School Notes.

(By a Pupill)

Leo Isham of the Kindergarten has the flu.

Charles Draper of the Fourth grade is back in school.

Laura Leona is a new pupil in the Kindergarten.

The First grade went for a field trip Monday afternoon.

Class A of the Third grade won in the spelling contest last week.

The Eighth A pupils are beginning the study of Michigan History.

Theo Mosher spelled down the Seventh grade Friday afternoon.

Eva Wood and Lucille Wheeler of the Seventh grade are back in school.

The Third grade room has an autumn calendar drawn by Miss Cole.

Mr. Ely has kindly donated an excellent whistle for basketball practice.

Harry Shaffer of the First grade brought a spotted geranium to school Monday morning.

Madeline Britton returned to the Kindergarten after an absence on account of sickness.

Edward Bogart very acceptably taught the Eighth grade the last hour Friday afternoon.

Helen Hunt Jackson's birthday was celebrated in the First grade Tuesday by a little program.

A basketball game with the South Lyon girls is anticipated on the home grounds some time soon.

The Sixth grade was presented with two beautiful plants by a member of the grade this week.

The children of the Kindergarten examined and tasted of a pomogranate that came from Savannah.

If you do not believe the Eighth B class can sing come up some morning and hear them sing "Out on the Deep."

Miss Cole has placed on the walls of grade four some of the best water-color work of those pupils in fruits and flowers.

The First graders are using their new Aldine readers for supplement any work this week. Much interest is taken in them.

A very interesting study of a boy watching a hen upon an apple adorns the Fourth grade blackboard drawn by Miss Cole.

The Agriculture class is very much obliged to Mr. Clapp for his donation of subscriptions to the "Gleaner" and the "Michigan Farmer."

In the Fourth grade "table" contest, so far, Henry Holmes, Willard Mosher and Lee Vanatta are heading the list while Claude Van and Nellie Freydl are close seconds.

The patrons will please remember that according to the state law the attendance of pupils must be continuous and it will save trouble if you will talk over the proposed absence before hand.

The Messes Wills, Nash, Corder, Weller and Winkler will attend the State Teachers' Association at Bay City next week Thursday and Friday and the Kindergarten, Third, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh grades will be closed on those days.

The School Savings bank deposit for last week was $22.50. The deposit by grades was as follows: Kindergarten $7.75; First $12.28; Second $1.94; Third $3.57; Fourth $9.00; Fifth $1.90; Sixth $1.81; Seventh $3.15; Eighth $7.75; High school $0.43.

The High school Meteorology class began a month's weather observation on Monday. With a first class barometer, a sling psychrometer, a maximum and minimum thermometer, a dew point apparatus and a bright, up-to-date class, the teacher, Mr. LaRue, anticipates that they will make the regular weather man look tired.

Suits have been ordered for the boys' basketball team and by the looks of the material trying out for the team the suits will not be any too good for them. A great many of last year's second team men are showing up in line form and Coach Miller seems happy over the prospect. At the same time Miss Bellis, coach for the girls, is looking for new fields to conquer for a cracking good girls' team.

Experimental classes which have been taken from the grades for the study of Latin and German are progressing finely and it is felt that much may be done this year to prove the justification of their adoption as a regular study in the grades. The Misses White and Hogle have charge of the German classes and the Misses Christensen and Lauray teach the Latin classes. The classes meet four times a week from 8:30 to 9:00 in the various rooms of the High school building. If you are interested we would be pleased to have you call.

The Night school started off with a promising attendance Monday night. If the number of students demand it we will add to the teaching force which will be large enough to give individual work to every one present. The class meets Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 8:30 and a small fee of fifty cents a week is charged for expenses. The work is such that a student can take up any study and go as rapidly as he likes in it. The commercial work differs however and it will be to the advantage of a student desiring this course to enroll at once. If you cannot come at night perhaps the teacher can find time for you in the afternoon. If interested phone the superintendent. It's your school.

How to Get On in the World.

Most of our successful men began life without a dollar. They have won success by hard work and strict honesty. You do the same. Here are rules for getting on in the world:

1. Be honest. Dishonesty seldom makes one rich; and when it does, riches are a curse. There is no such thing as dishonest success.

2. Work. The world is not going to pay for nothing. Ninety percent of what men call genius is only a talent for hard work.

3. Enter into that business or trade you like best and for which nature seems to have fitted you, providing it is honorable.

4. Be independent. Do not lean on others to do your thinking or to conquer difficulties.

5. Be conscientious in the discharge of every duty. Do your work thoroughly. No one can rise who slight his work.

6. Don't try to begin on top. Begin at the bottom and you will be surer of reaching the top, some time.

7. Trust to nothing but God and hard work. Inscribe on your banner "Luck is a fool; pluck is a hero."

Just as Bad.

Courtesy over the telephone is a virtue, and it's just as offensive to the girl at the switchboard to be called a "Dutch mutt" as it would be to be told that her hat isn't on straight.—Hartford Times.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halley, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Arnold Armstrong was due to die in his hall. Gertrude and her fiancé, Jack Bailey, had conversed in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halley's fiancée, Louise Armstrong, told Halley that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Paul Armstrong was the man. Louise was found unconscious at the bottom of the circular staircase. She said something had brushed by her in the dark on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a note in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Wallace." A ladder found out of place deepens the mystery. The stairs were turned, and in the dark Miss Innes shot an intruder. Halley mysteriously disappeared. His auto was found wrecked by a freight train. It developed Halley had an argument in the library with a woman before his disappearance. New clues disappear. Miss Innes learned Halley was killed. Dr. Walker, face doctor, could give mention of the name of Miss Carrington. Evidence was secured from a tramp that a man, supposedly Halley, had been found and passed and thrown into an empty box car. Gertrude was missing. Hunting for her, Miss Innes ran into a man and fainted. Confessing to Dr. Walker, he confessed his part in the mystery. He stated that the Carrington woman had been killed, that Walker feared her and that he believed that Paul Armstrong had been killed by a hand guided by Walker. Halley was found in a distant hospital. Paul Armstrong was not dead.

The slip had said, "chimney." It was the only clue, and a house as large as Sunnyside was full of them. There was an open fireplace in my dressing room, but none in the bedroom, and as I lay there, looking around, I thought of something that made me sit up suddenly. The trunk room, just over my head, had an open fireplace and a brick chimney, and yet there was nothing of the kind in my room. I got out of bed and examined the opposite wall closely. There was apparently no flue, and I knew there was none in the hall just beneath. The house was heated by steam, as I have said before. In the living room was a huge open fireplace, but it was on the other side.

Why did the trunk room have both a radiator and an open fireplace? Architects were not usually erratic. It was not 15 minutes before I was upstairs, armed with a tape measure in lieu of a foot rule, eager to justify Mr. Jamieson's opinion of my intelligence, and firmly resolved not to let him of my suspicion until I had more than theory to go on. The hole in the trunk room wall still yawned there, between the chimney and the outer wall. I examined it again, with no new result. The space between the brick wall and the plaster and lath one, however, had a new significance. The hole showed only one side of the chimney and I determined to investigate what lay in the space on the other side of the mantel.

I had a blister on my palm when at last the hatchet went through and fell with what sounded like the report of a gun to my overstrained nerves. I sat on a trunk, waiting to hear Liddy fly up the stairs, with the household behind her, like the fall of a comet. But nothing happened, and with a growing feeling of uncertainty I set to work enlarging the opening.

The result was absolutely nil. When I could hold a lighted candle in the opening I saw precisely what I had seen on the other side of the chimney—a space between the true wall and the false one, possibly seven feet long and about three feet wide. It was, in no sense of the word a secret chamber, and it was evident it had not been disturbed since the house was built. It was a supreme disappointment.

It had been Mr. Jamieson's idea that the hidden room, if there was one, would be found somewhere near the circular staircase. In fact, I knew that he had once investigated the entire length of the clothes chute, hanging to a rope, with this in view. I was reluctantly about to concede that he had been right when my eyes fell on the mantel and fireplace. The latter had evidently never been used; it was closed with a metal fire front, and only when the front refused to move, and investigation showed that it was not intended to be moved, did my spirits revive.

I hurried into the next room. Yes, sure enough, there was a similar mantel and fireplace there, similarly closed. In both rooms the chimney flue extended well out from the wall. I measured with the tape-line, my hands trembling so that I could scarcely hold it. They extended two feet and a half into each room, which with the three feet of space between the two partitions, made eight feet to be accounted for. Eight feet in one direction and almost seven in the other—what a chimney it was!

But I had only located the hidden room. I was not in it, and no amount of pressing on the carving of the wooden mantels, no search of the floors for loose boards, none of the customary methods availed at all. That there was a means of entrance, and probably a simple one, I could be certain. But what? What would I find if I did go in? Was the detective right, and were the bones and money from the Traders' bank there?

"I heard a sad and pitiful narrative."

CHAPTER XXXII.

Anne Watson's Story.

Liddy discovered the fresh break in the trunk room wall while we were at luncheon, and ran shrieking down the stairs. She maintained that, as she entered, unseen hands had been digging at the plaster, that they had stopped when she went in, and she had felt a gust of cold damp air. In support of her story she carried in my wet and muddy boots, that I had unluckily forgotten to hide, and held them out to the detective and myself.

"What did I tell you?" she said dramatically. "Look at 'em. They're yours. Miss Rachel and I covered with mud and soaked to the tops. I tell you, you can smell all you like, come thing has been wearing your shoes."

As Jamieson almost choked to death, I wouldn't be at all surprised if they were doing that very thing, Liddy. He said, when he got his breath, "They certainly look like it." I think the detective had a plan on which he was working, but which was meant to be a coup. But things went so fast there was no time to carry it into effect. The first thing that occurred was a message from the Charity hospital that Mrs. Watson was dying and had asked for me. I did not care much about going. There is a sort of melancholy pleasure to be had out of a funeral with its pomp and ceremony, but I shrank from a death bed. However, Liddy got out the black things and the crepe veil I keep for such occasions, and I went. I left Mr. Jamieson and the day detective going over every inch of the circular staircase, pounding, probing and measuring. I was inwardly pleased to think of the surprise I was going to give them that night, as it turned out, I did surprise them—almost into spasms.

I drove from the train to the Charity hospital, and was at once taken to a ward. There, in a gray-walled room in a high iron bed, lay Mrs. Watson. She was very weak, and she only opened her eyes and looked at me when I sat down beside her. I was conscience-stricken. We had been so engrossed that I had left this poor creature to die without even a word of sympathy.

The nurse gave her a stimulant, and in a little while she was able to talk. So broken and half-coherent, however, was her story that I shall tell it in my own way. In an hour from the time I entered the Charity hospital I had heard a sad and pitiful narrative, and had seen a woman slip into the unconsciousness that is only a step from death.

Briefly, then, the housekeeper's story was this:

She was almost 40 years old, and had been the sister-mother of a large family of children. One by one they had died, and been buried beside their parents in a little town in the middle west. There was only one sister left, the baby, Lucy. On her the older girl had lavished all the love of an impulsive and emotional nature. When Anne, the elder, was 32 and Lucy 19, a young man had come to the town. He was going east, after spending the summer at a celebrated ranch in Wyoming—one of those places where wealthy men send worthless and dissipated sons to a season of temperance, fresh air and hunting. The sisters, of course, knew nothing of this, and the young man's ardor rather carried them away. In a word, seven years before, Lucy Haswell had married a young man whose name was given as Andrew Wallace.

Anne Haswell had married a carpenter in her native town and was a widow. For three months everything went fairly well. Aubrey took his bride to Chicago, where they lived at a hotel. Perhaps the very unsophistication that had charmed him in Valley Mill jarred on him in the city. He had been far from a model husband, even for the three months, and when he disappeared Anne was almost thankful it was different with the young wife, however. She drooped and fretted, and on the birth of her baby boy she had died. Anne took the child and named him Lucien.

Anne had had no children of her own, and on Lucien she had lavished all her aborted maternal instinct. On one thing she was determined, however. That was that Andrew Wallace should educate his boy. It was a pitiful hope, but she was determined that she should be amiable for him, he must have every opportunity. And so she came east. She drifted around, doing plain sewing and keeping a home somewhere always for the boy. Finally, however, she realized that her only training had been domestic, and she put the boy in an Episcopalian home, and secured the position of housekeeper to the Armstrongs. There she found Lucien's father, that, under his own name it was Arnold Armstrong.

I gathered that there was no particular enmity at that time in Anne's mind. She told him of the boy, and threatened exposure if he did not provide for him. Indeed, for a time, he did so. Then he realized that Lucien was the ruling passion in this lonely woman's life. He found out where the child was hidden, and threatened to take him away. Anne was frantic. The positions became reversed. Where Arnold had given money for Lucien's support, as the years went on, he forced money from Anne Watson instead until she was always penniless. The lower Arnold sank in the scale, the heavier his demands became. With the rupture between him and his family things were, worse, Anne took the child from the home and hid him in a farmhouse near Cassanova, on the Clayburg road. There she went sometimes to see the boy, and there he had taken fever. The people were Germans, and he called the farmer's wife grossmutter. He had grown into a beautiful boy, and he was all Anne had to live for.

The Armstrongs left for California, and Arnold's persecutions began anew. He was furious over the child's disappearance, and she was afraid he would do her some hurt. She left the big house and went down to the lodge. When I had rented Sunnyside, however, she had thought the persecutions would stop. She had applied for the position of housekeeper and secured it.

That had been on Saturday. That night Louise arrived unexpectedly. Thomas sent for Mrs. Watson and then went for Arnold Armstrong at the Greenwood club. Anne had been fond of Louise—she reminded her of Lucy. She did not know what the trouble was, but Louise had been in a state of terrible excitement. Mrs. Watson tried to hide from Arnold, but he was ugly. He left the lodge and went up to the house about 2.30, was admitted at the east entrance and came out again very soon. Something had occurred, she didn't know what, but very soon Mr. Innes and another gentleman left, using the car.

Thomas and she had got Louise quiet, and a little before three Mrs. Watson started up to the house.

Thomas had a key to the east entry, and gave it to her.

On the way across the lawn, she was confronted by Arnold, who for some reason was determined to get into the house. He had a golf-club in his hand, that he had picked up somewhere, and on her refusal he had struck her with it. One hand had been badly cut, and it was that, poisoning having set in, which was killing her. She broke away in a frenzy of rage and fear, and got into the house while Gertrude and Jack Bailey were at the front door. She went upstairs, hardly knowing what she was doing. Gertrude's door was open, and Halley's revolver lay there on the bed. She picked it up and turning ran-past, way down the circular staircase. She could hear Arnold fumbling at the lock outside. She slipped down quietly, and opened the door; he was inside before she had got back to the stairs. It was quite dark, but she could see his white shirt-bosom. From the fourth step she fired. As he fell somebody in the billiard room screamed and ran. When the alarm was raised, she had no time to get upstairs; she hid in the west wing until every one was down on the lower floor. Then she slipped upstairs, and threw the revolver out of an upper window, going down again in time to admit the men from the Greenwood club.

If Thomas had suspected, he had never told. When she found the hand Arnold had injured was growing worse, she gave the address of Lucien at Richmond to the old man and almost $100. The money was for Lucien's board until she recovered. She had sent for me to ask me if I would try to interest the Armstrongs in the child. When she found herself growing worse she had written to Mrs. Armstrong, telling her nothing but that Arnold's legitimate child was at Richmond, and imploring her to recognize him. She was dying; the boy was an Armstrong, and entitled to his father's share of the estate. The papers were in her trunk at Sunnyside, with letters from the dead man that would prove what she said. It was she who had crept down the circular staircase, drawn by a magnet, that night Mr. Jamieson had heard some one there. Puzos, she had fled madly, anywhere—through the first door she came to. She had fallen down the clothes chute, and been saved by the basket beneath. I could have aided with relief; then it had been Gertrude, after all!

That was the story. Sad and simple though it was, the very telling of it seemed to relieve the dying woman. She did not know that Thomas was dead, and I did not tell her. I promised to look after little Lucien, and sat with her until the interval of consciousness came shorter and finally ceased altogether. She died that night.

Ways to Keep Neat

"My children were becoming dreadfully careless about having their things around," said an original mother, and the older members of the family weren't any too tidy. So I made up my mind that I was going to be a "pick-up" drudge for the rest of the household. I set up a big fine box, a box with an oblong hole in the top, into which I put every single thing—that, coat, toy, pipe, no matter what—that I found lying around in the way. And to get his or her property the owner had to pay a penny—if it was one of the children; ten cents in case of the older ones. As the children have only an allowance of ten cents a week each, they didn't naturally want to pay it out in fines; so they began to be careful. Gradually the whole family mended their ways, and now my fine box is generally empty, and the house is as tidy as you please."

Cheering Her Up.

Islington, which is no longer rural, was once so esteemed by medical men that they sent their patients there after severe illness. Many also went there in the last stages of the forlorn hope that the invigorating air might restore them to health. A story related by Dr. Abernethy turns on the latter class of visitors. One of his patients engaged some rooms in Islington, and casually remarked to the landlady that the banisters on the staircase were very much broken. "For bless you, mam," said the landlady, "it's no use to mend them, for they always get broken when the undertaker's men bring the coffins downstairs."—London Chronicle.

Intelligence in the Kitchen.

The higher the intelligence and the broader the education of the woman in the kitchen, the greater the pleasure and satisfaction in household duties.

The woman who cooks intelligently is commanding great and mysterious forces of nature. She is an alchemist behind an apron. At her command food constituents that are indigestible, unpalatable and even poisonous, are subjected to chemical changes that render them an epicurean delight. The woman of real intelligence and powers of imagination finds in her well ordered kitchen a source of deep and enduring interest and pleasure.

ON BLOODY GROUND

Germany Erects Fitting Memorial on Gravelotte Battlefield.

Marks the Scene of One of the Fiercest Battles of the Franco-German War Where Napoleon's Down-fall Began.

Berlin.—Recently the anniversary of Gravelotte, one of the fiercest and most bloody battles of the Franco-German war, was officially celebrated on the battlefield. The ceremonies were very impressive and included a church parade at Metz and the unveiling of a monument in memory of the soldiers of the Eighth German Grenadier Guards, erected on the road between Gorze and Rezonville, at a point ten miles southwest of Metz and five miles south of Gravelotte. The occasion was a memorable one and one full of interest to many German-Americans who passed through the direful experience of the battle.

Gravelotte is a small town situated in Lorraine, eight miles west of Metz. During the war Napoleon III. made his headquarters at Metz. The Germans under Prince Frederick Charles and General Steinmetz by a succession of victories had forced the French forces in the direction of Metz as far as Gravelotte. Here, eight miles from the position of Napoleon, the French made their final stand. The Germans with a force numbering 211,000 advanced against the French under Bazaine, whose army did not exceed 140,000. The French, knowing the fatal results of defeat, fought courageously and stubbornly. The Germans, realizing the victory would ultimately result in the surrender of Napoleon and his forces at Metz, fought with a steady determination that knows no failure. The result was a fierce and bloody battle in which the Germans, completely victorious, lost 304 officers and 19,658 men, the French, decisively routed, retreated to Metz with a loss of 600 officers and 11,335 men. This left the thoroughly German in front of Metz, where Napoleon was shut up with his army. The Germans began the attack and in a few days the French were obliged to surrender with their camp at their head. This was the crowning victory of the war and it was also the victory that spell the fall of Napoleon III. The battle of Gravelotte was practically the termination of the downfall of Louis Napoleon and also the decisive victory of the war. The name of the monument which was recently erected on the battlefield is a very fitting memorial of the brave men who gave up their lives and hopes for the honor of the fatherland. There are many Germans, now American citizens, to whom the erection of this monument is of vital interest because they had the honor of taking active parts in this very important battle.

Famine Bread of Years Ago.

Muncie, Ind.—We of this part of the earth today know little of the awful ravages of famine, such as has visited certain countries in the past and still is a menace and even worse in India. It may be a trifle difficult, therefore, for the average person to understand the fascination that attends a glimpse of such gruesome relics as is faithfully kept by Joseph Hummel, a business man of Muncie, who has two small loaves of bread of the kind baked in the frightful famine that swept Germany nearly a century ago—1816-17. Wheat then sold for $84 a bushel, so it is not at all surprising to find that the loaves only weigh an ounce and a half each. The loaves are treasured in the Hummel family and came into Mr. Hummel's hands when he was visiting his old home in Wurtemberg, 20 years ago.

Lightning Enters a Mine.

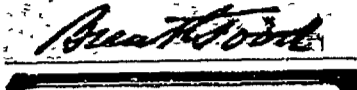

Pittsburg.—Lightning seldom gets so far down in the earth as to trouble the miners, but a startling instance occurred recently at the mines in West Schuylkill, Pa., where it illuminated the murky shafts 1,800 feet below the surface. When a terrific thunderstorm came up the underground workings were lighted up and made as bright as the sun at mid night, but no damage was done, although a number of mules, which have not been daylight for years are believed to have been blinded by the dazzling light.

A Valuable Load.

Chicago.—Four millions of dollars in gold were carried in moving vans through the streets of Chicago quite recently. The bags of money were tumbled haphazard into the vans and without the slightest mishap were placed on deposit in the bank. The bags were large and made a rather large pile.

GETTING EVEN WITH MAMMA

In This Case, Child's Punishment Certainly Failed to Have Salutary Effect.

A little girl had been so very naughty that her mother found it necessary to shut her up in a dark closet—in that family the direct punishment for the worst offense. For 15 minutes the door had been locked without a sound coming from behind it. Not a whisper, not a sniff. At last the stern but anxious parent unlocked the closet door and peered into the darkness. She could see nothing.

"What are you doing in there?" she cried.

And then a little voice piped from the blackness:

"I thipt on your new dress and I thipt on your new hat, and I'm waiting for more thipt to come to thipt on your new parasol."

Tit for Tat.

Lloyd C. Griscom, in an interview in New York, said of party dissensions:

"They are animated by a nasty spirit, a tit for tat spirit; and they go from bad to worse."

"It's like the case of the engaged couple at the seaside dance. The young man, a little jealous, said coldly to his fiancée at supper:

"Let me see—was it you I kissed in the conservatory?"

"About what time?" the young girl answered, with a little laugh.

"Thank You's."

The man who is not thankful for the lessons he learned in adversity didn't learn any.

There must be plenty of thankfulness in the world if those who have lost and lost could know just what they have lost.

"Why are you giving thanks? They took $10,000 from you in Wall Street a little while ago, didn't they?"

"Yes, but I put out with $20 they didn't know I had."

More to Be Pitted.

Tramp (to lonely splinter)—Come Missus, arst yer 'asband it's aint got a pair o' trousers to give away. Splinter (anxious not to expose her solitude)—Sorry my good man, he—eh—never wears such things—Punch.

Against Orders.

"If you refuse me, Miss Gladys, I shall get a rope and commit suicide." "No, colonial, you must not do that. Papa said distinctly he would not have you hanging about here."

Economy is the art of living as though you are poor when you are really not so; whereas, if you are really poor and live that way that's stinginess.

Life is a grind, but the world is full of cranks.

Mr. Townsend's Statement.

In many quarters there has been misapprehension on the part of the people over the senatorial situation. Many have believed that because Charles E. Townsend won in the recent primary he was sure of election as United States senator. This is not the case. Mr. Townsend won the Republican nomination but in order that he be elected the next legislature must be Republican. If the legislature should be Democratic a Democrat would be chosen as senator.

To make this clear to the people of the state Mr. Townsend has issued a statement in which he says:

"I have no hope of becoming senator unless the next legislature is Republican and the only way my friends can assist me now is to vote for the Republican candidates for state representative and state senator to their respective districts. The great benefit which the voters expect and have a right to demand out of this state primary law is that the members of the legislature will observe the choice of the people and vote to elect the man for senator who was endorsed by their party at the September primaries."

"In many legislative districts throughout the state Democratic candidates for the state legislature have expressed a determination to vote for me if they are elected. I am profoundly grateful to their good will thus expressed, but it is well to understand that they are morally and politically bound to support their party candidate if the legislature is Democratic and I have no doubt they would support him. I should certainly advise them to do so, for the maintenance of the principle involved in the primary for senator is of infinitely more importance than the success of any individual man."

Chase Osborn is making a whirlwind campaign through the state in these last days previous to the election. The Friday and Saturday before election he will spend in Detroit and leave for the Soo Sunday night. Chase is answering Mr. Hemm's attacks with a vigor that does not leave much comfort for the Democrats.

FOR THE AMBITIOUS WOMAN.
A great man said, "Be not the first to try a new thing nor the last to forsake an old."

But note,—in this life the time always comes to throw over the old for the new. Time itself is change. You must change with time or fall behind the procession.

Don't let prejudice keep you from the benefits your neighbors enjoy,—from modern improvements in all lines.

Baking Powders have improved along with everything else. But you'll never know it till you try K C Baking Powder. Guaranteed the Best at Any Price,—the name of perfection, the splendid result of modern scientific research.

If you don't agree that K C Baking Powder makes your baking lighter, sweeter, more delicious than any other, your grocer refunds your money. The manufacturers guarantee that your baking will always be perfectly raised, sweet and palatable, pure and wholesome.

"And K C costs you less,—no 'Trust' prices, but a fair price for a perfect Baking Powder. You'll marvel at the saving and ask how it can be done.

Answer,—Not in the 'Trust'."

LADIES OF THE MACCABEES OF THE WORLD

Is Not Raising Its Rates Nor Making Any Change or Readjustment.

Local members of the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World have called attention to the confusion which seems to exist in the minds of the public on account of the similarity of the name of that order with the name of another fraternal insurance society for women.

The Ladies of the Maccabees of the World has absolutely no connection with the Ladies of the Modern Maccabees, an order which is at present re-adjusting. Its management is and has always been wholly by women and its funds have always been entirely separate from those of any other order.

It has a membership of 154,000 women in 54 states and provinces of the United States and Canada.

It is further distinguished from other orders by the fact that it is the original woman's order on adequate rates. The Ladies of the Maccabees of the World is not raising its rates, nor making any change or re-adjustment. It has been on an adequate rate basis for many years. Its members, both old and new, are and have been paying rates recommended as adequate by a competent actuary, Mr. Abbe Landis.

Although established in 1892, this order did not begin to work in Michigan until 1904. Its growth here has been steady, and it now has in this state a large number of members, all of whom are paying rates based on the National Fraternal Congress Mortality table. These rates, provided for a reserve fund for the safe protection of the home without increased cost to the members. This fund, which now amounts to $4,512,561.64, is safely invested in municipal bonds, and draws interest annually of $175,000 and over.

Women who join the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World need not fear any increase in cost in years to come as they advance in years or possibly fall in health. Each member pays the cost of her own protection. The following figures, taken from the Report for 1909 of the Michigan Insurance Department, and from published official reports of the Order, show its splendid financial condition and substantial growth:

The Ladies of the Maccabees of the World.
Total Membership, Dec. 31, 1909.....153,878

Total net increase in benefit term (exclusive of 1909).....$211
Net increase in benefit membership, for 1909.....182
Total admitted assets, Dec. 31, 1909.....$4,512,561.64

Amount available assets, September 1, 1910.....$4,519,027.70
Net increase in benefit membership, for 1910 to September 1.....1,673

The association is widely known among business men from coast to coast as a responsible business institution with a high standing as to financial stability and fair dealing. Hon. James V. Barry, insurance commissioner for Michigan, writes in reply to an inquiry from a member:

Dear Madam: Answering your inquiry of the 2nd inst., permit me to say that the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World is financially one of the strongest fraternal societies doing business in this state. On December 31 last this society had admitted assets of $4,516,911.21, liabilities of $130,222. The larger proportion of the society's invested assets is in high grade municipal bonds, certificates, JAMES M. BARRY, Michigan Commissioner of Insurance.

The headquarters are at Port Huron, in the World's Maccabee Temple. Mr. Lillian M. Hollister is Supreme Commander, and Miss Bina M. West is Supreme Record Keeper of the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World.

Mrs. Alberta Droells, of 411 St. Aubin Avenue, Detroit, is the State Commander for the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World for Michigan, and will gladly give any further information desired about the standing of this Order, and its insurance, social and fraternal advantages, or this may be secured from the headquarters of the Order at Port Huron, Mich.

It's Your Kidneys.

Don't Mistake the Cause of your Troubles. A Northville Citizen Shows how to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Northville people testify to permanent cures.

Mrs. H. V. Kingsley, Randolph St., Northville, Mich., says: "My first experience with Doan's Kidney Pills took place about a year ago. I had a severe attack of backache and I also suffered from headaches and pains across my joints. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally procured from Murdock Bros., drug store and they soon removed the backache and other annoyances. An other member of my family has also taken this remedy with satisfactory results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

It does not pay to advertise say some merchants who have done but little of it and that without keeping it up. The incident of the boy and the pump illustrates the matter very well. The boy was sent after a pail of water. He poured in the pump, poured out as much as he poured in. Then he stopped to rest and the pump ran down. After some time of alternate pumping and resting he concluded it did not pay to pump and quit in disgust. The merchant who does not believe in advertising does it like the boy did the pump. He advertised again and then concluded advertising didn't pay.

St. Mary's annual banquet, held in Princess Rink Wednesday night, was one of the usual decided successes of that society. There was a large attendance both at the supper and the program which followed later. Hon. S. J. Lawrence acted as toastmaster and he did that act in fine shape. Judge Donovan of Detroit gave a splendid talk on "The Golden Age of Now." Hon. Wm. F. Connelly and Chas. P. O'Neil did themselves proudly. UNCLE SAM'S NEWEST SUBMARINE

UNCLE SAM'S newest and most interesting submarine boat, the Salmon, is an object of international interest just now and is hailed on both sides of the Atlantic as the most remarkable submarine boat in the world. This fame is due to the Salmon's recent record-breaking cruise from the Atlantic coast to Bermuda and return—a deep-sea voyage such as has had no parallel in the history of under-water craft. The cruise to Bermuda was not only the first cruise by a submarine to a foreign port or out of sight of land, but it was the longest virtually continuous run ever attempted by such a vessel. The total distance covered aggregated nearly 1,700 miles and, as it happened, the little vessel encountered very rough weather during a considerable part of the trip.

Not only did this nautical excursion establish a new record for vessels of the American navy, but it surpassed all foreign achievements. The best performance previously recorded by American vessels of this type was found in the run of the submarine Viper from Cape Lookout to Annapolis, Md., a distance of about 453 knots, and the cruise of a flotilla of submarines from New York to Annapolis, a distance of 385 knots. Among the foreign performances of such vessels there stands out the record of

and the attack failed only because the screw by which the torpedo was to be attached to the Eagle's bottom was not sharp enough. Robert Fulton's experiments in France and America (1795-1812) demonstrated that a vessel could be built which could descend to any given depth and reascend at will. Plunging mechanism was devised about the middle of the eighteenth century, but Fulton developed the vertical and horizontal rudders and provided for the artificial supply of air. A form of periscope existed in 1692 and an improved kind was patented in 1771. In 1854 Davy still further developed it. Phillips' wooden boat on Lake Erie was crushed by the English submarines of about the same size as the Salmon, which made the round-trip run from Dover to Dundee, a distance of 312 miles, and the famous performance of the French submarine Papin, which on one occasion made a cruise of 1,200 miles. However this French achievement is overshadowed by the Salmon's cruise because not only was the distance of the latter much greater, but it was an open sea performance, whereas the Papin cruised along the coast and, finally, the French vessel is much larger than the new American record-breaker, the Papin being of 550 tons displacement, whereas the Salmon is of but 320 tons displacement.

The Salmon, alike to most of the submarines which have lately been added to the United States navy, is a development of the original Holland type of submarine which first gave the Americans the lead in this class of shipbuilding. The Salmon is 135 feet in length by 24 feet beam and is a twin-screw boat, being driven off the surface by two gasoline engines of 200-horsepower each and propelled when submerged by electrical power supplied from storage batteries. By way of fulfilling her mission of destruction the little vessel has four torpedo tubes equipped to fire the latest type of torpedo—that is, a torpedo 17 feet in length and 18 inches in diameter having a radius of 4,000 yards and carrying an explosive charge of 200 pounds of guncotton. On her cruise to Bermuda the Salmon carried a crew of 21 men, but it was demonstrated on this cruise that under actual service conditions such a submarine can be operated, in so far as navigation is concerned, by five men—two on the bridge and three in the engine room.

The Salmon is capable of a speed of 14 knots per hour when running awash or on the surface of the water and 12 knots per hour when running wholly submerged. Only three minutes is required to change from surface running by gasoline engines to submerged running by electrical power. The vessel has, on trial, dived to a depth of more than 200 feet without any sign of strain or leakage being manifest anywhere on her steel cigar-shaped body. A unique feature of the equipment of an up-to-date submarine such as the Salmon, is a double periscope whereby, when the vessel is wholly submerged the officers on board can observe all that is going on at the surface of the water. Electrical ranges are provided for cooking the meals of those on board, and there is a reserve supply of 4,000 cubic feet of air, contained in 28 tanks, so that if need be the vessel could be "sealed up" tight and remain under the surface of the water for one or two days and nights without those on board having any communication with the outside world or coming to the surface for fresh air. On the Salmon's Bermuda cruise there were on board, in addition to the officers of the American navy, Capt. Arturo Caevas of the Chilean navy, who went for the purpose of reporting to his government on the behavior of the vessel.

Modern submarine boats are of two types, the submerged and the submersible. The submerged when in light cruising condition moves with only a small percentage of the hull above the water; the submersible cruises on the surface much like an ordinary torpedo boat, which it resembles externally. The difference in principle between the two types is slight, but in construction details it is very marked. The submerged boats are usually nearly cylindrical with pointed ends, the general shape being much like that of a Whitehead torpedo. Submergence is effected by admitting water to the ballast tanks or by means of inclined rudders, or both. Submersible boats have two hulls, one inside the other. The outer hull resembles closely that of the ordinary torpedo boat but has a few projections as possible rising from the general outline, in order to present a smooth surface when submerged. Inside this there is a second hull of nearly circular cross-section, and as large as the shape of the outer boat permits. To effect submergence water first admitted to the space between the hulls, and this brings the boat to the "awash" condition. Further submergence is effected by permitting the ballast tanks to fill.

When or by whom was built the first submarine boat will probably never be known. It is said that Alexander the Great was interested in submarine navigation, while subaqueous attacks of vessels was studied at least as early as the thirteenth or fourteenth century. M. Delepuce states that some English ships were destroyed in 1372 by fire carried under water. In the early part of the seventeenth century submarine boats were numerous, and in 1624 Cornelius Van Drebbel exhibited to King James I. on the Thames a submarine boat of his own design. By 1727 no less than fourteen types of submarines had been patented in England alone. In 1773 Day began experiments with a submarine boat at Plymouth, England, losing his life in the second submergence trial. In the following year David Bushnell built his first boat, with which Sergeant Lee attacked H. M. S. Eagle in New York harbor. Lee actually got under the ship, water pressure, and the same fate befell Bauer's iron boat Plongeur-Marin at Kiel in 1850. In 1863 McClintock and Howgate built a semi-submarine hand-propelled boat for the attack on the federal fleet, but it sank four times, each time drowning the entire crew of eight men. In the same year several larger boats propelled by engines were commenced in Europe, and these at intervals were followed by others designed by Hovgaard, Goubet, Zede, Nordenfeldt, Tuck, Holland and others. The French navy began experiment with submarine boats about 1885. The Gymnote was built in 1883 and the Gustave Zede in 1892. The Morse was commenced in 1894, but remained uncompleted until 1899, pending additional experiments with the Gymnote and the Zede. In that year the construction of submarines was actively commenced, ten being launched in 1901.

All London is talking about the startling exhibitions of speed given by a little boat on the Thames and at Bournemouth. The boat was seen racing up and down the river at what seemed a terrific speed, darting along by leaps and bounds, just as a shark chases a fish scudding between wind and water. The impression she left was not so much that of power, for she was such a mite of a thing, only 26 feet long, as of vicious and desperate energy. Crowds of people gathered along the embankment to watch her, wondering whence in her tiny body this overpowering energy could come.

It has since been divulged that she is the Miranda IV, the latest experiment in skin boats, or, as they are called technically, hydroplanes, by the veteran English inventor, Sir John Thornycroft. Compared with anything near her size, the Miranda IV is certainly the fastest craft afloat. Her exact speed is not known, but she has several times done well over 24 knots an hour, and has decisively beaten the Columbine at Bournemouth, the only other craft which could lay claim to a record in her class. But it is not only for her terrific speed that the Miranda IV is remarkable. She is the most seaworthy craft of her size that has been constructed.

PANIC IN A HOTEL CAUSED BY SNAKE

SIG BOA CONSTRICTOR GETS LOOSE AND STARTS A REIGN OF TERROR.

MAKES BRAVE MEN TREMBLE

Breaks Dishes and Has a High Old Time Before Snake Charmer Finally Conquers King of Jungle in Iowa Hostelry.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—About 200 panic-stricken people lined Fourth street between First and Second avenues for one hour in the afternoon while a monster boa constrictor had a merry time in breaking dishes and causing general damage in the Russell house. As an aftermath John Murphy was some time in recovering from the scare which was caused when he cut his hand on a broken plate and thought that the big snake had bitten him. Mrs. Jess Kimmel also suffered much from the shock.

The evening before the ruction a showman who was on his way to make some of the small town fairs, stopped in the Russell house. He had with him two large wooden boxes. During the night a dog belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Jess Kimmel, proprietor of the Russell house, kept barking at one of the boxes, but nobody paid attention to the enraged canine. The showman did not tell what was in the box.

In the afternoon—about three o'clock, while the hotel was very quiet, Mrs. Kimmel went into the dining-room to get some dishes. She was suddenly attracted by a noise on the floor, and looking down discovered to her horror a large snake crawling on the floor.

The state of Mrs. Kimmel's fright cannot be described. She screamed for help, but the help that came fled precipitately, while a crowd gathered. For some minutes the crowd did not know what was up. When the word was passed that a snake was loose all the women in the crowd made a grand getaway.

John Murphy, a construction worker who boards at the hotel, finally decided to become a hero. His entry into the screen door which was now the center of great interest was a great moment, and John Murphy was declared the bravest man in the United States.

But alas! After Mr. Murphy's entry into the hotel there was a great sound of falling dishes, and then Mr. Murphy rushed out of the hotel, holding one bleeding hand and yelling with all his might that the boa constrictor had bitten him. Down Fourth street, through the alley, and down Third street went Mr. Murphy, all the time he was yelling for a doctor. There was more excitement, and several persons ran after Mr. Murphy.

For an hour the crowd stood awe-struck. Railroad men famous for their bravery stood without making a move and then a real hero made his way to the Russell house, door it was Lewis Russell of Marion, who boards at the house. Mr. Russell carefully entered the dining room. As he was not coming out the crowd got nerve enough to get near the windows to see the performance.

Upon Mr. Russell's entry the big snake, attracted by the noise, stuck out his head from under a pile of dishes and Mr. Russell made one grab for the snake by the head. Just then might have happened to Mr. Russell is hard to tell, but by this time the snake's owner had been found, and he came rushing into the dining room. With the help of a blanket, which was laid on the floor and a rabbit's tail, the snake was subdued. The reptile was placed on the blanket and the owner waved a rabbit's tail until the big boa constrictor coiled up and was placed in the box. The box was nailed and fast with ropes, and the unfortunate owner of the reptile was ordered to find a new hotel.

The damage done by the reptile amounted to about $15, which the showman paid. There were many broken dishes, including a coffee pot, which the snake turned over. The coffee was not hot enough to kill the snakes.

RHEUMATISM

LUNYON'S RHEUMATISM CURE

To accept defeat gracefully, start your retreat in time.

Prudent Bridegroom.—The uncertainties of life in New York are reflected in wedding rings, said the jeweler. "Of all the wedding rings I have sold this season more than half were brought back after the ceremony to have the date put on. The rest of the inscription was engraved when the ring was purchased, but in order that the date might be correct it was cautiously omitted until after the knot was tied."

Just Guessed.—"Mrs. Wadsworth, I am very glad, indeed, to meet you. But, haven't I had the honor of being introduced to you before? What was your name formerly, if I may ask?"

"My maiden name?"

"No; your name before you were divorced?"

"How did you know I had been divorced?"

"Why, hasn't everybody?"

Slightly Mixed.—Two Englishmen were resting at the Red House Inn at Stratford-on-Avon. One of them discovered a print-picturing a low, tumbling building underneath which was printed, "The House in Which Shakespeare Was Born." Turning to his friend in mild surprise he pointed to the print. His friend exhibited equal surprise and called a waiter, who assured them of the accuracy of the inscription.

"Pon my word," said the observing Englishman, shaking his head doubtfully, "I thought he was born in a manger!"

Popularity of Thais.—"Every other young actress is calling herself 'Thais,'" said Henry El Dixey at a dinner at Maquelin's. "Thais McGlinch, Thais Endicott, Thais Schmidt—the thing is universal."

Universal and ridiculous; for they who have read Anatole France's story of "Thais" know that she was a very naughty little girl, indeed. I am quite sure that no real reader of "Thais" would ever, under any circumstances, consent to be called such a name.

"It makes me think of a man who, taking his infant daughter to be baptized, told the clergyman to call her Venus."

"But I refuse to call her Venus," said the clergyman, indignantly. "Venus is the name of a pagan goddess." "Well, how about your own girl, Diana?" said the man.

COFFEE WAS IT. People Slowly Learn the Facts:

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'Nonsense, it don't hurt me.'"

"Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered. My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again."

"I was in despair, for the very thought of the medicines I had tried so many times nauseated me. I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee."

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all?"

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady. I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced all the time."

"Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more."

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have.
