ANNUAL JUNIOR BANQUET TO-NIGHT

THE CLASS OF '12 WILL DO HONOR TO THE SENIORS.

St. Elmo Lewis of Detroit will be the Principal Speaker.

The Juniors of the Northville High school will honor the Seniors in Princess Rink tonight, with the annual banquet which the likes have been so interesting and toothsome in past years.

St. Elmo Lewis, advertising manager for the Burroughs Adding Machine company of Detroit, will be the principal speaker. Mr. Lewis is an orator as well as an expert business man, and he will give Northville students a talk that will be out of the ordinary and of special interest.

The committee is endeavoring to secure the services of Hugh Chalmers for the Commencement address.

DEATH SUNDAY OF MISS CELIA KATOR

Been Ill With Heart Trouble Many Months.

Died at her residence on Yerkes avenue, Sunday, May 14, Miss Celia Kator, after a long illness of heart trouble.

Miss Kator was born in the township of Livonia, Wayne county, April 1, 1854, and, with the exception of the twenty three years spent in Northville, had lived all her life in that township. She lived an exemplary Christian life and was a consistent member of the Northville Baptist church since 1885. All through her long illness, she manifested Christian faith and fortitude. She was loved by all who knew her. She leaves one brother, a sister, a niece and nephew, besides many friends to mourn her departure.

The funeral was conducted from her late residence by Rev. T. J.

Murdock Wednesday and the remains were laid to rest in Rural Hill cemetery.

Memorial Day Exercises

Appropriate services will be held by the G. A. R. and W. R. C. on Tuesday, May 30th. Hon. Philip T. VanZile of Detroit will deliver the address. Union services will be held in the Baptist church Monday evening, May 28. Further particulars next week.

Methodist Church Notes

(By the Pastor.)
Sunday evening subject: "No Room in the Inn."

Communion will be observed in our church this Sunday at the morning service. Reception for new members will be held.

Our Sabbath school will hold "Decision Day" at the regular school hour. The pastor would be glad to speak about this important matter with any of the scholars and parents.

Baptist Church Notes

(By the Pastor.)

You will be made welcome at any of the services.

All who have plans to donate for church flower beds, please bring them next Thursday evening.

"Mothers' Day" was a decided success. The pastor desires to thank the ladies for the beautiful flowers.

The pastor will discourse upon the following subjects on Sunday: In the morning, "The Disciple who Quit His Job." In the evening, "Behind the Bloods."

Presbyterian Church Notes

(By the Pastor.)

The usual services will be held during the pastor's absence at the General Assembly. Next Sunday Rev. G. D. Sherman of South Lyon will preach.

Beautiful carnations, the gift of a generous friend, graced the pulpit last Sunday, in memory of Mothers' Day.

Interest Increasing In Voting Contest

Inquiries About Working and Voting--Who Will Get the $10.00 Gold Piece--Beautiful Piano and Other Valuable Prizes Will Gladden Hearts of Workers--Contestants Are Hustling.

Judging from the interest that has been manifested in the great prize voting contest so far, there is going to be a great scramble for the $10 in gold which will be given to the contestant having the largest number of votes on May 30. The special prize is worth winning and the contestants realize the fact.

That the contest is a success is an assured fact. There has never been a contest in this locality where more or better prizes have been offered or where there was more strict adherence, justice and equity to all the participants. The Record desires to emphasize the point that every contestant will be accorded an absolutely fair deal.

The names of the judges of the contest will be announced soon. Bear in mind merchants are giving coupons with every dollar's purchase. When you trade at these stores be sure and ask for coupons. Every one little piece of paper bearing twenty five votes may win for some friend of yours the beautiful $400 Oakland piano.

Get your friends to subscribe for The Record. For each one year new subscription you will receive 600 votes, for each one year renewal 500. For each back subscription 400 votes. There are already a large list of contestants, but there is an opportunity to nominate others. Fill out the nominating blank and send it to this office. Also cut out the free vote coupon and cast it for your favorite. In order that every contestant may fully understand the votes of this contest The Record wishes to state that the contestant having the largest number of votes during the contest will be awarded the piano as first prize, the one having the next largest number of votes will have first choice of the other prizes. The third largest will have her choice of the remaining prizes and so on until all the prizes have been distributed.

Use the free coupon in this issue. If you know of any lady who has not been nominated whom you think would make a good race, use the nominating blank in this issue and send her name to this office or bring it in person and it will be entered. It matters not if she is married or single. This is a popular voting contest—not necessarily a "young lady" voting contest. Read the rules and regulations on another page and govern yourself accordingly. Some one is going to receive these prizes and you can help decide who it will be.

First count in contest will be May 30 at which time $10 in gold will be awarded to the contestant receiving the largest number of votes.

Get busy and vote for your choice. The contest will be conducted squarely and no partiality shown to anyone. Do it now and help some one reap the benefits of this liberal offer.

These are the names of the contestants who have been nominated. They are authorized to accept money for subscriptions to The Record and a receipt therefor:

SYNOPSIS.

Philip Cayley, accused of a crime of which he is not guilty, resigns from the army in disgrace and his affection for his friend, Lieut. Perry Hunter, turns to hatred. Cayley seeks solitude, where he perfects a flying machine. While soaring over the Arctic regions, he picks up a curiously shaped stick he had seen in the assassin's hand. Mounting again, he discovers a yacht anchored in the bay. Descending near the steamer, he meets a girl on an ice-floe. He learns that the girl's name is Jeanne Fielding and that the yacht has come north to seek signs of her father, Captain Fielding, an arctic explorer.

Cayley could not contradict her, and he saw there was little need of trying to do so. She had spoken simply, and very gravely, but it was evident the years had not taken the sting out of her grief.

"He told you where he was?" he asked.

"Oh, quite exactly," she told him; "he gave us latitude and longitude, and mapped the coast-line. So you were wrong, you see, in what you said about cartographers. And he gave us the route by which with reasonable fortune, we might find open water. We had good fortune and we got there safely, but, of course, we were too late. The hut on the shore there is deserted. We have seen no signs of life at all. The men have gone ashore to search, and there is to be a gun-fire if they find anyone alive. But they have been out all day and there has been no sound. You will understand, I think, though, why I did not want to sleep tonight in my cabin in the yacht, why the ice and the dome of stars seemed better."

"Yes," he said, "I understand." Presently, after a moment's musing, he added, "What seems strange to me, incomprehensible altogether, is that men like your father, and so many others, should risk and lose their lives trying to reach the pole."

"You can't understand that," she questioned surprised, "you, a man with wings?"

"I suppose it's because of the wings," he answered her. "I slept there once, early this summer—slept, and rested, and ate a meal."

"There—no, you didn't!" she cried.

"Where do you mean?"

"At the pole, or within a half degree of it—I won't guarantee my lunatic mind, but my bit and mine observations may more accurately than that—and it seemed a poor place to pick one's life trying to reach. Just the ice-pack, the eternal ice-pack, nothing but that!" Then his eyes lighted a little. "But I should like to go there some time, in the winter—should like to fly straight ahead, for hours and hours, through the long dark, until I could see the North Star squarely above my head in the zenith, the center of all the universe. That would be a sight worth having. I should think. Some day, perhaps, I shall try for it. And then one could go straight on across—a week or ten days would do it all—from Dawson City, say, to St. Petersburg."

"Dawson City to St. Petersburg?" she repeated; "only a creature of wings could put those two cities in the same sentence, even in imagination. And even with you it must be imaginary. You couldn't do it, really—could you?"

"Yes," he said; "I could do it."

"You're tireless, then?" she asked.

"You would go on flying, flying, without rest, for a week?"

"I don't fly," he told her, "or hardly at all. The birds don't fly, not these great sea birds that live on the wings. They sail, so do I."

"But, then, don't you have to go with the wind?"

"You've sailed a boat, haven't you?" he asked by way of answer. "You put up a sail to catch the breeze, and then you make it force your boat right up into it; make your boat go against the wind, by the force of the wind itself. That was regarded as a miracle once when men first did it."

"Of course," she admitted, "but you do that by tacking."

"That's the way I do it—by tacking, and the force of gravity is my heel."

"How long have you lived like this?" she asked abruptly.

"Really lived? Only three months or so. I spent the better part of five years learning to fly."

"And you have flown all over the world?"

"All over this most deserted patch of it."

There was another silence. Then she said, "And what a contempt you must have for us—for us, poor wingless creatures, who cannot cross a little fissure in a rock or a bit of open water without such tollsome labor. Yes, that must be the feeling—contempt; it could hardly be pity."

"If that's true," he rejoined quickly, "it's only poetic justice. I've only achieved toward the world the feeling which the world held for me."

The words were spoken harshly, abruptly, as if his memory had just tasted something intolerably bitter. The manner of the words, no less than the sense of them startled her, and she checked a movement to turn and look into his face. Instead, she tried to recall it as it had looked when she had first stood confronting him, before the twilight had faded.

It was a strange face, as she remembered it, but this, she reflected, was probably due to the incongruous effect of his deeply tanned skin with his very light sun-bleached hair. A sensitive face, finely chiseled, almost beautiful—and young, but with an inexplicable stamp of premature age upon it. It had not struck her at all as a tragic face. And yet the meaning of those last words of his, uttered as they were, had been tragic enough.

"At least you have a magnificent revenge," was all she said. And then there was another silence. She herself was trying to think of something to say, for she realized that his confession had been involuntary, and that the silence must be distressing him.

But it was he himself who broke the silence with a natural, matter-of-fact question. "You say a searching party has set out from the yacht? Have they been long ashore?"

"They set out only a little after sunrise. We came into the bay with the last of yesterday's twilight, and the sight of those huts, at the edge of the shore—her voice faltered a little, "nearly made us hope that the impossible might prove true. We fired our signal cannon two or three times and then sent up some rockets, without getting any answer. It was too late to go ashore in the dark; so we had to wait a few hours for another sunrise. The few of us who were left on the yacht expected them back today before dark fell. But I suppose there's nothing to worry about, in their not coming. They were equipped to pass a night ashore, if necessary. You don't advise me to begin worrying about them, do you?"

He did not answer her question. He was recalling something which his amazing meeting with the girl out here on the ice floe had, for a little while, put quite out of his mind—the world, silent tragedy he had seen enacted a few hours before upon the glacier behind the headland. The victim, the man in the leather coat, must have been one of the party from the yacht, but it was impossible that the little band of his murderers could be. No one freshly landed from the yacht would have been dressed as they were, or would have been armed with darts.

With no better look at them than has been possible to him as he hung above them, he had been convinced that they were men, certainly, the feathered man had been talking to them, freely enough, in English. And yet, if white, they must have been refugees, survivors, if not of Captain Fielding's ill-fated expedition, then of some other, tragic, unrecorded ship wreck.

But if they were white men—refugees, why had they fled from their hut at sight of the yacht which came bringing a rescue? Why had they driven that one luckless member of the rescuing party who fell in with them, into that carefully prepared ambush, and then murdered him, silently? Even Eskimos would not have done a thing like that.

His long silence had alarmed the girl, and presently, perceiving that this was so, he drew himself up with an affected start. "I beg your pardon. I drifted off, thinking of something else. Living in the sky doesn't seem conducive to good manners. No, I don't believe there is anything to worry about. Any way, as soon as light comes back, which won't be long now, I can set at rest any fears you may have. I'll go and find your party, and I'll search the land, too, for anything else that may be there. And then I'll bring you word."

"You are very good," she said with a little hesitation, "but I can't let you—"

He interrupted her with a laugh. "It's nothing difficult that I am proposing to do for you, you know."

"That's true. I had forgotten your wings. The rocks, the ice, the steep places, that mean so tragically much to them, are nothing at all to you. But what are you doing now? Even you can't find them in the dark."

He had already begun unstrapping the bundle he had made of his wings, and seemed to be preparing for immediate flight. "That was what caused her question."

"No," he said; "I shall wait for sunrise."

"But why not here, on the yacht? We can give you a comfortable bed there; better, certainly, than that sleeping bag of yours."

"I am afraid," he said, "that what you call a comfortable bed in a yacht's cabin would be the surest instrument that could be found for keeping me awake all night. No, I shall find a sheltered hollow up at the top of that headland, yonder, where I shall sleep deeply enough, you may be sure."

She watched him, silently, while he slipped the steel-jointed rods into place, drew the catgut bow strings taut, until they sang—until the fabric of his planes shimmered in the starlight—quivered, as if they were instinct with a life of their own.

A sense of the unreality of it all came welling up strongly within her, and a touch of an almost forgotten fear of him.

"Good night," she said, holding out her hand—"goodby."

"At Least You Have a Magnificent Revenge."

"Till morning," he answered.

A little breeze came blowing across the ice just then. He dropped her hand quickly, slipped his arms into their places in the frame, mounted the ledge of ice, and then, with a short run, sprang forward into the breeze.

She saw his planes bend a little, undulate, rather, with a sort of sculling motion, as he flew forward, not far above the level of her head. He dipped down again as soon as he had open water beneath him, and almost slammed the surface of it. Then, gathering speed, he began mounting.

She fell seriously alone now that he was gone; and a little frightened, like a child just waking out of a dream. And she blew a small silver whistle that hung about her neck, for a signal to the men on the yacht to send a boat for her.

Then, while she waited, she dropped down, rather feebly on her pile of bear-skins. Her hand found something hard that had not been there before, and taking it up she found that it was a curious blunt stick or wood, rudely whittled, and about ten inches long. It must have fallen from his belt while he was talking to her. She wondered what he used it for.

CHAPTER III.

The Murderers.

Two men clad in bear-skins were shuffling rapidly along across the glacier. Dawn was already flooding the arctic sky with its amazing riot of color—rose, green, gold, violet, and the ice beneath their feet was rose color with misty blue shadows in it.

The foremost of the two wayfarers was a man of gigantic stature, six and a half feet tall and of enormous girth of chest; yet, somehow, despite his size and the ungainly clothes he wore, he contrived to preserve an air almost of lightness; of lean, compact athleticism, certainly. A stranger, meeting him anywhere and contemplating his formidable proportions, and then looking up past his great, blunt jaw into his cold, light blue, choleric eyes would be likely to shiver a little and then get out of his way as soon as possible.

He was walking steadily, glancing neither to the right nor the left. Even over the treacherous, summer-glazed surface of the glacier his great stride carried him along at a pace which his companion found it difficult to keep up with. Besides, this companion made his task the harder by allowing his eyes to wander from the track they were following and crying little furrows, anxious glances at the man he rode upon. In any other company he would have been a rather striking figure himself, well above middle height, powerfully made, and with a face that had lines of experience and determination engraved in it. But the companion dwarfed him.

He seemed to be trying to make up his mind to speak, and still to find this a difficult thing to do.

At last, with a deprecating cough, he began:

"What I can't see is, Roscoe, what you did it for. It was all right to do it if you were figuring out any gain from it. We all agree to that. Any thing for our common good that's our motto. But where's the gain in killing just one poor fellow out of a party of 30? He seemed a good kind of chap, too, and friendly spoken. We didn't serve you like that, when you come aboard the Walrus at Cape Nome."

"It would have cost you four men to do it, Planck, and you were short-handed as it was."

"That wasn't why we didn't do it. You was a stranger, and you was in a bad way. There was a mob of men that wanted you mighty bad, and we gave you shelter and carried you off, and made you a regular shaman member of the crew. Of course if we'd had any reason to act contrary, we'd have done so. And that's why it seemed to me—to me, I would say, that you probably had some reason in this case, here. And, well—we'd like to know what it is."

But the man he had addressed as "Roscoe" strode on with unabated pace, as if he had not heard. For any attention he paid to his questioner he might have been alone in that expanse of ice and sky.

Planck accepted the silent rebuff as if it had been only what he had expected, but he sighed regretfully. He had once known, and it was only four years ago, that same swaggering trick of contemptuous authority himself. He had been master, the most tyrannical sort of master, some say, to be found anywhere in the world, the captain of an American whaler. And this very man, at whose heels he was scrambling along over the ice, had been one of his crew; had never approached the quarter-deck where he reigned supreme, without an apologetic hand at his forelock, and had always passed to the leeward side of him up on the deck.

But the Walrus had been destined never to see port again. She lingered too long on the whaling grounds to get back through Behring strait that fall, and failed in the attempt to make McKenzie bay, where other whalers in similar plight put in for the winter. Instead of this friendly harbor, she was caught in the pack and carried, relentlessly, north and westward. The milling pressure of great masses of ice crushed in her, stout hull, so that the open water they had been hoping for, became, at once, their deadliest peril. The moment the ice broke away, she would go to the bottom like a plummet.

But still the slow irresistible drift of the ice pack carried them north, and west into a latitude and longitude which, so far as they knew, no human travelers had ever crossed before. And then in the depth of the arctic night, devoid of hope, and half mad with fear, they found a land that never had longed for them, and most marvelously of all, a human welcome. For here on the snow were Captain Fielding and the two other survivors of his ill-fated expedition.

The site of the explorers' camp had been discovered, probably that of the Walrus. She had been caught in the pack crushed in it and carried past that point. Before the coming of spring, and with it the breaking of the ice, Fielding and his men had been able to carry their stores ashore, and of these, the greater part still remained.

Of the Walrus people, in all, there were 11 and these, with the three original castaways, settled down to the prospect of an indefinite number of years upon that nameless coast. "We can live like Christians," Captain Fielding had said, "and we can always hope."

His superior knowledge of arctic conditions made him, rather than Captain Planck, naturally commander of the little company. He established the regimen of their life, doled out the store from day to day, and, as best he could, through that long winter night, provided entertainment for the forlorn little group. He told them of his explorations on the coast, of the lay of the land, of what they might hope to see when the sun should come back to them marking the beginning of another long arctic day.

Among other things quite casually he told them of a lodge in the hills, across the glacier, which contained, he believed, the most extraordinary deposit of gold in the world. So incredibly rich was it, that the rock itself had almost been replaced by solid metal. The Alaska gold, he said, was only the sweepings, in his opinion, of this immense store.

At the sound of the word "gold," the eyes of the man named Roscoe had brightened for the first time since they had taken him, shivering and half dead, from the ice.

—the Walrus—circle that sat about the reading lamp, and began asking questions. Gold was something he knew about. He had mined it in Australia, in California, and in the Klondike. He questioned Captain Fielding about the exact whereabouts of the ledge, about the sort of ore it occurred in, and about the best means of cutting it out.

To some extent his own excitement infected the others. Even Captain Planck, whose only well-understood form of wealth was whale blubber, began to take an interest in Roscoe's questions and in the explorer's answers to them.

It was a strange and rather pathetic sort of excitement, Captain Fielding thought. To them, in their practically hopeless plight, gold was about the least useful thing they could find; not hard enough to tip lances or arrows with, too heavy and too easily melted for domestic purposes. However, it gave them something to think about, and he, without a suspicion of the sinister direction in which these thoughts might turn, went on and told them all he knew.

When, after a period of tantalizing twilight, the sun again came fairly over the horizon, they besought their commander, with a savage sort of eagerness from which he might have augured ill, that he take them at once to the ledge. They had caught sight of it from a distance, even as Cayley had done, lung in the air above the valley, and had run recklessly on ahead of them, leader. When he came up to them, he found them dangerously excited, the man Roscoe fairly dazed and drunken with it.

Finally Fielding had left them, to their own devices, and came away with his two companions. And until the light of that short day had begun to fail, they—the Walrus people—stayed, gloating over this strangely useless treasure.

For three days after that the man Roscoe never spoke a word. On the fourth day, when the little party assembled for their mid-day meal, the 11 men of the Walrus were, the only ones, to answer the summons. Captain Fielding and his two companions had disappeared.

Captain Planck could not recall that meal now without shuddering, for there at the foot of the table, opposite to him had sat the man Roscoe, with murder written plain in every line of his face. He had looked a beast, rather than a man; that day. The sated blood lust in his eyes made them positively terrifying, so that the others shrank away from him. He had seemed not to notice it, at least not to take offense at it. He was in hilarious spirits for the first time since they had known him; seemed really to try to be a good companion.

Captain Planck advocated his leadership that day. He was perfectly conscious of the fact. He had known that to retain the leadership he must take that murderer out and execute him. He knew that if he did not do this, the murderer, not he, would hereafter command the party, and that unless he himself melted the promptest obedience of any, he would follow the reckless trip whom they were never to see again.

From that day (in the future had been no more a date. Roscoe had ridden in with a decision and a triumph which put anything like indecision out of the question. He had been obeyed better than Captain Planck ever had been. He had worked them, fiercely all four or five centuries, and he had that wonderful, exhausted, golden ledge, being the little one of it with heavy mounds of iron, laboriously, carving the great red shubs of pure metal on rough slabs of the perpetual ice of the glacier to a cave near the shore where they had retreated. There were literally tons of it hidden there when the smoke from the yacht's funnel was first seen on the horizon.

The moment the news of the approaching steamer was rejected to Roscoe he had entered upon what seemed to his followers a thoroughly irrational and inexplicable line of action. He had ordered them, first to remove all signs of recent habitation from the hut to the cave where their gold was concealed; then to cover the cave mouth with a heap of boulders, to secure it against discovery.

Long before the strongest glass on the ship could have made out their moving figures, he took the whole party back to the hills in hiding. He had kept them from answering the hail and the gun-fire from the yacht by the sheer weight of his authority, without vouchsafing a word or explanation.

The next day they had seen the searching party come ashore, and with their knowledge of the lay of the land found it perfectly easy to evade observation, though nothing but the strong habit of obedience kept them from courting it.

Then, along in the afternoon, had happened what seemed to them the strangest thing of all. They had seen a solitary, straggler from the searching party coming along across the ice. He could not see it. It would seem as perfectly as to evade

—the Walrus—circle that sat about the reading lamp, and began asking questions. Gold was something he knew about. He had mined it in Australia, in California, and in the Klondike. He questioned Captain Fielding about the exact whereabouts of the ledge, about the sort of ore it occurred in, and about the best means of cutting it out.

To some extent his own excitement infected the others. Even Captain Planck, whose only well-understood form of wealth was whale blubber, began to take an interest in Roscoe's questions and in the explorer's answers to them.

It was a strange and rather pathetic sort of excitement, Captain Fielding thought. To them, in their practically hopeless plight, gold was about the least useful thing they could find; not hard enough to tip lances or arrows with, too heavy and too easily melted for domestic purposes. However, it gave them something to think about, and he, without a suspicion of the sinister direction in which these thoughts might turn, went on and told them all he knew.

Progressive Farming.

"Well, yes," confessed Honest Farmer Hornbeak the while a grim grin wrinkled his weather-beaten complexion. "It's a good 'ol o' trouble, but the satisfaction I feel amply repays me for the extra work. Ye see, by degrees I'm sharpenin' up the top of every stump on the place, and in the course of time I hope to have matters so arranged that the hard man will find it fully as comfortable to stand up during the day as to set down."—Puck.

Detroit, the City of Bad Roads.

"Because Detroit is the largest producing center in the automobile business, many of its roads are in a state of disrepair, and are a hindrance to the city."—Detroit News.

"Drawn" is a good word for it. It is very safe to say none of the business came into the city by its own propelling powers. It's lucky for Detroit that it has a big river filled with boats and quantities of railroads, within its borders to haul out its automobile products, for the roads about the town are in such shape that only big truck wagons drawn by ox teams are the real safe article of highway transportation.

Take for instance Grand River avenue west from the Boulevard to the city limits. There's a half a mile that would make a back woods swamp road look like the lake shore drive at the Grose Pointe farms. And yet the Detroit papers are bragging—every issue about Detroit's great auto industry, while the fact that owing to the terrible condition of Detroit's streets no one can safely run an automobile in or out of the city except possibly, to Grose Pointe or Pontiac. And the trouble hinges over a technicality that a few spears of grass on one side of the rocky city road referred to—in language mingled with adjectives—belongs to Greenfield township. The fact that the piece of road can be put in good condition for $2,000 and the further fact that private subscriptions to double that amount have been offered seems to have no weight. The Wayne county Good Roads commissioners have tried their best to get action on this auto wrecking stretch of alleged highway. The board has even offered to build the road if the city would draw out there enough gravel, but that wouldn't do at all. The late pride of Detroit, (1st) "The big Auto Industry of the World" and (2nd) "The World Piece of Road in the United States" would be lost.

The latest move on the part of Detroit city is to draw out on this road all the broken pieces of paving to be found in the city and this, stacked a foot high now stops all traffic except D. E. E. cars going into the city. Only one conclusion can be drawn from this latest stunt of the public works of Detroit and that is it is a boon for the air ship industry.

Who is Paying the Freight?

"Michigan has a right to know who is paying the freight of those goods from this state who are now in Washington, and how it came about that the delegation went to Washington—Lansing State Journal."

And Michigan also has a right to know who is paying the expenses of those lobbyists from the big cities of the state where the big auto factories, milling companies, beef packers, lumber associations are located, who are now in Washington for the reciprocity measure. Does the Journal think a farmer who goes to Washington must necessarily sleep in a dry goods box along a back alley?

Notice to Taxpayers.

School Notes.

(By a Pupil.)

The "Travel Bunch" will present "Thompson's Bird Man" at the opera house Friday, May 26. Wait for it and see something good.

Prof. W. H. French of the Agricultural College was with us one day last week looking over the work here. Of course, it goes without saying that we enjoy the visits of such a leading, general man as Mr. French is.

Tonight, May 19, is held the second annual banquet of the Junior class given to the Seniors. Mr. C. A. Dolph, secretary of the Board of Education will be toastmaster and Mr. E. St. Elmo Lewis of Detroit will be the principal speaker.

W. W. Pratchner of the M. A. C. will succeed Mr. Douglas in the Agricultural Department. Mr. Pratchner comes well recommended, altho it will require hard work to step into the place made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Douglas, we feel sure that Mr. Pratchner will make a good try.

The Physiography class of eleven members and six each from both Sixth and Seventh grades took a field trip last week over Plymouth way. Enthusiasm bubbled over at first, but after keeping up the pace for a few miles it very quickly subsided. Many interesting things were brought out regarding our surrounding country.

Some one spoke to the Superior, tender and asked why the necessity of sending in their names for enrollment ahead of time. The idea is this: If we have more than we can possibly accommodate, we shall attend to our own residents first and take care of the foreign pupils in order of their application. We must leave place for the fifteen or sixteen from the eighth grade who come up during the year.

Fifteen business and professional men are backing a lecture course for next year and the contract is signed with the Central Michigan Bureau. It will consist of four excellent numbers all of which will be popular priced. One of the best will be the light opera, "The Mikado" by the Philadelphia Concert Co., followed by the play of "Rip Van Winkle," a Magic and Novelty Music Co. and the Pastor of the "Working Men's Church," of New York City in a lecture.

Edward Bogart of the Normal class has secured the principalship of a two room school at Six Lakes in the north central part of the state while Ralph Shaler and Harry White will probably be settled nearby in the same work. Lena Hunt, Adeline Simmons and Norine Hagle are all comfortably situated in schools near here. This gives six out of eight of the seniors in the Normal class positions for the coming year, while the remaining two have good prospects for an early contract.

Dyspepsia is our national ailment. Burdock Blood Bitters is the national cure for it. It strengthens stomach membranes, promotes flow of digestive juices, purifies the blood, builds you up.

For Aged People

Old Folks Should be Careful in their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

We have a safe, dependable and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies. Rexall Orderlies have a soothing, healing, strengthening, tonic and regulative action upon the bowels. They remove all irritation, dryness, and weakness. They restore the bowels and associate organs to more vigorous and healthy activity. They are eaten like candy, may be taken at any time without inconvenience, do not cause any griping, nausea, diarrhoea, excessive looseness, flatulence or other disagreeable effect. Price 25c and 10c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. A. E. Stanley & Co., Northville.

NOVI TWP. CALLED ATTORNEY YERKES

WANTED TO KNOW LEGAL POINTS OF ROAD LAW.

"Can't Haul Sod Into the Highway," Says Yerkes.

Attorney C. C. Yerkes was called to Novi Saturday night by the town board to meet jointly with the Town Highway Commissioner, Grant Putnam. While there Mr. Yerkes called the attention of the board and commissioner to some points in present highway law which are of importance to those officials and which will be of interest all over the state. "Money may be expended," said Mr. Yerkes "only for permanent roads and temporary repairs and then only by a joint vote of the town board and highway commissioner."

"Sod that is scraped into the road is neither repair work nor permanent improvement and therefore it is unlawful to pay out any money for that purpose. Permanent improvements can only be made after a survey has been made and the work then done must be according to state law specifications."

The meeting was a lively one but the board took Mr. Yerkes' view and the Highway Commissioner will most likely be called to account for scraping several miles of sod into the center of the road which not only spoiled an otherwise fairly good road but also would cause an illegal expenditure of money.

We have a few more 1911 Calendars which will be given out to first comers.

Afternoons are especially for the ladies to attend Loomis' auction sale.

MUSHROOM CORNS

Most Painful of All Foot Ailments How to Cure Them.

The Mushroom corn is so called from its pitted cone top, resembling a tiny mushroom. It burrows deep into the toe and gets more inflamed than other corns. For the quick relief and cure of these and all corns and callouses the following is the most effective remedy known to science.

2 tablets dissolved in 2 tablespoonfuls of Calceolide compound in a hard slip of hot water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give desired results.) All corns and callouses disappear and the corn or callous can be easily peeled off. It may be necessary to repeat this for a number of nights for a complete cure, but if adhered to it will surely succeed.

A little olive oil rubbed on the part is very beneficial. This Calceolide is a very remarkable preparation for all foot ailments and is no longer confined to doctors' use. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is usually sufficient to put the worst feet in fine condition. Bad smelling feet and tender feet need only a few treatments, likewise with inflamed bunions. This item will be welcomed by persons who have tried ineffectual powders and tablets.

The True Test

Tried in Northville. It has stood the Test.

The hardest test is the test of time. And Doan's Kidney Pills have stood it well in Northville. Kidney sufferers can hardly ask for stronger proof than the following:

W. E. Kator, of Northville, Mich., says: "A year ago I began to have trouble from my kidneys and I was caused much misery by pains across the small of my back. The kidney secretions were irregular and painful in passage and led me to believe that my kidneys were out of order. Hearing about Doan's Kidney Pills, I began their use and in a few weeks I was completely cured. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an effective medicine for kidney complaint and I do not hesitate to recommend them."

The above statement was given in November 1906 and on March 31, 1909, Mr. Kator said: "I can still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and I have no objection to the continued publication of my testimonial. The cure this remedy made in my case has been permanent."

For sale, by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Wilbur Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

NORTHVILLE.

The City in Brief.

May flowers bring forth June brides.

Henry Pickell and family have moved into their new house on West street.

R. E. McKahan has built a new garage for his "Oakland 30" in the rear of his residence.

Mother's Day was largely observed in town last Sunday, while carnations being very much in evidence.

J. E. Morse and family are moving from Bucher Hill into the J. A. Debnar house on Randolph street.

On Wednesday evening, May 24, Prof. Shoemith of the M. A. C. will talk on Alafia at the High School.

Mrs. Hattie Benton, formerly of Northville, but now of New Haven, is slowly improving from some severe injuries she recently received.

Miss Ella Power gives a "Linen Shower" for Pearl Little tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at her home, Green Hill. The guests expect to attend via auto.

The big hotel Interlaken at Plie Lake was destroyed by fire Friday night at a loss of $15,000 with $10,000 insurance. The hotel was just ready to open up for the season.

About every fruit tree and flowering shrub is now laden with the most beautiful blossoms that nature ever lavished upon her subjects. The country never looked more beautiful.

Frank Terrill has bought one of Judd Lanning's fine building lots opposite Ernest Miller's place on West street and contracted with Mr. Lanning to build for him a nice dwelling thereon.

Miss Pearl Little, for five years past a faithful and energetic employee of the Record office, has resigned her place to fill in the future, a more important one in the battle of life. Miss Little, besides being a good local reporter and bookkeeper, was one of the most rapid and expert news compositors in the state.

Miss Leah VanSickle gave a very pretty "House Shower" for Pearl Little last Friday night. A gum chewing contest was the main feature of the evening in which Mrs. Carl Schultze won first prize and Miss Lida Richardson second. Miss Little received many beautiful gifts, but a cook stove is still not in evidence.

The horse races at the matinee Saturday were very good and of much interest. The ball game between Wayne High and Northville High resulted in a score of 14 to 14 in favor of the former. The Driving association will have another matinee tomorrow (Saturday). Everyone come and have an enjoyable afternoon.

The Northville "All Stars" will take a trip to Redford tomorrow where they clash with the Redford Juniors. Next Saturday they will be seen at home again playing the Norwood A. C. of Detroit. "Bobber" Brown has taken hold of the boys now and is developing a fast team. He says: "If you don't believe the kids can play ball, just go and watch 'em."

Vern T. Best has put his interest in the Conneaut Auto Shop, and C. C. Sessions becomes the managing head. The Auto Shop company has taken a long lease of the premises and the place will be a model of convenience, taste and equipment.

Mr. Sessions, the new manager, is an experienced auto man who came here from Detroit several months ago as sales manager when the Auto Shop company was organized—Conneaut (Ohio) News.

H. S. German has been elected secretary of the Monroe County Race association, Philip Balz, president and Fred Gekle, treasurer, the latter two being from Monroe.

Monroe now belongs to the Short Ship Circuit, which includes Flint, Bay City, Pt. Huron, Toledo, Alpena, Lansing and Marshall. Harry is putting forth great efforts to have the Monroe meeting, June 27-30, a big success, and has the promise of some horses from N. Y., Mass., Wis., Tenn., Ohio, Ind., Ill. and Canada.

INSPECTION OF OIL

PROFITS THE STATE

Net Gain for Quarter of March 31 is $6,095.64.

State Oil Inspector Frank S. Neal's quarterly report for the three months ending March 31, 1911, shows the inspection of 6,913,243 gallons of oil, of which 52 barrels (2,600 gallons) were rejected as dangerous to use for illuminating purposes. Total fees collected were $12,911.08; total expenses, $7,815.44; net cash to turn into the state treasury, $5,095.64. In the expense account is included the enforcement of the gasoline tax and also the now added labor of inspection of the oil used by miners in coal mines.

During April the department found a tank of kerosene oil in a grocery store at Sebewaing that was about half gasoline. One accident had already occurred from the use of it, but no one seemed to know where the oil came from until the department made the investigation. The oil was all dumped and all that had been sold was gathered up. Prompt action on the part of the department undoubtedly saved a number of lives, as well as many dollars' worth of property.—Detroit Free Press.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal entertained the "Main 500" club at a 7:00 o'clock lunch Wednesday evening.

Special communication of Northville Lodge No. 136, F. & A. M., Monday evening, May 22. Work in F. C. Degree.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Deubell, who are returning from a year's tour of the world, were guests of the former's aunt, Mrs. L. E. McRobert, and cousin, Mrs. D. P. Yerkes, this week.

A hundred and twenty odd Detroit wholesalers and manufacturers will come to Northville by special D. U. train next week or week after to get acquainted. The business men will probably make some arrangements to entertain them in some way.

Miss Ida VanAken underwent a slight operation for the removal of a growth on her breast last week and has been confined to the home since. She is getting along nicely and hopes soon to resume her duties as clerk in Mr. Pomford's store.

The members of Orient Chapter, O. E. S., are requested to attend the regular meeting which will be called at 7:00 o'clock (this Friday) evening. Business of importance. A card party will follow this meeting to which every one is invited. Starts at 5:00 o'clock.

How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased.

"Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair, you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 95 per cent of the people need a hair tonic."

Pull a hair out of your head, if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment. If its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want everyone whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. A. E. Starley & Co., Northville.

4 Reasons Why one Practical Housewife Uses only

Columbus Flour

1. It gives me splendid results for all kinds of baking.
2. I have been complimented time and time again upon the bread and pastry which I bake with Columbus.
3. I go at my baking without worry, with confidence that I shall meet with good results.
4. Columbus Flour makes more loaves to the sack, than some flour I have used, whose price is practically the same.

Are these not good reasons for you to think over? Your grocer will supply you with Columbus Flour.

Don't Scrub Kitchen Floors

Paint that kitchen floor instead of scrubbing it every few days or buying expensive coverings that grow dingy and show wear. You can do it yourself. It's easy and costs only a trifle.

ACME QUALITY FLOOR PAINT (Granite)

is the ideal finish for kitchen, pantry and laundry floors, steps and inside surfaces to be walked upon. It's hard, durable, sanitary, easy to apply, easy to keep clean, hard to wear out. Brush it on tonight and you can walk on it tomorrow.

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.
