CHAS. M. JOSLIN DIED YESTERDAY

HE HAD BEEN ILL FOR SEVERAL WEEKS.

Was One of Northville's Foremost Citizens.

Charles M. Joslin, one of Northville's best known citizens, died at his home in this village about four o'clock yesterday afternoon after an illness of several weeks.

Chas. M. Joslin was born at Wales, N. Y., March 8, 1833, and came to Michigan in the spring of 1861, first settling in East Saginaw and later moving to East Tawas. In 1883 he moved with his family to Northville where they have since resided.

In 1860 he was united in marriage to Laura E. Cone, who died some thirty-one years ago. To this union one daughter, now Mrs. B. Frey, for a dozen years he traveled on the road as a salesman.

In Masonic circles he has always been prominent, and in the social and literary affairs he was always interested, and in the church he was faithful and energetic.

He was proud of Northville and its people and Northville was proud of him as a citizen. He is gone, but he will not soon be forgotten. He was a splendid citizen and the community in which he spent so many happy days and in which he enjoyed life far beyond the average of men, has lost a valuable member.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed but it will likely occur Sunday and may be under the auspices of Northville Commandery Knights Templar of which Mr. Joslin was a past grand officer.

MRS. JAS. CHASE DIED SUNDAY

Was 72 Years Old; Funeral Tuesday.

Mrs. James Chase died at her home on First avenue in this village Sunday after a long illness. She was seventy-two years of age and leaves a husband and a number of relatives.

Mrs. Chase had long been engaged in the propagation and sale of flowers and was considered an expert in that line of work.

The funeral was held Tuesday from the Baptist church, Rev. Mr. Murdock officiating.

RECIPROCITY DEBATE NEXT WEDNESDAY

WINTER NIGHT CLUB FOR LIBRARY BENEFIT

Choice Lot of Oratory to Be Turned Loose.

The Winter Night club has arisen as though from the grave and will make the spacious walls ring with oratory—and the high ceilings as well—next Wednesday night at the library.

Cass Benton, fresh from the Benton maple grove sugar camp and house building, assisted by the veteran farmer and writer, Nathan Clapp, will top the list of orators on one side while City Attorney Yerkes, also a farmer and grower of the sap tree from whose barks he extracts the gum that makes the pancakes to tickle the tasty nerve of the tongue like unto a sirloin steak in the jaws of a hungry tramp, with the aid of Probate Clerk C. C. Chadwick, also an ex-farmer and raiser of choice chickens, will head the list of the reciprocal shouters. There will be others in the arena before the wind-up and in the meantime the National Congress is waiting the outcome with trembling and doubt.

Everybody invited and almost everybody can get in a word or two on the subject. A small admission fee will be charged and the library gets that part of it no matter which side wins.

Card of Thanks.

We sincerely thank the K. O. T. M. M., Royal Neighbors, M. A. W., The King's Daughters and our neighbors and friends for flowers kindly sympathy and services in our bereavement.

WATER POWER BILL IS KILLED

MEASURE AIMED TO EMPOWER PRIVATE CONCERN'S TO TAKE LANDS.

ALSO AIMED TO BESTOW FRAN-
CHISE GRANTING POWER
ON R. R. BOARD.

As a Result of Killing the Bill the Commonwealth Power Co. Will Be Unable to Carry Out Their Consolidation Plans.

When Rep. Young made a motion in the House to strike out all after the enacting clause of the Newton bill which sought to give private corporations the right to condemn land for their use and to empower the State railroad commission to grant franchises, his motion was greeted by a burst of applause from the House members which fairly shook the walls of the House. When the motion was voted on, one man, Rep. Yapo of Kalamazoo, voted against the Young motion.

Rep. Baughman in a speech declared that the water power merger had "ruined" the bill and that it sought to evade a constitutional right which declares that no private corporation has the right to condemn land for private use. He declared that it was beyond the power of the legislature to grant such authority, and cited a supreme court opinion backing up his argument. Rep. Young stated that the bill was asking the legislature the right to give the private corporations the power to condemn private property; and he was also of the opinion that such an act would be unconstitutional. Rep. Yapo, who alone defended the measure, said it was high time the people of the state granted these corporations some concessions, but when he saw the trend of opinion among the members of the House, he cut his remarks short.

As a result of killing the bill the Commonwealth Power Co., the so-called power merger, and several other private corporations will not receive at the hands of the legislature at this time the powers they desired to have granted them to carry forward their consolidation plans. The proposed grant of power to the railroad commission for taking franchise power away from the board of supervisors undoubtedly killed the bill.

Do Nothing, Say the Governors.
Following the adoption of the main study report contending the administration of Wanless, the governor of Michigan, the governor of the Great Lakes provinces, the governors of the states of Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, and the governors of the District of Columbia, all agreed to do nothing with regard to the proposed bill.

Everyone here thinks the common house has taken a wise decision of not doing anything at this time. This probably marks the next move of the house in this bill. It is prepared to meet the issue through the house and use in the meantime.

After "killing" the matter over with his friends, Wanless passed addressed a letter to Gov. Clegg urging him to appoint a committee of the highest class of men in the state to make an investigation in which the public would have confidence.

Help the Indians.

Gov. Edwards, A. T. General Kline have taken up the case of the Indians in Cheyenne, Neb., and the result of their efforts is that the Cheyenne Indians have lost through the negligence of the state physician many of their lands.

The Indians had made a date to go to the offices of the land in Cheyenne county more than two years ago, at that time to make them selves secure in the right of the Indians to remain in the state, and the entire tribe of the Indians of Michigan in his office called.

TWENTY-FIVE KILLED

Kansas Cyclone Sweeps Four States;
500 Are Homeless.

Tornadoes which swept parts of Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas are known to have killed 25 persons, injured more than one hundred, rendered more than five hundred homeless and to have done thousands of dollars' worth of property damage.

The terrific wind first struck the town of Netwaka, Kan., and swung in a great loop southward into the Osage Nation of northern Oklahoma. The town of Big Heart was virtually swept off the map. Turning to the west and north the tornado re-entered Kansas, incited houses and turned over barns. People and live stock were killed in their wreckage.

Its force was all but spent when the wind reached Lawrence, Kan. There the storm was severe enough to destroy ten houses, kill two persons, and injure a score of others.

Since its completion, the great capital of the United States has been without adequate fire alarm facilities. The discovery of an accidentally caused forest fire in the city in a few hours yesterday morning was reported when alarm was sounded without delay.

Federal Stand Gallingly Fired.

With the first galling fire from the rebel trenches, the federals were seen advancing momentarily but in movement was quickly checked.

For fully 15 minutes the two armies held their respective positions while the deadly fire raged. Then suddenly after 15 seconds of intense fire the rebels advanced and the federals retreated.

Without ceasing the risk of missing pieces, members of the house of representatives scattered and ran for cover.

The day's work was done.

The house of representatives has excluded the right of debate in the two recent committee reports from the Philippine Islands, Honolulu, Los Angeles and Manila, Que. The two bills have participated in a bill before, but now with official recognition.

FIERCE BATTLE ON MEXICAN BORDER

FEDERALS ATTACK AGUA PRI-

HAIL OF MACHINE GUN BULLETS

DOUGLAS, ARIZ.

United States Troops Guard Border

in Progress.

The long expected attack of the Mexican federal troops on Agua Prieta opened in deadly earnest at 5:30. The firing was first and furious on both sides. The grape of musketry was continuous.

The battle of Agua Prieta, quiet for hours of incessant fighting Monday night, was now to be decisive. Both sides exhibited desperate courage.

The federals began by massing themselves to the southeast of the town and moved slowly within rifle range of the rebel position.

The insurgents, facing in three directions, lay low in the trenches or lay on the open ground. The federals' fire raked over them and into both Agua Prieta and Douglas. It was evident from the heavy fire that the casualties on both sides were destined to be very heavy.

Douglas Riddled With Bullets.

The steel and leaden missiles from the federal guns carried far over the international line and plowed their way into the buildings facing along Second and Third streets and dug into the ground here and there over the whole southern end of the city.

The federals in moving in had advanced from the camp which they established at Sulphur Springs, a water hole five miles south of Agua Prieta. They marched slowly to a point southeast of Agua Prieta, with no evident intention of gaining the border in order to attack the rebel position along the international line.

No Reason for It

When Northville Citizens Show the Way.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of serious kidney illness when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that these ills can be cured. Read what a Northville citizen says:

W. H. Denison, Boston Ave., Northville, Mich., says: "Some years ago my kidneys were badly disordered and I was annoyed by too frequent and painful passage of the kidney secretions. I suffered from severe pains in the small of my back and I seemed unable to get relief. Then I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from A. C. Cook Bros. Drug Store and they soon drove away the pain in my back and strengthened my kidneys. I do not hesitate to recommend this valuable kidney medicine to anyone affected with kidney complaint."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., sole agents for the United States.

W. R. C. Notes.

(By Press Correspondent.)

The program committee of the Corps gave an exceptionally fine entertainment after the regular routine of business was disposed of on last Wednesday evening.

Fifty years ago, on the 12th of April occurred the first battle of our great civil war, that of Fort Sumpter, in which the total loss of life was 400 Union and four Confederate soldiers. During the month of April or the following year, a total of 35,311 men laid down their lives in the struggle. Four years later the great and terrible war was ended by the surrender of Lee to Grant, April 9, 1865. History says the results of this bloody drama were "Slavery abolished forever, the Union preserved, nearly one million men killed, cost nearly eight billions of dollars." There were other results than these, chief among which was the great army of crippled and broken in health soldiers who survived the horrors of war, to encounter the horrors of life-time suffering, both physical and mental, as they strive to pick up the broken threads of life and earn a decent and comfortable living for themselves and families.

Next Sunday will be observed all over the English speaking world, as the 200th Anniversary of the King James Bible.

Trailing a Diamond Smuggler

Taken from the Archives of Bullyants, Limited, the greatest spy and detective agency of modern times.

By FREDERICK REDDALE

Copyright, 1917, by W. G. Chapman

ALL forms of modern getrich quick schemes; diamond smuggling is the easiest and the most profitable. Captures are few, and while the risks are great, the rewards are correspondingly great." Thus spoke Mark Manley, in reminiscent mood, the young looking gray-haired special agent of Bullyants Limited, crime detectors and solvers of mysteries, as he and I sat in the cozy corner of an up-town New York cafe not a thousand miles from the Great White Way.

"So I've heard," I commented just to keep the conversation hot rolling, "not that I personally know much about it, but I've read a lot, and I'm willing to take your word for the rest."

Manley nodded, sipped his Rhine wine and seltzer, lighted one of his interminable Panatelas, and settled himself comfortably. Scouting a story I merely looked as intelligent as I possibly could.

"Yes," he went on, "I once tracked one of 'em for two solid years."

"Aha!" I prompted. "Oh, yes, I got him at last. But only by accident after all." True genius is ever modest, you see.

I'd like to hear about it, I murmured, shifting my chair closer to the little round table between us. That stop, I tell you. Decide on your own way—that's your business—and let us know when you've got the right kind of evidence."

Well, Bullyants assigned me to the job. Facts I had to save, that Bians & Backus were faced at play in the commercial agencies; that they did an apparently straight business, and were also reported to be making money hand over fist. I made it my business to find out when brother Backus planned to make his next trip abroad, and I went on the same steamer.

Thus spoke Mark Manley, in reminiscent mood, the young looking gray-haired special agent of Bullyants Limited, crime detectors and solvers of mysteries, as he and I sat in the cozy corner of an up-town New York cafe not a thousand miles from the Great White Way.

"So I've heard," I commented just to keep the conversation hot rolling, "not that I personally know much about it, but I've read a lot, and I'm willing to take your word for the rest."

Manley nodded, sipped his Rhine wine and seltzer, lighted one of his interminable Panatelas, and settled himself comfortably. Scouting a story I merely looked as intelligent as I possibly could.

"Yes," he went on, "I once tracked one of 'em for two solid years."

"Aha!" I prompted. "Oh, yes, I got him at last. But only by accident after all." True genius is ever modest, you see.

I'd like to hear about it, I murmured, shifting my chair closer to the little round table between us. That you'll like it. I have them made for me specially."

Sure enough, it was a mighty fine smoke, and I said so, jokingly remarking that they were better cigars than I could afford. We walked and smoked our cigars to the tips, and then, finding our pockets empty, Backus invited me to his stateroom for a fresh supply. Needless to say this was the very chance I had been looking for.

He switched on the electrics—he was a deck-cabin while mine was on the deck below—and produced an opened box originally containing 50 of those ideal Perfectos from which perhaps half a dozen had been used.

We were both standing when a peculiar thing happened—the steamer gave a sudden lurch and a roll at the instant when Backus was extending the open box. I staggered, threw up my arm to steady myself, and—purely by accident—knocked the box out of his hand! The cigars went flying all over the place—some in the berth some under the berth, and on the floor, others here and there like things possessed.

I tapped out an apology for my clumsiness, but nevertheless I caught something very like an oath from my host. In an instant he was on all fours, ducking and bending higher and higher, picking up his precious cigars. He seemed more scrupulous about recovering every blessed one of them, even to arranging them neatly in the box and counting them over and over to see that none were missing. When apparently satisfied that all were salvaged he shut the lid and tossed the box in his berth, saying that he'd give me one out of a fresh lot—those that had been on the floor were probably broken and not fit for a gentleman to smoke, and so off. Accordingly he produced an unopened box from his Gladstone bag, and we had our smoke.

At the moment and for some time thereafter I gave no further thought to the incident. But when I had turned in that night the extreme quietude with which Backus had recovered and counted those spilt cigars struck me as peculiar to say the least. Suddenly the true explanation flashed into my mind, and I broke out into a cold sweat. The more I pondered over the matter the more it brought him into the mystery of the stateroom. I had solved the mystery of the stateroom inspector who, according to custom, had declared a small parcel of interior stones, then marched coolly down the gang-plank bag in hand. A customs inspector would go through his Gladstone and find nothing dutiable; the partly-smoked box of cigars called for, no duty. In fact, Mr. Inspector would probably be highly satisfied one of the gaily-handled snuff-boxes, of course, and those with punctured labels, the punch perfumery ceremony over and done with the travelling member of Bians & Backus would say, "I can now proceed to dinner or home in order to the time of my arrival."

For you, I was mightily anxious when I took up the box and began to open it. I was afraid that the contents would be too much for me to handle. After lying awake all night I finally decided to break the box open and see what was inside. I had to do it, because I had to know what the returning goods were in the cargo.

The person was a somewhat stout Philadelphian, but I finally prevailed.

"Please, how do you propose to manage it?" he quizzed. "What excuse can you offer for having your own quarters?"

"Why, just see," I explained, "I very carelessly left my porthole open last night, and this morning a green sea poured in and soaked everything—mattress, bedding, and carpet. I was literally astir, and it'll take at least a couple of days to dry things thoroughly. In such an emergency you might properly insist on Mr. Backus leaving me his upper berth."

"I see, I see," said the purser, with a ponderous wink. "Leave it to me. He's only paid for half a stateroom anyway. I'll see him after breakfast."

Whether Backus liked the change or not, it was his cap when we met on deck to seem perfectly delighted and to welcome me. When I went below to freshen up for luncheon I found that a steward had transferred all my traps, and I was regularly installed in the enemy's camp.

Every hour brought us nearer to New York and it became easier to work quickly. All that I wanted was a look at the box of cigars that had been so unexpectedly spilled all over the cabin, yet it needed all my finesse to secure that end. Of course Backus could not always be below at the same time as myself, and really he seemed totally unsuspecting of my true errand and character.

I had noticed that on every voyage he always "travelled light"—carrying no trunk, but merely a roomy bag. Hence I knew that the cigars I wanted were probably in that receptacle, seeing that the fresh box remained in full sight on the table. And probably the Gladstone bag would be locked.

So it proved when my chance came. I bolted the stateroom door against the possible return of brother Backus, although when I left the smoking room I had seen him deep in a game of bridge, at which he was winning hand over fist. But I was by this time so sure of the correctness of my theory that I had no scruples whatever in rear fitting a skeleton key to the lock and thus gaining access to the bag.

Sure enough, there was a quarter emptied box of Perfectos reposing innocently under a change of clothing, neckties, collars, and what not. Rapidly I snatched on the electrics, for I needed a good light, and selected two of the topmost cigars. Each was banded with a broad label, and close scrutiny revealed none of the tell-tale marks I had expected to find. But on going to the bottom of the box I discovered that each band, on the innermost layer bore a minute cross in red ink—so small, in fact, as to escape all ordinary observance, being apparently part of the gaudy design. This was what I was looking for; so I slipped one of the marked cigars into my vest pocket, substituted for it another from the open box, on the table so as to make the tally correct, and Backus count them, restored the box to the Gladstone bag, which I snapped and locked itself, and betook my way to the saloon, where my room mate discovered me calmly eating my lunch when he came in.

Immediately after the meal he went back to his game of bridge, being properly anxious to press his luck, for which I thanked the Pates, and I was left free to put my theory to the test.

Right off I went to the turtleback. There the deck was deserted. Turning my back on the ship I drew out the marked Perfecto. Ruthlessly I broke it in two, and then crumbled the leaf, wrapper and filler in my palms just as a pipe smoker serves his plug-cut. Result: a goodly handful of flaky brown tobacco. But from the dark depths of the mass surely hidden gleams shot forth. Carefully winnowing the pulverized fragments in the smart breeze, then blowing and letting them waft away astern, there were gradually disclosed four beautiful diamonds, glittering and scintillating in the sunlight, each at least six or eight carats in weight and worth at least a thousand dollars apiece.

Backus, and why they could undersell the New York diamond market? And then? I queried as Manley ceased speaking, to relight his panchetta.

The rest was easy. Shinnecock Light was abeam and we would dock in a few hours. I knew just what Backus would do. According to custom, he'd declare a small parcel of interior stones, then march coolly down the gang-plank bag in hand. A customs inspector would go through his Gladstone and find nothing dutiable; the partly-smoked box of cigars called for, no duty. In fact, Mr. Inspector would probably be highly satisfied one of the gaily-handled snuff-boxes, of course, and those with punctured labels, the punch perfumery ceremony over and done with the travelling member of Bians & Backus, and why he could undersell the New York diamond market?

Parents and Children's Faults

Parents ought to collaborate with teachers in helping to develop the best in their children, and consequently to eliminate the worst. Instead of this view of the matter, we (says Ella Wheeler Wilcox) find parents taking a stand against the teacher who tries to talk of the faults of their children and discuss remedial and all the work which the teacher has hoped to do in character building fails to the ground under the lifted hammer of the unwise, and belligerent parent, who insists that "my child" must be without faults, and that the teacher who sees faults is an enemy, not a friend. It is seldom, indeed, that a man or a woman occupying the position of a teacher is prejudiced or has personal or selfish motives for criticising a child.

From Hide to Shoe

There are reasons—GOOD REASONS—why you should buy

Rouge Rex Shoes

FIRST. They are economical—not cheap, mind you—but economical in that they give more real wearing service to the dollar than any other make of shoes.

SECOND. They are comfortable. It is not necessary in order that a shoe may give service that it be made of stiff, hard leather that irritates and blisters the feet, and that cannot be made over respectable-looking lasts. The leather in our work shoes is as soft and pliable as buckskin, but tough as wrought iron, and Rouge Rex Shoes fit. They please from the day they are first put on until they are worn out.

'Get Into a Pair and See How They Wear.'

Look for the colored trade-mark (an Indian Head on a skin) on your dealer's shelves, and when you find it, ask to see the shoes. Note the mark well—an Indian Head on a skin. It is also stamped on the bottom of every shoe, and is a sure sign of quality. If you cannot find them at your dealer's, write us and we will tell you where you can get them.

Crippled by Tuberculosis.

According to a recent report by Dr. Conrad Biesalski of Berlin, there are 15,000 cripples in the German empire out of a population of 60,500,000. Over 50,000 of the cripples are in need of proper treatment. Doctor Biesalski states that in 15 per cent of the crippled examined, their deformity was due to tuberculosis of the bones and joints, and that there were 10,000 such children in great need of medical treatment. He advocates the establishment of seaside sanatoria for this latter class of cripples.

COFFEE CONGESTION Causes a Variety of Ails.

A happy old lady in Wisconsin says:

During the time I was a coffee drinker I was subject to sick headaches, sometimes lasting 2 or 3 days, totally unfitting me for anything.

To this affliction was added, some years ago, a trouble with my heart that was very painful, accompanied by a smothering sensation and faintness.

"Dyspepsia" also, came to make life harder to bear. I took all sorts of patent medicines but none of them helped me for any length of time.

The doctors frequently told me that coffee was not good for me; but without coffee I felt as if I had no breakfast. I finally decided about 2 years ago to abandon the use of coffee entirely, and as I had read a great deal about Postum I concluded to try that for a breakfast beverage.

"I liked the taste of it and was particularly pleased to notice that it did not come up as coffee used to. The bad spells with my heart grew less and less frequent, and finally ceased altogether, and I have not had an attack of sick headache for more than a year. My digestion is good, too, and I am thankful that I am once more a healthy woman. I know my wonderful restoration to health came from quitting coffee and using Postum." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason" and it is this. Coffee has a direct action on the liver with some people, and causes partial congestion of that organ, preventing the natural outlet of the secretions. Then may follow biliousness, sallow skin, headaches, constipation and finally a change of the blood corpuscles and nervous prostration.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pigs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one comes every day. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

UMPIRE'S GAY LIFE

ARBITRATOR IN "BUSH LEAGUE" HAS REAL JOYOUS TIME.

WAYS OF SOUTHERN JUSTICE

Pitcher Reagan's Run-in With the Umpire Almost Lands Him in Turpentine Camp—Nagging of Umpires is a Fine Art.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Amongst the gayest of gay lives is that of the "bush league" umpire. This is a tale of the joys of an umpire's existence, and of the ways of southern justice.

There is a pitcher, Reagan, we'll call him, who now is in another league. He is a spitball-pitcher and a little tight bundle of nerve and courage, with a temper that fits the Reagan exactly.

A season or so ago he was pitching for Mobile. A few days ago I met him, and back somewhere in the dim recesses of memory was the recollection that he had had some trouble down south.

"What was that row you had?" I asked.

"Say," he said, "wasn't that the rawest deal a fellow ever got?"

"I don't remember just what it was."

"Why, do you know, they threw me in jail down there, kept me in jail eight days, fined me $125 and were going to send me to the turpentine camp."

His voice quivered with indignation.

"What did you do?"

"Me? Nothing at all! Them southerners are down on a northern fellow. If it hadn't been that the old judge went away on his vacation and a young one took his place, I'd have been sent to the turpentine camp sure, to work a year!"

"But what did you do?"

"Me? Nothing. Just had a little run-in with the umpire. Then they dragged me off the field, tried to mob me, and threw me into jail."

His voice quivered again.

"But what did you do?" They couldn't do that for nothing."

"Say, you don't know them southerners. They'll do anything if they get sore on northerners."

"Tell me about it," I said, grinning.

"Well, it was this way. We were playing Gulfport, and I had them beaten 4 to 3 in the ninth inning.

There were two out and a man on first base and two strikes off the batter, so it looked as if the game was all over. That batter couldn't hit a fly against my spitball, and he knew it. I broke a spit ball right through the center of the plate, right across his belt, tho' not getting strike one yet saw, and that home of an umpire called it a ball."

"I didn't say much to him. I just told him he was a blank blank, linky blank blanky, and let it go at that.

I'd pitched that follow four spit balls, so I pretended I was going to pitch another, and then shot that last one right

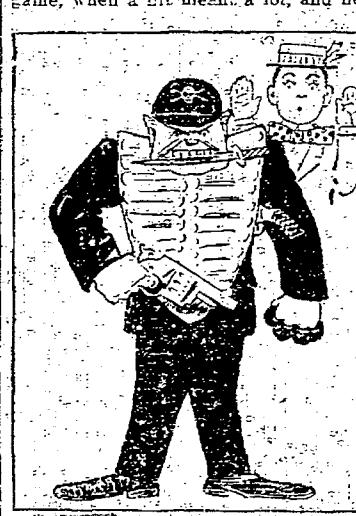

As the next morning and spent a couple of hours with him. He claimed the wager. Klem did not pay promptly, so for weeks every time Klem looked at him, Evers held up five fingers and locked the other way. He kept this up until Klem paid. Then he carried the five-dollar bill in his uniform and waved it at the umpire every chance he got. Finally that wore out and Evers began to look at Klem every time Klem came onto the field and at the same time he rubbed his throat with strong downward motions, insinuating that Klem's heart was coming into his mouth.

And yet they wonder that umpires get mad.

Patrick Henry Dougherty of the White Sox is such a quiet and undemonstrative ball player that most of the fans imagine he is indifferent as to the result of games. The fact is that it hurts him as much as anyone to lose.

He seldom kicks, but once he made a kick at Tim Hurst—whereby hangs this tale.

Patrick Henry was at bat late in the game, when a fly meant a lot, and he was anxious to deliver the safe drive. He played the pitcher out to the limit and with two strikes and three balls called, he sighted down the groove ready to spank the ball squarely between the seams. He saw the ball shoot five inches away from the corner of the plate, let it go and started to trot to first base. Imagine his surprise when Hurst said: "Strike three, you're out."

Dougherty was mad all the way through. He picked up his bat and remarked:

"First, you're a blank blank crook and a thief."

"Do you think that of me, Patrick Henry?" asked Hurst, in his snarly tones.

"Yes, you think plain blanket, plain blanket, plain blanket, I don't," spluttered Dougherty, wild with rage.

"It's you, god, Patrick Henry," remarked Hurst, in his softest and most sedate tones. "I wouldn't associate with persons of that character. Git on the ball, kid."

"I didn't say much to him. I just told him he was a blank blank, linky blank blanky, and let it go at that.

I'd pitched that follow four spit balls, so I pretended I was going to pitch another, and then shot that last one right

THOUGHT HIS TIME HAD COME

Exceedingly Disconcerting Experience of Singer in an English Music Hall.

Stage-fright of the sort that afflicted What? Chillicothe, at one time a prominent singer in English music halls, is not avoidable. Fortunately, also, it is not common. At a place where he was engaged in Birmingham, one of the attractions was a lion show, some of the beasts being really wild and untamed. Nearly the whole stage was taken up with the setting—the animal show.

"Just as I was going on," said Chillicothe, in telling the incident, "I heard a buried rush and confused shouting and some one slammed an iron gate. I heard a voice say: 'Just in time; he was nearly out.' My music was starting, so I had no time to inquire. I went on the stage.

In a moment I heard ominous growls and savage snarls mixed with much wail-cracking, and strenuous breathing. I am never fond of wild animal shows and I felt distinctly nervous that night. The cloth behind me sagged and swayed—and then, to my horror, suddenly in the wings I saw the huge head and front of a lion!

"I was singing a song called 'I Would,' which had a lot of short verses. As I sang them, my blood running cold, I watched the lion. It seemed slowly to advance and its beautiful eyes glittered in a truly horrible way. I could not go off that side without passing it, so I prepared to exit with haste.

"Turning, I was doubly horrified to see another lion on the other side!

I was caught like a mouse in a trap. I dared not go off the stage. I dared not show my discomfiture to the audience. There was only one thing for me to do—sing. So I sang in desperation, hoping that some one would come and take those lions away. They told me afterwards that I sang ninety-eight verses! But I regretted that was unkind."

Nagging umpires often gets to be a fine art. It requires an artist to get away with it. One of the reasons that the crowd always thinks the umpire is exceeding his authority when he chases an offending player off the field is that the player who really hurts the umpire's feelings is the nagger, who seldom does anything that amounts to much, but keeps at it. For instance, many spectators have criticised Klem for banishing Johnny Evers of the Cubs often, many times seemingly without cause. Evers seldom even speaks to Klem, yet Klem has put him out of games oftener than all other umpires combined.

I wondered how long it would take those two brutes to make up their minds to come into the full glare of the footlights, and I had just prepared to lean into the stalls, regardless of the consequences, when I heard the hoarse voice of one of the stage hands say: "Eré, Bill, these two chaps are too far forward. Give a and with them, will yer?" And coming up between the two lions, they lifted them bodily. They were paper-mache!
