LONG VOYAGE FOR BLACK BASS

THOUSANDS FROM NORTHVILLE HATCHERY IN BRAZIL.

Lost Only 126 on Twenty-Three Day Sea Trip.

A thousand tiny one-year old large mouth black bass have set a new record of fish travel that is second only to the legend of the salmon hatched on the Atlantic Coast finding their way around to the Pacific, now the home territory of their species.

These young bass, however, made their tour after a modern fashion, by train and boat, all the way from the government hatchery at Northville, Mich., to Sao Paulo in Brazil, where they were sent to stock an artificial lake belonging to an electric power and light company owned and operated by Americans.

The yearling fishes were shipped from Northville by passenger train with Fish Culturist E. J. Fuller of the Northville station in special charge. From New York they were shipped on the steaming ship Verit, Oct. 20, and word has just been received of their arrival, with a loss of only 126, or about twelve percent, on the sea voyage of twenty-three days. This is a remarkable showing, in the opinion of fish experts, and it is a record in the matter of shipping live fish both in the matter of distance travelled and obstacles of climatic change contended with.

The company at Brazil gives credit for the success of the undertaking to C. W. Morgan of New York Aquarium, who made the arrangements for the care of the shipment on the voyage. The cost of the trip from New York was $300. A representative of the company and two ship's stewards were in constant attendance on the fish, and the temperature of the water in which they were transported was taken every half hour during the day and night from the time they left New York until they were placed in their new home. During the trip these readings of the thermometer, together with the temperature of the air, were put down in a log to be sent to the United States Fish Commission as a record. From the time of leaving their native Michigan waters, no zero weather, the bass encountered a variation of more than eighty degrees in temperature. On arrival to New York the fish were cared for at the aquarium and had several days to which to recover from the fifty hour railroad trip, during which the water in their cans was kept aerated by blowing.

Ten gallon milk cans filled with distilled sea water were prepared for them on shipboard. An air pump operated by an electric motor, was installed to furnish oxygen in the water, and specially constructed covers were fitted to the cans, which could be filled with ice to regulate the temperature. Two tons of ice were used during the voyage.

Throughout the temperature of the water was never allowed to fall below fifty-nine or rise above sixty-one degrees, while at times the atmospheric temperature ranged from eighty-four to eighty-six degrees during the day. During the first two days 123 died, but after that only three more were lost.

The Northville hatchery people feel very proud of the achievement.

Never makes a mistake when it is turned on. It is not merely an ordinary lamp improved, it is an entirely new method of lighting. For simplicity and convenience of operation, it is the closest rival of the electric light. For splendid reading light and for general illumination it is the perfect light. The simplest which the eye can throw the best light from the most perfect surface. It is the most perfect of all lighting devices. The effect of the light is doubled, producing a reading light which no other system can even approach. Yet the Angle Lamp is the most economical of all lighting devices. DEWEY

BLUE ROOM

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S FAVORITE CORNER

ADmiral Dewey head of the United States navy has an especial reason for feeling in a festive mood during the merry Yuletide season. It brings him a double holiday. Not merely, you understand the dual celebrations of Christmas and New Year's day, but another one besides. The explanation of surprise of fact for this season of the year is found in the circumstance that the birthday anniversary of the hero of Manila bay occurred on December 26, the day after Christmas. Moreover, the Admiral's friends make as much of the birthday anniversary as they do of the general holiday that just precedes it.

The richest looking officer of our navy is also in quite a council with the idea of having his birthday anniversary celebrated in the same way.

admiral is a man of strong friendships. Ever since his return from the Philippines he has made his home at Washington, which is the common headquarters for retired, as well as active officers of the service. And those officers who do not live there make it a rendezvous, particularly at holiday seasons, and thus it comes about that there were in the capital at Christmas week an exceptional number of friends and acquaintances.

This dining room is a very imposing apartment, with green wall hangings, heavy carved furniture and a lofty ceiling studded with electric lights. On the left wall of this apartment there is one of the long walls of this apartment there is arranged the admiral's famous collection of Filipino weapons, including knives, spears, shields and other pieces of decided decorative value. Conspicuous on the opposite wall is a mounted moose head and an ingenious map of the world fashioned from hemp by Filipino weavers. Opening from this room is the breakfast room, which is used by the Deweys for all family and informal dinners.

In some respects the most interesting room in the admiral's home is the "blue room," a sort of combination "den," library and living room. The wall coverings, draperies, etc., are all of brocade silk in the delicate robin's egg tint, and the upholstery is in harmony with this color scheme. Here are the admiral's reading and writing table and his "favorite corner," containing his lounging chair brought from the Orient and a collection of prize pictures including original war sketches, autographed photos and other mementoes. Seated here the other day the admiral, who does not look within ten years of his seventy-three years, said: "I relish the little birthday celebrations I have enjoyed in recent years all the more because as a boy my birthday anniversary never meant much to me. My relatives were wont to combine it with Christmas in so far as gift giving was concerned. I do not recall that, as a boy, I ever received a birthday present and I thought it pretty hard luck then."

scribed uniforms were even worn except in cases of great ceremony or where the officer was sitting for his portrait. The facts in the case seem to be that John Paul Jones, Nicholas Biddle, John Barry and other nautical heroes of the revolution achieved their greatness in red or blue flannel shirts and in any other clothing that came handy; doubtless patched by the ship's tailor, not too neatly, with sail cloth. By the assistance of a machine, spool and spun yarn—Bluejacket.

UNIFORMS IN THE NAVY

Both the officers and the crews of the older navies used to dress pretty much as they pleased, in Nelson's time an attempt was made to get the officers arrayed with some sort of system, but the sailors wore whatever they could get hold of. That the dominant colors in dress in the British navy (and resulting in the navies of other countries) were determined by a woman's influence is shown in English records. The Hon. John Forbes, admiral of the fleet, said: "Adverting to the establishment of naval uniforms, I was summoned to attend the duke of Bedford and, being introduced into an apartment surrounded with various dresses, my opinion was asked as to the most appropriate. I said red and blue, as they were our national colors. "No," replied his grace, "the king (George II) has determined otherwise, for having seen 'my duchess riding in the park a few days ago in a habit of blue faced with white the dress took his majesty's fancy, who has appointed it for the uniform of the royal navy." While wearing a uniform himself, Nelson was jealous in guarding against further encroachments on the sailor's prerogative in the matter of dress. About the time of the French revolution epaulettes began to be worn in continental navies, at first only on one shoulder, according to the officer's rank. In 1793 Nelson, while in France, wrote to his mother: "Two noble English captains are here. They wear fine epaulettes, for which I think them great coxcombs. You may suppose I hold them a little cheap for putting on any part of a Frenchman's uniform." It was only a few years after this, however, that Nelson himself was wearing an epaulet, not only on a single shoulder, but on both. In the United States navy uniforms were prescribed from the outset—but with the very wise clause, inserted as a parenthesis, "it can be proffered." By a resolution of the continental board of admiralty captains were to have a coat of blue cloth with red lapels, slashed cuffs, a stand-up collar, flat yellow buttons blue breeches and a red waistcoat with yellow lace. Lieutenants were to have a blue coat, red lapels, round cuffs faced, a stand-up collar, yellow buttons, blue breeches and a plain red waistcoat. Midshipmen were to have a blue coat with lapels, round cuffs, faced with red, a stand-up collar, red at the buttons and button-holes, blue breeches and a red waistcoat. Officers of the marines were to have a uniform, consisting of a green coat faced with white, round cuffs, slashed sleeves and pockets with buttons around the cuffs, a silver epaulet on the left shoulder, skirts of the coat turned back (like the uniform of the continental soldier), buttons for the facings, white waistcoat and breeches edged with green, and black gaiters and garters. The marines were to wear green shirts. But it is highly improbable that these pre-

"I don't blame you for wanting to marry my daughter," said the latter. "And now how much do you suppose you and she can worry along on?"
"The youth brightened up."
"I think," he cheerfully stammered, "that $200,000 well invested, would produce a sufficient income."
"The millionaire turned back to his papers."

Bad Taste

in your mouth removed while you wait—that's true. A Casaret taken when the tongue is thick-coated with the nasty squeamish feeling in stomach, brings relief. It's easy, natural way to help nature help you.

CASARETS—no box—week's treatment. All druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Mints boxes a month.

CEFAJACE STARCH—makes to work with and searches clothes clean.

Splendid Crops

In Saskatchewan (Western Canada)

500 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the achievement of a farmer in the district of Regina, Saskatchewan, in the season of 1910. Many other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE OF WESTERN CANADA.

It is excellent showing crops and profits. Land values should double in two years' time. Grain growing, and dairy farming, are all profitable. Free land is offered in the best districts at $5.00 per acre with certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement. Climate unsurpassed. Soil the richest, water plentiful.

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive literature, pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Dept. of Land, Agriculture, or to Canadian Government Agent.
