham, and a flourish that reminds one of an executioner rather than of a barber—such are the qualifications of the itinerant Spanish hairdresser, declares a writer in the "Wide World." The victim—we use the term advisedly—must be a patient, long-suffering man, neither the slave of time nor of any petty feelings such as delicacy and sensitiveness, as otherwise he will fare badly at the hands of his torturer. For the Spanish open-air barber is a cool man, who takes everything for granted, and never for a moment doubts that you are satisfied with his attentions and will pay him accordingly.

His Pledge.

A man is just one of the pledges God makes to the world, and it depends on the man to say whether the pledge is to be kept.—W. R. Leighton.

North Remembering.

Just try to remember that your prejudice against a man doesn't necessarily make him contemptible.

Daily Health Hint.

By eating a portion of meat with one of bread and adding fresh vegetables and water, every need of the body can be supplied without overloading the stomach.

Women Composers.

Lovers of "In a Persian Garden" and other song cycles, will have an opportunity to welcome their composer, Liza Lehmann, whose presence will once more raise the question "Can women compose?" They are trying hard enough, beyond all doubt, indeed, the publishers say there are now more women who compose than men.—H. T. Smith in the Independent.

Seems a Just Tax.

Governments of the federated states of Germany are considering the introduction of a land tax on the "unearned increment." The measure is expected to raise $5,000,000 annually. It is held that such a tax would rest heavily on speculators and land owners in cities, but lightly on country districts, where values increase very slowly, if at all.

Feeding the Frogs.

In France, a hundred and fifty years ago, the rich people living in the country obliged men and boys among the poor to wait about their lakes and ponds at night and throw stones at the frogs who croaked and made a disturbing noise. "It wasn't fun for the boys after the first night or two and the frogs also had something to complain of."

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants desisted. As Miss Innes looked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with uneasy noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude related that she was engaged to marry Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. It developed that the intruder was probably a woman. Gertrude was suspected for the intruder left a print of a bare foot. Gertrude returned home with her luggage and a suitcase. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff button. Halsey suddenly reappeared. He said he and Bailey had left because they had received a telegram. Gertrude said that she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him Halsey's loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested, charged with embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong had wrecked his own bank and was able to clear Bailey. A telegram contained news that Paul Armstrong was dead. Halsey trapped Mrs. Watson, the housekeeper while she was stealing from the house. At the lodge Miss Innes and Halsey found Halsey's fiancée, Louise Armstrong, sister of the dead man. She was believed to be in California. The lodge keeper told Miss Innes that Louise and Arnold had had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

The gardener mentioned by Halsey came out about two o'clock in the afternoon, and walked up from the station. I was favorably impressed by him. His references were good—he had been employed by the Brays until they went to Europe, and he looked young and vigorous. He asked for one assistant, and I was glad enough to get off so easily. He was a pleasant-looking young fellow, with black hair and blue eyes, and his name was Alexander Graham. I have been particular about Alex, because, as I said before, he played an important part later.

That afternoon I had a new insight into the character of the dead banker. I had my first conversation with Louise. She sent for me, and against my better judgment I went.

She held out her hand and I took it between both of mine.

"What can I say to you Miss Innes?" she said slowly. "To have come like this—"

I thought she was going to break down, but she did not.

"You are not to think of anything but of getting well," I said, patting her hand. "When you are better, I am going to scold you for not coming here at once. This is your home, my dear, and of all people in the world, Halsey's old aunt ought to make you welcome."

She smiled a little, sadly, I thought. "I ought not to see Halsey," she said. "Miss Innes, there are a great many things you will never understand. I am afraid, I am an impostor on your sympathy, because I—stay here and let you lavish care on me, and all the time I know you are going to despise me."

"Nonsense!" I said briskly. "Why, what would Halsey do to me if I even ventured such a thing? He is so big and masterful that I dared to be anything but rapturous over you, he would throw me out of a window. Indeed, he would be quite capable of it."

She seemed scarcely to hear my facetious tone. She had eloquent brown eyes—the Inneses are fair, and prone to a grayish-green optic that is better for use than appearance—and they seemed now to be clouded with trouble.

"Poor Halsey!" she said softly. "Miss Innes, I cannot marry him, and I am afraid to tell him. I am a coward—a coward!"

I sat beside the bed and stared at her. She was too ill to argue with, and, besides, sick people take queer fancies.

"We will talk about that when you are stronger," I said gently.

"But there are some things I must tell you," she insisted. "You must wonder how I came here, and why I stayed hidden at the lodge. Dear old

"I Am Very Sorry You Have Made This Decision," He Said

Thomas has been almost crazy, Miss Innes. I did not know that Sunnyside was rented. I knew my mother wished to rent it without telling my stepfather, but the news must have reached her after I left. When I started east, I had only one idea—to be alone with my thoughts for a time to bury myself here. Then, I must have taken a cold on the train.

"You came east in clothing suitable for California," I said, "and like all young girls nowadays, I don't suppose you wear flannels." But she was not listening.

"Miss Innes," she said, "has my stepbrother Arnold gone away?"

"What do you mean?" I asked, startled. But Louise was literal.

"He didn't come back that night," she said, "and it was so important that I should see him."

"I believe he has gone away," I replied uncertainly. "Is it something that we could attend to instead?"

But she shook her head. "I must do it myself," she said dully.

Halsey came to the door at that moment and I could hear him coaxing Liddy for admission to the sick room. "Shall I bring him in?" I asked.

Louise uncertain what to do. The girl seemed to shrink back among her pillows at the sound of his voice. I was vaguely irritated with her, there are few young fellows like that—straightforward, honest, and willing to sacrifice everything for the one woman I knew one once, more than 30 years ago who was like that; he died a long time ago. And sometimes I take out his picture, with its cane and its queer silk hat, and look at it. But of late years it has grown too painful; he is always a boy—and I am an old woman. I would not bring him back if I could.

Perhaps it was some such memory that made me call out sharply. "Come in, Halsey." And then I took my sewing and went into the boudoir beyond, to play propriety. I did not try to hear what they said, but every word came through the open door with curious distinctness. Halsey had evidently gone over to the bed and I suppose he kissed her. There was silence for a moment, as if words were superfluous things.

"I have been almost wild, sweetheart," Halsey's voice. "Why didn't you trust me, and send me before?"

"It was because I couldn't trust myself," she said in a low tone. "I am too weak to struggle to-day; oh, Halsey, how I have wanted to see you!"

There was something I did not hear, then Halsey again.

"We could go away," he was saying. "What does it matter about any one in the world but just the two of us? To be always together, like this, hand in hand, Louise—don't tell me it isn't going to be. I won't believe you."

"You don't know; you don't know," Louise repeated dully. "Halsey, I care—you know that—but not enough to marry you."

"That is not true, Louise," he said sternly. "You cannot look at me with your honest eyes and say that."

"I cannot marry you," she repeated miserably. "It's bad enough, isn't it? Don't make it worse. Some day, before long, you will be glad."

"Then it is because you have never loved me." There were depths of hurt pride in his voice. "You saw how much I loved you, and you let me think you cared—for a while. Now that isn't like you, Louise. There is something you haven't told me. Is it—because there is some one else?"

"Yes," almost inaudibly.

"Louise! Oh, I don't believe it!"

"It is true," she said sadly. "Halsey, you must not try to see me again. As soon as I can, I am going away from here—where you are all so much kinder than I deserve. And whatever you hear about me, try to think as well of me as you can. I am going to marry—another man. How you must hate me—hate me!"

"I could hear Halsey cross the room to the window. Then, after a pause, he went back to her again. 'I could hardly sit still, I wanted to go in and give her good shaking.'"

"Then it's all over," he was saying with a long breath. "The plans we made together, the hopes, the—all of it—over! Well, it's not to be a baby, and I'll give you up the minute you say I don't love you and I do love—some one else!"

"I can't say that," she breathed. "But, very soon, I shall marry—the other man!"

"I could hear Halsey's low triumphant laugh."

"I defy him," he said. "Sweetheart, as long as you care for me, I am not afraid."

The wind slammed the door between the two rooms just then, and I could hear nothing more. Although I moved my chair quite close. After a five-minute interval, I went into the other room and found Louise alone. She was staring with wide eyes at the cherub painted on the ceiling over the bed, and because she looked that I did not disturb her.

CHAPTER XIV.

An Egg-Nog and a Telegram.

We had discovered Louise at the lodge Tuesday night. It was Wednesday I had my interview with her. Thursday and Friday were uneventful, save as they marked improvement in our patient. Gertrude spent almost all the time with her, and the two had grown to be great friends. But certain things hung over me constantly, the coroner's inquest on the death of Arnold Armstrong, to be held Saturday, and the arrival of Mrs. Armstrong and young Dr. Walker, bringing the body of the dead president of the Traders' bank. We had not told Louise of either death.

Then, too, I was anxious about the children. With their mother's inheritance swept away in the wreck of the bank and with their love affairs in a disastrous condition, things could scarcely be worse. Added to that, the cook and Liddy had a flare up over the proper way to make beef-tea for Louise, and, of course, the cook left.

Mrs. Watson had been glad enough, I think, to turn Louise over to our care, and Thomas went upstairs night and morning to greet his young mistress from the doorway. Poor Thomas! He had the faculty—found still in some old negroes, who cling to the traditions of slavery days—of making his employer's interest his. It was always "we" with Thomas. I miss him sorely; pipe-smoking, obsequious, not over reliable, kindly old man!

On Thursday Mr. Harton, the Armstrongs' legal adviser, called up from town. He had been advised, he said, that Mrs. Armstrong was coming east with her husband's body and would arrive Monday. He came with some hesitation, at last, to the fact that he had been further instructed to ask me to relinquish my lease on Sunnyside, as it was Mrs. Armstrong's desire to come directly there.

I was agast.

"Here!" I said. "Surely you are mistaken, Mr. Harton. I should think, after what happened here only a few days ago, she would never wish to come back."

"Nevertheless," he replied, "she is most anxious to come. This is what she says: 'Use every possible means to have Sunnyside vacated. Must go there at once.'"

"Mr. Harton," I said testily, "I am not going to do anything of the kind."

er than I deserve. And whatever you hear about me, try to think as well of me as you can. I am going to marry—another man. How you must hate me—hate me!"

"I shall not relinquish it," I replied, and I imagined his irritation from the way he hung up the receiver.

I wrote the telegram down word for word, afraid to trust my memory, and decided to ask Dr. Stewart how soon Louise might be told the truth. The closing of the Traders' bank I considered unnecessary for her to know, but the death of her stepfather and stepmother must be broken to her soon, or she might hear it in some unexpected and shocking manner.

Dr. Stewart came about four o'clock bringing his lecture-satchel into the house with a great deal of care, and opening it at the foot of the stairs to show me a dozen big yellow eggs resting among the bottles.

"Real eggs," he said solemnly. "Some of you think stone eggs, but the real thing some of them will warm. Feed them." Backlog for Mrs. Louise!

He was bounding with expectation and before he left he insisted on going back to the pantry and adding an egg-nog with his own hands. Some how, all the time he was doing it, I had a vision of Dr. Willoughby, my nurse and friend in the city, trying to make an egg-nog. I wondered if he ever prescribed anything so phibetic—and so delicious. And while Dr. Stewart whisked the eggs he talked.

"I said to Mrs. Stewart," he confided, "a little red in the face from the exertion, after I went home the other day, that you would think me an old gossip, for saying what I did about Walker and Miss Louise."

"Nothing of the sort," I protested. "The fact is," he went on, "I've been justifying myself. 'I got that piece of information just as we get a lot of things, through the kitchen end of the house. Young Walker's chauffeur—Walker's more fashionable than I am, and he goes around the country in a Stanhope car—well, his chauffeur comes to see our servant girl, and he told her the whole thing. I thought it was probable, because Walker spent a lot of time up here last summer, when the family was here, and besides, Riggs, that's Walker's man, had a very pat little story about the doctor's building a house on this property, just at the foot of the hill. The sugar, please!"

The egg-nog was finished. Drop by drop the liquor had cooled the eggs, and now, with a final whisk, a last toss in the shaker, it was ready, a symphony in gold and white. The doctor sniffed it.

"Real eggs, real milk, and a touch of real Kentucky whisky," he said.

He insisted on carrying it up himself, but at the foot of the stairs he paused.

"Riggs said the plans were drawn for the house," he said, harking back to the old subject. "Drawn by Huston in town. So I naturally believed him."

When the doctor came down, I was ready with a question.

"Doctor," I asked, "is there any one in the neighborhood named 'Carrington'?"

"Carrington?" He wrinkled his forehead. "Carrington? No, I don't remember any such family. There used to be Covingtons down the creek."

"The name was Carrington," I said, and the subject lapsed.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

I and mine have suffered enough at the hands of this family. I rented the house at an exorbitant figure and I have moved out here for the summer. My city home is dispirited and in the hands of decorators. I have been here one week, during which I have had not a single night of uninterrupted sleep, and I intend to stay until I have recuperated. Moreover, if Mr. Armstrong died insolvent, as I believe was the case, his widow ought to be glad to be rid of so expensive a piece of property."

The lawyer cleared his throat.

"I am very sorry you have made this decision," he said. "Miss Innes, Mrs. Fitzhugh tells me Louise Armstrong is with you."

"She is."

"Has she been informed of this—double bereavement?"

"Not yet," I said. "She has been very ill; perhaps to-night she can be told."

"It is very sad, very sad," he said. "I have a telegram for her, Miss Innes. Shall I send it out?"

"Better open it and read it to me," I suggested. "If it is important, that will save time."

There was a pause while Mr. Harton opened the telegram. Then he read it slowly, judicially.

"Watch for Nina Carrington Home Monday. Signed: F. L. W."

"Hum!" I said. "Watch for Nina Carrington. Home Monday. Very well, Mr. Harton, I will tell her, but she is not in condition to watch for any one."

"Well, Miss Innes, if you decide to—"

"—relinquish the lease, let me know," the lawyer said.

"I shall not relinquish it," I replied, and I imagined his irritation from the way he hung up the receiver.

I wrote the telegram down word for word, afraid to trust my memory, and decided to ask Dr. Stewart how soon Louise might be told the truth.

Mrs. Carrie Doherty King, of Crystal Springs, Miss., is the only woman mail carrier in her state. She delivers mail on a rural route, making a circuit of about 25 miles a day. In her girlhood she won many trophies for her horsemanship, an accomplishment that is now of great service to her.

DEAN WORCESTER WALKS INTO TRAP

LIFE OF FORMER ANN ARBOR PROFESSOR SAVED BY HIS BODYGUARD.

THREE OF HIS ASSAILANTS ARE SHOT DEAD ON PALAWAN ISLAND, PHILIPPINES.

100,221 Persons in Prisons of the United States—2,918 in Michigan Institutions.

Set Upon By Brigands.

Dean C. Worcester, American secretary of interior for the Philippines, was set upon by renegade Moros on the island of Palawan, and escaped assassination only through the aid of his bodyguard, who shot down the outlaws. Three were killed outright.

Mr. Worcester was touring the island, the most western of the larger of the Philippine group bounding the Sulu sea on the west, and was present at the installation of the new governor. In anticipation of his coming a band of Moros planned his death. Armed with carefully concealed bolts they laid a trap. The secretary found himself the object of a savage rush. Capt. Moynihan, of the scouts, was the first to recognize the hostile movement and just in the nick of time ordered the scouts to fire. At the flash the three leading Moros dropped in their tracks. Several others doubled up with more or less severe wounds. The others took to their heels.

U. S. Prisons Contain 100,221 Persons.

Invitations have been received by Lansing officers connected with the Michigan prisons to attend the international prison congress at Washington, D. C., Oct. 2 to 8. Representatives of foreign countries and nearly all the states in this country will be in attendance.

According to figures compiled by the secretary of the congress, 43 per cent of the total criminal population of the United States is confined in the 28 prisons of the country or a total of 47,559 prisoners. There are confined in the 34 workhouses and houses of correction 14,271 persons. In 107 reformatories and industrial schools 18,335 are confined. In the 195 institutions for criminals in the United States an aggregate of 100,221 are confined.

According to the figures of the secretary the population of Michigan prisons is divided as follows: Jail 100, 721, Inmate 571, Marquette 200, Detroit house of correction 308, industrial school for boys Lansing 700, state school for girls at Adrian 180, total 2,918.

Wheat Up to New High Mark.

A new high price record for wheat, the third within a week, for this season, was established Monday. Under drought and heat in the northwest, export buying on the part of shorts in Liverpool, was also sharp, and surprisingly light and damage by blight in France all were influential in the rise.

In addition to the crop losses in the country and Canada, the French yield, it is predicted, would be 30 to 35 million bushels short. The opening bid started at $1.08 1/2 to $1.09 1/2 a rise of 1/4 cent. Fluctuating widely, the price went on advancing to $1.09 1/2.

Apple Crop Will Total $27,000,000.

Buyers for commission houses in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities which are distributing centers traveling in the northwestern states, estimate that 75,000 cars or from 9,500,000 to 10,000,000 boxes of apples suitable for eastern markets will be shipped from commercial orchards in Washington, California, Colorado, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Utah this season. It is also estimated that between 3,000 and 4,000 cars will be required to supply the local and European trade. The market value of the crop in the several states is placed at, from $27,000,000 to $29,000,000 at present prices.

Elks' Home Stays in Virginia.

In a tumultuous session of the grand lodge B. O. P. E., which lasted until a late hour Wednesday night, and in which the feeling of sectionalism rose dangerously close to the surface on several occasions, the proposition to abandon the Elks' National home at Bedford City, Va., or move it to some other city, was defeated.

Instead the board of trustees was instructed to prepare plans and specifications for the remodeling of the home and beautifying of the grounds to be presented to the next session of the grand lodge at Atlantic City. In addition the sum of $7,500 was voted the board to be used in making such temporary repairs and improvements as are deemed necessary during the year.

The British Columbia government has placed orders in Pittsburg for complete apparatus for three mine rescue stations to be installed in the principal coal mining areas of British Columbia. One will be established in Crownsnest Pass and two on Vancouver island.

More than half a million cubic yards of concrete have been laid at the Panama canal locks at Gatun, which is one-fourth of the concrete required to complete the works there, and one-ninth of all the concrete necessary for completing the locks.

"The call of the fatherland" has come to Herman Gade, Norwegian consul at Chicago. He will renounce citizenship to the United States and return to Norway to become adviser to King Haakon. It is announced. Mr. Gade came to America 18 years ago, and for ten years, has practiced law in Chicago. He was graduated from Harvard.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

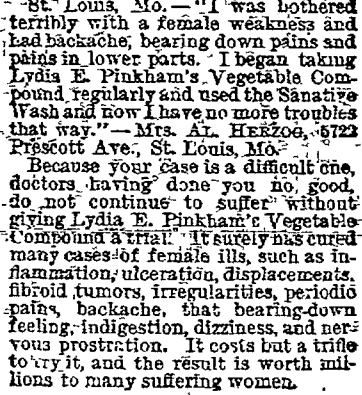

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my feet fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. MAE McKNIGHT, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.—St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. AL. HEKZOE, 5722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

ONE THING CERTAIN.

"Don you know," started the earnest doctor, "what to do to the trust?"

No, but I know blame well what they're doing to us," said a man in the front row.

"John, dear," said the young wife, "this is my birthday."

"I'm glad you mentioned it, darling," rejoined her husband. "I'll buy you a present the first thing when I get downtown."

"Well," she said, "I hope you won't get any cheap 98 cent affair."

"Of course I won't," he replied. "Why, I would be ashamed to present you with anything that cost less than a dollar."

Refinement of Assurance. Busy Business Man (fratally)—Sir, I didn't ask you to sit down!

Not Economy.

One of the many growing evils of this country today is the big city mail order houses. This town, where we have the best of stores, the most honorable merchants and where goods are sold at a margin so small as to afford a respectable living to our business men, thousands of dollars are annually sent to the department stores of our great cities. Farmers receive from our merchants a fancy price for butter, eggs and poultry, for their pumpkins, potatoes, apples and tomatoes, and then many of them take the money and send it to a city department store. There is no economy in such a manner of doing business. You can write it down in your hat that as a rule the city department store is fooling you. There is not a busi-ness man in our town who will not duplicate their prices for the same quality of goods, and he who turns down his home merchants to patronize these makers is far from being loyal to the best interests of the town in which he lives, nor is he even practicing economy.

Detroit can raise $35,000 for decorations but is unable to raise $1,000 to gravel the whole half a mile of roads in the state of Michigan, on Grand River avenue, right in the city limits.

Woman's Reserve Victory.

Mrs. William Salter has been elected a member of the London county council. She is the wife of a physician who was defeated a few days ago for parliament. Mrs. Salter made a house to house canvass and she credits her defeat on the support of women. She was opposed by two men, and she topped their combined vote. The chief plank in her platform were lower rent and lower taxes, two things which appealed to the women in the district. Her victory will represent the reserve council.

Damage Done by Smoke.

In an address before the American Civic Association, Herbert M. Wilson, chief engineer in the United States geological survey, places the annual damage and waste by smoke in the United States at $200,000,000 in the large cities alone, or about $6 to each man, woman and child of the population.

Hand-made Newspaper.

One of the most interesting and entertaining things to send to an invalid or to a sick friend in a hospital is a hand-made newspaper. Buy the pen and ink paper and fold it four times so it will be about half as large as the daily issues. Mark off five or six columns. Ask their most intimate friends to contribute items for the personal, witty advertisements, short stories, current events, weather reports, wants, news bright and helpful poetry. One page for the calendar of the month with 31 messages from as many different friends and a small picture of the writer pasted beside it. The printing should be done by hand; also the drawings, which, though they may be crude, will cause laughter. This is a help toward recovery.

A Good Reason.

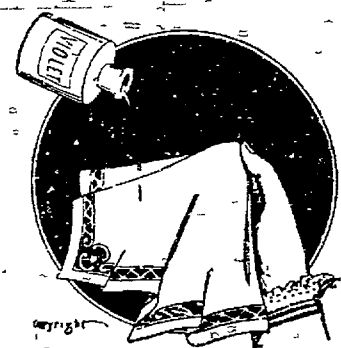

Northville People Can Tell You Why It is So.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure the cause of disease, and that is why the cure is always lasting. This remedy strengthens and tones up the kidneys, helping them to drive out of the body the liquid poisons that cause backache, headache and distressing kidney and urinary complaints. Northville people testify to permanent cures.

"A. M. Piper, Center St., Northville, Mich., says: 'I cannot say too much in favor of Doan's Kidney Pills. I had occasion to use this remedy about a year ago when I was suffering from a severe attack of kidney trouble. My back was so lame that I could hardly get around and I sat down for awhile. It was almost impossible for me to get up. When I stooped or lifted, sharp, shooting pains darted through me. The kidney secretions were highly colored, contained sediment and were painful in passage. The contents of three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Murdoch Bros. Drug Store, completely cured me and I have been in good health since. I can certainly give this excellent preparation a strong endorsement.'

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE NEW LITERATURE!

NORTHVILLE.

The City in Brief.

Delightfully cool this week. The Presbyterian parsonage is receiving a new coat of paint. John Shaw is just completing a nice new cottage at Walled Lake. Harry Kator, who has been ill the past few weeks, is able to be out again. Mrs. Sarah Palmer was taken suddenly ill Friday but is getting along nicely now. Thus far this year the Circle N boys have won fifteen of the twenty games played. Lou VanValkenburg of Roger street has improved the appearance of his residence with a fresh coat of paint.

F. D. Eatherly has oiled the road in front of his residence and it has proved a great success as a dust exterminator.

Farmington people are extending the cilling of their streets still further now that which had previously been done had proved so satisfactory.

The Warner-Richardson company have sold the condensing machinery from their old plant near the Yorkes mill to Chicago parties and it is now being shipped out.

Mrs. Jane Peck of Plymouth died at her home there Friday. She was the mother of O. D. Peck of this place and was quite well known in Northville and vicinity.

German Lutheran church service at Northville Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, wartime, conducted by Candidate Elmas Heber. All are invited, especially the congregation members.

Highway Commissioner Clark is graveling and improving the roads west and south of Floyd Northrop's. The Starkweather hill has been cut down and the valley graded up a couple feet.

The marriage of Mr. Elmas Heber and Miss Mabel Feltz will take place on Wednesday next, July 27, at 2 p. m. in the German church. On that day Mr. Oldenburg's store will remain closed all day.

Street Commissioner Green is doing some good work along the village streets these days. He is now about to give the approaches to the crosswalks all over the village attention in an endeavor to remedy their present bumpy condition.

Good idea to pass some kind of an ordinance compelling the owners of every dog in the village to pay a tax on the animal and then furnish a tag receipt to be worn by the animal. Worthless dogs about the streets would then become less of a nuisance.

The Northville council is considering calling a special election to vote on a proposition to spend $7,000 in increasing the water supply. The scheme is to buy a spring and pipe the water four miles to connect with the present system.—South Lyon Herald.

Possibly. Hadn't heard a word about it though.

The average farmer is probably not aware of the fact that an average mule sells for $10 a head more than horses. Such is the case, and the price has been gradually rising for a number of years. There has never been what would be called an over production of mules, while the market has often been unable to fully supply the demand.

An over filled gasoline stove caught fire in W. E. Ambler's ice cream parlor this morning and caused considerable excitement for a few minutes. The blaze was soon extinguished, however, without any damage being done.

Detroit certainly has a lot of kickers. Usually people who have enterprise enough to pay out a lot of money for a big dog's like the Elks convention don't expect to get it all back; nor can an assemblage of 24,000 guests be all saints any more than are all of Detroit's 450,000 inhabitants. Looks as if a lot of Detroit people are sore because the Elks didn't leave two dollars where the Detroiters spent one.

Fred Bennett's automobile was ditched near Salem while he was returning from Whitmore lake on Monday evening and when Fred lighted a match to learn where the trouble was, the gasoline tank caught fire and there was damage and the car was burned from top to bottom. With Bennett were Dr. and Mrs. Knight of Plymouth and Milton Lippman of Salt Lake City. None were injured.

Mrs. W. H. Saville underwent an operation at her home on Northside Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Henry of South Lyon and Dr. Henry and Turner of this place performed the operation. The patient remained very low until Thursday night when she rallied somewhat and rested quietly through the night. As we go to press this morning, she is quite comfortable and slight hopes are entertained for her recovery.

The house on Mrs. J. M. Montgomery's farm north and west of this place was burned one day last week. Mr. Wilcox and family occupied the house having previously bought the place making a payment on it. The contents of the house were entirely consumed together with sixty-five dollars which they had saved towards another payment. The origin of the fire is unknown. The building was injured but the money goes to Mrs. Montgomery. The King's Daughters have sent clothing to the family.

HARDEST OF ALL WOODS

TWO of the greatest industries in the world are railway building and the preparation of hides and skins into leather. For the former the sleepers on which the rails are laid are essential and costly factors, for the latter nothing can take the place of some vegetable extract which is the tanning substance or the trade sleepers can be made of glass and metal, but these do not give the satisfaction of those made of wood. The oak and the hemlock have for ages supplied tannin by which leather is cured; in fact, the very word tannin implies by its derivation its relation to the oak, by which name the tree was called in old Breton language. Railway sleepers have been made from the oak, but the expense grows higher year by year. No wonder, therefore, that the earth is scoured for trees to furnish either the one or the other of both of the substances, and no wonder also that manufacturers and builders hailed with delight the announcement a few years ago of the availability for both purposes of the South American tree called "Quebracho."

The contraction of the colloquial Spanish and Portuguese "quebracho" is applied to many trees in Latin America. It means "ax breaker," and the character is implied in this meaning. The wood is hard, fine grained, and tough and had been used by the natives for ages in their primitive construction work. Of recent years, however, quebracho is restricted in the arts and industries to a particular tree found only in South America, and even here only within broad limits of the drainage basin of the River Parana. In Cuba there is a "quebracho," so-called locally, which is a member of the Copaliba family. In Chile a quebracho is rather of the Cassia family, and probably in other parts of Latin America the name is indiscriminately given to any hard wood that has tested the mettle of the native's ax. No such indefinite use of the word, however, can be permitted to us, because the tree of

A SAWMILL BETWEEN "THE CHACO" AND CIVILIZATION

The South American Chaco has become so common a daily occurrence that it must be understood to mean is only that one tree and nothing else.

The quebracho tree is found in Brazil, Paraguay, and the Argentine Republic. There are two important varieties and a third has been distinguished although it is not great significance botanically or value commercially. Locally and in the trade the names given are Quebracho Colorado (red) and Quebracho Blanco (white). Quebracho Colorado has the scientific designation of Lonchocarpus laurifolius, and belongs to the order of Anacardiaceae. This is the particular tree from which both the sleepers and the better quality of tanning extract are derived. The other, Quebracho Blanco, is neither so straight nor so serviceable as the red variety, but is nevertheless of definite commercial value, as it furnishes some tanning extract and the logs can be used for fence posts and axles. From it is taken also a drug extensively used for bronchial diseases, in fact, as a plant it was studied for this purpose long before its other advantages were exploited. The scientific name is Aspidosperma quebracho.

Railways must have sleepers on which to lay their rails. In some instances wooden ones are imported at great expense, or substitutes therefor are used if climatic conditions are favorable. As a rule, however, it is preferred to take supplies from native timber whenever procurable. This was the case in the Argentine Republic when railway building away from the coast had begun, and no more fitting wood could be discovered than that recommended by the natives, both by the name and by the experience of those who had used it. The quebracho wood proved by far the most serviceable for sleepers on South American railways, and its reputation grew so steadily that today many miles of European rails are supported by sleepers brought from the River Plate.

In one respect quebracho resembles rather mahogany than oak or pine. The trees do not grow in clumps or groves, but are dispersed through the forests and the less dense woods, singly or in groups seldom more than four or five to the acre. The tree itself is tall, about two or three feet in diameter, and is crowned by a rather thin, oval, or V-shaped, mass of branches and leaves. The white quebracho is somewhat smaller than the red, and begins to branch lower to the ground, so that it is not hard to distinguish them from each other. The leaves are oval, or lance shaped, smooth, somewhat shining and leathery, they do not fall completely in the winter, but cling to the branches in company with the fruit. The tree seems to thrive best on a sandy soil, where the atmospheric moisture is not very great, but where abundant water is provided for the roots, either by dews or sufficient rain. It is neither a mountain nor a river growth, but lives best in the sub-tropical stretches between water courses. All though the age of the tree has been given as measured by hundreds of years, it is well enough established that at ten years from planting the first small shrubs are big enough to use for posts. The future promises, therefore, an opportunity for the actual cultivation of quebracho, because, although savage inroads have been made into the supposedly inexhaustible forests of the Chaco, it is not too late to restrict the cutting of the tree, or even to adopt modern forestry methods of planting and conservation for the supply of coming generations. In fact, the Argentine Republic has already passed suitable laws in this direction and it is more than probable that under the wise administration of that government there will be developed an arboricultural industry to produce the raw material for the preparation of quebracho posts for railways and construction work sleepers for railways, and of tanning extract, the three industries for which this unique tree is at present utilized.

Rolizos is the Spanish word commonly employed in the trade for the rough and untrimmed logs (which the word means), from which only the bark has been removed. They are still supplied by smaller camps from dwarfed undergrowth not great enough for other purposes than posts, beams, cabin pillars, or cart axles. When the forest was first invaded these logs were the only product brought out of it, and the stories told of the primitive methods adopted by the natives to transport carry one back before the days of steam and machinery. A popular way of loading the logs was to lay them on the ground on ropes; then the animals were unharnessed and the logs; these were then made fast to the body of the cart, after which whenever it was brought back to its normal position. Of course only two wheeled carts were used. As soon as modern methods were introduced, and better carts or wagons became known, these primitive and cumbersome habits disappeared, although in the far interior even today rolizos are still brought to market in this manner. "Durmentes," according to the Spanish or sleepers, in the English idiom, are probably the most important product of the quebracho of the Argentine Republic.

The industry of making sleepers has assumed huge proportions. The difficulties of former days have been largely overcome by the introduction of modern machinery, especially saws, and some of the mills many miles distant from any main railway are equipped and organized in a manner which would reflect credit on any similar plant in the United States. Special saws are needed to penetrate the wood, but they are furnished from the factories of England, France, and America. This mill business is carried on by many companies, although the tendency is to concentrate the management into fewer but larger organizations. One company owns a tract of land of about 4,000,000 acres and is prepared to cut timber, fashion it into logs and sleepers, prepare tanning extract, and utilize every other resource which the land provides. Another company can turn out 20,000 to 30,000 sleepers a week. This number, however, can by no means meet the steady demand for railway building which is characteristic of this portion of South America. Sleepers are laid at about an interval of two feet from center to center. Assuming, therefore, only 2,000 sleepers for every mile, it will be seen that 30,000 are enough for only 15 miles. A year's supply at fullest capacity will consequently build only 750 miles of railway. But the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Chile and Bolivia, all contiguous to the Chaco, are constructing more than this mileage, so that it is easy to see that every sleeper turned out from modern mills can at once find a local market. These sleepers are now finished at the mill, and the mill is situated at the spot in the forest itself most convenient for carrying on the process.

Quebracho extract prepared for tanning skins and hides into leather is, however, the most serviceable product of the tree. All the timber companies are adjusting their plants so as to utilize the wood, either in its entire output, or in that portion reserved for posts and sleepers, for this extract. In Paraguay and areas in the Chaco remote from good roads, so that the cost of supplying timber is excessive, every particle of the wood is turned into extract, because the demand is usually in advance of the supply, and it is therefore more profitable to manufacture the more concentrated article, which can be easier and more economically carried to market.

One feature of quebracho, in which it is superior to other sources of supply, is that the bark, the sapwood, and the whole of the central part of the tree produce the extract in considerable quantities. The bark contains 6 to 8 per cent. of tannin, the sap 3 to 5 per cent, and the heart 20 to 25 per cent. As the heart represents two-thirds and often three-fourths of the total quantity of wood, the amount of tannin in the quebracho Colorado is seen to be considerable. It is merely a chemical question whether this tanning material is equal or inferior to that from the oak, but later methods of preparation point to a full justification of the claim that the leather from quebracho extract grades up to that resulting from any other tanning substance. So serviceable is it, however, that since its discovery, the tanning industry of the Argentine Republic has made noticeable advance, because, with both hides and extract as great natural products of the country, the government is making every effort to foster the leather industry within its own border.

"Quebracho extract," as it is called in the trade is easily manufactured when the machinery is once installed. All the wood is passed through a machine that cuts it into shavings or the smallest possible chips. It is then collected into immense kettles, in which it is treated by chemical processes until all the tannin is removed, after this the fluid preparation is reduced by evaporation to a thick, jelly-like mass, which is poured into sacks, where it is finally dried into the substance sold in commerce.

The difficulty of gathering the raw material far outweighs the preparation of the finished article, especially as the extract is no longer to be considered a by-product, but is coming to have more importance and value than posts and sleepers. In Paraguay particularly, where all the wood is utilized for extract, the hardest part of the business lies in gathering wood for the factory. The trees are cut in the heart of the virgin forest and hauled by ox teams to the nearest clearing. Only native Indians have proven themselves suitable for the work, as they are thoroughly acclimated, understand the wilderness, and can withstand the plague of insects which make life at night miserable for the foreigner; and exposure for nights as well as days is unavoidable, because the cutting stations are usually remote from any settlement.

In 1895 the first real exportation of quebracho extract from the River Plate was recorded. The increase has been rapid—from 400 tons in the first year to 9,000 tons in 1902, 120,594 tons in the next five years, and 28,195 tons in 1907. Of this quantity the United States received 17,733 tons, or almost 55 per cent.

$100,000 BLAZE AT KALAMAZOO

BIG LUMBER YARDS AND SEVERAL RESIDENCES TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

DETROIT HAS A POPULATION OF OVER 468,000 ACCORDING TO WATER BOARD.

Official Census Figures Will Not Be Published for Several Weeks to Come.

Fires at Kalamazoo. While the fire department was fighting flames in the North & Coon lumber yards, another alarm was turned in from the south side of the city, where a fire had been discovered in the J. E. Gall lumber yards. Damage to the extent of several thousand dollars was done in the North & Coon yards, but because of the low water pressure and a high wind the firemen lost control of the fire in the Gall yards, and within an hour half a block of lumber was in flames. The fire quickly spread to a number of residences near by, which were burned to the ground.

By attaching the city maps to the system water tower, a new water supply was secured. Six houses were entirely destroyed and three others damaged.

The police declare a gang of robbers and thieves following a wild west show that visited Kalamazoo set fire to both the yards, and when the flames were well under way started robbing several houses about the city. As soon as the flames were well under way numerous reports were received from all sections of the city of attempted burglaries. The home of Mrs. Jennie Gilmore, one of the wealthiest residents of the city, was entered and robbed. The loss by the fire will probably amount to $100,000.

Detroit's Population. The census bureau is being flooded with requests for information as to the population of various cities but nothing will be given out until the official figures are published, which will not be for several weeks.

There is intense rivalry between several cities and a good deal of curiosity as to whether Detroit will reach the 500,000 mark. It can be said that it will not and while the exact figures are secret, the census will show the population to be slightly in excess of 468,000.

This is very close to the water board estimate of 462,678, given out. The water board's figures are based on the number of acres of water, computed according to an established scale.

In the Toils of the Law

By DONALD ALLEN

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

It was late winter when Miss Bessie Hyde arrived at her aunt's country house for a two weeks' stay, but there was still plenty of snow on the ground. Even before unpacking her trunk and hanging up her dresses the girl was out romping around. Not that snow was a novelty to a girl from town. Even at that moment there were piles of it in front of her father's house, waiting to be removed, and growing blacker every moment.

But this snow was different. It was white snow. It wasn't mixed with soot, cinders, old shoes, tomato cans and beef bones. It was as clean as the spread on a spare bed. It was good enough to eat. She threw snowballs at the dignified old family dog and gave him a bad opinion of her city manners, also of her skill as a thrower.

On the second day of her stay Miss Bessie observed something. It was something that the man of all work around the house had never observed yet, although he had been there five years. To the north of the house was a hill that was evidently on some one else's land, as there was a dividing fence. By taking down a panel of the fence a girl on a sled could start at the top of the hill, come whizzing down over Aunt Hetty's lawn, and then pass through an open gate and strike the highway. The road had a gradual descent for a quarter of a mile. That was a slide down hill worth talking about. If only there was a sled of some sort about—

There was. It was a handiwork used by the all-work man for various jobs. He was not about, and Miss Bessie took possession. Aunt Hetty wasn't looking, and a panel of the fence was removed almost as neatly as a farmer's hired man could have done it. Then the sled was dragged to the top of the hill, and all was ready for the gee-whizz.

Had the girl swung her hat and uttered a few preliminary war whoops before starting, and thus brought Aunt Hetty to the door, things would have been altogether different. She would have told that that hill belonged to old Adam Flint, who was both mean and miserly. His hill stood there ready to do business, but he was so afraid that somebody would elope with it that he had posted signs everywhere. "No trespassing under penalty of the law," read the signs.

The girl could have seen no less than three such signs had she looked around her. She wasn't looking for signs, however. Also, had she looked about she would have been warned that a girl gee-whizzing on a sled into the highway and down another hill might possibly meet a vehicle of some sort coming up.

If she had been told these things the ride would have been postponed and Miss Bessie Hyde might have lived on to be an old maid. Fortunately she was not interfered with. The first anyone knew of the adventure was when a shout came from the top of the hill. The sled came down like a bullet. The all-work man ran to stop it, but fell down and rolled over. Aunt Hetty ran to stop it, but she slipped on the veranda and sat down hard.

Away went the sled with a frightened girl hanging on for dear life and one foot trailing behind as a rudder. It was going like a hundred rabbits when it made the turn into the highway, and then there was a sigh of relief. But the respite was short. Coming up the long hill was old Adam Flint in his "pump," which is a home-made sleigh. Close behind him followed a man driving a horse and cutter. The road was narrow, the banks steep.

Miss Bessie shut her eyes and screamed. Old Adam "flint" called "Whoa!" to his horse and decided that his last hour had come.

The man in the cutter grinned and got ready to enjoy a good thing.

The sled struck old Adam's knock-kneed horse. It just had to strike somebody or something. The knees of the horse were bent as he strained at the sled. He fell in a heap and didn't try to get up. That was a wife-move on his part, for the sled and the girl climbed over his back, knocked old Adam out of his sleigh and struck the other horse before coming to a stop. The man in the cutter was smiling.

when a splinter from the "pump" hit him in the forehead and left a great bruise. There was a bad mix-up for five minutes.

It's wonderful how a girl can see while down hill and knock men and horses into the middle of next week and yet do very little damage. When things were straightened out, it was found that the girl had a cut on the wrist and a twisted ankle, old Adam's knock-kneed steed had his knees barked, old Adam himself had a shoulder, wrenched; the old "pump" could be patched up. As for the young man, he had a bruise, but he was smiling as he helped to extricate the cause of the smash-up and deposit her in his cutter, where she indulged in a few hysterics to prove that she still lived. It was old Adam who did most of the talking, and he didn't talk in a whisper. He talked to the seven winds of earth, and he tried to gesticulate with his injured arm as he orated:

"Now by jimmies-cracky, but somebody shall pay for this!" he piped. "Who's this girl? I'll bet a cent she's been riding down my hill, if she has then it's trespass and a lawsuit! Then she banged into my horse! That's another lawsuit! Then she banged into me! That's a third! Then the pump has been smashed, and the law has got to have pay for being skinned half to death. All them lawsuits, and then this young feller is to be settled with. Young woman, I wouldn't want to be in your shoes!"

Miss Hyde began to cry. It was the first time in her life she had been threatened with ten or fifteen lawsuits. Her father was a prosperous merchant in the city, but so many verdicts must drive him into bankruptcy. The young man called old Adam for his threats and said he would see him later about damages.

Miss Bessie was driven up the hill and turned over to the care of her aunt. She was still nervous, but she could see that bruise, and she insisted that it be attended to at once. It was attended to. The young man introduced himself as Mr. Howard Kyle, and it was a long hour before he continued his drive. Of course he returned next day. That was only good form. He was visiting a brother only two miles away and it was no great trouble to come over.

The bruise was still there, but better. Miss Bessie's wrist was also still there, and also much better. What she was worrying about was those lawsuits. Would the damages altogether amount to a hundred thousand dollars? Would she have to go out as a servant girl for the rest of her life to help make up the sum? Mr. Kyle had been very kind, but did that mean he would not seek to collect damages? It was only after the adventure had been talked over at length that she heaved a sigh of relief. He informed her that he had settled all damages with old Adam for ready cash. The sigh of relief still lingered in the air when a horrible thought came to the sister and she cried out.

"But I've got to pay you, and maybe papa hasn't money enough! Please tell me how much it is, and I will write him at once."

But he didn't tell her—not then. He waited a whole year, and then, one evening as they were sitting together, he suddenly said:

"I paid old Adam five dollars to settle damages. It's been a year now, and I want a settlement with you."

She reached out her hand, and he took it and seemed to think he had got the best of the bargain.

TOO MANY IN PROFESSION

Absurd, However, to Reduce the Number of Students, Says American Medicine.

"The overcrowding of the medical profession comes up for discussion every little while, and always will come up, for it is the normal condition in all callings," says American Medicine. "Economists have repeatedly shown that industries owe their existence to a large unemployed class from whom labor can be obtained at a moment's notice. In the parable, the master said: 'Why stand ye here, all the day idle?'"

"There are always more workmen than the work requires, and the cry of overcrowding is as old as man and is now heard every year in trade. In every civilized land we find some doctors in poverty, some lawyers, and some clergymen. It is a condition which cannot be remedied and the proposition to reduce the number of medical students is palpably absurd—almost amounts to the suggestion that the sick be compelled to submit to the ministrations of the least efficient."

"The number of students is being reduced in England on account of the increasing cost and labor of obtaining a license, but it will not guarantee all the graduates success. Indeed overcrowding is socially desirable, as it increases the struggle for efficiency. In the struggle for existence, success goes to the efficient, not necessarily to those we consider the best."

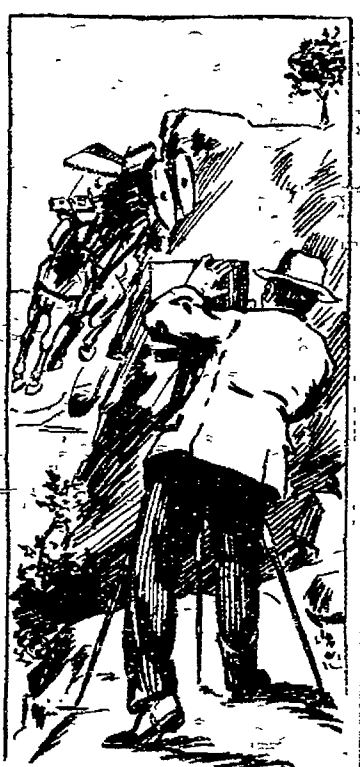

"The diminishing incomes of physicians have already been mentioned in these columns, and the causes determined, but that has nothing to do with the utter failure of some—a matter due solely to the inevitable overcrowding."

KILLS A HORSE TO GET CINEMATOGRAPH FILM

OLD ANIMAL DRIVEN OVER A PRECIPICE WHILE CAMERA IS SET TO CATCH PICTURE.

Paris.—Since cinematograph shows have become a popular form of public entertainment, all sorts of devices have had to be resorted to in order to obtain suitable films calculated to move the patrons of the various exhibitions to mirth or tears. In several parts of Paris there exist grounds where enterprising impresarios can arrange anything from a battle scene to a shipwreck, and which, when photographed, have all the appearance of being the real thing.

Recently one of the firms which make a specialty of supplying films pushed its enterprise a little too far.

Horse and Vehicle Were Made to Dash Over the Precipice.

Wishing to depict a tragic episode with something of its real horror, it arranged for the photographing of a scene which was to end with the crashing of a horse and vehicle over a precipice, and to this end it was quite prepared to sacrifice an ancient vehicle and an equally ancient horse.

A suitable precipice was found at Grolx, in Brittany, and everything was got ready for the picture, but the popular, hearing of what was going on, and feeling disgusted at the cruelty which was involved in the animal, bounded the cinematograph operators from their quiet seat.

The operators, however, simply moved, on a few miles, this time to Plogmeur, and at this spot the horse and vehicle were made to dash over a precipice, photographs of the spectacle being taken. The horse was of course killed and the vehicle smashed to pieces.

When it was all over the police appeared and served summonses on those concerned.

For a long time the summonses could not be heard, the operators having gone to Africa to find another sensational picture. Finally, however, the case came on before the Lorient police court, and the judge, whose comments were more caustic than the punishment, inflicted the maximum fine provided by the Grammont law, which, however, was only a matter of three dollars.

The cinematograph company was declared responsible for the costs, while the photographer who actually took the photographs was acquitted.

Hand-Painted Slippers.

"Here is good news for the artistic girl. Let her get out her paint tubes and set to work on painting kid slippers to match her summer frocks. A white kid slipper of the latest vogue is adorned with painted forget-me-nots. Naturally small blossoms are the best to select for reproduction, but some of the larger flowers might be conventionalized and worked up into good slipper subjects."

Very artistic, too, are the slippers of brocade outlined with dull gold or silver threads. The cloth-of-steel slippers are equally pretty and may be worn with a gown of almost any color. Black velvet pumps are one of the novelties of the summer for wear with lingerie gowns. By the way, the new pumps have ankle straps which make them much more comfortable than the old models, which kept slipping off. Laced sandals will be used for dress shoes. They are fascinating and have a tendency to decrease the size of the foot because the toes are short.

How Could She?

"I'd like to see Miss Passay," said the man at the door. "You can't," replied the maid, "she's got the toothache." "Impossible, for I'm from her dentist, and I've got her teeth here in this package."

Lightning Change.

"You should dress according to the weather," said the physician. "I try to," replied the man with a cold. "But I'm not quick enough to keep up with the thermometer."

WEAK KIDNEYS WEAKEN THE WHOLE BODY.

No chain is stronger than its weakest link. No man is stronger than his kidneys. Overwork, colds, strains, etc., weaken the kidneys and the whole body suffers. Don't neglect the slightest kidney ailment. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. They are especially for sick kidneys.

Ted Hiatt, Oswego, Kans., says: "For many years I suffered from kidney disorders. I was treated by specialists in Kansas City and Chicago, was told I had an abscess of the kidneys and an operation was advised. I thereupon began the use of Doan's Kidney Pills and gradually improved. Soon an operation was unnecessary as my kidneys were well."

Autoing and Optics.

"Is not auto driving terribly hard on the eyes?" we asked.

"Well, I guess not," replied the chauffeur, "withering us with scorn. 'Why, before I got to ruinin' a car I was thinkin' o' gettin' specks, my eye-sight was that poor I couldn't see the contribution box in church' until it was so near past me it was too late to dig for any money. But I hadn't been ruinin' that wagon two days till I could see a policeman's little finger stickin' out from behind a tree four miles away. I could even see which way a copper's eyeglasses were turned if he was standin' in the shade three miles off. Hard on the eyes! Well, not much! It's the best medicine for weak eyes that was ever invented, don't you forget it!"

Government's O. K. on the Lowly Toad

A RECENT bulletin of the department of agriculture in Washington has taken up the case of the toad, dispelling the "host of vague and ludicrous fancies as to its venomous qualities. Its medicinal virtues, or most commonly, the hidden toadstone, of priceless value."

Touching toads, says the bulletin, does not produce warts on the hands. The toad's breath does not cause convulsions in children, nor does a toad in a newly dug well insure a good and unfailing water supply, nor in a new made cellar will one bring prosperity to the household.

The Massachusetts experiment station has been investigating the habits, food and economic value of the toad, and the result establishes its claim to consideration and appreciation. "First of all, as to the longevity of the toad, the investigators express the opinion that many toads reach an

HAMBURG BELLE, 2:01 1-4

Hamburg Belle, now dead, held the champion trotting race record of the world, stepping the mile at Toledo in 2:01 1-4. This record still stands and will continue to stand for some time, in the opinion of horsemen. Hamburg Belle also held the track record on the Detroit fair grounds, setting up a mark of 2:02 3-4 at the Blue Ribbon meeting last July. At the coming State Fair races, Sept. 19, 24th, many of the Blue Ribbon favorites will be seen in competition for big purses, aggregating $45,000.

New Chinese Army.

The new Chinese army consists of a provincial corps for the northern region—the section lying near Mukden in Manchuria. It is estimated that there are 70,000 in this new army, comprising seventy battalions. The soldiers wear khaki uniforms and at a distance they would be taken for soldiers from Europe or America. Their queues are hidden under the caps. It is proposed to make the crown khaki universal, but some regiments have uniforms almost black, though these are disappearing. The troops are strong, muscular and well-built, and are being taught by picked men from different armies of Europe. The new northern army is but the beginning. There is not yet a southern army worthy of the name, and practically no reserve.

Rigid National Guard Rules.

If regulations recently issued by the Connecticut National Guard authorities are enforced, the militiamen of that state will find themselves under discipline hardly less rigid than that of the regular army. Among other rules is the following which ought to reduce considerably gossip and tattle around the armories: "Deliberations or discussion among military men conveying praise or censure, or any mark of approval on toward others in the military service and all publications relating to private or personal transactions between officers, are prohibited."

An Incendiary Lover.

A blaze was discovered in a Waltham letter box and the contents, about 50 letters, were charged before the fire was extinguished. It is the opinion of the police that a young man wrote a proposal of marriage to his girl and then got cold feet and set the boxful of letters on fire to destroy his own. It was George Ade who wrote this caution to young men: "Tell 'em anything you want, but don't write letters!"—Boston Globe.

Singer and Orator.

"I had my way," Dr. Macnamara once confessed to an interviewer, "I should be singing in 'Carmen' instead of making speeches from the treasury bench. But, unfortunately, the British public thinks a great deal more of a man who can make a bad speech than a man who can sing a good song."—Westminster Gazette.

Largest Fish Hatchery. The biggest salmon hatchery in the world was opened recently at Bonanza, Ore., prominent state officials taking part in the exercises. The new hatchery will be the central plant for the state and is located on the Columbia river where most of the fry will probably be liberated. The building is 5 x 130 feet and is equipped with 248 16-foot hatching troughs, having a capacity of 60,000,000 eggs. There are now 25,000,000 eggs on hand ready for hatching. Water is supplied from a nearby creek through a 12-inch pipe, the flow being 4,000 gallons a minute. Nursery and feeding ponds are supplied sufficient for feeding 3,000,000 young fish.

Money in Circulation. A rough estimate of the amount of money in circulation throughout the world on November 1 places the total at $13,550,000,000. This includes gold, silver and uncovered paper. Gold comprises nearly half of the entire world's currency. If it be estimated that about half of the fresh gold produced from year to year goes into the form of coined money there will have been approximately $100,000,000 added to the supply during the last two years.—Finance.
