THINGS HAVE CHANGED.

HE IS A VERY BUSY OFFICIAL

Judge of Probate Has Other Duties Besides Juvenile Work.

When considering the qualifications of an aspirant for office the voter should first of all know that the aspirant is willing to work hard for the body politic and further, that the aspirant is capable of conducting the office with discretion and at a minimum of expense. Judge Henry S. Hulbert has proved in the short time that he has been associated with Judge Edgar O. Durfee, he has these qualifications. Office hours in Judge Hulbert's Court sometimes extend from as early as seven o'clock in the morning until as late as eleven o'clock at night. The question of time has been eliminated in his court, his only thought having been, "Is there any work left undone?"

As a Probate Judge he has been assigned the work of the examination and passing on of all accounts filed in the Probate Court by executors, administrators, guardians and trustees; hearing all petitions for guardians for insane and "mentally incompetent persons; hearing of all petitions for admission of insane people to asylums and to the state institution at Lapeer and the determination of inheritance tax in all estates.

Because of a system inaugurated by Judge Hulbert on being elevated to the bench the people are now saved $84.00 per week in cases where families have been made to help pay the expense of relatives sent to the various institutions. He is a good safe man to return to the office of Probate Judge where he also presides as Judge of the Juvenile Court.

Be sure to buy a ticket for the musical next Wednesday evening.

Auction Sale.

Daniel Wilkinson will have an auction sale on the premises 2 1/2 miles west of Northville and 1/2 mile north of base line, on Saturday, Nov. 13, commencing at 10:00 a. m. with lunch at noon. The sale will consist of stock and farm implements. A. H. Phelps & son, auctioneers. Frank Tanner, clerk.

IS AN IDEAL COUNTY TREASURER

Board of Auditors Compliment Mr. Moeller.

After the annual audit of the books of the County Treasurer, which has just been completed, the County Auditors have announced to the public that "in Wm. F. Moeller Wayne has an ideal County Treasurer." They continue to state that his books were not only balanced to perfection but that his bookkeeping system is such that no extra expense and no outside accountants were necessary to complete the audit.

In view of the natural intense interest in the County Treasurer's office a lengthy inquiry was made into the methods of Mr. Moeller and his "staff" the result of which is a striking list of reforms and improvements in method which have been installed by Mr. Moeller.

County Treasurer Moeller has been able to handle a business that has been increased twenty-three percent without asking for any more clerks. The handling of this great increase in business without more clerical aid shows that a new system has been inaugurated and Mr. Moeller is getting the money due the county and state from the people.

No Haircuts in Oberammergau. The Oberammergau Passion plays will begin next year from May 11 to September 25. The burgomaster issued a notice the other day reminding the men that they must now let their hair grow long.

ORGAN RECITAL IN M. E. CHURCH

DETROIT, HOLLY AND MILFORD TALENT IN IT

To Assist Guy Filkins in a Splendid Entertainment.

Guy Filkins, assisted by Floyd Evans of Holly, violinist, Harry Black of Detroit, vocalist and Miss Georgia Burton of Milford, accompanist, will give an organ recital in the Methodist church next Wednesday evening. This will be a splendid entertainment and worthy of a large patronage. Mr. Filkins' well known talent on a pipe organ is worthy alone of a large patronage, and the assistance of those from other towns will add much to the attraction. The entire receipts will go to the Methodist church society and will be used in making repairs on the pipe organ. Admission 15 and 10 cents.

NOVI NEWS.

Mrs. Herman Gregor is still very low.

Mrs. Nora Holmes of Pontiac is spending a few days with Mrs. Geo. Taylor.

Quite a number of the Novi ladies attended the W. C. T. U. Convention held at Milford Tuesday and Wednesday.

Jas. Taylor, George and Pbil Taylor and Mrs. Walter Coates went to Detroit last Wednesday to attend the funeral of a cousin's daughter, Mrs. Eva Murphy. The circumstances of her death are very sad. She had been married just one week and with her husband went to New York City of the evening of their marriage. On Saturday evening, Oct. 22, she was taken violently ill and died the following morning of acute indigestion. The grief-stricken husband arrived from New York with the remains on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Taylor celebrated their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary Monday by entertaining a number of relatives and friends. A fine dinner was served after which the guests adjourned to the parlor and listened to a short program of music, recitations and reminiscences of the past. One of the most pleasing numbers on the program was an original poem by Miss Celia Taylor, niece of the host. The occasion was a most enjoyable one and all wished Mr. and Mrs. Taylor many happy returns of the day.

A very pleasant event occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Scherer Thursday evening, Oct. 27, when Mrs. Scherer's daughter, Eva M. Lee, was united in marriage to Mr. Clyde A. Hill of Detroit. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank A. Brass in the presence of a few invited guests, the Episcopal ring service being used. A sumptuous wedding supper was served, after which the guests were entertained with music and recitations. The happy couple have the best wishes of their many friends. They will reside in Detroit.

TOWNSEND IS NOT ELECTED

NEXT LEGISLATURE MAY AND IT MAY NOT.

Voters Can Help by Voting for Republican Legislators.

Many people are under the impression that Charles E. Townsend is already elected U. S. Senator or that the voters will be able to vote direct for him at the November election. The fact is Mr. Townsend is now the Republican nominee just as John Winship is the Democratic nominee. If the next legislature is Democratic then Mr. Winship will be elected. Therefore the only way to vote for Mr. Townsend for U. S. Senator is to vote for the Republican candidate for Representative Fred Burham and Republican candidate for State Senator Larry Spell. Mr. Townsend's name will not appear on the ticket.

A Few of Huff's Hints About Stove Buying

You want the worth of your money—surely. But can you tell the real worth of a stove on sight?—it's difficult—and it's so easy to make mistakes.

Then Why Experiment

Select a Stove absolutely warranted by a past record—one that commands the confidence of the majority of stove buyers—that the majority have proven to be the best. That is infallible evidence—or superiority, your best assurance of worth; an absolute guarantee of Quality.

"Huff" keeps only this kind of a line of Stoves in stock.

ASK LEGISLATURE FOR RADICAL LAWS

MICHIGAN TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION STARTS MOVEMENT FOR SWEEPING CHANGES.

PENSIONS FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS AND SANITARY REGULATIONS OF SCHOOLS IS ASKED.

Also That School Boards Be Placed Under Laws That Now Govern Incorporated Towns and Cities.

The Michigan State Teachers' association, at the meeting in Bay City Forest Park, 28, was sentenced at Grand Rapids to Jackson prison for life on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Nancy Lazzette, of Sand Lake, 72 years old.

After three days' delay, Justice John C. Davis, of Battle Creek, granted a warrant charging Ald. Ralph Eskine with assault and battery on City Attorney William E. Ware.

The jury in the case of Lorenzo Buck, treasurer of the Saginaw Veneer company, tried on the charge of burning the company's buildings near Addison May 15, returned a verdict of "Not guilty."

John Suter, prominent farmer of North Milton, was the victim of a supposed murderous assault while driving home from Cadillac. He was found by neighbors lying in the road.

Alma Capitalist's Generous Gift.

Though not himself a member of the Masonic fraternity, Ammi W. Wright, the millionaire resident of Alma, has achieved the distinction of doing more for the Masons of the state in 1910 than any other man. He has presented to the Grand Lodge of Michigan, Free and Accepted Masons, the Alma Sanitarium for a Masonic home. The value of the gift is approximately $300,000.

The sanitarium comes free and clear, without strings or conditions of any sort. Furthermore, the bequest includes a beautiful park of several acres adjoining the home of Mr. Wright himself, bedding, linen and tableware, and all the furnishings which go to make up a first-class, comfortable sanitarium or hotel. The building is in the repair and the expenditure of a very little money will fit it for the reception of 200 inmates. The old home, which was located at Grand Rapids, and which burned last February, had a capacity of but 100.

May Not Adopt Charter.

At a number of semi-political meetings held throughout the city the new proposed charter, which will give Port Huron a commission form of government, was discussed by many speakers and the likelihood of its adoption is not so certain as it was. While the general feeling appears to be that the city will charter under a commission government, the argument was put up that the proposed charter is but a retask of the present charter, which is admittedly antiquated. But all agree that a commission will give the city an impetus which it needs.

Defeats Game Wardens.

A case which has been attracting a great deal of attention among the fishermen of the state has been ended in the circuit court of Leelanau county. The action was brought by Joseph Hana, of South Manitowish, and I. Kaddy, deputy game warden, because they confiscated several kegs of salted wildfish which they claimed were illegal and which were proved before Judge F. W. Mayne to be legal fish. Both deputies were fined the value of the confiscation and the interest, $87.27.

Thirty Women Under Arrest.

As a result of officers locating a 14-year-old girl in a resort in Hancock, 30 warrants were issued for the arrest of women implicated in the case. A general moral housecleaning of the city is planned by the authorities. Other cases of alleged white slavery are being investigated.

The girl in the present case is the niece of a local business man. Three young men are under bail, charged with a serious offense against her.

Students to Study Aeronautics.

The University of Michigan Aero club was formed at Ann Arbor with about 100 members all students. The members of the club purpose studying aviation and the construction of heavier-than-air machines, and in all likelihood several aeroplanes will be constructed next spring. Experiments and a course of lectures under the charge of experienced aviators are also planned.

90c per Capita Out of School Tax.

Auditor-General Fuller stated that the apportionment of primary school moneys will be 90 cents per capita. There are 735,822 school children in the state and the amount to be apportioned is $660,246.10. The distribution will begin after Nov. 10.

G. M. Birst killed a wildcat in Taylor's grove, on the outskirts of Cadillac. The first wildcat killed here in years.

G. A. Young, of Owosso, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and prohibition nominee for secretary of state, is being criticized by church members because he had installed a billiard and pool table in the association rooms. One pastor has refused to announce the time of Y. M. C. A. meetings.

Irwin Smith, 14 years old, of Cadillac, was "playing horse" with his 2-year-old brother. The baby was on Irwin's face, riding around the room. He grabbed a knife from a table, unknown to his brother. When Irwin stopped, the baby playfully struck at him, with the knife and gouged out Irwin's right eye.

County Officials Won't Prosecute.

While Sheriff Watson has heard nothing official from the state railroad commission in regard to the finding on the Durand wreck in which the commission blames Superintendent Ehrke and Trainmaster Akers, of the Grand Trunk railroad, and recommends their prosecution, it is an assured fact that he will make no move for the arrest of Mr. Ehrke and Mr. Akers, unless the commission reveals information not made public in the report. Sheriff Watson stands ready to cooperate with Prosecutor Hicks in the arrest and prosecution of Grahame and Spencer, the men whom the commission held responsible for the wreck. He declared, however, he would not proceed against either one separately. The commission has absolved Spencer from blame, and includes Lacey, the train conductor, as well as Grahame, and the officials in the finding. Mr. Hicks and Mr. Watson believe Spencer should be included in any proceedings begun and so a deadlock between the commission on one side, and the Shiawassee county officials on the other, is probable.

Lack of Farm Help.

It has been many years since the farmers in Eaton county have experienced the difficulty in securing help that they are up against this fall. They have made but a fair start on their potato digging and nearly all of the corn crop is still unhusked. With the present scarcity of farm laborers at the unusually high wages offered, the situation is becoming a serious proposition to handle, and it looks as though the farmers will have to do their own corn husking in the winter if they "pinch" out enough time to get their potato crop under cover before the ground freezes.

Grahame-White Wins Trophy.

America lost the Gordon Bennett international aviation speed cup at Belmont park, New York to England, when Claude Grahame-White, of the English team of flyers, circled the international course of five kilometers twenty times, a total distance of 62 1/2 miles in 61 minutes 43 seconds. The English flyer won the trophy with a French airplane propelled by a French engine. He new a Gleron monoplane equipped with a Gnome engine of 100 horse power.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Following an order from the director of the mint that all gold bullion in the New Orleans mint should be shipped to the Philadelphia mint, more than $1,200,000 in bullion was transferred last week.

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the entire plant and stock of the Hardware & Supply company at Alton, O. The loss of $100,000 on the stock and $50,000 on the building is estimated.

The building occupied by the Rockford Wholesale Grocery company at Rockford, was destroyed by fire. Employees on the second and third floors were rescued by firemen. Loss $250,000, partly insured.

The Rev. Morton Dexter, widely known as a writer of history, formerly editor and proprietor of the Congregationalist, died suddenly at Edgemoor, Mass., aged 64. Mr. Dexter was graduated from Yale in 1867.

Alexander G. Macdonald, for 25 years a member of the faculty of Eastman business college at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. and who is known to thousands of Eastman graduates all over the country, is dead. Prof. Macdonald was 55 years old.

Two-thirds of the plant of H. H. Smith & Co., at Plainville, Conn., one of the largest manufacturers of carriage hardware in the country, was destroyed by fire with a loss of $200,000. The plant which employed 250 hands will be rebuilt.

The budget for New York city for the year 1911, as finally adopted by the board of estimate and signed by all of the members of the board (total up to $174,673,325, nearly $1,000,000 higher than that for 1910, which amounted to $163,130,270.

The will of Gen. Thomas T. Eckert, formerly president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., as filed by probate, leaves practically the entire estate to his two sons, Thomas T. Eckert, Jr., and James C. Eckert. The value of the estate is not given.

Alleging that the Oklahoma law under which the tax is levied is unconstitutional, the United States American and Wells Fargo Express companies obtained an injunction from the federal court restraining the state auditor from collecting the gross revenue tax.

Divorce decrees granted in South Dakota are not "legal tender" in the District of Columbia, according to the decision rendered by Justice Stafford, in the district supreme court. The particular decree of divorce which the justice declared invalid in the national capital was obtained by Milton E. Davis, who in April, 1907, went to South Dakota, in December, got his divorce and three weeks later was married again.

After fighting the flames from midnight until long after dawn, the tired residents of Bosswell, a mining town in Somerset county, Pa., looked out upon a scene of desolation. Property to the value of $75,000 had been destroyed. The hotel, business houses and seven dwellings were burned. The fire was fought with buckets and water from every available source of supply, aid from nearby towns being lost because railroads could not provide locomotives to carry fire engines to the stricken village.

According to Senator Manuel Secades, a special commissioner delegated by the Cuban government to make a study of police jails and prisons, a government prison and ten police jails will shortly be built in Havana. The buildings will be similar to those in New York.

Reports from returning hunters are to the effect that the deer hunting season in northern New York, at midnight tonight has been very poor throughout the Adirondack region. The severity of the last winter killed many deer and the great increase in the number of hunters has driven the animals far back into the woods.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST GARFIELD

ATTORNEY-GENERAL GOT FACTS THROUGH A SLIP OF THE PEN OF AN EMPLOYEE.

CHARGED HE LET HARRIMAN ROAD BOTTLE UP RICHEST FIELD IN WYOMING.

Former Secretary of Interior May Face Charges More Serious Than Those Against Ballinger.

Former Secretary of the Interior, James R. Garfield, of Ohio, will be called upon to defend himself against more serious charges than have ever been made against Secretary of the Interior Ballinger. In an investigation which will be conducted this winter either by the Ballinger-Pinchot committee of congress, or by another special committee of congress, it will be charged that Mr. Garfield did not merely attempt to but actually did shield the Union Pacific Railroad company while it defrauded the United States out of a great belt of coal land in Wyoming.

During Mr. Garfield's administration of the affairs of the interior department, it will be charged, while minor offenders, individuals, who undertook fraudulently to acquire a quarter section of land, contrary to law, were prosecuted, convicted, and sent to jail, the Union Pacific, which actually defrauded the government out of the best coal land in Wyoming, and the west was permitted to go scot free upon the payment of a royalty of eight cents a ton.

Over twice as much land is involved in this Union Pacific fraud as in the Cunningham claims. While the Union Pacific coal is located within easy reach of the market, it is extremely doubtful whether the coal on the land covered by the Cunningham claims, which brought about the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, will ever be available.

The real history of these Union Pacific coal land frauds has been buried in the archives of the interior department, and has only now come to light. It appears from the records which the facts have long been suppressed for these records show that Mr. Garfield, before being appointed secretary of the interior to relieve E. A. Hitchcock, of Missouri, was apprised of the embarrassment in which the railroad corporation found itself, and actually went into office pledged to protect the Union Pacific against both criminal and civil prosecution in the federal courts.

French Cabinet Resigns.

The cabinet of Aristide Briand, the world's first socialist premier which succeeded the Clemenceau ministry on July 23, 1909, unexpectantly resigned in consequence of the bitter attacks made in the chamber of deputies upon the government's action in suppressing the recent rail road strike and its proposed legislation for the avoidance of similar crises.

President Falloux sent for Premier Briand and asked him to form a new ministry. The premier accepted the task. He therefore comes out victorious in the cabinet crisis and will have his own way in introducing the legislation which he says is needed to prevent a recurrence of the railroad strike which, according to his views, nearly plunged the nation into a revolution, and which it is his policy to guard against by strong enactments.

Express Men to Arbitrate.

The strike of 10,000 express companies' drivers and helpers of New York nearer to a settlement when Mayor Gaynor announced that the strikers had agreed to arbitrate.

The strikers informed the mayor that they were willing to leave their case in the hands of arbitrators to be selected by the consolidation committee of the National Civic Federation and return to work and wait for the decision of the arbitrators until Dec. 1, or Jan. 1.

All that is needed to secure a settlement of the strike by arbitration is the consent of the employing companies.

The demands of the men are: Recognition of union; drivers, $30 monthly; assistants, $25; helpers, $25; eleven-hour day, one hour for luncheon; overtime, 25 and 35 cents an hour.

When the secret service men arrested H. Nathan Secrest in Chicago a few days ago and charged him with counterfeiting $599,900 in bonds in Nicaragua notes, they thought they had nipped in the bud another revolution. Now that Secrest's stories have been investigated, Chief Willie's men are not inclined to believe Secrest's revolution story and think he was counterfeiting notes for his own benefit.

NEWS OF MICHIGAN.

Uniformity of text books throughout the state will also be sought by legislative enactment.

Grand Rapids was the leader in the movement and S. Brant Weissell, of Grand Rapids, addressed the teachers upon the subject.

Ellias Roser, of Grand Rapids, and Herbert L. Hesse, of Whitehall, are among the list of persons awarded medals by the Carnegie hero commission at Pittsburg.

The fifth bill will ask for the legalization of the office of superintendent of schools, making it an office requiring an oath, and defining the superintendent's duties and powers.

Because he sold in Grand Rapids the flesh of a cow that had been condemned because it had cancer, Elmer E. Wells, of Allegan, was sentenced by Judge Stuart in superior court to pay a fine of $150 and $100 costs.

The sixth bill will ask that boards of education be required to secure the sanction of boards of health of all plans and specifications for new school buildings and to grant boards of health special power to condemn unsanitary school buildings now in use.

Because a conductor on the M. T. R. threatened to put her on the car and said, "To show you that I am a gentleman, I will pay your fare," Mrs. Humphreys of Comstock, brought proceedings in circuit court and was allowed $500 by a jury at Kalamazoo.

Look the initial steps in the most important work it has ever attempted—the launching of a movement to secure several radical legislative enactments at the next session of the state legislature. Six bills will be offered. The first will ask for pensions for school teachers who have served a specified number of years, and have reached a certain age; the general provisions to be patterned after the Rhode Island bill.

Grand Trunk Held Responsible.

The state railroad commission issued its findings as a result of the investigation of the Grand Trunk wreck at Durand last August, in which 10 persons lost their lives. Relative to the officials of the road, who were in charge of the train service, the commission is unanimously of the opinion "that they are primarily responsible for this wreck."

Jackson Doctor Faces Serious Charge.

Dr. Seth M. Aizin, one of the most prominent physicians in Jackson, is under arrest charged with furnishing cocaine to minors, and the police claim to have evidence that Aizin was doing a wholesale business in the drug.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Gertrude and her fiancé, Jack Bailey, had conspired in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancée, Louise, Armstrong, told Halsey that when she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. He stated that he had recognized at the bottom of the circular staircase. She said something had brushed by her in the dark on the stairway, and she called Bailey, suspected of Armstrong's murder. Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a note in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Watson." A ladder found out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned, and in the dark Miss Innes shot an intruder. Halsey was seriously injured. His auto was found wrecked by a freight train. It developed Halsey had an argument in the library with a woman before his disappearance. A new cook appears. Miss Innes learned Halsey was alive. Dr. Walker's face becomes vivid as mention of the name of Nina Carrington. Evidence was secured from a tramp that a man, supposedly Halsey, had been bound and gagged and thrown into an empty box car. Gertrude was missing. Hunting for her, Miss Innes ran into a man and fainted. A confederate of Dr. Walker confessed his part in the murder. He stated that the girl who had been killed, that Walker feared her, and that he believed that Paul Armstrong had been killed by a hand guided by Walker. Halsey was found in a distant hospital. Paul Armstrong was not dead. Miss Innes discovered secret rooms in which the Traders' bank treasury was believed to be. Mrs. Watson, dying, said she killed Arnold Armstrong, who years before had married her sister under the alias of Walker. Lucien Watson was born of the marriage. Miss Innes discovered a secret panel to the mysterious room and unwillingly locked herself within it. During the hunt for her the searchers ran across Paul Armstrong. Armstrong pitched forward down the circular staircase, breaking his neck in the fall. Secret room was found in the Traders' bank lot, which Armstrong had taken.

As Alex and I reached the second floor, Mr. Jamieson met us. He was grave and quiet, but he nodded comprehendingly when he saw the safe.

"Will you come with me for a moment, Miss Innes?" he asked soberly, and on my assenting, he led the way to the east wing. There were lights moving around below, and some of the maids were standing gazing down. They screamed when they saw me, and threw back to let me pass. There was a sort of hush over the scene; Alex, behind me, muttered something I could not hear, and brushed past me without ceremony. Then I realized that a man was lying doubled up at the foot of the staircase, and that Alex was stooping over him.

As I came slowly down, Winters stopped back, and Alex straightened himself, looking at me across the body with penetrable eyes. In his hand he held a shaggy gray wig, and before me on the floor lay the man whose headstone stood in Casanova churchyard—Paul Armstrong.

Winters told the story in a dozen words. In his headlong flight down the circular staircase, with Winters just behind, Paul Armstrong had pitched forward violently, struck his head against the door to the east veranda, and probably broken his neck. He had died as Winters reached him.

As the detective finished, I saw Halsey, pale and shaken, in the cardroom doorway, and for the first time that night I lost my self-control. I put my arms around my boy, and for a moment he had to support me. A second later, over Halsey's shoulder, I saw something that turned my emotion into other channels; for behind him, in the shadowy cardroom, were Gertrude and Alex, the gardener, and there in no use miming masters—he was kissing her!

I was unable to speak. Twice I opened my mouth; then I turned Halsey around and pointed. They were quite unconscious of us; her head was on his shoulder, his face against her hair. As it happened, it was Mr. Jamieson who broke up the tableau.

He stepped over to Alex and touched him on the arm.

"And now," he said quietly, "how long are you and Lito to play our little comedy, Mr. Bailey?"

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The Odds and Ends.

Of Dr. Walker's sensational escape that night to South America, of the recovery of over $1,600,000 in cash and securities in the safe from the chimney room—the papers have kept the public well informed. Of my share in discovering the secret chamber they have been singularly silent. The inner history has never been told. Mr. Jamieson got all kinds of credit, and some of it he deserved, but if Jack Bailey, as Alex had not traced Halsey and insisted on the disinterment of Paul Armstrong's casket, if he had not suspected the truth from the start, where would the detective have been?

When Halsey learned the truth, he insisted on going the next morning, weak as he was, to Louise, and by night she was at Sunnyside, under Gertrude's particular care, while her mother had gone to Barbara Fitzhugh's.

What Halsey said to Mrs. Armstrong I never knew, but that he was considerate and chivalrous, I feel confident. It was Halsey's way always with women.

He Was Kissing Her.

He and Louise had no conversation together until that night. Gertrude and Alex—I mean Jack—had gone for a walk, although it was nine o'clock, and anybody but a pair of young geese would have known that dew was falling, and that it is next to impossible to get rid of a summer cold.

At half after nine, growing weary of my own company, I went downstairs to find the young people. At the door of the living room I paused. Gertrude and Jack had returned and were, there, sitting together on a divan, with only one lamp lighted. They did not see or hear me, and I bent a hasty retreat to the library. But here again I was driven back. Louise was sitting in a deep chair, looking the happiest I had ever seen her, with Halsey on the arm of the chair, holding her close.

The next day, by agreement, I got the whole story.

Paul Armstrong had a besetting evil—the love of money. Common enough, but he loved money, not for what it would buy, but for its own sake. An examination of the books showed no irregularities in the past year since John had been cashier, but before that, in the time of Anderson, the old cashier, who had died, much strange juggling had been done with the records. The railroad in New Mexico had apparently drained the banker's private fortune, and he determined to retrieve it by one stroke.

This was nothing less than the looting of the bank's securities, turning them into money, and making his escape.

But the law has long arms. Paul Armstrong evidently studied the situation carefully. Just as the only good Indian is a dead Indian, so the only safe defaulter is a dead defaulter. He decided to die, to all appearances, and when the hue and cry subsided, he would be able to enjoy his money almost anywhere he wished.

The first necessity was an accomplice. The confidence of Dr. Walker was suggested by his love for Louise. The man was unscrupulous, and with the girl as a bait, Paul Armstrong soon had him fast. The plan was apparently the acme of simplicity. A small town in the west, an attack of heart disease, a body from a medical college dissecting room shipped in a trunk to Dr. Walker by a colleague in San Francisco, and palmed off for the supposed dead banker. What was simpler?

The woman, Nina Carrington, was the cog that slipped. What she only suspected, what she really knew, we never learned. She was a chambermaid in the hotel at C—, and was evidently her intention to blackmail Dr. Walker. His position at that time was uncomfortable: To pay the woman to keep quiet would be confession. He denied the whole thing, and she went to Halsey.

It was that that had taken Halsey to the doctor that night, he disappeared. He accused the doctor of the deception, and, crossing the lawn, had said something cruel to Louise. Then, furling at her apparent connivance, he had started for the station. Dr. Walker and Paul Armstrong—the latter still lame where I had shot him—hurried across to the embankment, certain only of one thing: Halsey must not tell the detective what he suspected until the money had been recovered from the chimney room. They stepped into the road in front of the car to stop it, and fate played into their hands. The car struck the train, and they had only to dispose of the unconscious figure in the road. This they did as I have told. For three days Halsey lay in the box car, tied hand and foot, suffering tortures of thirst, delicious at times, and discovered by a tramp at Johnsville, only in time to save his life.

To go back to Paul Armstrong: At the last moment, his plans had been frustrated. Sunnyside, with its board in the chimney room, had been rented without his knowledge. Attempts to disclose me having failed, he was driven to breaking into his own house. The ladder in the chute, the burning of the stable and the entrance through the cardroom window—all were in the course of a desperate attempt to get into the chimney room.

Louise and her mother had, from the first, been the great stumbling blocks. The plan had been to send her to the hotel at C— just at the wrong time. There was a terrible error. The girl was told that something of the kind was necessary; that the bank was about to close and her stepfather would either avoid arrest and disgrace in this way, or kill himself. Fanny Armstrong was a waiting, but Louise was more difficult to manage. She had no love for her stepfather, but her devotion to her mother was entire, self-sacrificing. Forced into acquiescence by her mother's appeals, overwhelmed by the situation, the girl consented and fled.

From somewhere in Colorado she sent an anonymous telegram to Jack Bailey at the Traders' bank. Trapped as she was, she did not want to see an innocent man arrested. The telegram, received on Thursday, had sent the cashier to the bank that night in a frenzy.

Louise arrived at Sunnyside and found the house rented. Not knowing what to do, she sent for Arnold at the Greenwood club, and told him a little, not all. She told him that there was something wrong, and that the bank was about to close. That his father was responsible. Of the conspiracy she said nothing. To her surprise, Arnold already knew, through Bailey that night, that things were not right. Moreover, he suspected what Louise did not, that the money was hidden at Sunnyside. He had a scrap of paper that indicated a concealed room somewhere.

His inherited cupidity was aroused. Eager to get Halsey and Jack Bailey out of the house, he went up to the east entry, and in the billiard room gave the cashier what he had refused earlier in the evening—the address of Paul Armstrong in California and a telegram which had been forwarded to the club for Bailey, from Dr. Walker. It was in response to one Bailey had sent, and it said that Paul Armstrong was very ill.

Bailey was almost desperate. He decided to go west and find Paul Armstrong and to force him to disgorge. But the catastrophe at the bank occurred sooner than he had expected. On the moment of starting west, at Andrews station, where Mr. Jamieson had located the car, he read that the bank had closed, and, going back, surrendered himself.

John Bailey had known Paul Armstrong intimately. He did not believe that the money was gone; in fact, it was hardly possible in the interval since the securities had been taken. Where was it? And from some chance remark let fall some months earlier by Arnold Armstrong at a dinner, Bailey felt sure there was a hidden room at Sunnyside. He tried to see the architect of the building, but like the contractor, if he knew of the room, he refused any information. It was Halsey's idea that John Bailey come to the house as a gardener, and pursue his investigations as he could. His smooth upper lip had been sufficient disguise, with his change of clothes, and a hair-cut by a country barber.

So it was Alex, Jack Bailey, who had been our ghost. Not only had he harmed Louise—and himself, he admitted—on the circular staircase, but he had dug the hole in the trunkroom wall, and later sent Eliza into hysteria. The note Liddy had found in Gertrude's scrap-basket was from him, and it was he who had startled me into unconsciousness, by the clothes chute, and, with Gertrude's help, had carried me to Louise's room. Gertrude, I learned, had watched all night beside me, in an extremity of anxiety about me.

That old Thomas had seen his master, and thought he had seen the Sunnyside ghost, there could be no doubt. Of that story of Thomas, about seeing Jack Bailey in the foothold between the club and Sunnyside, the night Liddy and I heard the noise on the circular staircase—that, too, was right. On the night before, Arnold Armstrong was murdered, Jack Bailey had made an attempt to search for the secret room. He secured Arnold's keys from his room at the club and got into the house, armed with a golfstick for sounding the walls. He ran against the hamper at the head of the stairs, caught his cufflink in it and dropped the golfstick with a crash. He was glad enough to get away without an alarm being raised, and he took the "owl" train to town.

The oddest thing to me was that Mr. Jamieson had known for some time that Alex was Jack Bailey. But the face of the pseudo-gardener was very quiet indeed when, that night, in the cardroom, the detective turned to him and said:

"How long are you and I going to play our little comedy, Mr. Bailey?"

Well, it is all over now. Paul Armstrong rests in Casanova churchyard, and this time there is no mistake. I went to the funeral because I wanted to be sure he was really buried, and I looked at the step of the shaft where I had sat that night, and wondered if it was all real. Sunnyside is for sale—no, I shall not buy it. Little Lucien Armstrong is living with his step-grandmother, who is recovering gradually from troubles that had extended over the entire period of her second marriage. Anne Watson lies not far from the man she killed, and who, as surely, caused her death. Thomas, the fourth victim of the conspiracy, is buried on the hill. With Nina Carrington, five lives were sacrificed in the course of this grim conspiracy.

There will be two weddings before long, and Liddy has asked for my help—trapeze jumps to wear to the church. I knew she would. She has wanted it for three years, and she was quite ugly the time I spilled coffee on it. We are very quiet, just the two of us. Liddy still clings to her ghost theory, and points to my wet and muddy boots in the trunkroom as proof. I am gray, I admit, but I haven't felt as well in a dozen years. Sometimes, when I am bored, I ring for Liddy, and we talk things over. When Warner married Rosie, Liddy sniffed and said what I took for faithfulness in Rosie had been nothing but mawkishness. I have not yet outlived Liddy's contempt because I gave them silver knives and forks at a wedding gift.

So we sit and talk, and sometimes Liddy threatens to leave, and often I discharge her, but we stay together somehow. I am talking of renting a house next year, and Liddy says to be sure there is no ghost. To be perfectly frank, I never really lived until that summer. Time has passed since I began this story. My neighbors are packing up for another summer. Liddy is having the awnings put up, and the window-boxes filled. Liddy, or no Liddy, I shall advertise to-morrow for a house in the country, and I don't care if it has a Circular Staircase.

THE END.

Hunters Kill Big Grizzly.

The monster grizzly bear that for years has been making madly sleepless nights for the farmers, miners and residents of the northwestern Trinity region has at last been slain.

This monarch of the forest and slayer of small domestic animals was killed by Thomas McDonald, a wealthy mining man who has been camping along the Salmon range in Trinity.

Single-handed McDonald, who is a mountaineer of marked ability, killed the bear after a lively tussle.

The bear weighed 1,000 pounds, and is the finest and biggest specimen ever seen in the Trinity mountain regions. The animal had for years defied all efforts to capture or kill him. —Maryville Correspondence San Francisco Call.

Safe Offer.

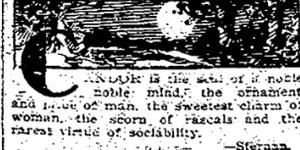

Jones—Why on earth do you offer such a large reward for the return of that horrid, yapping, snapping cur?

Brown—To please my wife.

Jones—But such a large reward will be sure to bring him back.

Brown—O, no, it won't. He's dead. I drowned him myself. —Stray Stories.

The KITCHEN CABINET

For a Yellow Luncheon.

During the golden-rod season a very attractive luncheon may be served. Let the rooms and porches be decorated with the feathery yellow blossom, having all the table pieces low and not too large.

For the menu serve a delicate soup like cream of celery, and on top of each place a spoonful of whipped cream, and for the yellow color just a suggestion of egg yolk from a hard-cooked egg, put through a ricer, or sieve. If one wishes to omit the soup, a fruit course may be substituted, or both may be served. For the fruit course, the rich yellow of musk-melons served in balls made with a French potato cutter and dressed with a bit of lemon juice and powdered sugar, is very good. For the main dish, chicken croquettes with white sauce garnished with grated yellow cheese, might prove most appetizing.

With the ice cream, which will be plain vanilla, serve preserved yellow pumpkin. It tastes much better than it sounds and is a beautiful yellow to carry out the color scheme. Cut the pumpkin in dainty cubes and preserve with orange and lemon. It is the custom with many who entertain when carrying out a color scheme, to tie the rolls with ribbon of the color used in the decoration. Ribbon seems very much out of place on food, it may be used in the table decoration to advantage or to tie up small boxes of candy as favors or in countless pleasing ways, but as an ornament or garnish for food, it seems inappropriate.

Mustard Pickles.

Take two quarts of small cucumbers, the same of small onions and tomatoes, one quart of wax beans, three green peppers chopped fine. Let stand in salt water to cover over night, using half a cupful of salt in enough water to cover the vegetables, put a weight upon them. In the morning scald until tender in clear water, drain and pour over the following mustard preparation: Mix one-half pound of mustard, one-fourth of an ounce of turmeric, three teaspoonfuls of celery seed and three-fourths of a cup of flour. Slowly add four quarts of vinegar and cook until smooth.

The grandest thing in having "lights," said George M. Donaid, "is that, being your rights, you can get them out. 'Love seeketh not its own.' It is ready always to yield even that which it might justly claim."

Digestible and Nutritious Foods.

There are those, who even yet, after much has been said and written about foods, their digestibility and value in repairing waste and building tissue, speak of digestible and nutritious as synonymous terms.

Foods may be very easily digested that contain little nutriment, for example, the oyster is easily digested but is not as nutritious as we once supposed it to be. Gelatine is easily digested but is of little value as a food. The tissue-building foods are milk, cheese, eggs, fish, lean meat, poultry, dried beans, peas, nuts, and grains.

These foods that supply muscular energy and if eaten in excess are stored in the body in the form of fat, are underground vegetables, corn, rice, bacon, olive oil, cream, butter, grapes, dates, figs, honey and sugar. A digestible food is one that is assimilated, a nutritious food is one that repairs waste, builds tissue and gives heat and energy.

To Can Tomatoes.

Take one gallon of water, one cupful of salt and when boiling drop in peeled tomatoes and cook until thoroughly scalded, place in cans, using a strainer to drain off all the brine. The juice of the tomatoes will make enough liquid to cover and the brine may be reheated for other tomatoes. The brine at last may be canned as it will be less salty after using and after straining it may be used for soups.

Corn Relish.

Cut corn from 12 ears of corn, chop a small head of cabbage fine, sprinkle salt all over the cabbage and let it stand three hours. Drain off the water and put corn and cabbage together, add one cupful of sugar, two quarts of vinegar, one-half cupful of ground mustard, four small red peppers chopped fine cook all until tender, seal in bottles or pint cans. If one does not like cabbage, celery may be substituted.

Water Melon Rind Pickles.

Peel the rind and cut in one-inch slices, let stand over night in salt water. Make a syrup of four pounds of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of ground cinnamon, one teaspoonful of cloves and two quarts of vinegar. Tie the spices in a cloth, pour the hot syrup over the drained melon rind, and heat the syrup four mornings in succession. Cover for winter use.

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from a terrible and painful pain in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." —Mrs. Emma Dyer, 633 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

Why the Boy Gave Thanks.

Alan had played the entire day with little brother without an impatient word. After saying his customary prayer that night, his mother suggested that he add: "I thank God I was not impatient with little brother today." This he did with much fervency; after which he remarked that there were some other things he would like to thank God for, and forthwith he closed his eyes and said:

"I thank God I offered my candy to father before taking any myself."

"I thank God I offered my candy to mother before taking any myself."

"I thank God I offered my candy to little brother before taking any myself."

"And I thank God there was some left!" —Lippincott's.

Model African King.

The Christian village of Ilombo in Africa is a proof of the power of the gospel. At daybreak every morning, the horn is blown and the people assemble at the king's house to hear the word of God read, and to praise and pray. Witchcraft and superstition have fallen under the power of the gospel, and the heathens are taking knowledge of it. The native church at Loanda contributes $17 a month for the support of native workers on a native station in the interior of Angola.

Cheering Up the Guide.

"Remember, Henry," said the hunter who had arranged with the guide, "we're not hiring you—you're simply one of our party."

"What's on your mind?" inquired the guide.

"Well, you see, in case anything happens we don't want to be troubled with this new employers' liability law," admitted the cautious hunter.—Pack.

THE FIRST TASTE

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young the occasional use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee.

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep; am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

NORTHVILLE, MICH., NOV. 4, 1910.

The Republican Voters.

The Record cannot see why any Republican should vote for any Democrat at the election on Nov. 8. The Democratic candidates are advancing no arguments why they should receive Republican votes except that their claim of being all virtue and that all Republicans are rascals.

As usual they have the "tear down" and "and fault" politics. Nothing suits them and nobody is right except themselves. Mr. Osborn will make a splendid governor and he will be elected by a good big majority notwithstanding Mr. Hemans to the contrary. Mr. Osborn has been nominated by the Republicans of the state and for the Republicans to fall to stand by the nominee of their party would be to discredit the primary nominating system of the state as well as to bring itself into disrepute. Mr. Osborn is now deserving of the vote of every Republican. Nothing can be gained by voting for the Democratic nominee.

What may be said of the head of the ticks may also be said of the nominee for Congress from this district, Mr. Wedemeyer, and the nominee for the Legislature. Dirty attacks emanating from a Democratic paper at Hudson should have no weight with the Republican voters. Mr. Wedemeyer is too well known to the voters of the Second District to need any defence from that kind of mud-slinging tactics. He will make a splendid congressman to succeed Charles E. Townsend.

Fred Burnham for Representative and Larry Snell for Senator are supporters of Charles E. Townsend for the U. S. Senate and Mr. Townsend is asking all his friends to support them because he needs their votes in his election to the Senate and because they are good men for those offices.

Injury Done by Mosquitoes.

Before the draining and diking of England and Holland, mosquitoes, malaria, chills and fever were as bad as in our Southern states today. Undiked and reclaimed, neither of these countries had risen to its place in history, but had been balked by malarial degeneration.

Duty.

We require from balladgers, as from men, two kinds of goodness: first, the doing their practical duty well; then that they be graceful and pleasing in doing it, which is itself another form of duty.—John Ruskin.

School Notes.

(By a Pupil.)

Glady Schoefeld has re-entered the Kindergarten.

Bernice Ashley is a new pupil in the Fourth grade.

Florence Sutton of the Kindergarten has the mumps.

Dorothy Stanley visited the Kindergarten Tuesday.

Glady Robbins spelled down the Seventh grade last Wednesday.

Gertrude Clayton of the First grade is out of school on account of sickness.

The A class of the Seventh grade Arithmetic are now studying ratio and proportion.

The Sixth grade is very sorry to lose Alice Cunningham, who has moved to Midland.

The Fifth grade regrets that one boy slept too late on the first day of the new school month.

Mr. LaRue forgot to wake up last Saturday morning in time to catch the 3:35 a. m. train for Bay City.

Harold Bloom and Albert Houghton of the Kindergarten are absent this week on account of sickness.

The Fifth grade pupils are showing much interest in the habits and customs of the people of Europe.

Some very good maps of South America were handed in by the B Seventh grade Geography class.

The First grade room had a party Friday afternoon for those who had not been tardy during the month.

There were twenty out of the thirty-eight in the Seventh who had one hundred in Spelling last month.

Jessie Dondineau of the Kindergarten was absent Monday and Tuesday on account of a trip to Detroit.

There were sixteen of the Third grade pupils who were neither tardy nor absent during the month of October.

Miss Hazel Perkins of the Normal class substituted Tuesday for Miss Willis, who was absent because of sickness.

The Sixth grade is interested in the germination of seeds and have a box in the room in which they have planted seeds.

The Kindergarten children are well pleased with the new set of Aldine Primers, as two-thirds of them are able to read a little.

The talk given by Rev. Jerome was greatly appreciated by the Kindergarten and First grade last Wednesday morning.

The Eighth B have finished their text book in Geography and are about to begin a thorough and systematic review for remainder of semester.

The Eighth grade have a list of noted people who were born in November and are looking up notes on their lives to be given on their birthdays.

Mr. Douglas enjoyed the Art cultural meeting at Bay City Saturday and obtained some good publications regarding the work in Agriculture.

Spelling has been introduced in the High school, thirty minutes each week being given by the whole school to the subject. A spell down at the end of every month is contemplated.

Some very neat little letters were read in Tuesday's Language class of the Fourth grade. They were written to their teacher, describing the display in Mr. Steers' store window.

The School Savings bank deposit for last week was $37.71. The deposit by grades was as follows: Kindergarten $3.30; First $1.27; Second $2.51; Third $1.13; Fourth $3.55; Fifth $1.73; Sixth $2.10; Seventh $2.15; Eighth $2.55; High school $21.30.

The fire alarm worked out again in fine shape the Kindergarten and First grade getting out in thirty seconds, the Second and Third in sixty seconds, the Fourth and Seventh in fifty-five seconds and the Fifth and Sixth in forty-five seconds.

Many fine figures and proofs have been handed in by members of the Geometry and Trigonometry classes and some well drawn maps graphically showing winds, rainfall and temperature are being filed by the Physiography class. Come up and look them over.

Interest in the multiplication table contest still continues to flourish. When the contest closed last Friday four pupils remained standing having that class hour worked their way from the foot to the head of the class. They were Willard Moshimer, Emily Draper, Henry Holmes and Ruth Preston of the Fourth grade.

The magazines to be found in the High school the coming year are as follows: Woman's Home Companion, Technical World, Popular Mechanics, American Magazine, Success, World's Work, American Boy, World Today, Collier's Weekly, Western Journal of Education, Journal of Educational Psychology, Outlook and Scientific American. If you have some magazines you do not wish after you have read them send us word and we will be pleased to call for them.

The Seniors will give a play the last of this month entitled "Hicks at College."

The total enrollment for the school during the last month was 371 of which 197 were boys and 174 girls. The average attendance for the whole school was ninety-five with a total number of tardy marks of fifteen.

A peculiar coincidence in the enrollment is the fact that there is an equal number of boys and girls in the Eighth grade and High school. The High school had the largest percent in attendance and the Sixth and Seventh grades had no tardy marks.

During the month we have added twelve new pupils and lost three.

Last Thursday morning was an opener for the different classes. Pres. Shafer '11 spoke on the Saratoga Convention in a clear and forceful manner followed by Pres. Turner '12 who gave us an idea of the Progressive Movement in the Republican party. As sauce, Pres. Dubuair '13 told us some very interesting facts concerning the latest fashions and the morning's work was closed by a brief Current Event talk by Pres. Newman '14.

We wish to make clear our idea of the tardiness we have had and why have to some extent. If the scholar knows he is to be tardy and has a good excuse he should reach a phone and get word to his teacher and his tardiness if excused by the superintendent will not be counted. If he is late, however, the pupil should not go to his home but come to his respective room. We say this to clear up some of the ideas that have been spread that if the child is tardy he is not wanted. Send him any way.

Increase of Railroad Mileage.

At the close of the fiscal year 1909 the railroad mileage of the United States was 230,000, as compared with 136,563 in 1888 and 184,642 in 1898. The net capitalization is $13,000,007,112, an increase of 39.3 per cent over the figures of 1898.

Poor Opinion of Countrymen.

One of the great intellects of England has stated that not above 50,000 people in all Britain can read and understand the ordinary London newspaper.

ROOSEVELT FOR OSBORN

The Ex-President Calls Republican Candidate a Singularly Able and Honest Man.

WISHES TOWNSEND SUCCESS

Roosevelt deeply regrets that he cannot come to Michigan to take part in campaign for entire Republican ticket—calls Republican candidate for Governor progressive.

Theodore Roosevelt gives his unqualified endorsement of the candidacy of Chase S. Osborn, Republican candidate for governor, and Charles E. Townsend, Republican candidate for United States senator.

The endorsement is in the form of a letter to Curtis Guild, Jr., who spoke here Saturday night for Mr. Osborn and the state ticket.

State Chairman Knox informed the Detroit Journal that he has been in communication with Mr. Roosevelt endeavoring to secure him for one speech in Michigan. The colored declared this to be impossible because his time was completely filled.

Governor Guild was informed of the situation while here and he immediately wired Colonel Roosevelt, urging him to accede to the request of Mr. Knox.

The following letter, which was received by Mr. Knox from Governor Guild, was the result:

To Curtis Guild, Jr.: I thank you for the telegram. I agree with every word you say in describing the situation in Michigan, and I deeply regret that it is a physical impossibility for me to accept the invitation to go to Michigan to take part in the campaign for the entire Republican ticket as I would gladly do.

I thoroughly understand, as you say, that in Michigan the progressives won a clear-cut victory; that their platform takes a proper stand in favor of a tariff commission and conservation of natural resources. My friend, Chase S. Osborn, the candidate for governor, is a progressive and singularly able and honest man.

Moreover, I also agree with you as to the great desirability of electing Mr. Townsend as senator. Mr. Townsend as joint author with Mr. Ezech of the first railroad rate bill, and while I was in the White House, did excellent work for railroad rate legislation, and I heartily wish him success as senator. It is a cause of genuine regret to me that I am not able to go and do all I can for the entire ticket in Michigan.

Mr. Osborn is a man like Stimson of New York, who will clean house from cellar to garret, driving every scoundrel from office. The effective way to prevent a thorough clean up would be not to elect him, and indeed a failure to elect him would be a genuine calamity from the standpoint of good citizenship.

Mr. Townsend's attitude on the railroad rate legislation is sufficient proof of the desirability of sending him to the senate, and this can only be done by voting for the Republican candidates for the legislature. Michigan Republicans have nominated two progressive candidates and it is imperative that they give their aggressive support at the polls. (Signed)

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 23.

This is the first letter of the kind which Colonel Roosevelt has allowed to be made public in the campaign and indicates the high regard in which he holds Messrs. Osborn and Townsend.

He has actively supported Mr. Edson in New York and went into Massachusetts to aid Senator Lodge, and has also given attention to Ohio, but he has steadfastly refused to promiscuously issue letters of endorsement to candidates, both state and congressional, in various parts of the country.

Immediately after the nomination of Mr. Osborn as the Republican candidate for governor of Michigan the colonel expressed his pleasure in a private letter and expressed the hope that the good man would be elected.

While on his last trip west he endeavored to shift a date so that he might enter Michigan to make one speech, but this was found impossible because of his engagements in Indiana. He assured State Chairman Knox, however, of his desire to aid in the election of Mr. Osborn and Mr. Townsend and the letter to Governor Guild is the result.

The endorsement of Colonel Roosevelt will aid in rolling up the majority for Mr. Osborn and assuring a solid Republican legislature," said Mr. Knox. "There has been no question about the election of either Mr. Osborn or a legislature which would name Charles E. Townsend as United States senator, but the strong expression of opinion by the ex-president will aid materially in rolling up an old-time Republican majority. "The Republican party of Michigan is to be congratulated in presenting candidates for governor and United States senator who can be singled out for endorsement by Colonel Roosevelt."

HE TESTIFIED TO THEIR INTEGRITY

Lawton T. Hemans Was Spokesman For Republican Legislators.

As a member of the constitutional convention and speaking as a citizen of Michigan and not as a partisan candidate, Lawton T. Hemans made this statement with reference to Michigan recent state legislatures.

As one not in accord with the majority of the legislatures that have met in the state of Michigan, but speaking as one who loves the honor of the state and with kindly remembrance of the associations of men who have formed that majority for the last decade, I bear them the testimony of a high character, for their patriotism, their integrity and their honor. If there are defects in our system, let us recognize that they have no foundation in want of patriotism, integrity or honor in the law making branch of the great state of Michigan.

Mr. Hemans made this declaration after he had served as a member of the legislature through two terms. He has performed no official service since this declaration was made and the only incident that has occurred that could in any way have changed his opinion or his point of view was his nomination as the Democratic candidate for governor.

Mr. Hemans is asking the Republicans of Michigan to lay aside their party sympathies and their party loyalty in his behalf, but it is here evident that he is illustrating a degree of pertinacity and desertion of his true judgment and honest opinions unequalled in Michigan political history.

If Mr. Hemans' declaration as a member of the Michigan constitutional convention was at all sincere or worthy of any consideration his statements at the present time are evidently compiled by party expediency and over-anxious personal ambition.

SOME SHAMEFUL PAGES.

Were Contributed to Michigan History by Last Democratic Legislature.

In the Democratic legislature of '91 and '92 A. B. Brown of Montcalm county was a member of the senate. Senator Brown was not elected as a Republican and had expected to affiliate with the Democratic members of the senate. But this is what Senator Brown said in explanation of why that expectation was not realized:

"They could not buy me nor drive me." The Democratic leaders did not like that kind of a man.

"There is mighty little danger that that crowd will go back there. Whatever may have been my opinion of the party before, their doings in the last legislature was sufficient to disgust every man who is not determined to follow his party to any extreme."

"You can fool all the people part of the time; you can fool part of the people all of the time, but you can never fool enough people in this state again to put the Democratic party into power."

This letter appeared in the Greenville Sentinel, Feb. 18, of the year directly following the unhappy experience of the people of Michigan with that last Democratic legislature. (Signed)

NOT HIS FAULT.

Democratic Candidate For Governor Tried For Appointment Under Warner, but Failed to Land It.

Mr. Lawton T. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, is greatly concerned over the fact that Mr. Osborn, his Republican competitor, accepted an appointment at the hands of Governor Warner. It has not occurred to him to call attention to the fact that he also accepted an appointment from Governor Warner in 1905 he was appointed a member of the commission to select and erect a monument in Detroit to the memory of Steven T. Mason, Michigan's first governor. He accepted the appointment and served on the commission; and some persons as critical as Mr. Hemans himself in such directions are calling attention to the fact that his expense account was four times greater than one member of the commission and more than twice as large as that of any other member. It will also be recalled by Mr. Hemans' party friends that in 1907 he was an applicant for another appointment at Governor Warner's hands, the office sought in the letter instance being that of member of the state railroad commission. It is certainly not Mr. Hemans' fault that he is not at this time enjoying the privileges of a state administration job.

LET EVERY VOTER EXPRESS HIS CHOICE NOV. 8TH.

CAMPARISON OF THEIR RECORDS

Two Candidates For Governor Have Served the State.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS COMPARED

What Chase S. Osborn Brought About as State Railroad Commissioner, and What Mr. Hemans Did Not Do.

Chase S. Osborn served the people of Michigan through two terms as state railroad commissioner. Lawton T. Hemans was a member of the state legislature through two terms.

During his terms of office Mr. Osborn accomplished more in the direction of compelling reduction of railroad, taxation, bringing about grade separations, requiring necessary changes relating to dangerous overhead wires, improvements in waterlocking arrangements, and the installation of safety appliances on the railroads of Michigan than had been secured in Michigan through all its past history.

During his two terms as a member of the legislature Mr. Hemans accomplished nothing to which he wishes attention called at this time. He was absent from his post of duty a greater part of the time, voted for all appropriation bills when he was present, introduced a bill to legalize bucket shops, and sought to have a bill passed creating an additional state board.

This is the record to which Mr. Hemans is not referring in this campaign. Based upon their comparative accomplishments during the days when opportunity was given them, it ought not to be difficult for the people of Michigan to decide between Lawton T. Hemans and Chase S. Osborn, to decide as to which man would be more capable and more valuable to the state and its people as the responsible leader of state affairs during the coming four years.

TOWNSEND RATE BILL AUTHOR

Michigan's Future Senator's Record In Congress a Brilliant One—Made Reputation in His First Term.

When Charles Elroy Townsend's choice by the people of the state at the primaries is ratified by the next legislature at Lansing, Michigan will be represented in the senate of the United States by a statesman and lawyer of sterling worth; an able co-worker of that brilliant William Alden Smith, and a fearless, progressive Republican.

Charles Townsend's record in congress, meritorious to a marked degree, is a sufficient guarantee of his future accomplishments as United States senator from Michigan.

He, like Senator Smith, is a self-made man. Townsend received his education in the public schools and the University of Michigan. He worked on a farm until nineteen years of age, when he began teaching school. In 1895 he was admitted to the bar at Jackson. He acted as register of deeds of Jackson county for ten years. Then the folks of the Second district decided to send him to Washington as their representative.

Townsend is one of the authors of the Roosevelt rate bill, and as an authority on all matters pertaining to railway legislation he ranks second to none. He first leaped into prominence in his first term of congress, when his stand on rate legislation placed him conspicuously before the eyes of the nation, and at that time his reputation was made.

He had served his district well and faithfully for nearly six years when the death of Russell A. Alger left a vacancy in the senatorial ranks that it was up to Michigan to fill. Mr. Townsend made a bid for the seat, but was defeated by his colleague in congress, William Alden Smith.

The people of his district then returned him to congress by an overwhelming majority over his Democratic opponent. But the reward of true merit could not be denied him, and, at the last primaries, he was chosen by the Republicans of the state as their candidate for United States senator.

Charles E. Townsend is a progressive and voted to depose Speaker Cannon from the rules committee of the house at the last session of congress.

He himself has said: "I am a firm believer in the progressive policies inaugurated by Roosevelt and advocated by Taft. These policies are in harmony with the traditions and principles of the Republican party and must be maintained by that party if it is to retain the confidence and support of the people."

International Live Stock Exposition and Horse Show—Chicago.

These combined exhibitions, which take place at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, on the dates of November 22nd to December 3rd, inclusive, bring together the greatest aggregation of live stock that can be produced in any country in the world. The horse show this year occupies the dates of November 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 25th and 26th, and the Live Stock Exposition, commencing on the same day that the horse show is brought to an end and extending to December 3rd, gives exhibitors at both, as well as the general public, an opportunity of witnessing these two extraordinary exhibitions without extra expense or loss of time.

Chicago, as the greatest live stock market of the world, during the dates of these shows, is the most interesting place on this continent to visit while the International Live Stock Exposition is in progress.

WILLIAM W. WEDEMEYER

Candidate for Congress, Second District.

Mr. Wedemeyer has been making a strong and effective canvass. His last speech of the campaign will be made at Jackson, November 7th, the night before election, with Hon. Charles E. Townsend. Not only is Mr. Wedemeyer receiving the enthusiastic support of the members of his own party, but members of other parties also, realizing his worth and just claims to recognition, are giving him help, and will vote for him in large numbers.

William W. Wedemeyer is a progressive, capable, self-made man. He has every qualification for the position he seeks, and when elected, as he undoubtedly will be, he will prove himself a splendid congressman, and a true representative of the interests of all people.

Mr. Wedemeyer in his campaign speeches has advocated progressive ideas. It is impossible to enumerate them all, but among other things he stands for the following: The progressive principles made so prominent by ex President Roosevelt, and now being advocated by him, including a tariff commission of experts for the scientific equalization of the tariff; and for the maintenance of that higher standard of wages, without which, as Mr. Roosevelt says, there cannot be that higher standard of living which primarily distinguishes the American wage-earners from the wage-earners of all other countries.

The continued support and encouragement of the work of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, along the lines of the legislation advocated by Hon. Charles E. Townsend.

The retention of present laws, and the enactment of further legislation as needed to insure safety of employees generally. Further legislation to insure greatest safety to both the travelers upon and the employees of the great interstate transportation systems.

An endorsement of the work of the present and past administrations in curbing the evils resultant from trust combinations, and support of such further legislation as experience may demonstrate shall be necessary to secure a "Square Deal" for everybody.

The election of a new speaker of the house of representatives, in line with the progressive spirit of the times, with which Mr. Cannon is not in sympathy, and for whom, therefore, I will not vote.

The continuance of the great conservation movement, including especially the strengthening and broadening of the work of the department of agriculture, with a view to bringing the largest possible good to the American farmer.

Economical administration of the public service without crippling necessary appropriations, such, for example, as those providing liberal pensions and rural delivery, and with due regard always for the continued efficiency and necessary extension of the public service, including the inauguration of federal experiments in parcel post delivery, covering packages and parcels terminating on the same rural route where they originated.

Mr. Wedemeyer's past record gives assurance that his promises will be carried out. He was born and reared on a farm, had to make his own way in the world, and naturally has an intimate acquaintance with the needs and wishes of the masses. He got into politics soon after leaving the university, and from one end of Michigan to the other he was recognized as an effective advocate of the reform in corporation taxation, which have brought millions into the state treasury. Other reforms along the same line must still come.

Upon this platform Mr. Wedemeyer makes his appeal to the voters of the Second congressional district for their support. If you feel that he is entitled to your vote he will be pleased to receive it, and will welcome the support of all who believe in the principles for which he stands.

JANET'S REWARD

By MARTHA MCILLOCH WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

It was hard to say which was the more noted—the Wilton pearls or the Wilton temper.

Euphemia, the youngest Wilton girl, had inherited both, together with much land, many stocks and bonds, not to name Revolutionary relics quite equal to a patent of nobility. There fore it was, and was not amazing that she was single at thirty-five. There had never been a hint of romance nor a suspicion of blighted affections. She had had suitors, in shoals. At least three times she had contemplated marrying one of them. But it had not got beyond contemplation—each of the three had been dismissed.

Both of her brothers had married and had crops of lusty young Wiltons, but Clara, the sister who shared with Miss Euphemia, tenancy of the big homestead, had only stepchildren. She had married a minister with the traditional family. It was remotely through this family that the affair of the pearls came to happen. If there had been no need of a governess for three very unruly girls, Janet More, Irish, finely bred, sweetly pretty, careless and happy in spite of poverty, would never have seen those famous gems.

Janet danced like the leaves in southern airs, sang with the voice of a lark, seemed indeed the embodiment of youth and spring. Because none of the great people saw her in the least, she made her way to their hearts. Their splendid, aloofness touched her quick sympathies as did the squalid poverty of her pleasant compatriots living down beyond the mills.

Miss Euphemia held out a bribe while Clara and the minister, Mr. Fay, had surrendered at sight. Before three months ended, Janet was one of the family, free indeed than the stepchildren to break up Miss Wilton's solitude and make her laugh.

"Sure, laughing makes you the prettiest," Janet said, with just the faintest touch of brogue. When she chose, her English was crystalline, but she had found out that the Irish infection pleased the stately lady.

She dared further to runagate out things and dress up her patroness. "It's a bride I am making of you," she said one dull afternoon, raw and cold, when Miss Euphemia was held by a sore throat from her daily drive. "You shall be the enchanted princess in wait for the fairy prince," she ran on. "I'll your lady-in-waiting. Stand up, please. Fairies spin made the lace on your white frock—with the pearls and all, you'd outshine even a dramma."

"You're a big baby, and I'm your doll, a foolish doll—very," Miss Wilton retorted, nevertheless permitting herself to be adorned. She loved her clothes, her jewels as happy women love their children. It pleased her more than she could say to see herself in Janet's admiration. "You'll have to hurry, though," she went on. "Dr. Bentley may come in any time after two. If he came and caught us in our misquadrant—"

"He would say he was in luck," a voice said from the opening door. After a half minute it went on, the speaker meanwhile walking to the breakfast table. "Upon my soul! Is this prophetic? Are you really going to do it at last?"

"I don't know what you mean," said Miss Euphemia, crossly.

Dr. Archibald Bentley laughed. He was a stout man, slightly bald, and half an inch lower than tall Miss Euphemia. He had played with her in short frocks, being but a year her elder, and son to a close family friend.

"Bless my soul! Phemy!" he ejaculated, after looking her over. "If only I'd know earlier how stunning you could be, well! I might have done something foolish."

"You never will come to things where people dress like Christians," Miss Euphemia said, still crossly, but a smile lurked about her mouth.

Janet danced in between them, saying, gaily: "Children! Children! Mind your manners! And your medicines! But isn't she the love?" This to the doctor: "To think of wearing a string of pearls like that only once in a while! I call it sinful!"

"You'd wear them every day—to market, mill and muster," the doctor laughed.

Janet grew slightly pale. "I? I shouldn't dare to wear them at all—or to keep them," she said. "They are worth so much, and the money—it would build houses and homes, and warm cold little children, and comfort old, so many! I'm glad to be spared such trials! It would be awful to have them—and awful to give them up."

"Run away, you young anarchist," Dr. Bentley said, shaking his head.

As she vanished he took Miss Wilton's hand. It was hot and tremulous—so much so he looked startled. Instantly he called back Janet, also summoned Miss Wilton's maid, and had her put to bed as quickly as possible.

"Grip! No danger unless complications develop," he told Janet as he took his leave.

Mrs. Fay was away with her husband, therefore Janet had to be the family head. "Nursing is pretty much everything," the doctor went on. "There's where you come in—she won't have a professional. Keep her quiet and send for me if the fever mounts. Don't lose your head! She's got all the chances. Wish I could say as much for the cases down by the mills."

Before midnight Miss Wilton was out of her bed. Dr. Bentley found her playing with the string of pearls, talking to its component parts and occasionally fondling it. "You—you won't take it to give Janet?" she asked in a fearful whisper as the doctor bent over her. "Janet would sell it, but we won't let her."

She fell into drugged sleep, with the pearls huddled under her cheek. Janet, watching, also slept, fitfully, but heard neither sound nor stir.

Morning found Miss Wilton raving and the pearls gone. Janet hardly gave them a thought—all her thought was for the sick woman. Two days another night, but the next day she sat by her, battling with fever, with delirium. Complications had developed—there was pneumonia. Though others came and went, ministering and helping, Janet did not leave the sick room, save for the briefest spaces until the crisis was safely past. Miss Wilton, clung to her even in the wildest minutes. She was very white and heavy-eyed when the doctor looked up at her to say with his finger on the artery pulse.

"Young woman, we've won—by the help of the Lord."

Then she felt like fainting, like crying, like screaming, but instead, she dropped down white and weak, her hands over her face. She crept away to sleep, a long heavy sleep, and awoke remembering the pearls.

They must be found. They were surely in Miss Wilton's apartments—no sea-sprite could have been cruel enough to snatch them while a sick woman and her watcher slept. But as the days slipped by, each bringing Miss Wilton health and healing, Janet grew more heartach. Search as she might, she could not find the necklace. Doctor Bentley saw that something was amiss—what, he could not discover. He watched Janet narrowly every time he came. Miss Wilton, in turn, watched him—and drew her own conclusions. She was more than ever beautiful with that transfiguring fatness of convalescence, but she did not realize it.

The day she sat up first fully dressed, and the doctor had come, she called to Janet. "Come here! Fetch my pearls. I want them—and you."

"Why do you want them?" Dr. Bentley asked quickly. Over her shoulder he had seen the panic in Janet's eyes.

"To give to your wife—you will marry Janet," she said tremulously. "You deserve her, Archibald. I wish you joy."

"Sorry—but I don't want her—don't want any other woman so long as you are above ground, Phemy," Dr. Bentley said, taking her thin hand in his.

Her eyes closed, great tears welled from beneath them and involuntarily her head slipped to his breast. But it rose almost instantly. "I—there is something," she said, pressing her hands hard above her brow. "Oh, I remember—the pearls! I put them in that old vase, the very last thing before I drifted out of myself. Take them down, Janet, and tell me they will console you a little."

"I don't need any consolation," Janet said, starting toward them, the dusty pearls cascading over her hand.

"Even if I wanted you Archibald I'd rejoice to give him up—but for the shock he gave you you might never have remembered—and I should have had the name of—"

"No! No! Never!" Miss Wilton and her lover protested in a breath.

Janet started to hear no more—loving them both so well she was glad to leave them to their new-old love.

Significant Change.

Missionaries say, according to the Homiletic Review (London), that it is becoming difficult to procure at the book shops in China any copies of the works of Confucius. Formerly the Confucian classics, with voluminous commentaries, formed the chief stock in trade, the remaining supplies being chiefly composed of fantastic novels which read grotesquely when translated. The change which has taken place is revolutionary for scientific and mathematical works, translated from English, French and German, together with the stories of Dostoevsky, Dickens, Dumas and Scott; all the book stores.

FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN

A Proposal That Was Opposed by the Democratic Candidate For Governor.

The proposal which Lawton T. Hemans, as a member of the state constitutional convention sought to defeat through reference to it as a "little piece of sentiment"—a proposal which sought to especially provide in the constitution that Michigan legislatures should have the power to enact laws relative to the hours and conditions under which women and children should be employed, was introduced by a delegate especially representing the women and children of Michigan who are working for wages, and it was supported in the convention by big-hearted men who employed women and children and who knew how desirable and important it was that such regulations should be permanently provided for.

It was this proposal which Mr. Hemans opposed in a speech on the floor of the constitutional convention, referring to it as unworthy of serious attention and doing all in his power to prevent favor for it.

But the proposal was approved by the convention and later approved by the people of Michigan and is now permanently established in our state constitution.

Mr. Hemans' position on this matter of so much importance to thousands of women and children in the factories and mills and work shops of the state is a further explanation of why in this campaign no reference is being made by himself or his party supporters to the official record of the Democratic candidate for governor.

TO ACCOMMODATE A LANSING FRIEND

Mr. Hemans Explains Why He Introduced Bucketshop Bill.

Mr. Hemans has explained that he introduced the bill seeking to provide for the legal existence of bucketshops to accommodate a Lansing friend.

Possibly this same unusual spirit of accommodation explaining why Mr. Hemans voted for more appropriation bills than any other member of the legislature and afterwards as a member of the constitutional convention oratorically declared that Michigan legislatures had never been extravagant.

And this spirit of accommodation on Mr. Hemans' part evidently continued until he became the Democratic candidate for governor.

And now we see the man who served through two regular sessions of the legislature and one special session and as a member of the constitutional convention, during all of which time he voted for increased appropriations, for the establishment of new state boards, and vigorously defended all legislative expenditures—this man is now basing his principle claim to favor from the voters of Michigan for the office of governor on the ground that what he had done in the past should not have been done and that what he had said in the past should not have been said.

Mr. Hemans' former statements were made as a state official under oath and bound by special obligation to the people of Michigan to speak the truth.

His present declarations are being made at partisan gatherings in behalf of partisan policies and for a personal purpose.

It should not be difficult for the voters of Michigan to decide which series of Mr. Hemans' contradictory declarations relating to exactly the same matters are apparently most worthy of acceptance and belief.

THIS IS IMPORTANT!

Election of Townsend as United States Senator Can Only Come Through Republican Legislature.

Attention has been called to the fact, but it can well be repeated, that the election of a Republican United States senator in Michigan as the result of the coming state election can only be accomplished through the election of Republican members of the state legislature. Congressman Charles E. Townsend was made the candidate of the Republicans of Michigan at the primary election, but under the terms of our state constitution the senator from this state must be formally elected by the next state legislature. Failure on the part of Michigan Republicans to elect a majority of the legislature would result in the defeat of Mr. Townsend and the election of a Democratic senator from this state. Your vote for the Republican candidate for member of the legislature from your district will be a vote for Mr. Townsend for United States senator, and in no other way at this time can the individual Republican voter assist in Mr. Townsend's election. It is important not only to the Republicans of Michigan but to all who are interested in the progress and advancement of our state that this matter should be kept clearly in mind.

NOTICE TO VOTERS.

A vote for Chase S. Osborn is a vote for clean, honest, progressive Republicanism.

SHOULD NOT GO BACK.

Reference to Disgraceful Record of Last Democratic Legislature in Michigan.

It is not necessary for Mr. Hemans to go as far back as sixty years in order to secure comparisons relating in a very important way to his present efforts in behalf of the election of a Democratic legislature. This comment by the Detroit News on the last Democratic legislature is more recent and far more applicable.

"The Democratic legislature has been a failure. Very little good can be said of it. It has had an odor of scandal and corruption connected with it. It has kept up the fight for patronage and boodle actual and prospective. It has wasted quite as much time and done quite as little work as the worst legislature this state has ever known."

This reference to the last Democratic legislature with state management in Michigan is respectfully referred to Mr. Hemans as a candidate. As a reader of Michigan history he was always aware of the shameful pages contributed by the last Democratic administration Michigan was burdened with.

GREATEST YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

When Pingree Was Governor and Osborn Railroad Commissioner.

The grantant now directed towards Mr. Osborn's expenses as railroad commissioner, was directed towards Governor Pingree's executive movements. Mr. Osborn was an appointee of Governor Pingree's. The years of his incumbency of the office of railroad commissioner were the greatest years in Michigan's history of accomplishment in the direction of securing fair play and fair dealing from the railroads of Michigan. Governor Pingree made the railroad issue the supreme purpose of his official career, and the railroad department of the state was the storm center of all movements during those years. Railroad statistics, railroad history and railroad information from every point of view was required of the department and provided as promptly and as fully as possible.

There has come into the state of Michigan many thousands of dollars from railroad taxation sources for each dollar expended in those days in directions that sought to establish the justice of the state's claim. It is said that Governor Pingree and Mr. Osborn as railroad commissioner were not fully agreed in those early days as to just the methods to be adopted through which the railroads of the state would be required to pay their full share, but they were wholly agreed as to the requirement that the railroads should pay their just share of taxation, and Governor Pingree and Railroad Commissioner Osborn cordially and successfully co-operated in their efforts to make it plain to the people of the state and the state legislature and the railroads themselves that such a requirement was equitable and fair and should be more speedily effective.

WHAT HE SAID AND WHAT HE DID

Democratic Candidate For Governor Didn't Vote as He Now Talks.

Throughout his entire career as a member of the state legislature the Democratic candidate for governor is recorded as having voted in opposition to only five appropriation bills.

One of these bills which Mr. Hemans opposed was an appropriation for the Home for Feeble Minded, one of Michigan's most useful institutions. He also voted against an appropriation for the publication of the State Horticultural society reports and against an appropriation for the State Agricultural society.

Throughout two entire regular sessions of the legislature and one special session Mr. Hemans either failed to vote at all or voted for all other appropriation bills. No other member of the legislature was so unvaryingly in favor of the expenditure of state money as was Mr. Hemans. No other member of the legislature has a record for being absent from his duty without leave that equals Mr. Hemans', and no other member of the Michigan legislature indicated more promptness and willingness to defend an past appropriation bills and to excuse the legislature for alleged extravagance in appropriation matters than was exhibited by Mr. Hemans when that subject was under discussion in the state constitutional convention.

Mr. Hemans' official record is quite at variance with his professions as the Democratic candidate for governor, and it is quite certain that the voters of Michigan will insist upon judging what he would do as a state official in the future by what he did and what he said as a state official in the past.

TO SAVE LIFE AND PROPERTY

Was Purpose of Appeal in Chase Osborn's First Official Report.

WILL FORCE GRADE SEPARATION

He Has Been Constant in His Contest For Stronger Passenger Coaches and Greater Safeguards For Traveling Public—Declaration Made Ten Years Ago.

The Detroit News directs favorable attention to Chase S. Osborn's statements that it will be a purpose he will have in mind if elected governor to require the steam and electric roads of Michigan to use coaches constructed of steel, so far as possible as a safeguard for the lives of passengers, and to force the separation of grades where needed. The News refers to these statements as very commendable but new lines of enthusiasm in the interest of safety on the part of Mr. Osborn.

As a matter of fact, in his first report as state railroad commissioner, in 1901, Mr. Osborn called attention to the inevitable loss of life in time of collision or other accident through the use of the comparatively light passenger coaches then in use, and he urged that the best possible cars should take the place of coaches which could not stand the strain inevitable in cases of emergency. Only the strongest, heaviest and best cars, Commissioner Osborn urged, should be acceptable to good railroad management.

It is further true that in his very first report as state railroad commissioner, Mr. Osborn gave more emphasis to his appeal in behalf of arbitrary requirement for separation of steam railroad and electric railroad grades in Michigan than to any other subject. In that first report he makes this declaration: "There is absolutely no way to adequately protect life and property at railroad crossings except by separation of grades."

It will be noted therefore that Chase S. Osborn's active interest in the use of steel railway coaches and the separation of grades is not by any means a new access of enthusiasm, but it is in harmony with the purpose he has persistently held and so far as possible has sought to bring about.

ROOSEVELT'S LETTER.

Yeddy Makes an Appeal to Michigan Voters in Behalf of Republican State Ticket.

Ex-President Roosevelt has expressed an earnest desire for the success of the Republican state ticket in Michigan this year. In a letter to Curtis Guild, former governor of Massachusetts, Mr. Roosevelt refers to Chase S. Osborn as his friend and as a singularly able and honest man. The ex-president also refers to Mr. Townsend's good work as a member of congress and agrees with Mr. Guild as to the great desirability of electing Mr. Townsend as United States senator. Mr. Roosevelt further says, "It is a cause of genuine regret to me that I am not able to go and do all I can for the entire ticket in Michigan. The fact that Mr. Roosevelt has written no letter of this kind with reference to pending elections in other states indicates his special interest in Michigan movements and his sincere personal desire that a Republican victory shall be gained in Michigan this year. From what he knows of the situation here and elsewhere it is evident that Mr. Roosevelt believes it to be true that the best purposes he is contending for will be assisted through the election of the Republican candidate for governor and the other candidates on the Republican state ticket at the coming November election."

COSTS NOTHING TO STATE.

Critics of Oil and Salt Inspection Neglected to Note This.

The Democratic candidate for governor and his political supporters are very insistent in their demand that the state oil inspection and state salt inspection departments shall be abolished. They are making this statement, so they explain, in the alleged interest of state economy. It is evidently not known to Mr. Hemans and his friends that both these departments are sources of net revenue to the state rather than of expense. They are both maintained by fees collected from the oil companies and the salt companies and the results of their operation through recent years have been quite profitable to the state. The state oil inspection department paid into the treasury more than $13,000 last year in excess of all its expenses, and its net profits this year will probably be greater. It may or may not be true that these departments are lacking great practical value to the state, but the fact that they do not cost the taxpayers of Michigan a single cent, but on the contrary are sources of a very comfortable income entirely disposes of Mr. Hemans' objection to their existence.

Every Farm, Every Township, Every Village will reap the benefit if you vote YES for Good Roads, November 8

In order that all may understand just what they are getting when they go to the polls next Tuesday, and vote for this measure, we will explain it briefly.

It provides for building over 200 miles of new and permanent good roads, as shown on the map below.

These good roads will go into every part of the country, they will connect every village and township with each other, and connect all of them with Detroit.

These good roads will enable the farmer to haul two or three times as big a load as he can on the present mud roads. It will enable him to haul when there is a good market for his produce. He won't have to wait for good weather and road conditions that will permit him to haul.

Good roads mean more traffic and easier communication between villages and farmers. It means better school attendance and better church attendance.

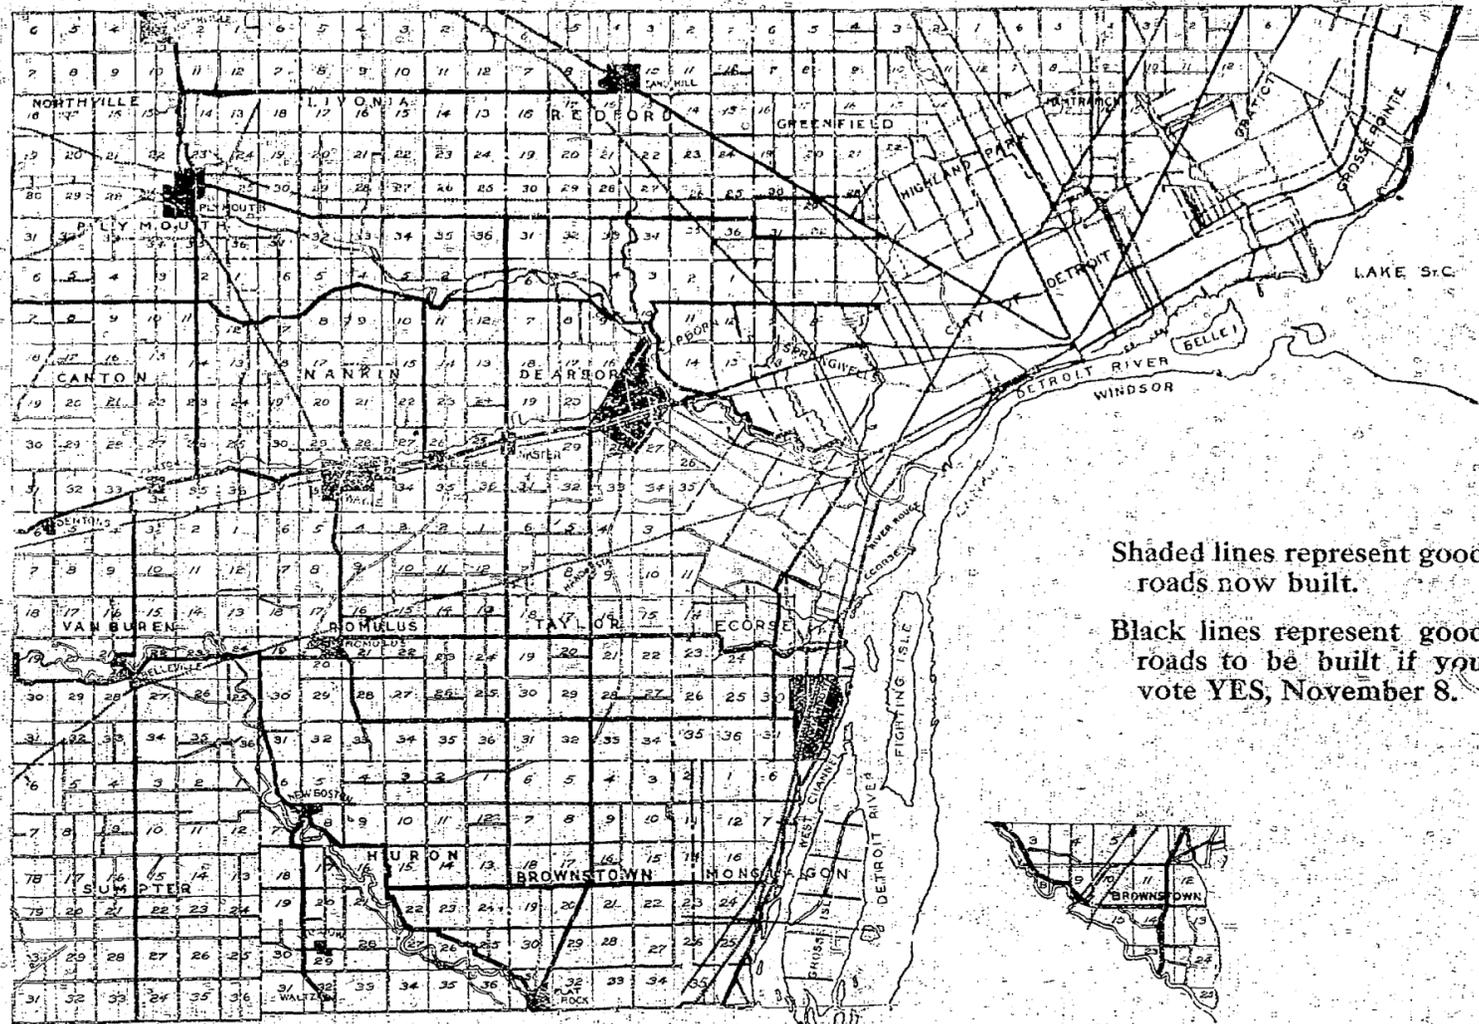

A system of good roads, such as you can get by voting YES at the next election is one of the greatest civilizing influences of the day. It means increased prosperity for all—for the farmer, for the city man, for the workingman, and for the business man.

Vote YES for Good Roads November 8

Don't be satisfied with voting right yourself. Show this advertisement to your neighbors. Show him the advantage of good roads. Tell him that the tax rate will be reduced instead of increased.

The new bonding measure provides for a road tax of 34 cents per $1,000 instead of the present tax of 50 cents per $1,000 each year.

Don't overlook the fact that good roads will increase your prosperity and increase the value of your property, while your tax rate will be lowered.

Shaded lines represent good roads now built.

Black lines represent good roads to be built if you vote YES, November 8.

WAS YOUR GRANDMOTHER A GOOD COOK?

Fifty years ago your Grandmother was successful in her baking in spite of many handicaps. In her day Baking Powder was a novelty. She was glad to pay 50 cents a pound for it. Since her time modern improvements have reduced the cost of manufacture until a much better Baking Powder is produced for only one-third the money. Still the Baking Powder must ask you to pay the old high prices today for the same old-style Baking Powders. K C BAKING POWDER combines the best of everything in materials, quality and scientific skill to make the most perfect of all Baking Powders. Remember—K C Baking Powder—guaranteed under all Pure Food Laws. And the price—27 cents for a 25 ounce can!

Flangeless Driving Wheels.

A remarkable French engine is used on a railroad noted for its extraordinary sharp curves. The drive wheels are flangeless, and to keep the engine from leaving the track it is necessary to resort to an arrangement of guiding wheels, revolving at right angles to the drivers and presenting flat surfaces against the inside of the rails.

How a Northville Citizen Found complete Freedom from Kidney Troubles.

Henry Priest, Mill St., Northville, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with gratifying results and have great confidence in their curative powers. Several years ago I was annoyed by a severe backache which made it hard for me to work. Doan's Kidney Pills had previously been used in my family with great benefit and deciding to try them, I procured a supply at Murdock Bros. Drug Store. Soon after finishing their use, my backache disappeared and now I am free from the trouble." (Statement given November 26, 1908.)

On March 1, 1909, Mr. Priest was interviewed and he said: "I am pleased to confirm the statement I gave for publication three years ago recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. Since this remedy cured me I have had no need of a kidney medicine."

A number of the W. R. C. ladies and some who were not members of that order, gave Mrs. Lou Van Valkenburg a pleasant surprise Saturday afternoon. It being her birthday, Mrs. Van Valkenburg was presented with a gold W. R. C. pin. A bountiful supper was served from the generous supply provided by the ladies.

A very pleasant surprise was given Mrs. Elmer Kator Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Samuel McLean, twenty-three ladies being present. They presented her with a beautiful china sugar bowl and creamer as a token of remembrance. A very enjoyable evening was spent and being the amusement of the evening.

Harry Kator was given a neat surprise Tuesday evening when about twenty of his friends waited in upon him. The evening was spent in games and music, after which refreshments were served. He was presented with a beautiful silver ring as a token of remembrance. Harry is about to move to Detroit and will be greatly missed by his friends.

There was a big crowd at the Opera House Thursday night to hear Wednesday, the Republican nominee for Congress, Henry C. Smith, Henry Carr and the county and legislative candidates. Mrs. Wednesday made a splendid talk and did all the others and made a splendid impression upon the voters. Mr. Wednesday was given an enthusiastic reception both here and at Plymouth.

The moving picture entertainment, which was given Monday night for the benefit of the band, was well attended and a neat little sum added to the treasury. The show was a good one and well deserved the patronage it received.

The usual Halloween pranks were played Monday evening, but no serious damage was done. The Baptist church bell and fire bell were rung a few times to scare sleepy citizens into believing there was a fire, but it didn't work so was given up as a bad job.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Yerkes gave a Halloween party Monday evening to about twenty-six, including relatives and friends. The guests were masked and represented ghosts, and a jolly good time was had by all present. One pleasant feature was the sudden appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Yerkes of Detroit, as if they were really spirits from the other world.

There's a young man named Charlie Sessions Jr., in this town who is doing the Barney Oldfield act with his auto to such a limit that the village and country people are wondering if there is any law governing such cases and if so why they are not enforced. The state law limits the speed of autos in the country to twenty-five miles per hour and in villages to fifteen miles and in business sections of any village to ten miles. When passing a person on foot or in wagons or on horseback the speed limit is ten miles an hour. There is a general feeling that Sessions should be brought up with a good sharp turn and a snug fine. Twenty to twenty-five miles in Northville and forty in the country seems to be a summer picnic to Charlie.

STRANGE ROMANCE of an ILLINOIS BOY WHO BECAME FIJI KING

ONE of the strangest stories that ever came out of the tropic seas is that of Edward Thompson, the only American who ever became a king in his own right. Nothing more romantic exists in poetry or legend than the tale of the lad from southern Illinois, who founded a kingdom in the far-off isle of Naikava. For a quarter of a century, he ruled in his savage realm, forgetful of the world that had forgotten him. While he sat in judgment over the affairs of his tribesmen or led his warriors to battle the map of the world was being changed. Only the faintest echoes from civilization ever reached the island kingdom of Naikava, where ruled

Walla Nambuka, the child of the sun, the simple-minded islander he was always looked upon as a supernatural being. His recent death has pleased his people in gloom. The mourning robes of his subjects have been brought out of the two little towns in the dead king's honor. His two little sons, the princelings of Naikava, will reign in his stead and King Walla sleeps at the feet of a gentle slope overlooking a coral reef, where the lounge-long breakers thunder hour after hour. His bones lie far from those of Scotch-American forebears, who settled in southern Illinois nearly a century ago.

Walla Nambuka, the child of the sun, the simple-minded islander he was always looked upon as a supernatural being. His recent death has pleased his people in gloom. The mourning robes of his subjects have been brought out of the two little towns in the dead king's honor. His two little sons, the princelings of Naikava, will reign in his stead and King Walla sleeps at the feet of a gentle slope overlooking a coral reef, where the lounge-long breakers thunder hour after hour. His bones lie far from those of Scotch-American forebears, who settled in southern Illinois nearly a century ago.

A disappointment in love started him out upon the long road of adventure when he was a youth of nineteen or twenty years. One of these unfortunate who run to extremes in matters of sentiment, he fell in love with one of the pretty village girls of old Alton. Things move slowly in this, one of the oldest and proudest towns of Illinois. In the natural course of events it was to be expected that the two would marry in the fullness of time. There was a home to be built and preparations made for a start in life. Something of the methodical slowness of their English ancestors came then, and still clings to the everyday life of the citizens of Alton. The town has changed but little in the years that have flown since Thompson left under cover of nightfall. The same houses line the spacious public square. The same homesteads that sheltered the pioneers now shelter their descendants of the third and fourth generations. Red brick homes, low-eaved and with wide doorsteps, still line the older streets of the little southern Illinois town.

Outwardly the town has changed but little, and in spirit not at all, since the days when young Thompson waited for his girl's sweetheart at the half-lighted corner of the court house square. The Alton of the Slovaks, the Thompsons of the Humes, the Birkbecks of the "Park House" and "Wanborough Place" still remain. Had the white monarch of the savage isle of Naikava come back to the place of his birth in the last year of his life he would have found "Little Britain," as the region is known, much as he left it. It is the same little city of schools and churches, of quiet homes and quieter streets that it was when he was a barefooted lad stealing away to fish and loaf along Bonpas creek. The future ruler of Naikava spent many an idle hour, with hook and line along the shallows of old Bonpas. If the traditions of the folk of "Little Britain" are true, he was fond of making long trips to the shores of the Wabash with his chums, but he seemed to lack the ambition dear to every boyish heart, the hope of getting out and seeing the big, round world. There was nothing to set him apart from his fellows as one who would taste of strange adventures before his death in the annals. The prosy, uneventful life of a farmer, a storekeeper or at the most a humdrum professional man in a country town was all to which he could look forward.

There came an interruption, an awakening to his love's young dream that drove him out of his home town between sundown and sunrise one summer's night. This spur to his pride, this wound to his self-love sent him adventuring among the spicier isles of the south seas and made him a king in his own right before he was twenty-five. He was of that shy, retiring, loyal type of the Scotch who love deeply when they love at all. He had become engaged to the village beauty. The day had been set for the ceremony and the unmarried youth of the town looked upon him as one already lost to the fun and frolic of the single state.

About this time a new business house was opened in the little town and a youthful eastern manager was sent on by the owners to look after he studied. He came armed with letters of introduction that opened his most exclusive homes of the aristocratic English families to him. Among the many young girls that he met was the village belle, the affianced of the young Scotch-American. It was another variation of that old triangle, the woman and two men. From the first, the friends of young Thompson and could see that his cause was hopeless. His affianced wife and the young stranger spent more and more of their time together. Little rumors began to find their way about the village. The gossip, ever ready in a small town, was soon busy. Thompson, moody and hurt by her eye, remained aloof, was the last to hear and the last to countenance the whispered talk that was going the round of the village hearing phase.

There was a great hue and cry along the quiet old streets and rumors of morning. Thompson's bride to be had disappeared. Her mother had gone to her room to awaken her and found her gone. She had gone with the young manager of Alton's latest business house, and from that day to this neither of them have been heard from.

Young Thompson changed in a day from a cheerful, happy lad to a grim-faced man. He became moody and silent. He neglected his work and never went near the home to which he had expected to lead his bride. Less than a month after the flight of the elopers there was more excitement in Alton. It was reported that Edward Thompson had disappeared. The strain and the shame of living in a town where every man, woman and child knew the story of his flight had proven too much for his sensitive, high-strung nature.

While life flowed on in the same uneven current in the village of his nativity he was wandering here and there among the emerald islands, the lagoons and the coral reefs of the seas that behold the Southern Cross. All the islands that lie off the familiar track of the steamers knew him first and last in the three or four years that he spent with the traders and copra buyers, the Philippines, the Ladrones, the Solomons and a dozen other island groups of the southern Pacific were visited by him in the epic years of his Odyssey. Finally he and his trading companions touched at the island of Naikava in the Fijis. One of the eternal civil wars that are always disrupting the peace of the little island kingdoms was brewing in Naikava, when the tramp schooner dropped anchor inside the reef of coral that fortified the harbor breakwater. A new claimant had risen for the throne and he and his followers were demanding the scepter and the head of the old king.

Thompson had left Illinois, had put the gates behind him to escape the constant reminder of his lost love that he saw in every woman. The wandering life of three or four years had cleansed his heart of his little bitterness against woman-kind. He had put the old life behind him and dreamed only of adventure and never of bright eyes and loving lips. It was a jolly crew of Kanakas, Malaysians and half-castes aboard the little trading schooner. They cared but little for the kings and chieftains of the islands, but it was a part of their policy to be polite to the native rulers. An audience was arranged with the native sovereign and a part of the ship's company attended laden with calicoes, mirrors and brass rods as gifts. It was in the royal hut Thompson first saw the Princess Lakanita. She stood at the side of her father's throne when the white men entered the palm hut for their talk with the old king.

Some indefinable attraction seemed to draw the white adventurer and the brown-skinned princess to each other. They met many times while the schooner was taking on its load of native products. There was more than a little Spanish blood in the veins of the old king's daughter. Her mother was a half-caste Spanish woman and much of the languorous beauty of the maids of old Castile was the heritage of this barbaric princess of the remote isle of Naikava. In the half twilight of the coconut groves he heard her story of danger and distress. The rival claimant of the throne had demanded her hand in marriage, and had promised to spare the life of her father, if she would consent to become his queen. It was but a matter of weeks, possibly of days, till his force would be strong enough to back his arrogant demands. In the end the white man knew that the island beauty had fallen in love with him. She pleaded with him to stay and help her escape from the clutches of the oppressor.

It is possible that Thompson would have lingered for a while if his companion had not been eager to get away from the island before the evil war began. They were traders, and as such they did not care to take sides in the dispute. It might hurt their business chances to make themselves either another trip to the island. The anchor was lifted, the brown sails spread and the ugly little schooner slipped out of the harbor of Naikava while Thompson stood on her deck and waved a farewell to the imperious little island beauty. At the very last she had reminded him of his promise to return to Naikava.

It was weeks after the departure of the ship from Naikava that Thompson was dramatically reminded of his promise to the Princess Lakanita. The sun had just set one night and Thompson was lying on deck smoking and watching the swift tropic dark come up out of the east. A native canoe scraped against the schooner's side and a native was heard calling for the white man with the blue eyes. He was brought aboard and proved to be the faithful messenger of the distressed princess. He had followed the schooner across leagues of unknown seas in his open canoe searching for the only man upon whom she could rely for aid.

The end was at hand in Naikava, and Lakanita and her father were about to be put to death. Help must come quickly, and it was more than possible that it was now too late. That night the stanch little trading vessel pointed her prow toward Naikava. In the final melee along the sands the old king and his rival were both slain and Thompson was stunned by a blow from a war club in the hands of a savage fighting man. When he revived he and his men began a hunt of extermination for all the revolvers. They were wiped out and their villages fled before the party returned to the king's village, where the schooner lay anchored. Then the white hero was stricken by one of the malignant island fevers, brought on by his injury on the beach.

It was many days before he was able to recognize his free-trading companions. The princess had been his devoted nurse through his dangerous attack of tropical fever. Now that he was about to leave the island forever she grew sorrowful and listless. She drooped like a dying flower as the ship's preparations for sailing were being made. All his promises to return brought on fits of passionate weeping on the part of the little princess. She wanted him to stay.

"I fought that fever when it tried to take you away from me, and it was all for nothing," was her constant reply, "and now that you are well the white men are taking you away where Lakanita can never hope to see you again."

In the end her pleadings won. After all there was nothing in the outer world to which he cared to go back.

The good news spread quickly over the little kingdom. "The Child of the Sun" was to wed their princess and rule them in the wise ways of the white man. After twenty-five years of idyllic happiness, Thompson, the love-lorn youth, who fled from the covert jeers of the town of his birth, died a king in far-off Naikava. The princess still lives and his two sons will reign in his place. The silence of twenty-five years has been broken by the news of his passing away surrounded by the last of his dusky retainers.

NATURE'S SIGNALS.

The first indication of kidney disorder is often backache. Then comes pain in the hips and sides, lameness, soreness and urinary troubles. These are the warnings—nature's signals—for help. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used at the first sign.

Ira Clark, North Main St., Savannah, Ill., says: "I was confined to bed with kidney trouble and never expected to be up again. A doctor said I had acute inflammation of the bladder, but he could not help me. How grateful was I for the prompt relief Doan's Kidney Pills gave me! Continued use removed every sign of kidney trouble."

One of the Best Rest Cures.

Is a good story. To many women it is as good as a trip away from home. When you are tired out and your nerves are on edge, try going off by yourself and losing yourself in some good story. You will, in time, cases, cut of tea, come back rested and invigorated.

One woman who has passed serenely through many years of hard work and worry that go with the managing of a household and bringing up of a large family of children, said that she considered it the duty of every busy housekeeper to read a certain amount of "trash" light fiction, for the rest and change to the mind that it would give.

Try it, you who lead a strenuous life, and who sometimes grow exceedingly weary of the same.

Getting a Reputation.

There is a desk in the senate particularly convenient as a place from which to make speeches. It is next to the aisle and almost in the center of the chamber, and affords an opportunity for the speaker to make everybody hear.

At least a dozen senators, according to the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Star, have borrowed this desk when they had special addresses to deliver to the senate. This led, not long ago, to a mild protest from its legitimate occupant.

"I am perfectly willing to give up my desk," said he, "but I am afraid people will think that the same man is talking all the time. I don't want to get the reputation of constantly filling the senate with words."—Youth's Companion.

Procrastination.

"I heard a tale the other day of a positioning chap, who thought he'd buy a wheel so far, but—'they' will be cheaper, perhaps. And so he dallied year by year, the cheapest wheel to buy, but long before the cheapest gear, that was he had to die!—And so, by putting off the day, we miss the wine of life; and some there are in just that way who thus will miss a wife, get busy now, you'll find again, procrastinate no more, for time's surely on the wane, and you a bachelor! Some wait too long to make a pick of husbands or of wife, and then some take a broken stick and make a mess of life."—H. B. Behndet, in Judge.

Not Easy.

Pat was a married man—a very much married man. He had married no fewer than four times, and all his wives were still in the fore. According to Pat's own account before the court where he was tried for bigamy and found guilty, his experiences were not altogether satisfactory. The judge, in passing sentence, expressed his wonder that the prisoner could be such a hardened villain as to "debauch so many women."

"Yer honor," said Pat, apologetically, "I was only tryin' to get a good one... an' it's not aisy!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Love-making and Practice.

The only way to become an expert at love-making is to practice. This was the information handed out to a handful of hearers by the Hindu philosopher, Sakharan Ganesh, Pandit, in a lecture on "The Science of Love."

"Love is a divine discontent," said the philosopher, "and if you want to arouse love in others it can be done only by giving them love." How to develop the emotion of love in another, is the great question of today—the art of making love. It needs a great deal of study and a great deal of practice."

The Office Cat

By TEMPLE BAILEY

Copyright 1910, by Associated Editors of This

The judge had always looked upon Miss Staley as a machine. Every morning she took his dictation for an hour and later she brought the letters to be signed. That was the beginning and the end of their intercourse. The judge was a very busy man, and it was only when some one interrupted his routine that he gave his attention. Expertness was the price of indifference. Hence the first time he saw the human side of Miss Staley it came as something of a shock.

She was feeding the office cat. That forlorn feline, as far back as the judge could remember, had been a thin-bodied, renegade to the community. There was a tradition that she lived by catching rats. But such living was evidently precarious, for she had always gone about lean and lank, and somewhat plaintive. On warm days she took her airings in a restricted back court, but in cold weather she carried herself, apologetically, near a radiator in a corner of the hall, subject always to the moods of the janitor.

Today, however, things were changed. There was a bottle of milk on Miss Staley's desk and her sponge cup had been converted into a feeding dish, from which the cat ate ravenously while the little lady watched her with a tender smile on her lips and a tired relaxing of her slender figure which made her seem, for the first time, to the judge's eyes exquisitely feminine.

The judge's post of observation was his window, which looked across an air shaft into Miss Staley's small room, where a typewriter and a great oak desk bobbed with a pot of pansies on the sill.

Moved by a sudden impulse, he raised his window and motioned, and the girl came blushing to hers.

"I couldn't help it," she confessed, across the space, "she is such a poor little creature."

"Why didn't some of us men think of it?" the judge demanded. "We are selfish."

"Oh, but men are so busy," was her defense.

"We aren't much busier than you."

"No, but a woman—oh, it's a woman's privilege to do such things, isn't it?"

The judge liked that. So many women of his own world seemed to have forgotten the claims of compassion, and at times the judge, remembering his own mother and her gracious personality, had yearned for some evidence of brooding tenderness.

He had certainly not expected to find it in his office girl. Yet here was Miss Staley looking after a distressed animal as his own lady-mother would have done, feeding it and making a bed for it in a paper box, and saying as that dear woman would have said, that "men were too busy" and that this was "a woman's privilege."

He thought about it so much after he left the office that the next day Miss Staley was surprised by a large parcel upon the delivery of which the judge came over to make explanations.

"It's a basket for the cat. That old box doesn't look in keeping with the rest of the furniture."

He had chosen it of sober brown-wicker, and there were two linen covers for the cushion, to be washed weekly.

"Oh, Pussykin, Pussykin," Miss Staley rejoiced, "you won't quite know what to do with such magnificence."

But her eyes were shining as she thanked him. "Now she can keep her poor thing, when there are so many ashes."

The screen made such an effective hiding place that no one but the judge and Miss Staley knew of the good fortune that had come to the office cat. It furnished them, too, with a little secret and delightful interest, and brought into the judge's somewhat staid bachelor life a freshness which was a relief from the staid excitements of late suppers and showgirls which seemed to satisfy his clubfellows.

Reverence for women had been instilled into the judge by his mother, but he had found few who had justified it. It was a real joy to discover the depths of Miss Staley's nature. He had to go about it slowly, for she permitted no cessation of their strict business relations. The only subject which he dared to discuss with her informally was the office cat. Never did a feline acquire importance more suddenly. It became a daily occurrence for the judge to step in and say good morning to "Pussykin." He put her milk on the office expense account, experimented with prepared foods, and furnished fresh and dried supplies of catnip, until at last, when the one-time starving took her place beside the pot of pansies on Miss Staley's window, she was a joy to behold.

Thus all went well until one cold morning, when Miss Staley came, in for dictation. The judge saw that her usual self-possession had forsaken her. He gave her three letters before she broke down, and then she wrung her hands and said, wistfully, like a child: "Oh, I've lost my cat."

"How," the judge sat up, "you don't mean—?"

"Yes, I do. I haven't seen her for two days. The janitor has told me that if he ever since I told him that if I heard him beating his boy again I would report him to the police."

"Well," the judge stated, "he will find out that I—"

The janitor, after much compulsion, admitted that he had carried the cat to the edge of the city, and had dropped her near the ash dump. "She was mine," was his defense.

"I will get you another cat," was the way the judge tried to comfort Miss Staley.

But Miss Staley shook her head. "Oh, no, you mustn't. I think the reason I liked this one was because she was alone, and nobody seemed to care for her, and since I came here—among strangers—I know how it feels."

Then, that she should seem to claim his sympathy, she turned it off with a little laugh. "But I have enough to eat—"

"As if that mattered?" the judge soliloquized, when she had left him. "Why what she needs is—love."

The suddenness of the revelation brought him up with a jerk. "Oh, look here," he admonished himself, "you mustn't think of such a thing, you know."

But he did think of it, and the outcome was an invitation to Miss Staley to go with him that afternoon in his car to hunt for the office cat. Under stress of circumstance, Miss Staley consented. They did not find the cat, but the judge found out where Miss Staley lived.

During a second search, the judge discovered that Miss Staley's name was Margaret, and on the third trip he had the joy of buying her a bunch of violets.

The fourth day Miss Staley declined to go with him. "I am busy, and I am afraid it's of no use to look further," she said.

The judge wasted the next day in meditation, and having come to a decision, he went back late to his office to look over a case that was coming up the next day. Thus, it happened that, at midnight, he heard in the hall an unmistakable "mew."

He was out of his room like a shot, to find before Miss Staley's closed portal a shivering, foot-sore creature who dragged herself to him over the stone floor.

"Why, Pussykin, Pussykin," he said, and petted her and carried her back to his office, and made her comfortable beside his radiator. Then he telephoned to a milk and a box of fried oysters, and they had their late supper together, happily.

The rupture of Miss Staley's next morning was his reward. But he was not content to let it end there. "We've got to plan it out," he said, firmly, and shut the door of Miss Staley's sanctum and sat down and faced her, while the regenerated Pussykin purred at their feet. "That cat can't stay here—it isn't really businesslike, you know."

"I know," Miss Staley's tone was deprecating. "But I live in a boarding house, and—"

"I don't," said the judge.

"You mean," her glance met his, "that you want her?"

"I want both of you," the judge cleared, blently, "my house is empty, and my heart is empty—Margaret."

When they planned their wedding journey, the judge suggested England in general, and Cheshire in particular.

"Because of the cheese?" was Miss Staley's demand.

"Because of the cats," was the whimsical response.

So away they went, and they were not missed greatly by Pussykin, who was absorbed in raising a snow family in unparalleled ease and opulence.

GAVE TAFTS NOTICE

Aristocracy of Beverly Feels That It Has Been Snubbed.

Explanation Behind the Refusal of Mrs. Evans to Rent Her Cottage to President and His Family Again.

Boston.—The position of Beverly, Mass., as the nation's summer capital is threatened. Mrs. Robert Dawson Evans, owner of the beautiful villa on Burgess Point, at which President Taft and his family have spent the last two summers, has refused to rent the place again to the chief magistrate.

The action of Mrs. Evans is no surprise to those who have kept in touch with the social gossip of the Beverly colony. All summer it was whispered that some of the old-fashioned folks at Beverly felt hurt because of the strict social lines drawn around the president's summer home.

Naturally, the president cannot keep open house, and the residents admit this. But they have insisted, there is no "aristocracy" of both ancestry and wealth at Beverly that is entitled to consideration. And because, so these gossips maintain, there has been discrimination against some of those families in making up the presidential calling list, the time has arrived for discreet retaliation.

"Wild horses could not drag from any Beverly matron an admission that any such reasons lie behind the refusal of Mrs. Evans to rent her cottage to the Tafts for next year. Mrs. Evans herself offers the suggestion that she has decided to pull down the pretty building on Burgess Point and erect an Italian villa, with spacious gardens, in its place. It is a fact that she has not deemed it worthwhile to repaint the cottage this year, and it is generally known that her enormous wealth makes her independent of any such title as the summer rent of the cottage. When her husband died in July, 1900, he left her a fortune estimated at $12,000,000 invested in gilt edge stocks.

What the social aspirations of Mrs. Evans are, if any, is not known, but certain it is that she has decided to close her property to the Tafts. She is reported to have told her intimate friends that the comfort of her own guests has been interfered with by the activities of the secret service agents surrounding the president's household.

Mrs. Evans occupies another cottage near the one she leased to the Tafts, and one of her familiar complaints has been that the Taft Cottage stood between her and the grand view of Coleman bay, which Burgess Point affords.

Those who have spent this summer at Beverly smile at such excuses. They say that Mrs. Evans was delighted to have the Tafts for guests last year and never spoke them of any Italian garden scheme.

Meanwhile Mrs. Taft has a little list of available cottages in the neighborhood. President Taft is determined not to leave Beverly if it can be avoided. The ties he has formed there, and the enjoyment he has derived from the golf-links and the magnificent scenery make him feel very disappointed over the decision of Mrs. Evans.

NINE WATCHES IN AN HOUR

New and Ingenious Machinery Makes It Possible to Manufacture That Number.

Elgin, Ill.—It is claimed that the methods of manufacture adopted by one American company enables it to set up, ready for trial within an hour, no fewer than nine watches. This rapidity of manufacture has become possible by reason of the ingenious machinery invented for the making of all the parts of a watch.

The speed with which the various parts are turned out is truly remarkable. Great sheets of brass and steel are cut and rolled into ribbons, and punched out into wheels at the rate of 10,000 a day from each punching machine. Workers drill the 31 holes in the roof of the watch as fast as they can count, other operatives counter-sinking the holes almost as quickly.

Brass wire glides into a machine that measures off the length of a part, turns it, puts a screw thread on each end, and actually screws it in at the rate of 2,000 a day. The screws are so small that it is said 50 gross of them can be put in a thimble, while of others there are 1,000 gross to a pound.

Balances are cut from the solid steel, ground down, worked up, and drilled with their 25 screw holes apiece at the rate of 100 wheels a day; their teeth cut, a couple of dozen at a time, some with from 60 to 90 teeth, at the rate of 1,200 wheels a day from each machine.

WRONG IN THAT DIAGNOSIS

Physician's Method May Have Been All Right, but Here He Was at Fault.

We are told that the latest sensation in the medical world is the assertion of a doctor that he is able, by looking into a patient's eye, to make an accurate diagnosis of the complaint which the patient is suffering. But is this really as novel as it is supposed to be? I recollect hearing some time ago of a doctor who said to a patient who was under examination: "I can see by the appearance of your right eye what the matter with you. You are suffering from liver."

"My right eye?" asked the patient. "Yes," returned the doctor. "It shows me plainly that your liver is out of order."

"Excuse me, doctor," said the patient, apologetically. "My right eye's a glass one."

AWFUL BURNING ITCH CURED IN A DAY

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies, and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43rd Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass.

Mutual Expectations.

A notoriously close-fisted man was taking his golfing holiday in Scotland, where he hoped to improve his game, and, by driving a hard bargain, had managed to secure the exclusive services of a first-class caddie, who was known to be a very good player. "Mind, now," said the ambitious southerner, "I expect to receive some really good tips from you during my stay here, you understand?" "Aye," replied the Scotsman, hitching up the heavy bag, "an' Ah'm expectin' the like frae ye, ye ken."—Golf Illustrated.

Wild West Outdone in New York City

NEW YORK.—The wild west was once the home of most that was romantic and daring in crime. Today it is superseded by the wild east—by New York City itself. Crimes are being committed here which for daring and unwontedness can scarcely be surpassed even by the most imaginative of writers of fiction.

A few weeks ago, up the river in the neighborhood of Hudson, there was a hold-up such as Deadwood Gulch or Coyote Canyon never surpassed. A paymaster and his guard returning from a bank with $5,000 to pay off the laborers in a brickyard were held up and shot to death within a few hundred yards of their office, and to this day not one of the assassins has been captured and not the slightest light has been thrown on the tragedy.

Recently in West Forty-seventh street there was a duel between two parties of men. Each of them was in a big touring car and they maneuvered up and down the street, exchanging shots like two battleships in action. There was another duel between two automobile parties on Seventy-second street a couple of evenings later.

Not long ago, one afternoon when Broadway was crowded, a gambler stood in front of one of the best known of New York's theaters and engaged in a pistol duel with another whom he claimed had wronged him. The aggressor was the poorer marksman and was filled with lead. Half an hour later the sidewalk had been scrubbed up and was dry and dusty again, and the surging crowds gave as little comment to the affair as the border men used to when a man was killed over a game of cards in Abilene or Dodge or any other of those roaring cities of the cow country a quarter of a century ago.

One of the most daring deeds in the history of the metropolis was that performed by Myles McDonnell. He walked into a saloon, where he knew a lot of his enemies were waiting to kill him. The minute he stepped inside the door three or four of his foes opened fire on him. He drew his pistol without batting an eye and answered shot for shot. The doctors of the Harlem hospital were busy for several days thereafter attending to the dead and wounded. McDonnell killed two and seriously injured three or four others. He himself got off without a scratch.

New York today has the greatest clearing house for thieves in the world. It is here that congregate the transatlantic robbers, men who work the ocean greyhounds. After each round trip they meet at this rendezvous and divide their spoil. There also assemble the master thieves, the big robbers, the clever men who steal by brains as well as by force. They are the safe blowers, the crack second-story men, the cleverest of forgers who steal with pen and ink, the kings and princes of the wireless wire-tapping and gold-brick industry, the big swindlers in fake mining schemes.

R U PAYING A MUD-TAX?

COUNTRY SHOULD VOTE SOLID FOR GOOD ROADS.

City of Detroit Will Pay Large Proportion of Tax.

By GEORGE S. LADD, National Good Roads Lecturer.

Mud costs the citizens of the United States $75,000,000 a year.

How much mud tax are you paying? This is the proposition which you must bear in mind when you go to the polls Tuesday morning, November 8th, to vote upon the good roads bonding proposition.

Every time you go to town over, or rather through, mud roads with a ton of produce you are paying a mud tax because if you had the benefit of good roads the same team that draws the ton now could draw 5,000 pounds over the smooth concrete roads. A lower transportation cost makes larger profits to you on your products.

The good roads movement is particularly interesting to me because I am a farmer; because I am an active member of the Grange; and because I know, therefore, how much good roads will benefit the farmers of Wayne county and how much good roads are benefiting the farmers of the United States, from Maine to California.

You know, as well as I do, that when you are driving back from town after selling your produce, you can carry perhaps a ton of coal home over the present mud roads, and that if you could carry 2 1/2 tons you would reduce the cost of your coal very materially by saving two or three trips with the time, wear and tear on wagon and horses considered. The concrete roads to be built if the good roads bonding proposition carries next Tuesday, will enable you to more than double the hauling capacity of your horses and wagons. Good roads will help you in many other ways. Fresh fruits and vegetables bring a much better price than fruits and vegetables which were picked twenty-four hours earlier. With bad roads it is frequently necessary to pick and gather vegetables and fruit twenty-four to twenty-six hours before they actually reach the market. With good roads, and the accompanying saving of time on the road your produce can be gathered much later, and, therefore, reach the market in much fresher condition. Why not take advantage of these opportunities?

GET GOOD ROADS NOW.

It is true that good roads are being built now in Wayne county, but at the present rate it will require not less than 12 years to build the good roads of good roads which will be required to cover Wayne county properly.

If you were considering the purchase of a very fine neighboring farm would you wait ten years to get the full purchase price of this farm, or would you pay a portion of the purchase price and give a mortgage for the remainder in order that you might make the farm pay for itself? Of course you would.

Then why not build the roads now and let them be earning their cost? Under the bonding plan all these roads can be built within four or five years and you will have the use of these roads in getting your products to market and your purchases home again while the roads are being paid for.

THE COST.

Wayne county has a very efficient good roads commission. The commission has the equipment and organization of men, superintendents, machinery, etc., for building these roads and it actually does build the roads at a 25% lower cost than similar roads are being built for in the East. This is because of the experience and energy of the county roads commissioners and because they do the work themselves instead of letting contracts for it which necessarily means profits for the contractors.

The roads being built in the county now are costing the taxpayers of Wayne county 48 cents to 50 cents road tax on each $1,000 of assessed valuation per year, and the roads are being built very slowly.

If you and your neighbors vote "YES" next Tuesday, and the bonding proposition carries, the roads will be built very much faster and at a cost of only 34 cents road tax on each $1,000 of assessed valuation per year.

Isn't it worth while getting the good roads immediately and at a lower cost than we are now paying? THE BENEFIT OF GOOD ROADS.

In addition to the saving to the farmer and the cost of transportation, good roads in Wayne county mean many other benefits to the Wayne county farmer as well as to the city voter.

A complete system of good roads means closer communion between the farmer and his neighbors, between the farmer and the town or the city. Good roads mean greater ease in getting the children to school and home again in order that they may keep up their share of the farm work and at the same time receive all the advantages of the free education to which they are entitled. Good roads mean that the farmer can go to and from Church, Grange, or Gleason meetings and the various other interests that call him and his family from home regularly.

Here are two illustrations on the value of good roads:

The United States census figures show that those counties in Michigan which have never done anything for improving their roads have lost in population during the last ten years, while the counties which have done most for their roads have increased most in population in the same time. Greater population means greater demand for what the farmer grows, makes his produce more valuable and makes his land more valuable.

The four states with the worst roads, and with a population of about 7,000,000, have 375,000 native born men and women who can neither read nor write. In the four states with the best roads and with a population of about 6,000,000, there are only 20,000 who can neither read nor write. So, you see, good roads and better education, which means better equipment for this world's struggles, go hand in hand.

When you go to the voting booth Tuesday for the sake of your family, your pocketbook and your comfort, as well as for the sake of your country, demand the separate ballot on the good roads proposition and vote "YES."

NOTICE TO THE ELECTORS OF WAYNE COUNTY.
 Proposed Issue of $2,000,000 in Bonds for the Maintenance of County Roads in Wayne County. Pursuant to the Following Resolution Adopted by the Board of Supervisors, October 15, 1910.

Be It Resolved, that the County of Wayne contract an indebtedness of two million dollars ($2,000,000) and issue bonds for the same, to be paid within fifteen (15) years from the date of the issue of the same, for the purpose of raising money for the construction and maintenance of county roads in the County of Wayne, and that the said bonds therefor, be issued in the following manner:

- $200,000 for the first year
- $500,000 for the second year
- $500,000 for the third year
- $500,000 for the fourth year
- $300,000 for the fifth year.

Said bonds to be redeemed serially at the rate of one hundred thousand ($100,000) dollars each year from the date of the first issue, except that $200,000 be redeemed fifteen years from the date of the last issue; that said amount be expended under the direction of the board of county roads commissioners of said county, in approximately the amounts, each year, for which said bonds are issued for that year; that said bonds shall not be negotiated at less than par and the accrued interest.

Be It Further Resolved, that the question of issuing said bonds for the purpose aforesaid be submitted to a vote of the electors of the County of Wayne at the next general election to be held the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November, in the year 1910, and that notice of the submission of said election to a vote of the electors be given in the same manner and for the same length of time as now prescribed by law and that the manner of stating said question upon the ballots at said election shall be as follows:
