COUNTING THE MAIL AND TIMING COUNT

ANOTHER GREAT IDEA SPROUTED AT WASHINGTON

Postmasters to Count Mail and Watch the Clocks Tick.

Postmaster Johnson and his chief assistant Tom Carrington are busy these May days counting mail and timing the counts.

The job is an enormous one. They must be in position at the end of the day to fill out a big white schedule furnished by the postmaster general's office. This requires the keeping of a record of the number of pieces of each sort of mail handled, and the time consumed in handling each variety.
There is first class mail, one kind;
second class mail, four kinds; third class mail, two kinds; fourth class mail, one kind; congressional mail, two kinds; other franked mail, two kinds; foreign mail, two kinds and registered mail, two kinds.

The carriers fill out daily blanks with the same subdivisions, showing the number of pieces of mail collected, the number delivered and the amount of time consumed in the work.

In addition to this, a record must be kept on the number of handlings each piece of mail receives before it reaches its destination.

This is probably another one of the fool things which annually sprout at Washington and for what and of what use no one ever seems to have found out but every post office in the U. S. will be busy with the idea during the month of May.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

[By Press Correspondent]

The Tea meeting at Mrs. Dingman's on Monday afternoon was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The All-Day Institute held in the Methodist church Friday of last week, was a success in so far as the program was concerned. The attendance was not as large as the meeting deserved owing to so much sickness in the village. Thanks are due the ladies of the Aid society, who kindly changed the date of their Arbor Day entertainment to give the
W. C. T. U. the use of the church.
The trustees of the church were equally generous, making no charges for its use.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the Baptist Ladies,
H. V. P. U. Sunday school, Phylans and all others, who so kindly remembered me with flowers and messages during my recent illness.

CORA L. SIOGA

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted at the death of my mother, also those who sent flowers and The King's Daughters.

MANY NOMINATIONS MADE

In The Record's Popular Voting Contest—Get In the Race—So Many Nice Presents Gives All a Chance.

The big prize voting contest announcement in these columns last week is creating more interest than we imagined it would at the beginning. Nominations of contestants are being sent to this office and soon there will be many who would be willing recipients of a fine $100 Oakland piano, or the other valuable prizes enumerated in this list.

All of these handsome prizes are enumerated in the announcement on another page, and will be given to some of the ladies of Northville and adjacent territory.

The question is: "How can I do it?" All that is necessary is to get your relatives and friends to trade with the merchants who are donating prizes. In this popular voting contest, for each $1.00 spent with the merchants you will receive 25 votes, which can be voted for any of the contestants. Also to get your friends to subscribe for The Record.
For each one year new subscription you will receive 600 votes, for each one year renewal 500, for each back subscription 500 votes. Of course it will be understood that under no circumstances are coupons issued by the merchants except upon cash purchases.

Voting can commence at any time in a ballot box which is placed in The Record office.

Use the free vote coupon in this issue. If you know of any lady who has not been nominated and whom you think would make a good race, use the nominating blank below and send her name to The Record office or bring it in person, and her name will be entered. It matters not if she is married or single.

Read the rules elsewhere in this issue or we will mail them upon request. Inspect the offerings of the merchants and learn how you may secure votes for yourself or friend.
Be sure to ask these merchants for coupons.

Those who do not understand the rules and regulations of this contest, can call at this office, or write us,
and we will be pleased to go over the proposition with them.

Get busy and vote for your choice.
This contest will be conducted squarely and no partiality will be shown to any one.

First count in contest will be made on May 30 at which time $10 in gold will be awarded to the contestant having the largest number of votes at that time.

DO IT NOW and help some, one reap the benefits of this liberal offer.
Remember that many of the merchants of Northville are interested in this contest and give a 25 vote coupon with each $1.00 cash purchase.

This is a contest between individuals and no lodge or other organization will be permitted to enter. This also means that no lady will be permitted to stand as the candidate of any particular organization, with the understanding that if she wins the piano or other prize is to go to that organization. Such an arrangement would be manifestly unfair to the other contestants. Any candidate so detected will be disqualified.

The following young ladies have already been nominated in this contest.

PICTURE OF PARTRIDGE LIFE

Little Birds Understood Their Mother's Warning Note and Obeyed Her at Once.

A few days ago while walking along a deep ditch beside a long disused road in soft sand and with noiseless step I came to a sort of screen of grapevine, peered through and saw a very attractive spectacle. There was a partridge and more than a dozen "little ones" something like a third grown. The mother was crouched in the warm sand with one wing spread and with her bill was preening her feathers while two little birds crept under the sufficed wing as if it were an umbrella. Some of the little fellows were dusting themselves scratching away with their feet and wriggling in the sand, as happy as a lot of English sparrows in a dusty street. One bird on tiptoe was chasing an insect and had the luck to get it while another on the fringe of the shrubbery was eating some seeds. The mother looked very proud indeed, and I thought it a very happy family.

I made no sound myself, but heard a little rustle in the bushes. How quickly the scene changed. But a few feet back of the mother there lay part of a broken white oak limb covered with lichen. The quail uttered a sharp note or two, turned her head, stood alert, and the birds, with two exceptions, ran to the sides of the fallen branch and crouched there, looking precisely like the limb and its lichen. There was not another motion and the mother and two of the birds which nestled under her were as still as if they had been frozen. When I took my eyes off that limb for an instant and then looked again it was hard to tell the birds from the wood. Nothing more happened and in a minute the mother gave quite a different note and the little quail came out again and resumed their sports. Forest and Stream.

Kaiser's Insult to a Courtier.
An incident very reminiscent of such pettiness was told to Tip the other day by an American just returned from Berlin. It seems one of the Kaiser's suite, a noble of high rank had incurred the imperial displeasure. The Kaiser did not wish to lose this gentleman's services, but apparently desired to humiliate him for the real or fancied offense. At one of the state dinners shortly afterward the noble was seated half a dozen places from his ruler. Beside him sat a woman of title, whom he had known from the time both could walk. The two conversed animatedly. Suddenly his imperial majesty turned forward and exclaimed in a harsh voice: "Prince it is not etiquette to flirt at my table." The man thus addressed rose to his feet and bowed low. The next day he resigned and retired to his country estate although it is well known he received a personal letter of apology from Wilhelm II.

To Burn Oil on Warships.
The naval authorities are much pleased with the success of the oil-burner equipment of the new forerunner of the fleet recently placed in commission, and the tentative designs of the navy of this class which congress will be asked to authorize will call for oil-burning apparatus for the generation of steam for the turbine engines. The latest battleships have provision for the auxiliary use of liquid fuel which is carried in the double bottoms, and probably those next to be designed will call for a more extensive use of this fuel. The authorities, however are not prepared for ships, depending entirely upon liquid fuel, on account of the fact that it is not so universally available at present as coal.

GOVERNOR RECALLS
EMPLOYMENT BILL

Osborn Signs Measure Which He Vetoed Last Week.

PROVISION OF THE LAW

This Will Be a Disappointment to Telegraph Companies, As They Cannot Employ Boys Under 18 Years After 10 P. M.

Lansing.—Governor Osborn has signed the labor bill regulating the employment of women and minors, which he had vetoed last week. The bill, accompanied by his veto message, had already been deposited with the secretary of the senate, but that official returned it upon request. Under the present law, work certificates for minors are issued by the state labor department or a probate judge, while the new law will cut out the labor department altogether and place the issuance of such certificates in the hands of superintendents of schools, or the county commissioners of schools, where there is no city superintendent and probate judges.

The action of the governor will be a distinct disappointment to the telegraph companies, as hereafter they will be prohibited from employing boys under eighteen years of age after ten o'clock at night, and they were expressing great joy when the governor attached his veto. The new law is of sufficient importance to warrant detailing the principal provisions, which are as follows:

Females are limited to 54 hours per week, and not more than nine in any one day.

No female under the age of eighteen years shall be employed in any manufacturing establishment between the hours of 6 o'clock p. m. and 6 o'clock a. m.

No child under the age of sixteen years shall be employed in any manufacturing establishment or workshop, or messenger service in this state between the hours of 6 o'clock a. m. and 6 o'clock p. m.

No child under the age of eighteen years shall be employed between the hours of 10 o'clock p. m. and 6 o'clock a. m. in the transportation of passengers in motor vehicles.

No child under the age of twenty-one years shall be employed, directly or indirectly, to work in any plant, concern, hall or place of amusement where intoxicating liquors are sold.

No child under fourteen years of age shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in or in connection with any mercantile institution, store, office, hotel, laundry, manufacturing establishment, mine, hawking alley, the for passenger or freight elevator, factory or workshop, telegraph or messenger service, within this state.

It shall be the duty of every employer, institution, store, office, hotel, laundry, manufacturing, or other establishment, mine, hawking alley, workshop, telegraph or messenger service, or any person coming within the provisions of this act, to keep a register in which will be recorded the name, birthplace, age and place of residence of every person employed under the age of sixteen years and it shall be unlawful for any such establishment or person to hire or employ or permit to work, any child under the age of sixteen years without there is first provided and placed on file in the business office thereof a permit issued by the superintendent of schools of the school district in which such child resides, or some one duly authorized by him in writing, or where there is no superintendent of school, by the county commissioner of schools or some one duly authorized by him in writing.

Gov. Osborn is out to break all known records for vetoing appropriation bills passed by a Michigan legislature, and he won't have any trouble establishing a high water mark. His purpose being to dispose of all bills without taking advantage of the five days after adjournment given him by the constitution, he had leaped off $137,005.02, bringing the total up to about $659,000.

There will probably be about $50,000 in dispute, because of the fact that the governor has exercised the right to reduce amounts as well as to strike out specific items, which is questioned and which the supreme court will be asked to pass on before the budget can be completed.

The Kalamazoo Normal was cut $85,000, including $60,000 for a new auditorium, $10,000 for furnishing the science building and the maintenance fund was reduced $15,000. It took a lot of work to get the house to provide $25,000 a year for the work of the public domain commission, and without any remorse the governor reduced it to $15,000 a year.

Women to Purify Politics.
That purity in politics cannot be hoped for until women are given the right to vote and the initiative, referendum and recall bill is passed by the legislature, was the declaration of Mrs. Feba Comstock of Albion, at the thirtieth annual convention of the Calhoun county W. C. T. U. at Carle Creek. Mrs. Comstock insisted that the liquor men are fighting woman's suffrage, realizing that if given voted, there would be state prohibition.

Military Act is Considered a Model.
Other states are displaying a great interest in the new act relative to the organization of the state militia. Requests have come from many states for copies of the act, almost all of them containing words of praise for the scheme of organization outlined in the act.

It is generally conceded that Michigan has led the way in abolishing unnecessary staff officers and reducing the department force to the minimum consistent with good service.

Jackson prison wanted a new well, new storehouse and laundry machinery, in all amounting to $63,721.13, which was all cut out. The board there also took $430.89 from the general fund to complete work on new boilers which were allowed by the last legislature, but the governor refused to allow it on the ground that juggling funds would not be tolerated.

From the Ionia asylum appropriation items aggregating $10,912 were cut, after which the chief executive allowed that he had made fair progress in reducing the size of the budget.

The governor also vetoed the bill authorizing the state board of health to appoint a bacteriologist, with necessary assistants, and to provide funds for equipping a bacteriological laboratory.

The holiday liquor bill met with no opposition from the governor and any member of the legislature desiring the same can secure the pen with which the governor attached his signature.

It allows the saloons to keep open on Washington, Lincoln and Columbus days and on primary days, after the polls are closed. It also specifically gives common councils the right to refuse bonds, which provision is in the present law, though not so clearly.

Both Sides Are Standing Fast.
The state board of auditors decided that, etiquette or no etiquette, Governor Osborn would have to communicate with the board, either in person or in writing, with reference to the employment of experts to appraise the mines of the state or there will be nothing doing in regard to the matter.

Members of the board made some caustic remarks with reference to the dignity assumed by the governor and to show that the board was simply following a long established precedent in asking the governor to appear before it. Land Commissioner Russell went through the records and found that since 1893 the various governors had appeared before the board on 78 different occasions without seeming to feel that they had belittled themselves in so doing.

"If I have anything to communicate to the board of auditors I shall be glad to do so," said Governor Osborn. "But this matter has nothing to do with communicating anything to them. It was to be a consultation between the governor, auditors and the tax assessors, and this office is the place for such a conference. What ever others may have done, I do not propose to be a messenger boy. I want it understood that I have no favor to ask of them for anyone, and therefore shall have no occasion to call on the board. All I will ask in that they do what is right."

It needs no great stretch of imagination to picture the chilly atmosphere that obtained when the auditors and the chief executive and the tax assessors promise to continue indefinitely.

Express Rates Well Regulated.
The express companies will not seek for regulation after that, as two bills were passed by the legislature placing them under the control of the railroad commission and fixing a schedule of rates. The tariff bill has already been signed by the governor and it established a merchandise schedule, based on 100 pounds weight, according to the distance carried, as follows:

Fifty miles, 50 cents; 75 miles 75 cents; 100 miles, 100 cents; 125 miles, 125 cents; 150 miles, 150 cents; 175 miles, 175 cents; 200 miles, 200 cents; 225 miles, 225 cents; 250 miles, 250 cents; 275 miles, 275 cents; 300 miles, 300 cents.

The Morarty-James bill, which the governor will sign as soon as it reaches him, makes a basic rate of 25 cents within the state for packages not exceeding five pounds in weight and $10 in value. Of special interest to Detroit is the additional proviso that the rate provided shall be in full for collecting and delivering packages within the limits of any municipality; the express companies have been charging extra to make deliveries outside of a certain zone.

When it reaches him Governor Osborn will sign the bill prohibiting fraternities and sororities in high schools of the state, though personally he is opposed to it and has decided to interpose his veto. His decision to let the bill stand is largely due to the widespread interest shown in the measure.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "there is absolutely no need for a secret society of any kind in this country."

Grangers Against Reciprocity Pact.
Within a week petitions containing the names of 30,000 Michigan Grangers will be sent to Senators William Alden Smith and Charles E. Townsend, at Washington, D. C., protesting against the passage of the Canadian reciprocity bill in the upper house of congress, according to a statement made here by N. P. Hull master of the state organization. State Master Hull presided over a called meeting of the legislative committee of the Grange.

Lansing.—Struck with amazement at the amount of copper exposed by a blast, Joseph J. Kestner, aged twenty-three, married, forgot the danger from the treacherous hanging wall while examining the ground brought down by the explosion, and were struck by falling rock and killed instantly in No. 16 shaft of the Calumet & Hecla mine.

Lapeer.—William Perkins an attendant in Cottage G at the Home for the Feeble-Minded, was seriously injured by Grover Henderson, an inmate twenty-eight years old, who slashed Perkins with a razor while temporarily insane. Perkins was shaving some of the inmates when Henderson grabbed the blade and ran the knife cross Perkins' cheek with a downward cut, nearly severing the jugular vein. Perkins weighs 200 pounds and is an athlete, but the cutting was done so quickly that he was caught unawares. He was immediately removed to the hospital, where 20 stitches were taken.

Grand Rapids.—O. H. L. Werne, president of the Macy company, has filed a communication with the police commission demanding that strike pickets be kept away from his company's property. He declares that should any violence result from the strike, the company will be held liable for all damages accruing. The strike situation in the city still remains very quiet and no settlements with any of the companies are in sight.

Battle Creek.—Deputy Sheriff Charles Corwin hates to miss a meal, even if duty is pressing. Hence, when Floyd Preston, alleged "bootlegger" for whom Corwin had a warrant, called at the Corwin domicile, just as dinner was about to be served, Corwin invited him to share it. As soon as the meal reached the "tooth pick stage" Corwin arrested his guest, and the pair came downtown to the bastille.

Midland.—While lighting a brush fire on Lee farm, thirteen miles west of this city Miss Maggie Coones, a widow, was fatally burned. In some manner the bare of her dress caught fire and before the flames could be extinguished she was terribly burned, dying about eight hours later. She leaves a daughter and son.

Saginaw Mrs. Mary Wendling, eighty-two years old, was seriously injured while watching some burning leaves and grass. She went to turn the fire which ignited her dress. Her face, arms and shoulders suffered the most. Owing to her advanced age the incident may prove serious.

Marquette.—The body of Etch A Erickson of Republic who went up the Michigan coast, died in a boat to get shore from a found by a searching party. He was sixty years old.

Traverse City.—Mabel Sells, two years old daughter of William Vale, died of a sudden fever. The nature of the disease was not discovered until a doctor was summoned.

Traverse City.—Frank E. Wilhelm, aged eighty-two is dead at his home here. He was born in Bohemia and came here more than fifty years ago with his parents.

Owosso.—Claude Tuttle, aged twenty, left his home in Vanstedt last November and was arrested by local officers while working with a cement gang near here. A Manistee officer came and took him home to answer to a charge preferred by a young girl.

Grand Rapids.—For the purpose of swinging Michigan farmers into a national movement that will give to the farmers of this country absolute control of the prices of their products, about fifty of the leading farmers from the western Michigan rural districts met here. With J. A. Everett of Indianapolis, president of the Farmers' Society of Equity, they perfected plans for a thorough organization in this state.

Cadillac.—Judge Lamb sentenced John Murphy to six years in the Marquette prison for knocking down and robbing Charles Miller a few weeks ago. STATE NEWS

Calumet.—Struck with amazement at the amount of copper exposed by a blast, Joseph J. Kestner, aged twenty-three, married, forgot the danger from the treacherous hanging wall while examining the ground brought down by the explosion, and were struck by falling rock and killed instantly in No. 16 shaft of the Calumet & Hecla mine.

Lapeer.—William Perkins an attendant in Cottage G at the Home for the Feeble-Minded, was seriously injured by Grover Henderson, an inmate twenty-eight years old, who slashed Perkins with a razor while temporarily insane. Perkins was shaving some of the inmates when Henderson grabbed the blade and ran the knife cross Perkins' cheek with a downward cut, nearly severing the jugular vein. Perkins weighs 200 pounds and is an athlete, but the cutting was done so quickly that he was caught unawares. He was immediately removed to the hospital, where 20 stitches were taken.

Grand Rapids.—O. H. L. Werne, president of the Macy company, has filed a communication with the police commission demanding that strike pickets be kept away from his company's property. He declares that should any violence result from the strike, the company will be held liable for all damages accruing. The strike situation in the city still remains very quiet and no settlements with any of the companies are in sight.

Battle Creek.—Deputy Sheriff Charles Corwin hates to miss a meal, even if duty is pressing. Hence, when Floyd Preston, alleged "bootlegger" for whom Corwin had a warrant, called at the Corwin domicile, just as dinner was about to be served, Corwin invited him to share it. As soon as the meal reached the "tooth pick stage" Corwin arrested his guest, and the pair came downtown to the bastille.

Midland.—While lighting a brush fire on Lee farm, thirteen miles west of this city Miss Maggie Coones, a widow, was fatally burned. In some manner the bare of her dress caught fire and before the flames could be extinguished she was terribly burned, dying about eight hours later. She leaves a daughter and son.

Saginaw Mrs. Mary Wendling, eighty-two years old, was seriously injured while watching some burning leaves and grass. She went to turn the fire which ignited her dress. Her face, arms and shoulders suffered the most. Owing to her advanced age the incident may prove serious.

Marquette.—The body of Etch A Erickson of Republic who went up the Michigan coast, died in a boat to get shore from a found by a searching party. He was sixty years old.

Traverse City.—Mabel Sells, two years old daughter of William Vale, died of a sudden fever. The nature of the disease was not discovered until a doctor was summoned.

Traverse City.—Frank E. Wilhelm, aged eighty-two is dead at his home here. He was born in Bohemia and came here more than fifty years ago with his parents.

Owosso.—Claude Tuttle, aged twenty, left his home in Vanstedt last November and was arrested by local officers while working with a cement gang near here. A Manistee officer came and took him home to answer to a charge preferred by a young girl.

Grand Rapids.—For the purpose of swinging Michigan farmers into a national movement that will give to the farmers of this country absolute control of the prices of their products, about fifty of the leading farmers from the western Michigan rural districts met here. With J. A. Everett of Indianapolis, president of the Farmers' Society of Equity, they perfected plans for a thorough organization in this state.

Cayley Wheeled Sharply Up into the Wind

CHAPTER I.

The Man With Wings.

For many hours—Cayley was too much of a god today to bother with the exact number of them—he had been flying slowly northward down a mild southerly breeze. Hundreds of feet below him was the dangerous, terrible expanse of the polar ice pack which surrounds the northern limits of the Arctic ocean in its impenetrable veil of mystery.

A compass, a sextant, a bottle of milk and a revolver completed, with the clothes he wore, and with the shimmering silken wings of his aeroplane, his whole equipment. His nearest base of supplies, if you could call it that, was a pound tin of pemmican, hidden upon a stone on the north coast of the island of Herald, 300 miles away. The United States rescue station at Point Barrow, the extreme northern point of Alaska, the place which he had called home for the past three months, was possibly half as far again away, somewhere off to the northeast.

But for these past weeks of an broken Arctic sunshine, he had fairly lived away. The earth had no obstructions and the air no perils. Today, with his great broad fan-tail drawn up arc-wise beneath him, his planes pitched slightly forward at the precise and perilous angle that only just did not send him plunging, head first, down upon the sullen masses of ice below, he lay there prone, upon the sheep-skin sleeping bag which padded the frame-work supporting his two wings, as secure as the great fulmar petrel which flew curiously near, and then, with a wheel and a plunge fled away, squawking.

For all practical purposes Cayley had learned to fly. The great fan-driven air ship, 100 feet from tip to tip, which had long lain idle on his ranch at Sandoval, would probably never leave its house again. It had done yeoman service. Without its powerful propellers, for the last resource, Cayley would never have been able to try the experiments and get the practise which had given him the air for his natural element. He had outgrown it. He had no more need of motors or whirling fans. The force of gravity, the force of the breeze and the perfectly co-ordinated muscles of his own body gave him all the power he needed now.

Perhaps the succeeding generations of humankind may develop an eye which can see ahead when the body is lying prone, as a bird lies in its flight. Cayley had remedied this deficiency with a little silver mirror, slightly concave, screwed fast to the crossbrace which supported his shoulders. Instead of bending back his head, or trying to see out through his eyebrows, he simply cast a backward glance into this mirror whenever he wanted to look on ahead. It had been a little perplexing at first, but he could see better in it now than with his unaided eyes.

And now, a minute or two, perhaps, after that fulmar had gone squawking away, he glanced down into his mirror, and his olympian calm was shaken with the shock of surprise. For what he saw clearly reflected in his little reducing glass, was a land. There was a mountain, and a long dark line that must be a cliff-like coast.

And it was land that never had been marked on any chart. In absolute degrees of latitude he was not, from the Arctic explorer's view, very far north. Over on the other side of the world they run excursion steamers every summer nearer to the pole than he was at this moment. Spitzbergen, which has had a permanent population of 15,000 souls, lies 300 miles farther north than this uncharted coast which Philip Cayley saw before him.

But the great ice cap which covers the top of the world is irregular in shape, and just here, northward from Alaska, it puts its impenetrable barrier between the land and the sea.

Rogers, Collinson and the ill-fated DeLong—they all had tried to penetrate this barrier, and had been turned back.

Cayley wheeled sharply up into the wind, and came to a halt at a height of perhaps a quarter of a mile. Then, with a long, shuddering, shivering cry, he descended, in the air of a great circle and hung, poised, over the land itself and behind the jutting shoulder of the mountain.

The land was a narrow, jagged peninsula. Mountains and cliffs protruded from the sea, the mountains east on the other side of it, but out a little way, to see he was amazed to discover open water, and the smoke-like vapor that he saw rising over the cliff made it evident that the opening extended nearly, if not quite, to the very land's edge. It was utterly unexpected, for the side of the peninsula which he had approached was ice-locked for miles.

He would have towered again above the rocky ridge which shut off his view, and gone to investigate this phenomenon at closer range, had he not, just then, got the shock of an other surprise, greater than the discovery of land itself. The little valley which he hung poised above was sheltered by a second ridge of rocky, ice-capped hills to the north, and, except for streaks, denoting crevices, here and there, was quite free from ice and snow. There were bright patches of green upon it, evidently some bit of flowering northern grass, and it was flecked here and there with bright bits of color, yellow poppy, he judged it to be, and saxifrage. Hugging the base of the mountain on the opposite side of the valley, then notching the cliff and grinding down to sea at the other side of it was a great white glacier, all the whiter, and colder, and more dazzling for its contrast with the brown mountain-side and the green-clad valley.

Up above the glacier, on the farther side, were great broad yellow patches, which he would have thought were poppy field, but for the impossibility of their growing in such a place. No vegetable growth was possible, he would have thought, against that clean-cut, almost vertical, rocky face. And yet, what else could have given it that blazing yellow color? Some day he was to learn the answer to that question.

But the thing that caught his eye now, that made him start and draw in a little involuntary gasp of wonder, was the sight of a little clump of black dots moving slowly, almost imperceptibly from this distance, across the face of the glacier. He blinked his eyes, as if he suspected them of playing him false. Unless they had played him false, these tiny dots were men.

All of the party—but one man, were dressed exactly alike, in hooded bearskin shirts and breeches, and boots of what he guessed was walrus hide. They moved along with the peculiar wary shuffle of men accustomed, by long habit, to the footing and to the heavy confining garb they wore. So far as he could see, they were unarmed.

The other man, was strikingly different. He appeared to be clad much as Cayley was himself, in leather, rather than in untanned hide. He seemed slighter, sprightlier, and in every way to convey the impression of having come more recently from the civilized, habitable portion of the world than his companions. He carried a rifle slung by a strap over his shoulder, evidently foreseeing no immediate use for it, and a flask.

Cayley was too far aloft for their conversation to be audible to him, but he could hear that they were talking. The leather-clad man appeared to be doing the most of it, and, from the inflection of his voice, he seemed to be speaking in English.

Presently he noticed that the leather-clad man had forged a little ahead of his companions, or, rather—like a flash, this idea occurred to Cayley—that the others were purposely lagging a little behind.

And then, before that sinister idea could formulate itself into a definite suspicion, his eyes widened with amazement, and the cry he would have uttered died in his throat; for this man, who had so innocently allowed the others to fall behind him, suddenly staggered, clutched at something—it looked like a thin ivory dart—that had transfixed his throat, tugged it out in a sudden flood of crimson, reeled a little and then went backwards, over the glassy edge of a fissure in the ice which lay just to the left of the path where he had been walking.

From the instant when Cayley had noticed the others dropping behind, to the last glimpse he had of the body of the murdered man could hardly have been five seconds.

The instant the murdered man disappeared, another, who had not previously been with the party, it seemed, appeared from behind a hummock of ice. There could be no doubt, either that he was the assassin, or that he was the commander of the little group of skin-clad figures that remained.

Perfectly deliberate. There had been no outcry, not even a gasp of surprise or of remonstrance.

Cayley looked at the assassin and only. He was dressed exactly like the others but seemed very much bigger; he used to walk with legs of a slouch, and had, even to Cayley's limited view of him, an air of authority. Cayley was surprised at his not being armed with a bow, for he knew of no other way in which a dart could have been propelled with power enough, even at close range, to have transfixed a man's throat. The assassin's only weapon, except for a quiverful of extra darts, seemed to be a short blunt stick, rudely whittled, perhaps ten inches long.

Obedient, apparently, to the order of the new arrival the party changed its direction, leaving what was—judged a well known path to them, for a seemingly more direct but rougher route. And they moved now with an appearance of haste. Presently they scrambled over a precipitous ledge of ice and, in a moment, were lost to Cayley's view.

The world was suddenly empty again, as if no living foot had ever trodden it; and Cayley, hovering there, a little above the level of the ice, rubbed his eyes and wondered whether the singular, silent tragedy he had just witnessed were real, or a trick the mysterious Arctic light had played upon his tired eyes. But there remained upon that vacant scene two material reminders of the tragedy to which it had afforded a setting. One was smudge of crimson on the snow; the other, a little distance off, just this side of the icy ridge over which the last of the party had gone scrambling a moment before, was the strange-looking blunt stick which he had seen in the assassin's hand.

Cayley flew a little lower, his wings almost skimming the ice. Finally, reaching the spot where the thing had fallen, he alighted and picked it up. Whether its possessor had valued it, or not, whether or not he might be expected to return for it, Cayley did not know, and did not much care.

He stood for some time turning the thing over in his hands, puzzling over it, trying to make out how it could have been used as the instrument of propulsion to that deadly ivory dart. There was a groove on one side of it, with a small ivory plug at the end. The other end was curiously shaped, misshapen, rather, for, though it was obviously the end one held, Cayley could not make it at his hand, whatever position he held it in.

Giving up the problem at last, he tucked the stick into his belt, slipped his arm through the strap in the frame-work of his aeroplane and prepared for flight. He had a little difficulty getting up, owing to the absence of a breeze at this point. Finally he was obliged to climb, with a good deal of labor, the icy ridge up which he had watched the little party of murderers scrambling.

At the crest he cast a glance around, looking for them; but saw no signs of them. Then, getting a favorable slant of the wind, he mounted again into the element he now called his own.

Five years before Philip Cayley would have passed for a good example of that type of clean-limbed, clear-minded, capable young man which the best of our civilization seems to be flowering into. Physically, it would have been hard to suggest an improvement in him; he approached so near the ideal standards. He was fine grained, supple, slender, small-jointed, thoroughbred from head to heel.

Intellectually, he had been good enough to go through the academy at West Point with credit, and to graduate high enough in his class to be assigned to service in the cavalry. His standards of conduct, his ideas of honor and morality had been about the same as those of the best third of his classmates. If his fellow officers in the Philippines, during the year or two he spent in the service, had been asked to pick a flaw in him, which they would have been reluctant to do, they would have said that he seemed to them a bit too thin-skinned and rather fastidious; that was what his chum and only intimate friend, Perry Hunter, said about him at any rate.

But he could afford to be fastidious, for he had about all a man could want, one would think. For three generations they had taken wealth for granted in the Cayley family, and with it had come breeding, security of social position, simplicity and ease in making friends, both among men and women. In short, there could be no doubt at all that up to his twenty-ninth year Fate had been ironically kind to Philip Cayley. She had given him no hint, no preparation for the stunning blow that was to fall upon him, suddenly, out of so clear a sky.

When it did fall, it cut his life clean across, so that when he thought back to that time now, it seemed to him that the Lieutenant Cayley of the United States army had died over there in the Philippines, and that he, the man who was now soaring in those great circles through the Arctic sky, was a chance inheritor of his name.

He had not on one day at the head of a small scouting party, the best man in the regiment, secure in the respect in the almost fatherly regard of his colonel, proudly conscious of the almost illustrious attribution of his name and the courage officers he had gone out believing that no one ever knew a true friend than he possessed in Perry Hunter, his chum and West Point, his fellow officer in the regiment, the confident of all his hopes and ideas.

He had come back, after a fortnight's absence, to find his name smugged with disgrace, himself judged and condemned unworthy the position of the mess. And that was not the worst of it. The same blow which had deprived him of the regard of the only people in the world who mattered to him, destroyed, also, root and branch, his affection for the one man of whom he had made an intimate. The only feeling that it would be possible for him to entertain for Perry Hunter again must be a half-pitying, half-incertidulous contempt. And if that was his feeling for the man he had trusted most and loved the most deeply, what must be for the rest of humankind? What did it matter what they thought of him or what they did to him? All he wanted of human society was to escape from it.

He fell to wondering, as he hung, suspended, over that rosy expanse of fleecy fog, whether, were the thing to do over again, he would act as he had acted five years ago, whether he would content himself with a single disdainful denial of the monstrous thing they charged him with, whether he would resign again, under fire, and go away, leaving his tarnished name for the daws to peck at.

Heretofore he had always answered that question with a fierce affirmative. Today it left him wondering. Had he staved, had he paid the price that would have been necessary to clear himself, he would never have found his wings, so much was clear. He would never have spent those four years in the wilderness, working, experimenting, taking his life in his hands, day after day, while he mastered the art that no man had ever mastered before.

He had set himself this task because it was the only one he knew that did not involve contact with his fellow-beings. He must have something that he could work at alone. Work and solitude were two things that he had felt an overmastering craving for. And the possibility he had faced with a light heart every morning—the possibility of a sudden and violent death before night, had been no more to him than an agreeable spice to the day's work.

It was not until he had actually learned to fly, had literally shaken the dust of the earth from his feet and taken to the sky as his abode, that his wound had healed. The three months that he had spent in this upper Arctic air, a wing for 16 hours out of 24, had calmed him, put his nerves in tune again; given him, for men and their affairs, a quiet indifference, in place of the smarting contempt he had been hugging to his breast before. Three months ago, at sight of those little human dots crossing the glacier, he would have wheeled aloft and gone sailing away. Even a month ago he would hardly have hung, soaring there, above the fog, waiting for it to lift again the veil of mystery which it had drawn across the tragic scene he had just witnessed.

The month was August, and the long Arctic day had already begun to know its diurnal twilight. A fort night ago the sun had dipped for the first time below the horizon. By now there were four or five hours, out of every 24 that were darkness for night. The sun set while he hung there in the air, and as night fell a new slant of the breeze the fog rolled itself up into a great violet cloud, leaving the earth, the ice, the sea, the valley below him. And there, in the open water of the little bay, he saw a ship, and on the shore a cluster of buildings.

It struck him, even from his height at which he hovered, that the ship, tied to an ice floe in the shelter of the great headland, did not look like a whaler, nor like the sort of craft which an Arctic explorer would have selected for his purposes. It had more the trim of a man-of-war.

They were probably all asleep down there he reflected. It was nearly midnight and he saw no signs of life anywhere. He would drop down for a nearer look.

He descended with a sudden hawk-like pounce, which was one of his more recent achievements in the navigation of the air, checked himself again at about the level of the mast-head, with a flashing, forward swoop, like a man diving in shallow water, then, with a sudden effort, brought himself up standing, his planes nearly vertical, and, with a backward spring, alighted, clear of his wings, on the ice floe just opposite the ship.

As he did so, he heard a little surprised cry, half of fear, half of astonishment. It was a girl's voice.

CHAPTER II.

The Girl on the Ice Floe.

She stood there on the ice confronting him, not ten feet away, and at sight of her Philip Cayley's eyes widened. "What in the world," he gasped, "then stared at her speechless."

She was clad, down to the knees, in sealskin, and below its edge he could see the tops of her small fur-trimmed boots. Upon her head she wore a little turban-like cap of seal. The smartly tailored lines of the coat emphasized her young slenderness. Her bootmaker must have had a reputation upon some metropolitan boulevard, and her head-gear came clearly under the category of what is known as modes. Her eyes were very blue and her hair was golden, warmed, he thought, as she stood there in the orange twilight, with a hint of red.

Cayley gasped again, as he took in the details of this vision. Then collected himself. "I beg your pardon," he stammered. "I don't mean to be rudely inquisitive, but what, in the world, is a person like you doing in this part of it—that is, if you are real at all." This is latitude 76, and no cartographer who ever lived has put that coast-line yonder into his maps. Yet here, in this nameless bay, I find a yacht, and on this ice floe, in the twilight, you."

She shook her head a little impatiently, and blinked her eyes, as if to clear them of a vision. "Of course," she said, "I know I've fallen asleep, and this is a dream of mine, but even for a dream, aren't you a little unreasonable? Yachts are a natural mode of conveyance across the ocean. You find them in many bays—sometimes in nameless ones—and they always have people on them. But you—you come wheeling down, out of a night sky, like some great nocturnal bird, and alight here on the fog beside me. And then you charge yourself into a man and look at me in surprise, and ask me, in English, what in the world I am doing here—I had the yacht; and ask me if I'm real."

There was a moment of silence after that. "Unconsciously they drew a little nearer together. Then Cayley spoke. 'I'm real, at any rate,' he said, 'at least I'm a lay payer, and I weigh 160 pounds, and I have a name and address. It's Philip Cayley, if that will make me seem more natural, and my headquarters this summer are over on Point Barrow.'"

"I'm not dreaming then," he asked doubtfully.

"No," he said, "if only of me. In dreaming it's not you. May I tell you my name and tell you for what?"

Her eyes were on the horizon again, glancing places which lay on the ice behind him. She seemed hardly to have heard his question though she answered it with an abrupt voiceless "Yes." Then she approached, half fearfully, the thing he called his "yacht."

It is made of quite commonplace materials," he said with a smile—split bamboo and carbon and eugenol and a fabric of bladders, cemented with fish glue. And feeling it up is rather an unromantic job. The birds still have the advantage of us there. In a strong wind it's not very easy to do without damaging something. Would you mind stepping that point for me—that one right by your hand? It's just like a fishing rod."

She did as he asked, and her smile convinced him that she had at least half-guessed his purpose in asking the service of her. The next moment her words confirmed it.

"You wanted me to make sure, I suppose, that it would not turn into a great roc when I touched it and fly away with me to the Valley of Diamonds." She patted the furled wing gently with both hands. "I suppose," she continued, "one could dream as vividly as this, although I never have—unless, of course, this is a dream. But—now see held out her hand to him, "but I hope I am awake. And my name is Jeanne Fielding."

He had the hand in his, and noticed how live and strong and warm it was, before she pronounced her name. At the sound of it, he glanced at her curiously; but all he said just then was, "Thank you," and busied himself immediately with completing the process of furling his wings.

When he had finished he tossed the sheepskin down in a little hollow in the floe, and with a gesture invited her to be seated.

"Oh I've a great pile of bear skins out here," she said, "quite a ridiculous pile of them, considering it is not a cold night; and we can make ourselves comfortable here or go aboard the yacht, just as you please."

They were seated side-by-side in the little nest she had made for herself, before he reverted to the idea which had sprung up in his mind upon hearing her name. "There was a 'Captain Fielding,' once," he said slowly, "who set out from San Francisco half a dozen years ago, in the hope of discovering the pole by the way of Behring strait. His ship was never seen again, nor was any word received from him. Finding you here and bearing your name, I wondered—"

"Yes," she said gravely, "he was my father. We got news of him last winter, if you could call it news, for it was four years old before it reached us. A whaler in the Arctic fleet picked up a floating bottle with a message from him telling where he was. So we have come here to find him—at least to find where he died, for I suppose there is no hope—never so much as a grain of hope of anything better."

Can't be Separated

Some Northville People Have Learned How to Get Rid of Both.

Backache and kidney ache are twin brothers. You can't get rid of the backache until you cure the kidney ache. If the kidneys are well and strong, the rest of the system is pretty sure to be in vigorous health. Doan's Kidney Pills make strong, healthy kidneys. Mrs. William Cole, Horton Ave., Northville, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and found them to be a splendid remedy for kidney trouble. About a year ago I suffered from backache and pains in my kidneys and I was greatly annoyed by a difficulty with the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally procured from Murdock Bros. Drug Store and after I had used two boxes, the backache ceased and my kidneys gave me no further trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills have also been very beneficial to another member of the family." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

NORTHVILLE.

The City in Brief.

Ed. Masters is still confined to the house with cramps.
Miss Marvel Lewis is the new clerk in Mr. Pinckney's store.
Miss Ethel Shafer has been engaged to teach in the Farmington school another year.
The council has voted to raise $7,500 by tax this year, the same amount as last year.
There are two extremely dangerous bridges on the Redford cement built road in that township.
Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, who have lived here the past few years, are soon to move to Monroe.
Miss Emaline Lapham, who has been nursing in Pontiac, the past four weeks, has returned home.
Richard B. Waterman, a former resident of Northville is seriously ill with pneumonia at Mt. Pleasant.
Henry James has been quite sick with quinsy but is getting along nicely under the care of Dr. Henry.
Geo. Groth, who worked for some time in the Plymouth shops, is now learning to be a motorman on the D. C. R.
Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Y. Blackwood of Battle Creek, formerly of this place, a daughter, Margaret Helen, April 28.
A number of the little girls of the village gladdened many homes Monday night with cute little home made baskets of May flowers.
Paul E. Sheppard of West Virginia is the new appointee at the U. S. fish station and expects to make Northville his future home.
A pleasant surprise was given Mrs. J. A. Hull at her home Wednesday evening in honor of her birthday. Everyone had a most enjoyable time.
Regular Convention Myrtle Lodge No. 100 K. of P. will be held Tuesday evening, May 9th. Work let and 3rd Rank. Plymouth Lodge confers the 3rd.
The Northville Driving club will make a new entrance to the grounds from Center street and would like all the goal ashes about town drawn to this point.
O. S. Harger, P. B. Barley and the Elmer have greatly improved the appearance of their property on north center street by having a cement curbing built.
Through the efforts of L. L. Brooks, B. A. Northrup, Mat Green and others, the race course grounds have been needed stables and a new railing along the north side of the track.
Mr. Burrows has done a nice job of cement floor work in Catherine's agricultural building. The rear end with its big slanting drain will be used for auto washing. This is the largest floor job ever put down in Northville.
Most every man in town donated a fence post this week to be planted along the race course to which will be grown a good wire fence to keep people off the track while the horses are skating around at a mile a minute clip.
After telling the working men how much cheaper he will buy eggs under a reciprocity law, the news now comes from Washington that Canada imports from this country 600,000 and then a few odd dozen eggs each year under the present law and therefore under the reciprocity act U. S. eggs will advance in price and the U. S. farmers in consequence will reap a benefit of two or three cents a dozen. Great, isn't it?
C. C. Yerkes' hired man has resurrected a Cleveland bicycle that Clem has had stored up in the barn for fourteen years and the inner tubes and the outer tires proved to be in as good condition as when they were put away. Must have had good rubber in those days.
The members of the council took no official action Monday night on the question of the nine gambling slot machines in the village. This evidently means that the trustees believe it is up to the village president as to whether the laws are enforced.
Deputy Registrar Cass Benton is writing a book on "How to Turn an Auto in a Two-Acre Lot Without Balking," and another one on "How to Start a Car that Has Stopped." Cass says autos are alright as long as they keep going but when they don't keep at it, it's like some general said war was.

"The proprietor of a restaurant I went into asked me to sit near the window. Said it would lend tone to his place."

It Was Muffling.
"Bigs-Raymond, the handsome and brilliant pitcher of the New York Giants, is a great wit on the field," said a sporting editor at the Pen and Pencil club in Philadelphia.

"Raymond was disgusted one day at his team's wretched outfielding. After after batter sent up high flies, and these easy balls were muffed alternately by left and center."

"Bugs at the sixth muffed threw down his glove and stamped on it."
"There's an epidemic in the outfield," he said, but, by Jingo! It isn't catching!"

A WIDOW'S LUCK
Quit the Thing-That Was Slowly Injuring Her.

A woman tells how coffee kept her from insuring her life.
"I suffered for many years chiefly from trouble with my heart, with severe nervous headaches and neuralgia; but although incapacitated at times for my housework, I did not realize the gravity of my condition until I was rejected for life insurance, because, the examining physician said, my heart was so bad he could not pass me."

"This distressed me very much, as I was a widow and had a child dependent upon me. It was to protect her future that I wanted to insure my life."

"Fortunately for me, I happened to read an advertisement containing a testimonial from a man who had been affected in the same way that I was with heart trouble, and who was benefited by leaving off coffee and using Postum. I grasped at the hope this held out, and made the change at once."

"My health began to improve immediately. The headaches and neuralgia disappeared. I gained in flesh, and my appetite came back to me. 'Greatest of all, my heart was strengthened from the beginning, and soon all the distressing symptoms passed away. No more waking up in the night with my heart trying to fly out of my mouth!'"

"Then I again made application for life insurance, and had no trouble in passing the medical examination."
"It was seven years ago that I began to use Postum and I am using it still, and shall continue to do so, as I find it a guarantee of good health."

COURTS TO TEST OSBORN VETO

SUE GOVERNOR OSBORN TO DECIDE IF HE CAN SLASH APPROPRIATIONS.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL KUHN WILL TAKE UP MATTER IN SUIT.

Exact Procedure Has Not Been Determined Upon; Action Will Be Brought by Some of the State Institutions.

The right of Gov. Osborn to reduce specific items in appropriation bills is to be tested in the courts.

Immediately after the final adjournment, Attorney General Kuhn will take up the matter and a friendly suit will be started.

The exact procedure has not been determined upon as yet, but the action will be brought by some of the state institutions, whose appropriations have been affected by the ready veto pen of the governor.

All Lansing is on edge as to what Gov. Osborn intends to do after the close of the session. So far as can be learned his excellency will be busy for several days clearing up the bill slate, and then he is going after a few scorpions.

Home Protectors to Get 50 Per Cent.

According to the statement made by Horace G. Snover, receiver for the defunct United Home Protectors' fraternity, the affairs of that institution will be in such shape within a few weeks that another dividend of 10 per cent will be declared to the creditors. Already three 10 per cent dividends have been declared, the first one in March, 1909, one year after the matter was placed in the hands of the receiver. The second one followed about six months afterwards, and the third one year ago.

Mr. Snover believes that the creditors will realize about 50 cents on the dollar, and that one more 10 per cent dividend will be declared, besides the one which is about to be given.

D. B. C. & M. Railway Wins Suit.

A jury of the Fresno, Calif., county court has agreed, after hearing testimony and arguments from both sides for a week at a trial in Oranay, that the Detroit, Bay City & Mackinac railroad used all reasonable precautions to avoid the horrible disaster during the forest fires in the fall of 1908, when 16 women and children were burned to death in one of its steel gondola cars. Therefore the company is not liable for damages to the families of the lost families.

VERY FEW APPROPRIATIONS GOT THROUGH WITHOUT TRIMMING.

As His Final Act the Governor Signed the Bill Making a Straight Two-Cent Fare Rate on all Railroads of the State.

Of the 246 bills passed by the legislature, the governor vetoed 31 outright and 18 partially, all of the latter being appropriations. As a matter of fact, very few appropriations got through without being trimmed, the most notable exception being the $500,000 allowed for state reward good roads.

The round numbers the governor has cut $780,000 out of the budget as allowed by the legislature, which will reduce it to about $11,500,000.

The last several bills which were submitted to the governor were important. He wound up by attaching his signature to the bill making a straight two-cent fare on all railroads in the state, so that after August 1 the upper peninsula roads will have to reduce their fares unless they decide to attack the law on the ground that the rate is confiscatory.

Senator Wilkins's bill amending the general game laws met with approval. The governor signed the Flowers general primary bill, so that hereafter primary candidates must receive 15 per cent of their party vote in order to get their names on the election ballot, and the Moriarty-James bill regulating express rates on small packages, the basic rate being 25 cents for packages not exceeding $5 in value and 10 pounds in weight, which rate includes collecting and delivery.

The James-Moriarty bill was strong opposition by the state railroad commission and Gov. Osborn in signing that bill took occasion to reprimand the commission because it saw fit to oppose it. He was particularly severe toward Chairman Glasgow because of the latter's argument against the bill although the governor had asked Glasgow for an opinion on the bill. The opinion was given merely in reply to the governor's request.

In comment Gov. Osborn referred to Glasgow as working only for the express companies, whereas "I am the champion of the people," added the governor.

That Tired Feeling

That comes to you every spring is a sign that your blood is wanting in vitality, just as pimples and other eruptions are signs that it is impure. Do not delay treatment; begin at once to take

Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effects its wonderful cures, not simply because it contains sarsaparilla, but because it combines the utmost remedial values of twenty different ingredients, raised to their highest efficiency for the cure of all spring troubles, that tired feeling and loss of appetite. There is no real substitute; insist on having

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I felt tired all the time and could not sleep, nights. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a little while I could sleep well and the tired feeling had gone. This great medicine has also cured me of scrofula, which had troubled me from childhood." Mrs. C. M. Root, Box 25, Gilead, Conn.

DIDN'T CARE TO BE DONE.

Not Exactly Patriotic.

He was, let us say, Irish, was among several men of other nationalities, and had imbibed several beverages. He was extremely anxious, moreover, to uphold the glories of Erin, but was not quite so sure of what was going on about him. A foreigner near him remarked:

"An honest man is the noblest work of God."

The Hibernian didn't quite catch what was said:

"Get out!—an Irishman is!" he roared.

It Might Help.

"My wife used to meet me at the door every night when I got home from work."

"Doesn't she do it any more?"

"No, never."

"Why not try taking home a little check to her two or three times a week?"

Hot power. I'm glad that I'm not in his power.

CURE THAT CATARRH

Our climate with its sudden changes is conducive to catarrh—which is a chronic inflammation of the mucous membrane surface of head—nose or throat.

One month's local treatment with Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic will convince the most skeptical that Paxtine is not a palliative but a specific for all catarrhal conditions.

Paxtine is a perfectly harmless antiseptic and germicide in powder form which contains all of the antiseptic qualities of liquid antiseptics; but with other valuable cleansing, germicidal, and healing ingredients added.

Just a little in a glass of water as needed—used as a spray and gargle, will not only remove the accumulated secretions, but heals the inflammation, destroys the germs of disease, and dispels the disagreeable odor caused by chronic catarrh.
