CLAIM TO BE USING POOR GRAVEL

It is claimed that the County Road Commission is using a very inferior quality of gravel on the Northville-Plymouth road. There is no apparent excuse for this if it is true because there is a plenty of first-class gravel all around Northville that could have been obtained quite as easy as to bring this poor stuff way down from Saginaw. "The Plymouth-Northville road should at least be made no worse than it was," as one man puts it, "but it will be like the sand roads of commerce after a while, with that kind of gravel."

Mr. Hines says that the first few loads of gravel were poor and were condemned, but if the Northville people will wait until the roads are completed they will have no cause for complaint. "This road will be one of the finest roads in the state," he says.

Would You Believe It?

Y. M. C. A. TEAM WERE NOT IN IT

WITH THE "LOCAL TIGERS" HERE SATURDAY.

They Were Defeated by a Score of 4 to 1.

One of the best ball games ever witnessed on the local grounds was played here Saturday. The famous Y. M. C. A. team of Detroit, came out, confident of an easy victory, but they were disappointed.

The home team was very much broken up, due to E. Simpson, R. Johnson and H. Turner being on the disabled list. Moritt took Riley's place as catcher and did himself proud. Two men from Ann Arbor played in the field and Bell pitched a nine game.

The game was made up of the shortest innings ever seen in this town. The one score made by the Y. M. C. A. was due to an error of one of the local players, or it probably would have been a shut out game.

Ky Simpson was one of the brightest stars that ever shone on a Saturday afternoon, making two of the four scores for Northville. He was particularly busy trying to reach second base, at one time. Chased by the first and second basemen and the short stop he made about sixteen trips from first to second and back again. Finally, when hard pressed, he slid in, right under the pitcher's feet, who hung in the air above first base, reaching for a ball, and was called safe.

One Ann Arbor man went up to bat and batted. As a result, two automobiles had to be sent to bring back the ball in time to finish the game before dark. A home run was easily made on the hit for Northville. The final score was 4 to 1 in our favor.

ANGUS MCKAY DIED SATURDAY

Angus McKay, for many years a resident of this village, died at Cambridge, Ont., Saturday. Mr. McKay had been in poor health for some time prior to going to Ontario to live with his brother and sisters. The deceased was about seventy years of age. The funeral was held at his brother's home Tuesday afternoon.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted us during our recent bereavement. Mrs. L. B. REYNOLDS, Miss GERTRUDE BARNES REYNOLDS.

They Were Early Birds.

The Merry-Go-Round club pulled off a little surprise party on Mrs. A. K. Carpenter Thursday. The whole sixteen of them helped her celebrate her birthday by lining up on her front porch at exactly 5:30 a. m. and demanding breakfast. Mrs. A. K. rubbed her eyes a little, put the bacon on the stove to fry, and with the aid of the provisions which the "early birds" had thoughtfully brought along, managed to fill them up. Mrs. A. says that next time she would rather they would "come" after breakfast, bring "long" their lunch, and leave "fore" supper time.

L. B. REYNOLDS DIED FRIDAY

Louis B. Reynolds died at his home on the Fish Hatchery road Friday evening, of a complication of diseases, from which he has been a sufferer the past year or more. He was fifty-three years old, and leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his death. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Wm. S. Jerome officiating. Burial in Grand Lawn cemetery at Redford.

ENCAMPMENT OF NATIONAL GUARD

General Abbey Plans Work of Ten Days' Service.

BEGINNING AUGUST NINTH

Volunteer Soldier Will Have an interesting and instructive period according to program—Drills to be first.

Lansing—Gen. F. L. Abbey has tentatively planned the work of the Michigan National Guard for the ten days' tour of service at Port Huron, beginning August 9. The program indicates the volunteer soldiers will have an instructive and interesting period, with maneuvers and drills enough to keep everyone busy.

The first two days will be devoted to drills, by companies, battalions and regiments and then will come the first of the maneuvers in the form of, out-post duty or advance guard operations, with plenty of marching and service, which will test the previous training of the guardsmen in scouting and reconnaissance. On Sunday the regular field inspection will take place in the morning, every camp being visited and inspected as to cleanliness, sanitary conditions and the appearance of the men. In the afternoon the big ceremonial event of the week will take place in the form of a review of the entire command by Governor Osborn. It will be the first time all the state troops have been assembled for a review in four years, and it is probable there will be big crowds in Port Huron to witness the ceremonies.

People who used to visit the soldiers in the old days at Island Lake will find conditions radically changed in this coming camp. In the former camps each company maintained open house for friends and big dinners were served to a multitude. This form of entertainment is impossible nowadays owing to the fact that there are no dishes in camp for serving such a meal, the only utensils of that character being the mess kits of tin plate which the men carry. The chests of earthen dishes were abolished at the time of the Spanish war and have not been put in use since, in consequence of which visitors will have to rely on hotels and restaurants for their meals on that day.

Railroads Clash Tax Rate Is High.

According to information coming from railroad circles the state board of equalization will find itself between two fires when it comes to leveling the latter part of August to equalize the rate of the railroad collected with great care last year to show that general property of the state had not increased at such a rate, will be presented to the board with a demand that there be a 10 per cent increase in the equalized value of the numerous counties as a means of reducing the rate of taxation.

The chief of course, is the increase which will affect the rate of property, but it is expected to state some provisions that a state of nervous collapse by showing that certain facts relative to values in his county which he comes in before the state board and insists that the state board should equalize the county at the figures at which the supervisors have equalized it. The railroads are known to have specific instances at hand to show what they charge to be gross undervaluation in many counties of the lower peninsula. This information was brought to Lansing during the legislative session, but was never presented to the legislature for some reason.

13 Investigators Getting Law Data.

The state employers' liability and workmen's compensation commission has now thirteen paid investigators working under the direction of the commission's headquarters in the Form building, collecting information for guidance in framing a liability and compensation bill for the 1913 legislative session. Four of the investigators are working in Detroit. The commission is, besides, collecting a large mass of information by correspondence both in Michigan and in other states.

Wants New Law on Clerk's Pay.

Governor Osborn told the state convention of county clerks here he intends to have Michigan win an international reputation in the scientific care of the county poor and state charges.

Ralph Moser, of Kent county, of the legislative committee, reported that the best measure of the association had put through at the last session was the flat fee system which goes into effect next Wednesday.

Banks Would Change Class.

According to the way the private banks of the state are making application to the state banking department in order to change their class from private to state banks, the private bank will soon be eliminated in the state. The following private banks were authorized by the state banking department to become state banks: The Citizens Bank of Ontonagon, capitalized at $25,000; First Bank of Kearsley, capitalized at $20,000; East Nash State bank, Clarkville, capitalized at $20,000.

Increase Shown in State Traffic.

The business of transporting people over steam and electric lines in state of Michigan, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, shows a goodly increase over the previous year, according to figures compiled for the annual report of the state railroad commission. There were 219,666,002 passengers carried on steam and electric lines during the year, of which the steam roads carried 21,938,992, and the electric lines—which include municipal street railways—a total of 197,727,010 passengers, an increase in business over the previous year for the steam roads of 1,331,294 passengers, and 26,870,444 for the electric lines.

Electric lines killed one passenger out of every 9,115,572 carried, while the steam roads killed one to every 1,828,249 carried, the number killed on electric lines being 71, and 12 on the steam lines. Only five electric railway employees were killed, while 88 steam road employees met death in the course of their occupations. It is pointed out as significant by the commission that 141 trespassers on railroad rights-of-way were killed during the year, and Chairman Glasgow of the commission states that the commission is giving considerable attention to the matter of keeping trespassers off railway rights-of-way in an effort to lessen the number of this class of deaths. During the year 89 people were killed at street crossings by electric and steam lines.

There were 147 miles of steam railroad constructed during the year as against 44 miles of electric road, and of the steam road new mileage 68 miles was main line track. That the business has increased during the year is shown by the extensive purchase of new equipment, the commission having authorized the purchase of 293 locomotives, 62 passenger coaches, 400 ore cars, 1,800 freight cars, 8 baggage cars, 7 diners, 8,000 box cars, 7,600 gondolas, 250 ballast cars and 21 switch engines.

Michigan Copper Industry in Peril.

That one-third of the ore mined in Michigan's copper fields is ruined at a loss, is the claim of State Geologist R. C. Allen, and that either one of two things will have to be brought about soon if Michigan is to maintain her position as leader in the great copper industry of the country—either the maintenance of copper prices that will allow the industry to live, or the cutting down of the cost of production.

Said Mr. Allen: "If copper prices should fall to about the level of cost of production of some of the rich western fields the Michigan industry, and therefore the state, would suffer an irreparable loss."

Continuing, Mr. Allen said, "In total production of copper Michigan is the largest contributor of all of the states and has the added distinction of exhibiting the largest copper mining operation, attaining the lowest cost per ton of ore handled, exporting with profit ore of low grade than elsewhere mined, and of paying larger total dividends than any other mining district in the world."

"The producing copper mines are in Keweenaw point which is a narrow peninsula projecting northwest 70 miles into Lake Superior. The backbone of this peninsula is formed by the copper-bearing rocks which are the succession of lava flows, flow called trap. In lower part of red lavas, the lavas are imbedded with layers of sandstone and conglomerate. The productive belt is one to two miles wide and 70 miles long. Copper occurs in native form in the sandstones to some extent, but mainly in the conglomerate and trap beds. Once are also found in fissures and in slips or fault places. In these places are often found masses of native copper weighing many tons, for which the district is famous."

On Keweenaw Point are found the deepest mines in the world. The workings of the famous Calumet & Hecla lode extend to a vertical depth of a mile. This lode is 12 to 15 feet thick and about three miles long."

Michigan Sugar Makes Advance.

Michigan sugar as still the feature of the local market and heavy transactions in that issue marked business on the Detroit stock exchange. The stock gained a full point and the market is well cleaned of stock under par. The cause of the renewed activity and the advance is the fine prospect for the best crop and the excellent financial condition of the company. The directors will not make any change in the dividend rate at this time but in view of the good earnings, it is believed to be only a question of time when the rate will be increased.

The low-priced sugar stocks also enjoyed a good share of activity and all made gains. St. Louis sugar advanced a full point, German American a quarter and Holland sugar, a half during the week. The same influences that are putting up Michigan sugar caused the advance in the lower price issues.

Michigan Leads in Immigration Work.

A. C. Carlton, state immigration commissioner of Michigan, who was elected president of the National Association of Immigration Officers gives an outline of the work that is to be undertaken by the national association. At the meeting, which was attended by representatives of 27 states and by the various heads of some of the largest railroads in the country, Michigan was pointed out as the state that stands foremost among all in progress along the lines that will be the platform of the national association.

STRIKE LOSSES WILL TOTAL MILLIONS

AND THE END OF THE GRAND RAPIDS TROUBLE IS STILL FAR FROM VIEW.

CONTROVERSY HAS BEEN ON ABOUT THIRTEEN WEEKS.

Public Sympathy Continues With the Men Who Walked Out—$12,000 a Week Paid in Strike Benefits.

That Grand Rapids has lost money through the big strike of furniture workers, which seems as far from settlement as ever on the part of the manufacturers, is an assured fact. The loss, although impossible to estimate in round numbers, certainly will mount in the millions, and this, in spite of the fact that the controversy has been on only some 13 weeks.

Since the beginning of the strike the members of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners have been receiving union benefits—about $4 a week and a single man getting $1 a week. A conservative estimate will place the number of married men at 1,500 and the single men at 1,000. Taking an average wage of $11 a week it will be seen that each married man loses $5 a week, while each single man loses $6. In addition, there are the carpenters, who get nothing and the joiners, who get only what they can make. The common laborers get nothing, so that on the whole a conservative estimate of the losses in wages to the men since the beginning of the strike will reach at least $300,000.

The National Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has been paying on an average of $12,000 a week in strike benefits. For 13 weeks the amount would total $156,000. The manufacturers have lost money through being forced to go outside for help, in paying for special trains to bring strike-breakers, in feeding them and housing them and in paying for guards. The outputs of the factories have been curtailed seriously, the income of the plants suffering accordingly. While the loss to the manufacturers is exceedingly heavy it is impossible to give an estimate.

MODERN MACCABEES MUST ADJUST RATES.

George S. Lovelace, Great Commander of the Knights of the Modern Maccabees, has issued a call for a special Grand Camp Review at Port Huron on September 12. The object of this special review is to adjust the rates and if the members on an adequate basis. This action is made necessary by the ruling of the Interstate Commerce commission and if the members do not adjust the rates, the K. O. M. M. has been very active in taking up this matter in the Grand district of Michigan.

Mayor Takes Steps to Abolish Drinking Cups.

Mayor Stewart announced that he would cause to be presented to the council a resolution recommending that drinking cups be abolished in all public drinking places in Flint. This is the first of a series of measures which the mayor proposes to take to clean up the city. The K. O. M. M. has been very active in taking up this matter in the Grand district of Michigan.

The state banking department has turned to the state treasury $4,051 in fees collected for the examination of state banks.

The Upper Peninsula people are preparing to attend the Michigan State Fair this year in considerable number. The U. P. development bureau are planning to make a large exhibit at the fair and they propose to let fair visitors know that the U. P. is rapidly coming to the front in agriculture and horticulture. Notwithstanding the fact that a large party from the U. P. will come to Detroit, September 6th to return the visit recently made by the Detroit Board of Commerce, the fair management has been requested to set aside a day to be known as Upper Peninsula day, and have fixed upon Friday, September 22nd, as the date.

The railroads and steamboat lines have promised to give a round trip reduced rate for the Upper Peninsula people and the fair management is advised that the upper country people are coming down in large numbers. A member of the executive committee of the Upper Peninsula development bureau in writing President Newton of the State Fair says: "We want the people up here to understand that the State Fair belongs to the Upper Peninsula as well as to the lower and that we should all unite in making it the greatest fair in the United States. I believe the setting apart a day at the fair to be known as Upper Peninsula Day will be the beginning of a greater interest in the State Fair by the people above the straits and that each succeeding year will show a deeper interest."

Speakers from various parts of the country attended the dedication of the new $29,000 Park Memorial Baptist church, Pentecost. The dedication service was preached by Dr. M. P. Fikes, of Detroit. Saturday was the one hundredth anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Bellevue Hospital, New York. The land then known as Kip's farm, was acquired April 11, 1811 and on July 27 the cornerstone was laid. The first hospital accommodated only a dozen patients, but it has been rebuilt and extended every few years, until now it now accommodates a thousand.

TROLLEY CAR CRASH.

Two Cars Meet Head-On—Two Are Dead and 60 Injured.

As the result of the forcefulness of Motorman Frank Woodin of the Northville branch of the D. U. R., according to the statement made by the officials of the company, a crash occurred between two interurban cars at the junction in Dearborn at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, as the result of which two men were killed and 60 persons were injured, several of them so severely that they may die.

The collision occurred between the Northville local car and the Ann Arbor local. The Northville car had orders to pass the west-bound limited traveling in two sections. Woodin held his car in the switch until the two sections of the limited passed, and so it is declared, answered the signals indicating that he knew the local was right behind, but he pulled out onto the main line just in time to meet the rapidly approaching local head-on. The cars telescoped and piled up in a jumbled mass. Why the death list was not greater is hard to figure out. Louis Hamilton, motorman of the local, shut off power and then jumped, but he broke his back in striking the cement road and died within a short time.

Motorman, Blames Conductor. My conductor, F. Dresselhouse, was standing on the front of the car. He said, "Go ahead," I turned on the power and ran out of the switch, an instant later it seemed a car loomed up ahead of us. I only had time to throw off the power, put on the emergency brake and then I jumped. The cars crashed together as I hit the ground," says Motorman Woodin.

Agrees to Open Michigan Fair. Gov. Chase S. Osborn has formally accepted the invitation of the Michigan State Agricultural Society to officially open the Michigan State Fair Monday, September 18. It is planned to make the opening quite a ceremony, as ex-Gov. John T. Rich and ex-Gov. Fred M. Warner, Michigan's only two living ex-governors, have also accepted invitations to be present, and invitations have been sent to both Michigan and United States senators.

Should President Taft finally decide to attend the fair on the opening day instead of a later date, as now contemplated, much more elaborate plans will be worked out as Detroiters, especially, are desirous of giving President Taft a royal welcome on the occasion of his visit to Detroit.

Portugal Fears Revolt.

The monarchist invasion of Portugal from the north, to be followed by a present rising, which has been expected daily, has not yet materialized. The monarchist agents permit the information that first one day and then another has been faced for the outbreak to fall into the hands of the government.

The provincial administration thus is kept in a state of uneasiness and is obliged to maintain expensive measures for defense. Commercially, and financially, interests are kept worried, not knowing the year when the projected counter revolution will begin.

The Connecticut legislature will be asked to change the usual date of election in the state this year because it falls on the same date as Yom Kippur, one of the most important holidays in the Jewish calendar. Cook county, Illinois, real estate is worth more than the personal property of its residents according to figures given out by the board of assessors. The real property in the county is valued at $70,000,000, while the personal property is estimated to be worth $37,710,448, or a total of $1,377,710,448.

Secretary Meyer is contemplating the adoption of a policy regarding the procurement of many articles required in the equipment of a ship which will further curtail the work done in government navy yards. Many articles, such as ship fittings, dead lights, hammocks, flags, paints, small boats, anchor chains, rope and furniture, can be advantageously purchased from private manufacturers. A naval board is now looking into the matter. Navy yard workers will protest.

Preparations for a magnificent memorial fountain to Christopher Columbus on the plaza of the new union station, Washington, D. C., have received impetus with the opening of bids for its construction. Arthur L. Smith & Co., of Washington, D. C., was the lowest of 12 bidders, offering to erect the memorial in granite completely except the plumbing, for $60,999, or in marble for $88,491. The lowest bidder for the plumbing was Norcross Brothers & Co., Worcester, Mass., at $2,930. The memorial will consist of a life-size statue of the discoverer against a background formed by an enormous fountain and several allegorical figures.

The Massachusetts supreme court has advised the legislature that the workmen's compensation bill is constitutional and it undoubtedly will be made law at once. NO DANGER OF WAR OVER MOROCCO

GERMANY WISHES TO AVOID GIVING ENGLAND AN EXCUSE FOR INTERVENTION.

GERMANY HAS MODIFIED DEMANDS, RELIEVING SITUATION.

Great Britain Will Not Intervene So Long as Germany and France Are Trying to Settle the Matter Directly.

It is believed in official circles that France and Germany will be able to settle the Moroccan knot by direct negotiations, and without opening the doors to the participation of Great Britain and the other powers. Rosy optimism, however, is not manifested.

The German foreign office was fully prepared for Premier Assoluth's statement and now confirms that it had earlier assurances that Great Britain would not interfere so long as Germany and France were trying to settle the matter directly, and also that Chancellor Llovd George's speech was not meant as a veto of a Franco-German arrangement on the basis of a French-Congo understanding, as a section of the British press has intimated.

Greater optimism regarding the Moroccan trouble prevailed at the French capital, though it was admitted that the negotiations with Germany remain difficult. The statement of Premier Assoluth in the British house of commons and Premier Caillaux's advice to the French to keep cool and be prudent, relieved the tension at a moment when relief was most needed.

Kaiser Furious, France Is Told.

The Paris Matin's Berlin correspondent says he hears on high authority that the German emperor is furious at the situation in which Baron von Kiderlen Waechter, the foreign secretary, placed Germany in his absence.

It was believed that Great Britain was utterly indifferent to Morocco and would abandon France in the moment of danger. However, instead of this France kept her head, and the English government officially informed the German ambassador that if Germany attempted to occupy any point in Morocco there would be a settlement with England which had been so long talked of.

The outcome was a panic in Germany. The foreign secretary asked the advice of bankers and others and all of them told him he must abandon most of his demands.

The return of Emperor William has not affected the Moroccan negotiations. It is believed that Germany took diplomatic steps regarding the speech of David Lloyd George, the British Chancellor, continued as Great Britain's veto of a proposed Franco-German settlement on the basis of a concession to Germany in the French Congo. The German government received an explanation that Great Britain was disinterested in the situation outside of Morocco. This attitude later was embodied in Premier Assoluth's statement in the house of commons. But for this understanding between Berlin and London, the situation might have been critical.

Standard Oil to Be Divided.

Positive announcement that the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey is to be split up into its original 31 companies was made by the company. In a letter sent to the stockholders it is stated that the stock of the various companies will be distributed according to their holdings, to the stockholders of record on Sept. 1 of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Socialists Fight to Save Parties.

Protests signed by 700 voters are soon to be presented to the charter revision commission asking that the proposal providing for non-partisan elections shall not be put into the new city charter now in the process of construction. Laboring men, particularly Socialists, are actively opposed to the elimination of party politics and say they will fight it to the last ditch.

Sixteen Bodies Taken From Maine.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

How a Severe Case Was Cured After Doctors Gave Up Hope.

J. C. Reimers, Litchfield St., St. Paul, Minn., says: "I was so bad I could not arise from bed. Urine was dark and scant, I was thin and emaciated, and had intense pain in my back and head. My limbs swelled and stomach bloated. I got so low that I was kept alive by stimulants. The doctor told my family I was in the last stages of Bright's disease, and could not last three days. As a last resort they gave me Doan's Kidney Pills and slight improvement was noticeable. I kept getting better and better until at last I was able to leave my bed. From then on I gained rapidly. It was but a short time before I was as well as ever."

BABY'S HAIR ALL CAME OUT

"When my first baby was six months old he broke out on his head with little bumps. They would dry up and leave a scale. Then it would break out again and it spread all over his head. All the hair came out and his head was really all over. Then his face broke out all over in red bumps and it kept spreading until it was on his hands and arms. I bought several boxes of ointment, gave him blood medicine, and had two doctors to treat him, but he got worse all the time. He died at about six months when a friend told me about Cuticura. I sent and got a bottle of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three days after using them he began to improve. He began to take long naps and to stop scratching his head. After taking two bottles of Cuticura, two boxes of ointment and three cakes of Soap he was sound and well, and never had any breaking out of any kind. His hair came out in little curls all over his head. I don't think anything else would have cured him except Cuticura."

"I have bought Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap several times since to use for cuts and sores and have never known them fail to cure what I put them on. Cuticura Soap is the best that I have ever used for toilet purposes." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Harmon, R. F. D. 2, Atoka, Tenn., Sept. 10, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32 page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 16, Boston.

It takes but a little push to start a stone rolling down hill, and many a heavy bearded human being has been sent into depths because of a push in the wrong direction. It may be because it is easier to push than to pull that we move along with the crowd, saying inwardly, "each one for himself," and scarce think it worth while to lend a helping hand where it is most needed.

A small Kansas boy was once called in to view his new born baby brother. He looked it over with dissatisfaction, and finally asked: "Mamma, where did this thing come from?" "An angel brought it," Jimmie. "Was you awake when he came?" "Certainly Jimmie." "Well, then, mamma, all that I have to say is, that you are dead easy. I'd like to see any old angel put off such a looking thing on me."

It is not surprising that some of our young men seem to have such hard work to be decent. Just remember that the first man to dwell upon the earth was no saint. If we can rely upon history he was a liar and a sneak. The first woman kept a bad company (and woman-like) lied in things that did not concern her. The first child born was a murderer and killed his brother. Our first ancestors were a tough lot and it is hard to get it out of the blood.

Helen Scherer was quite badly hurt in the street car accident at Dearborn last Sunday. She was sitting near the rear of the car and when the collision came her arm and shoulder were quite badly bruised, but no bones were broken. Mr. John Scherer, who was with her, was thrown out of the car, getting a bad crash in his foot. The young people are thankful that they got out of it unscathed as they did.

The BRONZE BELL

BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE
AUTHOR OF "THE BRASS BOWL," ETC.
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

SYNOPSIS.

David Amber, starting on a duck-stocking visit with his friend, Quail, comes upon a young lady equestrian who has been dismounted by her horse becoming frightened at the sudden appearance in the road of a bulky figure. He declares he is Eugene L. Chatterly. The appointed mouthpiece of the Bell, addresses Amber as a man of high rank and pressing a mysterious little bronze box "The Tongue" into his hand, disappears. In the wood the girl calls Amber by name. He is turned around and sees a young woman, the daughter of Col. Farrell of the British diplomatic service, in India and waiting the Quail. Several nights later the Quail home is burglarized and the bronze box stolen. Amber and Quail go hunting on an island and become lost and Amber is left marooned. He wanders about, finally reaches a cabin and recognizes as its occupant an old friend named Rutton, whom he last met in England and who appears to be in hiding. When Amber is mentioned Rutton is strangely agitated. Chatterly appears and summons Rutton to a meeting of a mysterious body. Rutton seizes a revolver and dashes after Chatterly. He returns wildly excited, says he has killed the Hindu, takes possession of a money-lender, is mistaken for Rutton and barely escapes being robbed. A message from Labertouche causes him to start for Darjeeling.

"Ah, that voice!" cried Amber in exasperation. "I grow weary of the word, Ram Nath."

"That may well be," returned the man, imperturbable. "None the less it were well for you to have a care how you fondle the revolver in your pocket, sahib. Should it by chance go off and the bullet find lodgment in your 'tonga-wallah, you are like to hear more of that voice, and from less friendly lips."

"I think you have eyes in the back of your head, Ram Nath," Amber withdrew his hand from his coat-pocket and laughed shortly as he spoke.

"There is a saying in this country, sahib, that even the stones in the desert have ears to hear and eyes to see and tongues without to tell what they have seen and heard."

"Ah! That is a wise saying, Ram Nath."

"There to those I could name who would do well to lay that saying to heart, sahib."

"You are right, indeed. Now if there is aught of truth in that saying and if one were unwisely to speak a certain name, even here—"

"The echo of that name might be heard beyond the threshold of a certain Gai'way, sahib."

Amber granted and said no more, contented now with the assurance that he was in truth in touch with Labertouche, that this Ram Nath was an employee of the I. S. S. The link was now explained away with all the rest of the tonga-wallahs' curious ways.

As the tonga-wallahs' lessons of the distance, his gaze, penetrating the thinning foliage, discerned the contours of a cotton-wain drawn by two stout bullocks, patient roses to the ground, the driver plodded good in hand, a maled swig upon his lip.

Deliberately enough the carter reversed his beasts as to make way for the tonga lest by undue haste he should make himself seem other than what he was—a free man, and a Rajput. But when his fierce, hawk-like eyes encountered those of the dark traveler, his attitude changed curiously and completely. Recognition and reverence fought with surprise in his expression, and as Ram Nath swung the tonga past the man saluted profoundly. His voice, as he rose, came after them, resonant and clear.

"Hail, thou Chosen of the Gateway, Hail!"

Amber neither turned to look nor replied. But his frown deepened. The incident passed into his history, marked only by the terse comment it added from Ram Nath—words which were flung curtly over the tonga-wallah's shoulder. "Eyes to see and ears to hear and a tongue without—sahib!"

The Virginian said nothing. But it was in his mind that he had indeed thrust his head into the lion's mouth by thus adventuring into the territory which every instinct of caution and common sense proclaimed taboo to him—the erstwhile kingdom of the Maharaja Har Dyal Rutton.

CHAPTER XII.

The Long Day.

One travels dak by relays casually disposed along the route at the whim of the native contractor. Between Badshah Junction and Kuttarpur there were ten stages, of which the conveyance of the first was at hand—Amber having all but abandoned hope in its existence.

Stammering recklessly down the bed of an ancient water course, the tonga sprang suddenly upon a wheel round a shoulder of the banks and dashed out upon a rolling plain, across which the trail snaked to other farther hills that lay dim and low, a wavy line of blue, upon the horizon—the hills in whose heart Kuttarpur itself lay occult. And, by the roadside, in a compound fenced with camel-thorn, sat an aged and indigent dak-bungalow, marking the end of the first stage, the beginning of the second.

Ram Nath reined in with a flourish and lifted a raucous voice, hailing the syce, while Amber, painfully disengaging his cramped limbs, climbed down and stumbled toward the veranda. The abrupt transition from violent and erratic motion to a solid and substantial footing affected him unpleasantly, and with an undeniable qualm; the earth seemed to rock and flow beneath him as if under the influence of an ante earthquake. He was for some seconds occupied with the problem of regaining his poise, and it was not until he heard an Englishwoman's voice uplifted in accents of anger, that he remembered the other wayfarer with whom he was to share his tonga, or associated with the white-clad figure in the dark doorway of the bungalow with anything but the khansamah, coming to greet and cheat the chance-brought guest.

"Where is that tonga-wallah who deserted me here last night?" the woman was demanding of Ram Nath, too preoccupied with her resentment to have eyes for the other traveler, who at sight of her had stopped and removed his plith helmet and stood staring as if he had come from a land in which there were no women.

"Where," she continued, with an imperative stamp of a daintily-shod foot, "is that wretched tonga-wallah?"

"Sahib," protested Ram Nath, with a great show of deference, "how should I know?—Belike he is in Badshah Junction, whether he returned very late last night being travel-worn and weary, and where I left him, being sent with this excellent tonga to take his place."

"You were?" And why have I been detained here, alone and unprotected, this long night? Simply because that other tonga-wallah was a fool, am I to be imposed upon in this fashion?"

"What am I," whispered Ram Nath, "to endure the wrath of the sahib for a fault that is none of mine?"

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the girl, turning to Amber, "but it is very annoying." She looked him over, first with abstraction, then with a puzzled rattling of her brows, for he was far from her thoughts, the last person she would have expected to meet in that place, and very effectively disgusted in dust and dirt besides. "He came off the wheel just as we got here, late yesterday evening, and in trying or pretending to try to fit it on again, that blockhead of a tonga-wallah hammered the rim with a rock as big as his head and materially smashed it to kindling wood. Then, before I could stop him, he flung himself on the back of a pony and went away, saying that it was the will of God that he should return to Badshah for a better tonga. Since when I have had for company one stable-servant and one dandified patriarch of a khansamah and the usual dak-bungalow discomforts—insects, bad food, and a terrible fear of darkness."

"I am so sorry, Miss Farrell," Amber put in. "If I had only been here."

The girl gave a little gasp and sat down abruptly in one of the veranda chairs, thereby threatening it with instant demolition and herself with a bad spill; for the chair was feeble with the burden of its many years, and she was a quite substantial young person. Indeed, so loudly did it creak a protest, and a warning that she immediately arose in alarm.

"Mr. Amber!" she said, and, "Well—"

"You'll forgive me the surprise?" he begged, going up on the veranda to her. "I myself had no hope of finding you here."

"But," she protested, with a pretty flush of color—"But I left you in the States such a little while ago!"

"Yes," he said gravely. "It seems so long to me. And when you had gone, Long Island was a very lonely place indeed," he added, with calculated impudence.

Her color deepened and she sought another chair, seating herself with gingerly decision. "I'm sure you don't mean me to assume that you've followed me half round the world?"

"Why not?" He brought another chair to face her. "Besides, I haven't seen anything of India for a good many years."

"Mr. Amber!"

"Ma'am?" he countered with affected humility.

"You're spoiling it all. I was so glad to see you—I'd have been glad to see any white man, of course."

"Much obliged, I'm sure."

"And now you're actually flirting with me—or pretending to."

"I'm not," he declared soberly. "As a matter of solemn fact, I had to come to India."

"On a matter of serious business. Please don't ask me what, just yet; but it's very serious, to my way of thinking. This happy incident—I count myself a very happy man to have been so fortunate—only makes my errand the more pleasant."

She regarded him intently, chin in hand, her brown eyes sedate with speculation, for some time. "I believe you've been speaking in parables," she asserted, at length. "I'm unjust, hear with me; appearances are against you. There isn't any reason I know of why you should tell me what brought you here."

"There's every reason, in point of fact, Miss Farrell; only—I can't explain just now."

"Very well," she agreed briskly; "let's be content with that—I am glad to see you again, truly, and—were to travel on to Kuttarpur in the same tonga."

"If you'll permit—"

"After what I've endured, this awful night, I wouldn't willingly let you out of my sight."

"Or any other white man?"

She laughed, pleased. "I presume you're wondering what I'm doing here."

"You were to join your father in Darjeeling, I believe," he countered, cautious.

"But I found he'd been transferred unexpectedly to Kuttarpur. So, of course, I had to follow. I telegraphed him day before yesterday when I was to arrive at Badshah Junction, and naturally expected he'd come in person or have some one meet me, but I presume the message must have gone astray. At all events there was no one there for me and I had to come on alone. It's hardly been a pleasant experience; that incompetent, tonga-wallah behaved precisely as though he had deliberately made up his mind to delay me."

And the tonga's nearly ready; I must lock my kit-bag."

She went into the bungalow, leaving him thoughtful, for perhaps.

But the back of Ram Nath, as that worthy busied himself superintending the harnessing in of fresh ponies, conveyed to him no support of his half-credited hypothesis that this "accident" had been carefully planned by Labertouche for Amber's especial benefit.

The girl kept him waiting but a little while. Lacking the attentions of an ayah, she had probably been unable to bathe so extensively as he, but eventually she appeared in an immeasurably more happy state of body and mind, calling up to him the simile, stronger than any other, of a rail, fairly lively after a morning shower. And she was in a bewitching humor, one that ingeniously enough succeeded in entangling him more thoroughly than ever before in the web of her fascinations. Over an execrable curry of stringy fowl and questionable rice, eked out with tea and flamed delicacies of their own, their chatter, at the beginning sufficiently gay and inconsequent, drifted, by imperceptible and unsuspected gradations, perilously close to the shoals of intimacy. And subsequently, when they had packed themselves back into the narrow, tonga seat and again were being bounced and joggled breathlessly over shocking roads, the exchange of confidences continued with unabated interest.

For all the taint upon her pedigree, she proved herself to Amber at heart a simple, lonely Englishwoman—a stranger in a sullen and suspicious land, desiring nothing better than to return to the England she had seen and learned to love, the England of ample lawns, of box-hedges, and lanes, of traveled highways, pavements and gaslights, of shops and theaters, of home and family ties.

But India she knew. "I sometimes fancy," she told him with the conscious laugh that depreciates a confessed superstition, "that I must have lived here in some past incarnation." She paused, but he did not speak. "Do you believe in reincarnation?"

Again he had no answer for her, though temporarily he saw the daylight as darkness. It's hard to live

Lacking the attentions of an ayah, she had probably been unable to bathe so extensively as he, but eventually she appeared in an immeasurably more happy state of body and mind, calling up to him the simile, stronger than any other, of a rail, fairly lively after a morning shower. And she was in a bewitching humor, one that ingeniously enough succeeded in entangling him more thoroughly than ever before in the web of her fascinations. Over an execrable curry of stringy fowl and questionable rice, eked out with tea and flamed delicacies of their own, their chatter, at the beginning sufficiently gay and inconsequent, drifted, by imperceptible and unsuspected gradations, perilously close to the shoals of intimacy. And subsequently, when they had packed themselves back into the narrow, tonga seat and again were being bounced and joggled breathlessly over shocking roads, the exchange of confidences continued with unabated interest.

For all the taint upon her pedigree, she proved herself to Amber at heart a simple, lonely Englishwoman—a stranger in a sullen and suspicious land, desiring nothing better than to return to the England she had seen and learned to love, the England of ample lawns, of box-hedges, and lanes, of traveled highways, pavements and gaslights, of shops and theaters, of home and family ties.

But India she knew. "I sometimes fancy," she told him with the conscious laugh that depreciates a confessed superstition, "that I must have lived here in some past incarnation." She paused, but he did not speak. "Do you believe in reincarnation?"

Again he had no answer for her, though temporarily he saw the daylight as darkness. It's hard to live since him down with far after, and felt like himself for the first time in five days when, shaved and dressed, he returned to the common living room of the resthouse.

Bacon Production in Michigan

By R. S. SHAW,
Director Michigan Farm School.

Medium Type Yorkshire Suited to Michigan Conditions.

Up to the present time the pork production of Michigan has come largely from land type hogs such as the Poland China, Chester White and Duroc Jersey. These breeds are rather compact of conformation, quick maturing and furnish carcasses covered with deep layers of fat. In the past there has been a keen demand for the land hog, but necessities and tastes are changing. Animals that are being rapidly replaced by vegetable and mineral oils for domestic purposes and also those of lubrication. The consumer is also demanding a leaner pork, especially bacon. It is true that there is a large demand for land and that this will still continue, but Michigan should leave the production of the land hog quite largely to the corn belt, where it can be produced economically in great abundance.

The state of Michigan is possessed of conditions eminently adapted to the production of prime bacon, on account of the availability of dairy by-product and the universal possibilities of producing corn, peas, clover, alfalfa, etc. The two breeds of hogs most commonly known as bacon types, the Yorkshires and Tamworth, of which the latter is the most extreme. As a rule those accustomed to the compact land types do not like the appearance of the bacon types which are longer of limb, lighter of ham and shoulder, less broad on the back and longer in the nose. It has been universally charged against the bacon type hogs that more feed is required for a given increase in weight than with the land types, but of all the numerous experiments made by experiment stations none affirm the general belief.

With such wonderfully well suited natural conditions for bacon production, Michigan should take up this specialty and cease competing with the western corn belt in land production. It may be difficult for the farmer to turn suddenly from one extreme type to another and for this reason we are inclined to suggest a gradual transition by way of intermediate types. By intermediate types we mean such as are represented by the accompanying illustration of a Yorkshire, too short of limb, compact, heavy of ham and shoulder and thick of back to win in a Yorkshire ring with a competent Yorkshire. The longer and less compact types of Berkshires are very satisfactory. Poland China, Duroc Jersey or Berkshire boars used on Tamworth sows gives an excellent intermediate type. Prolificacy, abundant milk production and good motherhood are present in high degree in the Tamworth females, the same being also true of Yorkshires.

How to Catch Flies by the Quart

By R. J. BALDWIN,
Michigan Farm School.

So much already has been said concerning the filthy habits of house flies and the danger of their carrying disease that a suggestion on how to keep them out of the home may be welcomed and made use of. Methods of poisoning and killing, while good and necessary must always be done in the house and in this are a disagreeable annoyance. The trap described in our illustration is a large form of a very old set, which was not a success formerly because made too small and used in the house.

The trap shown in the illustration, is made of common wire screen, such as is used for doors and windows. The top and bottom of the frame are made from nail keg hoops and the three uprights from lat cut in two. A wire cone is built inside this cylinder and extends about half way to the top of the trap. An opening about one inch in diameter is cut in the apex of the cone, and it is through this that the flies enter the trap. This cone should be made first and tacked on the outside of the bottom hoop before the outer cylinder of screen is put on. The cut edges of the screen can be tacked to the lat thus making it fly tight. The top can be closed by tying a cloth over it which can be removed when the trap is emptied. The uprights should extend one-half inch below the lower hoop, thus holding the trap up from the floor and allowing flies and other insects to crawl under and reach the bait.

The trap should be set up in some sunny place near the back door or in the stable where flies are thick, and baited with such material as is known to attract flies. The trap operates successfully when setting fruit is placed on the floor under it, because the flies will come to it and later light on the inside of the cone and later crawl up through the opening above.

An Effective Fly Trap.

If plenty of new bait, such as sweetened refuse from the kitchen, is placed under the trap every day quantities of flies will be captured and will soon die and fall to the bottom. A trap observed by the writer contained over one quart of flies on the second day after setting up.

Grading and Picking of Fruits

By C. P. HALLIGAN,
Michigan Farm School.

Michigan fruit growers are about to harvest a bountiful crop of fruit. Most kinds at present seem to be in prime condition, especially that which has been well sprayed and cultivated. Many growers will fail to receive the full value of their crops, however, through carelessness in grading and packing.

Grading is something which cannot be overdone. The more rigidly it is performed the better it pays. With the prospects of a heavy crop, which means a well supplied market, much of the poorer grades or carelessly packed fruit will be shipped at a loss. Good grading requires good judgment and experience. All unmarketable specimens should first be discarded. Unfortunately most of our grading stops here. A well graded package of fruit, however, consists not only of marketable specimens, but of specimens of uniform size, uniform color, uniform quality and of a uniform degree of freedom from injury. Uniformity then as to all of these characters is of the utmost importance. Too frequently people think that biggest of size is the desired character, but fruit of medium size, uniformly graded, is more to be desired than large fruit mixed with smaller specimens.

The profits from fruit also depend a great deal upon the package. A light, neat, uniform and attractive package which sets off the fruit to advantage should always be selected. There is a great deal of truth in the old saying that "The package sells the fruit." It would pay most of the growers of Michigan to consider a smaller and more attractive package for their peaches and other larger fruits than the bushel basket, and as a rule the finer grades of fruits pay better in the smaller packages.

The manner in which the fruit is placed in the package also is important. The arrangement of the California cherries, plums, and pears in the package as seen on the market adds much to their attractiveness and salability. A little more thought and care in the arrangement and facing of our fruit apparently increasing the uniformity of the package and therefore its attractiveness, would prove a great help in increasing its salability.

These three important considerations of more rigid and careful grading, more attractive packages and the careful arrangement of the fruit in the packages deserve the attention of all our Michigan fruit growers.

Rebellion Breaks Out Near Havana.

An uprising headed by Gen. Acevedo and a group of anti-government men, has broken out in Cuba.

The government has started to move rurales against the rebels and hopes to quell the outbreak in a short time.

The uprising is apparently of a serious character and occurred at Regla, a suburb of Havana, situated across the harbor. Gen. Acevedo, who is a revolutionary veteran, with a few companions, armed and mounted, took the field. It is reported that the party was reinforced later by 200 men.

Eight Maniacs Perish in Flames.

At least eight, and perhaps 10 lives were lost in a fire which partly destroyed one of the main buildings of the insane asylum on the side of the mountain southwest of Hamilton, Ont.

There were 300 patients in the building when the fire was discovered and it was only a well-trained fire-fighting corps and splendid coolness and bravery among the nurses that averted a frightful loss of life.

SICK FOLKS

The percentage of those between the ages of 20 and 70 who are in the enjoyment of perfect health and nerve force is small.

If you will talk confidentially with those afflicted you will find in the vast majority of cases their troubles are due to a lack of healthy training. To all who have started fully or have fallen by the wayside in later years, we offer a helping hand.

Our motto is: "Let Us Cure You"

Family doctors do the best they can, but they are not specialists devoting a lifetime to curing these diseases. Sufferers have been coming hundreds of miles to the Dr. Hunt Institute for many years, where they have been cured of their ailments and enjoy perfect health.
